

BURNS AND DORSEY HOLD CONFERENCE

Report of Detective May Not Be Made Until Next Week Instead of This Week as Expected.

Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey and Detective William J. Burns met for the first time Wednesday, when the sleuth went to the Thrower building, in which Dorsey's offices are located, and examined some of the evidence presented by the prosecution at the trial of Leo Frank.

Burns was accompanied by Dan Lehon. The conference lasted for less than thirty minutes at the Thrower building, but later Burns walked to the private offices of the solicitor in the Kiser building. Most of the detective's time was spent in reviewing the evidence in the hands of the prosecution, and examining the clothes of the murdered girl.

It was at first thought that the object of Burns in visiting Dorsey was to present to him the evidence he has unearthed in his investigation. His mission, however, was to get information instead of give it.

It was said Wednesday that Burns will not submit his report during the latter part of the week, as was at first expected, but will make it some time the following week.

BURIED JEWELRY FOUND BY POLICE

Property Stolen From the Residence of Sig Samuels Found After Confession From Negro Butler.

Stolen jewelry, valued at $1,200, after the confession of a negro butler, was discovered buried near Clark university Wednesday morning by the detectives.

The jewelry belonged to Mr. and Mrs. Sig Samuels, of 527 Washington street, and was stolen from their residence Monday night when they were at the Forsyth theater.

The house was evidently entered by means of a key, which unlocked the basement door. John Coffee, a negro porter, held a key to this basement door, and suspicion was pointed toward him.

When he was arrested and brought to police station Wednesday, he confessed to the robbery, and told the officers of the secluded spot near Clark university, where he had buried the jewelry.

Several valuable rings, brooches and chains, and $30.25 were found in the hole. Nothing was missing.
