HUNDREDS STORM COURT AS CASE NEARS THE JURY

With every prospect of Leo M. Frank's fate being in the hands of the jury before Saturday afternoon, Solicitor Hugh Dorsey Saturday morning resumed his masterful arraignment of the man accused of the slaying of Mary Phagan and the methods that have been used in his defense.

Hundreds clamored for admission when the courtroom doors were opened Saturday morning and there were more than a thousand in line when court opened.

The brilliance and dash of the Solicitor's opening had attracted the greatest crowd of the trial—a crowd unquestionably in sympathy with Mr. Dorsey.

Frank entered the courtroom, as calm as usual, and took a seat be-character, David had a good character until he put Uriah in the forefront of battle that he might be killed that he could get his wife, Judas Iscariot had a good character among those Twelve Men until he accepted those 30 pieces of silver.

"You know as twelve men seeking to get at the truth that they did not ask those half-brained fanatics, as Mr. Arnold calls them, questions about Frank's character because they were afraid, and those witnesses, as good as any, the defense put up, were unimpeached and are unimpeachable. And you tell me that because the good people come here from Washington street and testify to his good character is that he has one!

"It very often happens that a man's wife is the last person to know his wrongdoing. Sometimes the man uses charitable and religious organizations to cover up and hide his evil self. Very often his guilty conscience turns him that way. Many a man is a wolf in sheep's clothing.

"Dorsey moved over to the railing of the jury box as he opened his speech.

"Many a man, as a white sepulcher on the outside and absolutely rotten within. But suppose he has a good you that, it's plain common sense. "Benedict Arnold was brave. He enjoyed the confidence of all the people and those in charge of the Revolutionary War until he betrayed his country. Since that day his name has been a synonym for infamy. Oscar Wilde, an Irish knight, a brilliant author, whose works will go down through time, gave us "De Profundis," which a wrote while in jail—a remarkable work—yet when the Marquis of Queensberry discovered that there was something wrong between Wilde and his son, Wilde had the effrontery and the boldness to sue him for damages. A suit in retaliation resulted in the conviction of Wilde for criminal practices. Yet, wherever the English language is spoken the effrontery of the testimony on crowd-rail typical of this sort (turning to Frank) will always be a matter for deep study for lawyers and for people interested in that sort of desecration.

"He had a wife and two children. His shame probably never would have been brought to light but for the fact that he had the effrontery and the boldness to start a suit. It ended in his being sent to prison."

Dorsey's Opening Argument Before Court.

Solicitor Dorsey's fiery speech to the jury began at 3:30 Friday afternoon and was halted by adjournment about 5:15. The Solicitor was not slow in entering into his attack against the prisoner and his criticism of the manner in which the lawyers of the defense had conducted the case.

He seemed carried away by his earnestness. His impassioned words as he rebuked to the jury that the people would have to get another Solicitor General if they wanted to put the rope around "Jim Conley's neck for the crime deeply stirred all within range of his voice.

The Solicitor declared that Conley was not guilty of the murder, and had no more part in the crime than he had Civil right on the stand.

"Conley is the self-confessed ac-cessary after the fact," he said; "only that and nothing more. If you try to put a noose around his neck it will have to be under another Solicitor General, for right there sits the man guilty of this crime."

Dorsey took the Durant case, of which Attorney Arnold had made much the day before, and converted it into a boom against the defense. Arnold had related it as showing the terrible mistake that may come from circumstantial evidence. He had said that Theodore Durant was convicted of the brutal slaying of Blanche Lamont and Minnie Williams and was executed for the crime. Several years later the minister in whose church and the body of Durant found sepulchre himself confessed to the murder, according to Arnold.

Shows Defense Wrong On Durant Case.

Dorsey tried to read a letter and a telegram he had received from San Francisco to controvert Frank's lawyer, but was prevented by objections. He was permitted to state from his own information, however, that no such confession ever took place, and that no man over was guiltier than Durant, no jury more courageous and no community more satisfied with a verdict.

"I don't know where my friend Arnold found the authority for his statement that Arnold about this Durant case," said Dorsey. "If he is so more accurate than this in his statement that you have heard the testimony of every girl on the fourth floor of the factory as to Frank's good character, I fear there are a lot yet to hear from."

The Solicitor laid particular stress on the failure of Foster and Arnold to cross-question the character witnesses against Frank as the State had placed on the stand. In his opinion this raised a strong presumption that Frank was the immoral man that the prosecution had represented him to be.

"If charges are made that can be explained or controverted," he said, "and there is no effort made by the defendant to do so, it is reasonable to suppose that he is guilty of the accusations."

The Solicitor maintained that the State had been practically helpless in this respect. He said he had been able only to bring girls into the courtroom to swear to Frank's general character and to his general attitude toward women. He had been stopped by court ruling from showing particular acts of alleged immorality and improper conduct he said.

But, he maintained, if Frank were innocent of the act of immorality charged against him, it was most unlikely that he would have let his lawyers be silent when those girls were on the stand testifying against him.

Why Did Frank Not Refute Charges?

He would have insisted on his lawyers finding out exactly how much these witnesses knew and where they got their information, the Solicitor declared.

"Now, gentlemen," he argued, "if you were of good character and twenty witnesses were brought here to testify that your character was bad, would you sit idly by and not make your attorneys insist upon specific instances? No, I know you wouldn't. Yet, three able counsel let twenty girls tell the court that Frank's character was bad and that his character

Thaw now has retained ten lawyers.

Automobile Collides With a Steamboat

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—An automobile collided with a steamboat last night. The auto was wrecked in several occupants were slightly injured.
The accident, it may be explained, did not occur at sea. The boat was in dry dock, the driver of the auto drove into the side of the machine, and it plunged down a hill and crashed into the moored boat.

TERRIBLE SCORING IS GIVEN FRANK; CROWD CHEERS PROSECUTOR

A white-hot philippic, the masterpiece of his career and one of the greatest ever heard in a criminal court in the South, was hurled by Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey directly at Leo M. Frank Saturday in the final plea of the State and held a packed courtroom tense and thrilled as the grim tragedy of Memorial Day was unfolded.
The Solicitor was at the height of his eloquence at 1:30 o'clock when court adjourned until Monday. He had been speaking over six hours. The case will probably go to the jury before Monday noon. The Solicitor was cheered again as he left the courthouse.

The Solicitor had been talking about six hours, including the time on Friday, when he turned to the Judge and asked for a recess, saying he was exhausted. Arnold conferred with Judge Roan and it was finally decided that the trial should be adjourned until Monday.

Mr. Dorsey minutely dissected the entire defense and pressed forward for Frank and used from the witness's own statements to upset it. He pointed to similarities of expression in Conley and Frank's assertions in upholding the truth of the negro's statements.

In an impassioned reference to the slain girl the Solicitor had many in the courtroom in tears. Mrs. Coleman, mother of Mary Phagan, broke down completely, and Frank's wife wept silently. Says Frank Breaks Own Alibi.

Mr. Dorsey declared Frank's alibi was shattered at once by the fact that Frank told the police on April 28 he was at the factory at 1:10, while Helen Curran said she saw him at 1:10 at Whitehall and Alabama streets, and that Frank later changed his story to bolster up an alibi.

The Solicitor denounced Frank in the most violent terms as a "red-handed murderer" and a pervert who had plotted to lay the crime upon Conley. He charged that Frank planned to have Conley repeat to the factory and burn the bank and would have had the detectives arrest Conley in the act. He asserted, further more:

"That the expression 'nothing startling has happened, it is too absurd since you left for anything startling to have happened' in Frank's letter to his uncle tended to show Frank's guilt."

That the prisoner had been trying for weeks to get Mary Phagan's favorable attention and the tragedy was the result of her refusal;

That the reference to the toilet in the death note proved Frank dictated them because Conley always used the word "done"; the State says the crime was committed;

Charges Notes Prove Frank's Guilt.
That the use of the word "did" in the death note proved Frank dictated them because Conley always used the word "done"; That wholesale perjury had been used by the defense in the effort to build a protesting wall around the prisoner;

Frank never finished under the Solicitor's fiery attack. He seemed to be following his words closely but gave no sign of emotion.

The crowd in the courtroom was plainly with the Solicitor, although for the most part it preserved absolute decorum. One after another Dorsey made a tally in a list with Arnold and Judge Roan threatened to have the courtroom cleared.

The greatest crowd of the trial was attracted for the final act and a thousand men and women barged in vain for admittance to the courtroom. Occasionally Dorsey's voice could be heard in the street and there would be a murmur of applause. Dorsey's speech appears on page 2 and 3.

9:30 o'clock this morning. He was knocked out last night at the Vernon Arena by Jess Willard, "white hope" prize fighter, with an uppercut on the point of the chin.

He was removed to a hospital unconscious, and surgeons to-day performed a trepanning operation in the hope of saving his life. He did not regain consciousness after the blow was struck.
Willard was arrested shortly before Young died.

Young was still unconscious from the effect of Willard's right uppercut to the chin when the doctors opened his skull, and no anasthesia was used for the operation.

Young's bout with Willard was his first appearance as a principal in a boxing card. His name came here from Wyoming as sparring partner of Luther McCarty, who was killed by a blow from Arthur Patsy at Calgary. He was greatly devoted to McCarty, and it was he who insisted, after McCarty's death, that the latter had been poisoned, and asked for an examination of McCarty's stomach.
His theory, however, was scouted by those who had handled McCarty and were at the bedside when he met death.

Shultz, it is said, had sought the companionship of Kelly constantly since Kelly was employed as a clerk at the Progressive headquarters here during the presidential campaign. Recently he asked Kelly to accompany him to California. Kelly refused.

vate wife and for a time created wild excitement in the Capital. The State Department immediately got in communication with Mexico City and two hours later announced that there was no truth in the rumor.

"That the United States has adopted a policy allowing the Federal troops in Mexico to receive practically unlimited supplies of arms and ammunition, was indicated by Secretary of State Bryan to-day, when he confirmed the report that 40,000 rounds of ammunition had been allowed to cross the border at El Paso, Texas.
Undisturbed by reports that Heredia may change the present status in Mexico by recalling his note of rejection of the Lind proposals, President Wilson to-day is assembling material for the message he will deliver in Congress next Tuesday.

The President is not inclined to encourage the typical Hispanic policy of changing front overnight, and will not change the tenor of his message unless General Heredia formally and officially withdraws his objection and accepts the proposals sent to him.

Hampshire, probably on Wednesday or Thursday of next week.
A plan is shaping to smother Thaw out of the hands of the law, smuggled aboard a private yacht to Buenos Ayres and eventually to provide him a permanent haven on a vast private estate in the interior of Germany.

Oscar Von Hoffman, of Kumbach, Bavaria, whose father owns the estate in question, outlined this plan here to-day. Von Hoffman is an old friend of Thaw. His father is a big landed proprietor in the town of Kumbach, Bavaria, Germany.
"Suppose Thaw is hunted by his friends to the nearest airport on the New Hampshire and Maine coast," said Von Hoffman.
"I expect to be with Thaw through this fall, but I am taking him down to Buenos Ayres to get a good rest, several months, if necessary. Later, when Thaw wishes, we will charter a yacht and steam across the Atlantic to a German port."
Thaw now has retained ten lawyers.

FRANK ROSER'S TRIBUTE TO THE JURY
Luther Rosser's Tribute to the Jury

"We walk the streets carelessly, absorbed in our own interests. We pass our friends, and do not recognize them. The mind wanders in flights of fancy and fits of reverie. We mean no harm to our friends, but we are careless."

"Men of the jury, you are set aside. You cease to be a part of that revelry of the streets. In old pagan Rome women walked the streets, chatted gaily and carelessly, but a few were set aside—the vestal virgins. They cared not for the gladiatorial combats or the strife."

"So it is with you set apart. You care not for the chatter or the laughter of the rabble. You are unprejudiced. Yours is the sworn duty to pass a matter of life and death. You are to decide on the evidence, with no fear, no favor, no affection."

"Others may take the brave talk of standing up for the weak and oppressed, but it is not for you. You are a still, silent, concentrated band. You are to do your duty without one thought of the past or the future. You are here and now concentrated by justice to do your duty."

SOLICITOR DORSEY MAKES GREATEST SPEECH OF HIS CAREER

Likens Frank to Beattie, Richeson, Wilde and Other Noted Criminals

DORSEY STRESSES THAT DEFENSE DON'T GO INTO CHARACTER ATTACK

11 p. m.—Frank leaves the factory. It looks mighty nice on the chart. Turn that chart to the wall, Mr. Sheriff. Let it stay turned to the wall. That statement is refuted by the defendant himself when he didn't realize the importance of this time proposition.

Frank's statement at police headquarters, taken by G. C. February on Monday, April 23, says: "I didn't lock the door that morning. The mail was coming up. I locked it when I started home to lunch at 1:10 o'clock."

"Up goes your alibi, punctured by your own statement when you didn't realize its importance. Yet these honorable gentlemen, for the purpose of impressing your mind, print in big letters on this chart he left the factory at 1 o'clock. If he swore when he was on the stand the other day that he left the factory at 1 o'clock it was because he saw the importance of this time alibi and had to leave there ten minutes earlier, than he said he had at the police station before he had had time to confer with his lawyer, Mr. Luther Z. Boser."

BOLL WEEVIL COSTS SOUTH BILLION, ZONE CURE URGED

Senator Smith of South Carolina Secures Government Expert's Figures on Total Estimated Ravages During Last 17 Years. Shows How $107,539,127 Yearly Cost of Proposed Remedy Could Be Contrasted by Diversified Crops and United States Aid.

The best trip in which Senator Smith refers to a remedy for the boll weevil, as proposed, would begin in Tennessee and run down through Alabama and parts of Florida.

By ELIABOND D. SMITH. (United States Senator from South Carolina)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—A few weeks ago I issued some of the articles in the Department of Agriculture to give me an estimate of the losses the farmers of the South have suffered as the result of the boll weevil. The figures furnished are startling. From the report I make the following extracts:

The only adequate way of arriving at the losses due to the boll weevil was by studying the average production per acre by States, comparing years of non-infestation with years of infestation. It is quite plain that every State by the third year of infestation has shown a decided reduction in average yield per acre.

The average production in need for connection with the average planted to obtain an estimate in money value of the loss from the boll weevil to the producers. This is only the primary loss and is turned over and over again to the consumer.

The total loss to producers obtained by this method from 1895 through 1913 is $181,531,138, or an average during the 18 years of $10,753,912 per annum, with the loss now reaching over $100,000,000 per annum.

Only the more obvious losses from the ravages of this pest can even be estimated. These are the losses in productivity suffered by the producers and the losses in business of the first processors in manufacturing.

Figures are presented to show the losses to the planter, the ginmer and the miller as follows for the period from 1895 to 1913: Loss to the planter $111,421,138 Loss to the ginmer 72,110,000 Loss to the miller 12,110,000 Total $195,641,138

To these must be added losses in business suffered by cotton buyers and brokers, merchants, bankers and cotton mills, the loss in property values, the ultimate effects upon the consumer.

In their words officials of the Department of Agriculture estimate that the loss to the South from the boll weevil between 1895 and 1913 has been considerably more than $100,000,000. This is staggering.

The Government has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars to stamp out the boll weevil, but without avail. The Government, especially in Mississippi, has done splendid work in teaching the farmers better methods of cultivation, rotation of crops, etc., but so far as checking the boll weevil is concerned they themselves admit that their work has been a failure.

News Eastward Steadily. The weevil continues to march eastward in a steady pace each year. In so section where it has not yet appeared has any method been discovered of minimizing the damage done by it. Unless something is done it will not be very long until the entire cotton belt of the South is infested. Of course, some cotton can be produced in sections where the cost of production is greatly increased. It is not too late for Congress to own a large plantation in infested sections. It could produce about twice as much to produce a bale of cotton as it cost before the boll weevil came. Many others have given me testimony to the same effect.

When one considers that in recent years because of this little insect, and as a result of the loss of the cotton crop, the cost of production, the result must be a great increase in the price of cotton. I have been deeply interested in the boll weevil for a number of years and have watched its spread from the time it made its first appearance in Alabama.

Tents Only Shelter For Toledo Families

City is Growing So Rapidly That Builders Can Not Construct Houses Demanded.

TOLEDO, Aug. 23.—Because the city has not enough houses to rent and build-ers are not able to construct houses as rapidly as they are desired tents are being used as homes in Toledo. Two tent colonies have been established in the city. In both districts a number of the tents are made of material which the temporary homes have been erected. The tents have been purchased at some time and are being used as temporary homes. The tent colony on Irving street, between Irving and Broadway, has a flower and vegetable garden and one is equipped with a kitchen, bath, and a stable and outbuilding. Living rooms are convertible into bedrooms, and hammocks, stretched in the open, are used day and night.

Since that time Mrs. M. has had no more beer, but she has had the police a month since.

During the last few summers Boehmke has managed to augment his meager salary by working as a painter at from 15 to 17 an day, or nearly twice the amount he was paid by the university.

Rector Denounces Paid Choir Singers

Clergyman Declares There is No Worship in Their Strang and Unutterable Music.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Aug. 23.—The Rev. E. J. Craft, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, caused a sensation while addressing a meeting of the parishioners of Calvary parish by telling them that he would go to the altar with a paid choir. For one thing, he said, he did not believe in paid singers for church choirs. The service of the church was designed for the people as a whole and not alone for the choir, he said. "These modern choirs take the worship away from the people of the congregation and do all the worshipping themselves. They sing in wild and strange ways and in unutterable tones the praise of God."

Beri Beri Caused by Rice Diet, Says Expert

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—The Berlin Medical Association reports that the well-known investigator of beri beri, Dr. Moakswald, finds after a remarkable experiment, that the disease is caused by the use of rice. Dr. Moakswald fed 123 dogs, substituted entirely upon rice. All the symptoms of beri beri manifested themselves. At the close of the experiment an injection of serum containing an extract of rice resulted in a complete recovery.

Such was the threatening telegram which was handed to Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, Harry Thaw's wife, in New York Monday. Her eyes blazed as she read it. Of course, "that name" meant plainly the electric sign that glazes nightly on the theater where Mrs. Thaw is dancing.

Policewoman Uses Her Stare as Club

Declares She Has No Trouble With Mischief After One Stern Glare.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Squash the mischief with a look. You don't need a whistle like the Boston women; helping do not make good weapons, and a club should be used only in a tight squeeze. This is the opinion of two of Chicago's policewomen, both long in the business of protecting women. "I haven't had any trouble with men on the beach this year, even those who didn't know I was a policewoman," said Officer Mary Boyd, who is in charge of the Thirty-ninth street bathing beach. "All you have to do when a man speaks to you is to look at him. He turns and runs."

Autoist Is Run Over by His Own Machine

JOLIET, ILL., Aug. 23.—Because he cranked his automobile while it was in gear, Harry Lewis, a Joliet banker, was run over and badly injured. Lewis was in a hurry to take some friends to the Union station and neglected to inspect his gears. The machine would not start the first few whirrs of the crank, so he opened the throttle wider, one of the friends put on the accelerator to help matters, and now Lewis has been two weeks in the hospital.
