

SCHIFF TESTIMONY CONTRADICTS THAT GIVEN BY DALTON AND NEGRO CONLEY

Saturday by Far the Best Day for the Defense Since Start of the Frank Trial Two Weeks Ago.

SAYS WOMEN DID NOT VISIT FRANK'S OFFICE

Lawyers for State and Defense in Frequent Clashes During the Testimony of Frank's Assistant at the Factory.

By far the best day the defense in the Frank trial has had came to a close Saturday afternoon at 12:30 o'clock when a recess was taken until 9 o'clock Monday morning, at which time Herert Schiff, assistant to Leo M. Frank, will again be on the stand to undergo a thorough cross-examination at the hands of Solicitor Dorsey. Schiff's direct testimony Saturday was of a convincing nature and the defense will largely bank on it to disprove the idea that Frank could have committed the murder and afterward done the intricate mathematical work he claims to have done during the afternoon of Memorial day. Just how Schiff's testimony will stand up under the cross fire of Solicitor Dorsey is a question which Monday alone will answer. Thus far his testimony has been the most convincing of any that has been introduced by the defense. He is an extremely bright young man, ready with his answers and he possesses a good memory. When court adjourned Saturday Solicitor Dorsey had failed to shake him on any material testimony or point.

Never Seen Women There.

Schiff testified that it had been his practice for many months to work at the factory on Saturdays and that he had never seen any women visit Frank except his wife. If women had come there he would have seen them. He stated that he did not know C. B. Dalton, the man who swore he had frequently visited the factory with Daisy Hopkins for immoral purposes. He knew Daisy Hopkins, however. The financial sheet which Frank asserts he made out Saturday was brought into court and was identified by Schiff. He said the handwriting was normal. In great detail he explained the various items that entered into the making of the financial sheet, such as production, cost of production, kinds of material used, etc. Many mathematical calculations were necessary to make out the sheet, he said, and the work required the expenditure of several hours.

Schiff also gave important testimony as to the actions of Jim Conley on the Monday following the murder and said he (Conley) was very nervous and excited during the presence of the crowd and had remarked that he would give a million dollars if he had a white man's skin. He was questioned as to the chute in the rear of the building and asked if it would be possible to throw a person's body down it. He replied that it would.

He was questioned as to Thanksgiving day—the day Conley swore he "watched for" Frank—and the witness said he remembered the day perfectly, that it was snowing. He said Conley had come to the factory that day according to instructions to pile up some boxes. He and Frank had left the office together and he had seen Frank take the Washington street car about 12 o'clock.

On cross-examination Schiff confessed that it might have taken Frank a shorter length of time to make certain entries than he had stated; that

Gen. Carranza, Head of Mexic Rebels, and His Staff

GENERAL CARRANZA LEADER OF MEXICAN REBELS, AND STAFF

General Carranza, leader of the constitutionalists, as the Mexican rebels term themselves, is here seen surrounded by his staff, taking it easy in the mountains. The general is indicated by an arrow. He has been reported as stating that he was unalterably opposed to any mediation or intervention on the part of the United States. What he is said to want is the right to import arms and ammunition, so that he can fight it out quickly. It is expected that ex-Governor John Lind, of Minnesota, President Wilson's envoy to Mexico, will endeavor to have an interview with Carranza.

UNDERWOOD URGED FOR U. S. SENATE

Friends Want House Leader to Try for Seat Made Vacant by Johnston's Death. Underwood Has Made No Statement.

By John Corrigan, Jr.

Washington, August 9.—(Special.) Strong pressure is being brought to bear on Representative Underwood to become a candidate for the senate. Mr. Underwood's friends both in the senate and the house, as well as all over the country, are besieging the majority leader in an effort to prove to him that it is the proper thing to do. They point out that Mr. Underwood's chances for the presidency, a goal that all of his friends predict that he will eventually reach, will not be jeopardized now, by him becoming a member of the upper body, where they declare he will make a record as enviable as the one he has wrought in the house.

Would be Power in Senate. Now that the tariff legislation so far as the house is concerned has been passed, it is argued that there is no longer the necessity for Mr. Underwood to remain in the house. His friends believe that his wonderful powers will be given just as wide a scope in the senate and probably wider than in the house for the rest of the democratic administration.

It is now believed in Washington, should Mr. Underwood decide to become a candidate for the senate, that he would be opposed by any of his democratic colleagues from Alabama now in the house, unless, of course, Mr. Hanson, who has already begun his campaign, should object to fight the issue out with Mr. Underwood. Of course, if Mr. Underwood does not run it is practically certain that Hobson is to have the strongest kind of opposition from either Representative Clayton or Representative Hoffman. Both of these gentlemen are being groomed for the race, but no one believes that both will run. It is said that it will be decided later by their mutual friends which one will make the race in the event that Underwood refuses to enter the contest.

Underwood Inclines to Home. If Mr. Underwood should run it is reasonably certain that he will not be opposed by either Mr. Clayton or Mr. Hoffman. So far Mr. Underwood has not given any impression as to what he may do. It is his natural inclination to remain in the house, where he is by far the most dominant figure in the majority. There are some who do not want to see Mr. Underwood leave the house, because of the pending currency legislation and because they declare that when the regular session begins in December with the important legislation that is contemplated there will be need for a strong and experienced man at the helm, and Mr. Underwood, above all his associates, will fill the bill.

BIG MELON-CUTTING FOR 500 CONVICTS OF FULTON THIS WEEK

Five hundred negroes turned loose in a carload of watermelons. Can you imagine a more colossal event in the history of the colored race, or can you picture in your mind's eye a better show?

That very event is scheduled for this week. The Fulton county board of county commissioners has decided to buy a whole carload of watermelons for the county convicts, the large per cent of which is colored. The county board had been figuring for sometime on what a great calamity a watermelon-less summer would mean to a good husky buck, and at length it appealed to them as being a greater weight than they cared to carry on their consciences.

The day has not yet been set, but will be selected whenever the commissioners are able to get hold of a good fresh carload of melons.

RURAL BANK SYSTEM URGED BY FLETCHER

Florida Senator Introduces a Measure to Establish Banks for Farmers.

Washington, August 9.—A national rural bank system was proposed in a bill today by Senator Fletcher, chairman of the American commission on rural credits, and also of the federal commission on rural credits, appointed by the president.

The bill proposes a system of local national rural banks owned and operated by farmers; a state national bank in each state to be owned and controlled by the local banks as stockholders, and the national rural bank of the United States, to be located in Washington to be owned entirely by the state rural banks. To supervise the proposed chain of banks there would be created in the treasury department a division of rural banking under the direction of a "rural banking board" to consist of the secretaries of the treasury, agriculture and labor. The division would be under the immediate direction of a "director of rural banking" chosen by the president.

To Furnish Funds to Farmers.

The main purpose of the banks would be to furnish funds to farmers on long-term farm bonds or notes secured by liens on farms at not exceeding 60 per cent of their assessed value. Loans would be secured first by a local bank, then by a state bank, and last by the national rural bank of the United States, they would run from 20 to 50 years. The national rural bank is designed to have a special and surplus exceeding $100,000,000, while the stock of each local bank would be limited to $200,000.

Senator Fletcher, speaking in the senate today to urge immediate consideration of the measure by the banking committee, and its passage at the special session of congress, expressed approval of the administration emergency bill as a commercial banking bill, but said it would not meet the needs of the agricultural communities because of the necessity for long-term loans.

Fletcher Discusses Measure. "It is obvious," said Senator Fletcher, "that the only method of furnishing capital for requirements of the farmer is the creation of a long-term fund provision so that an amount shall be set aside each year to pay the bond when it matures. The farmers' loans should run for twenty to fifty years. No bank can loan money for such a length of time. The money must be borrowed from the investing public. Here is where a special system of banks is needed which will be authorized to use their credit in guaranteeing such bonds under restrictions which will reduce the risk of such guarantees to a minimum." The proposed federal reserve system, the senator said, did not offer such relief and the provisions of his measure, he maintained, though not perfect, would meet the requirements.

HAYWOOD AND ETTOR WANTED AT DULUTH

Duluth, Minn., August 9.—William D. Haywood and Edward E. Etor, Industrial Workers of the World organizers, have been asked to come to Duluth to assume complete charge of the ore dock workers strike. James P. Cannon, member of the Industrial Workers of the World, who has been in charge here, and Superior tonight declared the decision to bring the Industrial Workers' leaders here was reached tonight and that a telegram had been sent to Etor to hasten to Duluth. Cannon says they have answered that they will come.

Guilty of Arson.

Chicago, August 9.—W. A. Harris and Max Covitz were found guilty of arson late today, making the second conviction in the alleged "arson trust" investigation. They were accused of entering into a conspiracy to set fire to their clothing store, the stock of which had been heavily insured.

GEORGIAN IS PICKED FOR U. S. TREASURER

Geo. Fort, of Americus, Sure to Be Named—He Has Been in the Treasury Department for Years.

Washington, D. C., August 9.—(Special.)—George Fort, of Americus, is regarded here as sure of appointment as the next treasurer of the United States. He is now deputy assistant and is directly in line of promotion.

Mr. Fort has been in the treasury department since the Cleveland administration and has made an enviable record. He is a half brother of the late Judge Allan Fort, one time railroad commissioner of Georgia. Representative Crisp has taken an active interest in behalf of Mr. Fort as has Senator Hoke Smith and all the members of the Georgia delegation have endorsed him.

"SEPTEMBER MORN" CAUSES HIS ARREST

New Orleans Art Dealer Must Answer for Displaying the Picture.

New Orleans, August 9.—A month old controversy over whether the painting, "September Morn" is art or indecency, came to a climax today when an art dealer was arrested for displaying the picture in his window. Postmaster Leonard said he had been instructed by the postoffice department to bar reproductions of the painting from the mails, and a statement in defense of the painting was drawn from the New Orleans Brush and Fencil club.

A few weeks ago the Marx Art company placed a reproduction of the demure nude maiden shivering in the chilly waters of a brook, began to appear at the postoffice. Postmaster Leonard sent one of them to the department at Washington. While this question was pending the Marx company again displayed the picture. It was ordered removed by the police but the order went unheeded. Today Harold Marx was arrested charged with exhibiting indecent pictures and "September Morn" efforts to the dead letter office. Then came the art club's denunciation of both the police and the postoffice department.

MANSLAUGHTER BONDS MADE BY MOOSE MEN

Birmingham, Ala., August 9.—John P. Abbott, dictator, and David D. Williams, secretary of the local lodge Loyal Order of Moose, against whom warrants were sworn out charging them with manslaughter in the second degree growing out of the investigation by a coroner's jury into deaths of Christopher Gustin and Donald Kenny, killed while being initiated into the order on the evening of July 24, made bond in the sum of $1,000, there being two warrants against each man. Dr. L. C. Nell, physician of the lodge, and E. E. Vanlangham, assistant secretary, also made bond during the day. The men who made bond today state that they have no apprehension of the outcome, that no intent or malice was ever displayed during the initiation of Gustin and Kenny or of any one else.

United States Fleet for Europe.

Washington, August 9.—The navy's present plans are for the Atlantic fleet to leave Hampton Roads for its European cruise early in October. Immediately after fall target practice, the ships will sail for the Mediterranean sea. Secretary Daniels will discuss the voyage next week with Rear Admiral Badger, commander-in-chief.

THOUGH MENAGED BY IMPEACHMENT, SULZER IS SILENT

It Is Said, However, That the New York Governor Will Make an Early Statement About Charges.

LEGISLATURE IS CALLED TO CONSIDER CHARGES

One of Accusations Against Sulzer Is That He Committed Perjury—Suggested That Sulzer May Resign.

Albany, N. Y., August 9.—No statement was forthcoming from Governor Sulzer today concerning the revelations made by the Frawley legislative committee. The governor remained at the executive mansion during the forenoon and in the afternoon, left with Mr. Sulzer for a motor trip into the country. He was expected back some time tonight. Although the governor has given no intimation as to when he may issue a statement in explanation of his campaign contributions and stock transactions, his friends predict he will be heard from next week. Chester G. Platt, the governor's secretary, said the executive would have nothing to say until the committee had completed its work, and as Senator Frawley had indicated that the committee has gone far enough into the governor's affairs, a statement is looked for soon.

Legislature Meets Monday Night.

The legislature will meet Monday night, and all members have been notified to be present. Senator Eddy, Lewis A. Serecky, former confidential secretary to the governor, who refused to testify concerning campaign contributions of the executive, may be summoned before the bar of the house until the committee has completed its work, and as Senator Frawley had indicated that the committee has gone far enough into the governor's affairs, a statement is looked for soon.

The Frawley committee is expected to meet prior to the legislative session Monday, and may decide to present a report which will set in motion the machinery for the impeachment of the governor. If such action is taken the matter will be presented to the assembly, the body which will formulate the impeachment charges. The committee will consider any charges and a proposed impeachment must have the votes of a majority of the assembly before it can be laid before the senate and the court of appeals, which sit as a court of impeachment.

Politics of Impeachment Court.

Removal by impeachment requires the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present. The senate at the beginning of the year was composed of thirty-two democrats, sixteen republicans and one progressive. The democrats lost Senator Roosevelt, who resigned when appointed assistant secretary of the navy, and Senator Stillwell, who was convicted of soliciting a bribe. The Progressive Senator Salant has placed himself in a position to what the attitude of the republicans will be in event of an attempt to impeach the executive. Senator Elton R. Brown, minority leader, is a member of the Frawley committee, but has not yet taken any public position. Sulzer is said to have secured counsel.

At the capital today there was a suggestion that the governor might avoid further action by the legislature by resigning. Eddy asserted he had no such intention over in the history of this state has a governor been impeached. "WE'VE GOT ENOUGH ALREADY," DECLARES CHAIRMAN FRAWLEY

New York, August 9.—Members of the joint executive committee which concluded its investigation here yesterday at Governor Sulzer's campaign headquarters began today drafting a report which it will submit to the legislature on Monday with reference to testimony adduced showing that the governor had speculated in the New York stock market, using therefor, campaign contributions which he failed to include in his sworn statement as required by law.

In the opinion of Chairman Frawley, of the committee, and of Eugene Lamb Richards, counsel, no other course than to recommend impeachment proceedings is open to the investigators. Whether the committee will subsequently return to New York to inquire further into the governor's Wall street deals will be discussed by the committee at a meeting to be held in Albany on Monday prior to the convening of the legislature Monday night. Chairman Frawley said yesterday: "We've got enough already."

Charges Against Sulzer.

According to Mr. Frawley the committee report will consist of the record of the evidence, a digest of what the committee believes is the proper course to be taken thereon. The senator said it was possible, however, that the evidence would go to the senate and the house without any recommendations whatsoever.

It was understood today that the report would be written on three sheets adduced in the testimony. First, that Governor Sulzer is chargeable with perjury in that he swore that he had received "directly or indirectly" not more than $5,240 for campaign contributions.

Second, that he wrote a letter to the Farmers' Loan and Trust company stating that he had authorized his secretary, Louis A. Serecky, to accept campaign contributions and that Serecky had deposited some $12,000 in the bank during the campaign.

Third, that a number of unreported campaign contributions were used by

HUERTA OFF HIGH HORSE; HE WILL NOT INTERFERE WITH SPECIAL ENVOY LIND

CONFERENCE HELD REGARDING MEXICO AT WHITE HOUSE

Members of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate Are Summoned by President Wilson.

WILSON WANTS HUERTA TO REDEEM HIS PLEDGES

The President Makes It Clear Huerta Will Not Be Recognized—Mission of Lind Explained to Senators.

Washington, August 9.—Two hours of conference tonight between President Wilson, Secretary Bryan and the senate foreign relations committee brought about no change in the attitude of the administration toward Mexico.

President Wilson took the senators into his confidence far enough to outline the following: That John Lind, his special envoy to Mexico City, does not bear any solution of the present situation, but goes to continue this government's effort to induce Provisional President Huerta to redeem his promises for free and constitutional elections.

That under no circumstances does the administration propose to recognize the Huerta government. That Mr. Lind has gone to Mexico City to be the "eyes and ears" of the Washington administration on the ground, and to explain the attitude of this government when he has fully familiarized himself with the situation.

That by withdrawing Ambassador Wilson and sending Mr. Lind the president planned to have a man on the ground who was in sympathy with the administration here, and was in no sense a factor in the situation in Mexico City.

President Talked Freely.

These policies and suggestions of the president and Secretary Bryan came out in general discussion. It was made clear that the purpose of the conference was to establish more frank and intimate relations between the senate and the administration, in the development of the Mexican policy, and in the furtherance of this idea the president talked freely and answered many pointed questions.

While the president disclosed no definite plan for the pacification of Mexico the implication revealed that upon Lind's reports would depend to a large extent the future policy of this country.

There was practically no talk of lifting the embargo on the importation of arms into Mexico which some members of the committee believe would put a speedy end to the difficulties.

Intervention Not Necessary.

The meeting tonight was entirely friendly. The president did most of the talking, and Secretary Bryan and members of the committee which were here and there. Of the twelve men present only two senators, Smith, of Arizona, and Stone, an out-and-out believer in a policy of ultimate intervention. President Wilson was firmly of the belief that intervention will not be necessary. Some members of the committee who went to the white house disturbed in mind came away with the belief that perhaps much of the recent talk in the senate had been unwarranted.

The president did not ask that senators refrain from debating the Mexican policy, but he left a distinct impression that prominence given in Mexico to congressional discussion and newspaper comments reported from the United States caused embarrassment for the administration in attempting to carry out its difficult policy of peaceful settlement.

No Definite Plan Outlined.

Sensators who expected to be informed of a definite plan or a formal message Mr. Lind might be hearing to the Mexican government which would be the basis of the president told them that upon the arrival of Mr. Lind in Mexico City there would be transmitted through the charge d'affaires at Mexico City, as well as to the foreign governments generally, an explanation of Mr. Lind's mission.

This explanation, as developed at tonight's conference, is expected to be a reaffirmation of the American government's attitude of the last few weeks favoring efforts to secure temporary cessation of hostilities in Mexico, so that constitutional elections may be held.

It was reiterated after the conference that Mr. Lind's movements and procedure will be left largely to the discretion of the president. He had talked with William Bayard Hale and other close friends of the administration familiar with the situation in the Mexican capital.

After Thinking Over the Matter, Huerta Wires Washington That No Demonstration Will Be Allowed Against American Agent.

LIND TAKES QUARTERS IN A VERA CRUZ HOTEL; NO HOSTILE OUTBREAK

Expected That the Former Governor Will Proceed to Mexico City on Monday. Huerta Seems to Have Realized That He Cannot Afford to Allow the United States Envoy to Suffer Any Indignity.

Mexico City, August 9.—Correct treatment of ex-Governor John Lind, counsellor of the United States embassy here and personal representative of President Wilson, by Mexicans is assured by the Mexican foreign office in a message forwarded to Washington today and speculation in the Mexican capital tonight has turned to the nature of Mr. Lind's mysterious mission, which, apparently, in the belief of the United States government can solve the difficulties now besetting the Mexican nation.

While assuring the safety and freedom from annoyance of President Wilson's representative, the Mexican government stands firm on the non-acceptance of mediation, declaring on that point "that it already has made its declarations."

Lind Mission to Fail.

It is regarded as a foregone conclusion in political circles, therefore, that the mission is bound to fail unless the suggestions to be made by Mr. Lind take some other form.

Neither Americans nor Mexicans here are able to imagine a plan which could be acceptable to the Mexican government which contemplates mediation in any form by the United States.

A logical speculation was put forth by an American resident tonight, who said he had grounds for the belief that the Washington government would propose through ex-Governor Lind that elections be held in all sections of the country under the auspices of a commission of foreigners, not including the United States, but possibly representing two European nations and one South American country.

This plan, however, would meet with strong opposition on the part of the Mexican government, whose declared opposition to intervention in any form extends to all nations. It is regarded likely, nevertheless, that Mexico could submit with better grace to such a proposal than the one embracing mediation by the United States only.

No Anti-Lind Outbreak Liked.

The reply of Manuel Garza Aldape, acting foreign minister, to Secretary Bryan's second note recommending moderation on the part of the Mexican officials and requesting that judgment be withheld respecting Mr. Lind's mission, has cleared the atmosphere of apprehension regarding his reception at the capital, which was created by rumors traceable to no definite source, but nevertheless persistent.

C. F. von BERNANN, Section Director.

Schiff Put on Stand to Refute HIS STATEMENTS HELP DEFENSE Conley and Dalton Testimony

Herbert G. Schiff, assistant to Leo M. Frank at the National Pencil factory, followed J. H. Minar on the stand Saturday. His testimony was used by the defense in an effort to refute the stories of Jim Conley and C. B. Dalton to the effect that Frank frequently had women in the office on Saturdays and holidays and he also went into great detail and testified to the complexity of the financial sheet and the large amount of work necessary to complete it.

He was being cross-examined by the state when court adjourned at 12:30 o'clock until 9 o'clock Monday morning. At the time of adjournment the solicitor was trying to show by cross-questions that the witness had exaggerated the amount of work and the time required upon the financial sheet which it is claimed Frank made out on the Saturday before the murder was discovered.

"Do you have anything to do with keeping the books and getting up the financial statement?" Mr. Arnold began.

"Yes, I do."

"Who went to work for the factory first, you or Mr. Frank?"

"Mr. Frank."

"What sort of work did you first do?"

"I assisted in the office work of the factory and early in January was promoted and went on the road, then the office force got short and I offered my services in the office again and returned to help Mr. Frank."

The witness then stated that he and Frank handled the petty cash for drayage and other incidentals.

"Where do you get the cash for your payroll?"

"From the bank on a check of the National Pencil company, signed by Sig Montak, general manager."

"Do you draw more or less than the amount of the payroll?"

"We draw a check to meet the payroll to the pennies."

"Who usually got the money from the bank?"

"I did."

"How much cash is usually kept on hand in the office?"

"About $75 to $50 for incidentals."

"What are some of the things for which you spend it?"

"Drayage, keasens for the night-watchman, soap, candles and other things like that needed around the factory."

"When do you and Frank get paid?"

"On the last of the month."

Frank Paid $150 a Month.

"What is Frank's salary?"

"It is $150 per month."

"What do you get?"

"My salary is $80 a month."

"Where does the general manager, Sig Montak, stay?"

"His office is at Montak brothers' place, four blocks away."

"Where is the paying of bills and the banking of the money for the National Pencil factory done?"

"At Montak brothers'."

"Did you or Frank ever draw any checks on the name of the pencil company to pay bills or for anything else?"

"Neither of us had any authority to sign a check for the National Pencil company."

"What does this financial sheet show?"

"It tries to show the profit and loss for the week."

The witness was then shown the financial sheet and with him Mr. Arnold went into great detail about the getting up of the sheet and the tedious operations it entailed.

"How long had it been customary to get this sheet up on Saturdays?"

"Ever since the factory had been in existence."

"What part of the work do you do on the sheet?"

"I get up reports from the different foremen on the amount of materials used, and also to supply the total of the payroll."

"Since June, 1912, how many days have you missed from work?"

"Not a day."

"How about your vacation?"

"Oh, yes, I took a vacation last year. I had the last week in July and the first week in August."

"What were your hours on Saturdays? Were you there in the afternoons?"

"My custom was to leave at 11:15 and get back at from 2:15 to 3 o'clock on Saturday afternoons."

"How about Frank?"

"He would leave at 1 and get back at 3."

Never Locked Doors.

"Did you or Frank ever lock the doors when you were at work in the office?"

"No, we never did."

"Did the stenographers ever work on Saturday?"

"Very seldom."

"Did salesmen come in on what day?"

"Yes, frequently."

"Who all worked there on Saturday afternoons?"

"Men who oiled and repaired the machinery and others who went up."

"Who was the nightwatchman before New Lee?"

"He was a white man."

"Did you ever have a negro night watchman before?"

"No, we never did."

"Do you recall ever having seen Jim Conley around the factory on Saturdays?"

"No, I've never seen him there."

Denies Presence of Women.

"Did you and Frank ever have women up there on Saturday?"

"No."

"Between June, 1912, and April, 1913, did you ever miss a Saturday at the factory, except while you were on your vacation?"

"Not one."

"You went on the road early in January, didn't you?"

"Yes, I left the first Saturday in January."

"What time were you there that afternoon?"

"I was there from noon until about 5 o'clock, when Mr. Frank went with me to the train."

"Did you see Conley there that day?"

"No."

"Did you ever see C. B. Dalton around the factory?"

"No."

"Do you know a woman named Daisy Hopkins?"

"Yes, she used to work at the factory."

"Do you remember when she left?"

"No, I do not, I only remember that there was such a woman there at one time."

Mr. Arnold then produced the pencil company's payroll book and asked the witness to say when the woman started and when she left.

"This book starts on May, 1912, and according to it she was working there then, but her name is not on the payroll after the week of June 6, 1912."

Woman Never Returned After Hours.

"Did you ever see her come back to the factory alone or with anyone else after work hours?"

"No."

"On last Thanksgiving day do you recall what happened and who was in the factory during the afternoon?"

"Yes, Mr. Frank and I and Conley and an office boy named Frank Pains were there. I had Conley and the boy go to the fourth floor to clean it up that morning and Conley left at about 10:30."

"Did you and Frank leave together?"

"Yes."

"At what time?"

"At 12:30."

"Where did you go?"

"We went to Whitehall and Alabama to get our cars."

"Who got a car first?"

"Mr. Frank caught a Washington street car and left me and my car came a few moments later."

"Did you paid off the help on Friday, April 25?"

"I did."

"Do you remember if Helen Ferguson got her pay that day?"

"Yes, I did."

"Who paid her?"

"I did."

"Do you remember her or any other girl asking for Mary Phagan's pay that day?"

"No."

"To whom would such a person have gone?"

"To me."

"Were you at the pay window where you usually stand?"

"I did."

Dorsey's Remark Ruled Out.

"Don't lead him; he's willing enough," interrupted Mr. Dorsey.

"Your honor, in the first place I deny that I'm leading him, and in the second place, I want that remark of Mr. Dorsey struck off the record."

The judge ordered the jury to forget that Mr. Dorsey had ever said, "He's willing enough," and the examination went on.

"Did you see anybody go to Frank for pay?"

"No."

"Was there any reason why anyone should have?"

"No."

"Did you expect the employees to come for their pay Saturday?"

"No."

"Could they get their pay, though, if they came?"

"Yes, if the paymaster happened to be there."

"Did you finish up your work on the financial sheet Friday, April 25?"

"No."

"It made it harder."

Then the witness and Mr. Arnold went over the details of the past-board model of the National Pencil factory. The witness next identified the financial sheet, claimed by the defense to have been worked up Saturday by Frank Schiff, identified the handwriting as that of Frank's, "Is that sheet from the data from which it was taken?"

"Yes, it is."

Then spreading the sheet before the jury the witness and attorney went through all the details required to get it up and Schiff pointed out the intricate calculations required and the amount of tedious detail necessary. He stated it usually took about three hours to finish it.

He next stated that he believed two and a half hours would be the very shortest time in which the sheet could possibly be gotten up.

The Mr. Arnold took up each financial sheet made from June, 1912, to the one above mentioned and Schiff identified each one as being in Frank's handwriting. He answered the questions rapidly and showed a complete knowledge of the subject.

"Did you know a girl named Mary Phagan?" was next asked.

"I knew there was such a name on the pay rolls, but I would not have known her from any one of the other girls in the factory."

No Scratches on Frank.

"Were there any scratches on Frank's face or arms when you saw him Sunday?"

"No."

"When things went wrong about the factory how did Frank act?"

"Mr. Frank was extremely nervous."

"When trouble came up who untangled things?"

"Mr. Darley or I."

"How did Frank show his nervousness?"

"By trembling."

"Do you recall the day that a street car upon which Frank was riding ran over a little girl?"

"I do."

"How did Frank act?"

"He was so nervous I had to give him ammonia; he wasn't any good the rest of the day."

"You know Jim Conley?"

"Yes, since he came to work there at the factory."

"What sort of a negro is he?"

"There's very little to him."

Mr. Hooper objected and the question was changed.

"What sort of work does he do?"

"He ran the elevator and swept up."

Conley's Character Bad.

"What was his character?"

"It was bad."

"Would you believe him on oath?"

"No, I would not."

Mr. Arnold then showed Schiff the murder notes and the tablet found near the girl's body.

"Where can you find articles such as these?" he said, pointing to the tablet and the note written on a piece of tablet paper.

"Anywhere in the basement."

"Where would you expect to find paper such as this note is on?" the attorney then asked, pointing to the note written on a duplicate order blank of the National Pencil company.

"Almost anywhere in the building."

"Were these blanks in use at the time of the murder?"

"No."

"Where were these blanks kept?"

"In the outer office of the factory."

"Did you hear Frank and a Mr. Ursebach talking over the telephone on Friday, April 25?"

"What did you hear?"

"I heard Mr. Frank say, 'All right, Charlie, I'll go with you.'"

"To what were they referring?"

"To going to the ball game that afternoon."

"Can you see the clock from Frank's office?"

"Only part of it."

"When the safe door is closed, can you see the clock?"

"No, you can't see it at all, then."

"Could a girl the size of Monteen Stover see over the safe door?"

"No."

"What happened on Tuesday between you and Conley?"

Tells of Conversation With Conley.

"I saw Conley in the factory and he seemed to be trying to conceal himself and I asked what he was doing there and he said he was afraid to go out and that he would give a million dollars if he were a white man, that he would go out if he were. I told him that being a white man didn't help, that Mr. Frank had been arrested and that if he is innocent he had better go on and not be afraid."

"Did you ever see women in Frank's office?"

"No."

"How is the office arranged? Can you see in it when the door is closed?"

"Yes, the door is made of clear glass on the upper half and any person can see right into the office."

"Does the elevator make a noise when it runs?"

"Yes."

"Is the switch box to the motor kept locked?"

"No, we used to do that but sometime before the murder we were ordered by the insurance people to leave it unlocked."

"Did you ever excuse Conley's not registering?"

"No, I have frequently got after him about it and even docked him for it."

Frequently Saw Blood Spots.

"Did you ever see any blood spots up there?"

"Yes."

"What were they?"

"Well, the employees frequently cut their fingers and when they did they came to the office where we kept a box of things to tie them up unless the cut was so bad we had to send for a doctor."

"Did you see where Barrett found the blood spots?"

"Yes."

"Was it or not on a line, I mean in the route people would have to take from the metal room to the office?"

"It was."

"Did you see the hair found up there?"

"Yes."

"Could you tell its color?"

"No, I could not."

"Did you see the spot where Conley claimed he found the girl's dead body?"

"Yes."

"Was there any blood there?"

"There was none."

"Was the place wet, or had there ever been any water there?"

"The place was dry; there never had been any water there, and to my knowledge it had not been washed and scrubbed in the four years I worked there."

Squabble Over Questions.

Mr. Dorsey took up the cross-examination.

"Did you see Mr. Gheseling, the undertaker, on the Sunday that the body was found?"

"Yes."

Mr. Dorsey then asked the witness if he had not told Gheseling that Mary Phagan would have shortly been confined. He replied hotly that he had not said it.

Mr. Arnold rose at once and entered an objection, asking the court to rule out everything pertaining to that. He said that the physicians for the state had testified that such was not the case.

"Your honor," said Mr. Dorsey, "I know as well as does Mr. Arnold that such was not the girl's condition, but I want to show that this witness did say that about her and I want to show that he was inspired by Frank to say it."

After further argument the matter was ruled out.

"Did you know that Mrs. J. A. White had told of seeing a negro around the factory that Saturday?" Mr. Dorsey then asked.

"Was Sam Hewlett, a private detective, there in conference with you and Frank Monday?"

"He was not."

"Do you mean to deny that Hewlett was there?" replied the attorney.

"He was there, but not as a detective; he was there as a night watchman."

"Did you tell any city detective about what Mrs. White had said about seeing a negro?"

Before the witness could reply Mr. Arnold had this question ruled out, on the ground that Frank should not be allowed in any way by what anyone else had told or concealed from city detectives.

Admits Frank Was Anxious.

"How many times on Monday did you see Mr. Frank and ask you to arrange to get the Pinkertons on the case?"

"Several times."

"Wasn't he very anxious?"

"Yes, he appeared anxious; he said he thought the factory owed it to its employees to try to find the murderer and that he wanted me to take the matter up with Mr. Montak and see if he would employ a detective agency and that he would suggest the Pinkertons."

"Was Frank sick at home then?"

"He was at home, but not sick."

"Were you at the factory?"

"Yes."

"When it was full of detectives?"

"There were none there when he telephoned."

"Did you tell the city detectives come?"

"When they were telephoned about the finding of blood spots."

"When did Frank first telephone about the Pinkertons?"

"About noon."

"How often after that?"

"He telephoned at about 12:30 and again at about 1."

"Did Frank talk much about his nervousness and try to explain it?"

"I wouldn't say that."

"In your affidavit made to B. S. Smith, didn't you say that Frank often referred to his nervousness and tried to explain it?"

"Well, something about his being nervous."

"Didn't you declare on oath that he had told you about being jerked away from home and carried to see the body?"

"What did he tell you about breakfast?"

"He said that having to leave without breakfast was one of the reasons why he was nervous."

No Stenographer at Factory.

"The factory had been without a stenographer for quite a while about the time of the murder, hadn't it?"

"Yes."

"What was the condition of the work as regards the work of a stenographer?"

"It had accumulated to a certain extent."

"How long does it take to do the billing?"

"From seven to eight minutes."

"Didn't you tell the coroner under oath that it did not take over half an hour?"

"Yes."

Applause Causes Objection.

There was a murmur of applause as the solicitor made this point on the witness for the defense, and it had hardly died away when Attorney Arnold rose and protested.

"Your honor," he said, "if such a disgraceful occurrence takes place again I shall certainly move to have the courtroom cleared. I don't know who's responsible for this applause, but we are not taking the spectators into this trial."

Judge Roan instructed the deputies to try to ascertain who might be applauding if it occurred any more, and stated that he would have them before him to answer for it.

Mr. Dorsey then went into a detailed series of questions, trying to show that the witness was exaggerating the time required for getting up the financial sheet, and also to show that Frank had not done all the work that Schiff claimed he had, and there were frequent objections from the defense. Mr. Arnold claiming that the solicitor was not allowing the witness to finish his question before he asked him another.

At this juncture Judge Roan noted that it was 12:30 and stated he wanted court adjourned until Monday. He asked the jury if they were being well cared for and instructed them to report any inattention or needs to him. All of the members of the jury nodded their heads when the judge asked if they were well cared for, and court adjourned.

his first answer of half an hour was largely guess work.

To Discredit Epps Boy.

The little newsboy, George Epps, who testified that he had ridden to town on the same car with Mary Phagan on the day she was murdered, was placed on the stand by the defense. He denied he had stated to a reporter for 'The Georgian' that the last time he had seen Mary Phagan was Thursday. He said he was in the house at the time the reporter was there, but had made no such statement. He explained his absence from the courtroom by saying he had grown tired of hanging around, but was not trying to dodge being a witness.

John Minar, a reporter for The Georgian, stated he had called at the Epps boy's home shortly after the murder and that the boy had failed to tell him he had seen Mary Phagan since Thursday before the murder.

Crowd Grows Smaller.

Saturday completed the second week of the Frank trial and yet the end is nowhere in sight. It may continue for a week, ten days or two weeks. No one can tell until the defense makes clear its position in regard to character witnesses. If these are introduced the trial will run well into two weeks longer. Judge Roan has instructed that he will place no limit on the time of the speakers and these will unquestionably consume three to four days.

Interest in the trial continues unabated, but the extremely hot weather of the past few days has served to thin out the crowd to some extent, although every seat in the courtroom is filled each day. Judge Roan's order that no women be allowed to enter the room has been generally approved.

WILL PUT OIL BINDER ON PEACHTREE ROAD

County Commissioners Also Decide on Grading of Hemphill Avenue.

The county board of commissioners of Fulton county have voted to place an oil binder on Peachtree road from Brookwood to Buckhead. This work will be commenced shortly, and when completed, it is thought will allay the dust for some time to come.

For quite a while there have been numerous complaints about the dust on this road, and the action of the county commissioners met with hearty appreciation of the residents of that district.

The commissioners have voted to grade Hemphill avenue, from the waterworks to Robert Maddox's residence, on Pace's Ferry road, a distance of 1/2 mile. This forms an extension of Luckie street, and when cherted, will be one of the finest roads in the county.

$75,000 Fire at Lancaster.

Lancaster, S. C., August 9.—Fire which originated in the seed house of the Lancaster Cotton Oil company today destroyed the building and contents and the company's offices, the Lancaster and Chester railway depot and practically all its contents, the warehouses and contents of the Lancaster Mercantile company and the Bennett-Ferguson company and damaged other nearby buildings. The loss is approximately $75,000, covered by insurance. The fire is supposed to have been caused by spontaneous combustion.

Baldwin Court to Meet.

Millidgeville, Ga., August 9.—(Special.)—The July adjourned term of Baldwin county superior court will be held next week. No cases of unusual importance are scheduled for trial and Judge J. B. Park, Solicitor General Joseph E. Pottle and Clerk J. Cleveland Cooper are getting things in such shape that the session will last only for a week. The term of court will be held at a very opportune time this year as the farmers are just now completing their farming operations and it will be a week or two before cotton begins to open.

Defense Will Renew Attack Upon Dr. Harris' Testimony

That the defense in the trial of Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan, will continue its attack upon the testimony of Dr. H. F. Harris, who made a postmortem examination of the body and declared the girl must have died at about 12:10 in the afternoon, was the information secured Saturday.

Dr. Willie Westmoreland, Dr. J. N. Ellis and Dr. T. H. Hancock are expected to be the physicians placed upon the stand to refute this declaration made by Dr. Harris. The defense has already made an attack upon the state's claim that Mary Phagan was already dead at 12:10 o'clock when Monteen Stover says she entered Frank's office and did not find him there and through the statements of two street car men they sought to show that the girl never left the street car until that minute and must have reached the factory after Miss Stover had come and gone.

Dr. Harris based his statement about the time of death upon the position of the contents of the girl's stomach, declaring that the amount of digestion that had taken place in the cabbage there showed that she must have met death within something like 45 minutes from eating the cabbage. Her mother swore that she took this meal at 11:30 or just a few minutes earlier.

Neither side would make any statement last night. Both indicate that they were well pleased with the way in which things are going, but lawyers on both sides declined to make any statement in regard to the future course of action.

That the defense will take the greater part, or all, of this week for the presentation of their side, and even longer should they place Frank's character on record, has already been known for several days and from present indications the arguments of counsel will begin a week from tomorrow.

When court convenes Monday morning H. G. Schiff, one of Frank's assistants in the factory, will again go on the stand for further cross-examination by the state. Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey had started upon this when court adjourned Saturday.

Epps Boy Denies Trying to Avoid Being Called to the Stand Again

C. B. Dalton, who was used by the state to corroborate some of Jim Conley's testimony against Leo Frank, was the first witness called by the defense Saturday morning. He did not respond and George Epps, the newsboy who claims to have ridden to town with Mary Phagan the day she met death, was next called.

The lad, who could not be found Friday, was present and took the stand. Such a defense clash over the lad as Solicitor Hugh Dorsey stated that Attorney Reuben Arnold had tried to give the impression Friday that he had fled from the court and could not be got to testify for the defense.

"Do you remember the Sunday on which Mary Phagan's body was found?" Mr. Arnold asked the lad.

"Yes, sir."

"Did Mr. J. M. Minar, a reporter, come to your house that afternoon?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did he ask you and your sister when was the last time either of you had seen Mary Phagan?"

"I heard that he asked sister; he didn't ask me."

"Didn't your sister say she hadn't seen her since the previous Thursday and didn't you stand there and say the same thing?"

"No, sir; I'd gone to get a wrap for her."

Mr. Dorsey then took the witness.

"George, did you try to hide from this court?"

"No, sir."

"You weren't here yesterday, were you?"

"No, sir; I wasn't here; I got tired of hanging around here and you told me I could go home and you'd send for me when I was wanted, and yesterday when they came for me I was out playin' ball."

"Didn't you call me up last night and ask if you were wanted?"

"Yes, sir."

At this point Mr. Arnold objected, saying that these remarks had nothing to do with the case.

"Well, your honor, Mr. Arnold tried to give the impression yesterday that this witness was hiding out rather than testify when the defense wanted him," said Mr. Dorsey, "and I wanted to show that this was not the case."

Frank A. Hooper Is Proving Big Aid to Solicitor Dorsey

ROSSER CALLS HIM BEAU BRUMMEL OF BAR

By Britt Craik.

He has a kind and genial face that makes you feel he is the friend of everybody in the world, but in the midst of a big trial he might be compared with a Gatling gun, except for the fact that there doubtless are witnesses who would prefer facing the Gatling.

There is a liberal sprinkling of gray in his hair, and Luther Rosser has often truthfully, although sarcastically, referred to him as the Beau Brummel of the bar.

You would never suspect that he was a lawyer. Your first impression would be that he was an author, an actor or a lecturer.

That he would work as untiringly and persistently to hang a man as Columbus worked to find America, would never enter your mind, and you would dispute the word of your most veracious friend on the subject.

Dorsey Secures Hooper.

When Solicitor Hugh Dorsey faced the task of prosecuting Leo M. Frank he set about to find a colleague worthy of the undertaking. He selected Frank Hooper, a well-known corporation attorney.

The Atlanta public, which, as a rule, keeps in touch with only the spectacular cases, wondering at the choice, inquired who is Hooper?

The solicitor stood sponsor for his man, and consulted the parents of Mary Phagan on his choice. Mr. and Mrs. Coleman put the brand of approval upon him the moment they saw him, and Frank Hooper was entered as an associate counsel.

The public speculated considerably, as the public is prone to do, and waited eagerly for a display of the talents of this colleague. A portion of the public—that portion which knows what to do in such cases—looked up "Men of Mark in Georgia," and finding much space devoted to the name of Hooper, concluded that Dorsey had chosen logically.

Audiences Watch Hooper.

Then came the trial. A man of small stature, no larger than the solicitor himself, sat with Mr. Dorsey and conferred with him as only an associate would be privileged to do. The audience whispered that this must be Hooper.

"Well, he looks all right, has a clever face, and that smile just won't come off."

The first impression, therefore, was satisfactory, and the curious public began to take even a greater interest in this Hooper than it had before.

His fame spread fully as quickly. His speeches were incisive and clear-pointed. There was something irresistible about his arguments, and he seemed to know a wonderful lot about laws.

A Barricade of Law Books.

Several days ago, when the argument was in progress over the attempt by the defense to expunge certain parts of Jim Conley's testimony, Frank Hooper came into the courtroom with an armful of thick books. Two deputies followed him, carrying proportionate loads.

When all others had finished voicing their respective protests, he arose from behind his barricade of legal volumes and said to the court in that polite, deliberate manner that Is Defense Planning Telling Blow At Testimony Given by Jim Conley?

Will the defense strive to show by witnesses that the pencil factory elevator was not run on April 26 as told by Jim Conley in his remarkable story?

Since a question put to General Manager Darley by Luther Rosser when Darley was placed on the stand Friday, much speculation has been created in this regard.

Although attorneys for the defense will not discuss the subject, it is the prevalent belief that an effort will be made to show by mechanics that the elevator was not in operation at any time during that fateful afternoon.

Darley was being questioned about workmen on the third floor who, as was a Saturday afternoon custom, were oiling and repairing the machinery while it was idle during a holiday. He asked if these same workmen did not oil and clean the motor which propels the elevator.

Before the question was answered it was apparently withdrawn as though in an effort to conceal its real purpose and not show an important card in the hand of the mechanic.

It is rumored that a mechanic, who gave much of his time to oiling and cleaning the elevator motor about the time of the murder, was lowered into the basement, is ready to testify that the motor was not in operation at this time or during any time of the afternoon.

If this evidence is produced, as rumored, it will be one of the most significant and telling points submitted by the defense thus far. It will come as near breaking the testimony of the negro Conley as any contradictory evidence yet presented.

Introduction by Defense of Host Of Character Witnesses Probable

The introduction of character testimony in behalf of Leo Frank at present seems very probable. It is not thought, however, that witnesses of this nature will be put on the stand until the middle of the week.

Attorneys for the defense, as in the past, who have withheld their plans until the exact moment of performance, have refused to discuss whether or not character witnesses will be called. It is the general impression, however, that a wealth of this evidence will be presented—more, in fact,

Blue Ridge Highway Will Open Up Magnificent Section of State

That the much talked of "Blue Ridge Highway," extending from Atlanta through Fulton, Cobb, Cherokee, Pickens, Gilmer and Fannin counties, to Murphy, N. C., will soon be a reality, open to traffic, is declared by T. H. Tabor, of the White Pass hotel.

The territory along which the road will be constructed is one of scenic beauty, rich in minerals and contains great possibilities for ideal summer resorts. Here the agriculturist can find a rich soil suited to the needs of nearly any grain, and in the hills are a large number of mineral springs of powerful medicinal virtue. The section is one that will doubtless become most popular with tourists when the highway is completed.

On account of the steepness of its hills and rough roads, added to the fact that heretofore no concerted action has been taken to remedy the facilities for road traffic, the country is at present almost unknown to the automobilist. The road has been in the course of construction for some time in the counties of Cobb and Cherokee, and much splendid work has already been done. Now comes the announcement that Pickens, Gilmer and Fannin counties will immediately start work on that part of the road lying within their county limits.

The citizens of Murphy, N. C., are enthusiastic over the road, and have promised to complete a road in their state to connect at the state line as soon as the road is constructed through Fannin county.

The road will open up to the sight scenic views of the marble works at Tate, in which millions of dollars are invested; huge gold and iron deposits at White Pass and many marble, copper and iron mines from White Pass to Murphy. The section is also an ideal one for apples and other fruits, and the hills are largely covered with the finest hardwood timber.

There are many ideal summer resorts along the route to be traversed by the road. The mineral springs of this section are becoming famous throughout the south, and with a first-class automobile highway making the resorts easily accessible to the motorist, the charming climate, delightful scenery and many other advantages, this territory with its elaborate accommodations for pleasure and health seekers, is destined to draw even a more liberal patronage than in the past. The medicinal and curative properties of these waters were discovered long ago by the untutored Cherokee Indians, of whose habitations in the district many relics may still be found.

Reporter Makes Denial of Charge That Reports Have Been Flavored

J. M. Minar, a reporter, was put on the stand by the defense after the Epps boy left. By him the defense sought to prove that the boy had talked of Mary Phagan and had not mentioned seeing her on the car.

Before he had finished cross-examining him Attorney F. A. Hooper sought to create the impression on the jury that The Georgian, for which Minar works, had instructed him to discover as much news favorable for Leo Frank as possible, and Mr. Arnold entered an objection at once.

"Did you go to the Epps home on Sunday afternoon, the day the dead girl's body was found?" was Mr. Arnold's opening question.

"Yes," replied Minar.

"Did you see George Epps and his sister?"

"Yes."

"Did you ask them together?"

"Yes."

"Please state what, if anything, they answered you?"

"The sister said she had last seen Mary Phagan on Thursday and the boy told her frequently rode to town and also to show that the girl could not have reached the factory until after 12:10, at which time the state contends she had already been killed.

H. J. Hinchey, an automobile man, was called and testified to having seen Frank going home on the car on the day of the murder and that there was nothing out of the ordinary about him.

E. F. Holloway, day watchman, and N. Y. Darley, one of the factory superintendents, were also placed on the stand by the defense on Friday. Darley made a good witness for Frank. Holloway became so confused under the solicitor's cross-examination that he amounted to but little value.

On Saturday the defense introduced a strong witness in H. Schiff, Frank's assistant, who told of Frank's having always made out the financial sheet and of what an intricate piece of work it was. He also declared that there was no truth in the stories told by Dalton and the negro Conley.

Through J. M. Minar, a reporter, the defense also attacked the story of little George Epps. Minar declared that on April 27 he had visited the Epps home in Bellwood and asked Epps and his father when they had last seen Mary Phagan and that the sister had said she had last seen her on the previous Thursday, and that the little boy said nothing about having ridden to town on Saturday with her.

When court adjourned for the week, Schiff, the most important witness of

with her in the mornings," replied the witness.

"Did the boy say anything about riding with her on Saturday?"

"No."

"Did he say he had seen her since Thursday?"

"No, nothing at all."

"Did he mention the subject at all?"

"No."

Mr. Hooper here took up the cross-examination.

"Don't you work directly under M. D. Clorfine, the city editor of The Georgian?"

"Yes."

"Wasn't he a frequent visitor to the jail to see Frank?"

Mr. Arnold leaped to his feet and protested vigorously against this question and it was ruled out.

"Haven't you had directions to get everything possible that is favorable to the defendant?"

"No," replied the witness rather hotly. "I certainly have not."

"Weren't you under orders when you went out there to aid Frank as much as possible?"

"Frank hadn't been mentioned in the case at that time," replied the witness and he was excused.

The section is one that will doubtless become most popular with tourists when the highway is completed.

On account of the steepness of its hills and rough roads, added to the fact that heretofore no concerted action has been taken to remedy the facilities for road traffic, the country is at present almost unknown to the automobilist. The road has been in the course of construction for some time in the counties of Cobb and Cherokee, and much splendid work has already been done. Now comes the announcement that Pickens, Gilmer and Fannin counties will immediately start work on that part of the road lying within their county limits.

The citizens of Murphy, N. C., are enthusiastic over the road, and have promised to complete a road in their state to connect at the state line as soon as the road is constructed through Fannin county.

The road will open up to the sight scenic views of the marble works at Tate, in which millions of dollars are invested; huge gold and iron deposits at White Pass and many marble, copper and iron mines from White Pass to Murphy. The section is also an ideal one for apples and other fruits, and the hills are largely covered with the finest hardwood timber.

There are many ideal summer resorts along the route to be traversed by the road. The mineral springs of this section are becoming famous throughout the south, and with a first-class automobile highway making the resorts easily accessible to the motorist, the charming climate, delightful scenery and many other advantages, this territory with its elaborate accommodations for pleasure and health seekers, is destined to draw even a more liberal patronage than in the past. The medicinal and curative properties of these waters were discovered long ago by the untutored Cherokee Indians, of whose habitations in the district many relics may still be found.

Reporter Makes Denial of Charge That Reports Have Been Flavored

J. M. Minar, a reporter, was put on the stand by the defense after the Epps boy left. By him the defense sought to prove that the boy had talked of Mary Phagan and had not mentioned seeing her on the car.

Before he had finished cross-examining him Attorney F. A. Hooper sought to create the impression on the jury that The Georgian, for which Minar works, had instructed him to discover as much news favorable for Leo Frank as possible, and Mr. Arnold entered an objection at once.

"Did you go to the Epps home on Sunday afternoon, the day the dead girl's body was found?" was Mr. Arnold's opening question.

"Yes," replied Minar.

"Did you see George Epps and his sister?"

"Yes."

"Did you ask them together?"

"Yes."

"Please state what, if anything, they answered you?"

"The sister said she had last seen Mary Phagan on Thursday and the boy told her frequently rode to town and also to show that the girl could not have reached the factory until after 12:10, at which time the state contends she had already been killed.

H. J. Hinchey, an automobile man, was called and testified to having seen Frank going home on the car on the day of the murder and that there was nothing out of the ordinary about him.

E. F. Holloway, day watchman, and N. Y. Darley, one of the factory superintendents, were also placed on the stand by the defense on Friday. Darley made a good witness for Frank. Holloway became so confused under the solicitor's cross-examination that he amounted to but little value.

On Saturday the defense introduced a strong witness in H. Schiff, Frank's assistant, who told of Frank's having always made out the financial sheet and of what an intricate piece of work it was. He also declared that there was no truth in the stories told by Dalton and the negro Conley.

Through J. M. Minar, a reporter, the defense also attacked the story of little George Epps. Minar declared that on April 27 he had visited the Epps home in Bellwood and asked Epps and his father when they had last seen Mary Phagan and that the sister had said she had last seen her on the previous Thursday, and that the little boy said nothing about having ridden to town on Saturday with her.

When court adjourned for the week, Schiff, the most important witness of the day, was being cross-examined by the solicitor.

with her in the mornings," replied the witness.

"Did the boy say anything about riding with her on Saturday?"

"No."

"Did he say he had seen her since Thursday?"

"No, nothing at all."

"No."

Mr. Hooper here took up the cross-examination.

"Don't you work directly under M. D. Clorfine, the city editor of The Georgian?"

"Yes."

"Wasn't he a frequent visitor to the jail to see Frank?"

Mr. Arnold leaped to his feet and protested vigorously against this question and it was ruled out.

"Haven't you had directions to get everything possible that is favorable to the defendant?"

"No," replied the witness rather hotly. "I certainly have not."

"Weren't you under orders when you went out there to aid Frank as much as possible?"

"Frank hadn't been mentioned in the case at that time," replied the witness and he was excused.

IMPORTANT WITNESSES HEARD

Feature of Trial's Second Week

The resting by the state of its case against Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan, came on Thursday and the defense is at present setting forth its evidence in rebuttal.

Since last Sunday much that is regarded as important has been introduced by both sides and a number of bitter fights have been waged over evidence.

James Conley, the negro sweeper, who makes accusations that Frank told him he had struck the girl too hard, and who also told of Frank's having women in his office for immoral purposes and also swore to alleged habits of degeneracy on the part of the superintendent, was put on the stand Monday, and it was not until Tuesday that the negro was excused. He had been on the stand something like fifteen hours and had established a record for Georgia courts.

Of the time he was on the stand, he was subjected to about thirteen hours of grueling cross-examination by Attorney Luther Z. Rosser, but despite every attack, stuck to the principal part of his charges, although he admitted he had previously lied on many occasions.

On Wednesday, also, the court refused finally to strike from the records the negro's testimony in regard to Frank's alleged habits and also in regard to his previous actions with women before the Saturday of the murder.

Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of the murdered girl, was also recalled to the stand and told of having cooked cabbage for Dr. H. F. Harris to experiment upon. At her departure the physician was again put on the stand, and he continued his statement in which he declared that the girl met death within about 45 minutes after eating the cabbage and bread she is said to have had at about 11:30 o'clock Saturday of her murder.

Dalton's Evidence Damaging.

On Thursday the state called C. B. Dalton and he swore to having taken Daisy Hopkins to the factory basement with the Frank's knowledge and also to having seen Frank drinking beer in his office with women on Saturdays.

City Detective Bass Rosser was put on the stand by the state in an effort to prove that Mrs. J. A. White, wife, sister and daughter of National Park, all factory employees, had concealed from the city detectives her knowledge of Conley's presence in the building on Saturday.

The state then rested its case with the introduction of the murder notes and its plans and drawings and diagrams in evidence.

The defense put Dr. L. W. Childs on the stand as its first witness to rebut what Dr. Harris had said. Dr. Childs declared that statements like those made by the other physician were pure guess work and that he would not make them at all. He also declared the solicitor made him admit ignorance on certain subjects for an expert, which partly destroyed the value of his testimony for the defense.

Harry Scott, a Pinkerton detective, originally called by the state, was recalled by the defense and through him the many lies told by Jim Conley about the case were shown to the jury.

On Friday Daisy Hopkins was called by the defense and she entered a complete denial of the charges against her made by Dalton and Conley. Solicitor Dorsey forced her to admit that she had been in jail, on the charges of immorality.

Several strong witnesses for the defense were called after that when, through Ira O. Kaufman, a photographer, near, at J. Adams, a photographer, the defense showed that it would have been impossible for Albert McKnight, husband of the cook in Frank's family, to have stood in the kitchen door and seen that Frank did not eat dinner on April 26.

Through these two witnesses much detailed explanation of the factory was entered into. Plans and drawings by the engineer of both the factory and the Bell home and surroundings were tendered in evidence and the photographs made by the photographer which showed that Frank might have been in his office and not been able to see a person on account of the safe door were also brought in.

Relief for Catarrah Sufferers Now FREE

You Can Now Treat This Trouble in Your Own Home and Get Relief at Once.

How the Remedy for Catarrah Was Discovered.

THIS terrible disease has raged unchecked for years simply because symptoms have been treated while the vicious germs that cause the trouble have been left to circulate in the blood, and bring the disease back as fast as local treatments could relieve it.

C. E. Gauss, who experimented for years on a treatment for Catarrah, found that after perfecting a balm that relieved the nose and throat troubles quickly, he could not prevent the trouble beginning all over again.

On test cases, he could completely remove all signs of Catarrah from nose and throat, but in a few weeks they were back.

Careful experiments and investigations have shown that as the troubles were being treated the nose and throat the real cause of the disease was overlooked and in a short time the Catarrah would return stronger than ever. Mr. Gauss has gone way ahead of the ordinary methods of treatment and has provided a remedy that Kills the Germs in the Blood and immediately gives relief to the nose and throat.

He perfected the New Combined Treatment, since admitted to be the logical, sure, scientific method.

Reese Jones, of Scranton, Penn., says that after trying many other treatments, he used the new method and—"My nose is now entirely clear and free and I am not bothered by the disease any more. The New Combined Treatment is worth its weight in gold."

Temporary relief from catarrah may be obtained in other ways, but the New Combined Treatment must inevitably be accepted for permanent results.

Sarah J. Cape, Mount Pelia, Tenn., says, "I suffered the pains and distress of catarrah for fifteen years and needed to sleep with my head under every method. But by your new method I was completely cured and you cannot imagine the joy that has come over me."

A large trial treatment, with complete, minute directions, will be sent free to any catarrah sufferer. Send your name, address, and a few lines, and the test package of the New Combined Treatment will be sent free prepaid, together with the valuable book on Catarrah.

MIDDLE WEST PARCHED BY HEAT AND DROUGHT

Many Cities and Towns Face a Water Famine—Crops Burning.

Kansas City, August 9.—Reports of suffering from heat and drought in Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma reached here in greater numbers today than at any time since the period of intense heat set in nearly a week ago.

Cities and towns over the three states, and especially in Kansas, are harassed for want of water. Several towns are shipping in their water by freight. In others low wells have caused disease.

Reports of burnt crops come from all sections, and in some of the districts hardest hit the impossibility of laying by a winter's food for live stock promises to prolong the suffering.

Six new horse fountains in various sections of Kansas City were ordered installed today after complaints had reached the water department that the crush about the old fountains was so great in some instances that the whole street was blocked to traffic.

Records at the fire department headquarters show that drought has more than doubled the number of fires.

Today's weather reports were another round of high temperatures. In Kansas the mercury again climbed above the century mark. Thermometers in some parts of the state registered as high as 108.

Three deaths due to heat were reported in Kansas today. Few prostrations occurred because farmers and other outside workers have suspended work, and farmers are doing the work that is absolutely necessary, such as providing feed and water for live stock and digging cisterns and pipe lines to conserve the water on hand.

Poultry raisers have suffered severely from the drought on account of the shortage of feed and water. Chickens are being rushed to market and sold at a sacrifice. One firm at Leavenworth sold 30,000 pounds of poultry this week and will make another similar shipment in a few days. Dealers say the country districts will sell practically all their poultry within the next week if present conditions continue.

Leavenworth a temperature of 105 was reached today. Practically all streams in Leavenworth county are dry and threshing operations have been abandoned on account of the water shortage.

PARSON AND MOTHER POISONED BY EATING CHICKEN CROQUETTES

Griffin, Ga., August 9.—(Special)—Griffin church circles are much disturbed on account of the sudden illness of the Rev. C. E. Wheat, rector of St. George Episcopal church, who was stricken with ptomaine poisoning this morning from eating chicken croquettes in an Atlanta restaurant yesterday.

Inasmuch as one in Mr. Wheat's party did not eat the croquettes and was not taken sick, while two others did and became ill, the conclusion of the physicians attending Mr. Wheat and his mother, Mrs. Corne Wheat, is that the croquettes caused the poisoning beyond a doubt.

During the day grave fears were entertained for their recovery, but at a late hour tonight the information is given out that both are doing well, and it is hoped that the worst stages have been passed.

Mr. Wheat is one of Griffin's most popular ministers, having served the St. George Episcopal church for some time, and also founding the Griffin Boy Scouts club. Two weeks ago he received a call from a church in Birmingham, Mass., and gave in his resignation here. An indication of his popularity is shown in the petition signed by three hundred Griffinites, irrespective of denominational lines, that he reconsider and continue his labors here. Should he recover he plans to leave here in the next month, making the journey from here to Massachusetts in an automobile.

William S. Witham Brings Back to America Story Of Varied Interest About Things Observed in Old World

William S. Witham, banker, farmer and philosopher, who talks of his trip to Europe, where he went as commissioner to the Rural Bankers' Conference.

By Isma Dooly

"Dr. Abbott Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard university, who was one of the great Americans at the speakers' table at the banquet given by Americans in London on the Fourth of July, told one of the best stories I heard while I was in Europe and Great Britain, and one that well illustrates the ability of the American to take care of himself, and to 'match wits' with the man he sits next to, anywhere," declared Mr. William S. Witham, in an interesting discourse on the subject of his recent trip as commissioner to the conference on rural credit systems.

"An American was riding in a first-class compartment in an English train next him was seated an Englishman. The American was smoking. The Englishman became annoyed, and said, 'It is not right!'

"I don't think so, either, retorted the American; it ought not to be allowed," but he continued to puff his cigar. The Englishman further remonstrated, only to be agreed with, while the American continued to indulge himself in tobacco fumes.

"Will you have you put out at the first station," was finally threatened, as the party neared one. When reached and the train started, the American quick-witted enough, reached out first to the guard and said, "arrest this man; he is riding in a first-class compartment on a second-class ticket, and the Englishman was quickly ejected from the car.

"How did you know it was a second-class ticket," was asked the American, to whom he had told the story. "Why, I saw it sticking out of his pocket, and it was just like mine," was the reply.

The story won the party though there were many good Britishers present, for the American is given the credit wherever he goes of knowing what he wants; how to get it and what to do with it when he gets it. He is country-loving and loyal wherever you find him, and no man ever made him forget his loyalty to his own country and his allegiance to his flag wherever he sees it. And this is one of the qualities that makes the American respected. To hold on to his American citizenship is one of his surest holds on old world opinion," continued Mr. Witham.

A Commissioner.

"Yes, I was one of the commissioners of one hundred sent from this country to investigate the land mortgage banking systems, and here Mr. Witham produced a wonderful scrapbook which carried letters, cards and invitations covering every feature of the trip from the time the party left this country until they returned. There were notes and notations that gave most interesting insight into the world art and architecture, old-world tradition and literature, as well as his studious investigation of the business he went on.

"The report of my business is more than you would want to hear, but I will give you a brief idea of it—first, though, won't you have a slice of nice cold watermelon, or a cantaloupe, or a glass of ice water or a cigar? Now do not be shocked at the idea of smoking; I assure you as one of the most wonderful entertainments I attended in Europe, where nobility had nobbed on all sides, the great ladies—and great ladies they were—smoked after the banquet. They were gracious and gentle and sweet-voiced, but they smoked. I said to my wife, observing them and how unconscious they were that it was something of a shock to the average American. 'Dear, if you want to you smoke—it is a custom with them and they don't mean anything by it,' but wife did not smoke. 'The message I bring,' and Mr. Witham here talked in serious vein. 'That of the seven systems of rural credit existing in the world, there is only one in my judgment that can be Georziatized, that is the land schafter system of Germany. By that plan a farmer borrows his money for twenty years or longer and the 1 per cent he would find the entire debt paid, he divided 4 per cent for interest, 2 per cent principal and 1 per cent all expenses. In ten years the interest feature would be reduced to 3 per cent. After a few more years he would find the entire debt paid and he the owner of the farm.'

How He Studied the Problem.

"When I reached Germany I determined to study the problem in my own way. There was no need to go into the bank to do it. I knew pretty well the system there, but I wanted to meet with the borrowers and talk to them. Through a splendid citizen and friend I made known this idea and he, through the agency of his banks, arranged that I go to a rural community where I could meet with the borrowers. They were gathered together, some twenty of them, in a little inn where on the table were the steins overflowing with the beer they drink. I laid aside my prohibitions for the time being and watched them drink and question and their replies seemed to know the good purpose of my investigation and gave me the kind of information I could have acquired only by actual contact with them.

The Universal Note for Service.

"No, they do not talk politics in Europe as much as they do in our country, and I tell you one of the things that impressed me most was the universal note for service to human kind which I noted everywhere. When we were in the capital of Holland there was an election on to regulate taxes. The millionaire as well as the man of lesser fortune was out for the income tax law as a justice to his fellow man. I talked with them and that was what I noticed. In Germany the high note for betterment I caught was that of universal peace. The Kaiser is a great man involving all the time; he sees the demand of civilization for peace and arbitration; he sees that the glory of his country, though the greatest pride of that country is its army, lies in peace. He is a great peace advocate of the world, and one of the days I was in Berlin he had had a four-hour conference with Andrew Carnegie.

"A great living example of what peace means to a marvelous prosperity of Switzerland's marvelous prosperity. They have not had a war for a hundred years there, and they are a splendid, strong, patriotic people. With the peaceful nation comes the nation rendering service making better the people of all classes and kinds. In Europe more than anywhere else probably in the civilized world there is the aristocracy of blood, the aristocracy of wealth, the aristocracy of power, and now they are making for the aristocracy of service—service to

WIFE KILLS HUSBAND TO SAVE HER OWN LIFE

Distiller Grubb Is Shot While Using Knife on Mrs. Grubb.

Spencer, N. C., August 9.—Henry Clay Grubb, a wealthy and prominent citizen of Rowan county, was shot to death early this morning in his home at Churchland, near here, by his wife, Mrs. Emma Grubb. Grubb lived an hour after the shooting. Mrs. Grubb is in a critical condition.

According to Mrs. Grubb's statement the dead man came home at 1 o'clock this morning from Salisbury and was under the influence of intoxicants. She says her husband attacked her with a knife. She is severely cut about the breast, back and shoulders and one ear is almost severed from the head. In the encounter Mrs. Grubb says she seized a revolver from a table nearby and fired three shots, two of which pierced Mr. Grubb's breast, and the third entered the abdomen. Grubb lived less than an hour, dying shortly before 2 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Grubb have seven children, two of whom are grown. The children started to the corner that this was the culmination of a series of attacks on their mother by Grubb during the past few months. On one occasion they stated it was necessary to batter down a door to prevent injury to Mrs. Grubb at the hands of her husband.

Mrs. Grubb was exonerated by a coroner's jury, who returned a verdict that the deceased came to his death at the hands of his wife, who was in self-defense and who was justifiable in the act.

Grubb owned a considerable amount of realty in Salisbury and Rowan county. He was tried in superior court here in 1905 for the murder of his brother-in-law, H. H. Grubb, and was acquitted on a plea of justifiable homicide. He was shot and seriously injured several years ago by a negro farm hand employed on his plantation near here.

Birmingham, Ala., August 9.—Seeking a compromise or a settlement of the railroad commission to prevent the putting into effect of the 2½-cent rates during pending appeal from a recent decision of Judges Grubb, Pardee and Shelby, attorneys for the Louisville and Nashville railroad and Alabama, appeared before Judge Grubb today.

The court held that as three judges had rendered the opinion from which the railroad is appealing it would be necessary to get a majority for restraining orders pending the appeal.

In addition to this, at the terminals of the dining cars, the dining car employees are provided with inspecting rooms and baths. Thus the railroad is against any disease is taken on this system.

have seen many masterpieces of the old world holds—was that of Whistler's Mother," said Mr. Witham. "It was so beautiful to me I wanted the boys of my bank to have one. I bought copies of the wonderful picture and sent the bank bookkeepers with this message:

"Dear Bookkeeper: In the gallery of the Luxembourg, in this most beautiful, as well as the most famous of European capitals, the picture that pleased me most was 'My Mother,' by Mr. Whistler. I enclose a copy. Keep it where you'll see it night and morning.

"After bitter hardships and many struggles, the boy Whistler came to be a painter of renown and his pictures sold for fabulous sums. Critics agree that his best production was 'My Mother.' Why? Because it was love's work; his soul and heart were in his subject as in no other. When others forgot him, she didn't; when others discouraged him, she didn't; when he was friendless, mother stood by him. Her sacrifices paid for his brushes. Same old story. 'The boy's best friend is his mother.'

"Say, when did you send a love letter to your mamma? Don't you know that a trinket from her boy is prized more than a pearl from anyone else in the whole world?"

"When they all forget you, mother, or will be right there with her boy; you are never on trial. I've had many good times all down the road of life, but the sweetest recollections are those kiss-days with her down at the old homestead.

"I will give you the love and hold off the calf. I can see old 'sook' right now; I fed the chickens under the old mulberry tree. After our little breakfast mother fixed me up and sent me off to school with a kiss. In the evening she would stand at the gate waiting for me. They all said I was 'Bad Billy,' she never said it, and never thought it. At night, her voice of love was the last sound I heard, and I was awakened in the morning by her kiss. In the evening she would kneel me down by her side, fold my hands in hers, and pointing them up when our eyes were turned, taught me to say 'Give us this day our daily bread.' Study this picture and find its wonders. Go and write a long letter to the old folks at home, fill it full of love—do it now. God bless them and their boy in the prayer of your friend,

"BILLY WITHAM."

EARL DANIEL IS KILLED BY SPEEDING AUTO

Carrollton Boy Is Run Over by Machine Driven by Jesse Benford.

Carrollton, Ga., August 9.—(Special.) Earl Daniel, son of J. R. Daniel, was killed by an automobile here this afternoon. Jesse Benford, son of Henry Benford, who lives at Bowdon, was driving the machine at the time of the accident.

The Daniel boy, who is 13 years of age, was crossing Alabama street, near where it runs into the public square, when the machine came around the corner and struck the boy. He died almost instantly. He was struck and knocked down and the front wheel of the car ran over his body and the hind wheel over his head.

A case was made against the Benford boy for exceeding the speed limit. He was later released on giving bond.

Some people manage to make a little truth go a long way by stretching it.

Thursday afternoon, was held from the funeral parlors of Harry G. Pool. Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. The interment was in West View. The boy scoured of Decatur, of which boy young Stanley was a prominent member, acted as pallbearers and guard of honor over the body.

Constipation and Heat Often Fatal

Regularity of Bowels Very Important to Health at This Time.

At no time of the year should people be more careful of the condition of their bowels than in hot weather. Many things may cause constipation in summer, but whatever it may be the trouble should be promptly remedied. A constipated person lays himself open to serious and often fatal diseases. That feeling of congestion, lassitude or dull headache is the first warning of trouble.

Don't try to remedy it by the excessive eating of fruit, which usually has a laxative effect, but lacks action in extreme cases. What is needed is a dose of the mild laxative-Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Take a dose of it at night before retiring—it is pleasant-tasting and free from gripping—and by morning your bowels will be emptied and your head clear. You will feel energetic again.

You cannot obtain such results with cathartics, purgatives, salts or pills, as, unlike Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, they are without tonic value and entirely too harsh. Among the thousands of dependable families, the following are the families of Mr. F. C. Harris, Live Oak, Fla., who now finds his stomach better than it has been in ten years; and Mrs. T. D. Diemer, 325 San Pedro St., Trinidad, Colo., who is cured of various digestive troubles after all doctors that she knew had failed. A bottle can be obtained of any druggist, or by city order or mail. The latter side being for family use. Results as claimed are guaranteed or your money will be refunded. This grand remedy is the safeguard of health in thousands of good American families.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it, postpaid, by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 413 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

This Announcement Is of Vital Interest to Everyone In Atlanta Who Has An Un- filled Want of Any Nature Whatsoever

Every Man, Woman and Child Should Read All of It!

The Constitution inaugurates with this issue a much improved and greatly simplified system for the classification of its "WANT ADS."

This system is designed to add to your convenience and aid you in the use of our "WANT AD" columns. And, as will be readily seen, it does away with the annoyance experienced by the readers of "WANT ADS" in newspapers which do not use a method as complete as The Constitution's, in locating the particular offer for which they are searching.

On the first page of the "WANT AD" Section will be found an index showing the page and column in which the different classifications are to be found.

The larger classifications have been subdivided for your convenience, as follows:

HELP WANTED—Male

Stores and Offices
Professions and Trades
Salesmen and Solicitors
Agents
Miscellaneous

HELP WANTED—Female

Stores and Offices
Domestics
Saleswomen and Solicitors
Agents
Miscellaneous

FOR RENT—Rooms

Unfurnished—North Side
Unfurnished—South Side
Furnished—North Side
Furnished—South Side
Furnished or Unfurnished

REAL ESTATE—For Sale

Business District
Residence District Suburban
Farm Lands
Timber Lands

Similar sub-classifications have already been arranged where necessary, and others will be added when advisable.

Under this arrangement every advertisement will be placed under the classification where it rightfully belongs.

It will not be necessary for you, when looking for business property under "REAL ESTATE—For Sale—Business District" for instance, to be bored with an account of the excellence of Prof. Dodo's method of instruction on the piccolo, for that information may be found under the classification "MUSIC and DANCING," where of course you would look, if you were at all interested in taking lessons on the piccolo.

Mr. Man Out-of-a-Job, who needs work badly, and is searching the "HELP WANTED" columns for a situation, will not have to read about the superior tables in the Umtymp Pool Parlors, or the charm of some new drink—for these advertisements will appear under suitable classifications, but he will find only offers of positions, one or more of which may be just to his liking.

This idea will be followed throughout all classifications.

Advertisers will, of course, at once see the wisdom of The Constitution's system, for it means to them greatly increased returns for the money expended.

They will agree that a man who is seriously looking for a job, for instance, is not a very good prospect for a pool parlor, etc.

Another innovation is the "Too Late to Classify" column which will be found in the main news section every Sunday. In future The Constitution will close its regular classified forms for Sunday's paper at 10 P. M. Saturday night. Any "WANT ADS" received after that hour will appear in the "Too Late to Classify" column.

But the most interesting fact about The Constitution's "WANT AD" columns is that every advertisement appearing in these columns is paid for by the advertiser.

Therefore every advertisement means business.

The Constitution does not give away its advertising space, nor does it offer prizes to induce people to solicit "WANT ADS" for it.

The Constitution stands on the record it has made during the forty-five years of its life, and sells its space at a fair price to one and all alike.

The Constitution knows as well as the public that---

JINGO SQUELCHED BY DISAPPROVAL

Both Democratic and Republican Senators Silence Smith of Michigan When He Tries to Stir Mexican Question.

Washington August 9.—Another threatening outbreak in the senate today over the Mexican situation was squelched by emphatic disapproval from republicans and democrats who joined in declaring that the senate should not by discussion lend weight to any efforts to intensify feeling in Mexico.

After Senator Smith of Michigan had opened the subject by declaring that the constitutional junta here had the ear of the state department and was influential in bringing about the resignation of Ambassador Wilson, Senator Williams of Mississippi replied with the charge that there was an organized and systematic effort to bring about war with Mexico. He declared there was money behind it and not all Mexican money.

In my deliberate opinion, he said, there is now an organized and systematic effort to bring about war between the United States and Mexico. He said he organized with a lobby here and organized and syndicated through newspapers with money behind it. Not all of it Mexican money.

Senator Smith in an effort to silence Senator Williams, said he had read many of the metropolitan papers there is a sameness of statement as to the situation. He said that he had read many of the metropolitan papers there is a sameness of statement as to the situation.

democratic leaders to shut out discussion. Senator Swanson, however, sharply assailed Senator Smith for coming directly from a meeting of the foreign relations committee of which both were members, and making charges that never had been laid before the committee.

Senator Smith drew a distinction between the state department and the secretary of state. The state department is run by the secretary of state, suggested Senator Swanson.

Senator Smith's speech was based on a statement submitted to the senate several days ago by Senator Shepard showing the constitutional strength of the junta. Senator Smith explained he meant only to expose the influence in Washington in behalf of the constitutional junta.

Hopkins and Felix Summerfield charged who had charge of the Madero propaganda for the order for the last two years. He suggested now in Washington attempting to influence the action of the United States toward Mexico.

Do you claim he has been lobbying with members of congress? asked Senator Overman, who suggested calling the men before the lobby committee.

I claim he has attempted to influence the department of state and I claim that he had much to do with the removal of Ambassador Wilson, retorted Senator Smith.

Senator Swanson defended the right of the secretary of state to listen to representatives of revolutionists and asked Senator Smith why he had delayed for months in making a report on such wonderful information.

Smith explained that Hopkins testified before the committee last February. James H. Rogers testified before the committee last February.

Charges in Later, says Hopkins. Mr. Hopkins later issued this statement: The charges of Senator William Aldrich Smith are deliberately and maliciously false in every respect.

SPECIAL ENVOY LIND REACHES VERA CRUZ

Vera Cruz, Mex. August 9.—Ex-Governor John Lind of Minnesota, the personal representative of the president of the United States and counselor of the American embassy in Mexico City, landed on Mexican soil late this afternoon and went direct to a hotel in Vera Cruz.

Both the ex-governor and Mrs. Lind were tired this evening and he made no haste to rush into the stronghold of Provisional President Huerta although the delay in doing so will be but a day or two at the most.

The people of Vera Cruz gave no intimation of any desire to indulge in a demonstration of disapproval of Mr. Lind's coming. His landing was witnessed by only a small group of the more patient of persons who had watched from the piers the battleship, New Hampshire, on which he made the trip from Galveston since the vessel anchored shortly after noon.

Some slight apprehension was felt by foreigners here that a popular manifestation might be held tonight if being feared that the thousands of laborers with their pockets filled with their week's wages might prove good material for agitators but local authorities assured Mr. Canada that any attempt at disorder would be suppressed.

A message from the state department was handed at the hotel as soon as the New Hampshire anchored and with Dr. William Bayard Hale who also is in Mexico as a personal representative of President Wilson he went over it carefully.

Both agencies to be impressed with its contents but they were non-committal as to its character. Mr. Lind's call of courtesy on Rear Admiral Frank B. Rowley, aboard the battleship Louisiana resulted in no discussion of his mission the ex-governor maintaining the same reserve which he has shown in other official communications.

With the expectation that Mr. Lind would go ashore soon after the arrival of the New Hampshire a small crowd gathered at the pier but there was no sign of any hostility.

Acting upon instructions from the federal authorities at Mexico City the local officials had issued orders to prevent any demonstration but apart from a few scattered persons who passed the pier the public appeared almost apathetic.

There was not even a casual meeting between ex-governor Lind and the authorities of Vera Cruz. Captain James H. Oliver commanding the New Hampshire was not obliged to call on General Gustavo Maas commander of the federal garrison as his boat has been out of Mexico for only a few weeks and until he does call on General Maas the military commander will not visit the American warship.

Lind Not to Be Harassed. Unless instructions to the contrary are received from the capital Mr. Lind will proceed to Mexico City without hindrance. Dr. Hale will accompany the ex-governor to Mexico City.

Dr. Hale has been in Mexico two months as personal representative of President Wilson and has not admitted his Washington connection which may explain why the Mexican government has not interfered with his actions. He is on his way to Vera Cruz to make a tour of inspection.

La Union, local newspaper in its afternoon edition urged all citizens to abstain from any demonstration that might be held in honor of Lind's coming. It said that such demonstrations were not in the interest of the Mexican government and that the paper suggested that all such demonstrations be suppressed.

Mr. Lind will wait tomorrow in Vera Cruz for the arrival of further instructions tomorrow night from Washington. It is believed he will then proceed direct to Mexico City arriving Monday.

The disposition here is not to hurry Mr. Lind's journey on account of what the administration here would give to Mr. Lind the benefit of his experience in making plans for the next two days.

LIND IN NO DANGER. DECLARES DE LA BARRA

New York, August 9.—While admitting that Mexico is facing a grave crisis, Francisco de la Barra, Mexican ambassador to France, in a statement issued tonight declared it is folly to suggest that ex-Governor Lind, the personal representative of President Wilson to Mexico would be subjected to any personal danger.

The state department follows. I believe all political parties and factions in Mexico will agree unanimously against any idea of intervention by a foreign country in our internal affairs. I am optimistic of hope that very shortly our internal affairs will improve and that the relations between this country and Mexico will be bettered by careful consideration of the principles of justice and the obligations of international law.

I call on every native of Mexico in this solemn moment in which the national interest must dominate above the personal interest and above political divisions and I call on all Mexicans of good will to join in a patriotic effort to work for a peaceful solution. I trust the American people for a happy ending.

Senator de la Barra will sail for France the latter part of next week.

THOUGH MENACED, SULZER IS SILENT

Continued From Page One. The governor to purchase stock in Wall Street. He is to talk of this thing or even think of it said Senator Frawley today. No man can say truly that I am glad we have uncovered this testimony against Governor Sulzer. It is a blow to the entire state of New York. But Governor Sulzer is responsible for his own acts.

I notice he added that some of the papers are saying that unless there are impeachment proceedings it will be because of corrupt alliance between Tammany Hall and the governor. Frawley said he had no indication of what the governor's defense would be.

When Herod died his hog and gold went not with his soul. Today the heart of Georgia stirs— Not with the lust and greed which brought shameful fame to Herod of old— But with the pity— The tenderness—

RUPTURE IS AT HAND. THINK FRENCH EDITORS

Paris August 9.—All news dispatches from Washington published in France describe the relations between the United States and Mexico being probably close at hand. Comment on the Mexican situation is sparse. It recognizes the difficulties of the United States and suggests that the policy of President Wilson and Secretary of State Bryan are likely to disappear in the presence of realities.

Washington August 9.—Concert of action by the principal powers of the western hemisphere—the United States, Brazil, Argentina and Chile—on the Mexican situation was suggested in a public statement today by Representative Kuhn, of California. He pointed out that none of these

HICKORY HEAD CLUB SETS GOOD EXAMPLE

Brooks County Farmers Organize to Ascertain Exactly What They Are Accomplishing.

The farmers of Brooks county have set on foot in the organization of the Hickory Head Agricultural club, a movement in which the state department of agriculture is taken no small interest and hopes to be able to encourage among the farmers of other counties.

The Hickory Head club is composed of the owners or managers of thirty-two farms in Brooks county, who have organized themselves for the purpose of ascertaining exactly what they are accomplishing and to better that accomplishment each year. J. G. Stanley is president of the club. The following report from T. J. Wilson, a member of the club, has just been submitted to the agricultural department:

"Hon. J. D. Price, Commissioner of Agriculture, Atlanta, Ga.—Dear Mr. Price: Per your request will inclose to you reports from thirty-two farms of the Brooks county Hickory Head Agricultural club. There are a few more which I have been unable to get. However, here is the grand total, to wit:

"Cotton—Acres, 1,450; prospective yield, 773 bales.

"Corn—Acres, 2,615; prospective yield, 48,377-1/2 pounds.

"Oats—Acres, 2,078; prospective yield, 23,346 bushels.

"Sugar Cane—Acres, 691-4; prospective yield, 869 barrels of syrup.

"Potatoes—Acres, 741-8; prospective yield, 8,352 bushels.

"Pinders—Acres, 2,255; prospective yield good.

"The club owns 46 horses, 146 mules, 488 cattle, 239 turkeys, 3,835 chickens, 2,550 hogs, to root: the above 2,255 acres of pinders.

"This is the record for 1913. Please keep it on file so that we may tell whether or not we are advancing."

The department of agriculture believes that if it were possible to obtain this kind of information from all the counties in Georgia it would make it possible for all agencies which are for agricultural development to direct their efforts a great deal more intelligently and has asked the privilege of suggesting the use of the Hickory Head club report forms to other communities.

Dan Hughes, assistant commissioner of agriculture, says:

"I believe that this is, without doubt, the best thing I have seen along the line."

DODGE SERVICE FOR SOUTHERN POWER USERS

What You Want When You Want It.

Call "Dodge" on the Phone—Collect.

Quiet but consistent effort attained its final reward when the Dodge Manufacturing Company, Mishawaka, Indiana, successful manufacturers of powder transmission, completed the last link in their chain of National Distribution. Covering the entire Southern States with a factory branch and warehouse at Atlanta, they have instituted a service whereby every southern power user of importance can be reached by their organization in a matter of minutes.

This well-planned move to increase the delivery efficiency of the Dodge organization comes as a surprise to southern manufacturers and is appreciated by them to the greatest degree. They will no longer be compelled to impatiently await the manufacture and delivery of specially constructed machinery, inasmuch as the Dodge line constitutes standard equipment that meets every requirement for the mechanical transmission of power.

How This Feat Was Accomplished.

Long ago the Dodge Manufacturing Company saw the advantages to be gained by the standardization of power harness; and by the location of a station throughout the South, the harness might be placed within immediate reach of the consumer. Realizing from the conditions which surrounded their own experience as manufacturers, the enormous loss in time and money arising from disabled power units, they set out to secure to themselves that one important factor of manufacturing—distribution.

Years of consecutive endeavor and stubborn planning were consumed in the perfection of such a system. It was necessary to first establish a base of supplies in a centrally located city of each section of the United States. This was comparatively simple, inasmuch as such base or warehouse was owned and controlled by the home office. The gigantic task came in the establishment of subsidiary stations so carefully arranged as to bring any point in a given section within six hours of the branch warehouse.

The most difficult and consequently the most sought after portion of the country was the great southern mountain railroad facilities, together with the inaccessible locations of many

F. W. Heiskell New Advertising Manager For the International Harvester Company

It has been announced by the management of the International Harvester Company of America that F. W. Heiskell, for two years assistant advertising manager, will succeed M. R. D. Owing as advertising manager, and that A. C. Seyfarth, formerly head of the production department, will take the position left vacant by Mr. Heiskell's promotion.

Both of these promotions are along the regular civil service system of advancement laid down by the company in building up its organization. Mr. Heiskell began his work in the harvesting machine business twenty years ago while still a high school boy in Indianapolis, working in the repair room under James B. Heywood, who was guiding the McCormick design in Indianapolis at that time. After his graduation in 1905, he was given a permanent position.

He worked his way up from the repair department, until in 1905 he was sent to Fort Wayne to be assistant to J. W. Wiselart, who was the International general agent at that place. The following year he was sent to Akron, Ohio, to establish a transfer Eady was indicted at the April term of the superior court, 1917, and has eluded officers ever since. He was first reported as the victim of a mob in the western part of Ware shortly after Booth was killed, but this afterwards proved untrue. A former resident of Manor, at the request of W. Booth, he visited Blountstown this week, and positively identified the negro there as Eady, having employed the negro at one time near Manor.

WIRING SAVED CITY MONEY, SAYS TURNER

"Looks Like They Are Trying to Make Me the Goat," Adds Electrician.

When R. C. Turner, the city electrician, reached his office yesterday morning he found the bills for the underground wiring in Piedmont parking lot on his table. The bills amount to approximately $829.

Attached to the bills was an official communication from Dan Carey, general manager of the park department, notifying the city electrician that the park board repudiated the bills.

"It looks like they are trying to make me the goat," Turner facetiously remarked. "But I guess I can stand it. I've gotten used to being made the goat around this city hall."

Turner immediately sought a conference with Chairman Humphrey, of the finance committee, but could not locate him. He then declared that he would take the matter up with the electric light committee Wednesday afternoon and ask the committee to recommend that the finance committee appropriate $829 to pay the bills.

Electrician Turner says that the wiring of the bathhouse and refreshment stands in the parks is one of the biggest improvements made in the parks in years, and will save the city money.

There were no developments in the Carey park board controversy Saturday. Manager Carey still maintains that he has done nothing to warrant the censure of the board.

President J. O. Cochran takes the position that the park board stood liable, and that the resolution he offered was the only solution.

Judge Brand Being Praised for Attack on Legal Technicalities

Commerce, Ga., August 9.—(Special.) Judge Charles H. Brand, who is now presiding over Jackson Superior Court, has received many letters and messages from all parts of the state, commending him for his reference to legal technicalities in his charge to the grand jury Monday.

In referring to Judge Brand's charge, The Jackson Herald says: "It is recognized by all who heard Judge Brand's charge, that it was one of the ablest ever heard from the bench in Georgia. It was a clear exposition of the law, and full of sound advice. It was no mistake of Colonel Ray's in asking that the charge be put on record. This motion was one of the highest compliments ever paid a judicial officer. When the great mass of people arose as one man and voted for the motion, the eyes of the able, but tenderhearted and appreciative, Judge filled with tears."

Scores of technicalities.

The judge took the position in his judgment that the administration of the criminal laws was impaired to some extent by reason of two facts: (1) Liberty of the governors during the last ten years in granting pardons; (2) The rule and reign of technicalities.

Elaborating upon the first proposition the judge stated that he disclaimed any purpose to criticize the prison commission or any of the governors, but the fact remained that it was too easy a matter for a man with influence and property who might be convicted and sent to the penitentiary to secure a pardon.

Tended to Lawlessness.

The judge declared that he was not opposed to granting pardons in proper cases, but that it seemed that any one who was able to employ eminent counsel who stood close to the governor, could secure a pardon. He said that in securing his freedom, while many a poor, unfortunate convict who had neither friends nor money and who really deserved a pardon still remained in stripes and at hard labor in the penitentiary.

"That this liberality of pardoning convicts tended to lawlessness and disobedience to law, and tended to bring about a disrespect for the courts and the law, and encouraged criminals and increased crime. Though the governors may have had sufficient reasons for every instance in granting pardons and paroles, yet the general public, as a rule, especially the lawless element, didn't stop to inquire into details and reasons, but just looked at the case of a man being convicted for instance, and sent to the penitentiary for ten years and his being a free man in many instances within a year or two after he was put in the penitentiary, even though the superior court and the courts of last resort had determined that the sentence of the court should be executed.

The judge stated on the subject of technicalities that when proper results had been reached by the juries of the courts and substantial justice had been done and accomplished that case should not be sent back for new trial at the expense of some technicality which does not affect the real merits of the case. He insisted that cases should be tried according to law fairly and impartially and that every right of the defendants should be strictly guarded, and yet despite this from time to time throughout the state under the law as interpreted on account of some technicality the results of the trial courts are vacated and set aside and the case has to be gone over again, all at the expense of the taxpayers. He disclaimed the purpose of criticizing any person for his official conduct, stating that it was easy to criticize, but that the legislature should remedy these matters in the hands of trial courts and the reviewing courts so that justice might not be defeated on account of technicalities, which could be legally invoked.

Martinsburg, W. Va., August 9.—Fearing violence might be attempted, Sheriff Fabler tonight rushed Harry Stone, charged with attacking a 9-year-old girl in an automobile under guard of deputies to Hancock, where the prisoner was placed on a train and taken to the state penitentiary at Mountain View for safe keeping.

Stone was arrested Friday at Front Royal, Va., and brought here. While a group of curious persons have stationed themselves around the prison for the last two days, the Sheriff did not anticipate trouble until tonight, when it was rumored that something serious might happen.

DESTROY TRUSTS, PLEA OF KENYON

Iowa Senator Says That Is More Important Than Revising Tariff—He Attacks Aluminum Combine.

Washington, August 9.—"It is more important to control or destroy the trusts than to revise the tariff," declared Senator Kenyon in the senate today. "If our democratic friends, by adopting an amendment in accordance with their party platform, would assist in this, they would accomplish greater good than by merely reducing the tariff."

Mr. Kenyon was speaking on his amendment to free list at once articles manufactured by the aluminum trust and to automatically free list all products of concern held by the courts to be monopolies.

"If the government cannot control the trusts," he continued, "then we may as well concede the trusts are powerful enough to destroy this government."

Mr. Kenyon described the democratic bill as protective in spots and "in selected spots at that." He praised President Wilson for urging tariff legislation on congress and declared he didn't believe the president had attempted to influence legislation improperly.

Sherman Law as Criminal Statute. Senator Kenyon led the senate into a debate on the Sherman law as a criminal statute. He declared that if one man were sent to jail it would do more than anything else to make trusts observe the law.

Senator Nelson suggested the unwillingness of juries to convict under the act was more to blame than the action of judges.

Senator Kenyon replied it had been his experience that great business organizations reached out through all walks of life, and that it was exceedingly difficult to secure juries not subject to their influence. He suggested that education was the prime requisite to insure enforcement of the statute.

Senator Borah expressed the opinion that the jury was unwilling to convict men of criminal offense in the formation of an unlawful combination when in most instances these combinations had been formed with the connivance and consent of the government. The law, he said, should specify unlawful acts.

Olive and Aluminum. When Senator Kenyon was assailing the aluminum company, Senator Oliver attempted to ask a question. "Before I do," he said, "I would like to ask if the senator is interested in the aluminum company of America?"

Senator Oliver replied that the question smacked of some impertinence, and said he was not personally interested in the company.

"Didn't the senator represent the aluminum company before a house committee when it was seeking a water power site on the St. Lawrence river?" demanded Senator Kenyon.

Senator Oliver replied he had that he had endeavored to accommodate the company, but that he was "in no way interested in the aluminum business."

RESERVE SECTIONS OPPOSED BY BANKERS

Amendments Are Asked to Certain Features of Currency Measure.

Washington, August 9.—Amendments to the reserve sections of the administration currency bill, which many bankers say are vital to the continuance of present credit conditions under the proposed new currency system, have been tentatively endorsed by Chairman Owen, of the senate banking committee, and may be incorporated in the bill before it passes either house.

Bankers who conferred yesterday with Secretary McAdoo about government deposits in western banks took opportunity to impress upon the secretary and Chairman Owen the demand of the banking interests for a modification of the reserve restrictions of the bill.

Senator Owen said today he was inclined to favor amendments suggested by the bankers, reducing somewhat the reserve which banks would be required to keep.

Some bankers at a conference declared $500,000,000 in loans would have to be called by big banks if reserve deposits of outside banks they now hold were withdrawn.

The proposal of the bankers is to reduce from 15 per cent to 12 per cent the reserves required of country banks and reduce from 20 per cent to 18 per cent the reserves required of banks in reserve cities.

In suggesting the reductions of reserves the bankers asked that the country banks be permitted to keep 1 per cent of their reserves with correspondent banks and that reserve city banks be authorized to place 6 per cent of their reserves with correspondents.

Senator Owen declared today that a second proposal by the bankers, to give the proposed advisory board sole power and reduce in the new federal system would not be considered. He insisted it would take control of the system out of the hands of the government and virtually turn it over to the control of banking interests.

The bill has been completed by the house committee and will be laid before the caucus of house democrats Monday. The changes suggested at the bankers' meeting yesterday probably will be considered by the caucus.

COTTON EXPERTS STUDY COST OF PRODUCTION

Charleston, S. C., August 9.—Charles J. Brand, chief of the office of markets, United States department of agriculture, and Dr. O. F. Cook and W. R. Meadows, cotton experts, had a conference with Charleston sea island planters here this afternoon regarding the cost of production, marketing difficulties and other phases of this industry.

Messrs. Brand and Cook were to Washington early next week. Mr. Meadows leaves for Savannah on Tuesday or Wednesday to continue his investigations. If improvement of marketing conditions are not had here, the sea island crop will be eliminated.

Mr. Meadows was asked by Senator Borah, "Before Senator Shively could reply, Senator Cummings asked an amendment to the tariff bill proposed by Senator Cummings, putting a duty of six cents a pound on crude aluminum, and nine cents a pound on the manufactured product. The rate in the bill before the senate is two and three half cents per pound."

"I suggest that the Iowa senators ought to get together and have a conference on this matter?" remarked Senator Shively.

Legislative Secrets Are Safe With Mrs. Louise Bigby Marsh

MRS. LOUISE BIGBY MARSH, Stenographer at the state capitol, and confidante of all legislators.

To the ordinary person who lives at home day in and day out, and whose only connection with politics is on election day, the honorable solons who occupy the statehouse of Georgia are creatures to be looked up to. There is one person, however, and that person is a woman, who is neither a legislator, nor one who places them on high pedestals, although she admits she likes them mightily well.

This person is none other than Mrs. Louise Bigby Marsh, the queen of the legislators and their confidante in personal matters. Mrs. Marsh has been the confidante of the representatives and senators for five years and tokens of their appreciation have been given to her at the end of each general assembly in the shape of a gold purse and a pearl-studded heart pin.

In the course of these five years Mrs. Marsh has become acquainted with practically every politician in Georgia and those who do not class themselves as friends of hers are about as scarce as southern republicans who have never asked for a government job.

The sanctum sanctorum of this lady is one of the ante-rooms to the state senate and it is freely wagered that there is nobody in Georgia, men included, who can reel off page after page of typewritten bills, free from mistakes, and carry on as charming a conversation surrounded by a bevy of legislators as Mrs. Louise Bigby Marsh.

And just to show that Mrs. Marsh has not become entirely estranged from the proprietariat herself from talking with such distinguished gentlemen, she is often seen conversing with just common, ordinary, everyday reporters.

GREAT RADIO STATION FOR THE CANAL ZONE

Washington, August 9.—One of the greatest radio stations in the world, even eclipsing in size the new station at Arlington, Va., is to be constructed by the United States at Colon, in the canal zone. It will be known as the Darien radio station, and whereas one of the Arlington towers reaches the height of 600 feet, all three of the towers at Darien will be that height.

The Darien plant, it is expected, will be able to communicate with San Francisco as well as with Arlington, and to reach into the southern seas as far as Valdivia, Chile, 12 miles from Valparaiso, on the west coast of South America, and as far as Buenos Ayres, Argentina, on the east side. Throwing its waves across the Atlantic, the new station should communicate with the island of St. Vincent, 500 miles west of Africa.

The Darien station, will be used by the government principally as a relay station for communicating with naval vessels in southern waters. The present wireless stations at Colon and Balboa will continue to handle messages for ships using the canal. The new station will be exclusively for government business.

PLANNING TO FIGHT UNNAMABLE DISEASE

London, August 9.—Resolutions calling on all governments to institute a system of compulsory notification to sanitary authorities of the contagious disease which Dr. Paul Ehrlich has made his specialty, were adopted at a sectional meeting of the International Medical Congress, in session here today.

Dr. Woods Hutchinson, of New York, giving an account of the manner in which the disease is fought in America, advocated compulsory notification.

Sir Malcolm Morris, president of the Dermatological section of the Royal College of Medicine, attacked the British government for its inactivity. He said that while it insisted on notification for all kinds of diseases, it did not "hit a finger against a disease more ruthless than the destroying angel who slew the first born."

Army doctors said the percentage of the disease was much higher among the English troops than among those abroad, where notification was required.

KNIGHTS OF THE TEMPLE IN TRIENNIAL CONCLAVE

Denver, Colo., August 9.—With many varicolored lights illuminating the borders of plumed knights and thousands of Denver spectators, the thirty-second triennial conclave of Knights Templar was informally opened here tonight shortly after the arrival of Grand Master Most Excellent Sir William B. Mellan and other grand officers of the templars.

Just after dusk tonight Sir Knight William J. Barker touched the button which flashed into brilliance every corner illumination in the city, and though the formal opening of the conclave is not until next Tuesday, the illuminations will be continued each night until the conclusion of the triennial. Early arrivals from New York city and Los Angeles and Atlantic City, but it is known that they would like to be the captors of the 1916 conclave.

BRITAIN POKES FUN AT THE UNITED STATES

Alleged That American Generosity to China Was More Theatric Than Real.

London, August 9.—The British foreign office today poked a little fun at America's generosity with China in the Boxer indemnity matter. According to the government's view John Bull was just as generous as Uncle Sam, but not quite so theatrical or spectacular in his method.

The foreign office note is a reply to a recent anti-opium trade deputation, the spokesman of which called attention to "the fine position won for the United States by the action of its government in regard to the Boxer indemnity," and said he thought Great Britain ought to have taken similar action.

The reply of Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign minister, indicates some warmth as he explains that there has been a "great misunderstanding" on the subject of the Boxer indemnity. He says: "The British government was not wise in its generation. It did draw up large claims against China, but reduced them before presenting them. The United States, on the other hand, presented very large claims, waited till a good deal of them had been paid by China and then waived the rest. This, of course, gave the United States a good dramatic position."

"It reminds me of the landlord who did not reduce his rents when the surrounding landlords reduced theirs and then acquired a reputation for generosity by giving rebates on his rents while the other landlords gave none. I think the real position of the two countries as to the Boxer indemnity should be better known."

ORDER OF EAGLES CLOSES CONVENTION

Baltimore, August 9.—The fifteenth annual convention of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, which opened here last Monday ended today. A feature of the closing ceremonies was the presentation of a silver service valued at $1,000 to the retiring grand worthy, William J. Brennan, of Pittsburg, by friends in the granderie.

The judge's report on prize winners in the parade on Thursday was submitted. The list included: Thos. Aerie making the best general appearance; first prize, $200, Pittsburg, series No. 76.

Aerie located within 150 miles of Baltimore having the largest number of men in parade; first prize, $150, Wilmington, Del.

Aerie located farther than 150 miles from Baltimore having the largest number of members in parade; first prize, $300, Scranton, Pa.

END OF LOBBY PROBE IS NOT YET IN SIGHT

Washington, August 9.—The end of the senate lobby committee's investigation is not in sight, according to Senator Reed, a member of the committee, who today had the senate provide for the expenses of the committee.

Senator Gallinger inquired when the committee would finish its work. "I cannot tell," replied Senator Reed. Senator Williams urged that the committee should inquire into the reputed existence of an organized and syndicate movement to plunge the United States into war with Mexico. This suggestion was opposed by Senator Gallinger. No action on the request was taken.

SUCCESSFUL TEST MADE OF AUTOMATIC SWITCH

With one of the largest locomotives in its service the Atlanta and West Point railway yesterday afternoon tried out thoroughly, and completely the Shepherd automatic switch on the longest sidetrack in the state at Oakland City with a half hundred of the most prominent railroad men of the south looking on while twice that number observed the test from vantage points along the line.

Pulling a large freight car, the engine came along the track to the switch and when the pilot was 30 feet away the switch flew open to make way upon the side line and remained open until the rear wheels of the last truck of the freight car had followed it, when it closed with the same exactness it had shown in opening. The opening and closing of the switch was as though the work had been timed by a watch and convinced even the novice in railroad work that Captain Shepherd had solved satisfactorily one of the greatest problems in railroad life—elimination of danger to the train-hand and the saving of time to the railroads using the Shepherd automatic switch.

After the demonstration Captain J. L. Holloway, of Montgomery, general counsel for the Shepherd Automatic Switch company, called M. L. Shepherd, inventor of the switch, bearing his name to the front and in the presence of the large assembly presented him on behalf of the stockholders with a large silver loving cup, the inscription indicating the gift to be "a token of esteem and in recognition of distinguished services rendered."

STUDEBAKERS START ANOTHER INNOVATION

Set Apart One Entire Manufactory to Make Parts for Studebaker Cars.

By placing at the disposal of its service department, an entire plant completely outfitted with expensive machinery and able to turn out on short notice parts for every model of its cars now in the hands of the public, the Studebaker Corporation has taken an advanced step toward the ideal relationship between a manufacturer and the owners of his cars.

There are now considerably more than 100,000 Studebaker cars in the hands of owners, asserts General Manager Clarence H. Booth. "So far as we know, all these cars are in daily service, despite the fact that many of the earliest models have been driven upwards of 75,000 miles.

Factory to Make Parts.

"No mechanical device will endure constant service without at least occasional replacements. These must, if satisfactory, be supplied by the parent factory. Up-to-date we have furnished Studebaker parts from this source, though the process confused to some extent our production. By setting apart one factory for this purpose, our service arrangements will be practically ideal. The new manufacturing system uninterrupted.

The plant purchased by the Studebaker is at Pontiac and was formerly known as the Vulcan Gear Works. Later in an enlarged form it was used as the main building of an automobile company which recently went into the hands of a receiver. Connection with the main plants of the Studebaker system will be by rail and automobile trucks.

Get Immediate Repairs.

Aside from insuring a permanent supply of parts for all Studebaker models, an advantage of the plant will be its ability to turn out, for each Studebaker dealer a stock of parts fitted to the needs of his territory, thus permitting him to install immediate repairs on any Studebaker car in equipping the plant the Studebakers are able to make use of much machinery used in the production of former models which have been built complete in the Corporation's factories.

The service plant will be known as No. 15 of the Studebaker system. W. W. Austin is in charge as superintendent.

ISIDOR STRAUS LEFT ESTATE OF $4,565,106

New York, August 9.—Isidor Straus, the merchant and philanthropist, who lost his life when the Titanic sank in April, 1912, left an estate valued at $4,565,106. His wife, Mrs. Ida Straus, when she could have been saved before the Titanic went down, left an estate of $325,578. The appraisal of the two estates was completed today.

The partial estimate of the estate of Benjamin Guggenheim, another Titanic victim which was filed today, shows that it will total several millions, although the exact amount will not be known for six months. The incomplete schedule shows holdings of $748,000. The bequests total $449,900.

The six children of Mr. and Mrs. Straus are the sole heirs of their combined estates. In his will Mr. Straus made mention of charitable bequests but left a letter to his children urging them to continue his philanthropies. The six children already have contributed $185,000 to benevolences in which their father was interested.

SOUTHERN AUTO DEALERS VIEWING THE NEW MAXWELL MODEL "25" AT COMPANY'S SHOWROOM IN ATLANTA

A very interesting meeting of all the Maxwell dealers in the south was held in Atlanta during the first part of the past week. C. F. Redden, general sales manager of the Maxwell Motor company, addressed the meeting at a luncheon at the Ansley hotel, given in honor of Mr. Redden's visit.

200 MILES AN HOUR FOR MOTOR CAR OF FUTURE

Henry Ford, of Detroit, Sees No Reason Why Great Speed Can't Be Reached.

Detroit, Mich., August 9.—"What do you think the evolution of the motor car ultimately will produce?"

Henry Ford turned and smiled slightly. "Tell me what you mean," he replied. The clumsy, two-wheeled cart of the world's youth evolved into the luxurious landau, the Montgolfier balloon lifted by hot air developed into the Currier biplane. In what way will the motor car of the future differ from the first Ford motor car?"

Mr. Ford passed a hand over his iron-gray hair and his eyes took on a contemplative look. The man who recreated Sindbad's diamond valley out of his mechanic's brain was thinking of the painful early path it suggested that single flights of 200 or 300 years do not belong to the inventor but to some days and wakeful nights with infinitesimal progress.

"Lightness is what we are striving for more than any other thing," he said. "It will not be long before the present 1,800 pound motor car will be reduced in weight to 500 pounds. This will mean greater speed and somewhat lower price. But the price cannot be greatly decreased because lighter material demands greater strength and craftsmanship.

"Although I am not a speed enthusiast, my aim being to increase comfort, I see no reason why motor cars should not eventually attain 150 or 200 miles an hour. But there would be no room for pedestrians on streets used by such machines. They would require special highways. In fact, rails would probably be the proper thing, just as we have rails now for our railroad trains."

"Would gasoline as used furnish sufficient power for these light speedy machines?"

"Oh, yes, though it might be necessary to mingle other liquids."

"Wouldn't friction set on fire a motor car going at 200 miles an hour unless some new lubricant were employed?"

"By no means, we have dynamos that run for a whole year with one application of lubricating oil."

And this was as far as Henry Ford would go in snatching motor secrets from the future.

Ex-Minister Finch Dead.

La Crosse, Wis., August 9.—William H. Finch, United States minister to Paraguay and Uruguay from 1897 to 1905 and for many years publisher of The La Crosse Republican and Leader, was found dead in a bathroom of his residence here this afternoon. Death is thought to have been due to apoplexy. Mr. Finch was 68 years old.

FIVE MEN ARE KILLED WHEN BOILER EXPLODES

Clarksville, Texas, August 9.—Five men were instantly killed and two more so badly injured that it is believed they will die, when a boiler at the Majors sawmill, 10 miles south-east of Clarksville, exploded today.

The dead: C. J. Majors, George Majors, Will Gulger, Joe Daniels and Pinkey Hawkins.

The injured: Ernest Peacock and Tony Coats. C. J. Majors and his son, George Majors, moved to this county from Pennsylvania two years and purchased large tracts of timber and prairie land.

TAINTED ICE CREAM CAUSES TWO DEATHS

Mosierstown, Pa., August 9.—Tainted ice cream, according to state health authorities, is responsible for the deaths of two persons and the serious illness of thirty others of this city. Of the latter, four are believed to be dying. The disease seems to be a complication of typhoid fever and ptomaine poisoning. The dead are Paul Bacon, aged 18, of Mosierstown, and Clyde Barnes, aged 18, of Hickman's Corners. The critically ill are Miss Jessie Williams, Frederick Van Scot and two children, all of this place.

The ice cream was eaten at a party several weeks ago.

MADE GOOD RECORDS IN INDIANA-PACIFIC TOUR

Premier Led Way on Long Trip, and G. & J. Truck Attracts Considerable Attention.

Los Angeles, August 9.—The Indiana-Pacific tour, consisting entirely of Indiana manufacturers touring to the Pacific coast on a booster and good road trip was completed at Los Angeles August 3.

This tour was a splendid example of the co-operation of competing manufacturers in an endeavor to make an unqualified success of the greatest booster trip ever undertaken. Great credit is reflected upon the product of Indiana by the fact that every car which started on the tour completed the journey to the coast.

Premier Leads the Way.

In view of the great experience Premier cars and Ray McNamara have had in tours and in going across the continent several times, it was a natural thing that McNamara and his Premier should have been chosen as the pilot to lead the way from Indianapolis to Los Angeles. The driver and his car bore out their past reputation by leading all the way into all controls, including both noon and night. The distance registered by the Premier pilot car was 3,740 miles.

A. L. Westgard, chairman of the national highway commission, and known as the "Good Road Finder of America," whose car was selected to carry the various governors through the several states through which they passed across their state, drove his Premier with the tour to Los Angeles. From Los Angeles, Mr. Westgard drove north to Portland to complete his 17,000 miles of road-laying before bad weather set in.

G. & J. Truck Attracts Attention.

The car which came in for more than its share of consideration in every control was the G. & J. truck put in the tour by the United States Fire company to carry a load of assorted sizes of spare tires to take care of the requirements on route. This truck was driven by Walter Weidley, the youngest driver on the tour, being yet in his teens. Walter Weidley is the son of George Weidley, designer of Premier cars. This was a 1911 rebuilt Premier pleasure car which had seen two years' service, but it again proved the sturdiness of Premier and went through this trip with great credit to its performance.

McNamara's cars had the original Indiana-made air in two tires was equipped with three of the original tires at the finish and suffered only three punctures. The G. & J. truck finished with 12000 air in two tires. The other cars in the tour made records which not only reflect credit upon the highly developed motor car of the product of Indiana.

Home for Argentine Legation.

Buenos Ayres, August 9.—An appropriation of $310,000 requested by the Argentine government for the purchase of a building at Washington for the Argentine legation to the United States, was approved today by the senate committee.

SEVEN PERSONS DROWN WHEN MOTORBOAT SINKS

Six of the Victims Women. Party Bound for a Dance.

East Freetown, Mass., August 9.—Six women and a man were drowned and three other persons were saved when a motor boat sank in Long Pond tonight.

The dead are George Wright and Miss Haven, of Brockton, Miss Hattie Hamilton, Laurton, Miss Annie Swanney, Miss Sadie McCabe, Miss Mabel Brown and Mrs. Emma Doyle, all of New Bedford.

Mrs. Henry W. Raymond and Luther M. Dayton of New Bedford, and R. James Stevens, Laurton, were rescued by Frederick Macey, who has a cottage at the pond and who, responding to cries for help, was able to pick up four persons in his motorboat. One of the four Miss McCabe, failed to revive. The party was bound for a dance at Lakeside park. Soon after leaving shore the boat sprang a leak. Some reports said that the bottom dropped out. Darkness added to the difficulties of rescue work. Mr. Macey's boat was the first to reach the scene. When other boats arrived no other bodies could be found.

Up to midnight none of the six bodies had been recovered.

Goodrich Tires—Best in the Long Run

All 1914 Demands of Automobile Dealers and Buyers are Fulfilled in the

The Complete Line of Four Cylinder and Six Cylinder Cars - Electric Cranking, Lighting and Ignition - Left Hand Drive and Center Control.

READ those display lines again. They contain the biggest news, the most important message that will appear in all the announcements on 1914 cars. America's leading dealers—the men who sold 30,000 Buicks last year, and have sold 150,000 in all—find that we have overleaped even their highest expectations.

Those who know the Buick have already decided on it as their 1914 car, regardless of equipment, because of what the car is fundamentally, because of the Buick Overhead Valve Motor with its greater power, speed and economy. Buick dependableness and serviceableness—with all the proved improvements—everything which is latest and best in automobile construction.

Dealers in territory not already occupied will see in this announcement an opportunity, for they know the business-building power of Buick satisfaction—Buick reputation. They know that where one Buick is sold many will follow. They know what a large, permanent, ever-growing asset a Buick contract represents.

Topping Off A Nine-Year Record of "Making Good"

The 1914 Buick presents every approved feature that has demonstrated itself worthy of that record. The Improved Delco System of Electric Starting, Lighting and Ignition was adopted for the Buick only after exhaustive experiment, which proved that it had Buick dependableness and durability.

INVITATION TO DEALERS

A live dealer in a good territory should make money; if he doesn't, it's because he is frittering away his time with a line that is a handicap. If your territory is open, why waste your time when with the Buick you can not only make money for yourself, but build up a satisfactory permanent business. A solid, permanent business must have its foundation in satisfied customers who are ready to back up your statements. That is why Buick dealers prosper, for it has been demonstrated that a good car for the dealer must be a good car for the user.

The sale of 30,000 Buicks this year is only a promise of what our 1914 output will be. We can now supply more dealers because of our increased capacity.

RIGHT NOW is the time to take it up if you want to join the big car-making and selling organization of America. Buick dealers don't change. The reason will interest you if you are a live dealer in open territory.

SPOONER'S WEEKLY AUTO NOTES GATHERED FROM VARIOUS SOURCES

By Ed Spooner, Detroit.
Harry Fosdick, former director of sales for the Hupp Motor Car company, and located in Detroit, has moved to Boston, where he has become New England distributor for the Hupp company, replacing H. J. Koehler, who has given up the Hupp in both Boston and New York, and also in Newark, to become western distributor of the Grant car to be made in Detroit.

Owosso is all torn apart by the removal of the truck factory of the General Motor company from that city, and two citizens want to bring suit for the recovery of the property contributed when the plant was located in that city, action desired by the Owosso Improvement association, which has learned of the intention of the General Motor company to locate another department of its work in the plant.

Indiana-Pacific tourists, in their reports of the trip through the mountainous country of the west, when an altitude of nearly 12,000 feet was reached, spoke of the fact that the motor meters showed a temperature of but 185, but George H. Townsend, president of the Motorist company, of New York, now in Detroit, says that the tourists forgot that water boils at 755 degrees at 12,000 feet.

Marlo Andreotti, representing Andreotti & Co. of Rome, Italy, spent two weeks at the factory of the Michigan Motor Car company at Kalamazoo and contracted with that company for the distribution of Michigan cars in Italy. Sixty automobiles accompanied Marlo Andreotti and the pair arranged with the Grant Motor company, Detroit, to handle the Grant car in their native land.

Dealers of the Chalmers Motor company, who have visited the plants this week to inspect the 1914 models, include Carl Page, New York; George Stowe, New York; John Van Benschoten, Poughkeepsie; C. C. Sawyer, Asheville; C. E. Jones, Birmingham; Van B. Weston, Amherst; N. Y. M. Jamison, Lafayette, Ind.; and Messrs. Earl Des Moines, Iowa; Paul Ottumwa, Iowa; and Trueblood, Bel Plaines, Iowa.

Through the visit of a gentleman from the Georges, in New Jersey, to Detroit, it has been learned that the Edison company is building a new factory which will just about double the plant and that the six-story building, half a city block in length and very wide, is to be used to manufacture Ford batteries to the number of about 300,000, for which orders have been booked. The easterner says that the money to put up the building came from the Ford Motor company, and that the construction of so large a factory indicates the use in the near future of an electric starter for Ford cars.

When the Cole Motor Car company did not enter for the Indianapolis-Pacific tour, some surprises were expressed, for the Cole company was a warm supporter of the event, and officials of the company took a prominent part in the starting events. The company claimed at that time that it did not have a 1914 model ready, and such proved to be the case for, on July 13, just twelve days after the start of the tour, a Cole 1914 started with a party of Cole engineers to trail the tour, and if possible close with it by the time San Francisco was reached. This the party succeeded in doing, traveling only by daylight, and averaging 22 miles per hour. The transcontinental route from Chicago, across Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska and Wyoming was followed. The trail of the Hoosier tourists was picked up and followed. Chief Engineer Charles S. Crawford being in charge of the car. The party stopped a half day in Chicago, remained a full day in the Colorado mountains, testing the car on hills, and were marooned six hours in the Colorado desert by sandstorms.

Entries for the around-lake Michigan tour of the Chicago Motor club have been numerous, entry blanks just having been issued, and information received from Chicago seems to indicate that the entry for this event will be larger than that of any other event of the year.

Startling information to his many friends reached Detroit last Wednesday night through a telegram to Lieutenant Ross S. Culp, which told of the death of Roger Starn, president of the Motor Public Service association, of Los Angeles, and dealer in Federal trucks, Buick cars and Staver cars in Los Angeles. Mr. Starn was in Detroit less than ten days ago for a considerable stay and the accident must have happened but a few days after his return, occurring south of Los Angeles between that city and San Diego. Starn had done some racing, but had retired from participation in events, so it is believed that it must have been on some trip for pleasure that the accident happened.

W. E. Stainke, general manager of the Quality Car company, Chicago, has written Assistant Secretary Beard, of the Wolcotts Automobile club, thanking him for his early efforts and an important deal in the Detroit retail world has been closed and Hushie Quinn and J. Macmillan West, more known as the Westmacott company, take over the agency for Paige-Detroit motor cars in Detroit and replace the J. H. Marshall Automobile company through the purchase. Mr. Westmacott was formerly with the Lozier Motor company and Mr. Quinn has been active in the Detroit retail world for four years and manager of the Detroit branch of the Abbott Motor company for the last two years.

Three Staver, one Paige-Detroit, one Mitchell, one Abbott, three Stutz and a Midland car are entries for the around-lake Michigan tour in September to be promoted by the Chicago Motor club and Chicago reports state that the trip will be another attempt. Charles P. Root, chairman of the contest board which has the event in charge, is working out the details carefully and preparing to take care of a record-breaking entry list.

ABOUT TO KILL WIFE, CRAZED MAN IS SHOT

After Being Wounded Sandford Flees and Cuts His Throat.

Green Castle, Ind., August 9.—Otis Sandford, crazed by drink, went to the neighborhood of Bainbridge, near here, this morning, and received injuries which will cause his death. Sandford went to the home of his wife, who had filed suit for divorce, and aroused her and the three children. Their screams attracted the woman's father, Aaron Hand, and her brother, Ray Hand, who lived in an adjoining house.

The two men took shotguns, but Sandford had disappeared. They sent Hand home and sat down to await Sandford's return. In a few minutes flames began issuing from Mr. Hand's barn, Sandford's corn crib and other outbuildings. While the two men were lighting the fire they were recalled to the house by Mrs. Hand and her daughter, screaming that Sandford was in the house trying to set it on fire and kill his wife.

Ray Hand grabbed his shotgun again. He alleged he saw Sandford with a knife in his hand, standing over his wife and fired. The load of shot struck the would-be murderer in the shoulder and he staggered into the yard and fell. A younger sister of Mrs. Hand, hearing another attack, pounced upon him with a club.

Sandford aroused himself and reeled off into the corn field, where he was found several hours later by neighbors, attracted by the flames, and shot. Sandford had cut his throat. He was brought to this city and physicians say he will die.

Much to the surprise of even the tourists who accompanied him Ray Harroun traveled straight along in the transcontinental tour of the Indiana makers and his car, one of the trouble makers, although using kerosene exclusively. The tourists found no complaint to make in following it, as no odor was emitted and the smoke nuisance, which was predicted, failed to materialize. Harroun was himself skeptical about high altitude driving and was ready to change to gasoline, but did not have to do so. In the country districts the car was the center of attraction at every time it stopped and Harroun was kept busy giving explanations in reply to questions.

SPENDS WEEK IN CITY

C. H. Sorrick, manager of the carriage tire department of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company, Akron, Ohio, is in Atlanta today.

In company with Velle West, Atlanta Firestone manager, he will visit all the large carriage manufacturers in this section of the country.

Mr. Sorrick is probably the best-known carriage tire man in the country today. Through his efforts the carriage industry has received many important improvements including the slide-wise tire—the present standard design of channels—the present and only successful method of curing tires in continuous lengths, enabling makers to save the waste of scrap ends—and the present method of brazing tires, which means that the dealer owns and operates a tire applying outfit and reap the profits himself.

Mr. Sorrick will spend a week or more in this section.

The other occupants of the automobile were slightly injured.

After Courtship of 12 Years Marries Girl Who Nursed Him

The marriage of Mr. E. C. Harris and Miss Pearl Goudloche one of the head nurses at Wesley Memorial hospital, at the residence of Rev. S. R. Belk in West End Friday night, was the culmination of a romance of twelve years.

It was that long ago that the groom met the bride; opposition on the part of the parents, it is said, resulted in Miss Goudloche becoming a nurse. Then fate played his part and caused Mr. Harris to become ill at two different occasions, it is said. Each time Miss Goudloche was his hospital nurse.

The happy couple have gone to Gainesville, Ga., for a few days, and from there they will go to Los Angeles to make their future home.

Strike Is Postponed.
Detroit, Mich., August 9.—Late tonight members of the Detroit Street Carriers' union decided to postpone until next Saturday night action on a resolution to strike. This was done after union leaders announced it was quite possible that a neutral arbitrator could be agreed upon to assist next week in settling the long-standing difficulties between the street railway and its motormen and conductors.

The Goodyear Secret

The No-Rim-Cut tire is a Goodyear invention, and we still control it.

An essential feature is these braided wires, which no one else can make.

This tire can't rim-cut—that we guarantee. This fact has saved motorists many millions of dollars.

It has also made Goodyears the world's favorite tires. They now out-sell any other.

Ruins Almost 1 in 3

Time and again we have gathered statistics to show what rim-cuts cost. This year we employed certified public accountants, so the figures could not be disputed.

They examined thousands of ruined clincher tires, taking them as they came. The old-type, hooked-base tires. And they found that 31.3 per cent had been discarded for rim-cutting only.

That's almost one tire in three.

That conveys some idea of the saving accomplished by this Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tire.

How We Did It

We did this by making a hookless tire—one that does not hook to the rim.

Thus your removable rim flanges can be set to curve outward—not inward as with clincher tires.

Then the tire, when wholly or partly deflated, rests on a rounded edge. There is no curved-in rim flange to dig into the tire. Thus rim-cutting is made impossible.

These tires fit any standard rim.

TWO NEW VELLE CARS START ON LONG TRIPS

Routes Laid Out for Each Car Is the Same—3,000 Miles.

Two Velle cars, 1914 models, one a new "5" the other a new "45," were sent out from the factory, Moline, Ill., July 31, on long trips, the "5" going east, the "45" west, the plan being to hold the builders opportunity to judge of performance of the new models under most trying conditions. The route laid out for each car is 3,000 miles—and the average daily mileage set for each car is 200, meaning that fifteen days from July 31—the sight of August 14—both should check in at the Velle plant. Sundays will not be holidays.

The new "5" is driven by Edward Wilson, experimental engineer, and his route is from here to Chicago, Toledo, Buffalo, Boston, Providence, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Richmond, Roanoke, Va., across the Blue Ridge mountains into West Virginia, again across the mountains into Cumberland, Md., to Pittsburgh, Cleveland and home.

The car making the western-trip will be piloted by Harry Oldfest, also of the experimental department, and the route is from Moline to St. Louis, Oklahoma City, Guthrie, Topeka, Kansas City, Omaha, Fargo, N. D., Duluth, Minneapolis, Green Bay, Chicago and home.

G. H. Bryant, advertising manager, is making the trip by train from Moline to Buffalo, joining Wilson there and accompanying him on the eastern trip as far as New York. There he will take a train going to Omaha and joining Oldfest, then proceeding in the "45" as far as Duluth.

C. E. Rose, Velle designer and chief engineer, will go from Moline by train to Philadelphia, joining Wilson and accompanying him as far as Pittsburgh. There he will take the train to Duluth, transferring attention to the car that most demands there is in motor car construction.

If there are any defects in the new models they are pretty sure to manifest themselves on two such trying schedules as have been laid out, and with experts studying every part of each car and noting carefully the performance of each Velle purchaser of 1914 will have every assurance of most dependable there is in motor car construction.

CRACK POLO PLAYERS ARE BADLY INJURED

New York, August 9.—According to cable advices received here tonight from London, Walter Buckmaster and Captain E. O. Miller, the polo players, were seriously injured today in a motor accident near Escher, Eng. Captain Miller was in charge of the ponies used in the last international cup series played at Meadow Brook last June. An injury to Mr. Buckmaster, who was selected to captain the English team, prior to the cup matches, kept him out of the game at that time.

At a late hour tonight, the message stated, both Captain Miller and Mr. Buckmaster were unconscious.

The Goodyear Secret

Hundreds of thousands of men have adopted them. And this tire has become, after eight years of tests, the leading tire of the world

How We Combat Two Other Ruinations

Next to rim-cutting, the costliest items in tire upkeep are due to blow-outs and tread separation.

To minimize blow-outs we use the "On-Air Cure." The tires are final-vulcanized on elastic air bags instead of an iron core.

This prevents the fabric from buckling and wrinkling. It equalizes strains. Thus we avoid the cause of countless blow-outs.

This "On-Air Cure," used by us alone, adds to our cost $1,500 daily.

Tread separation, when it occurs, comes near the breaker strip. This is the fabric strip which comes between the tread and carcass in a well-made tire.

For this strip we use a patent "rivet fabric." This permits us to run, from the tread to the carcass, hundreds of large rivets of rubber. Then the tire is vulcanized en masse.

We have exclusive use of this patent. No other tire can thus prevent the ruin of loose treads.

No-Rim-Cut tires, with these costly features, used to cost one-fifth more than clinchers. Now they cost no extra price. This is due to our multiplied output.

Our dealers are everywhere.

The Mothers of Georgia Can Demand Their Rights as Mothers

By Mrs. Walter B. Hill, Athens, Ga.

(Mrs. Walter B. Hill, who is compiling a book relative to the laws of Georgia as they refer to women and children, was asked by The Constitution to contribute the article which follows, and which is stirring in the facts it presents, accurate and inspiring. She is one of the most intellectual and cultured women in the state, and her book, now in the making, will be a valuable addition to the literature which should be sought by every thinking, responsible woman in the state. Mrs. Hill is the widow of the late Walter B. Hill, and it was while he lived and was so magnificently serving his state as chancellor of the University of Georgia that Mrs. Hill began the plan of the book she is to publish.—Isma Dooly.)

The Law's Injustice.
A prominent attorney tells me that a few years ago he was counsel in a case where the law gave the custody of the little children to the father. "I was very sorry for the mother. She is a fine woman, well educated and capable. Before her marriage she was a successful stenographer. Indeed, I think she was earning nearly as much as her husband, who insisted on her giving up her work at the time of the marriage. When they were separated, there were two lovely children, both under five years of age. In my humble opinion, the mother should have had the children, and should have been allowed to bring them up in her home. But as I was engaged as counsel for the father, I had to suppress my sympathy, and do the best I could for him—he had the law on his side, anyhow."

A Mother's Wrath.
"When my brother and I told mother about this case, we had a most unexpected outbreak. Mother has always been a quiet, home-loving person, fond of good reading, serene in all her ways and at peace with the world. But this case aroused her wrath. She exclaimed: "Do you mean to tell me that a mother can be robbed of her own children in the name of the law? They are hers, no man ought to have the right to take them from her. Why have you boys kept me in such ignorance all this time? To think I don't know a word about the laws that govern me! Why somebody must start a campaign against such crookedness as this barbarous performance."

"I tried to interpose. 'But, mother, there are two sides to every question—the father has his side, too—the judge must consider all the equity of a case.'
"Equity, fiddlerssticks," she exclaimed. "There's not a father in the world who can take care of delicate children as well as a mother can."

"She brings these children into the world, and nourishes their helpless bodies during babyhood, and watches them grow up day after day."
"Then, for all her bodily suffering and anxiety and all the cares and worries of motherhood her reward is for a judge to have the right to say: 'They are not yours; they are his.'"

Could Not Divert Her.
"We tried to divert her attention by suggesting other laws which need revision but to no effect. Our efforts added fuel to the flame we had so ineffectually kindled."
"What," she cried, "no court or judge could have taken by little children from me?"
"There would have been a killing! Wouldn't there have been one mother?" she asked laughing at her intensity.

"I don't know! Such a thing would have made me crazy enough to kill, and not to care how many I hit!"
"As a finality, she gave us this:
"The truth is, you selfish men have been able to hand down one-sided laws for centuries simply because most women do not have any chance to know the laws, as they really are, and men, all of you, are such cowards you are afraid to give them the opportunity to learn."

"We have nothing to say concerning any cowardice on the part of the ruling class, the men, but there is a sad truth in this last statement as to the ignorance of women on many vital subjects of mutual interest to public and domestic life.

The Women Who Do Not Read Newspapers.
Think of the army of well-to-do intelligent women who do not read the daily newspapers; think of that additional army who see only weekly papers, and perhaps not always these. If we were to call for a "straw vote" of the women of our state, as to how many really know of this law, which gives the children to the father and ask for a frank expression of opinion of it, the results might be a great surprise. Of course, the representative women who do think of matters beyond the horizon of daily living and living, would be quick to answer, and with no uncertain voice.

For the blessedness of old Georgia there are some of these in every county, acting as a sanctifying halo which surely in time will leave the lamp of our torpid indifference, our helplessness.

But up and down our land, from homes and shops and factories of the town and in the stretches of the farm, the country sides the vote would be light, the "straw" would be "straw." "Well, I don't know about it."
"I'll have to ask pa, or Johnnie, or 'Son,' to tell me about it."
"My old man says if the law were to give the children to the mothers, it would mean a revolution, and there would be no peace living at home." We seem to hear such messages on every wind that blows.

The women who have had happenings, protection and support, have felt no need of information. They have given no serious thought to law-making.

Those who have had to fend for themselves (and their name is legion), have gathered a few legal truths only where these have been needed in work or trade.

Indeed, we may safely assert there are not so very many men who are familiar with our code of law, and under conditions existing from ancient times to our very present day, women can be quite justified in being more or less unacquainted with the laws which govern them. Such previous and present ignorance does not affect the present status of legal conditions, but "ignorance of the Law furnishes no excuse for its violations," and ignorance does militate against any decided changes in the near future.

Recognizing our limitations in this matter, it becomes us (the women of the state) to step gently, carefully, (and prayerfully) on the road to a more satisfactory condition concerning the laws of domestic relations, lest our zeal should out-run our knowledge and our conservative opinions, and we find ourselves burdened with some ill-considered statute, which once being law, cannot be very easily repealed.

An Old Maxim.
To "go slow and sure" has been the maxim of our wisest law-makers, and they were right. Our poor state is already over-burdened with laws which badly need revision, or the legislative ax. Let us not add to these as regards private property, but in other matters women do not have such a fair, square deal as they might have.

As to contracts, carrying on business, collecting wages, having equal rights to the ownership and guardianship of children, we are dependent on the one sole truth, that the men of Georgia (on the average) are better, kinder, more just, than the laws which they have inflicted upon the commonwealth.

To change one statute now inscribed in our code, will mean the vital changing of at least a half dozen, and the dition of women in the legal condition of the family, absolutely, (except such private property as the wife may own.)

The Inability of Fathers.
The personality of a father ranges from the "very fine" man, the true, upright, sensible, unselfish man, the educated, capable man—the sweet-spirited, able man, to him who whittles fine sticks on the corner grocery porch, discussing politics and the weather, while his wife and children earn a scanty livelihood—and to the one who works all the week and earns an honest wage, and spends not only all he earns, but his family's earnings at the bar of the near beer or whisky joint. But the law does not recognize any difference in the quality of fathers.

Now, we do need a revision of the laws of domestic relations. Go into any justice court where the grievances of our every day folks are carried, and the injustice of existing laws will be made plain. Are we ready to work for such needed revisions? Are we willing to find out what is best and safest? Are we steadfast in the hope of bettering the legal condition of women in our state, and of taking better care of the children? If so, say yes—but having said it—let us put our hands to the plow and look not back upon these quiet fields from whence our bread is made, but what we think is right is right, but it is not always judged about by pleasant conditions.

Joint Guardianship.
To begin with a joint guardianship law, which has been tested in a number of the states, would seem to be the right thing. Such a law carefully framed should give no favor to either parent, and should look to the permanent welfare of the children.

Suppose we investigate such a law, and the workings thereof? A law which is righteous in one state cannot be very harmful in another. North and south, east and west, human nature is very much the same—heart aches are as bad in one place as in another.

The pity of it—all is in God's sight, that men and women cannot learn the unselfish lesson of keeping their homes safe and wholesome for the sake of the little children, born in their.

SENATE UNANIMOUSLY PASSES MEDICAL BILL

Amendments of House Are Concurred In—Other Bills Passed on Saturday.

The house amendments to the medical practice bill were yesterday concurred in by the senate by a unanimous vote. The main effects of these amendments is to take the majority of the board from the allopaths by increasing the membership of the board to ten members instead of eight, adding one eclectic and one homeopath, so that the allopaths will be left with the same membership as the eclectics and the homeopaths combined.

Senator Hixon's bill requiring better sanitation of bakeries and food-producing establishments, canneries and butcheries and providing for the general betterment of files was passed by the senate by a vote of 24 to 4. Senators Harrell, Olliff, MeGregor and Kea voted against the measure.

The bill of Senator McNeil requiring railroads to erect signposts before road crossings was passed.

The bill to make it a misdemeanor to issue a check when at the time of said issuance there is not sufficient funds in the bank to meet the demand and unless deficiency is met within thirty days, was argued for about an hour, and finally postponed for action until Monday morning.

GIVEN SILVER SERVICE

Ernest Rhodes Remembered by Employees on 50th Birthday.

Ernest L. Rhodes, head of the Ernest L. Rhodes company, wholesale milliners, celebrated his fiftieth birthday Friday, on which occasion he was presented with a handsome silver service, a gift from the employees of the company.

The gift was presented at the home of Mr. Rhodes at Austell, Friday evening. Mr. Rhodes having been induced by a friend to take a motor trip, in order that the office force of the company, about twenty-five strong, could reach his home before his arrival. Mrs. Rhodes had been apprised of what Rhodes had done and had the lawn tastefully arranged and a table set out laden with good things to eat, in the center of which stood an immense cake lighted with fifty candles.

A. Claude Jones, representing the employees, made the presentation of the silver, and delivered a glowing tribute to Mr. Rhodes, to which Mr. Rhodes responded in a fitting manner. Mrs. Rhodes was assisted in receiving by Mrs. W. Hayden Jones and Mrs. F. P. Rhodes, of Lexington, Va.

The service presented to Mr. Rhodes is a very handsome one of solid silver, consisting of an elegant compote, twelve plates and one large serving spoon, all beautifully chased and inscribed with an old English "R."

SALARY SYSTEM BILL INTRODUCED IN HOUSE

Measure Abolishes Fee System for Certain Officials in Fulton County.

A measure was introduced by Messrs. Smith and Blackburn, of Fulton county, by request, on Saturday abolishing the fee system in the payment of certain officials of Fulton county.

The bill places on a salary basis the remuneration for the following offices in counties having a population of in excess of 100,000 people: Ordinaries, sheriffs, clerks, treasurers, tax receivers and tax collectors.

The salaries are fixed: Ordinaries, clerks of superior courts and sheriff, $5,000 per year; for tax receivers, $4,000, and for tax collectors, $3,000. The salaries of the tax receivers and tax collectors by the provisions of the bill shall be paid one-half by the county and one-half by the state.

The salary system has been approved on various occasions by the Fulton grand jury and by the board of commissioners.

HOG CHOLERA MEASURE IS KILLED IN HOUSE

The bill looking to the extermination of hog cholera was killed at an extended session of the house on Saturday and notice of a motion to reconsider was given.

The bill provided that owners of hogs infected with cholera should confine them separately from uninfected hogs, and should bury or burn the carcasses of hogs which die from cholera, making the infraction of the law a misdemeanor. The enforcement of the law was placed upon the game warden.

The bill lost probably by reason of its stringency and because it was statewide in its application, rather than by its lack of merit.

M'CRORY RESOLUTION MAY YET BE CONSIDERED

Supporters of the original McCrory resolution to authorize the state to publish its own books, which was passed last week by a committee to investigate the advisability of such a venture, are now hopeful that the original resolution may yet come up at this session for the consideration of the house.

While, of course, it will not be definitely known until the rules committee meets Monday morning and decides upon the day's orders, it is believed that the measure has a good chance being recommended for a hearing on a Louisville and Nashville railroad freight train plunged into a culvert six miles north of Marietta, were found Saturday morning. The body of Farris was uncovered about 6 o'clock, and that of Channell was found about two hours later. The body of Brakes, man E. B. Merrill, who was on the train at the time the wreck occurred, was found late Friday.

ASKS POLICE TO FIND WIFE AND DAUGHTER

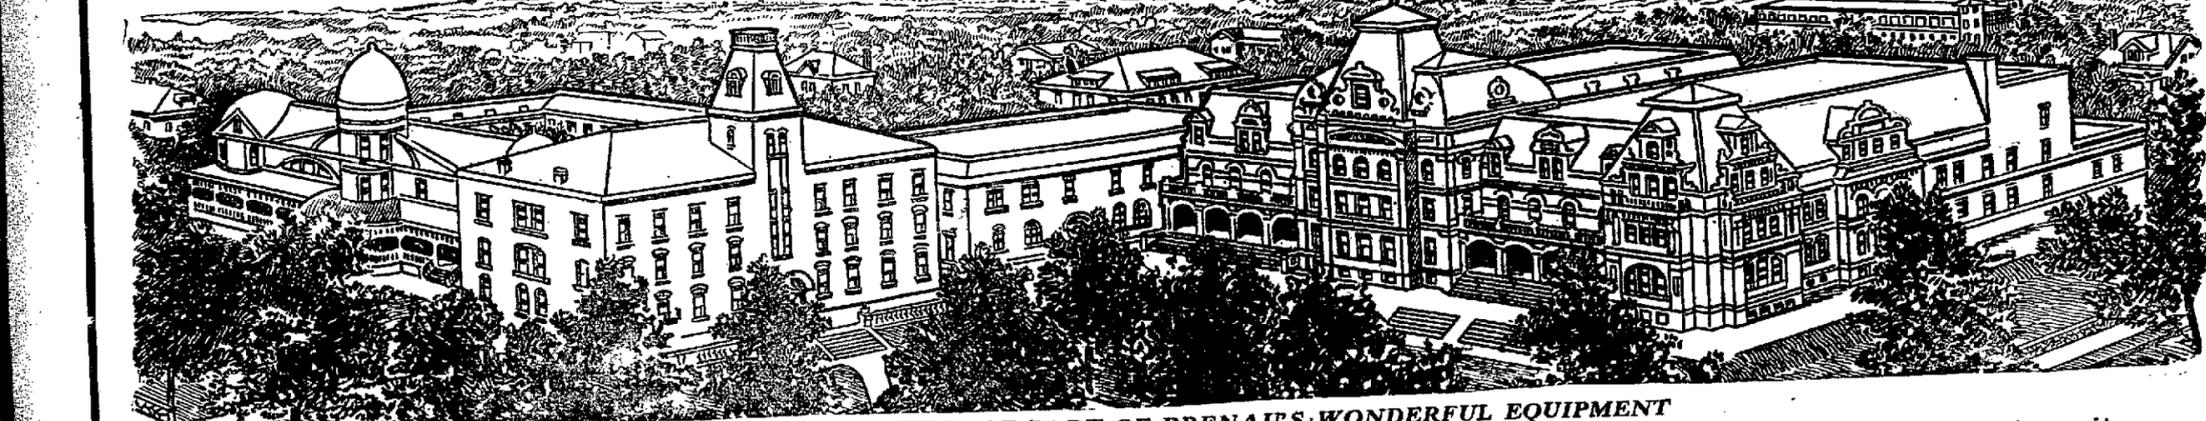

Stating that they had not been seen since Thursday night, W. W. Mills, living at the Fairlie apartments, 137 Spruce street, has asked the assistance of the police in finding his wife, Mrs. Edna E. Mills, and 6-year-old daughter.

Mills, who is connected with the Southern Book company, 71 Whitehall street, told the police that he had not been home for several night previous to Thursday, but can give no reason why his wife should have left him. He is of the opinion that they have gone to Charlotte, N. C., with another woman, who formerly occupied an adjoining apartment.

THE SUCCESSFUL MAN OR WOMAN

—is one that uses every legitimate means at his command to further his own interests. And nothing is so small, or seems too small, to be pressed into service.

He sees opportunities to save in the classified pages of his daily paper—in employment of men, disposal of furniture, purchase of this and that.

He realizes that the quickest way to make his wants known to thousands is through these classified columns, which form a complete meeting ground for those who need or need to be had.

He appreciates that at the cost of a few cents he is put in contact with this vast army of people, among whom will surely be someone, or maybe many, who has what he needs or needs what he has.

And, if he lives in Atlanta or its vicinity, he uses "The Constitution," because it reaches the people in the morning, when their mental faculties are alert after a night of rest.

REAL ESTATE AND RENTING

REAL ESTATE ROW. 10 AUBURN AVE.

WHY NOT ANTICIPATE THE RESULT OF A $900,000,000 COTTON CROP?

THE natural flow of water is downward. When the stream is dammed, and the dam breaks, there is a mighty flood. The natural trend of realty values in Atlanta is UPWARD. This is as true as the law of gravitation. It is also true that when this natural upward trend is checked by unsettled business or political conditions, the suspense is of short duration.

NOW LISTEN

It is during such periods of business depression, when prices are at a standstill, that the shrewd investor foresees the reaction and flies his kite.

OUR TIP

Atlanta dirt is cheaper today than it will be next week, next month or next year. Therefore, tie your string to one of the kites listed below, and you will be surprised to see how high it will go.

REAL ESTATE TALK

BY ADAIR

There are in New York some queer old Dutch millionaires, descendants of former truck growers. Pioneer settlers on Manhattan Island, used to grow beets and cabbages, carry them down in boats and sell them at the docks. Their farms were also growing something else besides vegetables; they grew city lots. The second generation became landed aristocrats and were rich enough to afford to walk downtown for exercise. One of these old millionaires left an estate of $8,000,000 to an only son. The estate consisted entirely of property in New York city.

Thirty years afterward this only son died and the estate was appraised at $30,000,000. Now the peculiar thing about it was that it was exactly the same property left by his father. Not a single parcel had been sold, not a new parcel had been bought. This is what some people call "unearned increment." It is what we would call "earned enhancement," or the natural increase in value of real estate in growing cities. A man earns it by common sense, by paying taxes and assessments, by patience and by letting stocks and bonds alone. The lure of the tax-free investment or the get-rich-quick speculation does not tempt him. Real estate enhancement is normal, customary and the owner is entitled to it.

The inheritance tax of New York turns up these stories of unusual enhancement in real estate. In contrast with the inheritance which increased from eight to thirty millions we learn of a woman who was left $5,000,000 in gilt-edge bonds. After a long term of years the bonds, which had been held intact, were appraised. Some were worth 101, some were worth 98. This woman was a Hettie Green sort of character, who managed to live comfortably on a low income. There was no increase in value, the estate simply held its own. It was not like a certain piece of property that was sold last year for $100,000. The owner came in with an old yellow deed that almost fell to pieces when unfolded. It showed a purchase price of $9,000.

Income and enhancement are the twin daughters of real estate. They assist each other, and each set off the other's chance. Twenty years ago Peachtree stores rented for $100 month; now those same stores rent a $1,000 a month. Each successive lease period showed an increase in value and a corresponding increase in earning capacity. There are no coupons attached to a Peachtree store, showing that thirty years from now it will yield 8 1/2 per cent. "But bonds are easily convertible in time of stress," says the expert. A good many people who have tried to sell some lately do not seem to agree with this. Some of very gilt-edge bonds ever printed couldn't be sold at 80. In the meantime we tried to pry some central property loose from its owners, and we couldn't get any of them to name price.

Figures in New York run on a large scale than they do here, but the same process is going on. The truck farmers out on the edge of Atlanta are growing increased value, along with their crops. They are maturing a lot, the time will come when a city engineer will be driving down street at lot corners out in the cornfield. Money realized from the sale will be reinvested uptown in near-by property; it in time will develop into big speeded renting property, and thus the foundations of a large fortune will be laid. In some instances the process has been going on long enough to make what we call the rich men of Atlanta. What made them rich? The land increased in value.

Taking it all in all, the year round real estate is the best investment the average man. Without expert knowledge or inside information, people are successfully dealing in stocks or bonds. One man in Fulton county made a thorough test of stock business. His name was Alfred Muller, and the records of his estate are on file in the ordinary's office. His case is historic. This man, at the time of his death, owned 75,000 shares of 68 different companies. His estate holdings brought $4.85 at administrator's sale.

SPECIAL FUNERAL TRAIN WRECKED ON SOUTHERN

Train Bearing Remains of Senator Johnston in Ditch—No One Injured.

Norris, S. C., August 9.—The special funeral train conveying the body of the late Senator Joseph R. Johnston from Washington to Birmingham, Ala., was wrecked near here today. No one was injured. The cars containing the congressional committee and the family party did not leave the tracks, but the locomotive, three express and mail cars and the dining car left the rails. The three parlor cars bearing the congressional committee and members of Senator Johnston's family remained on the tracks. The members of the party were somewhat shaken up, but otherwise uninjured.

The funeral train was running as the second section of Southern railway train No. 37. While rounding a sharp curve about 2 miles south of Norris, at 2:19 o'clock, this afternoon the rails spread, derailing the engine, which ploughed into a ditch and turned over. An express car also was overturned into the ditch, and three express and mail cars and the dining car left the rails. The three parlor cars bearing the congressional committee and members of Senator Johnston's family remained on the tracks. The members of the party were somewhat shaken up, but otherwise uninjured. Engineer R. H. Tedder and fireman S. Y. Powell were caught under the overturned locomotive, but were extricated and were found to be uninjured. Postal Clerk P. L. Pittman was on duty aboard the entire train to be injured to any extent. It is thought he is not seriously hurt. The point where the accident occurred is the same place where a fatal wreck took place five years ago.

Scrambled by Southern.
August 9, Ga., August 9.—A statement of the wreck of the train bearing the remains of Senator Johnston issued by the division officers of the Southern railway says: "At 2:19 p. m. on August 9, second section of train No. 37, carrying the remains of United States Senator Johnston, of Alabama, en route from Washington to Birmingham, was derailed. The engine, two mail cars and the dining car were derailed. Two twelve-section Pullman drawing room cars and the Pullman private car with the funeral escort remained on the rails. "No passengers were injured. The fireman, the engineer and one mail clerk and one dining car waiter were injured."

The statement says the line will be cleared shortly after 6 o'clock and the party will proceed through to Birmingham.
Funeral Train Detoured.
Washington, August 9.—Southern railway headquarters tonight announced the funeral train should reach Birmingham by 6:30 or 7 o'clock Sunday morning. Their advices stated the party would be taken to Greenville, S. C., for dinner tonight and that another sleeping car and a dining car was en route from Atlanta to join the party. The dining cars occupied by the party was detoured by way of Belton and Seneca.

Pathetic Incident.

An incident at the Gettysburg reunion has suggested the following. It was to me the most pathetic of the many interesting occurrences of that memorable occasion.
A lady was at the reunion to visit the burial place of the brave soldier, her betrothed who fell in the battle. How suggestive. How sad! When the boys in gray and the boys in blue first marched out to that simple but stimulating air. The Girl I Left Behind Me they were buoyant with hope that some sweet day they would return and claim the object of their hearts' purest love but many never went back, but are sleeping today—many of them in unknown graves, with hands waving, tears falling and hearts aching, had bidden the last goodbye, while the pictures of those who never came back were kept as the dearest of mementos by the silent, secret sufferers of war's separations.

Fountains for Man and Beast Inspired by Sermon on Water

Fountain at First Congregational church, colored, showing John O. Connally, the donor, on one side, and his daughter, Pauline Ray Connally, on the other. A fountain for animals will be installed later.

The fountain was dedicated to Atlanta last Sunday afternoon. There is no bronze or marble tablet on it, Connally, at the time he made the gift, was inspired by God and he accepted modestly the thanks which were showered on him.
Inspired by Sermon.
The story of how Connally was inspired to make the gift is simple, yet beautiful. It was a sermon on "The Kingdom of God is within you," read to the congregation of the church by Rev. H. H. Proctor, the pastor, that touched his heart. Unostentatiously, without any claim for reward except the reward which comes of a good deed, he asked for permission to have the fountain installed, bore the expense and invited mankind to come and partake of its cool, bubbling stream.
It emphasizes the progress, philanthropy and Christian spirit of that element among the colored people of Atlanta which is making for the betterment of mankind—white and black. Connally's gift is an inspiration to his race. The congregation has now started a fund to install a fountain for beasts of the street. It will be located within a few feet from the spot where Connally's fountain now stands, and will pour forth a never-ending stream to soothe parched throats.
The thought which Connally has furnished Christian Atlanta is notable. It will live though the fountain run dry or perish in the progress of time. Men and women of his race will emulate his philanthropy, and they will be made the better for having been in the same flock with him. Other deeds just as commendable will refute the charge of selfishness that man has ever been cured with.

Took Name of Master.
Connally represents the true type of southern negro. He was born in slavery in Walker county, twelve miles from Chattanooga. He was at bloody Chickamauga with his white master, whose name he took and whose name he has defended and exalted through many years. He lived in Cobb county on a farm, and walked ten miles into Atlanta.
"When I reached here I only had 50 cents," Connally boasts.
His Christian endeavor brought him reward. He is now engaged in the real estate business, and wealthy. He could retire tomorrow if he chooses. But he won't.
Connally is held in the highest respect by whites and blacks of Atlanta.

URGES SALARY SYSTEM.

Charles I. Branan Issues Address to People of Fulton.

Charles I. Branan, chairman of the executive committee of this county, has just finished the Constitution with a copy of an address to the people of Fulton on the subject of the salary system and the adoption of the salary system.
Mr. Branan has been an active worker in the interest of the plan to put the state and county officials of Fulton on salaries, through the introduction of a bill in the legislature authorizing this change.
"The salary system has been endorsed," he says, "by not only 85 percent of the voters of Fulton county, but they have been backed up by the fourteen separate grand juries, the county democratic executive committee of Fulton county, the county commission of not only Fulton, but by their state organization, also a petition of taxpayers who pay taxes on millions of dollars' worth of property."
"As chairman of the sub-committee I have prepared a bill doing away with the objections made by the supreme court in declaring the previous salary system bill unconstitutional, and after having this new bill gone over by some of the best lawyers in the state, I feel safe in saying that we have a salary system bill that the supreme court will pass favorably."
Mr. Branan declares that he hand-d each member of the Fulton delegation a copy of this bill on July 25 and asked that they introduce it. Ralph O. Cochran, he asserts, wrote him a letter declining to act, but R. B. Blackburn and John Y. Smith introduced the salary system bill on Saturday, August 9 (by request), and it will come into action next summer.

CHARLIE GRIFFIN HAPPY.

Gets Birthday, Vacation and Son on Same Date.

Charles Griffin, the popular train caller at the Terminal station, is wearing the great big smile that won't come off. There's a reason, three of 'em, in fact.
First, on July 31, he had a birthday; also on that day he was granted a vacation, and last, but by no possible means least, a son and heir arrived at his home on that eventful day.
Mr. Griffin has returned to his post at the Terminal station, and has been receiving congratulations from all sides. Both mother and son are doing well, and the youngster has already shown that he has inherited his father's powerful lungs.

Douglas Wright.

Douglas Wright, the 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Wright of Col. lege Park, died at the residence of his parents Saturday night at 10 o'clock. He is survived by his parents, five brothers and four sisters. The funeral will be held this afternoon from the residence at 2 o'clock. Interment will be in College Park cemetery.

Negro Houses Burn.

Columbus, Ga., August 9.—(Special.) Fire in a negro suburb tonight destroyed seven negro dwellings, a negro K. P. lodge building and a small store. The loss is estimated at $3,500, mostly covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is unknown, but it is said a man and woman were fighting when the man seized a lighted lamp and threw it at the woman, causing an explosion which resulted in the fire.

FIVE ARE INDICTED FOR HEWELL MURDER

Bob Williamson and Four Negroes Charged With Crime by Laurens Grand Jury.

Dublin, Ga., August 9.—(Special.)—One white man, Bob Williamson, and four negroes, Rich Shiholster, Henry Kitchens, Joe May and Frank Harris, were indicted by the Laurens county grand jury late yesterday afternoon for the murder of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Hewell at their home a short distance from the city, several weeks ago.
The four negroes were ordered held by the coroner's jury a week or two following the killing, while Williamson was arrested a little over a week ago on a warrant sworn out by one of the sons of the dead man, and lodged in jail. It is known that Williamson had a disagreement with Hewell over some money that the latter owed him a few days before the killing, and that Hewell had a large sum of money in the store at the time of the killing, which was missing. The cases will not be called at this term of the court, as there will be only a few days' session next week.

The grand jury also returned indictments against Ed Turner, superintendent of the Oconee cotton mills, here, and three white men for working children in the mills under 12 years of age. It is alleged that Turner, as superintendent, hired the children and worked them in the mills, while the men who were indicted in connection with the case, lured and lured off the wages of the children. The cases will be tried at the present term of court, coming up Tuesday or Wednesday, and have aroused considerable interest here, as they are the first of the kind ever brought before the grand jury in this county.

Henry White Is Dead.

Henry J. White, one of Atlanta's popular negro barbers, died Friday afternoon at his residence at 6:30 o'clock. For more than thirty years he was the proprietor of White's barber shop, in this city, and numbered among his customers some of the most prominent men in Atlanta. His funeral will be held from Big Bethel church this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.
Mrs. Eliza Jane Mathews, 62 years of age, died at a private sanitarium at 10:15 o'clock Saturday night. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. E. H. Herndon. SENATOR'S DEATH CAUSES A MUDDLE Sharp Division of Opinion in Regard to Selection of Johnston's Successor—Right of O'Neal to Act Questioned.

Washington, August 9.—Sharpest division of opinion exists among senators over Governor O'Neal's announcement that he will call a special election to fill the vacancy caused by the sudden death of Senator Johnston, of Alabama. Some take the view that the governor, acting upon the advice of Attorney General McReynolds, is within his powers in calling a special election, others challenge his right.

Senator Kern and Senator John Sharp Williams approved the opinion of the governor and attorney general.
Senator Bacon, the only member of the senate who has been elected by the direct system, takes the position that the governor will exceed his power if he issues the writ for a special election.
Senators Root and Sutherland in the Maryland senatorial case recently took the position that the governor could not call a special election to fill a vacancy until the legislature has provided regulations in accordance with the new amendment.

Contest Is Expected.
A contest is expected if a senator presents himself from Alabama elected at such a special election as Governor O'Neal proposes. The Alabama case probably will act as a precedent for the Maryland election, where the governor has issued a call for a special election without the legislature having authorized him to do so since the enactment of the seventeenth amendment.

Attorney General McReynolds said today he had not advised the Alabama authorities that the governor was empowered to appoint a successor to the late Senator Johnston.
Mr. McReynolds said that in forwarding a copy of the seventeenth amendment to the attorney general of Alabama at the latter's request, he expressed the view that apparently he had no power to appoint a successor but that a special session of the legislature could empower him to do so and added that the governor could call a special session for that purpose.

Governor O'Neal Thinks He Has Power.

Montgomery, Ala., August 9.—Governor O'Neal declared today that he is still of the opinion that he is authorized by law to call a special election to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Joseph Johnston.
"The authority for the election exists in an Alabama statute which says that vacancies in office created by law shall be filled by special election," said Governor O'Neal. "I could issue a proclamation Monday for a special election and have a senator elected by September 15, the date of the public foot, and the tariff bill will come up for passage. A democratic primary would be useless in case I ordered an election. There is no danger of a republican being elected. Their vote is inappreciable."
Governor O'Neal will leave tonight for Birmingham to attend the funeral of Senator Johnston. He will probably reach no final conclusion until he has conferred with the members of the Alabama delegation attending the funeral.

BUYERS MUST OBSERVE COTTON TRADE RULES

The North Georgia Cotton Buyers and Manufacturers' association has issued a circular, calling the attention of farmers, ginners, merchants and shippers to the fact that the cotton trade which will be rigidly enforced this year, as follows:
Exception will be made on bills of lading where cotton is more or less wet, stained or soiled.
All ocean freight engagements will be based upon a standard bale size of 48x24x2, and larger than this will be penalized $1 per bale by the steamer. Likewise members of the association who purchase cotton in standard size the same amount. Further, any bale that cannot be compressed to a density of 22 1/2 pounds per cubic foot, and even if the above size, will be penalized 50 cents per bale. Bales weighing between 300 and 400 pounds will be penalized 50 cents per bale, since the cotton will be compressed to the required density.

TAX RETURNS IN WARE SHOW GAIN OF $546,349

Waycross, Ga., August 9.—(Special.) Waycross county's tax returns for 1912 show a gain of $446,349, as compared to the returns for 1911. The total returns are $7,641,251. The 1912 returns were $7,094,882. Tax Collector Strickland expects to add a few hundred thousand dollars to the total gain for the year will reach the million dollar mark. Regardless of any further increase it is thought the county tax rate will be reduced from 18 to 19 a thousand on the year's showings.

The Political Rights of Women

MRS. MARY L. McLENDON, Editor

President Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association

It is said that people who are truly converted are always trying to convert others and help them to be as happy as they are themselves.

The National Council of Women Voters, of which Mrs. Emma Smith DeVoe, of Tacoma, Wash., is president, seeks to help the women who live in the other thirty-eight states, where women are not enfranchised, to secure the same blessings they possess and enjoy.

To this end Mrs. DeVoe has instructed the treasurer, Dr. Cora S. King, to invite the leaders of the organization in each of the ten free states, namely, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Idaho, Washington, California, Kansas, Oregon, Arizona and Illinois and the territory of Alaska, where women now vote, to attend the meeting to be held August 13, 14 and 15 in Washington, D. C., under the auspices of the National Council of Women Voters to outline plans for having the franchise extended to the women of the thirty-eight states who have not been so fortunate.

At least one woman from each of the ten free states is confidently expected to be present, and no doubt many others will be on hand. Chairman King and the board of trustees have consented to grant a hearing on August 14 to members of the council on the pending bill for the creation of a woman suffrage committee in the house of representatives.

The delegates to this National Council of Women Voters will represent about four millions of women who actually vote. Such a thing has never happened before. This council will discuss the campaign for woman suffrage in the coming year and also the several state campaigns to be waged in 1914.

There is to be a great public meeting at the close and a banquet. Women are just like men, they will continue to work and keep house and nurse the babies as they have been doing for ages. For a little diversion they will vote occasionally instead of playing bridge and other games. Politicians are not so very anxious to the other half of humanity that the women are as curious as Mother Eve was about the apple.

Mississippi Ahead of Georgia. Lawrence Yeager, secretary of the prison board of Mississippi, confessed to stealing the president of the board C. C. Smith, is also in jail having been convicted of defrauding the state. Colonel W. A. Montgomery, one of the trustees, is trying to defend General Smith and Colonel Linton Taylor, the other trustee, is at home too ill to attend to the business of the department.

A woman Mrs. O. M. Spickard, w. o. succeeded Lawrence Yeager as secretary of the prison board. She is undisciplined and unadvised, managing the penitentiary of the great commonwealth of Mississippi with ability and judgment not to be questioned. This middle-aged, frail little southern woman is a disfranchised citizen of her native state. She has not the rights conferred on her that has been given so freely to the negro men who were once slaves. Is this just? Is it a crime to be a woman?

Are American Women Citizens? Susan B. Anthony, the great exponent of women's rights always declared that the fourteenth amendment of the United States proclaimed citizenship for women as well as for men. Let us see how it reads in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside.

Are Women Persons? If they are or are not then why are they not full fledged citizens with all the rights and privileges pertaining to such "persons"? The fourteenth amendment says also "No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States nor shall any state deprive any person of life liberty or property without due process of law nor deny any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

Let us come now to one of the voting precincts of Atlanta and try to vote and she will find out that the fourteenth amendment was not made for her.

Why? Because she has committed the unpardonable crime of being born a female, therefore, she must be deprived of the natural right to self government assured to all "persons" born or naturalized in the United States of America.

The fifteenth amendment declares: "The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States, or by any state, on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude."

Notice the word "race" in that amendment. The white, red, black and yellow men are left out entirely because men wanted to keep women in subjection as they have for ages past. But it is a long lane that has no turning and "The Lord" will free all the women as he freed the negroes when the congress of the United States passes the following amendment to the constitution and three-fourths of the states ratify its action.

The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States, or by any state on account of sex."

If the men of Georgia, and of the other states continue to refuse equal rights to the other half of humanity—the women—then they will share as Deborah said to Barak, "This shall be for said their honor."

The Men's League Convention. At Ocean Grove, N. J., during the month of July five political parties were represented by state leaders who spoke from one platform in behalf of woman suffrage. The occasion was the Men's League convention which brought together 1,000 persons from all parts of New York city.

President of the National Men's League to advance the cause of complete enfranchisement of women in the United States.

When politicians begin to favor votes for women then something will surely happen.

The Woman's Municipal Party. The Duchess of Mulbrough is deeply interested in the success of the Woman's Municipal party and has assisted in the formation of a newly formed organization in England the object of which is to uphold women candidates for the various London municipal parties without regard to the party lines on which municipal office is held.

The woman's municipal party will demand pledges from its candidates, that they will carry out the plans of the organization on questions affecting the welfare of women and children.

The Latest From Morocco. The sultan of Morocco attended his first suffrage meeting the other day while visiting in Rome and enrolled himself as a believer in "the cause". When the sultan found out that it was a suffrage meeting he told the courier to bring him and his entourage to the suffrage to drive the sultan's carriage back to the hotel. The sultan protested, but then lord and master had his way.

The suffragists did not stand for this, they insisted upon the two sultans with him and next morning Napoleon had lived to see that he would have thought twice before he said "Woman is given to man that she may produce children. Woman is property but we are not hers. She belongs to man as the tree belongs to the ground."

Women Do Vote in California. There are 50,000 registered women voters in San Francisco, Cal., and they vote from the most respectable districts in the city.

State of Washington Advances. Like Chicago the state of Washington has selected a woman to be state superintendent of schools. Miss Ella Flagg Young, of Chicago, is paid a salary of $10,000 a year and Mrs. Josephine C. Preston, although state superintendent is not paid as much for her work by the state of Washington but both of these women can vote and hold office.

Through Mrs. Preston's influence the State Bankers' association, the State Grange and the association of Parents and Teachers have founded the Washington Boys' and Girls' Industrial and Beneficial association to do good to the state can be in industry and girls of the state can be in industry and girls of the state can be in industry.

Four hundred community centers have been organized and the legislature has appropriated $15,000 for this department of Mrs. Preston's work.

"Our women haven't any brains," they have not neglected their homes. They are better women today, and are helping to work out our community problems. I think the idea that a woman cannot vote without lessening her home life is ridiculous."

Suppose the women of Georgia could vote? Don't you know our girls would stand as good a chance as our boys?

Don't you know that Hon. John Y. Smith's bill to give mothers control of their minor children would become a law in 1917? Don't you know that the age of consent would be raised from 16 years to 18 as it is in Tennessee and California?

And women would have equal pay for equal work along all lines, especially women teachers if women could vote in Georgia today.

Alabama Suffragists do not Rest. Although Alabama has a man by the name of Hefflin and another named Bankhead in the congress of the United States who are opposed to the extension of the franchise to the women citizens of Alabama, the Alabama Woman's Suffrage association, with a membership of more than 1,000, has lately organized auxiliary associations in Selma, Birmingham, Huntsville, Tuscaloosa, Montgomery, Cullman and Greensboro. These newspapers in the state, namely, the Birmingham News, the Montgomery Journal and the Selma Times, maintains special suffrage departments edited by suffragists.

The Atlanta Constitution is the only paper in Georgia to extend this courtesy to the Georgia Woman's Suffrage association, but there are not yet

:: Sons of Families of Old Georgia Now Prominent at Capitol ::

JUDGE BENJAMIN HILL, Chief Judge of the court of appeals.

SENATOR ROBERT DUBOISE, Of Athens, representing the thirtieth district.

CAPTAIN GOODLOE YANCEY, Secretary of the prison commission.

There are at the state capitol now three men who might be termed the triumvirate of the state house. Or, in other words, there are today in the state house three men who are representatives of the old families of the stirring days of the Civil war, who did so much not only in the moulding of the destinies of Georgia, but of the south as well. These men are Judge Benjamin Hill, Senator Robert Toombs DuBoise, Goodloe H. Yancey, secretary of the prison commission.

Judge Hill is the son and sole survivor of the famous lawyer and statesman, Benjamin Harvey Hill, of LaGrange. The career of Ben Hill is household knowledge in Georgia. He was elected to the Georgia legislature in 1851 and served as a member of the Georgia legislature, later and afterwards was elected to congress and the United States senate. An ardent advocate of states' rights, he made many brilliant speeches in favor of secession, and when Lincoln was elected to the presidency of the United States, he shook from his feet the dust of the United States senate as indignantly as if he had merely dropped in as a spectator and came back to Georgia to fight for his convictions. In the convention of secession he was a powerful factor and was appointed one of the committee to draft the ordinance of Georgia secession from the union.

Upon the organization of the confederate government Bob Toombs became secretary of state to President Jeff Davis, but soon resigned to take an active part in the war. As a brigadier general he served in the Virginia and Maryland campaigns. So active was he in the interests of the south that immediately after the surrender an order was issued for his arrest, and he fled the country, spending two years in Cuba, England and France. He was able later, however, to return to his old home in Washington, where he died in 1885.

Captain Yancey is the son of William Lowndes Yancey, who was probably the most powerful influence at the convention of the secession in effecting the withdrawal of the south from the union. Mr. Yancey was never a seeker of public position, but preferred rather to remain in private life, except when his duty made it imperative that he take a part in public affairs. Early in life he owned and edited a newspaper at Greenville, S. C. Later when he moved to Alabama, he was three times elected to congress and each time resigned.

While he is best known for his famous speech in the Charleston convention, when he turned the tide of affairs to secession, there were other occasions in his life which were equally as interesting and fraught with importance. Once while making a speech in Faneuil hall, in Boston, on the subject of secession the committee declined to go on the stage with him because of public feeling. He was informed that he would be mobbed after his speech, but when he was done speaking so thoroughly had he converted his hearers, that the mob instead of doing him violence, unhitched his horses and pulled his carriage back to his hotel for him.

He was able later, however, to return to his old home in Washington, where he died in 1885.

Captain Yancey is the son of William Lowndes Yancey, who was probably the most powerful influence at the convention of the secession in effecting the withdrawal of the south from the union. Mr. Yancey was never a seeker of public position, but preferred rather to remain in private life, except when his duty made it imperative that he take a part in public affairs. Early in life he owned and edited a newspaper at Greenville, S. C. Later when he moved to Alabama, he was three times elected to congress and each time resigned.

While he is best known for his famous speech in the Charleston convention, when he turned the tide of affairs to secession, there were other occasions in his life which were equally as interesting and fraught with importance. Once while making a speech in Faneuil hall, in Boston, on the subject of secession the committee declined to go on the stage with him because of public feeling. He was informed that he would be mobbed after his speech, but when he was done speaking so thoroughly had he converted his hearers, that the mob instead of doing him violence, unhitched his horses and pulled his carriage back to his hotel for him.

He was elected to the presidency of the United States, he shook from his feet the dust of the United States senate as indignantly as if he had merely dropped in as a spectator and came back to Georgia to fight for his convictions. In the convention of secession he was a powerful factor and was appointed one of the committee to draft the ordinance of Georgia secession from the union.

Upon the organization of the confederate government Bob Toombs became secretary of state to President Jeff Davis, but soon resigned to take an active part in the war. As a brigadier general he served in the Virginia and Maryland campaigns. So active was he in the interests of the south that immediately after the surrender an order was issued for his arrest, and he fled the country, spending two years in Cuba, England and France. He was able later, however, to return to his old home in Washington, where he died in 1885.

There are at the state capitol now three men who might be termed the triumvirate of the state house. Or, in other words, there are today in the state house three men who are representatives of the old families of the stirring days of the Civil war, who did so much not only in the moulding of the destinies of Georgia, but of the south as well. These men are Judge Benjamin Hill, Senator Robert Toombs DuBoise, Goodloe H. Yancey, secretary of the prison commission.

Judge Hill is the son and sole survivor of the famous lawyer and statesman, Benjamin Harvey Hill, of LaGrange. The career of Ben Hill is household knowledge in Georgia. He was elected to the Georgia legislature in 1851 and served as a member of the Georgia legislature, later and afterwards was elected to congress and the United States senate. An ardent advocate of states' rights, he made many brilliant speeches in favor of secession, and when Lincoln was elected to the presidency of the United States, he shook from his feet the dust of the United States senate as indignantly as if he had merely dropped in as a spectator and came back to Georgia to fight for his convictions. more "future" as promising. A great deal of the wealth now left in Holland will go to Germany.

Rotterdam Will Decline. Rotterdam, which largely lives out of traffic bound for or to the German Rhine, will decline to a second-rate third-rate port. It will not be able to attract such traffic as is needed for Dutch requirements. The Dutch loss will not be confined to this. The whole of the Dutch Lower Rhine, as a result of its inferior depth and general inferiority, must decay. It is even possible that western Holland lying along the Waal and Rhine will be supplied with merchandise entering not via Rotterdam, but via Emden and the New Rhine.

Germany will profit in war more even than in peace. At present in wartime Germany, even if she secures the command of the sea, may have her Rhine commerce stopped by an unfriendly Holland, whom she might not have enough free troops to coerce. The Dutch could block the river to German ships and merchandise. Once the New Rhine is built, Germany will be mistress of her own river, and no power that has not command of the sea will be able to meddle with her over-sea trade. The prospect of these very practical advantages, and the limitations of advantage of having a "Deutscher Rhein" are having a strong effect on German public opinion; and there is little doubt that when the money market gets easier an appeal for the necessary capital will produce the $200,000,000 needed.

Join With Your Neighbors and Buy a Corn Sheller.

(T. B. Parker, in The Progressive Farmer)

It will soon be fodder-pulling time. What are you going to do about it? Statistics show us that as fodder is generally pulled, the injury to the corn is as much as the fodder is worth. Do not be in too big a hurry to pull the fodder. Wait until the corn is hard. But a better plan is if you are prepared to handle the crop that "ways" to cut the corn, put it well made shocks of about 600 stalks each, let it cure out thoroughly and shred it. Of course, this is impracticable, is there is no shredder in your neighborhood. But why not get your neighbors together and start a little co-operative movement and buy a shredder and engine and shred the corn in the neighborhood. This will be much cheaper than pulling fodder and will enable you to save and utilize all the corn plant instead of only a part of it.

The Keynote of Modern Business Is "Service"

Clear the Decks for Fun Second Week Is Coming!

With Theater Party, Auto Ride, Barbecue, Ball Game, as Attractions, Second Week of Convention Promises to Bring Bigger Crowd of Merchants Than First.

Well, the first week has gone. Three cheers for the second! A careful survey of the city after the first week of the 1913 Southern Merchants' convention failed to find a dissatisfied individual. Every merchant who was here expressed himself as delighted with the entertainment which had been provided for him and it was with the utmost reluctance that large numbers of them tore themselves away to return to their duties at home. If every delegate who wished to move his Laces and Penates up to Atlanta could carry out his wishes, the population of the city would undoubtedly reach that half million mark in a few weeks. The wholesale and manufacturing houses have enjoyed splendid business. The merchants have been in and bought good bills all over the city. The general result is that, while they may not have been any more bills bought than at the 1912 convention, the average size of the bills has been larger, so the net business done shows up well in comparison. The meetings held each morning in the Auditorium have been an unqualified success. Large numbers of magnificent addresses have been given and the short, five-minute talks from the different merchants present have done wonders to bring the troubles of the retailers of the south to a focus and render it possible for them to organize so that they can work together for the eradication of this irritation. At the Forsyth theater on Tuesday night and at the Piedmont Driving Club on Thursday afternoon, the merchants enjoyed the hospitality of their hosts in big numbers. These features of the convention gave that social flippity to a week of hard work which is needed to bring the individuals into closer personal accord. Second Week's Program. Tomorrow morning starts the second week of the big time. There is a program all ready arranged of entertainment features which are sure to attract hundreds of merchants who could not get away for the first half of the doings. The program starts off with a theater party at the Forsyth on Monday night. The entire theater has been engaged and it is expected that the curtain will rise to a full house. Tuesday afternoon The Constitution Firing Line will run an automobile sight-seeing trip around the city. The cars will leave The Constitution building at 2 p. m. and will call at a number of manufacturing plants, in order to give the merchants some further ideas about the goods which are made here and which they will doubtless give the preference to in their purchases when shown that all other points are at least equal. About a dozen factories will be visited and the entire trip will occupy about three hours. Wednesday afternoon at 1 p. m. there will be a barbecue and Brunswick stew at Ponce de Leon Springs. This is always one of the most popular features of the convention and many merchants arrange their trip in order to be in the city for this occasion. The final entertainment of the convention will be a ball game at the Ponce de Leon ball park, between Atlanta and Chattanooga. There are hundreds of fans, both amongst the merchants and their Atlanta hosts and this is another very popular feature. Saturday will be devoted to saying "Au Revoir" and making dates for the next convention in February.

"MAY WE MEET AGAIN SOON AND OFTEN"

Temporary Organization Formed at Friday Session

Officers Are Empowered to Draw Up Charter to Submit at Meeting Next February, When Permanent Organization Will Be Formed.

At Friday's meeting of the convention a temporary organization of the body was formed with the following officers: J. W. Vaughan, of Cartersville, president; R. O. Crouch, vice president; T. E. Smith, second vice president; H. T. Moore, secretary and treasurer. The committee which recommended this temporary organization was composed of J. W. Vaughan, chairman; R. O. Crouch and H. E. Choate. The resolution which they submitted to the convention, and which was finally accepted, was as follows: We, the committee appointed to formulate a plan of temporary organization of this body, beg leave to submit the following report: We recognize the necessity of mature deliberation in the working out of a comprehensive plan, and we therefore have contented ourselves with suggesting only an outline for a tentative organization, which, if adopted, will enable those in charge to proceed with the perfecting of plans for a permanent organization. We recommend the adoption of the following as the plan of a temporary organization, to be made permanent hereinafter provided. First: That the organization be known as "Southern States Merchants' Organization." Second: That the headquarters of said association be in Atlanta, Ga. Third: That the object of said organization be the co-operation among its members in all things calculated to advance their interests and the welfare of our section. Fourth: That the executive officers of said association consist of a president, a first vice president, a second vice president and a secretary-treasurer and that officers be elected at this meeting. Fifth: That a committee be appointed by the incoming president to formulate a charter and a set of bylaws, to be reported for adoption at a general meeting to be held in Atlanta, in February, 1914, at which all Southern Merchants' here represented and others who may be invited by the officers may be present and take part. We recommend that the officers, in the absence of a charter and bylaws, be empowered and authorized to do such things as may be necessary to prepare the way for a permanent organization at the meeting to be held in February, 1914, the exact date to be left to the officers to determine. J. W. VAUGHAN, Chairman, Cartersville, Ga. R. O. CROUCH, Griffin, Ga. H. E. CHOATE, Atlanta, Committee.

The successful organization of this body a solid result of the convention which will have immense effect on the business world of the south for years to come. If for no other reason, this convention will go down in history as one of the most successful ever held in that it was the cause of the start of this banding together of the merchants for their mutual welfare. The officers who have been chosen are men who will fill their position as it will give every merchant who is interested in his own country and its business a chance to go fully into all the matters which will have to be taken up and a proper consideration of all these questions at this time will have an effect on the ultimate usefulness of the body which is fully worth the time which will be spent. Committee on Nominations. The committee on nominations of the convention was as follows: Louis E. Ragan, chairman; C. W. McClure, J. R. Mobley and W. L. Percy.

YANCEY HILL ON CROP DIVERSITY

Leading Montezuma Merchant Tells Personal Experiences In Strong Speech Advocating Diversified Crops.

The following is the address delivered by Yancey Hill, a leading dry goods merchant of Montezuma, Ga., at the convention meeting of Tuesday last. Before giving you what I consider the correct solution to this question, I want to discuss the importance of the farmers of Georgia raising a grain crop sufficient to supply their needs, saying nothing of the great variety of crops that they could successfully and profitably raise. It is an admitted fact that Georgia can grow, successfully, a larger variety of crops than any state in the union. It is also a fact that she can produce as much or more corn, oats and hay per acre than any other state, and, in the face of these facts, we are shipping into her borders every year more grain and hay than we produce, for the farmers and those interested in farming to allow such a condition as this to exist and continue is a travesty on the intelligence of our people. Why is it that our farmers are today in debt and dependent upon the bankers and merchants to aid them in making crops? It is because they have been depending almost entirely

Williams and is one of the most complete lines of holiday goods that comes to the city. They come here every year with this display and this year it has even outdone those of previous years. Atlanta is chosen for their southern headquarters on this trip on account of its central position and ease for distribution. P. H. Jeter, with John Silvey & Co., has been the busiest man on the list with them for the entire week. This is his first convention experience as a local salesman, and he is tickled to death with everything pertaining to the honorary position. Jim Bates, house salesman with Brown, Perryman & Greene company, states that he is enjoying the experience of meeting all his old friends amongst the merchants. It is now about three months since Mr. Bates left the road and it is a novel experience with him to be meeting his old friends for the first time as a local man.

CONVENTION SPEAKER

J. H. MCGEE, Merchant of Lawrenceville, Ga., who delivered splendid speech at Thursday's meeting. J. M. Frix, traveling northwest Georgia for the Lamar & Rankin Drug Co., reports nice business and the finest crops he ever saw.

NOTES OF THE CITY SALESMEN

We are thankful for so few cases of illness reported during the extreme hot weather. All the C. S. A. boys are on the job most all the time. "Buddy" Harding, with the National Biscuit company, presents his smiling face at nearly every meeting. The faithful will receive their reward. Our annual barbecue will be held on Saturday, August 23. We are anticipating a good crowd, and are assured of a good time by the committee in charge. Brother T. J. Camp, with Bell Bros., was reported ill at Davis & Fischer's sanitarium. We trust he will soon be well again. Brother John Baker appeared at the meeting yesterday morning minus his mustache. Brother Baker has worn this mustache since the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, and his being without it was such a surprise to his friends that they could hardly recognize him. He was first taken for a 17-year-old boy who had slipped in among us. Now don't all you old boys shave at the same time. Emory S. Morris was elected treasurer at the meeting Saturday. We are pleased to have Brother Morris in our line of officers, and are sure he will always be found with his shoulder to the wheel helping to push the C. S. A. ahead. Boys, don't forget the hour of meeting—10 o'clock, Saturday morning—fourth floor, city hall.

CHOATE TALKS ON STOCK INSURANCE

Treasurer of J. K. Orr Shoe Co. Gives Able Address On Important Feature of Mercantile Safety.

The following speech was given by Herbert E. Choate, treasurer of J. K. Orr Shoe company, at the Friday session of the convention. It treats of an exceedingly important factor in the success of any merchant, and is worthy of the deepest study by all merchants. The subject of the address is "Can a Merchant Afford to Imperil His Capital by Failure to Properly Insure His Stock?" "Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Convention: I could wish that so important a subject had been assigned to abler hands. "It is to be presumed that in a general way, no clear-headed business man would for a moment oppose a negative answer to this query; but, unfortunately, a great many of us will accept as a matter of course the advisability and safety of certain lines of conduct and afterwards assume a rigid disregard of such rules as far as we are individually concerned. "Ben Franklin wisely observes that 'experience is a hard school, but fools will learn in no other and scarce in that.' I think our philosopher might

MARION ADAMS COMPANY...
A STORY FOR GIRLS

Miss Marian Adams, of Montvale, sat on the front veranda of the beautiful hotel at White Sulphur Springs, meditating over the various experiences that had been hers during the summer vacation now drawing to a close. Of course, this is not her real name—neither is Montvale, Ga., her home. Miss Marian having completed her senior year at a celebrated college, her parents decided upon her taking this vacation which had been very pleasant up until a short while before returning home. As she meditated, she could not help but realize that nature did not intend any of the animal kingdom to be idle nor to avoid work, and that nature did intend that each individual, no matter what their station in life might be, by force of circumstances, should be occupied in some pursuit that would bring returns that would be sufficient to clothe and feed any one.

Upon Miss Marian's return to her home at Montvale she decided to embark in an undertaking very unusual, and one that would require a great deal of mental and physical exercise. Like most young ladies who have completed the usual course at college having absorbed a great amount of theory, a little amount of ancient history, science, languages, and art she found that her knowledge of the commonplace events that transpire every hour in the day and constitute the greater portion of life was a field unknown to her, and she decided to venture into this field and learn from experience. Before starting out she took pencil and paper and outlined as near as possible the ideas that had come to her that summer afternoon at White Sulphur. Miss Adams' family stood well in the community and she was one among a number of the most admired debutantes of the season. Notwithstanding the fact that her hands were white and slender, and that she was unacquainted with any form of physical work, she realized that her physical being was equal to meet any undertaking that so many thousands of her sisters who were not so fortunately situated financially or socially had to accomplish. Her first step was to go to the Second National bank. The cashier, with whom she was acquainted, gave her information as to how money was loaned and borrowed. She asked him if they would accept her note for a reasonable amount of money payable in ninety days, at the usual interest. When she had thoroughly familiarized herself with the details of making notes, drawing checks, figuring interests, etc., she started out on a campaign. On her memoranda were the names of five girls of her set, she called on each one and laid before them the following proposition:

"I have decided to go into business in the rear of my home in a small vacant lot that my father has agreed to rent me, and I propose to erect on this lot a shed building of rough lumber 50x100 feet and have gas connections and a gas range put in shelves, tables and benches running water and have it screened in, then propose to have my mother and the mothers of you five girls write out the best possible recipes for the canning of fruits and vegetables. I propose then to put these up under the most sanitary conditions in either glass or tin, or in both—whatever is the most practicable for the articles desired to be preserved. I then propose to pickle such vegetables as cucumbers, beets and artichokes. The preserves will consist of strawberries, blackberries, raspberries and all kinds of small berries and fruits that can be easily obtained in this vicinity. I propose to have a dressing room which each one of us can go and put on serviceable working clothes and shoes, so as to be thoroughly comfortable, and also install electric fans where necessary. In order to get this business in shape it is necessary to begin the work this fall and complete all preparations by the marketing time of the first fruits and vegetables that we wish to use. I propose to secure the services of a competent contractor, who will construct this building at as low a cost as possible consistent with convenience and durability.

"In order to have an abundance of material to operate with, I propose to begin a campaign of advertising running through the winter months to reach all the farmers and producers in this vicinity, advising them through these advertisements that they can find a cash market for their products of this nature provided it is brought here in proper condition and handled by them in a thoroughly sanitary manner. And also that they may increase their usual planting of such vegetables as we may need."

"Now girls, what do you think of this plan?"
"How splendid!" "This is just grand!" "How perfectly lovely!" "You can think of the loveliest things!" "I believe it will be fine for us and we can make some money."

"Well, girls, how much stock will you take?"
One girl replied, "What kind of plan have you for organizing a company?" "Well," said Miss Marian, "None of us know anything about law and legal corporations, but we'll call this a corporation, and I'll leave to you the selection of the name."

Miss Josephine Strong instantly suggested the name to be "The Marian Adams Home-Made Preserving Company," which was voted the proper name. All the girls being enthusiastic over the proposition, they got paper and pencils and began to develop the idea. After going over a few details, each girl pledged her pro rata part of the necessary capital to finance the organization, realizing that by their self-reliance they would easily save from useless expenditures sufficient money to enable them to pay into the treasury as the demand arose for financing the business. Marian Adams kept complete minutes of this organizing of the company, and each girl gave her signature pledged herself faithfully to give her support and co-operation to every detail. Upon returning to her home that evening she did some more meditating upon the immense possibilities for good that can result from the development and carrying out of what at first glance seemed to be a very simple proposition. She realized how empty any life must be that has not some fixed motive and undertaking to follow that leads to a closer touch with humanity and also development of the resources of nature's most wonderful laboratory. She could see before her many children in the country and in the suburbs, and even in town, who had little stimulus in the summer with baskets on their arms out in the hills and dales carefully plucking from nature's garden the first dewberries, the best blackberries, huckleberries and plums. As soon as their baskets are filled she sees them trudging to market, happy to receive full value for their day's toil which brought no less contentment to them than if they had been engaged in play. They felt no less surging some game all during the bright sunny hours.

This might appear to some as an idle dream, she thought, and she realized that many objections would have to be overcome from her parents, and that pressure would be brought to bear upon her and some possible reverses might come which would seek to cause her to relinquish the undertaking. But Marian Adams was not unlike any other human being that becomes thoroughly obsessed with an idea that has much good in the ultimate result, and she determined to carry out her plans, despite all obstacles that might arise.

During the fall months her building was constructed, her stockholders giving her their enthusiastic support and each one found that they were much happier when their time was occupied in planning and carrying out this great idea. Her advertisements had gone forth—some of them contained requests for personal letters giving estimates of the quantities of fruits and vegetables that could be supplied. Necessarily, all information about her business and her plans had become public, and was being commented on by the entire community, and had become popular. This interest created brought to her applications from a number of other young ladies in the community who desired to become interested in the business. And after due deliberation it was decided that the field was open, and that any girl that cared to take part in the work in view could do so. The original five girls remained in undisputed control as directors, and before proceeding farther, it was decided to organize a salesforce. By making a careful survey of the material in hand, it was decided to take the most adaptable girls and organize them into an efficient salesforce to carry a list with them of the goods that would be preserved and pickled and to make a canvass of each home in this town and book signed orders for any quantity that housewives might need.

And if there were not sufficient orders to consume the estimated product of the company, these girls were to go in pairs and visit nearby cities and towns and make the same kind of canvass until the estimated product was pledged. All these plans being completed and all necessary work going forward, the time between was utilized in perfecting the recipes—getting them in thorough shape so that they could produce a product in preference and pickles that would contain absolutely no injurious chemicals, would be pure and wholesome and that would keep indefinitely under the proper conditions. In due season the first berries began to arrive—very first reported on time—donned their working clothes and began in a systematic manner under the most sanitary and comfortable conditions to prepare the fruits and vegetables and in a very few days the Marian Adams Home-Made Preserving company saw the first fruits of their labors.

In glass jars, air-tight, were luscious berries, and as the fruit and vegetable season advanced, all manner of garden truck was brought there and paid for and canned instantly. The salesforce of girls still at work on their orders had sent in enough orders to keep the plant running at full time until the end of the season. The farmers of the community had found that it to devote time and attention to their vegetables and had received a larger market price than ever before in the history of Montvale. Their customers were delighted with the goods they were receiving and looked forward to the long winter months to come when they would realize the en-

BUSINESS BUILDERS

THE SALESMAN'S MOTTO: I will accomplish everything within the power of energy, tact and resourcefulness; nay, more, I will attempt to overcome the impossible.

LOSS AND GAIN ACCOUNT.

In the store there is more or less time that often hangs heavily on the hands of both clerk and merchant in some places this time is utilized by playing marbles or patching holes. Now time is quite a valuable asset in any business and there are few stores that do not have accumulations of odds and ends in merchandise and incidentally some considerable trash and dirt. Therefore when time begins to hang over both stock and house and you have a cleaning up, sell just as fast as time begins to come around. There are many things that this will do. First, it will absolutely put every loafer on the run. A loafer is a peculiar animal. He can't stand to work himself and he just won't stay around where anyone is. He is faster and lather away from anyone that is at work than any known species. If you don't believe it, try it. Then cleaning up is one of the most interesting occupations that comes along unsolicited. Going over the stock and keeping at this job will be found to have as much to do with the gain end of the account as anything you can do. It will give you something to do that is in direct association with your business and this will sharpen your faculties. It will get you very closely acquainted with goods that you did not know were in the house, it will also introduce them to your clerks and will stimulate them to get them sold and out of the way. It will give the store more the appearance of a place of business and less like a trash receiver. It will add much to the appearance of your place of business and make it more attractive to your patrons. Do not infer that there should be no vacation and no rest, but let the vacation and the rest come after real work and real fatigue and not mix up an hour here and an hour there. That makes for shiftlessness and prevents concentration of mind. By perseverance only can any race be won.

THE CREDIT MAN.

As a matter of fact the credit man wishes in his heart that he did not exist, he wishes that he had chosen well digging as a profession or something else easy like ditching or all-sitting. When he passes an order and the man falls before his part, he is "cussed" by the treasurer when he returns an order and the man stays on in business and buys a bill from a competitor and pays on the dot, he is "cussed" by the salesman who sold him first, and when he holds up a big order and asks the cashier for a statement he gets the order cancelled and is "cussed" by the merchant. And the last "cussing" that man gets is worse than the first. He don't know the man personally and if he writes to him for full information the customer thinks he will set right down and tell every man in his home town all about his business and if he writes to someone else he gets half the truth and lots of things that would help in deciding is left out. If he writes to other merchants that he has been dealing with he only gets their expiation and that is often limited to one transaction. What is he to do? Well, he simply does the best he can, and stays on the job sifting the good from the bad and trying to serve the house, the salesman and the customer and it is passing strange that more credit men don't go to the asylum. The credit man is first honest in his effort to pass every order that the salesman send in and get all the goods out of the house to good parties. He has the warmest, kindest feeling for both the merchant and the salesman. He wants to see them both succeed. He would do anything in his power to help them both. He would give any merchant hours of his time to help him straighten out any tangle that he may have gotten his business in and would do it cheerfully and for nothing. He wants to see the sales of each road man grow and he will do anything for him he can. He will take up any account he may have and go over all matters pertaining thereto in detail. Don't "cuss" him. He is your friend and he wants to prove it if you will only give him a chance. No credit man can pay a personal

On The Constitution Firing Line With the Commercial Travelers

SPLENDID SPEECH
BY R. O. CROUCH

Replying to the Addresses of Welcome, Vice Chairman of the Convention Delivers Stirring Speech.

The following speech was delivered by R. O. Crouch, of Griffin, vice chairman of the Southern Merchants' convention. Mr. Crouch is one of the most progressive merchants in the south today and his speech is here given in full as expressing a very general sentiment of the entire body of delegates.

"Gentlemen of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' association of Atlanta, your Honorable Mayor and Governor: On behalf of the retail merchants assembled here today I want to thank you most heartily for the words of welcome to your city. We are glad to be here, for nothing gives us country folks more pleasure than to come to town occasionally when it's too wet to plow. And when I say country folks I mean to include all the little villages and towns such as Marietta, Cartersville, Newnan, LaGrange and Americus and others of like size but, of course, my own city of Griffin is not included for this occasion—we are no longer in that class. Now the plowing is about over and crops just growing fine, we thought we would take a few days off for rest and recreation, and get a few ideas from this big city.

"All Georgia, and the south for that matter, recognizes the greatness of Atlanta and the great commercial strides she has made in the past ten years. This throng of representative merchants from almost every nook and corner of the state, from the wiregrass and everglades of the extreme south to the fertile valleys and mountain peaks of the north, bear testimony to your generous hospitality and to your superiority as a commercial center.

"We are here at your bidding, to see your beautiful city, to visit your factories and your mercantile establishments, to fill our minds with useful knowledge, and by an exchange of ideas to better the general welfare of both merchant, manufacturer and distributor, and thereby render better service to all the people.

"We are here to see all that you have to offer, your immense skyscrapers, your beautiful homes and streets, the procession of lovely women and Paris costumes. Our eyes are open, and now remember if you see us rubber necking down Forsyth or on Peachtree or around the corner of the Chandler building, don't laugh; think what we came for and that you asked us to come and do this very thing.

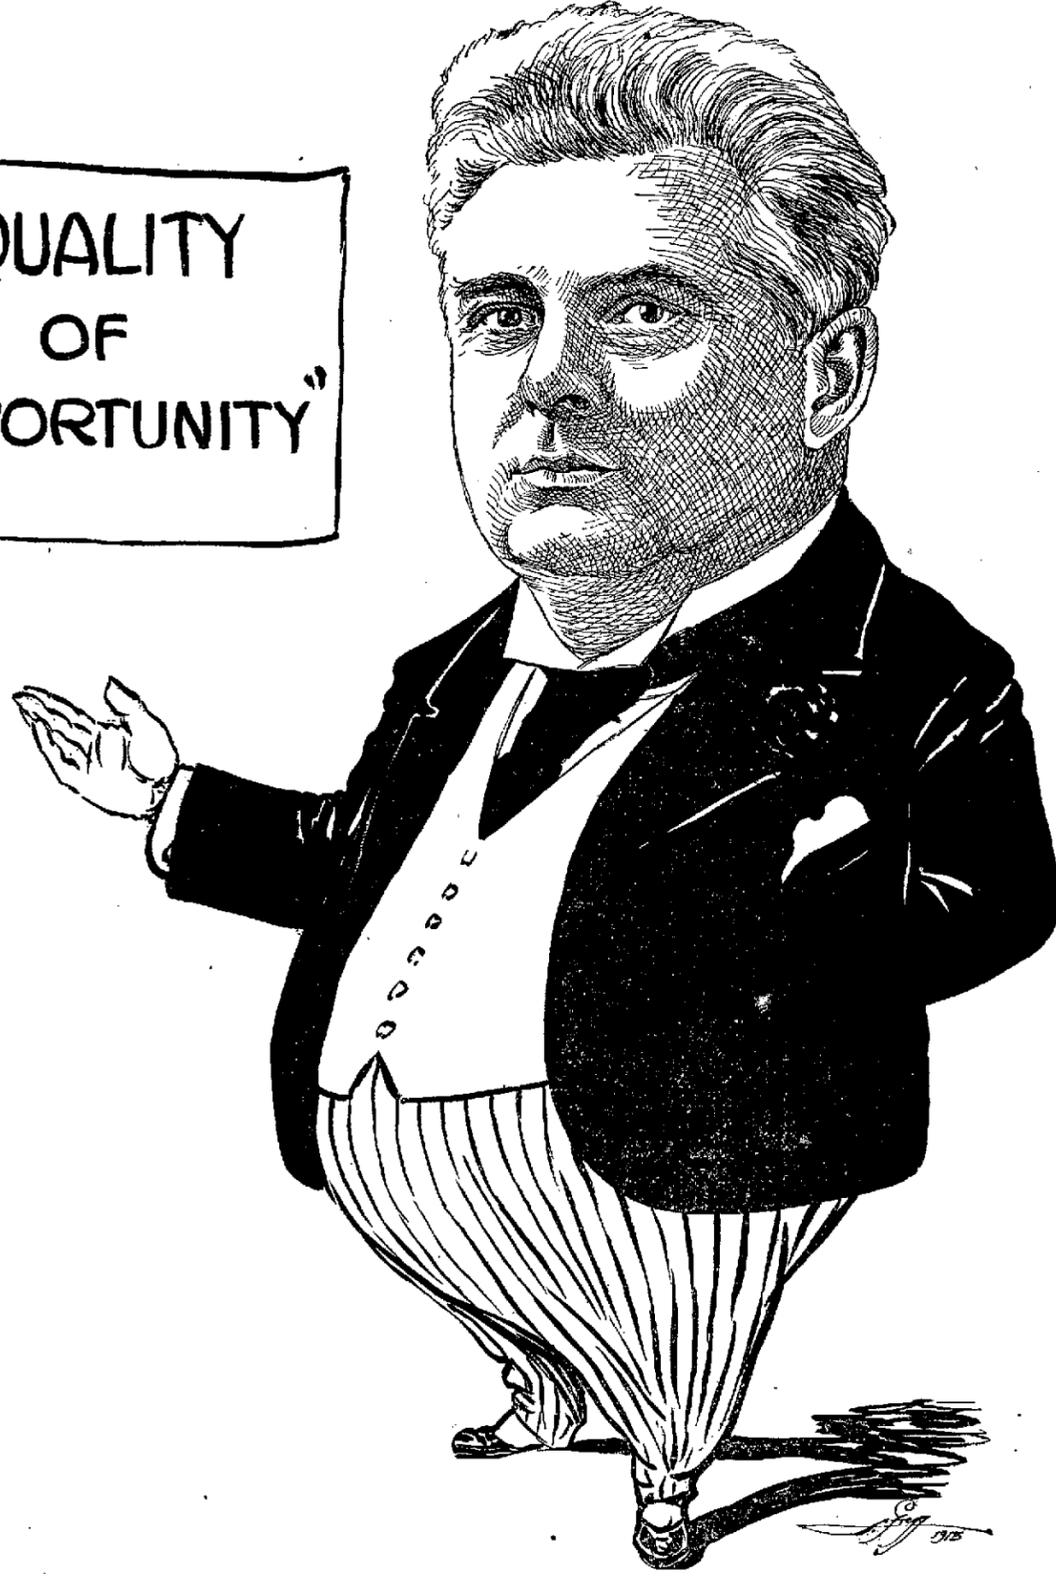

"Some one has said that three-fourths of our knowledge comes through the eye, and if I were not a Sunday school man, I would bet my last dollar that that was born in the country, for they are the folks that use their eyes most. I know, for I am one of them, and I am proud of it. When I look around and see the men who are doing things today and study their history, I think God that I was born in the country, brought up by honest tillers of the soil, in an atmosphere pure and fresh from God's own workshop, free from the environments, the temptations and the strife of city life.

"In the country we have room to romp and grow, to develop mind, body and soul, to build castles both on the ground and in the air, to live according to the dictates of our own consciences and elasticity of our pocketbook. Here we study from nature as it unfolds its marvellous work of producing from a thorn bush a blushing full blown rose, from a tiny blade the full ear of corn and waving head of wheat, from a delicately tinted blossom threads more beautiful than silk to clothe mankind. Where else can you find a place where God has bestowed such wonderful riches, and then, too, He has given every man a fair and equal chance to seek them out and use them as a crowning glory to the life that He sacrificed that we might live.

"I want to say to you that were deprived this matchless heritage I am sorry for you, it was a real calamity in your life, and one over which you had no control, but we still have a ray of light and hope to throw out to you. Merit and genius are born everywhere. Where there is a will there is a way, and I would not have you think that I am trying to discredit your city men. I would not under any circumstances, for I know that many of them have risen to the highest pinnacle in the achievements of life, both in the city mansions and in cement houses. They deserve all the more credit for what they have accomplished. Life is duty, and don't make the fatal mistake of trying to relieve your boys of the hardships and knocks necessary to prepare them for this life. You can't any more expect to make strong men of them without work and preparation than you can expect to make strong athletes without training. Give them something to do and keep them on the job.

"Take a look at the successful men of today, your captains of industries, the heads of your factories, your wholesale and retail merchants, and I am not afraid of contradiction when I say that 75 per cent of them saw their first sunrise over the eastern hills from a country home, and were trained for work in their youth.

"But, gentlemen, this is not all; this is only the beginning. If we are to get a lesson today from the men who stand at the heads of commercial industries, we must study their lives and ways of accomplishment. Ask them and they will take you back to the days of hard work, rigid economy and right planning. They were ever on the job with a keen eye for opportunities, they were always planning to increase their earnings.

"I read the other day in a little booklet: 'If there is no plan but to do such business as comes along, that is about as much business as will be done.'

"How true is this of many of us who are willing to take a seat on a box and like micawber wait for something to turn up—lets go in and turn up something. Get busy, turn over and clean up the old stock, make your store look as bright and attractive as possible. Show the people that you want to do something, that you are not satisfied with your present accomplishment, and they will flock to your aid, for all of us are willing to help those who help themselves. Hence, we find the busy stores growing each year and the little fellows complain that they are being forced out—not so—they are simply drying up on the stalk for want of exercise.

"Now all of us know that your invitation to come to this convention in Atlanta has a string tied to it, but it is perfectly legitimate and right. You have goods to sell and we must buy. All things being equal we should buy in our nearest market. Self preservation should be our first thought; and this being the case it is our duty to develop first our own community and then our own state. You cannot accomplish best results by spending your cash outside of your own town and state. This applies to both our retail and wholesale trade. You have all heard of the dollar at the boarding house table that paid seven obligations and returned to the pocket of the first man who paid it to the land lady for two things: the greatest reason for holding this convention that we may come together and study our mutual interest, that we may know where and how to buy. We want to know each other better and the many advantages and the various lines of goods offered by the merchants and manufacturers in this market. A great many of the merchants of Georgia, I feel sure, do not realize the wonderful progress made by Atlanta wholesalers and manufacturers in the past few years, and many lines are bought elsewhere by retailers simply because they did not know the same lines are to be had here.

"Good merchants must necessarily buy their merchandise as low as possible, and they must have the goods best suited to their needs; they should have confidence in the lines and men with whom they deal.

"Provide an adequate market equal to the demands of live progressive merchants and at prices as low as can be delivered from any other market and the trade is sure to come, in ever increasing quantities.

No Store Can Sell Every Customer.

"Now we all know that no one market can supply all the goods the people want; no town can sell all the merchandise their citizens buy. There are lines of goods that Atlanta jobbers can't sew expect to carry—it would not be profitable if you did, but there are many lines that you should carry and carry strong. Make your lines strong enough to go into the very best stores with a price and quality that will bring down the order. You can't do this and cover the earth with your lines of merchandise in a smattering way. Specialize in the lines you find most profitable and most in demand; go out for the business with absolute confidence in your wares; know that you are right and you need not fear any competition. Be a master of the situation in the territory where you should control.

A Satisfactory Bread Account is a big asset, it brings a large number of people to your store. It is in daily demand and requires practically no investment. Tip-Top bread satisfies—hundreds of merchants will testify that it is the best seller in their house. Samples for the asking. A postal card will bring this and the price. Write us today.

Well, the show's on and the going is powerful good. There's been a whole lot learned here in Atlanta this past week and there are bunches of bright ideas tucked away ready for use in the coming days of business all over the country.

One of the biggest things that the merchants from out-of-Atlanta are finding out all the time is that Atlanta has no superior, no not one, when it comes to showing the goods and giving the values.

Atlanta's reputation as a market is none of your mushrooms. It has grown slowly, steadily and by careful cultivation.

And now that Atlanta has vaulted into the Place at the Top, she's not going to let her reputation suffer.

It's up to her to keep right on making good, and she is doing it. That's where you merchants benefit by buying in Atlanta.

Come to the Convention this week. Spend the whole time if you can. But come anyhow, if only for a couple of days. Do you good.

If I knew that a thought of mine
Were outside of love and untruth
That suffering and pain
Would follow in its train
I wouldn't hunt it would you?

If I knew that a word of mine
Hastily spoken and not true
Would sadden one's life
Lead to much sorrow and strife
I wouldn't speak it would you?

If I knew that an act of mine
Were fanned with others' hue
That would cause a man
To fall as he ran
I wouldn't do it would you?

In answer to your question brother er we would make heaven here on this earth and invite everybody in harmony and Christlike them. We are all God's people, but every heart should first be purged of malice and selfishness, revenge and conceit.

Yes we have had disappointments and sorrows but the love that's been ours has turned its shadows into sunshine. We have borne heavy burdens too but feel satisfied with what falls to our lot. Whatever there is in the Beyond we have faith enough to bridge the chasm of the grave.

So many eligible men waiting to join the T. P. A. if only approached.
Surely if they understood it they would not wait to be begged.

It is as much to the reputable hotel keeper as it is to the traveling public that the word "Hotel" stand for something—that it for all that the word implies. Some hotels are veritable hog wallows on the branch. We say this with all respect that is due to the good ones. You who are in little towns as you cannot get anything extra. Let me refer you to the hotel at Whitesburg Ga. about 295 population but a better eating place cannot be found south of Mason and Dixons line.

If we should fail to get all the goodness that's coming to us we will be satisfied to know that some other struggling fellow as deeply interested as we get it.

There is nothing can take the place of right acts, the discharge of duty toward your fellowman. They are cheating and soothing companions at all times in health, illness or affliction. There is nothing that would compensate for the pleasures they bring in letters, telephone calls and personal interviews.

We may believe a certain thing is right and be ever so faithful to that idea and yet be wrong just as some believe they have the right of way over the opinions and decisions of others that they were sent here by Divine injunction to rule and control

this universe and that it is wrong for a free and happy people to think feel and act for themselves. They would wipe out all but a certain few than there would be none left to interfere with what they might say or do. Their councils would then be supreme their word law and gospel.

We have great confidence in mankind but all are not angels yet. Some would be tyrants if they could.

Some of our friends have said. We will never forget you your faithfulness and kindness to us in sickness and death will live on and our love and friendship will forever abide with us, but great changes have taken place since then. They are courted and petted wealth and social position have come to them these lofty sentiments and expressions of affection are gone. If not entirely forgotten have become faded by the brightness of other days that money has brought to cheer them. Why should they linger with the ghost of a vain and regretful past? Perhaps you did not have their friendship to start with for that which you once had you have still that which you did not have in the beginning can not be taken away for it was not yours to lose. Do not spurn such days in which professions like these were made. The remembrance of them will serve as beacon lights to guide and direct you to brighter and happier days that are yet to be.

Providence does not always protect the innocent nor condemn the guilty.
We have heard of the guilty going free and the innocent being punished. We see some rascality better paid than some unsuccessful honesty. In justice triumph and wrong sustained.
Providence does not set aside the verdict—to be kind and considerate to your fellowman's wishes is noble and good, but if you are mean and inhuman using every advantage whether right or wrong Providence did not will it to be so. I shall never accuse him as being so unjust. It's up to the man to do right. If we are clothed and fed it must be through our own personal efforts. What we do must be man's work with man. Man can love man, or hate man. We know some who hate and those they hate for no other cause only they differ in opinion. We can be kind and good or we can be just the opposite. At any rate we should try to bring more love more mercy more sympathy and kindness into the world.

Last week was a big week—a week Atlanta will not soon forget. Another coming.

tective association public-spirited men

A Feast of Swimming

The prowess of Hawaiians as swimmers has been demonstrated by Duke Kahanamoku champion swimmer of the world but there are many Hawaiians who while perhaps not so fast as Duke are better swimmers and have longer endurance. said Francis B. Smith of Honolulu at the Fidelity B. K.'s ability to swim fast and long comes from the fact that he has large hands and feet which he can work in the water like the paddles of a steamer.

I have heard many stories in the three years I have spent in Hawaii at the feet of Hawaiians in swimming and I have seen many events that make me ready to believe any of them. Two years ago of the Fidelity B. K.'s schooner the schooner
Maj. Wainui was run into by a light house tender and so badly disabled that she sank. The tender also was damaged and put into shore. There were half a dozen in the crew of the
Maj. Wainui and the captain was Sam
Mann an old timer 72 years old.
It was believed that all the crew and the captain had perished but Captain Mann after 19 hours in the water reached Lunal an island in the Hawaiian group and is still living. I believe there was another member of the crew who was rescued a Korean, but Captain Mann was the only one who kept himself afloat until he reached land. His remarkable endurance is almost incomprehensible considering his 72 years but the truth of his performance never has been questioned.

Too Much Referendum.

Representative government of the old kind tried type seems to be pu-in force the will of the people better than do the new fangled experiments with the initiative and referendum.
Ohio has tried its new referendum law to recall legislation and has a first-class election scandal on its hands.
Paid canvassers forged a large part of the signatures to the petition and some of them have been arrested.

The great fault with these special elections however is that the electors do not take too much interest in them and the vote cast is always small. This makes it possible for a small but well organized party to impose minority rule on the majority. Many by laws or ordinances imposing heavy bonded debts and consequent taxes on municipalities are generally authorized by popular votes that are ridiculously small. It also gives a few old fossils that have time on their hands a chance to block the will of the people. In a sense this serves the people right for not taking more interest in public affairs but it is an evil just the same.

We have too many elections and we elect too many officeholders. The result is that the voters pay attention only to the heads of the tickets and the minor officials get in because the party machine put their names on the ballot. We should elect a small number of real representatives for all law making bodies and hold them directly responsible for appointments and expenditures.

upon cotton for their maintenance and support and getting their grain and hay from the west and just so long as this condition of affairs exist they will never be a prosperous people.

I do not know of a farmer in our county who has made a practice of raising plenty of grain and hay for his own use who is not independent today and knows nothing of what the people call hard times and those who have grain and hay to sell always have good bank accounts.

RAISE GRAIN.

If every farmer in Georgia would raise enough grain and hay for his own use and then a little to spare the banks would have more money in them than they could use and would be looking for a place to invest it and a good man could borrow money at 5 per cent and doing the fellow that he borrowed it from a favor.

I dare say that there is not a farmer in Georgia today that has not bought and will not have to buy a single dollar's worth of grain or hay but what could go to the bank and borrow what money he actually needs and the banker would not dare ask him for security in the face of the tightest money market that we have known for years.

I believe that the bankers and merchants would be doing the farmers a favor if they would refuse to assist them when they did not make grain and hay sufficient to supply their own needs. Merchants as a rule do not encourage farmers to raise anything except cotton. When the farmer enters the store about the first question that is asked him is how is your cotton crop? The cotton crop is first in the merchant's mind because he knows that the farmer is depending on that to get his money.

In the summer of 1911 I took a gentleman from South Carolina out into the country to show him a farm that I had an option on to try to sell it to him. He went out looking for a farm the place that I was showing was offered at $17.50 per acre. After looking over the place pretty thoroughly and seeing all the good things I could about it and more so it came to a little farm that joined this place, and to show him what a bargain I had offered him I remarked to him:

There is a farm that I do not believe could be bought for $20 per acre that time I saw the farmer standing in his front yard and I called him to come out and meet my South Carolina friend and his prospective neighbor. We had talked but a short while before I asked him how he would take for his farm. He answered me promptly, it is not for sale.

I said to him "I understand you do not want to sell it but suppose you could get $25 per acre would you not be interested? He replied: No sir I would not take $20 in fact, it is not for sale at any price."

That gentleman had shipped a car of such and such a crop before that and had more for sale. If Georgia were full of just such farmers as that instead of our lands being worth from $10 to $20 per acre they would be worth from $25 to $30 and there would be less land for sale than there is today and we could do business in Georgia on a cash basis and sell goods. And until our farmers get on this basis we can never prosper as we should.

ABOUT FERTILIZERS

I want to call your attention just a moment to what I consider the greatest curse the south has today. I know that there are many people who do not agree with me but the day is coming when you will find out how long enough. And that is commercial fertilizers. I do not want you to get the idea from what I say that I do not believe commercial fertilizers increase production. But on the other hand I know they do.

Believe that the cotton crop of the south is much larger each year on account of their use and the price is much lower than it would have been without their use. In the cotton year that closes with this month I have been informed by the authority that I can take more than 2,000,000 bales to pay for the commercial fertilizers used in making the crop. Now for the sake of argument let us admit that the crop was increased by 15 per cent and that I want to say that I believe that it was increased that much. But if it was would not 11,000 bales have brought more than $1,500,000 that we made then if it would we would have made it we would add for commercial fertilizers and more too. But that is not the only harm it does. The convenience of securing commercial fertilizers makes the farmer more negligent about home and crop. He has to get it when he goes out to buy when he should have worn out his shoes.

SOME EXPERIENCE

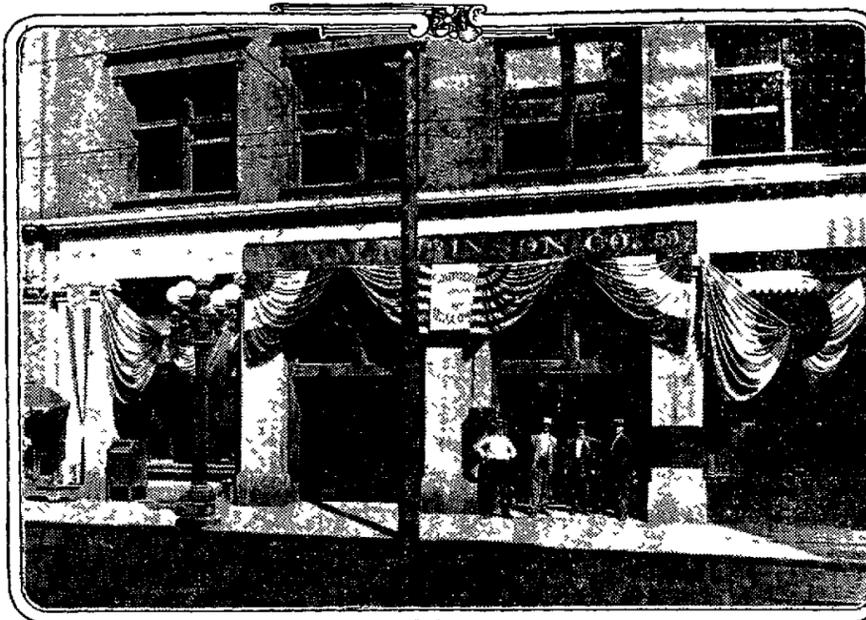

I want to tell you of a little of my farming experience I have farmed some myself. In 1908 in our section we made what we call almost a failure in a cotton crop. I had bought about $1,000 worth of commercial fertilizers that year and when time came to pay for them I had not the money so I went to see my fertilizer man and told him my trouble. He very courteously extended my note twelve months for which I felt very grateful and when time came to pay for fertilizers again he made it a point to tell me that he wanted to sell me again. I told him that I had made up my mind never to buy another dollar's worth of commercial fertilizer till I had paid for that which I had used the year before. Then he asked me what I was going to do. I told him that I was going to farm without it. He remarked that he thought I was making a mistake. I rode out to see my overseer and told him what I had made up my mind to do and told him that I wanted him to haul in top soil and swamp muck and pay special attention to his barn fertilizer. In this way we managed after a style to fertilize about half of our cotton crop.

My overseer remarked to me about the time we were planting that we would have very little use for cotton baskets in the fall.

In 1908 we made only 87 bales of cotton. In 1909 we made a single dollar's worth of commercial fertilizer we made 91 bales on almost the identical land.

I had a talk with my fertilizer dealer and asked him how he accounted for the increase. He remarked that it was a better crop year and besides the fertilizer that I had used the year before helped that year, but he says

LYNN FORT

Lynn Fort is one of the men who are rapidly being forced to accept the fact that on their shoulders must fall the mantle of the older men who have helped to make Atlanta and who are recognizing that in the not far distant future they will have to resign their positions as instigators of that Atlanta Spirit.

Mr. Fort is the popular manager of the Lamar & Rankin Drug Company and is a man who has risen to that position from the road. For many years a salesman he thoroughly understands his business and what is better he understands human nature. Consequently he is an ideal man for a big position and he fills his place at the head of the big wholesale drug organization in a manner which has made their business and reputation grow with a steadiness which is almost phenomenal.

Fodder pulling time will soon be here again and many a corn field will be butchered in this way at a greater expense in labor and decreased corn yield than it would have cost to produce twice as much forage in some other way. Pulling corn fodder is practiced only in the south and more largely in the southeast, but the sooner we recognize that a corn crop grown for corn should be allowed to mature before its leaves are removed and that either the whole stalk and leaves should be utilized for feed or hay produced by the growing of hay crops the better it will be for our livestock and our pocket book—The Progressive Farmer

Miss Wooten Pleads for Better Books in School Room Libraries

In addition to my recent plea for schoolroom libraries I want to add a plea for better books in these libraries. My attention has recently been called to the quality of the books in most schoolroom libraries as well as in the township libraries, which depend most upon the generosity of the public for the books which they have upon the shelves. From my own experience I know that but few people who give away books give away those in which they are interested themselves. Rather, they give away those which they do not want. This fact probably accounts for the large number of "Eldo Books," Alger, Optic, Rover and Motor Boy Series, owned by school libraries. Teachers have been accused of being fanatical upon the subject of these books, and perhaps they are, but it is well for someone to become fanatical upon the subject rather than to be indifferent. There are many interesting stories which they might have. If the members of mothers' clubs undertake to supply the inventories of their town with a library let them seek the aid of some person who has made a study of juvenile literatures before they make even the first purchase. The children's department of the Public Library of Pittsburgh has issued many valuable publications which may be had for a nominal sum. Among them are "Books for school grades one to eight," fifty cents; "Gifts for children's book shelves," a list for mothers, five cents; "Stories to tell to children under twelve years of age," five cents. The American Library Association, 18 East Washington street, Chicago, publishes an interesting "List of books for boys and girls" by C. M. Howland, price fifteen cents. The Boy Scouts of America have published a list of "Character culture by means of books boys like best," which may be secured for postage from 200 Fifth Avenue, New York. So with all of these ready aids at hand, as well as the aid which can be secured from your local librarian, there is no excuse for giving children unwholesome reading. The National Congress of Mothers has issued many reading lists for children as well as lists for mothers of children. Most of these lists may be had for the asking, although it is well to enclose a stamp with the request. If I could tell you of the boys who tell us of the things that they have made after they "read about it in a book" you would soon know that it does make a great difference when children read, and that if their reading is guided aright in the beginning it will follow along the right path and turn out right in the end. Co-operating with the parent-neighborhood clubs, the Carnegie Library of Atlanta has offered to buy as many of the books requested as possible. These books will be bought in duplicate lots so that they may be widely distributed among the members. In this way it is hoped to establish active co-operation between the library and the clubs for the betterment of both. But there is one thing that I cannot stress too much—don't undertake to select books for any child until you know something about the books, and when you are in doubt about them ask the aid of somebody whose business it is to know the best books for little folk.

KATHERINE H. WOOTEN.

The Value of Good Literature For the Children of the Home

Kate Douglas Wiggin writes, "I would rather be the children's story teller than the queen's favorite or the king's counsellor." R. Stanley Hall says: "Let me tell the stories and I care not who writes the textbooks." From the valuation upon children's literature by these two high authorities in matters of the child world and of child life, there are good reasons why the best child life know that not less important than pure food and rightly selected food are in the growing body are sound literature and carefully chosen books for the developing mind's jollies may make the beginning of a child's literary appreciation—the rhyme and rhythm and cadence and harmony making the appeal and impressing the memory of the people and the habits of different people teach today's baby the fundamental truths that centuries represent. Through all the growing years of childhood, childhood and youth, nothing in the experience of trained kindergarten teachers and mothers so touches the understanding, stimulates the imagination, and so effectively forms ideals as the hearing and reading of good stories. A concrete illustration or two illustrate the seriousness of impression and the beauty of ideal developed and enlivened by well selected stories. "The child who is a little boy, most timid and easily frightened, was so filled with love for King Arthur and simple stories of his knights, that he struggled with his might to overcome his real baby fears and he a worthy friend of his heroes." A simple biography of George Washington, shortly afterwards, when discussing the willful conduct of a small playmate towards his mother, he said, "You know, I think Jack wouldn't do that way now since we know how George Washington treated his mother."

The story of "Horatius at the Bridge" impressed a group of seven-year-olds that their play for days was colored by it. They lived over its scenes and in their childish way talked of the hero's courage and patriotism, sometimes unconsciously imitating themselves in the very language of the heroic poem. An observer could not fail to see the almost conscious enrichment of the intellectual life of the tiny tots. "Tell me what a man reads and I'll tell you what he is." Even half belief in such a statement brings to trainers of children the not-to-be-shirked responsibility of seeing that children are provided with the literature that is suitable to them and best for them, and when individuality of taste strongly manifests itself, of so helping a child in his choosing that he will read as he should and what he should. "The child's thirst for stories—has it no significance and does it not lay a responsibility upon us?"

HOUSE COMMITTEE ACTS FAVORABLY ON HEALTH BOARD BILL

House Bill No. 290 has been recommended to pass by the committee on hygiene and sanitation. This bill was introduced by Mr. R. C. Ellis of Tift. It provides for county boards of health, same to be composed of the county superintendent of schools, chairman of the board of county commissioners, or the ordinary in counties having no such board, and one reputable physician to be chosen by the grand jury. This board is to have charge of the health matters in the county. This board of health is obligatory, but other duties are optional and become operative upon the recommendation of two successive grand juries. They are the appointment of the county commissioner of health, whose duty it is to give his entire time to the prevention of disease in a county, to deliver lectures on contagious and infectious diseases, to inspect public buildings, and the school children of the county. This bill also provides that two or more counties may combine and exercise a full time commissioner of health. The campaign, which has been carried on against the line of contagious and infectious disease, has demonstrated the necessity of inspection of a part of the children, and the experience from a year's operation of the rural school children of Georgia revealed the same thing. All the Southern states, except Mississippi, South Carolina and Georgia, have county boards of health. Florida, the state board has an agent in each county; in Mississippi county health officers are appointed by the state board; in Georgia and North Carolina there are no county health officers. It is not necessary to go into detail as to the necessity of legislation of this kind.

SOCIAL DRAMA TO BE PRESENTED AT HEALTH CONGRESS

Among the interesting events in connection with this congress will be the presentation of Eugene Brieux's great sociological drama, "Damaged Goods," a play, which, according to a leading New York newspaper, illustrates a new epoch of civilization. This play will be presented by Richard Bennett and his co-workers, who gave the first American production of the play at the Fulton theater, New York, in March. The story of the play centers in the doctor who details a young man who carries in defiance of his physician's warning that he is unfit to become the father of a family. The consequences are overwhelmingly tragic. From this climax of tragic woe the author builds his message of hope for a future generation which shall not be handicapped by a "Conspiracy of silence" concerning the fundamental facts of life. Speaking through the physician of the play, Brieux, pleads not only for a health certificate with every marriage license, but he urges a clearer understanding of the mysteries of nature for the rising generation, the generation which is to be armed with knowledge to combat the evils which afflict the world today. One of the special sessions to be held at Buffalo will be devoted to the subject of sex hygiene. Among the speakers promised for this session are: Dr. Charles W. Elliot, president emeritus of Harvard university; Professor Thomas M. Balliet, dean of the school of pedagogy, New York university; President William T. Foster, of Reed college, Portland, Ore., and the Hon. Philander T. Claxton, United States commissioner of education.

Story of a Boy Who "Took Up" with The Constitution and Who Is Now on the Rising Road to Fame

"Map" of Ignatz' Physiognomy, Showing Length of Smile and Location of a Few of His Freckles.

By BRITT CRAIG.

Hes in the house of representatives, now, but his hair is as fiery as ever and the freckles on his face still are as numerous as holes in a porous plaster.

There are thirteen years of him and several odd inches. Some have said that his name is Emanuel Yaffe, but The Constitution knew him only as Ignatz, and, as Ignatz, The Constitution prefers to know him forever.

If he pages as well in the house of representatives as he office-boyed in The Constitution local rooms, he'll be a "bear cat," and the house will eventually adopt him as good legislative timber for the distant future.

Affairs in a newspaper office are about as informal and unconventional as Sis Whitlock's wash day, and, therefore, when he took up with The Constitution in a manner not unlike a stray pup's fashion of adopting a boy master, The Constitution said nothing, but put him under its sheltering wing and his name on the payroll.

The boys in the local room—the place where the city editors and the night editors and most all of the other editors see to it that the reporters correctly scribe the things that happen—began to first notice him of a Saturday, when he would arrive on the fourth floor via the stairway, never taking the elevator.

Ignatz Was Bashful.

He is a diminutive little cuss, and has a smile that invades his ears. He is as bashful and retiring as a country maiden, and never steps on anybody's toes. If you tease him about his freckles or hunched hair, he'll retort: "Aw, naw, I ain't," and retire behind a blush that hides even the innumerable freckles that spread over nose, brow, cheeks and whole physiognomy.

As a newspaper office is as redolent with traditions and legends as an Indian graveyard, there are many legends in The Constitution office accounting for the presence of Ignatz.

One is that he took up with young Clark Howell, Jr., son of Editor Howell, on one of young Clark's visits to Silver Lake. This was two years ago, and Emanuel was then there, camping with some of the other boys of the Hebrew orphanage, of which he is a resident, having come here from Savannah, where he is a constituent of Randolph Anderson, who, though he does not know it now, is going to make him a page in the senate next year.

Young Clark, on the occasion of his visit to the suburban lake, became, in some unaccountable manner, acquainted with the then eleven years and several inches of freckles and red hair, and, subsequently, his diminutive appearance followed him all over the grounds.

Out of native politeness, young Clark encouraged his juvenile comrade, with the result that Ignatz became a fixture quite as fixed as young Clark's shadow. When Clark departed, he gave Ignatz several nickels, a hearty handshake and an invitation to visit him.

"W-w-where c'n I f-f-find you?" queried Ignatz.

"Oh, The Constitution, fourth floor," Ignatz Arrives.

Ignatz could leave home only of Saturdays. He began spending them on the fourth floor of The Constitution department is situated. He would steal up the long flight of steps, slip unnoticed into an unoccupied chair in the hallway and repose therein, cap in hand and knees tucked.

He would sit in this position until nightfall, waiting patiently, untroubled, ly, as though in waiting for some one or something which never came. As the lights would begin to flare up and darken in the falling shades of twilight, he would leisurely slant on his shiny head, and slip as quietly down the stairs as he had come.

At first, nobody noticed him, nobody seemed to care. A newspaper office is too busy and too interested in its own affairs to absorb itself in such a wee bit of stranger as was Ignatz, known at home as Manuel. He came and sat through every Saturday afternoon, unmolested.

If he were waiting for young Clark, as the tradition is supposed to go, young Clark happened to never put in his appearance, for about then he had gone over to Athens, to the university. For months Ignatz came and went on Saturday afternoons, and it began to look as though he would adopt the fashion of Tennessee brood and come and go forever.

Becomes a Fixture. He became an unidentified Saturday fixture to the fourth floor hallway. But nobody except the elevator boy made inquiries. His name is Jonathan Josephus Jackson, and his curiosity is as thick as his lips. He only asked why the diminutive stranger always took the stairway instead of the elevator?

He never said anything, he never did anything. That is, except sit quietly and patiently in his chair in the hallway. This kept up for weeks and weeks, and finally the fourth floor began to look upon him as a fixed adjunct to the place.

Now, it happened that the favored seat of the little stranger, who, by now, wasn't so much of a stranger, after all, but a kind of unknown, unplaced fixture, was situated directly beneath the annunciator which calls the office boys to the various desks and departments on the fourth floor.

One Saturday afternoon, Dick Jemison, who is a holy terror to office boys, purely for the fact that he sends up more copy than anybody else on the floor, rang and rang and rang for one of the henchmen to relieve his desk of a mass of "junk."

Office Boys All Missing. No office boy! As a rule, they are, in a whole, very undependable factors in a newspaper organization—office boys are. They are about as bad, sometimes, as the star reporter "who could have been doing fiction by now if he'd have left off his booze."

Dick rang as frantically as certain bibulous ones are wont to ring for hotel gunga dins on certain mornings after, but not a stubby head showed beside his desk. Dick—that was he, with his temperament was soothed with the balm of fatherhood—gave vent to his feelings in expression vitriolic, which isn't a bit uncommon around newspaper offices, especially in the sporting department, and forthwith sat forth to investigate the laxity of the office boy system.

Ignatz's Opportunity. As has been said, Ignatz sat in dangerous proximity to the annunciator. As Dick's wrathful countenance came into view, Ignatz reposed in a very comfortable position, blissfully unmindful of the whirring annunciator, waiting patiently for young Clark, if the tradition be true.

An industrious roach—for which every newspaper office is more or less noted—crawled playfully on the floor and held Ignatz's attention.

Dick stopped and surveyed the scene, not overlooking the roach, and as Laura Clean-Dippy et al. would write, his features clouded with righteous wrath. Ignatz continued to observe the pirouettes of the bug. It was all the Jemison anger could stand.

"Boy! Why in the name of pluperfect purgatory! Here! Shoot this scum upstairs!"

Some sporting editors are keenly eloquent at times, especially to office boys. But, with the managing editor's "oh, how lamentably different Ignatz Starts to Work."

Ignatz jumped from his seat like a frightened rabbit. Dick proffered the handful of copy with a withering glare and a mumbled prophecy of sweeping reforms in the ranks of office boys.

Ignatz held a timid and spotted hand for the copy and spotted "Shoot this stuff w-where?" "Upstairs, you sorrel topped mess of freckles!"

With which Dick stamped his wrathful way back to the sporting department.

With the air of a martyr, as well as that of a timid lamb alone in some strange field, Ignatz looked around for a stairway that might lead to Dick's indefinite "upstairs." It was near the elevator, over close to the spot where Frank Stanton looks out over a sea of smoke-blackened skyscraper roofs and writes daily rhyme of sun-kissed mountains and shady delts.

Up he trudged, with no more idea of what to do with Dick's burden than he had of Darwin's pet theory, but with a determination as firm as that with which he had waited for young Clark, if the tradition be true, he strode into the composing room, intent upon doing something or other with his freightage.

What "Upstairs" Means. "Upstairs" is the composing room and there was a noise and blm blam, which, to unaccustomed ears, was frightful to hear. Linotypes clattered like a volley of gatlings, and there was a tinny uproar that completely drowned the multitude of shouting voices.

Ignatz stood at the doorway, dismayed, irresolute. He stepped breathlessly forward.

The "devil" (term for a composing room apprentice) collided with him, "pied" a half galley of type, and heaped enough fury upon the Ignatz's head to last for the remainder of the natural Ignatz life.

Ignatz Flees From the "Devil." Ignatz cast a furtive glance over his shoulder to see that nothing blocked his path to the stairway, threw one quick, frightened look over the composing room, and dashed Dick's handful of copy on the nearest desk.

It happened to be the right one, but that was purely a question of the Ignatz luck.

Later, he sat on the same seat on the fourth floor, not as mild, now as before, not as intent upon the playful roach. His eyes roamed the vicinity in general and the door at which Dick had appeared in particular.

There was something apprehensive about him and his cap weren't held in readiness. His feet seemed hunched upon the chair in usual fashion instead they touched the floor, ready for whatever instant use they might be of avail.

Suddenly the annunciator set in as frantically as before. Ignatz gave a timid jump—and his cap went for his head. Then he resumed his seat, poised for flight, waiting for action—rooms came a stentorian call that could be heard above the buzzing annunciator.

"Boy! Why in pluperfect purgatory! Here! Shoot this scum upstairs!"

The elevator boy says he caught a glimpse of it, and a youngster on the second floor said it flashed by him like a lightning streak. Neither of them could say they saw much—nothing, in fact, but a flash of red hair and freckles as it streaked down the stairway.

The rest of that afternoon Ignatz was missing, and the elevator boy and the youngster on the second floor compared notes to determine whether or not it was the Ignatz hair and the Ignatz freckles that galloped so lightninglike down the stairs.

He Came Again. But the next Saturday he came again. Nobody saw him come, nobody cared. The tradition says that he would have been coming yet if he did not get to see young Clark in the meantime. The first the fourth floor knew of him, officially, he was sitting in his accustomed seat in the hallway, as eager as ever, and as watchful.

Nobody seems to know how it came about, and not even the tradition has anything to say on the subject, but all at once the fourth floor discovered Ignatz was bustling copy "upstairs" as diligently as the most zealous 14-year-old veteran in service.

Maybe it was in payment of the weeks and weeks of rent due on his Saturday afternoon chair in the hallway.

Maybe it was to defy Dick and his "pluperfect purgatory" tone of manner and expression?

Maybe it was still in waiting for young Clark that he came and henceforth performed in the ranks of office boy. Maybe it was something that even Ignatz himself can't explain.

Ignatz on the Job. Anyway, he became an office boy on The Constitution—became one of his own volition, asking nobody for the job, telling nobody of his intentions. He just came and fitted in on the fourth floor like a stray pup chooses a boy master.

His name wasn't on the payroll, and he didn't have any particular boss. But he worked every day, and knocked off whenever he pleased. Once somebody in the art department asked his name, and he told that it was Manuel Yaffe.

"That's too long," they told him. "Hereafter it'll be Ignatz, understand!"

So they put him down on the payroll as Ignatz, and he became truly and officially a member of The Constitution staff.

Young Clark got back from the university early in June and then Ignatz was still waiting for him in the same old chair under the annunciator.

It was later that he went to the house of representatives. The old tradition of his loyalty to young Clark Howell must be true, for, inasmuch as young Clark is a reporter in the legislature during his summer vacation, it is not surprising that Ignatz followed him there, and, in a manner in which he was adopted by The Constitution, became adopted by that legislative body. At any rate Clark, Jr., took him to Speaker Burwell and told him he wanted him to give him a page place—and a page he is, and the speaker never made a better appointment.

A Week-End Guest. One night a week ago Clark, Jr., at the suggestion of his mother, took Ignatz out to spend the week-end at "Pine Hill." Dr. Sonn, the superintendent of the Orphanage consented for Emanuel never leaves the Orphanage roof for a night without the superintendent's permission. And for two days Pine Hill never had a more responsive guest. He revelled with the boys and when he called with the other boys on the Bob Maddox and the Will Kiser boys, he was toasting the boys, and on Monday morning as he left for the city, he had held in his little freckled hands a bouquet of wild flowers that he had gathered from the woods before breakfast. And he held them tightly and when he got to The Constitution office on his way to the Capitol, he was putting them away carefully in water.

"What are you going to do with those flowers, Ignatz?" asked Miss Dooly who happened to pass.

"Half are for you," was the reply, "and the other half I'm going to take tonight to Mrs. Sonn, at the Orphanage place—and a page he is, and the speaker never made a better appointment."

And that is the tale of Ignatz, known at home as Manuel, who, verily, will some day become a man as brilliant as his head of red.

A Last Tribute to Robert C. Ogden, Great Citizen, Philanthropist, and Friend to the Child of the Nation

By Isma Dooly.

"And how shall I deck my song for the large, sweet soul that has gone? And what shall my perfume be for the grave of him I love?" are the lines that recur to me from the triumphant ode to Death written by the great American poet. I hold to them as I read of the passing of the towering, tolerant, humanly loving spirit of Robert C. Ogden.

I rejoice that one has been given, who like him, lived to do and to enable rather than to idly accept, when after his long-tried, inspiring, and complete service, he has passed into the glory of Eternal Life.

I would that my perfume for the grave of him might be that of the white-petaled, gold-centered Cherokee rose as it grows sturdily in the rustic hedge near some little far off one-room schoolhouse.

It was there of all places that he wanted his powerful, good message to reach that every boy everywhere should have his chance for citizenship.

The Open Way. He believed that the way should be made open through the doorway of the little schoolhouse right out into the nation. For sixteen years Mr. Ogden led and directed an educational movement—the Conference for Education in the South—a movement which has touched upon every phase of every part of the south's prosperity. It has become now a perpetuated organization, carrying through many channels and directions. It has had as exponents of its principles and work the late Edgar Gardner Murphy, George Foster Peabody, Edward Anderson Alderman, Walter Page, David Houston, Wilcliff Rose, the late Charles McIver, of North Carolina, the late Walter E. Hill, of Georgia.

These were the men of the south who heralded the message that Robert C. Ogden brought, a message which resolved into the movement he perfected, in organization, then led, and faithered and loved. In spirit and breadth, it has partaken of him and his spirit which embraced all types and conditions of men.

His big and complex personality cannot be summed up briefly in phrases for the theme of his life and work presented to the biographer, the great democrat, the great man, the great nature.

The Friend. I write of him as the friend that I loved, as a man, enriched with many strengths and virtues, and one markedly gifted with mental graces and personal charm.

been at the annual conference for education which was held this year in Richmond.

The Annual Meetings. The first of these annual conferences over which Mr. Ogden presided for fifteen years, I attended in Athens, Ga., when there assembled in our university center a group of people representing the highest thought and most noble endeavor, all making for a national efficiency by drawing into the effort every element of people from every part of the country.

There were in the meetings people of antagonistic traditions, politics, religion and social interest, and there was a guarded, but unexpressed, question about the good stranger whom they welcomed.

Why was it a citizen from the North had been called to head a purely southern movement, and one so vital in relation to their educational life? Virginia understood, because it was in Virginia the group of southern men met who first planned for the movement, and who recognized in the personality of Robert C. Ogden the man to lead, the man whose character, force and power for good could easily merge traditions and prejudices into big principles and bring together men and women to work for the cause of the child of the republic.

His Great Purpose. In Georgia the beautiful high-spirited countenance of the presiding officer, with his integrity of intention, his knowledge of the assets of the state's educational life, his equal knowledge of the weaknesses, met with a response that allied to him with unflinching trust the best men in Georgia's progressive life.

This conquest of people and sentiment was one of the carrying influences of Mr. Ogden's leadership. It was repeated in every state where he went—North Carolina twice, in Arkansas, in Florida, in the second conference in Georgia, held in Atlanta, in the first memorably brilliant conference in Tennessee, held in Memphis, and in the last conference over which Mr. Ogden presided, that in Nashville, in 1912.

It was here that he must have seen eloquent fulfillment of his message, for there were the many well-developed, systematized organizations which had grown out of the seed planted at the first conference over which he presided. Representatives from great universities, from every department of national educational life were in Nashville. The teacher from the night school of the mountain cover art by the president of the south's oldest university, the county school commissioner or from the most remote corner of the commonwealth was next to his good friend, the editor of national note, no less this country's ambassador to the court of St. James. Men of all professions and business interests, preachers of all creeds, and citizenship at large, met in the ideally democratic assemblage in the center of which there shone the illuminating presence of the man who had brought together the forces that men represented.

He Was the Practical Scholar. Though Mr. Ogden always spoke of himself as the business man at heart and the beautiful and reachy scholar, I would claim for him not only marked scholarship, acquired through study and a natural nearness to the best there was in the many great scholars he knew, but a genius of a slight into that universal knowledge which God gives and man must struggle to acquire. His genius was that of the practical scholar.

And he was the artist in the exact practical sense. He saw always the true and the beautiful and reached to exploit it in those around him. He saw the beauty of religion and philosophy but it had to be applied to men's ideal.

The humor of the human interest story never escaped him, and his pathos touched an exquisite tenderness he had.

His Social Spirit. I would not make Mr. Ogden's social spirit an incident to his character, a vital integral part of it. It found ready expression in a dignity and poise grace of conversation and manner that would have made him as finished and picturesque a personality in the salon of France's "electual Madame Geoffrin as he was at the banquets given by the men of today's moment, or in the drawing room of that grande dame of the south's yesterday and today, Mrs. Anna Russell Cole, of Nashville. He was there, surrounded by those seemed to do him honor, that I saw Mr. Ogden, said goodbye to and felt the firm, loyal grasp of dear hand.

What I know him to have been what I know his message meant to the south; what I know his value as a citizen to the nation has been mine to deck my song for the late, sweet soul that has gone" with prayer of thanksgiving that he live so fully lived. I believe that record of service is as clear and among those of the men of his time as the evening star as it shines moment, in the line of the sun sky.

THE FARMER FIRST TO SUFFER.

The Tattnal Journal, in a recent issue, publishes a splendid article by H. H. Groover, setting forth the need of cultural efforts on the farm, and describing, in detail, an ideal mental and social standard for the farmer and his family.

Mr. Groover correctly says: "Prosperity, or the lack of it, on the part of our farming population, determines whether or not other members of our social order shall prosper."

If our farmers fail, we starve and go naked. If our farmers prosper, we dress well and grow fat. The importance of the farmer's position is such that he and his family have the right to live as decently and comfortably as anybody else.

That the farmers of Georgia have a problem to solve, and one which must be solved, no one familiar with the facts will deny. That problem is: How shall the farmer's family enjoy the educational and other facilities that the cities extend to their people?

This problem grows out of the fact that THE FARMERS OF GEORGIA, MORE THAN ANY OTHER CLASS OF PEOPLE, ARE AFFECTED BY THE PRESENT SYSTEM OF TAX-DODGING AND TAX-EQUALIZATION. The inadequacy of the state's revenue works the greatest hardship upon the farmer, for it denies him and his family the facilities that city people enjoy as a result of the more responsive tax systems of the cities.

Representative Snuggs has no desire or inclination to deprive the city people of those facilities which come to them as the result of the more responsive tax system of the cities. He desires all alike to get upon the same basis and to contribute equally, that is proportionately, to the state's revenue.

Tax-equalization will likewise prove a blessing to the cities, in that it will help the condition of the farmer, who is the mainstay of the city, and also enlarge the facilities now enjoyed by the city people themselves.

If the state of Georgia is to grow and prosper and keep step with her sister states she has simply got to do her duty in the matter of giving the farmers the same opportunities as are being offered by other states less able to do so than Georgia.

The farmer and his family have a right to the best things of life, and well-informed farmers with happy, cultured, contented families are necessary to the well-being of city and state.

It takes money to provide facilities for all these things, and if the state refuses to provide the necessary revenues the rural communities are most directly affected—for the cities can take care of themselves.

THE CALL OF THE CRIPPLES.

The movement for a hospital for the crippled children of Georgia is taking shape. The need of such an institution has aroused state-wide interest, as it should have done long ago. Indorsed by over three hundred physicians and the people of the towns and cities of the state, it is no longer the dream of the philanthropist and humanitarian, but the ready co-operation offered, with what other assistance is sure to come, make it almost a reality.

Not to go into the extent of the suffering endured everywhere by crippled children whose parents are too poor to pay for relief, a little story of real life may point the moral and give some idea of the heart-break of a child looking on life from a restricted sphere:

A little boy, crippled from birth, who was a pupil of a Georgia public school, said to his mother: "Don't make me go to school any more; I don't have any fun there: At recess, when the other boys are playing, I have to sit still and look on; for they're strong and hearty, and can rough-and-tumble it, but I have to limp along. I want to play, but can't."

He had unconsciously preached, in those simple words, the sermon of the crippled children of the state, heard by a mother who could only give him a mother's sympathy—the solace of her tears. The picture of that weeping mother and her crippled child carries its heart-appeal; and it is only one of many such. Need, and the grim oppression of unrelieved poverty, must make a bread-winner of some sort of that child; he must limp to labor; he must be one in the battle for bread—bitter bread for him, and for the lives that love him!

His case is in the picture The Constitution carries elsewhere. "There is no place for him!" Life calls and he cannot answer, nor see the way, for tears.

We conserve trees, we beautify land we are quick to respond to the call for the upbuilding of the state in even its lesser needs, but sometimes we are strangely deaf to that other human call which comes to us in various ways. This is the call of the children of our love—echoing from almost desolate homes, where grief sits and sunlight seems a mockery. "The child is father of the man." What type of man is it these cripples foreshadow? And yet they can be made to stand with men, to the fame and honor of the state and country!

The movement is a noble one and it should appeal to the public spirited citizens of the state.

LEGAL TECHNICALITIES.

The recent charge of Judge Charles H. Brand to the grand jury of Jackson county superior court, in which he discussed the dangers of legal technicalities in the administration of the law, is being generally approved throughout the state.

Sooner or later the general assembly of Georgia will awake to the necessity of taking definite action along the line of Judge Brand's suggestion—action demanded to remedy the abuses growing out of the too frequent resort to trivial technicalities to thwart the ends of justice. One after another the states of the union are legislating along this line and it is highly significant that the supreme courts of two or three of the states have taken the position that they will not consider reversals of verdicts except where it can be clearly shown that such reversals are asked for solely on the basis that the verdict of the lower court is not justified by the evidence, where it is claimed that there has been a miscarriage of justice, or where the verdict is in conflict with the substantial spirit of the law. In other words they will not permit attorneys to consume the time of the court in discussing trivial questions which have no direct bearing upon the guilt or innocence of the person whose case is being heard.

And this is essentially right!

PENALIZING THE CHILDREN.

Some young men teach school a year or two as a stepping stone to another profession. Some young women teach school a year or two, or three, or four—until they get married. This has been called makeshift teaching, and has been pointed out as an imposition upon the children, and as hurtful to the profession.

Of course there are teachers who exercise their awkwardness a year or two and then either quit or continue awkwardly. On the other hand, there are teachers, who have been in the work for years, who do not deny that their best work was done the first year or two, when ambition was high and when they had not fallen into ruts.

It is to be presumed, of course, that Georgia has a vast number of teachers, men and women, young and old, who are alert and enthusiastic in their work, who avoid the ruts, and who will continue in the profession to the end of their days—if they can possibly keep soul and body together until payday comes. The children may suffer, occasionally, at the hands of the step-father stone teacher, and the old teacher in the rut. This is known to the teachers as well as to the patrons.

Today the children of Georgia are suffering for another reason. Some of the best teachers in the state, men and women, are leaving the school room to engage in other work. They have spent time, energy, and money preparing for the business of teaching, but they have to quit it in self-defense. The salaries, if paid promptly, would enable them to get along; but when script has to be discounted and goods have

By FRANK L. STANTON. THE GIFT. I. Love came to me and laid his hand in mine. And said: "Thou shalt know sorrow and deep loss; Say now if these with me thou wouldst resign— My gift to thee, a cross?"

II. Then, weeping, Love was folded to my breast And Peace was mine from "Love's merriment." Sorrow brought joy, and the calm crown of Rest: Love bore the cross with me!

At the Gate. "There's a member of a state legislature outside, wanting very much to get in," said the keeper. "What about it?" "He ain't on the books," said the angel, "but three congressmen slipped in on you last night, and I don't see how you can discriminate. Let him in!"

The All in All. These memorial lines say all that need be said of a life-history: "No task for him: The higher gates to win: His life was love: With Love he entered in."

Of a certain pretty little village in Georgia it has been said that the people there are the best people in the world, that they do nothing but eat, sleep and go to meetin'. That village has also been playfully referred to as Georgia's "Holy City."

Now, it is not claimed that Atlanta is a "Holy City," and that her people do nothing but eat, sleep, and go to meetin'. But, sifted to the last analysis, Atlanta is no worse than any other city of its size in the world, and the probability is that there is not another city of its size in the country that can show a better all around record for peace and contentment.

Atlanta's wonderful growth and progress are due, in considerable part, to that friendly, generous spirit that has characterized her citizens, old and new. For one to "knock" Atlanta, unjustly, in the presence of an Atlanta citizen, has meant bad health for the knocker. This home-loving and home-protecting spirit must continue. Atlanta has her troubles and her dark spots but they are being healed and cleansed.

The thing our correspondent very properly attacks in the manner in which Atlanta is sometimes placarded all over the world by elaborate sensational displays of incidents which have no foundation in fact. Such things can do no good and are bound to hurt the city, especially when such sensationalism falls into the hands of strangers.

THE FUTURE FOREFATHERS.

An orator speaks of our wise forefathers "who built for all time and established the foundations on which we might develop and thrive during future generations."

Some day we will be referred to as forefathers? We have been taught to speak respectfully of the dead, or to say nothing. But now, while we have our wits about us, let us decide whether those who come after us shall refer to us as wise or foolish.

Old man Forester, illiterate and sixty years old, drove an oxcart to town—eight miles—to sell a dozen eggs. He was plucked out, to a stranger, as being the son of a man who had been graduated from his state university. The stranger approached him, and said, Mr. Forester, I understand that your father was graduated from the state university and that he was a smart man?"

"Yes," snarled old Forester, "my father was a smart man—but the first-hand record of an actual conversation—but it did not take place in Georgia. Fifty or a hundred years from now what will the Georgia orators be saying of their forefathers? That is for us to decide today."

LO, THE INDIAN!

It is to the credit of the remnant of a noble race—and to President Wilson—that an Indian is to become register of the treasury, at Washington.

Four hundred years of Indian history may be summed up in a single sentence: Massacred, plundered, shoved westward; remembered in their native sections only by wooden figures in front of cigar stores, and by bronco-busters in side shows.

Now an Indian comes out of exile to fill a position of trust and honor in the house of "The Great White Father."

Julian Hawthorne advertises the federal prison at Atlanta as a health resort; so save the tears you were about to waste upon "the poor unfortunates."

Wouldn't the whole congress say amen to the motion: "Move we adjourn in favor of the chautauqua platform?"

Probably Castro is returning to the scene of his former activities to personally select his pallbearers. Anyway, the hunger strike of the British suffragettes is bringing the cost of living pretty low down. Colonel Roosevelt isn't making trouble enough these days to make the front page look like a mild Mexican revolution. Talk about having a "Fathers' Day"—why, some of them go fishing two days in every year! A certain eminent critic proposes to rewrite Shakespeare. Why not? Only the other day Bernard Shaw revised the Ten Commandments. There are those who think it a pity that even a first-class cyclone can't disclose certain government officeholders. The New York Sun has a communication headed, "Jersey Immortals." And yet the mosquito is not mentioned.

The Grand Old Man of Georgia

By Sam W. Small. The critical sketch of Robert Toombs by Gamaliel Bradford, Jr., in the Atlantic Monthly magazine for August, is about as clean and appreciative in phrase and tone as could be expected from one who never knew "Old never" of Wilkes" in the flesh.

Mr. Bradford, being the son of an early and violent abolitionist, might easily be expected to show some of the personal prejudices of his paternal obsessions, trained and bred but being a critic he is modernized and he is happily superior to his regional antipathies. He warmly admires and exalts the purity and the patriotic principles that were fundamentals of the character of Alexander H. Stephens. Re-lying upon his faith in the truth and wisdom of Mr. Stephens' views, he draws most of his conclusions concerning the character and conduct of the great Georgiaian always followed down a wrong path. And his former, corroborated by testimony from other contemporaries, was not particularly Toombsian activities.

Mr. Bradford essays honestly to present a pen-picture of General Toombs that will adequately suggest his superior intellectual powers, his inflexible honesty, his compelling eloquence, and his irrepressible daringness of spirit. All these he presents artistically, of spirit. But his principal purpose seems to be the acute accent upon the utility of all the great Georgian always followed down a wrong path. BY GEORGE FITCH. Noah. Noah, whose last name appears to have been washed away during the well-known flood of his time, was born of poor parents, who didn't have even a cheap graphophone in the house. He showed no particular talent in his youth and reached the age of 500 or thereabout, without even having been elected justice of the peace.

This, however, was partly because Noah was a reformer. The world was very tough in Noah's time, and it filled him with indignation to see mankind going unadvisedly to the early morning carrying a skin full of wise apices. Noah ran on the reform full of wise apices. Noah ran on the reform full of wise apices. Noah ran on the reform full of wise apices.

This aroused more amusement than ever in Noah's neighbors, and his neighbors, when their credit failed at the barrel houses, spent their time watching Noah trying to fit a board on the side of the vessel without the aid of profanity and asking him how he expected to launch the thing without a government appropriation to build a ship canal to it.

Noah had a kind heart, and from time to time offered the least disreputable of his neighbors jobs as deck hands, but they only jeered at him, called him Barnum, and asked him where his show boat was going to make its first stop and who had the bill-posting privileges.

Just before the water rose high enough to float the ark, after the first flood of Noah's time, he was called to the weather bureau mast, large numbers of Noah's friends offered him Lusitania prices for a deck passage. SOME FACTS ABOUT TYPHOID GERMS

Bulletin issued by the Georgia State Board of Health. The germs to which prevailing opinion ascribes the disease called typhoid fever are little plants (not bugs). They are rod-shaped. They cannot be seen unless highly magnified. They have flagella on the sides and ends of their bodies and are able to swim around in an aimless sort of fashion. It would take many thousands of them placed end to end to make a line an inch long. Several thousand million of them can be put in a glass of water without changing the appearance of it or without making it smell. They will live in water several days, and if there are no other germs present in the typhoid bacilli will live in the water several weeks. It is not known whether they will multiply in water or not. They multiply rapidly in milk without changing its appearance. It is stated by Oiler that they will live for three months in sour milk, and may live for several days in butter made from infected cream. They will live in soil for several months, and they can survive several months, and they will kill them, but boiling does in a very few minutes. Solutions of carbolic acid, creosol, chlorinated lime, bichloride of mercury and other chemical disinfectants destroy them promptly.

TypHOID germs are principally carried from the typhoid patient to a well person by means of flies and infected water, milk, dust and food. From a person sick with typhoid millions of these bacteria are passed from the body in the bowel and urinary discharges. Unless these discharges are disinfected at once and the germs killed, they may light upon the feet and the hands of the person who touches them, and carry them to the food that well people have to eat, or the infected discharges may drain into the water supply. The milk may be contaminated by infected flies or by infected dust, or the milk containers may have been washed with water that has been fattened in streams into which typhoid millions of these bacteria are passed from the body in the bowel and urinary discharges. N. Y. PASTOR PLANS SPOONING PARLORS

Rev. Dr. John R. Gunn, Formerly of Atlanta, Plans Innovation for Young Folks of New York.

New York August 9.—(Special)—Free spooning parlors with a tasteful chair in which call a piano to stir sentimentally a safe as a reminder that marriage means thrift or disaster expert advice on how to propose and every other wholesome aid that warm love for his fellow man may suggest are part of the scheme of the Rev. Dr. John R. Gunn pastor of the North Baptist church in this city and formerly pastor of the Central Baptist church in Atlanta. His is no sudden notion but the result of long and prayerful thought.

There are countless working girls living in furnished rooms who cannot receive young men in them and keep their reputations," said Dr. Gunn. "They are entitled to have some place where they may enjoy the advantages that help their more fortunate sisters to happy wifehood."

The church baptizes the infant confirms the young men and women and performs the last rites over the dead. There is no reason that it should not take up this other important office for humanity.

Dr. Gunn is also arranging to rent a house near the street from his home for working girls who do not live with their parents. He is preparing to open a night school in a room for young men who desire to become preachers but do not have the time to study at home.

Things are so different down south, said Mr. Gunn. Why even in Atlanta which is not a village by any means, but everyone knows everyone else. And up in this big northern city everything seems to whirl so fast you do not seem to have the time to stop and touch socially and I think it must be very pathetic for these young boys and girls who would like to meet one another and make friends and just can't. The church can give its part by becoming a social center and I heartily support Dr. Gunn's plan to help it do so.

Safe Left as a suggestion. We have decided to have that safe in the corner and Dr. Gunn it may help to remind them of wed after we get the spooning parlors well under way we are sure to think about opening a safe for business as a station in the church. It will be for the use of the young men and women for the older folk married or unmarried.

Not every evening of the week will be available for the spooning parlors. They will be open on Friday evening and on Tuesday evening. Meetings on the young folk will be expected to attend the services in the church.

Realizing that youth even though loving is not yet ready to be prepared to make a way to the spooning parlors so that those who seek them may be marked. It is going to be perfectly easy to go to the church and being the subject of a sermon. Moving pictures will be shown on the subject of marriage. Dr. Gunn is going to see to it that those who remain single will be permitted they Sermons on Love and Matrimony.

"How to Get a Husband and How to Keep Him and How to Get a Wife and How to Keep Her are subjects of a series of sermons which Dr. Gunn has been preaching with gratifying success. He says there is no meat for a sermon in how to be happy though single, because there is no such thing.

"I haven't much use for an unmarried man or maid," he said. "Every one should be married. Should a girl pray for a husband? Sure she should. Why shouldn't she? Every girl ought to have her chance to win the love of a good man and I am going to help as many to do so as I can reach."

His idea is to do with these parlors what social settlements are doing in providing a suitable meeting place for young men and women and what other ministers have advocated that churches do. But I think our church is the first to really do it.

My idea is to do with these parlors what social settlements are doing in providing a suitable meeting place for young men and women and what other ministers have advocated that churches do. But I think our church is the first to really do it.

These parlors will be a place for the young people to meet in a social way. A place for them to do their spooning if they want to. Wednesday night will be the principal night although the rooms will be open on other evenings.

I believe the church ought to be interested in everything that affects humanly. That why not in making hearts? In a big city like New York there is an absence of community life such as is found in smaller places. My idea is that the church should supply that need.

Mr. Gunn and I will not only champion these young people but we will be ready for consultations and welcome them. If a young man does not know how to propose to a girl I will tell him how. I have no sympathy with this talk about the high cost of matrimony. The less a pair have to start housekeeping on the greater chance there is for development of two fine characters.

No Health Certificates Demanded.

And I have not one speck of patriotism with the idea of a minister requiring a health certificate before he will wed a couple. That is the business of the state. I am interested in the spiritual of eugenics however but from an educational standpoint.

Dr. Gunn is also arranging to rent a house near the street from his home for working girls who do not live with their parents. He is preparing to open a night school in a room for young men who desire to become preachers but do not have the time to study at home.

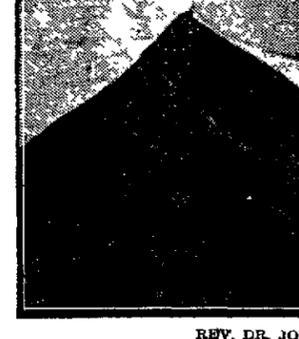

NO AIRSHIPS TO FLY OVER PANAMA CANAL

Washington August 9.—President Wilson today took the first steps to prohibit the Panama canal from being used as a route for the aerial route. He signed an executive order prohibiting any aircraft from flying over the canal zone without written authority from the War Department on penalty of $10,000 fine and a year's imprisonment for each offense.

The Famous Churchills Who Are Mixed in the Public Mind

WINSTON SPENCER-CHURCHILL, The British Statesman

WINSTON CHURCHILL, The American Author

A famous picture puzzle which many of our people on both sides of the Atlantic have not as yet satisfactorily solved is the division of the honors due to the two Winston Churchills. Both have honored the literary field—one in America and the other in England.

Some time ago The Constitution Literary Page had a review of the popular new novel 'The Inside of the Cup' by Winston Churchill the prominent American novelist but by mistake the picture of Winston Churchill the brilliant English cabinet officer, was used.

Mr. Randolph Churchill a cousin of the Englishman upon reading review of the new book recognized Hon. Winston Spencer Churchill's picture and immediately wrote us the following letter.

Your review in last Sunday's Constitution gives us the photograph of Rt. Hon. Winston Spencer Churchill of London the head of the British navy department and one of Premier Asquith's ablest cabinet ministers.

Mr. Churchill is a politician having done some literary work as war correspondent in the Boer war and not the author or even a near relative of the American author.

Mr. Winston Churchill author of these popular novels is an American he was born in St. Louis educated at Annapolis Naval Academy but now resides at Cornish N. H. He is about 40 years of age and is quite a Roosevelt politician.

It is really amusing how the Churchills get mixed in the public eye and in the papers. I was sitting in the C. & O. hotel London one day when a gentleman came in and asked if I were not Randolph Churchill I had to plead guilty and he said I am glad to meet you. I heard you speak at Congress hall I received your war correspondence from Cuba the Philippines and South Africa and I am glad to meet the world's greatest traveler who is also an author a great orator and journalist to boot.

I had to inform him that I was not in the Boer war that was the English Winston and that the American Winston Churchill wrote 'Rich and Carvel and the Crisis.' I plead guilty to speaking occasionally traveling some and that I was Randolph and not Winston Churchill.

Miscellaneous Books. From L. C. Page & Co. Boston the following books: 'The Making of Old Edinburgh' By Frederick W. Watkeys M. D. 'Rome' By Walter Taylor Field. 'Romanic Ireland' By M. F. and B. McV. 'Mardi' By J. W. and A. M. Critchank.

Silk & Kleinfelner publishers have published the following: 'The Stoenberg Affair' By Ralph A. Goodwin. 'The Knockers' Club' By Nathaniel Fowler. 'How to Obtain Citizenship' Same author.

NO MORE SPASMODIC CORNS

Got a corn that you have had for years? Tried every imaginable way to get rid of it yet there it sticks like a fish-bone grinding and torturing you at regular intervals? Here's Jacobs' Magic Corn Liquid, a new scientific preparation which will kill it instantly. The first application stops all pain. There is no possibility of danger from blood poisoning as gouging picking and other barbarously brutal methods.

Jacobs' Magic Corn Liquid will remove any corn hard or soft even a stubborn corn of many years' growth will come out clean, whole and positive without pain. Simplest treatment in the world, a scientific formula from our own laboratory, always successful, no pain, no danger. It will positively stop your suffering tonight. Write for mail order.—(Advt.)

Dorcas Society of Hollis and Buxton, G. A. Birmingham, author of "Spanish Gold" and other books, is coming to the United States to lecture. In his serious moments he is none other than J. O. Hannay, rector at Westcott County, Mass., and canon of St. Patrick's cathedral, Dublin. It is said of Hannay that he has "rediscovered" the Irishman from English literature. His later play, "General John Rogan," is still popular in London. Mr. Hannay will be under the management of William Feakins during his tour of the United States.

Do you remember "The Melting of Molly"? The author Miss Davies, has written in her characteristic way of how a southern beauty decides to break the deadlock of sex inequality by proposing to the man of her choice. "The Under Box" will be one of the popular fall books.

Miss Constance D. Aroy Mackay, author of "The Making of a Heart," is quite a popular woman and writer. She was director of a pageant given last month at Portland Maine. The music was especially composed for the occasion by William C. MacFarlane, Portland and the municipal organist.

The Jack-Knife Man, the story of a shiftless lovable near do-well, who is adopted by a little lame waif, is the next book by Ellis Parker Butler, author of "The Man in the Moon." "The New American Drama," by Richard Burton well known professor of English in the University of Minnesota and vice president of the drama league will be published in September. Dr. Burton's chief aim is to trace the growth of a native drama on American soil in place of the foreign importations so long the dominating influence.

Reginald Wright Kauffman has written another very important novel which will be published in September. The scene will be laid in New York. It is of interest that an honor that probably has never before been bestowed on an American novel has just been conferred on the author of "The House of Bondage." Before its appearance in book form in France the French translation of Mr. Kauffman's latest book is to be published as a serial in the Revue de Paris one of the trio of great French literary magazines under the editorship of Marcel Prevost the famous French novelist.

Another interesting book for September will be "Life and Times of Louis the Phœnix" by Lieutenant Colonel C. P. Haggard brother of the novelist H. Rider Haggard.

Thomas Nelson Page the new ambassador to Italy has one of his most charmingly tragic stories "The Baptism" in the fiction number of Scribner's August magazine. The Custom of the Country by Mrs. Wharton a popular serial of Scribner's is the story of the present day and the readers claim that she has put her best efforts in it.

The August Strand makes the announcement in a well written story that Mrs. Brady a well known contractor has erected at his country place a monument to the first man the reading is as follows: "This the first shaft in America is erected to the Memory of Adam the First Man." Mr. Brady said he thought it was about time something was done for poor unfortunate Adam.

Better Cooks? In the August Woman's Home Companion Zona Gale has written a very interesting article exploring the fact that so many wives chat servants are amateur cooks with out any knowledge of food values or any of the other requirements in the preparation of good and proper food. An article worth reading.

The American Review of Reviews makes the interesting statement that half of our population is living in dry territory. It says since 1868 the population of the country has doubled while the number of inhabitants of dry territory has increased over thirteenfold.

Henry Wood's recent author who appears with books this fall are Gene Stratton-Porter, Stewart Edward White, Corra Harris, Harriet T. Comstock, Mary Austin, Maurice LeBlanc, etc.

Seventy five of J. R. Shavers' most popular pictures of New York street children have been gathered into a book "The Little Shavers," for fall publication.

"A Traveler at Forty" will be an interesting book for the fall. The author Mr. Dreiser made his first trip abroad at forty and this is his record of his impressions and experiences.

The Dorcas lawn party will be given this month at Quillicote. Kate Douglas Wiggin's home in Hollis Maine. This party which is an annual affair is always eagerly anticipated and most successful. The money realized at the lawn party is given to the

"The White Linen Nurse" is a notable feature of the August Century, and it is predicted that Miss Abbott's new novel will be a popular successor of "Molly Make-Believe."

Mrs. Finley J. Shephard, nee Helen Gould, has the largest and most expensive basket ever woven by the Attu natives, the expert basket weavers of Alaska. The story is in "Alaska, an Empire in the Making," (published by Dodd, Mead & Co.)

The English critics are now busy guessing as to the real identities of the so-called behind fictitious names in "An Affair of State," by J. C. Smith. One critic says "An Affair of State is like most of us. It is most audacious."

Never give up self-study. There will always be something to learn about your ways. Sayings of William C. Redfield, the new secretary of commerce.

GOTHAM REPUBLICANS TO SUPPORT FUSION. New York, August 9.—Following the announcement of District Attorney Charles S. Whitman that he would accept the fusion nomination for the office he now holds, it was made clear today that the support of the republican organization leaders will be thrown to the entire fusion ticket headed by John Purroy Mitchell for mayor in the coming city election.

GAYNOR'S "LID" ORDER OVERRULED BY COURT. New York August 9.—Mayor Gaynor's order of March 25, closing all selling restaurants even to non-drinking diners at 1 o'clock in the morning has been overruled by a decision of three justices of the supreme court, who declared yesterday that a restaurant may serve food at any hour of the night provided the bar is closed.

A restaurant keeper who was accused of violating the law who had allowed patrons to remain eating after the closing of the bar brought the case to the supreme court for a test.

When the order was first put into effect there was much trouble on Broadway a number of persons in the midst of meals being unceremoniously ejected.

Slavery Days Better for Negroes Than Freedom Days, Declares 80-Year-Old Atlanta Colored Scrubwoman

"If my white folks were living they couldn't drive me off the old plantation," she declared as she wrung out a mop.

By Smith Clayton.
 "If my white folks were living they couldn't drive me off the old plantation in Warren county."
 Thus spoke Annette Harris, a little black woman of 80, who is the leader of the Georgia State Capitol scrub brigade from 4 in the afternoon to 8 in the evening on their mud and dirt mopping up daily tour.
 This is about the only feature of the capitol building that has not been exploited in the prints and a brief talk with the small spry negro proves that 'terebly hangs a tale.
 "Why couldn't they drive you off, Auntie?" was asked the woman.
 "Because slavery days were better than freedom days, and I'll say it anywhere to anybody, and say it till I die."
 Questioned further she declared that she is 80 years old that she was born and raised on the plantation of her former master, William H. Blount, of Warren county, Georgia, long since dead, that she came to Atlanta just after "freedom" fifty years ago, and has been working at the capitol fifteen years.

The Best Master.
 "My master," said she, "was the best man in the world. He certainly was good to me and the rest of his niggers. He used to give us little cotton patches and corn patches on which we raised stuff for ourselves, and we could go anywhere we pleased just so we behaved ourselves and did our work and had a 'pass' to keep the 'paterroler' from taking us up."
 "You had rather be a slave than a free woman?"
 "Of course I had. It was better to be a happy slave for thirty years with a good master and have everything needed given you for your work, with no trouble and no care for the future than to be fifty years free and still working hard at 80, and having to do everything for yourself."
 "You must remember, child, I was

"There was no chawngangs on the old plantation," said the aged leader of the scrub brigade as she turned to direct an assistant.
 for her say that to be a scrub woman at 80 years of age was better, even with "freedom" than the old plantation?
 "How many children have you?"
 "Only two living. I had fifteen children, eleven daughters and four sons—all gone except two, and they have to hustle for themselves and families."
 The little old woman walks a mile to the capitol every afternoon and works until about 8 o'clock at night.
 Just imagine an octogenarian on her knees under the great dome of the statehouse of a great state like Georgia with "Wisdom, Justice and Moderation" written on her coat of arms, scrubbing for dear life day in and day out the whole year round!
 Or, balancing herself on a step-ladder of graffe tallness and bathing the glassy faces of grand windows wide enough for a Pullman to pass through, and reaching heavenward in their stately height!

It is a good thing for this ex-slave, Annette Harris, that she enjoys fine health.
 "Thank the Lord," she exclaimed, "that I can still see good, and hear good, and work good, and has only a little rheumatism from working in the water, but the old home ain't what it used to be, and I'll never see the old plantation no more!"
 I threw a knotty question at her which has made philosophers tighten on their thinking caps for half a century, and is not settled yet. She met it with perfect simplicity and frankness, not to say saeness.
 "Is the negro race better off free than it was in slavery?"
 "No, sir; I don't believe it is, taking 'em altogether. Of course, some is better off, because there was good masters and bad ones, but the most of them was good. I tell you my belief. As to me, I know I was better off on the old plantation. The great body of the race can hardly be better off free because they have suffered more than they used to.

 "Here's the difference. Slaves had to work and it was a good thing they did. Free negroes don't have to work; but if they don't they suffer and get into all sorts of trouble. There's a heap more stealing and crime among negroes since slavery days than in slavery days. Don't you know that?"
They Lock 'Em Now.
 "Why, boss, in slavery days they didn't lock the doors on the old plantation. Since 'freedom' you better lock 'em and keep 'em locked. Free folks of my color that wont work are going to steal a living. That's the reason the chawngangs' full of 'em. I never heard of a chawngang on de old plantation!"
 And with this parting shot the small black leader of the capitol scrub brigade resumed her duties at the head of a column of earnest assistants whose daily task consists in mopping up the broad, smooth floors of the great building which seems to possess a powerful magnetism for mud and dust and all varieties of trash.

 I despair of giving a suitable description of Annette Harris, octogenarian leader of the enemies of all unclean matters, as she triumphantly led the charge in the name of a cleaner statehouse as one bent on the utter destruction of all vestige of the soiled.
 A pathetic figure like that, still marching, day after day, with a solemn tread from the gray milestone of the stooping octogenarian with possibly the centenary goal "the seaward of her utmost sail," could have been properly described by only one man who ever wrote English—Charles Dickens, whose mighty soul was attuned to the mellifluous music of a sympathy so universal that it swept all creed and class and color—Charles Dickens, alone, could have done justice to the little old black scrub woman for thirty years a happy slave—at 80 a poor old scrub woman—though free!

Those happy days on the old plantation are past and gone.

BROYLES TO MAKE TRY AT THE RECORD FOR 18-MILE HIKE

"I am having the time of my life doing nothing but eat, sleep and fish."
 Such was the inscription on a postcard received by Recorder Pro Tom Preston Sunday from Recorder Broyles who is spending his vacation in Highlands, N. C. Judge Broyles is in his favorite recreation ground, and from all reports is enjoying his annual outing to the full.
 Returning Judge Broyles will endeavor to establish a new mark for the eighteen mile hike to the railroad a feat of walking for which the local official now holds the record.
 Pity the man who cannot make himself feel five years younger every morning by taking a cold plunge when he gets up. And running water in the home with all its conveniences for cooking and bathing and for personal moting cleanliness and cheerfulness and self-respect is every member of the family—all this is more easily obtained than most farmers imagine it. Not long since we heard the mistress of the home on a farm worth $15,000 or more, speak of home waterworks as if they were something entirely out of reach. A complete home water supply, including bathroom fixtures and all, can be had in most cases for $200 to $400, and where a hydraulic ram can be used, the cost may be even less. No other investment of an equal amount will add more to the comfort of life or return bigger dividends if you are building a new house, but in a water supply, if you have to leave off one room you had planned, if you live in an old house, make it modern by installing a system of waterworks. Our word for it, you will never regret it.—The Progressive Farmer.

Bulgarians Are Cowards, Writes Atlanta Greek, Fighting in Balkan War

All the way from the Grecian camp on the field of battle in the Balkans a letter has come to The Constitution from an Atlanta Greek who went to the Orient to fight for his country.
 The writer is John Mehos one of the Mehos brothers who are owners of the Manhattan cafe, and a member of Atlanta Lodge No. 59, F & A M.
 Mehos left Atlanta last winter with several other Atlanta Greeks who answered the call of their country to fight the Turks. After the allies had beaten Turkey Mehos and many other American Greeks remained to fight the Bulgars. In his letter he gives some very interesting observations as to the relations between Greece and Bulgaria calling the Bulgarians "false friends" and describing the atrocities committed by them. He also describes the campaign very interestingly and ends by declaring his readiness to shed his blood at any time for his "step country"—the United States.
 The letter reads as follows.
 Editor Constitution I am sending you this from the Macedonian battlefield and I want to express with it our thanks for the liberal feelings of the American public and also to thank The Constitution, which I receive and read regularly.
 "As you know, we are fighting yet, not against the Turks, though. We finished our accounts with them and now continue our war against the Bulgarians."
 "Our war had no purpose to take away something not belonging to us we simply wanted to liberate our brothers from the Turkish rule which was cruel to them. And for that purpose we went against them with the Serbians and Bulgarians.

 But after we finished with the Turks we find out that the Bulgarians were false friends to us, because they became worse than the Turks were. They proved to be cowards, because they were killing women and children and old men. They burned out several cities, until now they have killed more than 150,000 innocent human beings and about 200,000 today are homeless Christians and Mohammedans, suffering for the only reason that they were not Bulgarians.
 "Well, in one word, they have no right to count their barbarous country among the civilized countries, and they should not be called Christians. They are a shame to Christianity.
 "I am writing you so because I know there are many people in America who think that the war is war between brothers. Bulgarians are old enemies to us, and were long before the Turks came to Europe. But because the Turks were in the middle we decided to go against them with the Bulgarians, because we thought that they had changed their mind. They didn't, yet, though, and so now we continue our fight against them. In every battle we gave them the right lesson. The battle of 'Kiklis' was a fierce one, a hundreds thousand men being on each side. The battle had an area of 80 miles and our army advanced about 150 miles north of Salonica on the Bulgarian land, and while marching against Sofia, the capital of Bulgaria, in the battle of 'Kiklis' I was struck by a bullet on the arm, but I am O. K. now.

 "As soon as the war is over I am coming back to Atlanta, and all of us (American Greeks) are ready to shed our blood for our dear old step-country—United States—whenever the time comes. Your friend.

GROCERS COMPETE FOR SILVER CUP

As the Grocers' picnic next Wednesday at Warm Springs, one of the features of the day's outing will be the baseball games played. A silver cup has been offered for the winning team by the New South bakery, of Atlanta, and the competition will be keen. The cup is now on exhibition in Maier & Berkeley's window.
 Three trainloads of grocers are expected to leave on next Wednesday morning for the Warm Springs outing, the grocery stores being closed all day. It is an annual event that is looked forward to with great anticipation by the grocers.
 Our good southern boys will pull fodder again this year because the "old man" tells them to do so, or because he has not provided other means of supporting his family. The boys ought not to do it. It is about the "meanest" work any father ever set a boy to doing, and being an "old man's" job, the old men ought to do it. No young man should be compelled to engage in such an antiquated out-of-date piece of work. Yes, fodder, pulled when the leaves are green, is good feed and is better than nothing, but why should it be this or nothing? That is simply an ignorant or lazy man's excuse.—The Progressive Farmer.

From a reader "I send you what is called the cabbage snake. Are they dangerous or poisonous? No they are perfectly harmless. The little worm called a snake is Gordius aquaticus. It hatches in pools of water and as soon as possible gets into the body of a spider or grasshopper and lives on its host and when full grown seeks some moist place to lay its eggs. You might cut them with cabbage and never know it. But they are usually in the water, leaves, attracted there by water, and are easily cleaned off.—W. E. Massey, in The Progressive Farmer.

Allen's Twice-Yearly Shoe Sale

Colonial Pump, in White Buckskin, Tan or Black Calif. Patent; a $5 value . . . $2.95

We have just finished taking inventory. It is an ambition at Allen's to close out completely each season's shoes the same season that they are produced.

It is a fixed rule not to carry anything over two seasons, as shoes change style rapidly nowadays.

There are 1,945 pairs of white, black and tan low shoes here that must be sold in the next ten days.

We are going to put a price on them that will prevent our carrying them over. The lots are small, the sizes are broken, but they are divided into three groups, according to size, for easy choosing:

We offer at $2.45 pair, all of group 5.

We offer at $1.95 pair, all of group 6.

We offer at $1.45 pair, all of group 7.

This is a splendid opportunity for ladies who wear small sizes—1, 1 1/2, 2, 2 1/2, 3, 3 1/2 and 4's; also those who wear 6, 6 1/2, 7, 7 1/2, 8.

We have reduced every low shoe in our store. Some very radically, others sharply, but every summer shoe like white and tan is cut deeply.

In our mild climate white or tan shoes are used practically all the year round, but we must make room for new fall and winter shoes—so out they go—

$4.50 and $4.00 White Canvas Pumps.	$2.95 and $2.45
$6.00 and $5.00 White Buckskin Pumps and Colonials,	$3.95 and $2.95
$2.50 to $4.50 White Canvas and White Buckskin Pumps and several styles of $5.00 ones—
Group No. 5.	$2.45
Group No. 6.	$1.95
Group No. 7.	$1.45

Tan Oxfords and Pumps, including the new rubber soles—$1.95, $2.95 or $3.95.

View From South Walk of Cox College, College Park, Ga.

It is indeed a source of pleasure to the young ladies to tour over the beautiful, picturesque historic roads of Fulton County, and a source of education for them to see the model farms, poultry plants, factories and industries of many kinds.

All summer long the workmen have been busy, renovating and remodeling the building from bottom to top, and the work on the campus has added much to its neat and attractive appearance.

The registration for the coming session is larger at this season than for many years. It is estimated that before school opens, rooms will be at a premium.

To keep well abreast of the times, Cox College has added some splendid teachers to its already strong faculty in both literary and conservatory departments.

The Academy of Cox College furnishes the best preparation for college courses. Fifteen units are required for college entrance.

SOME OF ITS STRONG FEATURES

Some of the distinctive features of Washington Seminary, Atlanta, that commend it strongly to parents seeking the best in the education of their daughters, are:

1. The exceptionally beautiful and complete equipment in grounds, buildings, furnishings and school appliances of all kinds—all on the scale of the most elegant private homes.
2. The limited boarding department, which enables the principals to make the school in reality a home for the students.
3. The personal nature of the instruction, secured by dividing classes into small sections, averaging about twelve girls to the class.
4. The OPEN AIR class rooms, connecting with each recitation room, used in all reasonable weather. The school work is thus done actually out-of-doors most of the year—a fine health feature.

August Furniture Sale

We hold but two furniture sales a year—one in February; the other in August. For the other ten months of the year, therefore, our regular prices must be low enough to compete with stores that hold sales about every sixty or ninety days. It is from these normal low prices that present August reductions have been made—10 to 20 per cent on regular lines; 25, 35 to 50 per cent on odd pieces, broken suits and discontinued patterns. Every piece of furniture we own is included in these reductions—space here to tell of only a few:

This $75 Sideboard at $40

The sideboard, just as pictured, is developed in veneer mahogany. Perfectly made of seasoned lumber, doweled and screwed with close-fitting grooves, carefully built by competent cabinet makers. It is 68 inches high, the top 60 inches long and 28 inches deep. The mirror is 48x12 inches. The nearest thing you could get to this sideboard in plain oak—not quartered oak (let alone veneer mahogany), but just plain, every day oak—would cost you $37.50. To get a sideboard of this quality in veneer mahogany at $40, therefore, is an opportunity—a most remarkable opportunity.

THE IDEA FOR THIS NOVEL & PRACTICAL DESIGN WAS ORIGINATED BY "WINIFRED WORTH"

Shirt-Waist Design for Embroidery

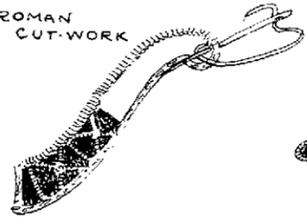

If you are acquainted with Roman cut-work you can appreciate the beauty of this design. It is not intricate at all, but you must exercise considerable patience to obtain best results. Use white floss, double thread, for making all flowers. Work the rings in eyelets, using single thread to whip the edges. Where Roman cut-work is shown (dark figures) work them over and over, or pad them to bring out each pattern in strong relief. A pair of sharp cuticle scissors will be found excellent to cut away the inner portions of the petals. Next place the goods in a frame, stretch the material tight and keep it so. Use white Battenberg thread for all woven bars. If you are not acquainted with these stitches, and understand the simple art of making French knots, you can supply them in spaces indicated for lace or net effects. On silk waists embroidered with silk floss, a novelty of rare beauty is made by supplying a background of rich-colored plush or velvet where large openwork petals are an ornamental feature. Sincerely yours,
Winifred Worth

ODDS AND ENDS

VERDIGRIS on metal can be quickly removed by rubbing with a soft rag dipped in liquid ammonia.

A SMALL quantity of vinegar boiled on the range will counteract the odor of boiled cabbage or other vegetables.

IN drawing curtains if the rent is large take a piece of an old curtain and patch the hole with it and the damage will scarcely be noticed.

CLEAN enameled bath tubs and marble wash bowls with kerosene, then rinse thoroughly with strong soapuds to remove the odor of the kerosene.

ORGANDIES, chamberays and fine chamberays may be washed without danger of fading if they be washed first in clear water in which a cupful of very coarse salt has been dissolved.

IN cleaning upholstered furniture do not bear directly upon the covering as this helps to wear it out and settles the dust in clouds, but as towels or thick cloths on top and then do the beating. These cloths should be carefully gathered up and shaken out every little while.

LAMP chimneys which have been neglected and are badly discolored may be restored by cleaning with a rag dipped in methylated spirit. When all the stains are removed polish in the usual way.

USE arrowroot to thicken fruit juices. It cooks clearly and does not destroy the color, nor cloud the transparency of the fruit.

TO clean statuary use borax. This brings the best results. A discolored tapet or coffee pot may be made to look like new by boiling in a strong solution of borax for a short time.

IN planning the wardrobe women should never neglect to supply themselves with kitchen aprons. They should be selected with a view to utility, which means that they must well cover the front of the dress and have two good, large pockets into which all sorts of things can be tumbled.

TO economize on thread raise the foot of the machine to remove garment you are sewing, but before cutting the threads lower the foot again with top and lower threads toward the back. You can then cut the threads much shorter and the foot will hold them firmly in place

EMBROIDERY "BEES"

BY EDNA EGAN.

THE present epidemic for embroidery has resulted in at least one great benefit. Old and exquisite designs are the ones which are being most copied and new ones need to be very choice to get any notice from fingers of taste. So this bee has aristocratic traditions and a family tree. The grandfathers and grandmothers of stitches are known and each worker vies with her neighbor for perfection of result.

For an embroidery bee of actual elegance, then, one must know something of the history of stitches. So ask for a book on old embroideries at the public library and astonish your friends with your knowledge of the art.

A smart embroidery bee has a stamp of antiquated elegance. Invitations recently issued to one were printed in old script on long, narrow cards and framed in a quaint outline of red and black. Two dozen ladies were invited and the request for their society on the day specified read as follows:

"Sweet Madam:

"You are hereby beseeched to bring your tapestries and linen suits to our home for an embroidery bee. The day is the coming Thursday, and the hour is 3 of the afternoon clock.

"Sweet Madam, you are beseeched also not to forget your embroidery and Excellent Appetite.

"The Red House."

When the guests arrived each one appeared in the room of sweet stitchery wearing a little ribbon-trimmed apron, finished at the bottom with a deep pocket. Low chairs were supplied for the comfort of the stitchers, and after a little work and merry talk, each guest told some story on embroidery.

One lady's tale included a ghost which haunted a house with woeful cries until the piece of embroidery which was left unfinished was found and laid out. The tale ended, of course, with the solemn declaration that this actual piece of needlework, finished by the hand of the dead, was in somebody's family. Ghosts and embroidery go together famously, but if there are squeamish guests who object to them they need not be raised.

In the middle of the room in which the guests were assembled was a table strewn with the conveniences of work—needles, bodkins, scissors, pincers, etc. At 4:30 a bite is served, this consisting of sandwiches of several sorts, tea, chocolate and fruit punch. And when the guests went home each looked as if she had been having a good time, you may be sure.

It is incumbent upon the hostess at whose house such a gathering meets to put forth her choicest linen for the occasion. If a tea table is more elegant and in keeping if there is a worked monogram at least, and, of course, there must be a vase or bowl with flowers in the table's center.

Have these flowers the ones often copied in fine needlework; that is, brief and graceful sprays. The scant flower arrangements of the vases of Japan are often copied by children in their embroidery lessons.

At one embroidery bee sandwiches of sardines, lettuce, chopped olives, fruit ices and layer cake were served. Bread and butter and tea are quite enough, however, for the bite is only to show good will and give an extra touch of gaiety.

Do not forget that embroidery bee means that all who do fine needlework in one's intimate set are invited; and when the time comes round each guest must return the spree at her own home. The opportunity thus presented for meeting gives through criticism and general talk splendid chances for increased knowledge on the subject of embroidery, and certainly such pleasant interludes are to be desired in the life of every woman fond of her needle.

The hostess of the day does not expect a special visit of thanks from the guests afterward, and when it is time for the latter to depart each putting on wraps and hat, goes directly out. With all "at home" occasions it is very bad form to return for another good-by after one has been made, for this distracts the hostess' attention from the other guests.

As to the edibles which are served from this table, they may be handed round by the hostess or by a maid in white cap and apron. Napkins are not obligatory, but the small fringed ones are in keeping, and will add much to the comfort of the guests.

The etiquette of the embroidery bee does not prohibit a straggler or two of the stronger sex. A few "nice" men may be given to understand that they can drop in at the refreshment hour, for the presence of men adds to the snap of every woman gathering. But let them understand that they must be useful afterward. He who can sing must warble his chansonette when the work begins, again, for the bee worth while lasts till 6 o'clock. And somebody else may read, recite, or tell stories of the lions and tigers of Africa, which is quite an important country at this moment.

Care of Baby's Hair.

With all the hair combing of youngsters roughness marks the danger line, so when proceeding to the head toils of their small fry let mothers remember that every yank, resulting in several torn-out hairs means a lasting sensitiveness in the child for combs and brushes and excitability of the hair grows as well. Many a bald-headed man has laid his affliction to the brutality with which his head was combed in childhood, and without a doubt this is true, for, as a rule, such heads retain a dislike for any of the manipulation which is necessary for a scalp to be in wholesome condition.

SOAP and powdered chalk mixed and rubbed on mildew spots will remove them. To expedite matters let the spotted article lie in the sun for a few hours, damping it again as it dries.

SALADS

LEKK Salad—Cut the white part of young lettuce into small, equal sized pieces. Scald a large tomato, remove the skin, leave until cold and cut into thin slices. Wash a head of lettuce, break off the leaves and arrange them on a fancy dish. Put in the sliced tomato and then the lettuce. Mix together oil and vinegar, using more of the former, dust in pepper and salt, and pour over the salad. If desired, garnish with a few tarragon leaves and small tomatoes before serving.

Chiffonade Salad—This is named from its dressing rather than for its base, which may be of lettuce, romaine, celery, tomatoes, beets or celery in season. The dressing is made as follows: Take a hard boiled egg and mash it as fine as possible with a fork, then add two pinches of paprika and a pinch of salt, half a teaspoonful of French mustard, a teaspoonful of hashed chives, two tablespoonfuls of oil and three tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Add this to the salad, mix it well and serve at once.

Dandelion Salad—Concoise—Take a quart of white dandelion, pare and wash well, using several waters; drain on a cloth arrange in a salad bowl and season with salt and pepper. Cut into dice shaped pieces two ounces of bacon and put into a frying pan over the fire until they become a golden color, which will take about five minutes. Add the dice to the dandelions. Then pour into the pan in which the bacon has been fried two tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Let it heat for half a minute, then pour in over all, mix well together and serve immediately.

NO application is better for lustrous hair than salt. Rub well into the roots of the hair at night, then tie up in a large handkerchief or wear a night cap. Brush out the salt in the morning. Several applications will show a marked improvement in the appearance of the hair.

WHEN the eyes refuse to sparkle there is usually a physical cause which needs attention. Often it is from indigestion or torpid liver, in which case careful diet and regular exercise in the open air should work a cure.

THERE is no greater mistake than to try to brighten dull eyes with drugs or drops. Eyesight is too important to be tampered with and even the common practice of putting a drop or two of cologne in the eyes to make them brilliant is injurious.

THE eye has a habit of registering the health. Thus a lack of luster, heavy lidded expression is generally the result of excessive fatigue or ill-health; a dilated pupil usually means fever; a yellowish tint to the white of the eye bespeaks biliousness, while an extreme bluishness of the white is often an indication of impure blood or a scrofulous tendency.

SHINING nose is an effect that can hardly be overcome by the ingenuity of the cosmetist. A mixture composed of one ounce of distilled water, eight minims of distilled tincture of lavender and two grains of sulphate of zinc, will, if applied with a soft piece of muslin four times daily, do much to correct the trouble. The balm should be well mixed and should not be allowed to remain overnight.

PLEASANT way to massage the face is to have one of the little rubber cups that are filled with a good cold cream and are manipulated by suction. Put it on different parts of the face and work the rubber gently. It gives a wonderfully refreshing feeling. The face should first be washed in lukewarm water.

THE merits of dioxigen as a mouth wash are not as well realized as should be. It is easy to get and not expensive. A stoppered glass bottle of it should be on every washstand. After eating, if one hasn't time to brush the teeth, the mouth should be rinsed out with dioxigen. It is a strong antiseptic, keeps the teeth from decaying and protects the top of the mouth and gums from soreness or from creating and emanating a disagreeable odor. The toothbrush should always be dipped in a little of it and brushed over the teeth and gums at morning and night, even after tooth paste is used. The latter merely cleans the teeth. It does not disinfect the mouth. People do not pay enough attention to the inside of their mouths, even though they may be scrupulous about their teeth.

A FAMOUS lotion of colonial days, known as "morning dew," consisted of one ounce of rosewater, half an ounce of glycerin, half a teaspoonful of borax and three drops of benzoin. The quantities may be multiplied, if a greater amount is needed. The lotion is applied to the chapped face, made rough from wind or exposure, with a bit of old linen.

WHEN there is the slightest natural tendency to curl a thin veil becomes an invaluable aid. Before putting it on the hair should be brushed and made ready to dress, then held loosely and moistened with a soft brush, wet with water. Finally the strands are twisted loosely near the scalp, and the head is again gone over with the wet brush. Following this grooming a thin face-veil should be put on after a small knot has been made in the middle of one selvage. This knot should be placed at the nape of the neck and the ends tied over the top of the head.

HOW TO BUY PLUMES

The plumes must be wide, pliable and without defective marks visible to the eye.

When buying a black ostrich plume always be careful to select the one with the finest gloss.

If it is the water, the plume may be redipped, but if the former it is no good except for lining and poor lining at that.

A good plume properly worn should last five years at least.

Dun blacks and brown blacks indicate a poor quality of plume or poor dyeing.

This allows for one curling a year and one—possibly two—redippings if the plume was originally a light color.

A good black plume that has been properly prepared will be pretty old and will have seen a lot of wear before it will need to be redipped.

The reason why so many good black plumes lose their color and wear is that they are scorched when being repaired.

The only remedy for this is a bath in the dreyot and offener than not the result is only a rusty black.
