"SPIES" ATTACKED BY JUDGE SPEER

He Says He Will Not Tamely Submit to Criticism of His Career—Speer Says Country Will Be Amazed.

By John Corrigan, Jr.

Washington, August 30.—(Special.) Judge Speer is quoted in The New York Sun today as denouncing the department of justice "spies" for the report, made as the result of the investigation of his career on the bench.

It was said he would not "submit tamely" to the criticisms of his private and judicial career. Influential litigants in his court, against whom adverse decisions had been rendered, were charged with responsibility for the "clamor" against him.

Vigorous Criticism of Lewis.

He vigorously criticises R. Colton Lewis, a special examiner of the department of justice, and says that a Macon banker suggested to Lewis that the persons he was examining upon the merits of the Speer charges were all hostile, and suggested other names of witnesses.

The report in The Sun continues: "The examiner," Judge Speer says, "acknowledged to the banker with a laugh that he was not there to make an examination upon the merits of the case and declined to interview any who would not testify against Judge Speer.

"Judge Speer promises that the people of this country will be amazed when they learn to what lengths these 'spies' of the department of justice will go in their one-sided espionage of the federal judiciary. He suggests that if he is to be made a victim of the existing methods he will use his downfall as a weapon to break up the system in order that other judges who may come after him will be safe in the honest and fearless discharge of the duties of their high offices.

"Otherwise," he says, "the federal judiciary will be the poorest and most abject objects among the judges of the earth. He says he hopes that God will never allow the impending disgrace to come upon the nation."

Speer's Secretary at Work.

Should Judge Speer's secretary, Warren A. Cameron, who is bombarding members of the press gallery here with matters favorable to Judge Speer, petition members of Congress also, it will add another article to the resolution of impeachment, if one is finally decided upon.

Mr. Cameron is sending out as "the friend and secretary of Judge Speer," copies of the resolutions adopted by the Georgia Federation of Labor at its annual convention in Augusta, last April, praising Judge Speer as "the just and judicious friend of organized labor."

At the top of the printed sheet is written with a typewriter "As to Congressman Bartlett's charge of tyranny and oppression."

A member of the judiciary committee which will consider the Speer case said that no member of congress has received these communications, so far as he knows.

"Should they be sent to representatives, who are to be jurors in this case, it will be construed as an attempt to improperly influence members of congress, and be included in the articles of impeachment," he declared.

LIFER FINDS WITNESS TO PROVE INNOCENCE

Will Whitfield Says Negro Will Testify Guard Met Death Accidentally.

Will Whitfield, a convict from Floyd county, who has learned to be a mechanic and was brought to Atlanta last night to be transferred to Rockdale county, where he will have charge of one of the road engines, declared while in Atlanta that since he was convicted last May for the killing of a convict guard in the camp where he was serving a disdeameanor term, that he had found a negro who saw the guard killed when his pistol accidentally dropped.

Whitfield has a life sentence before him, unless he can get his case reopened, as he hopes to do. He declares that when he was tried his lawyers refused to allow him to go on the stand and make a statement to the jury and that no defense was offered by them.

By learning to be a mechanic after being sent to the chaingang Whitfield has raised himself above the level of the ordinary convicts who labor on the roads, and will have much lighter work in handling one of the engines.

FIGHT WITH GANG HAS FATAL ENDING

John T. Miller, Watchman for A., B. & A. Building, Shoots Down Lee Maddox in the Waiting Room.

Maddox died at 2 o'clock this morning at Grady hospital.

Attacked, he claims, by rowdies as he attempted to close the waiting room of the A., B. & A. building, on Walton street, at midnight, John T. Miller, watchman, fired into the gang, fatally wounding Lee Maddox, a young man apparently about 25 years of age.

The bullet penetrated the skull and brain. The wounded man was rushed to the Grady hospital dying. Miller surrendered to Policeman T. D. Shaw, and was carried to police headquarters. He is held under a technical charge of suspicion.

The only eye-witnesses, members of the gang who assailed the watchman, escaped through the rear of the building and into Fairlie street. Detectives have been stationed at the hospital to investigate every visitor who inquires of the injured youth's condition, hoping to catch others of the crowd.

Maddox Still Unconscious.

Nothing is known of Maddox. He was unconscious from the time the wound was inflicted. Until a late hour no inquiries had been made for him at Grady. He was well dressed.

The watchman was badly beaten by the gang, which, he stated, numbered six or more. His face is swollen and scratched, the left eye was blackened and the right eye was reddened by finger gouging.

According to his story, which he told Night Chief Jett upon arriving at headquarters, Miller had gone to the waiting rooms of the A., B. & A. building, where passengers catch the Marietta suburban cars of the Georgia Railway and Power company. The last car had run at midnight, and the two rooms were dark except for the reflection of a nearby street lamp.

He closed the colored waiting room and crossed to the other. The gang of youths were talking loudly and cursing, he said, and all had been drinking heavily. The watchman stepped to the doorway and asked them to vacate. He was told that they didn't have to leave until they wanted to go.

Threatened to Call Police.

Miller stepped into the room, telling the crowd that if they did not leave, he would call the police. He was grabbed by the shoulders and forced to the floor. The entire gang piled upon him. He was pummelled on the head and face severely. As he tried to wrench himself aloose, his revolver dropped from his holster. One of the gangsters reached for it. As he did, Milller grabbed the butt end. One of his assailants caught the barrel and tried to wrest it away. The watchman pulled the trigger. The hand relaxed on the gun and the youth's body fell across the night watchman pulled the trigger once. The bunch took to their heels.

The wounded man lay bleeding and unconscious. It took Miller several moments to recover from the effects of his trouncing. As he crawled through the entrance, Policeman Shaw stepped up. Shaw was patrolling his beat over on Walton street when he heard the shot. He ran into Fairlie street and through the rear end of the car shed." Two young men were running from the vicinity of the white waiting room.

Turned Two Men Loose.

Shaw grabbed them. A third man, bringing up the rear, called out:

"Them ain't the ones. The man what did the shootin's back there with the fellow what's shot."

Shaw turned his men loose and ran to the waiting room.

He called an ambulance and took Miller in custody, carrying him to headquarters in a cab. A large crowd gathered, containing many women who appeared in scanty clothing from nearby boarding houses where they had been awakened by the shot.

Detectives are trying to find the dying boy's relatives. Hospital authorities say he cannot survive the night. The bullet entered his forehead between the eyes.

Forced to Fire, He Says.

Miller told the police that he did not intend at first to shoot, and probably would not have shot had it not been for his gun having fallen from the holster. He was forced to fire, he stated, when the gangster was trying to wrench the gun from his hand.

He stated that much trouble has been experienced, especially on Saturday nights, by gangs that habit the vicinity of the A., B. & A. building. He will be arraigned in police court Monday afternoon.

HAROLD LEWIS DROWNS IN HARBOR AT BUFFALO

His Second Attempt at Suicide, According to Asa Mattice, His Uncle.

Buffalo, N. Y., August 30.—(Special.) Harold B. Lewis, son of late Brigadier General John R. Lewis, of Atlanta, Ga., committed suicide here last midnight by drowning in the harbor at the foot of Porter avenue.

Adams Smith, watchman for the Empire Construction company, notified the police that the man jumped into the river. On the bank was found a straw hat, gray coat, pair of tan shoes and bank book bearing name Harold B. Lewis, also this note:

"Will finder please notify Asa M. Mattice, 50 Locust street, Lockport, N. Y."

Mattice, who is Lewis' uncle, declared Lewis tried to kill himself six years ago in Philadelphia. When the body is recovered the burial will be in Atlanta.

ARREST AT CAMPMEETING MAN ACCUSED BY GIRL

W. F. Thomas, Aged 68, Charged With Assaulting Griffin Child of 12.

Griffin, Ga., August 30.—(Special.)—Serious indignation is manifested here over the alleged assault against a 12-year-old girl by W. F. Thomas, a man of 68 years and the father of a family. Sheriff Hutson has arrested Thomas on a warrant of assault and battery and has carried him to Atlanta for safe keeping.

It is charged that Thomas enticed the girl to his house, which is just across the street from her home, on the pretense of wanting to give her some comic newspapers. The girl says that when she went into the house Thomas closed the door and made the assault. The child returned home screaming and crying, while Thomas made his getaway.

A warrant was issued by Justice T. F. Mills, sworn out by J. H. Glazier, Jr., a brother-in-law of the girl. Thomas was found the following mornin by the sheriff at the Mount Zion campmeeting, where he had gone to be with his wife. When arrested Thomas declared himself not guilty.

At the time of the alleged offense the girl's father was away from home guarding convicts in Monroe county.

SPIRITUALISM FIGURES IN HIS DIVORCE SUIT

St. Louis, August 30.—Stephen F. Garlock filed suit for divorce here today, in which he charged that his second wife inveigled him to a spiritualistic seance where she called up the spirit of his first wife, who advised him to transfer his property to his second wife. He refused to transfer the property, he said, and then his living wife called him names.

$200,000 Loss by Fire.

Nashville, Tenn., August 30.—Columbia, an important town 50 miles south of here, was visited by a disastrous fire at 3:30 o'clock this morning. The damage is estimated at $200,000.

"UNCLE DUDLEY" DIES AFTER SHORT ILLNESS

Body Will Be Taken to Macon for Funeral Services and Interment.

John G. Postell, affectionately known to his intimates as "Uncle Dudley," editor of the Poultry Department of The Constitution, and a man universally esteemed and beloved by all who knew him, died at his home, 30 South Gordon street, Saturday night at 11 o'clock, surrounded by his sorrowing family.

Mr. Postell was 73 years of age, and about two months ago was compelled to give up active work. He had been confined to his bed for several weeks. Of a genial, sunny nature, with a kind, cheery word for everyone with whom he came in contact, Mr. Postell had endeared himself to a wide circle of friends who will deeply mourn his loss.

Served in Civil War.

Mr. Postell was born in May, 1841, in Orangeburg, S. C., where he made his home for many years. When the war between the states was declared, Mr. Postell enlisted in the Washington Light Infantry of South Carolina, better known as the "Handsome Legion," and served throughout the entire war. He took great pride in stating that he served in every campaign as a private, shouldering his musket and fighting for the south with the other non-commissioned men. He was a member of Macon Camp, U. C. V.

Shortly after the war "Uncle Dudley" engaged in the railroad business in his home state. He was married in 1867 to Miss Lizzie Walton, of Fort Valley, Ga. About thirty years ago, Mr. Postell removed with his family to Macon, where he continued in the railroad business for a number of years, giving up this work to engage in writing expert advice on the care of poultry.

Expert on Poultry.

He was considered by a large number of people the highest authority on poultry in the south, and was always in demand as a judge at all big poultry shows held in this part of the country. While in Macon, where he resided for 22 years before coming to Atlanta five years ago, Mr. Postell was for many years chaplain of the city fire department.

Mr. Postell is survived by his wife, two daughters, Miss Mary Postell, of Atlanta, and Mrs. Charles C. Martin, of Macon, one son, R. C. Postell, of Tifton, Ga., and two sisters, Misses Lou and Julia Postell, of Macon.

The body will be taken to Macon for the funeral services, which will be held in the Mulberry Street Methodist church, of Macon, of which church he was an active member Monday afternoon. Rev. W. N. Ainsworth, pastor of the church, will officiate. The interment will be in the family plot of the Rose Hill cemetery.

COMETS INFLUENCE ACTION OF THE SUN

San Jose, Cal., August 30.—Professor A. Orta, of the observatory of the University of Santa Clara, today announced that he had discovered that the activity o fthe sun in phenomena, known as sun spots, is intimately related to the proximity of comets.

He said that during a period of 164 years fo date there have been 238 comets (their return included), which apparently have influenced the action of the sun, having their perhelia coincidentally with the minima of spot frequency.

BEATEN BY ROBBERS, MAN OF 60 MAY DIE

Found Unconscious on Street With No Papers to Give Clue to His Identity.

A well dressed man, apparently about 60 years of age, was found by the police Saturday night shortly before midnight, lying on the curb near the corner of Decatur and Butler streets in a serious condition from a knife wound in the back.

Absolutely nothing was found on the man which will prove a clue in aiding the police in his identification, and the entire affair is shrouded in deepest mystery. It is the theory of the police that he was set upon by robbers, who took everything from his pockets after inflicting the wound, even to the papers which he carried in his pockets, and which would probably have made the task of locating his relatives or friends a relatively easy one for the police department.

The man is said by the authorities of Grady hospital, where he was taken for treatment, to be in a most serious condition, and it is more than possible that he will die from the effects of the wound without regaining consciousness. Detectives have been set to work on the case, but unless the assailants can be run to earth, the police have but little hope of solving the mystery of the man's identity.

AVIATOR IS INJURED BY FALL OF AEROPLANE

London, August 30.—Andrew De Buissey, an aviator, and two passengers, were badly injured by the fall of an aeroplane this evening. De Buissey had raced his machine at Hendon in the afternoon, finishing second in the contest. He then started for Aldershot with the two passengers to deliver the machine to the army authorities. Near Maidenhead the engine went wrong. De Buissey tried to volplane, but in the descent the machined turtled fifty feet from the ground. De Buissey, who was pinned under the wreckage, was the most severely hurt of the trio.

HUERTA RECRUITING ARMY AND IS PLACING TROOPS ALONG AMERICAN BORDER

ACTUAL SITUATION OF HUERTA REGIME WILL BE REVEALED

President Wilson Thinks That Something Will Happen in the Mexican Republic in a Short While.

BETTER FOR AMERICANS TO GET OUT OF COUNTRY

When the Expected Explosion Occurs It Is Said That a Discontented Army Might Be Uncontrollable.

Washington, August 30.—With President Wilson at the summer capital in Cornish, N. H., Secretary of State Bryan lecturing in Pennsylvania and Maryland, and the secretary to the president, Mr. Tumulty, spending the week-end in New Jersey, the waiting policy of this government in the Mexican situation becomes more emphasized today.

Before Secretary Bryan and Mr. Tumulty left Washington early in the day, messages were received from John Lind, the special American envoy at Vera Cruz, which added assurances to the already confident attitude of the administration. Secretary Bryan asserted nothing had been received to cause any discouragement.

Lind at Vera Cruz.

Mr. Lind, it was authoritatively stated, had no thought of returning to the United States at this time, and was ready to proceed again to Mexico City at a moment's notice. It was the general opinion, however, that he would remain at Vera Cruz for some time, keeping in touch, through Charge O'Shaughnessy, of the American embassy in Mexico City, with the actual condition of the Huerta provisional government and aiding American citizens who desired to return to this country.

President Wilson's urgent appeal to Americans in Mexico to leave the country was declared to have been determined upon after wise counsel, not alone because of the present situation in Mexico but because of conditions which might develop in spite of the efforts of the provisional government to prevent any harm coming to foreigners.

Early Developments Expected.

It was recalled that President Wilson, in his message to congress Wednesday, laid special emphasis on the suggestion that "the actual situation of the authorities at Mexico City will presently be revealed," and that "the situation must be given a little more time to work itself out in the new circumstances." That the administration is content to give the situation plenty of time to work itself out is demonstrated by the present attitude of the president and his advisers, and is regarded as one of the explanations for Special Envoy Lind remaining in Vera Cruz. Under no circumstances, it was learned, would Mr. Lind leave Mexico at this time. Not only would his departure be an indication that this government had abandoned hope in the situation, but it is thought it would have a depressing effect upon Americans who chose to remain in the country.

The provisional Mexican government, it has been pointed out, is encountering financial difficulties, and there have been intimations that there might be a change in the government personnel which would open the way to negotiations upon a definite basis that would lead to an election for the Mexican presidency under constitutional regulation.

With Huerta Eliminated.

Washington officials seem to be convinced that Senor Gamboa's second note gave assurance that Huerta would not be a candidate for election under any circumstances. With Huerta removed from the possibilities, it has been suggested, this government could make concessions with strict adherence to the fundamental grounds of the original proposals to the defacto Mexican government. But until some such development, the administration has ground for the belief that there is danger to Americans remaining in Mexico, because of the straits in which the provisional government finds itself. A discontented army it has been suggested, might become uncontrollable.

Secretary Bryan, before he left Washington for the day, did not discuss the protest which came from Mexico City against President Wilson's advice to Americans to leave the country.

RESENTMENT SHOWN AT ORDER FOR EXODUS

New York, August 30.—President Wilson's recommendation that American residents of Mexico leave the country, is "resented" by the American colony in Mexico City; few Americans intend to leave; if they do leave, their welfare and financial interests "would be seriously prejudiced;" the president's action was "unwarranted" and due to "simple ignorance of what is actually transpiring in Mexico"—this summarizes the contents of various telegrams of protest received in the city yesterday and today from Mexico City.

Senor Sebastian Camacho, president of the Mexican senate, and one of Mexico's elder statesmen, telegraphed Every Planter in the Mexican Republic Is Ordered to Arm and to Equip for Service Ten Men.

ALL ABLE-BODIED MEN ARE FORCED INTO ARMY

Streets of Mexico City Daily Traversed by Marching Students—Hundreds of Americans Fleeing From Mexico.

Mexico City, August 30.—With negotiations between the United States and Mexico looking to a continuation of peace, at a standstill, Mexico has issued orders for a new disposition of the troops and for the militarization of all able-bodied men in that portion of the republic under control of the central government.

To Guard the Coasts.

There also will be a general shifting of headquarters to cities along both coasts and the northern frontier. General Robles, who has been in command of operations in the south against the Zapata forces, has been transferred to Acapulco, on the west coast. General Joaquin Maas will go from Guadalajara to Manzanillo. General Eugenio Rascon will be sent to Progreso on the coast of Yucatan. General Mercado will be transferred from Chihuahua to Juarez.

It is announced that to each general have been sent instructions of importance, but their character is not revealed. The war department, in explanation of these changes, say that the revolutionary conditions no longer demand the presence of these men in the interior, and that their new positions will enable them better to guard against smugglers.

To Drill All Able-Bodied Men.

Recently orders were issued to every governor and jefe politico to organize and drill all able-bodied men under their respective jurisdictions for the ostensible purpose of taking part in parades September 16, National Independence day. The minister of interior, Dr. Urrutia, has notified every planter in the republic to arm and equip for service ten men. This is for the purpose of defending individual properties against bandits, it having pointed out that the revolutionary conditions had so far abated that the only menace to these properties was from bandits.

Students Parade Streets.

The streets of the capital are daily traversed by marching students, armed with rifles under officers of the regular army. Not infrequently whole companies of boys from 12 to 15 years are seen, and occasionally there passes a company of poorly dressed youngsters typical of the bootblack and newsboy element.

These have been caught by the wave of enthusiasm, but the parading students, while professing willingness, have been left little choice since the government order that students in all government schools shall be subjected to military training.

The minister of foreign affairs, Senor Gamboa, is still awaiting a reply from the America envoy, Mr. Lind, to his last note, but if there have been any further exchanges, the fact has not been admitted by either the foreign office or the embassy. Many telegrams and letters congratulating General Huerta on the "patriotic and virile stand," as he has taken before the "collous of the north," continue o be published.

Many Americans Leaving.

Refugees from interior points are beginning to arrive here. The trains tonight proceed to Vera Cruz with a heavier American passenger list than on any night since the warning from Washington for Americans to leave Mexico. Consul General Shanklin's office was visited by an unbroken stream of Americans seeking information regarding the warning and some asking for transportation. To all Consul Shanklin has showed his instructions and impressed upon them that Washington's warning "is to leave at once."

Hundreds of Americans of the better class are availing themselves of free transportation. Many others, by no means paupers, but caught short of funds, with no market for anything they may have for sale, are forced to consider the proposition. Consul Shanklin has been bombarded with questions as to what is to be done for them while they are waiting for a vessel at Vera Cruz, or on their arrival in the United States, and whether the United States will furnish transportation to their homes or relatives.

Don't Try to Make Over Your Friends.

In the September American Magazine, David Grayson, author of "Adventures in Contentment," writes a dissertation on "The Friendly Road," entitled "I Grapple With the City." The following is an extract:

"I remember how, once in my life, I wasted untold energy trying to make over my dearest friends. There was Harriet, for example, dear, serious, practical Harriet. I used to be fretted by the way sh ewas forever trying to clip my wing feathers—I suppos eto keep me close to the quiet and friendly and adventurous roost! We come by such a long, long road, sometimes, to the acceptance of our nearest friends for exactly what they are. Because we are so fond of them we try to make them over to suit some curious ideal of perfection of our own—until one day w esuddenly laugh aloud at our own absurdity (knowing that they are probably trying as hard to reconstruct us as we are to reconstruct them!) and thereafter we try no more to change them, we just love 'em and enjoy 'em!"

Married Eight Times in Week.

(From The Chicago Tribune.)

Women, as a rule, are more given to the marrying habit than men, though no woman has reached the world's marrying record made by George Witzoff, the notorious bigamist, whose marriages totaled over 100. In one week he went through eight ceremonies.

Almost as strange a case was that of a Russian woman condemned not long ago to Siberia. She had been married to twenty husbands and had treated them all alike, running away from each in turn and taking all their portable property with her. She was a most attractive woman and highly educated.

A woman named Schmeyer, of Pennsylvania, was sent to prison not long ago for bigamy. Though she was only 27 years old she had married twelve men in ten years. Her only comment in court was that she had liked them all.

A Boer woman named De Beers, whose sixth husband died recently, is the proud mother and stepmother of forty-nine children, while her grandchildren number 270. Four of her six husbands were widowers, all with fairly large families when she married them.

GLAD TO ESCAPE WITH THEIR LIVES

American Refugees From Mexico Reach New Orleans. Refugees Penniless and Are Being Aided by Red Cross.

New Orleans, August 30.—After having lost everything they owned and glad to escape with their lives, several American refugees from Mexico arrived here late today. On the City of Tampico, arriving from Vera Cruz, were twenty-three Americans, many of whom came from the interior and had nothing but the clothes they wore. They said their passage was arranged for by the American government, and here they expected to be taken care of for a time with state department funds. That, however, was not forthcoming and tonight at least eight of the party, including one woman, waited on the dock until John L. Cannon, personally, took charge of them.

Couldn't Hear From Washington.

Mr. Cannon, president of the Hibernia Trust company, has charge of the red cross funds in New Orleans. Some time ago he was instructed, he says, to take care of any American refugees that might arrive from Mexico. He understood he was acting as agent for the state department, and that the red cross was to do the detail work of placing state department funds appropriated for this purpose. He was instructed, he says, however, not to take any such action until specifically ordered. When it became known these refugees were to arrive today Mr. Cannon says he so informed the state department and asked for instructions. None came, he said. He wired again today, he said, late tonight nothing had been recived from Washington, and without definite instructions Mr. Cannon would not take action in the name of the red cross.

Fourteen of the party came from Durango, the capital of which has been in the hands of rebels for some time. Mrs. Mary A. Brackett told of repeated visits of rebels to her home, and with drawn pistols and sabres demanding anything she might have in her home. After several such visits the home was stripped of almost everything.

Robbed on Journey.

During the overland trip from Durango with her son, Frank S. Brackett, of Idaho, the party was robbed, but allowed to proceed with their wagon and clothes, but nothing else. Brackett wa sa miner and had to abandon his workings. Frank Abbott, also a miner, on one occasion was held up by rebels and told he was to be shot. He was ordered to remove his clothes. He refused, so they tied him to a tree with his clothes on. Just as six men were ready to fire he said the officer ordered him untied. Why, he does not know. Again he was ordered to remove his clothes and obeyed. The rebels left him unhurt, but naked.

"The killing of the Englishman, Palmer, in a Durango mining office, seems to show that the Mixicans dislike all foreigners, not particularly Americans," said Frank S. Brackett, "Because he would not open a safe, the combination of which he did not know, they shot Palmer dead. It is not a case of who the foreigner is, it's simply money and supplies they want, and they are willing to kill anyone to get them."

ACTUAL SITUATION OF HUERTA REGIME

to James A. Scrymser, president of the Mexican Telegraph company, saying that the American colony is "satisfied and tranquil," and requesting him to call President Wilson's attention "to the tremendous damages which would result from his determination, for which, in all loyalty, I state that there is no reason."

The Methodist Episcopal board of foreign missions received advices from Dr. John W. Butler, superintendent of its mission in Mexico City, saying that the "Washington instructions for an American exodus" were "much resented" by the American colony; that the missionaries there objected to leaving.

In view of this protest the Methodist board, the Presbyterian board and those of other denominations have declined to advise thier missionaries to leave the country, recommending only "that the women and children be recalled to places of safety."

The Mexican Telegraph company received a telegram from its superintendent in Mexico City, Charles E. Cummings, saying that there was "a strong reaction from the first scare caused by President Wilson's command to leave Mexico," and that in his opinion a "very small proportion of the American colony here will go."

DIAZ IS CANDIDATE FOR THE PRESIDENCY

London, August 30.—"I am now definitely a candidate for the office of president of Mexico," General Felix Diaz, who recently arrived here from Canada, told the Associated Press this morning.

"My friends in Mexico are working in my behalf" continued General Diaz. "Unfortunately, at this distance, I myself am unable to do much, but I am awaiting instructions which may simplify matters.

"Even if I am ordered to proceed to Japan, it is not certain that I shall go there. My action will depend upon developments in Mexico."

Felix Diaz apparently is pleased with the course of events in Mexico. He said the contention that Victoriano Huerta's candidacy for the presidency was barred by the Mexican constitution was quite correct. He declared the fact that he was still an official representative of the Mexican government debarred him from discussing President Wilson's message or the Mexican replies.

SOUTHERN METHODISTS TO GET OUT OF MEXICO

Nashville, Tenn. August 30.—In line with President Wilson's recent message, the mission board of the Southern Methodist church has ordered its missionaries out of Mexico. Telegrams to this effect have been sent to the six missionary centers there. On a peace footing the church maintains forty-six missionaries there, but at present only about twenty-five are in the field. A number of these have replied, asking to be allowed to remain. No action has been taken on such requests.

The Southern Presbyterian board has not yet issued orders. This church has eleven missionaries, but only five are in the field.

TO RUN REFUGEE TRAINS FOR THE AMERICANS

El Paso, Texas, August 30.—As a result of President Wilson's message ordering Americans out of Mexico, about a hundred of the Americans in Chihuahua will leave there on a special train for the United States this week. The order of the president has just filtered into the interior parts of the state, and many of those who were preparing to stay in Mexico last week and face existing conditions when the special train of American refugees from Madera, Chihuahua, passed through the city, are now preparing for flight.

Telegrams received here today from Chihuahua stated that negotiations were being carried on with General Mercado for permission to run refugee trains to the border. Americans from the camps and outlying districts of the state are hurrying into Chihuahua to join the exodus. They are leaving their properties and possessions in the custody of Marion Letcher, American counsul at Chihuahua.

There are not more than 200 Americans left in the city of Chihuahua. Before the rebellion broke out, the Americans in Chihuahua numbered at least 5,000.

NO DANGER OF WAR, SAYS SPEAKER CLARK

Unity Maine, August 30.—"There is no danger of war with Mexico; they are fixing that all right," declared Speaker Clark, speaker of the house of representatives, to an audience here today. He was here speaking for a democratic candidate in a congressional bye-election. Mr. Clark said he expected congress would remain in session until it expired by limitation, December 1.

FEDERALS PREPARING TO VACATE JUAREZ

El Paso, Texas, August 30.—Juarez tonight is being stripped of every available fighting arm, its artillery and all arms and ammunitions, in preparation for a trip to Chihuahua City tomorrow morning on a special train to reinforce the federal garrison which is threatened by General Carranza's combined rebel forces of 8,000 men. Carranza has swept away the federal outposts in his advance on the city, and his victorious rebels are rushing in to make the main attack on Chihuahua.

Military Governor Salvator Mercado telegraphed the Juarez military authorities to hurry as many of the federal troops as possible to Chihuahua, and active preparations to move the troops' train are being carried on.

Besides the federal troops, many city volunteers are being impressed into service with the regulars. Only a sufficient force to police the town will be left in Juarez. General Francisco Castro, federal commander in Juarez, will command the troops which will go to Chihuahua.

The order for mobilization of all federal forces in Chihuahua has been general throughout the state, and refugees arriving from Chihuahua today stated that General Caraveo and other federal commands who have been operating along the Mexico Northwestern railway have been called to Chihuahua.

General Salazar with his 600 federals had departed from Villa Ahumado for Chihuahua.

Tonight unconfirmed reports of fighting in Chihuahua were heard at the border, but the federals in Juarez denied that Carranza had made the attack on the federals' stronghold. A rumor that General Pascual Orozco and the volunteer federals had revolted against Huerta in Chihuahua also was denied by the federals.

1,200 CLUBS AT WORK FOR GEN. FELIX DIAZ

Mexico City, August 30.—Since the withdrawal of the Diaz-de la Barra ticket some months ago through announcements made by the respective candidates, the partisans of General Feliz Diaz have continued active in his behalf for the presidency. There has been no formal announcement, however, of General Diaz's candidacy, since then, nor has any other candidate for the vice presidency been put forward in place of Senor de la Barra.

The leading supporters of General Diaz assert there are 1,200 clubs organized throughout the republic to work for him. Under Mexican practice the holding of conventions for nomination is unnecessary, a formal declaration of their choice by the various groups of partisans being sufficient.

AMERICANS ARE HELD IN BESIEGED TORREON

Eagle Pass, Texas, August 30.—Invested by 10,000 rebels and defended by 5,000 federals, Torreon, state of Coahuila, Mexico, holds a number of Americans who have been refused permission to leave the besieged city, according to three American refugees who arrived here today. The trio, Frank and Milton Chisum, and Andrew Odel, escaped after General Bravo, the federal commander, had said no American could quit the place. They procured mules and, unharmed, made the journey of 600 miles to Piedras Negras, the rebel headquarters, opposite Eagle Pass. The men said the federals in Torreon burn their dead each day, and that disease has been largely prevented. A scarcity of food, however, is occasioning much suffering among the poor.

Incident to the investment of the city, the refugees said, six Americans, members of the constitutionalist army, were captured recently and summarily executed. Losses in recent engagements, they believe, are not near-

Black parts of the map show where constitutionalists are in active control, according to reports. The shaded part (Chihuahua) shows where military operations were recently suspended. more than 300 or 400 on each side. The Huerta forces have thirty cannon and forty machine guns; the constitutionalists are but poorly equipped in this respect.

The refugees were unable to give even approximately the number of Americans in the besieged city.

REBELS WIN VICTORY OVER MEXIC FEDERALS

Nogales, Ariz., August 30.—Another constitutionalist victory was reported here today. Official advices stated that the federals were repulsed by state forces at San Blas with heavy loss.

One hundred federals were wounded or killed in the engagement and forty-four were taken prisoners. Casualties no the constitutionalist side were insignificant, it was reported.

Douglas, Ariz., August 30.—At the close of a twenty-four hour engagement in which the casualties are reported to have been heavy on both sides, the Sinaloa state troops captured the city of Tepolobampa, according to advices to the Mexican junta here today. The constitutionalists were marching on Tepolobampa when 1,000 federals disembarked from the south. Fighting began almost immediately.

Lucky Baldwin's Conversion.

In the September American Magazine Peter Clark MacFarlane begins a new series of articles entitled, "Those Who Have Come Back." It is a series showing how men and women "down and out," failures or disgraced at forty, have taken a new hold on life and are today reputable and helpful members of the community. The first story in the series is about "Lucky" Baldwin, a celebrated New York "sport" and confidence man who was converted a good many years ago in the Jerry McAuley Mission, and now runs a mission of his own in Chicago. Following is the story of Baldwin's first connection with a gospel meeting which he fell into for the purpose of getting free coffee and sandwiches. The story goes on:

"He sat through a large part of this meeting in a kind of bestial slumber, but with occasional lucid intervals, when he stared about stupidly, heard the testimonies that men around him were giving, and got some glimmering idea of the picture of a clean life that was being painted.

"As he listened in his maudlin way some sense of what it meant got through Lucky's ridged and knotted skull. He weighed it all swiftly against his own 'game,' and concluded that the new scheme was better. The leader of the meeting was deaf, nd was wearing a thing like a telephone receiver upon his head.

"'Tell dat guy to telephone to Gawd dat I'm a-comin'!' Lucky called out as he rose and went lurching up the aisle. He sank on his knees with a row of supplicants, and was soon asleep, so that when Mr. Wyburn, the superintendent of the mission, who himself had been reclaimed from drunkenness upon that floor, came to him he had to be awakened. As Mr. Wyburn, kneeling before the poor wretch, told the story of the sufferings of the One who went to the Cross, and that it was all for him. Lucky felt himself strangely moved. A lump came into his throat. He swallowed at it in vain. Something scalding hot was washing down his cheeks and splashing on the stained bottom of the chair. Lucky gazed at these drops in surprise for a moment without recognizing them. They were tears, his tears, the first he had shed since boyhood.

"'Now pray the publican's prayer, brother,' advised Mr. Wyburn gently.

"To his surprise the drunkard rose up hotly, his face like a red and angry sun. 'I ain't no republican,' he declared with a look of loathing; then added proudly, 'I'm a democrat; that's what I am, ev'ry time!'

"This revealed two things, the man's deplorable ignorance and his admirable loyalty. Lucky was an adherent of the Tammany organization. Here was a subject upon which he had convictions. He would not have prayed a republican prayer to get himself out of the lowest hell.

"Yet Lucky did pray that night, and then got up and rocked out into the street. The missionaries had given him a bed ticket, but he was afraid to go to bed. He walked the streets all night, and his feelings were the strangest that had ever come to him. He thought of his wasted life, caught a vision of its awfulness, and terrible remorses overwhelmed him, while he dreamed at times of getting some honest work to do among Christian people. The idea of turning back, after his new resolutions there in the mission, never once occurred to him. Lucky was not a quitter. He had played one string out to the end. Now he was entering upon another."

Honesty and Baseball.

The editor of the American Magazine in the September number of that publication, makes the following comments on honesty and baseball in the course of a long and exceedingly interesting editorial:

"Baseball is one of the most highly and delicately organized activities in the world, and yet it is clean as mountain air. It is an immense

Graduates of Cornell Will Aid Leo M. Frank in Fight for Life

Leo M. Frank, recently convicted on the charge of murdering Mary Phagan, is to receive aid in his battle for life and liberty from the alumni of Cornell university, of which institution he is a graduate, according to dispatches received in Atlanta Saturday night from New York city, where the movement was started some days ago.

T. B. Strauss, a prominent Cornell alumnus, is heading the movement, and it is stated that circular letters will be sent out to Cornell graduates throughout the country asking their co-operation in the effort to establish Frank's innocence. It is further stated in articles recently published in New York that it is possible that a subscription will be taken up to make up a fund to finance his defense.

Frank's latest method of amusing himself in his prison cell is to solicit the autograph of every visitor. He is insistent on this point before he will see anyone, it is stated, and it is estimated that he has already accumulated hundreds upon hundreds of signatures. He is keeping a diary of each day's happenings, and faithfully sets down every detail of each hour. He writes down the time to the very minute at which anyone visits him, what time they arrive, and what time they leave. He is equally consistent in jotting down the time at which he eats, how long it takes him to finish each meal and at what time he arises, and not even the smallest detail of the hours in which he is awake is allowed to escape a place on his record.

It Certainly Was Some Story When It Reached California

Millwood, Ga., August 30.—(Special.) Kipling wrote a story once about a newspaper paragraph which made a tour around the world, informing every nation that Allah allowed the tiger one rupee, 8 annas for his food, and when the paragraph finally completed the journey back to the little paper in India, where it started, Blawkins, who originated it, discovered that his figures were wrong and all the world had been misinformed. It should have been one rupee, and nothing more.

On Sunday, uly 27, The Constitution printed a little story about a rantankerous bull which broke up a negro campmeeting at Millwood. It appears the bull had attacked a burning tar bucket, with the result that the burning tar stuck to its horns. With its horns aflame, the bull rushed into the arbor meeting of the colored brethren and stampeded it.

Whether this piece of intelligence will circuit the world is doubtful, but by August 2 it had got as far as the Pacific coast. But when it got that far the handful of devout negroes, all of whom escaped injury, had become a thousand white people, of whom fifty were injured. Citizens in Millwood are now receiving letters from their friends all over the west to know if any of their relatives here were injured by the mad bull.

People here were at a loss to know the meaning of the letters for the negro campmeeting incident had been forgotten, until Tom Starling, formerly of Millwood, but now of Damo, Cal., sent the following clipping from a California paper:

Millwood, Ga., August 2.—With his head on fire and bellowing furiously, a big bull charged a camp meeting here and stampeded the congregation.

There were a thousand persons under the stand and the preacher was discoursing on the horrors of hell fire when the blazing bull charged. Many of the congregation, under the spell of the preacher's description of hell, thought the bull was the devil himself and trampled one another in the rush to escape.

Over 50 persons were injured, but none fatally. So frightened were the people that even after the appearance of the flaming bull was explained they refused to return to the camp meeting.

The bull had been on the range and rubbed his head against turpentine boxes until it was covered with tar.

When the bull was driven home there was a fire in the pen. The bull charged the fire and his head was ignited. In agony the blazing animal dashed away and charged the camp meeting.

Work Before Federal Commission on Industrial Relations.

Reviews for September.)

Back and forth the pendulum swings. This summer it is the National Association of Manufacturers which has been charged by one of its former agents with fighting labor underhand—not in the open, but secretly, by hiring turncoats to betray the unions. Two years ago it was a national labor organization which was charged by one of its former agents with fighting capital underhand—not in the open, but stealthily, by hiring dynamiters to blow up buildings and bridges.

So the advantage tilts and swings from one side of the industrial cleavage to the other. If the average citizen were sure that the pendulum really was getting us further along in the day, bringing us to a better understanding for the world's work, he might be content to let it take its course, biding the time. But is it? Or are we wasting precious energies in industrial contention which might be turned to good account if men and managers were not so frequently and needlessly set at loggerheads. Not that their interests will ever be identical. We do not expect those of shipper and railroad to be identical—even under government ownership; but we have found that it pays to put an end to rebates, discriminations and unreasonshearing away needless injustices and irritations so that common interests can be affirmed and developed, and so that conflicting interests can come to equilibrium with the least friction.

This, in essence, has been the motive back of the movement for the industrial relations commission which has been appointed by President Wilson, and which is to enter upon a three years' plan of work at a probable outlay of $500,000.

SAVANNAH HOTEL BEST IN THE SOUTH

So Say the Traveling Men—Low Summer Rate On Now.

The citizens of Savannah decided that their hotel accommodations were not adequate to the city's growth and progress, so they just subscribed a million dollars and erected one—the Hotel Savannah.

In comparison with other southern hotels, it doesn't take second place, either. Its furnishings are unusually attractive, and its conveniences are right up to the minute. It is on a par with many of New York's best hostelries.

It is located on the site of the old Screven House, right in the heart of the city, which makes it particularly convenient for traveling men. They are patronizing it, too. Aside from its attractiveness and conveniences, and splendid cuisine, it has an atmosphere of absolute comfort that makes it mighty inviting. That's why it appeals especially to the traveling public—their every comfort is assured.

Hotel Savannah is proving very popular, and as its rates are less than other hotels of the same class, its patronage will certainly continue to grow.

The Newcomb Hotel company (owned by J. A. and S. J. Newcomb) has the management in charge, thereby insuring a maintenance of its high standard.

$25,000 REBATE ASKED BY MAYOR

J. G. Woodward Says Atlanta Should Get Lower Price for Fire and Police Alarm System by Cash Payment.

After a two-hour conference with representatives of the Okenite company of New York, the corporation affiliated with the Gramwell company in the contract for installing the new $106 000 fire and police system Mayor James G Woodward stated that he demanded a rebate of $25 000 from the contract price on the basis of a cash settlement

The mayor's proposal is being carried to New York by J H Underhill the representative of both corporations He declared that negotiations will be opened with the city immediately upon his arrival

System to Cost $81,000

If the mayor's demand is assented to the city will get the system for $81,000 Under the contract the city is obligated to pay $106 000 in installments covering a period of five years The payments carry interest at the rate of 7 per cent equivalent to $10 000

I am not taking any unfair advantage of the company Mayor Woodward explained Saturday In my inaugural address in January I put the contractors and the city officials who made the contract on notice that there were discrepancies in the contract and that I would make a investigation I called attention at that time to the fact that the contract was based on a moral obligation and that I was going to oppose it I am now preparing to carry out the promise I made to the people

Mayor Woodward has also informed the Okenite company's representative that the city will not pay $10 per box for signal stations for the reason that the patent on the boxes has expired and the price has been reduced $50 on each box

Bids Not Itemized

I was amazed by the fact that the bids were not submitted in itemized form The Okenite company bid on the cable and wiring in a lump sum and the same thing was done in the instance of the Gramwell company bidding on the fixtures and electrical features There is no way of even estimating by reading the bids just how much the city is paying the Okenite company per foot for installing the cable and likewise there is no way of reaching an idea as to how much the city is paying for switch boards

While Mayor Woodward has based his proposition on a section of the $81 000 cash he will if is understood entertain any proposition which carries a rebate of $14 000 or better

The new fire alarm system is nearly complete according to City Electrician R C Turner who despite Mayor Woodward's assertion that the system is not the best to be secured for the money declares that it is one of the best and that the city is getting value He takes the position however that Mayor Woodward is correct in his demand for a rebate for cash

The city has already paid the company $6 000 on the contract The payment represents work and material furnished on estimated by the city electrician

PLANNING UNIFORMITY OF COURT PROCEDURE

Interstate Conference of Judges at Montreal—To Eliminate Delay

Montreal August 30—The first interstate conference of judges since the United States of America became a nation met here tonight to plan for uniformity of judicial procedure The conference was preliminary to the annual meeting of the American Bar association which opens here Monday Every state was represented most of them by the presiding judges of their courts of last resort There were present also judges representing the nine federal circuit courts of appeals and the federal courts of Hawaii Porto Rico and the court of appeals of the District of Columbia

The aim of the conference is to eliminate delay and reduce the expenses of litigation The judges wish to have the courts released from some of the statutes that now bind them and left free to make their own rules It was suggested that the supreme court have superintendence over the rules of pleading and practice in all federal and state courts and gradually bring about uniform court procedure

Thomas W Shelton of Virginia chairman of the commission on uniform judicial procedure of the bar association presided In his address Mr Shelton predicted that the gathering would mean to interstate judicial relations what the Mount Vernon conference of 1785 between Virginia and Maryland meant to interstate commerce relations

The practical men of commerce said Mr Shelton are demanding the injection of practical common sense in the machinery of the courts and congress and the legislatures are being called upon to give the courts the necessary power He advocated a fixed system of interstate judicial relations declaring that it ought to be quite as possible and even less difficult than the present plan of interstate commerce relations Instead of thousands of merchants manufacturers and bankers and hundreds of railroads and other human endeavors creating difficult complications to solve there would be forty eight supreme appellate courts and nine federal circuit courts of appeals to agree upon any given principle

We need a little more friendly gossiping by the judges over the back fences he added

Girls' Night School Opens Sept. 8; All Welcome—No Tuition Asked

The girls night school of Atlanta which is directed and maintained under the public school system, will open Monday night September 8 in viaduct place the Emery-Steiner building, the locality selected because of its proximity to the business institutions of the city where many young women are employed

Girls who have come to Atlanta and not knowing well the English language and who must work have their chance in the night school

There is a special class a special teacher provided for them and they have been among the most efficient workers in the school Last year there were girls representing as many as six nations in the school each one improving herself in the line of work she had chosen

The Supper Provided

In order to save the girl who attends the school the hurried trip home for supper after work and the return through the city provision has been made to supply supper at a nominal cost There is also the rest room

The regular classes are on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursday and Fridays with Wednesday reserved for the shorthand and typewriting classes

Young women and their parents are invited to visit the school and see for themselves the advantages of it. Mrs Oscar Gamble is principal with two competent assistants Miss Eva Motes and Miss Rosa Sugarman

THAW'S WEAPON TURNED UPON HIM

Jerome Uses Habeas Corpus Writ to Force Thaw Into Court Preliminary to Deportation.

Sherbrooke, Quebec, August 30.—Harry K. Thaw's favorite, though ineffective, weapon in the New York courts—the writ of habeas corpus—was turned upon him today by his old prosecutor, William Travers Jerome, as a means of forcing Thaw into court here next Tuesday, in order that the immigration authorities may deport him to Vermont, which Mr. Jerome hopes will be the first leg of the trip to Matteawan asylum

Tonight, satisfied with his work, Jerome left for Quebec to spend Sunday. He was accompanied by Franklin Kennedy, deputy attorney general of New York

John Boudreau, the rural chief of police at Coaticook, Thaw's proud captor, after he had crossed the Canadian frontier, was the fulcrum used by Jerome, and his Canadian lawyers, in obtaining the writ. The police chief was persuaded that Thaw's detention in the Sherbrooke jail on a defective commitment might result in a damage suit for false arrest, so he petitioned Superior Judge Samuel Hutchinson to have the prisoner produced in court

Judge Hutchinson, at first loath to disturb the status of the case, Thaw having been remanded to jail for an indefinite term by a brother judge, Arthur Globensky, finally consented to hear arguments on the writ at 10 a m Tuesday, when Thaw's lawyers will have an opportunity to oppose it.

If Writ Is Sustained.

If the writ is sustained, Thaw will be turned over to the immigration officers at once, will be taken to Coaticook for hearing, and doubtless thrust across the Vermont border, there to be seized by deputy sheriffs, acting for New York state, on the warrant charging him with conspiring with Howard Barnum, the Matteawan guard, and others to escape

Jerome's coup was made possible by the sudden return here of Judge Hutchinson, who had been in Maine on his vacation By the merest chance Samuel Jacobs, chief of counsel for the New York interests, was appraised of his return, and made a dash back to Sherbrooke after leaping from a train bound for Montreal The immigration authorities, also bound thither, returned on the next train and waited about the courthouse today in the hope that the hearing on the habeas corpus writ would be held at once

Thaw's lawyers were taken completely by surprise Only two of them—Charles D. White and Harry Fraser, were in Sherbrooke There was talk of bringing the chief counsel, J N Greenshields, of Montreal, here by special train, but he was cruising on his yacht in the St. Lawrence river and could not be reached until tonight He will be here tomorrow The second in command, W K McKeown, arrived from Montreal this afternoon, after the writ had been granted

Don't Think Move Will Stand.

"We don't think this move will stand in court," said McKeown 'New York is using John Boudreau as a pawn It is an abuse of the writ of habeas corpus A writ of habeas corpus is issued presumably in a prisoner's behalf In this case, it has been used to deliver him into the hands of his enemies It is a mere subterfuge. We do not criticise our opponents for taking this action in our absence, for we doubtless should have taken like advantage, should we have had the opportunity However, there was a sort of mutual understanding that nothing was to be done in the case until Wednesday next when Roger Thompson's trial is to go on"

Mr Jerome smiled grimly at his victory The Thaw lawyers had thought the next move would be made through Alexis Dupuis, the Coaticook justice of the peace, who committed Thaw It had been said that New York was bringing pressure to bear on Dupuis to withdraw the commitment With the attention of the Thaw lawyers riveted on this suggestion, some one quietly visited Boudreau, and got him to sign the petition

Stripped of Legal Verbiage.

It was presented to Judge Hutchinson in chambers by Samuel Jacobs, acting for New York Stripped of its legal verbiage, it reviews the details of Thaw's arrest at Coaticook on August 19 maintains that he is held on a faulty commitment sets forth the desire of the petitioner to redress any wrong done Thaw, and to avoid 'any further liability for damages' and concludes as follows

"Wherefore your petitioner prays that a writ of habeas corpus issue, addressed to the said J H LaForce, who illegally detains the said Harry K Thaw in the common jail for said district, ordering him to forthwith bring and produce before a judge of the superior court for the said district the body of the said Harry K Thaw and show cause why the said Harry K Thaw should so be detained and that unless proper and legal cause of detention be shown, that the habeas corpus be maintained and said Harry K Thaw set at liberty, and, your petitioner will ever pray

Children Plunge to Death.

New York August 30—Edith Killorean, aged 2, toddled to the elevator cage in the apartment house where she lived and opened the door today. Her brother, George, 5 years old, saw her peril and ran to rescue her He was too late, but clutched at her clothing Both children plunged down the shaft 75 feet to death.

Atlanta Chamber Activities

"BOOST CITY," MOTTO OF DEPARTMENTS

Pure Milk Meeting.

A big meeting in the interest of pure milk for Atlanta will be held under the auspices of the chamber of commerce in Taft hall, the evening of October 3. Dr. S. A. Visanska, chairman of the chamber of commerce pure milk committee, will preside.

The City Federation of Women's Clubs of which Mrs. Charles J. Haden is president, will turn out full force. The Mothers' congress, which has done splendid work in the past, will be fully represented. The majority of the trained nurses of the city will be present in their uniforms, as hundreds of school children of the upper grades.

Among the speakers of the evening will be: Dr. R. E. Stallings, of the state department of agriculture; Dr. Peter F. Bahnson, state veterinarian; Dr. F. A. Visanska State Bacteriologist Adkins, and other noted men.

The next effort of the Industrial and Statistical bureau will be to get out a comprehensive, illustrated book, giving in full detail the industrial, commercial and civil life of Atlanta.

W. H. Leahy, head of the bureau, will have complete charge of the work, and hopes to have it on the press some time in the near future. So far as is known, no other southern city has ever published such a book.

The volume will contain several hundred pages, with illustrations of all the leading industrial and commercial plants of the city, the principal buildings and monuments, views of the parks, of Fort McPherson, the skyscrapers, hotels and everything pertaining to the life of Atlanta.

In addition to the illustrations, a comprehensive section of statistics will be published, in which Atlanta's payroll, bank clearings, and all commercial matters will be tabulated, making the volume a most valuable one to all business men in the city, and those contemplating residing or entering business here.

A complete history of the city will be printed, showing the marvelous growth of Atlanta, and what it offers to future generations.

Industrial Bulletin Ready Tuesday.

Mr Leahy announced Saturday that on Tuesday the industrial and commercial bulletin of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, which was prepared by him, will be off the press, and mailed to all chamber members, and bankers and others throughout the state, who may wish it, free of charge

A complete copy of the "blue sky law," passed by the last session of the legislature, is contained in the booklet.

Besides this, a number of other valuable features will be found, among them notes of the convention bureau and matters dealing with the industrial and commercial life of Atlanta. One of the attractive articles is a treatise on Georgia Tech, stating the aims of the school, its history, the work done, etc.

This bulletin will be eight and a half by eleven inches, eight pages, and will be revised and published from time to time.

New Slogan Coined.

Mr. Leahy has coined a new slogan for Atlanta, which will be used on all the chamber publications in the future It is—"People who come to Atlanta stay—the best evidence of their success."

As the chamber bulletins will be mailed to the ends of the earth, so to speak, this slogan will be a familiar one to business men everywhere, and it is thought that it will have a tremendous pulling power for the city.

The most recent and unique acquisition to Atlanta's activities which W H Leahy, of the industrial and statistical bureau, has arranged to bring to this city is a bring branch of the Memphis Shade Tree company, E W. Clapp president. This branch will open by October 1

Mr Clapp has been in correspondence for some time with Mr. Leahy and finally decided that Atlanta offered better advantages than any other southern city for such an institution

This company makes a specialty of moving large trees from twenty to forty inches in diameter from one locality to another For this purpose the company has its own special machinery and trained men for the work.

It is the plan of the company to transplant huge trees from all sections of Georgia and replant them in Atlanta on the thoroughfares, should the city desire them, in private residences, grounds, parks, etc

Fred Houser Hustling.

Fred Houser, head of the convention bureau, is hustling about twenty-four hours of the day at the present time, pulling for more conventions for Atlanta. So far Mr Houser has "booked" for Atlanta some of the greatest conventions which will be held during next year, but is pulling for more just the same

'Not only do we want the big conventions, but we want a multitude of the medium-sized ones as well," he said Friday "It is the smaller conventions, one every week or so, which, after all, keep the name of Atlanta before the people of the country, though it is true that the larger ones advertise us to the ends of the globe, as in the recent sociological and Presbyterian convention"

Cooper Returns in Fall.

Walter G. Cooper, whose efficient work as secretary of the chamber for the past ten or twelve years has made the organization rank with the best in the country, is still abroad, enjoying a well-earned vacation

When heard from a week ago Mr Cooper was in Bremen, Germany, and preparing to take a trip down the Rhine He will return some time in the fall

Offices Closed Saturday Afternoon.

All of the offices of the chamber of commerce close each Saturday at noon, or a little after. Owing to a general ignorance of this subject, there has been some confusion resulting at times and the chamber officials take this opportunity to announce this Saturday closing hour through the chamber of commerce column of The Constitution.

More Space Is Available.

Though a large number of manufacturers have taken space in the manufacturers' exhibit, which will be permanently located in the new chamber building, Mr. Leahy announced Friday that there was still plenty of space to be had, which the committee in charge would like to dispose of immediately.

Mr. Leahy is planning a number of interesting affairs in the amusement line to be given in the exhibit rooms from time to time for the entertainment of Atlantans and others in the city.

Georgia Tech Written Up.

A treatise on Georgia Tech has been written for the first issue of the industrial and commercial bulletin which Mr. Leahy will issue soon from the chamber offices. This treatise gives a complete history of the institution, its work and aims.

MAYSON FAMILY HOLDS REUNION AT OLD HOME

The annual reunion of the descendants of J. L. Mayson was held Wednesday at the home of Miss A. J. Mayson, who now lives on the old homestead.

The occasion was made interesting because of the gathering of the younger members of the family and the giving an old-fashioned barbecue. This barbecue was set among the beech trees, near the spring, with plenty of shade and spring water.

The meat was sweetened by the pies and cakes of the old and new sort and when the dinner bell rang, the load of good things was attacked by a hungry and happy crowd. Two old-time cooks, one Rachel and the other Mary, with white caps and aprons, came on the scene, about the time, bearing a birthday cake, covered with many candles and accompanied with much mystery. After much guessing, the cake was found to be a surprise on account of the birthday of J L Mayson, a grandson of the founder but he claimed that there were only sixteen candles though the others present counted many more.

The entire day was spent around the spring and in the grove nearby and the day was counted one of the pleasantest yet held by the family.

Those present were: Miss A. J. Mayson, W. H Cheshire and family, J. C Todd and family, Drew Liddell and family, W B. Maynard and family, John L. Mell, John W. Rice and family, Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Mell, J. R. Mell and family, Mr. and Mrs. Davis, Mr. and Mrs Walter A. Sims, Mrs. Cresse and children, Miss Maggie Watkins, Jack Watkins, James Knight, Walter Cheshire and family, T M. Watkins and family, Homer Cheshire and family, Miss Salter, Mrs Fritz, J L. Mayson and family and many friends of the Mayson family.

LIGHTNING SHOCKS THREE UNDER TREE; ONE MAY NOT LIVE

Rome, Ga., August 30.—(Special.)—As the result of a bolt of lightning which struck a party of three men who took refuge under a tree, J. W. Freeman is not expected to live, Benjamin Hitchcock, wealthy lumberman of this county, may be marked for life with a permanent scar, and John Carroll was knocked unconscious.

Freeman's injuries are internal and his death is hourly expected The bolt ran around Hitchcock's head just beneath the hat band, making a mark as if a red-hot knife had been used.

No other bad results were reported from the severe storm which visited this community.

ATLANTA MAY BE WIPED OFF THE CIRCUS MAP

Atlanta is in danger of being wiped of the circus map, according to J. T. McIntyre, advance agent for Barnum & Bailey, who was in the city looking for a lot for a performance on October 27.

In years past Atlanta offered the big shows sites galore, but in the march of progress vacant lots have been improved so that at the present time there is no space large enough for a three-ring circus. The old circus grounds on Jackson street are no longer available for the reason that Jack Prince has erected a motordrome thereon. The old Brisbine park, on the south side, is too small for a three-ring circus, and the only space left in the city is the race track at Piedmont park

Agent McIntyre has asked the park board for permission to use Piedmont park for one performance, and a special meeting of the board has been called for Tuesday by President J. O Cochran to consider the proposition. The circus has offered the city $250 for the use of the grounds, and will boost the figure to $500 if the city will give the permit

However, opposition has arisen. Mayor Woodward declares that the idea of the city allowing the use of Piedmont park for circus purposes is preposterous.

Mayor Woodward takes the position that if the city allows the circus to camp at Piedmont park one day the damage will be greater than $1,500, and that it will take the park board years to repair it.

A majority of the members of the park board are said to be opposed to the use of Piedmont for circus show grounds, and the prospects are that Barnum & Bailey will be forced to look elsewhere.

Object to Circus.

The citizens in the neighborhood of Piedmont park are up in arms over the matter, some of them being quoted last night as saying that the circus would bring about their homes a "large crowd of second-story workers, pickpockets, thugs and other undesirable hoodlums that always follow a circus.' A large and influential committee of residents of the eighth ward will wait upon the park board at the meeting to be held Tuesday and protest against the proposed stand of the circus in Piedmont park.

Games will be arranged for. All Ohioans are urged to attend whether members of the society or not.

DANCING STARS COMING TO ATLANTA THIS YEAR

Hoffman, Polaire and Constance Richardson Will Be Seen in One Show.

With Gertrude Hoffman as its leading member, the greatest dancing and specialty combination on the road this winter is announced as one of the leading features of the theatrical season at the Atlanta theater.

With Miss Hoffman will appear Lady Constance Richardson, of London, and Mme. Polaire, of Paris. This trio not only represents the highest exponents of dancing today, but is the highest salaried combination in history. They are expected soon after Christmas.

Miss Hoffman is already known in Atlanta as one of the most popular members of the summer company of Wells-Dunne-Harlan, which played here several years ago. This will be her first appearance since she came here with that company. She has a world-wide reputation.

Lady Constance Richardson, as a London society woman, took up dancing as a pastime and later took it up professionally, with the result that she is internationally known. She danced at Hammerstein's during the summer for a salary of $2,500 per week. Mme. Polaire has been seen twice at Hammerstein's in the last ten years.

Manager George, of the Atlanta, also announces the DeKoven Opera company in a big revival of "Robin Hood." The company is an all-star organization with 80 people and its own orchestra. This company is expected early in October.

STRUCK BY FLAT CAR, YOUNG TIFTON BOY IS INSTANTLY KILLED

Tifton, Ga., Aug. 30.—(Special.)—Geo, aged 7 1-2 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Baker, was struck by a flat car this morning about 7:30 o'clock and instantly killed. The car was loaded with lumber, and was on the tracks of the Tifton Terminal company. The accident occurred at the Love avenue crossing, in the heart of the city.

Engineer McDuffie, whose locomotive had stopped about the middle of the street, saw the child had stopped on the sidewalk about the center of the siding and was watching the locomotive, perhaps waiting for it to pass. He also saw the car coming up noislessly behind the unsuspecting child, and realizing its danger, jumped from his engine and ran toward it. He was just a second too late, for as he reached for the boy, who, seeing his danger, held his hands out, the car struck him.

Two wheels of the car passed over the child's body at the waist and the car stopped with the third wheel on him. Mr McDuffie, with the assistance of others, moved the wheel off and lifted the body from the track. The child had screamed only once, and was instantly killed The body was almost severed at the waist and the right arm cut off.

To Attend Cattle Tick Meeting.

Washington, D C, August 30.—Representative D. M. Hughes was today advised by the department of agriculture that Dr. E. N. Nighbert, now stationed at Atlanta would attend the meeting on cattle tick eradication to be held on October 13 at Swainsboro. The acting chief of the bureau of animal industry states that full information concerning the means recommended by the department for eradicating the tick are contained in farmers' bulletin 498. This tells how to prepare dipping vats for dipping infected cattle.

And, too, where doubt of us exists, one little thoughtful thing will dispel it all.

J. C. HARRISON Announces Candidacy for Aldermanic Board.

J. C. Harrison, formerly a member of council for two terms from the third ward, has announced his candidacy for alderman in opposition to James E. Warren, mayor pro tem In making the announcement Saturday afternoon, Mr. Harrison declared that he was in the race to stay.

"I have been urged by my friends to try for the aldermanic board, and I feel confident that I am going to win out," he said "I think my record in council is enough to recommend me to the voters of the entire city"

While he was a member of council, Mr. Harrison served as chairman of the board of firemasters, and it was chiefly through his efforts that the department has attained its present high standard of efficiency He was also a member of the streets committee, and succeeded in getting a number of improvements on the south side.

One of the crowning works of his administration was his fight for a tuberculosis sanitarium. The Battle Hill Sanitarium, which is one of the finest institutions in the South today, stands a monument to his efforts along with others in the important project.

Mr. Harrison is a business man and has a wide knowledge of city affairs.—(advt.)

To the Voters at Large of the City of Atlanta

Having served two years as Councilman, the experience I gained while there would be of great value to both myself and the City in serving the City as Alderman

I am not seeking the office personally, and have said on several occasions that I would not consent to re-enter politics, but within the last few days I have been so strongly urged by a great number of citizens to run for Alderman from the seventh ward, that I have agreed to do so, with the understanding that I would not make a personal canvass of the voters, as it would take entirely too much time from my business. My experience has been such that I found it takes enough time from a man's business to look after the interest of the people after he is elected. Therefore, in making this announcement, I want every voter in Atlanta to consider that his vote has been solicited without being called upon in person by me. I trust every good sound-thinking man in the City will heartily indorse a campaign conducted in this manner

My policy will ever be to give the city a good sound business policy administration, being liberal and conservative in every matter that may come before the general council.

So I am in the race—to stay and to win—and not to take up the time of the people soliciting votes and arguing about a thousand things that will never come before the general council.

Earnestly soliciting the vote of every citizen of Atlanta, I beg to remain, yours very respectfully,

DAN S. WALRAVEN

CURTIS HELD UNDER A BOND OF $5,000

Family of Man Killed by Auto Seek to Have Driver Punished.

A plea was made in police court yesterday by the family of Samuel Goldstein, who was killed in an auto accident Friday to hold the driver of the car without bond.

A hearing for bond was held in police court at 2:30 o'clock. T. A. Curtis, of 359 East Hunter street, the driver, was put under bond of $5,000, which he was unable to give.

None of the members of the dead man's family were in court. A representative appeared, asking that the man be held on unbailable charges. The trial will take place next Wednesday at 2:30 o'clock.

Curtis was arrested late Friday night by Detectives Harper and Garner. He was brought to police headquarters, where he admitted driving the car that killed Goldstein. He stated that the accident was unavoidable on account of bad brakes.

A number of eye-witnesses stated that Goldstein was stepping from a Washington street car at Crumley on the way home at 336 Washington. As he stepped into the street he was struck and bowled over by the machine.

The first report received at headquarters was that Curtis, after striking the man, speeded up his machine and disappeared. This was proved incorrect in court, however, when witnesses said the driver turned back his machine, and seeing that he could give no aid to the injured man, continued out Washington street.

The funeral of Mr. Goldstein will be held at 10 o'clock this morning from the residence, 336 Washington street. Rabbi David Marx will officiate and the interment will be at Oakland cemetery.

GOVERNOR TO APPOINT THOUSAND DELEGATES

Ten Gatherings for Which Chief Executive Is Asked to Choose Georgia Representatives.

Among the other matters which will be confronting Governor Slaton when he returns to his duties at the capitol about the middle of this week will be the appointment of nearly 1,000 delegates to ten conventions of a national or international character which are to be held in various cities of the country this fall.

It is doubtful whether any other governor has ever been burdened with the duty of appointing so many delegates to represent the state at one time. Secretary Hardy Ulm has been in receipt of letters almost daily from the officers of these various conventions, conferences and congresses requesting the governor to see to it that Georgia is represented.

List of Conventions.

The following is a list of the conventions, the number of delegates asked for, where a number is specified, and the places where the meetings are to be held:

Second annual meeting of United States Good Roads association, St. Louis, Mo., November 13 to 15; Congressman J. H. Bankhead, of Alabama, president; one delegate from each county.

Seventh international purity congress of the World's Purity Federation, Minneapolis, Minn., November 7 to 13; B. S. Steadwell, LaCrosse, Wis., president; not less than five delegates.

Farmers' conference, National Conservation exposition, Knoxville, Tenn., September 12 to 16; T. A. Wright, president; unlimited number of delegates.

Seventh annual conference on taxation, auspices of National Tax association, Buffalo, N. Y., October 23 to 25; Edwin R. A. Seligman, Columbia university, New York city, president; unlimited number of delegates.

Southern Commercial Congress.

Fifth annual convention of Southern Commercial congress, Mobile, Ala., October 27 to 29; Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, of Florida, president; at least fifty delegates.

Permanent American comission on finance, production, distribution and rural life, Washington, D. C., November 18; Clarence J. Owens, Washington, D. C., director general; three commissioners.

Annual meeting Illinois Association of Vicksburg Veterans, at Vicksburg, Miss., in October, 1915; F. A. Razine, Chicago, president; unlimited number of delegates.

Meeting of geologists and mining engineers, National Conservation exposition, Knoxville, Tenn., September 15; T. A. Wright, president; two delegates—state geologist and another geologist or mining engineer.

Emancipation Proclamation exposition, Philadelphia, in September; William E. Crow, Uniontown, Pa., chairman; ten colored men and women delegates.

American Road congress, Detroit, Mich., September 29 to October 4; unlimited number of delegates.

MOTHER IS CHARGED WITH BEATING CHILDREN

On complaint of several neighbors, in which it was charged that Mrs. Annie Hanson ad her cousin, J. M. Brooks, almost daily whipped the two small children of Mrs. Hanson, the two were arrested Saturday night by Detectives Green and McKibben on a blanket charge of disorderly conduct.

The couple live at 41 Mills street, and, according to the complaining neighbors, scarcely a day passes in which the cries of the two little children, aged 8 and 4 years, are not heard, as they writhe in pain beneath the lash of the whip. Mrs. Hanson is a strikingly handsome youn widow of the brunette type. The woman was released upon making bond for her appearance in the sum of $25, and Brooks is being held at the police station. They will be given a hearing in the recorder's court Monday afternoon.

JEALOUS OF BOARDERS, HE KILLED HIS WIFE

Philadelphia, Pa., August 30.—Jealous because the six boarders received more attention than himself, according to police Charles Stamps, 50 years old, tonight shot and killed his wife, Caroline, seriously wounded one of the boarders and accidentally injured ing to police, Charles Stumpo, 50 years old, who was passing his house at the time. Stumpo escaped after holding several dozen police at bay with his revolver.

To flatter a woman tell her she is beautiful, and to flatter a man tell him he is working too hard.

New Y. W. C. A. Home Is Open; Mrs. Osborne Is the Hostess

At last the Young Women's Christian association of Atlanta has a home where the members can be at home. Heretofore there have been the meeting place, the cafe and classrooms, but they were separate from the residence, and there was not the central home which the Young Woman's Christian Association building now represents on Ellis street. The building, a two-story brick structure, is situated just back of the new Winecoff hotel, on Peachtree street. It is well ventilated with large front porch, and in winter is well heated. It has been renovated and the interior decorations have been accomplished with a view not only to cleanliness and attractiveness, but cheerfulness and homelikeness.

Miss Wingo, the general secretary of the Atlanta branch of the work, has her office at the home, a cheerful apartment, where, in time, her personal secretary will be installed.

Mrs. Osborne Is Hostess.

Mrs. Cornelia Bacon Osborne, of Columbus, Ga., is the hostess and director of the home, and her reception room adjoins the reading room and library of the home, which is in close proximity with the music and classroom, also the general rest and reading room.

The dining room is a commodious apartment on the first floor, well equipped with furnishings and accessories. The butler's pantry and china closet are in the rear, and back of that the kitchen. There are two bathrooms and two large bedrooms on the first floor. On the second floor are accommodations for eleven permanent boarders and eight transients. The rooms are well ventilated and dainty in furnishing and decoration, and there is ample service to warrant the entire rest and comfort of the young women boarders in the home.

The home opened formally Friday with eight permanent boarders, with many more applying, and yesterday there were the first transient patrons. The home has an excellent cook, and the menu yesterday was most tempting.

In the library the bookcases are just beginning to be filled, and on the reading table were the leading periodicals of the moment. In the room adjoining was a piano, and it is the hope of the management to have soon a victrola.

Miss Wingo Talks.

Miss Wingo, the general secretary of the organization, explained in an interesting interview that the new home represents the center of the Christian association work, from which the organization will work out meeting the demands of Atlanta, with the various well-established branches which belong to the work in other cities.

"Besides the establishment of the home life here for the young women," explained Miss Wingo, "we hope to have the members of the association-at-large to make use of the parlors and reading room, as a place of meeting, for social visits. For instance, many a young woman in Atlanta has no sitting room where she boards, or she may prefer not using the one general room in her boarding house. She can come here to the parlors and entertain her guests. If there is a meeting in the music room, and somebody in the reading room, there is still the parlor, and the secretary's office—always a place where the members can be looked after.

"Young women, when they have to work, should have every opportunity to be happy in their recreative hours, and we hope to make the pleasures this winter of the variety and kind that will make them love their home here."

Plans Not Perfected.

When asked about the plans for the branch or department work of the Young Woman's Christian association, Miss Wingo stated they had not been perfected.

"There will be the different branches of the work to meet Atlanta's demand. The work along industrial lines will be directed by a secretary who will give her entire time to it. It will be an extension work to reach in every part of the city where it is needed, and will be in no way a part of the work being done right here in the home. There will be the organization of the culture clubs, and study for various lines of work which young women are used to follow, and here in the office will be established the bureau of information pertaining to employment.

"I have in mind some charming forms of entertainment for the girls during the winter evenings. They will be read to and urged to read themselves, and I hope to relate the home pleasures so directly with their outside recreation that it will all come under home direction."

Mrs. Osborne's Work.

Mrs. Osborne is the hostess—the mother-spirit of the home, whom the girls will always find waiting to receive them, and make them cheerful and happy. She is one of the best-known and most highly esteemed women in the state, who brings to her office all the knowledge and culture of the social life of the world. She knows the young woman of the state from every angle, and with this knowledge can meet the problem of the city girl as well as that of the country girl, and she knows how to interest and entertain both. She will meet with the applicants and patrons of the home and, when making them happy in the home, she will be enabled to see their talents and inclinations and assist them in securing the positions for which they are best fitted.

SEEKS $200,000 ESTATE AS THE SON OF LEE

Baltimore, August 30.—Believing he is a son of the late William H. Lee, a wealthy Chicago publisher who died last summer, leaving a $200,000 estate, Clarence O. Lee, of this city, has placed his claims to a share of the property in the hands of a local firm of lawyers.

Lee said that two other sons and a brother of the dead publisher live in Baltimore. His father left Baltimore about 25 years ago, he said, and nothing ever was learned of his whereabouts. Romantic incidents in the early life of William H. Lee, which were published after his death, coincide with the Baltimore's claimant's recollections of his father and led to his belief in the relationship he now is seeking to establish.

EIGHT-HOUR MEASURE AND WORK ON HIGHWAYS

Washington, D. C., August 30.—(Special.)—American Federation of Labor officials today expressed doubt as to Attorney General McReynolds' opinion that the government 8-hour law did not apply to work of improving highways for which congress makes appropriations.

The controversy arose over the appropriation of $500,000 made by the last congress for experimental road work, of which North Carolina was awarded $40,000 through the activity of Senator Simmons.

South Carolina made formal protest against the prohibition against the use of convicts on this road work; while Minnesota sent an assistant attorney general here to protest against the 8-hour provision. The contention of South Carolina was that if she devoted her convicts to this work, which is to be done under state supervision, their labor should be accepted as part of her contributions.

KINGMAN IS PUSHED FOR ENGINEER CHIEF

Washington, D. C., August 30.—(Special.)—Congressman Walker has interested himself in the movement to have Colonel Dan C. Kingman, district United States engineer, now stationed at Savannah, Ga., appointed as chief of engineers to succeed General Rossell when the latter is retired in October.

Colonel Kingman is in direct line for this promotion and many influential friends are urging his fitness for the place. It is practically certain that he will succeed General Rossell.

Mr. Walker said today: "It will be very unfortunate if Colonel Kingman is not named. He is thoroughly acquainted with the geography and needs of our section and is in thorough sympathy with our people in the development of waterways. He is a valuable man, but would be far more valuable to us if he were made chief of engineers."

Cyclonic Storms in France.

Paris, August 30.—A long spell of dry hot weather has abruptly terminated in a series of cyclonic rainstorms throughout France. The storms were especially violent in the southeast and center, the grapevines and tobacco crops being destroyed in many places.

MOUNTED PATROLS IN STRIKE DISTRICT

Calumet, Mich., August 30.—Eighty men, of Batteries A and B, of the Michigan National Guard, have been ordered to Calumet to replace 400 infantrymen, who will leave the mining district next week. Mounted patrols have proven more useful than infantry in the district affected by the copper miners' strike.

The executive council of the Western Federation of Miners will meet here Sunday. It was announced that the federation was prepared to concentrate its resources in the copper mine district in an effort to make the strike a success.

Secretary Treasurer Ernest Mills was telegraphed to come from Denver with funds to the amount of $150,000. President Charles Moyer, Vice President C. E. Mahoney and Wm. Davidson, who has been directing the strike in British Columbia, are expected here Sunday, and with their arrival all the members of the executive council will be here.

"SHOT" BY CAMERA

"Hands up!" Mrs. Reggie Vanderbilt exclaimed as she threw up her hands and smiled at the photographer who stood in her path. The holdup occurred at the championship tennis matches at Newport, R. I., and Mrs. Vanderbilt, instead of ducking the camera man, set a new fashion for society women by gracefully surrendering to the inevitable. If other women of fashion follow Mrs. Vanderbilt's example soon you may see in print more "hold-up" pictures than ever you dreamed of.

THAW'S NEMESIS

William Travers Jerome, the New York lawyer and former district attorney, who has been Harry K. Thaw's Nemesis, is on Thaw's trail again. Jerome has been the one man whom Thaw most has feared in his many attempts to gain his freedom. Jerome went to Sherbrooke after Thaw's capture, following his escape from the Matteawan (N. Y.) asylum, to aid the Dutchess county (N. Y.) authorities in taking Thaw back.

What Efficiency Is Not.

(From "The Story of Emerson, High Priest of the New Science of Efficiency," by Herbert N. Casson, in The American Review of Reviews for September.)

Efficiency is not a new name for an old truth, so far as it relates to industry and to individual success. It is an absolutely new point of view in the business world.

It is not expert accounting, for the reason that accounting deals only with records and not with methods.

It is not energy, for the reason that misdirected saving is often the most suicidal of all business policies.

It is not energy, for the reason that misdirected energy is the most universal of all industrial wastes.

It is not slave-driving, for the reason that one of its main benefits is to elevate and profit the wage-workers, not to degrade or oppress them.

And it is not system, for the reason that the most useless and wasteful actions can be done in the most systematic way. There can easily be too much system, but there can never be too much efficiency.

Efficiency means more net. This little word of three letters—N-E-T, has in recent years become the most important word in the vocabulary of business. Net means not how much money you took in, but how much you have left. If you take in $3,000,000 and pay out the same amount, you have no net at all. It is better to take in $1 and have 10 cents left, than to take in $10 and have only 5 cents left.

It is the net that decides whether or not we are winning or losing, in the game of business. Gross receipts may pile up as high as a mountain, and yet at the end of the year there may be no residue of profit. It is not volume of business that makes net.

WANT PHONE SERVICE THOROUGHLY PROBED

Railroad Commission Will Be Petitioned to Investigate Complaints Against the System.

A resolution urging the Georgia railroad commission to make an investigation of the service which the Southern Bell Telephone company gives it Atlanta patrons, will be introduced in council Monday afternoon.

Alderman Arthur H. Van Dyke, who says he has been "besieged by complaints against the company," declared Saturday that he will offer the resolution. He explained that he had written a letter to President W. T. Gentry, in which he informed him of his contemplated action. He said that he had also sought a conference with M. O. Jackson, assistant general manager of the company, for the purpose of laying the complaints before the proper officials.

"I am not making an attack on the company, nor am I trying to antagonize its officers," Alderman Van Dyke said. "I have been besieged by complaints, and I know of my own knowledge that the service that the company is giving its Atlanta patrons is not what it should be. A number of persons have asked me to get council to urge the railroad commission to get after the company, but I have done nothing because I realize that every public utility corporation has its troubles, and I waited in hope that something would be done, and that it would be unnecessary for me to take this step."

Alderman Van Dyke says that he has been receiving complaints for weeks, and that he has the names of scores of persons who will testify that the service is not just what it should be.

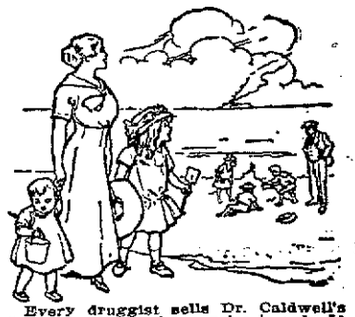
A merchant likes to have all classes of people for his customers, but early settlers are his favorites.

Neither is it system nor energy nor resources. It is all these, plus efficiency.

Consequently, there is no other subject, just at the present crisis in our industrial evolution, that is attracting such keen interest as efficiency. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are being spent by railroads and other corporations to cut down the wastes and losses that arise from slipshod management. Cities and even states have employed experts to teach them the methods of efficiency, and even the federal government has a president's commission on economy and efficiency under the supervision of Dr. Frederick A. Cleveland.

Now Are the Days Children Need Care

Summer Heat Dangerous to Little Ones Whose Bowels Are Neglected



A mother cannot do better for her children than to teach them from their earliest days regularity of the bowels. Regularity can be promoted without the child knowing it by watching its food and by so varying the food that all the elements of digestion are used, when nature will do the rest. The future health of the child depends upon this.

But try as you will, there are times when the little one will become constipated and bilious. In hot weather immediate attention is necessary, as many serious diseases result from stuffed-up bowels. Don't give salts or cathartics or purgatives, as they are too harsh, but give a gentle, pleasant-tasting bowel stimulant like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It has been used by the children of this as well as a former generation, and thousands of families are proud to speak well of it, among whom we can mention Mrs. Louise Reynolds, 909 Jackson street, Lynchburg, Va., who is glad to recommend it, and Mr. Chas W. Allen, Manor, Tex., who writes that he often felt 100 years old, but feels younger now than his years.

Every druggist sells Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and the price is only 50 cents and $1 a large bottle. It will cure constipation and biliousness in young or old, break up a cold and stop summer diarrhoea by ridding the bowels of the poisons and germs that cause the trouble. It is a grand family laxative, with valuable tonic properties.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it, postpaid, by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 418 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

Epitome of Amended Charter of Atlanta, Made by Citizens Who Have Studied It; Changes to Be Voted on Soon Are Shown

An epitome of the amended charter of the city of Atlanta as passed by the general assembly of Georgia of 1913, and to be voted on by the citizens of Atlanta at an election called for the fourth Wednesday in September, 1913, is presented herewith. The epitome was made by a committee of citizens, consisting of Judge George Hillyer, Major R. J. Guinn, A. H. Davis, A. S. Thomson and J. R. Nutting.

In the act of 1913 amending the charter of the city of Atlanta, Sections 1, 2 and 3 set out the name of the city, the incorporation of its inhabitants and the limits. All these are as now already defined. Section 4 fixes the number of the wards of the city at not exceeding ten. Section 5 extends the authority of the city of Atlanta over all of the limits and this authority includes both powers of taxation as well as the enforcement of city laws.

Sections 6 and 8 inclusive define the police and sanitary limits, being sections outside the ordinary limits which it is deemed necessary to police, such as waterworks, etc.

Sections 9 to 17 define the duties of mayor, of mayor pro tem., of provisional mayor pro tem., power of the general council to try impeachments, the oath of office of mayor, all these being as now defined, except that it is provided that if the mayor fails to approve any action of council within four days, his failure shall have the effect of an approval. The present charter is silent as to the effect of the failure of the mayor to act within said four days.

Sections 18 to 22 define the legislative department of the city, to-wit, mayor, board of aldermen and board of councilmen. These sections set forth how they shall meet and how they shall be elected, power to succeed themselves, vacancies in office, all of which are now defined.

Number of Committees Reduced.

Section 23 sets out the committees of council beginning with finance and ending with freight rates and transportation. The committees on public works, public safety, public recreation, health, hospital and charities are new, but they include committees heretofore known as streets, fire, police, parks, cemetery, health, hospitals and charity. It will be seen that the number of the committees is thus substantially reduced.

Sections 24 and 25 define a quorum of the general council as sixteen instead of eleven, as now fixed. The majority of the board of councilmen and board of aldermen constitute a quorum in each body. The aldermen and councilmen meet and vote together, except on matters involving expenditure of money, granting of franchises, etc. In these cases they vote separately. The meeting days on the first and third Mondays of each month are preserved.

Section 26 is the general welfare clause by which the general council is empowered to pass any law affecting the peace, order or general welfare of the city.

Section 27 provides that no franchise shall be renewed except during the twelve months immediately preceding the expiration thereof.

Section 28 provides for the installation of fire escapes under penalty.

Section 29 authorizes the mayor and general council to punish all offenses against the ordinances of the city by a fine not exceeding $500 or sentence to labor or imprisonment for not exceeding sixty days, either or both penalties to be inflicted in the discretion of the recorder. This power is subject to change by vote at this election.

Section 30 defines that ordinances shall undergo two readings on two separate meeting, unless by two-thirds vote, same may undergo two readings at one meeting, as is the present law.

Officials Cannot Get Contracts.

Section 31 provides that neither the mayor, nor any member of the general council nor any city official nor the head of any department nor the member of any board, commission or committee, shall be interested, directly or indirectly, either by themselves, or by any corporation, firm or partnership of which they are officers, directors or employees, in any contract with the city having for its object the expenditure of the city's money in any way. This prohibition covers contracts, including subcontracts or contracts to furnish labor or material to a city contractor.

Section 32 provides that the council may fill a vacancy in the board of aldermen or councilmen and the successor thus elected shall serve until the expiration of the calendar year in which he is elected, as is at present provided.

Sections 33 to 34, inclusive, provide for the choosing of election managers, the appointment of their clerks, the method of holding city elections, the trial of contests thereof, and the prohibiting of illegal voting thereat.

The following offices are those to be filled by public election: city attorney, city marshal, city treasurer, building inspector, city comptroller, recorder, clerk of council, city electrician and city tax collector.

Section 35 prescribes the oath of office to be taken by these officials, bonds to be given and salaries to be paid and generally defines their duties.

Section 36 gives the city authority to provide for registration of voters and to appoint a registrar therefor.

Sections 37 and 38 fix the tax limit, to-wit: one and one-fourth per cent per annum on all real and personal property and also a street tax, as at present provided.

Section 39 provides for an emergency tax not exceeding one-half of one per cent as at present provided.

Sections 40 to 49, inclusive, authorize the levy and collection of license taxes, not exceeding $300 per annum; also the taxation of vehicles using the streets, the taxation of insurance agents, of itinerant traders, of theatrical performances. The city is authorized to require all licensees to give a bond in the sum of $5,000 to protect all persons from injury by reason of dishonest or fraudulent conduct of the business so licensed. The ad valorem tax is made payable in three installments, namely, April 15, July 15 and October 15. Interests is to be collected thereon if not paid when due. Street tax is to be collected on or before July 15 of each year.

"Sanitary Tax" Abolished.

However, an important change is made as to taxes levied as follows:

"Section 46: The amendment to the city charter approved September 3, 1881, in so far as same authorizes a levy for what is known as 'sanitary tax' and being the particular authority set out in the section of the charter numbered 139 of the city code of 1910 and all similar amendments providing for a sanitary tax, are hereby repealed and hereafter no assessment shall be made on any lot or lots in the city of Atlanta for the purpose of collecting a sanitary tax thereon, whether such lots be vacant or improved."

This abolishes the $3 heretofore collected on each house by the city for what is known as "sanitary tax." If this charter is adopted, hereafter no tax of this kind will be collected. This is the only change made in the present scheme of taxation.

Section 50 provides for the election of three tax assessors and authorizes the assessment of all personal and real property.

Section 51 provides that the chief clerk in the tax office shall perform such duties as may be required of him by ordinance, or by the tax committee, and gives him authority to receive returns of property for taxation.

Sections 52, 53 and 54, inclusive, provide that the books shall be open for the return of property for taxation on February 1 and close on March 15 each year, and the taxing day fixed as January 1. This is a change, as the taxing day at present is fixed by ordinance as January 31.

Any tax payer may appeal to the tax committee, which committee reports their finding to the general council, from any assessment of his property at which such tax payer feels aggrieved. Any tax payer may appeal from any return made by any other tax payer where same appears to be either false, fraudulent or inaccurate, and the tax commitee investigates the appeal, and has a trial thereon and their decision is reported to the general council, which finally passes an order settling the issue, as under the present charter.

Section 55 defines the duties of the tax collector, puts a penalty upon defaulters and gives the mayor and general council the power to relieve against such penalty as under present charter.

Section 56 gives the tax deeds of the city the same evidential value as the tax deeds of the county, as under the present charter.

Section 57 requires the council to apportion the revenue each year to the various departments of the city and prohibits the expenditure of any money except by resolution, as under present charter.

Section 58 puts a penalty upon the mayor and members of the general council for voting for any expense in excess of appropriation therefor, and makes it the duty of the city clerk to bring suit against them to recover such penalty, as under the present charter.

Expenses Not to Exceed Funds.

Section 59 provides that the annual expense of the city shall not exceed the annual income of the city, and section 60 provides that the council may use any excess in receipts over the appropriation provided such expenditures do not in any case exceed the receipts for such year, as under the present charter.

Section 61 authorizes the mayor and general council to borrow $400,000 for any one year to cover the casual deficit, as under the present charter.

Section 62 authorizes the refunding of city bonds as they mature, and section 63 provides for the registration of city bonds in the same manner as state bonds are registered, and section 64 provides for the issuance of registered bonds in lieu of coupon bonds following registration, all as under the present charter.

Section 65 authorizes any guardian or trustee to invest the funds of his ward in city bonds, and section 66 provides that the city shall follow the state law in the issuance of any bonds for any purpose as to elections, voting and other formalities.

Sections 67 to 68, inclusive, vest in the mayor and general council the power to lay sewers, to prescribe their sizes, to extend same to the property line, to levy and collect the cost thereof from abutting property owners. These sections also set out how these ordinances are introduced, the requirement of advertisement of ten days, the message of passage and the lien on abutting property for the cost thereof.

All these matters are well defined and generally understood under the present charter, there being no change in same in the new charter.

Streets and Grades.

Sections 78 to 105, inclusive, deal with the general powers of the city to open, widen, straighten and change streets or to abandon same under resolution therefor; to establish and fix a system of grading and draining of the streets.

These sections set forth in detail the character of the petition required, the signatures thereto, the method of passing same in the general council, the assessment of the cost of the work on the abutting property owners, bills and fi. fas. therefor, the assessment of street car companies in the streets so paved, the laying of curbing in streets and the collection of cost thereof, condemnation of pavement upon streets and sidewalks and the method of condemning the pavement on sidewalks and streets and the assessment of the cost of repaving same and provisions for the collection thereof, the lien upon the abutting property for the cost of this work, the extension of water mains to the property lines and the collection of the cost thereof, etc. All of these matters are well understood, and there are no changes in the present charter from the present provisions covering such work.

In these sections there is a new provision authorizing general council to establish a building line along streets and providing that the construction of a building over such line shall constitute a nuisance.

Street Cars Pay More.

Formerly the street car company only paid for eleven feet of pavement. Under this charter, the street car company pays for eleven feet where it only has one track and sixteen feet where it has two tracks in the street.

These sections conclude in the right in the city to extend Alabama street, but this right has so far not been exercised and was only retained in the charter because council may some time see fit to extend this street.

Sections 106 and 107 provide that the city may require railroads to build bridges over street crossings where the railroad is constructed over the streets after the street or road was established.

Sections 108 to 112, inclusive, continue the present sections as to the duties and powers of the recorder. No change is made in same and then generally provide that he shall hold recorder's court, have power to inflict the punishments prescribed by ordinance, have a clerk who is eligible for recorder pro tem, and also that the members of the general council may act as recorder in his absence.

Section 113 defines the duties of clerk of council and his deputies, in the same terms as now established.

Section 114 to 115, inclusive, use the same language as now prescribed by charter to define the duties of city comptroller. They prescribe that the income of the city must be apportioned to each department and shall not be exceeded except by action of the general council and that a warrant must be presented for each payment, and drawn on a proper fund.

Sections 116 to 117 provide for the office of marshal and fix his duties in the same language as the present charter. Generally, he levies and collects all fi. fas. issued by the city, sells property thereunder and makes deeds therefor.

Sections 118 to 122 prescribe the duties of the treasurer, being the same as now established, and also provide that the revenues of the city shall be deposited in four separate banks which shall be required to pay interest thereon.

Sections 123 to 125, inclusive, prescribe the number and fix the names of the several boards as follows: Board of education, board of public safety, board of health, hospitals and charities, board of public works, board of water commissioners, board of public recreation, board of trustees of Carnegie library.

Number of Boards Reduced.

The number of boards is reduced. For instance, the board of public safety includes the two boards of police and fire. The board of health, hospitals and charities includes the board of health, trustees of hospitals and committees on charities of the general council.

The board of public recreation includes the board of park commissioners and the cemetery commission.

The board of public works is a new board and is intended to systematize the street and sewer work under a continuous line of endeavor such as the board should work out from year to year instead of change in views of the committees on streets and committees on sewers annually appointed.

A new feature is here adopted, to-wit, each member attending the regular monthly meeting will receive $5 per month. This is an effort to apply the wisdom of banks in securing attendance upon their directors' meetings to secure attendance at board meetings. The amount is small but sufficiently remunerative to make it interesting.

The mayor and general council reserve the right to fix the salaries of all officials, whether elected by the people, by boards or otherwise, provided, where boards elect officials, they have the right to recommend salaries for their department to the general council.

Generally, these boards consist of one member from each of the wards of the city, no two members shall come from the same ward, to be elected by the general council, the mayor and chairman of corresponding committee to be the ex-officio members of such boards.

Civil service is retained in the same language as in the present charter.

The head of the department under such boards, whether superintendent or general manager, or chief, or otherwise, is elected by the board. He, in turn, recommends all assistants and employees in such department. If the board does not confirm such nominations, he shall continue to nominate others until suitable employees are submitted to and accepted by such boards.

These general provisions are set out in detail in reference to said boards in sections 127 to 170, inclusive. Section 171 provides for a sinking fund commission consisting of three members from the city at large, to which the mayor and chairman of the finance committee are added as ex-officio members. This commission carries out the state law with reference to sinking funds for bonds issued by cities, and is the same as provided in present charter.

Section 172 provides that all city officials, now or hereafter elected, shall perform such duties as required by ordinances of the city, and where not specially assigned to supervision by a board, are to be generally controlled and supervised by the general council.

Section 173 provides that all officials now serving under terms, to which they have been elected by the people, or council, or boards, or appointment, shall continue to serve until the end of the term to which they have been so elected or appointed. All charter offices not included in the list above stated are abolished subject to service until the end of their present term.

Purchasing Agent Provided.

Section 174 authorizes the mayor and general council to elect a purchasing agent, whose duty it shall be to purchase supplies for all departments. This is a new provision in the charter.

Section 175 prohibits dual office-holders, that is, no city official of any kind can hold another city or state or federal office.

Sections 176 to 184 authorize the mayor and general council to establish and maintain the system of pensions now provided by the present charter. There is no change whatever as to any of these pensions.

Sections 185 and 186 authorize the condemnation of private property for streets, sewers, water works, public buildings, parks, schools, fire, police, or any other public purpose, all as now provided.

Sections 187 and 188 authorize the regulation of limits in which livery stables may be erected, and authorizing ordinances providing for their cleanliness, etc., as now provided.

Section 189 authorizes the city to buy or lease a market house, as now provided.

Section 191 authorizes the city to regulate public meetings and public speakings in the streets of the city, as now provided.

Section 192 authorizes the regulation of charges by hacks, transfer companies, etc.

Section 193 authorizes the investigation of any officer or board or department of the city; giving powers to send for persons and swear them as witnesses, and to make all investigations necessary.

Section 194 gives power to control, regulate or prohibit boarding houses and sanitariums in residence portions of the city, as now provided.

City Suits Get Precedence.

Section 195 requires all claims for damages to be submitted to the city before suit is brought thereon. Section 196 requires the superior court of Fulton county to give precedence to city cases in which the collection of city revenue is involved.

Section 197 provides that the county commissioners, when working on streets of the city, shall follow the grade and locality selected by council.

Section 198 authorizes any city official to justify his acts as such when acting in his official capacity.

Section 199 authorizes the establishment of a fee bill, there being no change from the present charter.

Section 200 authorizes the fixing of fire limits and the prohibition of buildings therein constructed of combustible material.

Section 201 grants authority to require all social, locker, or other clubs, keeping intoxicants for members, to secure permits therefor and making penal their operation without such permits, as now provided.

Section 202 gives the city authority to regulate hotels, lodging houses, dance halls and similar places by requiring therefor and prohibiting the operation without such permit or license. Section 203 gives to the city the power to revoke such licenses in their discretion, all as provided in the present charter.

Section 204 grants the power to prohibit, by ordinance, the emission of soot, black or dense smoke from any chimneys, stacks or boilers within the limits, and provides a penalty against same.

Section 205 authorizes the establishment of a system of street numbers and making penal the use of other numbers other than those so established.

Section 206 provides for a zone within which surface closets will not be permitted to remain, and will not be hereafter constructed, and providing a penalty against same therein.

Section 207 provides for the filling of vacancies on boards by the general council. Generally, they have authority to fill vacancies of all offices elected by them, except members of the general council so elected only serve for the balance of the year of election.

Sections 208 and 209 provide for the building of bridges at the east and west end of the union depot and the sinking of the railroad tracks therein.

Closes Forsyth Underpass.

Section 210 provides for the closing of the openings in Forsyth street viaduct, subject to the approval of the railroad commissioner and finally by the governor.

Section 211 provides that the provisions of all the amendments of the general act shall become effective on and after January 1, 1914.

Section 212 provides that all officials shall serve until the end of their present terms, including the members of the several boards.

Section 212 provides that the mayor, aldermen and councilmen shall serve until the end of their term to which they have been elected. The members of the board of water commissioners, education, trustees of Carnegie library and sinking fund commission shall likewise serve until the end of the term to which they have been elected.

Section 213 authorizes the city to close Wyman street between Tennille street and the Georgia Railroad and Banking company.

Sections 214 and 216-b authorize the city to regulate steam boilers, freight and passenger elevators; to cause their inspection; to see that they are properly and safely operated, and to elect an inspector therefor.

Section 215 provides that this act shall not become effective unless the majority of the qualified voters of the city voting in such election shall vote in favor thereof at a special election called for the fourth Wednesday in September, 1913.

Those voting in favor of this act shall have printed or written on their ballots the following words:

"For the amended charter of the city of Atlanta as provided by act of the general assembly of 1913."

Those voting against this act shall have written or printed on their ballots the following words:

"Against the amended charter of the city of Atlanta as provided by act of the general assembly of 1913."

Said election to be held, managed, the votes canvassed and the result declared in the same manner as city elections are now held.

All citizens who have paid their taxes prior to the year 1913, who shall have registered fifteen days prior to said election, are qualified to vote. If a majority of the votes cast is in favor of this act, the same shall thereupon become a law. If a majority of the votes so cast is against this act, same shall not become a law. The voting precincts and regulations to be in accordance with the booth method of the city primary of 1912. All ballots to be printed in the same type, on plain, white paper, thick enough to conceal the character of the ballot when voted.

The result of said election shall not effect the several sections of this act which provide that the provisions of said act shall become a law when approved by the governor, nor the provisions of section 215, which submits to a vote of the people the question of vesting in the recorder's court of said city the power to impose a fine of $500, or a sentence of imprisonment or labor upon the public works for not exceeding sixty days, and section 215-b, which provides for the submission to the people the question of incorporating into the charter of said city the principles of the initiative, referendum and recall.

At the same time that the other provisions are submitted to a vote of the people as provided in section 215, there shall likewise be separately submitted to a vote the following provisions:

Recorder's Court Defined.

That the mayor and general council are hereby authorized to provide by ordinance for the punishment of offenses against the ordinances of the city, on conviction in the recorder's court, by a sentence to work on the public works for a term not exceeding sixty days or by imprisonment for term not exceeding sixty days or by a fine not exceeding $500, either one or two or all of said sentences to be inflicted in the discretion of the recorder.

Those voting in favor of this provision shall have printed or written on their ballots the following words:

"For vesting in the recorder's court power to sentence for a term of labor and imprisonment for sixty days and by a fine not exceeding $500."

Those opposed thereto shall have printed or written on their ballots the following words:

"For vesting in the recorder's court power to sentence for a term of labor and imprisonment not exceeding thirty days or by a fine not exceeding $200."

If a majority of the votes cast in said election is in favor of vesting in the recorder's court the power set out in the ballot for it, as aforesaid, then the provisions of this section hereinbefore set out under the title recorder's court shall thereupon become a law.

If a majority of the votes cast in said election is in favor of vesting in the recorder's court the power set out in the second ballot, as aforesaid, then the provisions of this section hereinbefore set out under the title recorder's court shall thereupon become a law.

The election shall be held and the result declared in the same manner as provided in section 215 of this act with reference to the other provisions of this act.

Initiative and Referendum.

Section 215-b. Whenever ten per cent of the registered voters, as disclosed by registration sheets of the last preceding general municipal election, shall request, in a petition filed in the office of the clerk of council of said city, the submission of an ordinance or resolution, the substance of which is incorporated in said petition, for adoption by vote of the people, an election shall be called therefor within thirty days after same has been read in council. If at said election, said resolution or ordinance receives a majority of the votes cast, it shall become operative and cannot be thereafter repealed except by an election similarly called. Provided, however, if the mayor and general council adopt the resolution or ordinance, so petitioned for, then no election shall be called.

Whenever 15 per cent in number of the registered voters, as disclosed by the registration sheets of the last preceding general municipal election, shall so request, in a petition filed with the clerk of council, any ordinance or resolution which may have already been adopted by the mayor and general council shall thereafter be submitted to the qualified voters of said city at the first regular election following the filing of said petition. Provided, said request is filed within sixty days after the approval of such ordinance or resolution. If a majority of the votes in said election are cast against such resolution or ordinance, same shall be thereby repealed and revoked and shall not thereafter be of any effect nor shall same thereafter be adopted by the mayor and general council until re-submitted to and adopted by the qualified voters of said city in the same manner as originally submitted. If same receives a mapority vote of the people, when so submitted, then said resolution or ordinance shall stand and be effective in the same manner as other ordinances of the city.

Provided, however, that no ordinance or resolution shall be submitted to the people by referendum, as herein provided, at a date earlier than sixty days after the date of its approval, nor shall same be submitted at any other time than at the general city election held on the first Wednesday in December of each year, but same can be submitted at each annual general election if a petition is filed therefor by the voters of the city as herein authorized.

The voting on questions submitted to the people at the general elections herein provided for under what is known as the "initiative and referendum," shall be held in the same manner as the ordinary city elections, by the same managers and at the same time and under the same methods, and the result thereof shall be canvassed in the same manner and declared and reported to the general council for confirmation as the city elections are now held, declared and reported.

The mayor and general council of said city shall be authorized to submit to the qualified voters of said city at any regular municipal election, any ordinance or resolution which they may deem proper and, in the event a majority of such voters shall vote for such ordinance or resolution the same shall be adopted. If the majority of the votes so cast are against such ordinance or resolution, same shall be defeated and shall not thereafter be adopted by the mayor and general council until re-submitted and adopted by the qualified voters of said city. If same receive a majority vote of the people and become effective then same can only be repealed by a majority vote of the qualified voters at a regular municipal election.

Method of Recall Defined.

The mayor, aldermen, councilmen, officers elected by vote of the people, heads of departments and members of boards shall be subject to removal during their several terms of office in the following manner:

Whenever 25 per cent in number of the registered voters as disclosed by the registration sheets of the last preceding general municipal election shall so request, in a petition filed in the office of the clerk of council, an election shall be called and held within thirty days from the date of the filing of said petition on the subject only of the recall or non-recall of such official. It shall be the duty of the clerk of council to check the names on said list and report to the general council the number of registered voters thereon in order to see that the required number have signed the said petition. This report shall be submitted to the general council with the petition, which petition must be filed with the clerk of council at least five days before the meeting of the general council to which same is reported, in order that it may be checked up as herein provided. When so reported, with this certificate, the general council shall order an election to be held within thirty days as above mentioned. Such election shall be held under the same rules and regulations as govern regular city election. At this election the ballots shall be as follows: With the names of such officer and office inserted in the blanks.

"For the recall of .....
Holding the office of ....."

"Against the recall of .....
Holding the office of ....."

If a majority of the votes cast in said election are for the recall of such officer, his office is declared vacant at the moment these votes are canvassed by the general council and the result announced. A meeting of the general council shall be called and held for this purpose, if no regular meeting intervenes, within not less than five days of the election so held. At this meeting the election managers shall make a return of the votes cast in said election by report of same to the general council, and the general council shall examine this return and declare the result. If a majority of the votes so cast for the recall of the official, his office is vacated at the time the result is so declared by the general council, as herein provided, and a vacancy immediately exists. This vacancy shall be filled in the same manner as vacancies are otherwise filled for such offices.

To Be Submitted to Vote.

Provided, however, that the provisions of this section shall not become a law until submitted to the people as follows:

At the same time that the other provisions of this act are submitted to a vote of the people, the foregoing provisions of this section shall also be submitted to a vote of the people as follows:

Those in favor of the provisions of this section shall have printed or written on their ballots the following words: "For the initiative, referendum and recall, as provided by act of the general assembly of 1913, amending the charter of the city of Atlanta."

Those opposed to the provisions of this section shall have printed or written on their ballots the following words: "Against the initiative, referendum and recall, as provided by act of the general assembly in 1913 amending the charter of the city of Atlanta."

If a majority of the votes cast in said election on this question is in favor of the initiative, referendum and recall, then the provisions of this section shall become a law.

If a majority of the votes cast in said election on this question is against initiative, referendum and recall, then the provisions of this section shall not become a law.

The election shall be held and the result declared in the same manner as provided in section 215 for holding an election upon the other provisions of this charter.

Section 216-a, provides that the tax assessors and receivers, acting jointly, or, in case of difference of opinion, by majority, shall be the head of the tax office; shall nominate the chief clerk therein and the assistants, subject to confirmation by the tax committee and finally by the general council.

The several provisions of the foregoing charter with reference to Wyman street, the inspection of boilers and elevators and the last section making the tax assessors the head of their department, became a law when approved by the governor and are not submitted to a vote of the people with the remainder of the act, because these several amendments were passed after the amended charter was drawn and submitted to the legislature after the council had requested the original charter to be voted upon before adopted and these several amendments are not part of the general charter amendments, and the legislature was asked to pass them without reference to result of the vote on the original charter amendment.

Section 217 repeals the conflicting laws.

The main changes in the proposed amended charter are as follows:

(a) The "sanitary tax" of $3 per lot is abolished. This seems to be a relic of village days, to be removed as soon as the growth of the city permits, and that time has now arrived, and said tax should be eliminated.

New Board for Streets.

(b) The repair and construction of streets, sewers and bridges, are put under a new board called the board of public works, which board is along the lines of such boards as the board of education, board of health, etc. The citizens from each ward are given representation on this board, and a hearing is assured on any and all complaints that they may desire to make as well as on all protests against proposed improvements which they think the city should hear. But the best idea of the board of public works is to provide an efficient and continuous supervision of the officers and employees in charge of the vast work which the city undertakes each year in connection with streets, sewers, bridges, and this board, so constituted, will secure efficiency and fairness and will secure continuity of plans and method of work.

(c) The number of boards is reduced, and the same general provisions are established for all, to-wit, there is a head of each of the several departments and the boards will exercise supervision over such heads of departments and the other officers of such departments, and the management thereof, but one board is not given greater power than the other, all having the same general authority with reference to their particular departments.

DEMOCRATS WILL GET PLACES UNDER BLALOCK

Former Collector Jackson Alleges Blalock Has Violated Civil Service Law.

By John Corrigan, Jr.

Washington, August 30.—Democrats are going to get some jobs under the collector of internal revenue if A. O. Blalock, the new collector, can turn the trick. On entering office, Mr. Blalock found that all of his deputies were republicans. He turned them all out and appointed democrats in their places. As a result, Henry S. Jackson, the former collector, has filed charges against Mr. Blalock, whom he claims has violated the civil service laws.

The Answer of Blalock.

The reply of Mr. Blalock was that the terms of the deputy collectors expired with the term of the collector under whom they served. Though these men were protected under the civil service, it did not obligate the new collector to continue them, and he might select others from the eligible list, he said.

"Of the seventy men who stood the examination in Georgia last February for these places, only six qualified," continued Mr. Blalock, "four of these were already on the civil service rolls."

Mr. Blalock admitted he went outside the list of eligibles to select his temporary assistants; but says he sought other qualities in his assistants than that they had stood the required mental examination.

Quoted Senator Hoke Smith.

He commented with approval upon Senator Hoke Smith's declaration in the debate yesterday, that young college men could stand these examinations better than anybody else, but were not otherwise equipped for the jobs, and that mature men, especially those who had served as deputy sheriffs, or as tax collectors and assessors of their counties, were better equipped to preform the work than younger men.

Under the amendment adopted by the senate yesterday the force of agents and deputy collectors of internal revenue, under the new income tax law, will not be selected from the civil service rolls, but by the collectors.

MORE RAILROAD TAXES COMING INTO TREASURY

Railroad taxes for the year 1913 continued to come into the office of the state treasurer Saturday, and the total sum is now in excess of $800,000.

The following are the companies which have paid in addition to those already published: Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph company, $29,490.89; Atlanta & West Point railroad, $19,866.57; Augusta-Aiken Railway and Electric company, $7,468.29; Georgia Railroad, $6,699.93.

It is believed at the capitol that a large part of this money will be used to pay the school teachers as soon as the governor returns this week.

Mount Zion Campmeeting.

Griffin, Ga., August 30.—(Special.)—The Mount Zion campmeeting came to a close yesterday after a most successful week's meeting. The meeting this year was one of note for many reasons. Unusual crowds attended the services, especially on Sunday, when some 200 automobiles were on the encampment. Also this year's meeting was notable for the high-grade preaching that was done from the opening hour to the close. The results of the meeting were a large number of conversions and additions to the church membership, to say nothing of the revived condition of the church people attending the annual gathering. The preachers associated with the pastor, Rev. Thomas M. Elliott, were Rev. W. G. Crawley, of Oxford; Rev. J. M. Tumlin, of Thomaston, and Rev. C. T. Ivey, of Barnesville.

'Robbing' Princely Hen-Roosts

First Taxes Laid On German Royalty

(Copyright, 1913, by Curtis Brown.)

Berlin, August 30.—Two and twenty-sovereign German princes are hesitating between the rival virtues of patriotism and thrift. They cannot decide whether it is sweeter to pay the new war tax or to put their savings into sound brewery stocks. Between these temptations they resemble the vacillating lover who says, "How happy could I be with either." The trouble is that this is the first time the twenty-two kings, grand dukes, dukes and princes have ever been asked to pay a pretty stiff tax on their accumulations. So, while patriotic conscience bids them make the sacrifice, their honest pocket interests whisper: Do not pay!

There would be no such dilemma if Europe's sovereigns were ordinary men. So far from being ordinary they enjoy the privilege of "steuerfreiheit." "Steuerfreiheit" is freedom from taxation, and sovereigns and their families have it together with freedom. If they wish, from military service. In addition to the sovereigns there are 600-odd members of mediatized, ex-sovereign families who are exempt from local taxation and from military service. Those privileges are steadfastly opposed by progressive Germans, who say that in hard-up times the average sovereign can as well afford to pay his taxes as can a lawyer with $5,000 a year. All the more so because, if sovereigns go into bankruptcy their subjects help them out, as Wilhelm II. discovered two years ago when Prussia's diet raised his salary by three-quarters of a million. But so far the thrifty princes always stoutly resisted being taxed, and until recently Wilhelm II. resisted most of all.

Now, in a fit of patriotism begotten of the 1813 centenary, Wilhelm II. has forsworn his resistance; he is ready to be taxed, and the other one and twenty sovereigns have had to follow him. All that is now known is that there will be a "non-recurring contribution" from the capital of real and personal property, and that it will probably amount to 1 per cent. This the sovereigns must pay. There may also be a new imperial income tax; this the sovereigns may have to pay also.

Sore at Heart.

Naturally the sovereigns are facing the crisis like gentlemen and feeling intensely virtuous. But at heart they are sore, and they are not blessing Kaiser Wilhelm. Rumors of discontent come from various august palaces. A Dresden official newspaper criticises the scheme, and this means that King Friedrich August does not like it. Of all German princes, except the young Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, Friedrich August is the thriftiest. Another sovereign known for the unprinceliest virtue is the Grand Duke of Hesse, but this grand duke is relatively a hard-up man and his every odd pfenning goes on an artists' colony at Darmstadt. Even sovereigns who are willing to pay are said to feel uneasy. For it is the initial step that counts. For the first time in history the sacred principle that royalties are tax-free is broken.

"If we may be taxed for an army increase," reason the sovereigns, "why may we not for a navy increase, for an education increase, or even for old age pensions for bens? If we have to pay a non-recurring tax, why shall we escape a recurring one? If we are to pay imperial taxes, won't we soon have to pay state and even municipal taxes?" And having so argued, the twenty-two sovereigns strike a patriotic pose and profess their joy at suffering for their country's greatness.

The sovereigns feel all the more doubtful because each complains of suffering from chronic poverty, and therefore feels that his miserable taxation mite will not help the expensive empire. Kaiser Wilhelm, it seems, feels this most. He has the biggest income, but he is only the fifth richest individual in Prussia. Richer than him are Frau Bertha Krupp, who possesses $71,000,000; Prince Henckel von Donnersmarck, who has $63,000,000; Baron von Goldschmidt-Rothschild, of Frankfurt, with $40,000,000, and the Duke of Ujest with $37,000,000. After these come poor Kaiser Wilhelm with a miserable $35,000,000. Kaiser Wilhelm's forests and fields are valued at $17,500,000; his forty palaces, country houses, castles and shooting boxes at $10,000,000 and his land sites in Berlin at $4,500,000. That accounts for $32,000,000 out of the $35,000,000. Wilhelm II. also has land in Westphalia and the Rhine province of unknown value. Altogether he has seventy-four different estates in seven different Prussian provinces. Wilhelm II. has no power to dispose of this property, as it is a family trust. Only the model farm at Cadinen and some small farms purchased by himself he can do as he likes with. His trust properties are liable to property tax.

To Pay on $35,000,000.

Wilhelm II. will have to pay on other property. There is $3,750,000 left by Friedrich Wilhelm III., to which has been added about $1,000,000 presented by the empire to Wilhelm I. after the war with France; $20,000,000 left by Wilhelm I. and large sums gained by Kaiser Wilhelm from the sale of his land in Berlin. Unluckily for Germany's treasury, Wilhelm has always spent more than he received, and the result is all the treasure now amounts to only $20,000,000. The land and the money funds altogether are worth $37,000,000. Out of this, says The Berliner Tageblatt, Kaiser Wilhelm will pay the non-recurring tax on only about $35,000,000, and he may also have to pay 5 per cent income tax every year on his income of $5,500,000.

No other sovereign or prince will pay anything like Kaiser Wilhelm. The crown prince is worth $3,700,000. This is chiefly made up by the crown estate of Oels, which came to the Hohenzollerns thirty years ago from Duke Wilhelm of Brunswick. Kaiser Wilhelm's kinsman, Prince Friedrich Heinrich of Prussia, is worth $7,500,000, and at 1 per cent he will have to pay $75,000; Prince Friedrich Leopold, another kinsman, will pay on $3,500,000. Kaiser Wilhelm's brother, Henry, has estates in Posen, Brandenburg and Schloswig-Holstein which are worth $2,000,000. Altogether the kaiser and these relatives are worth $51,500,000. The younger sons of the kaiser and the other junior Hohenzollern princes have no property worth mentioning. Fifty-three million dollars would cover all the Hohenzollern wealth, and $530,000 is the utmost they will pay in tax.

Rudolph Martin's "Diefionary of Millionaires" says the wealth of the king of Saxony is $6,250,000. Most of it consists of vast Silesian estates, which came from the Duke of Brunswick, who died in 1884. The Duke of Saxe-Weimer, who has big properties in Silesia and Posen, is worth $15,000,000, and he is the richest sovereign after the kaiser, as far as German property is concerned. The Bavarian royal family is hard up. The king of Wuerttemburg is worth $2,500,000, the Grand Duke of Hess $1,260,000, mostly Prussian realty. All the other sovereign families are worth about $50,000,000, counting German land. The richest of all, richer even than the kaiser, is the Prince of Schaumburg-Lippe. But his estates are in Austria, and under the Austro-German agreement they will pay no tax. The prince is the only German sovereign whose main source of wealth will not be taxed. The total wealth of all twenty-two sovereigns is $125,000,000, which gives an average property of only about $5,750,000. It is moderate compensation for the work of a minor German sovereign who has perhaps seven flower shows to open in the course of a summer. Frau Bertha Krupp and Prince Henckel von Donnersmarck could buy up all the twenty-two and some American millionaires could buy them up several times over.

Such Doleful Poverty.

With such doleful poverty it is thought fair that the sovereigns should not be too heavily assessed. They are not likely to be. The sovereigns will naturally not make out their own statements of wealth, but will leave them to managers and secretaries, whom no fear of prosecution will deter from stretching a point in a hard-up ruler's favor. "As for the ordinary German," reason the sovereigns, "he need not talk so much about us princes unpatriotically evading taxation, for has not our respected Professor Delbrueck said that in Prussia only a quarter of the rightful property tax is collected, the state being defrauded of the other three-quarters? What is the difference between paying nothing and paying a quarter of what is due?" The sovereigns, however, have another excuse. This is that a low proportion of their capital wealth brings them income. Their palaces, parks, art collections bring in nothing, and the public largely enjoys them. Prince Friedrich Heinrich of Prussia has a garden to his Berlin palace which is worth $3,750,000, and as the upkeep costs him money, and he gets no return, why should it be taxed?

Palaces, parks and collections will most likely be left free of the tax. In that case only about $75,000,000 of royal capital will pay. That will give the treasury at most $750,000. And on the sovereigns' total income of $10,000,000 an income tax of 5 per cent will perhaps yield the treasury $500,000.

"Is it worth while," ask the hard-up sovereigns, "for the sake of these beggarly sums to rob us of our privilege, and treat us as if we were ordinary men?" They ask themselves this in decent secrecy, but publicly plume their royal crests and thank God that they have at least a chance to prove their German patriotism. The probability is that they will get much credit for public spirit without bearing heavy sacrifices. The "non-recurring contribution" which they will have to pay is certain to become law, but after this is paid they will again be tax-free. The imperial income tax which threatens to burden them permanently is not likely to become law. The average citizen opposes it. Already he has to pay state income tax and municipal income tax, and now if he has to pay a third, imperial income tax, he will feel himself as poor as Kaiser Wilhelm, the Prince of Schaumburg-Lippe and the Duke of Saxe-Weimar. It is a hard-up generation.

CHARLTON IS LODGED IN AN ITALIAN PRISON

Genoa, August 30.—Porter Charlton, under escort of Lieutenant Francina and Carabineer Rizzo, of the Italian military police, was brought ashore here today from the steamship Re d'Italia. After a few hours in prison he was hurried to Como, where he is to stand trial for the murder of his wife three years ago.

The strictest measures of precaution were adopted to guard Charlton. By a stratagem, the newspaper correspondents and photographers were prevented from approaching him. The head of the police invited the newspaper men aboard his launch. The invitation was eagerly accepted in the belief that this would be a good means to reach the prisoner. The launch set out for the Re d'Italia, but suddenly stopped in midstream. All protests were unavailing, even when some of the American reporters threatened to take up the matter with the American authorities.

Charlton appeared on the gangway supported on either side by Franchina and Rizzo. He was handcuffed for the first time, but tried to conceal the fact by the use of a waterproof folded over his hands.

Instead of the Marasal prison, where a great crowd had gathered, he was taken to the barracks of the carabineers. The crowd then rushed to the barracks, but the gates were closed and guarded. After a short interrogation by the captain of carabineers, Charlton was put on the 7:46 train for Como. Franchina and Rizzo still acted as his guard.

MARSHAL IS KILLED BY NEGRO EX-CONVICT

Paducah, Ky., August 30.—Philip Lynn, 60 years old, marshal of Brookport, Ill., a small town just across the Ohio river, was fatally shot today by a negro said to be Henry Allen and for whom searching parties are scouring the river bottoms. Summary punishment is threatened if the negro is caught. Lynn died as he was brought to a Paducah hospital. Allen, it is said, recently was released from the Illinois penitentiary, where he was confined for the murder of his brother.

MRS. L. Y. SAGE, SR. IS PAINFULLY HURT

Mrs. L. Y. Sage, Sr., a well known resident of Atlanta, was hurt painfully yesterday morning when, as she stepped upon an incoming Peachtree street trolley car, her gown became entangled in the shoe of her right foot. She stumbled and fell to the ground, sustaining bruises and cuts about the arm and face and a broken shoulder. She was carried to the Elkin-Goldsmith sanatorium.

Getting Ready for the Canal.

Antwerp, August 30.—In view of the approaching opening of the Panama canal, trade and shipping organizations here are appealing energetically to the government to hasten the harbor extension which was voted in 1905. The new canal, it is pointed out, will revolutionize Antwerp's trade and attention is called to the wholly inadequate condition of the port at present.

Chances the Famous Kelly Took.

Hugh S. Fullerton, the baseball writer for the American Magazine, contributes an article to the September issue of that periodical, entitled, "Take a Chance v. Play It Safe," in which he describes these two policies in baseball play, and tells many stories to illustrate his points. The following is a story about Mike Kelly, the great Chicago ball player of a generation ago:

"The chances Kelly took were the marvels of his era. I have seen him again and again cut straight across the diamond from first to third base, or from second to the home plate, and land in safety because the umpire failed to see his reckless move. One day Kelly cut from first to third on a slow infield bounder. He ran past the umpire, who was racing toward first, screaming at him to watch the play, and, swinging straight across, he tore for third. Gaffney called the runner out at first, and whirled just in time to catch 'Kel' going into third, and called him out. Kelly walked to the umpire, protested an instant, then, knowing Gaffney had caught him in the act, he remarked: 'All right, Mr. Umpire, I've never been on these grounds before and didn't know which was second base.'

"Two innings later he scored from second base through the pitcher's box and was not seen."

President Wilson and Mexico.

President Wilson made it plain last month that his policy regarding Mexico was not merely a drifting one, or one lacking in motives or intentions. His policy, like that of the previous administration, assumes that the internal affairs of Mexico belong to the Mexicans, and that, while the United States has greater interests in the country south of the Rio Grande than has any other outside government, there is no ground for interfering or intervening unless some wholly unexpected contingency should arise. Our wishes toward Mexico are those of a good neighbor, hoping to see a regime of constitutional order and liberty soon established. Our government naturally cares about American citizens and their lawful interests in Mexico, and will be solicitous to protect every American in his rights. But it is not regarded as the business of the government at Washington to guarantee the comfort or the prosperity of an American citizen who chooses to subject himself in a foreign country to prevailing conditions of disorder that involve no intentional discrimination against Americans.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Review of r,szmridandmentddoer-ETA O A T

Two Mrs. Vanderbilts at War

MRS. ELSIE FRENCH VANDERBILT — MRS. HOLLINS McKIM VANDERBILT

Society had something to talk about when Alfred G. Vanderbilt and his wife, Mrs. Margaret Emerson Smith Hollins McKim Vanderbilt, who recently returned from abroad, went to Newport, R. I., for the tennis matches. It had to decide whether to receive the A. G. Vanderbilts with open arms or give them the cold shoulder in favor of the former Mrs. A. G. Vanderbilt, who was Elsie French. They say that the society matrons whose nod is law beamed upon Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt, while they gave the present Mrs. Vanderbilt the glassy stare. Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt is attractive and popular with the women as well as with the men. They say she won out easily in the social war which was declared between the past and present Mrs. Vanderbilt. The society gossips say Mr. Vanderbilt and his present wife were not invited to the Fish ball or to Mrs. Oelrich's preceding affair.

SEASON FOR SOCKEYES EXTENDED BY CANADA

Bellingham, Washington, August 30. The provincial fisheries department of the Canadian government has officially extended the sockeye salmon open season until September 15, knowing that sockeyes may not be caught in Puget Sound waters after August 25. This information was received today by State Fish Commissioner L. H. Darwin from W. J. Bowsock, commissioner of fisheries of British Columbia.

The extension, according to Commissioner Bowsock, has been authorized as a result of the failure of the United States to ratify or obtain definite action on the recommendation made by the fisheries commission in 1910.

"The regulations pertaining to Canada," says the letter, "recommended by this commission, were made law in 1910 by dominion enactment, but no corresponding legislation has been passed by the United States. This annual close of the season on the Canadian side was one of the suggested regulations and the relaxation of it during the current year merely presages denunciation of the treaty, which will take place if effect is not given by the United States to the regulations refered to at the next session of congress."

Sulzer Assailed for Virtues, Not for Faults.

(From "The Progress of the World," in The American Review of Reviews for September.)

Quite regarless of Governor Sulzer's mistakes or faults, it is an undoubted fact that he has shown high courage and great virtue as governor of the state of New York during the brief period of his incumbency; and it is further true that the bitterness of the attacks upon him which have led to the impeachment proceedings have been precisely in proportion to his exercise of political duties. However great or small his misdoings, his only fault in the eyes of those who are seeking his downfall lies in the fact that he has been, from their standpoint, to use their own word, an "impossible" governor; that is to say, it has been impossible to get him to obey "Charlie" Murphy, whether by threatenings or cajolnga.

The legislature had adjourned on May 3, having refused to pass the state-wide primary bill that the democratic platform had promised the people, and that Governor Sulzer demanded. Although there was little hope of getting any reversal of its action from the present legislature, Governor Sulzer called a special session, and set June 16 for its beginning. The governor took the stump and attempted to bring popular pressure to bear upon members of the legislature. But Murphy himself was obdurate, and the Murphy control remained unshaken. Under the state constitution, a legislature called in special session may only consider subjects expressly laid before it by the governor. The special session rejected again the governor's primary-election bill, and sent up to him again for his veto its own bill, so framed as to permit the machines to control the situation through their conventions. Some other matters were submitted by the governor which are not pertinent for us to present in this connection. The fight became every day more bitter, and the governor's attacks upon Murphy and Tammany had by this time gone so far as to preclude all hope of reconciliation or compromise. The governor was determined to destroy the Tammany boss and the Tammany boss, in turn, saw no way of escape except to destroy the governor.

A good many weeks ago, according to private political information that came to us from sources that we regard as trustworthy, the Tammany leaders and the powerful interests behind them had determined to impeach the governor in order to get him out of the way. A mere majority vote of the lower branch of the legislature is all that is needed to start impeachment proceedings. This majority was in absolute control of Tammany. It was the theory of the Tammany lawyers that, under the constitution of New York, the beginning of such proceedings would summarily suspend the governor from his office and put the lieutenant governor in his place with full and unrestricted authority as governor. At that time the Tammany machine had not decided what kind of charges they would bring against the governor. Attempts were made to find him guilty of some impropriety in a law case twenty-five or thirty years ago. In these matters he was completely exonerated. A breach of promise suit was brought, which seemed on its face absurd, because it related to affairs long since gone by.

Finally an investigating committee of the legislature was set to work to find out things against the governor which could be used as a basis of charges in impeachment proceedings.

Many a wise word is spoken in jest, but more foolish ones are spoken in earnest.

Is No. 122 the Most Popular Street Car Conductor in Atlanta?

Contestants Suspect W. H. Forshaw of Having a Trick or Two Up His Sleeve—Says He's Going It Individually. Expects to Win the $100 Solely on His Own Efforts.

"That man's mighty popular, believe me," said a man in blue when reference was made to W. H. Forshaw, whose record in the past has made him feared in The Constitution's Prize Contest. "He just about cleans up every time he enters a contest. People like him and help him every time they get a chance. Are you sure he's working individually? Hasn't he a number of people working for him?"

That's the way the conductors speak about No. 122. Indeed, he must be a mighty popular conductor to have such a prestige. But the truth of the matter is this: W. H. Forshaw, as well as practically all the men in the blue entered in this Conductor's Contest, are out on their own individual ability. They're all depending on their standing with the people who travel on their cars. They're all striving for that $100 in gold, but they're striving for it fair and square on their own efforts.

Don't let the fame of Forshaw keep you from proving your mettle. There's no reason under the sun why you can't make as good a record as he. You've the same opportunities: you're every bit as good a man; you know plenty of people just like he who'd be only too willing to help you along. Get out. Start something. Wake up, and do things. You can. Nothing prevents but your own imagination. Make up your mind to win that $100 in gold. Go after it now—and win!

What Are You Doing?

Yes, you who read this. Have you really begun to get in serious work for your own benefit? You're entered, or should be, in this unusual contest. You win a prize on your own merits. It's your standing at the end of the contest that will tell whether or not you've been as active and as energetic as you might have been. Don't let the fact that you get paid for every subscription you turn in at The Constitution office keep you from putting on full speed and sailing right along toward the top as a prize-winner.

Coming right down to brass tacks, what is the winning of a prize compared to the fact that you'll establish yourself beyond question as the most popular one, or one of the most popular street car conductors in Atlanta? It's up to you to make good, and the sooner you wade in and get things going, the sooner you'll send that record of yours shooting sky highward.

Five Weeks More.

That's all the time you have. Plenty in which to win that $100 if you're a hustler. Not near enough if you're content to go after subscriptions in a hit-or-miss style. And there's absolutely no reason why you should adopt the latter attitude. Folks are willing to subscribe to The Constitution. Our records show a steady increase in subscriptions. Atlantans and others who while not living in Atlanta, come here now and then and wish to be thoroughly posted on affairs, are subscribers to The Constitution because of its dependable news.

Don't wait for someone else to climb. Jump in now and set them an example. Every subscription you turn in at the The Constitution office raises your figure a thousand or two. Get Busy. It's easier than you really believe. For the public is with you, and if you approach them in the right manner and explain fully what you're offering, they'll be only too glad to help you in your efforts to prove that you are the most or one of the most popular street car conductors in Atlanta. And in the meantime, don't let No. 122 worry you. He's in the game to win, same as you. And he's bent on winning on his individual efforts.

SPEEDY PASSAGE FOR TARIFF BILL

Democrats Think the Measure May Be Put Through in a Week—First Reading Has Been Completed.

Washington, August 30.—The senate heaved a sight of relief tonight, when, just before adjournment, it completed the first reading of the new tariff bill. Although many of the most important new features of the measure remain to be settled, senate leaders agreed that the disposal of the first reading of the bill had brought the passage of the measure within view, and that another week may witness its completion and passage.

The rates of the new income tax; the proposed tax on cotton futures; many provisions of the administrative features of the law; the suggested tax rebate of 5 per cent for imports brought in American ships, and many other sections of the measure that will occasion debate were put over without action, and will be taken up again next week. Senator Norris announced that before the bill was completed he would propose an amendment directed at the Brazilian coffee monopoly, giving the president authority to levy a 25 per cent duty on a product controlled through monopoly or conspiracy in another country.

To Adjust All Differences.

Democratic members of the finance committee met again tonight and may continue their sessions tomorrow, to go over the sections laid aside by the senate in its several weeks of work on the bill. It was expected tonight that the democratic senators would be called into a party conference Monday or Tuesday to adjust all differences over the bill, including the question of the income tax on large incomes.

The senate today made a number of important changes in the bill. The proposal of the democrats to give circuit courts of appeal equal jurisdiction with the United States customs court, was withdrawn by Senator Williams, in behalf of the democratic committee members. He said the committee had decided it would be better to leave the final judgment in customs cases entirely to the customs court.

Just before adjournment Senator Poindexter offered an amendment for a tariff commission of five persons who would serve for fifteen years and receive salaries of $15,000 per year. They would be removable by a majority vote of congress. The amendment which represents the views of the progressive party will be taken up Monday.

Convict-Made Goods.

The senate adopted a provision prohibiting importation of goods made by convict labor, or "principally by children under 14 years of age." Senator Borah, republican, who had been instrumental in having the child labor question considered as part of the bill, declared the amendment, as it had been drawn, did not meet the needs of the situation. The wording of the provision, he said, would admit goods made by child labor, because it would be difficult to show they had been made "principally by children under 14 years of age."

The provisions giving the president power to establish retaliatory duties much higher than the usual tariff rates, against certain imports from countries that might discriminate against the United States were adopted after several fruitless attempts by the republicans to amend them by increasing the list of articles upon which extra duties could be levied.

Senator McCumber endeavored to have agricultural products included in the list, but his amendment was rejected.

Tax on Cotton Futures.

The Clark amendment to tax cotton futures is to be considered again by the democratic caucus, it was decided tonight by the finance committee, after a number of democratic senators had requested in writing that that course be pursued.

The amendment would place a tax on cotton future sales, the tax to be refunded when the cotton is delivered.

An attempt will be made in the caucus to substitute for the Clark tax the Smith bill requiring the delivery within a certain number of grades of cotton of the grade in the contract.

The finance committee will meet Sunday in an attempt to complete its consideration of matters referred back to it. If it finishes the caucus will begin Monday evening. It is planned to adjourn the senate an hour earlier daily so as to give more time for the caucus each day.

Italian Immigrant Rises.

In the interesting people department of the September American Magazine appears an article about Cesare Conti, who, thirty-five years ago, was an immigrant office boy in the New York Banking house which he now serves as president. To immigrants Conti is a shining light of encouragement. He banks for them in various parts of the country, and acts as a voluntary consul for Italians here and in his native county. The following is an extract from the article:

"Mr. Conti was born in 1866 in the Italian province of Massa e Carrara, near ancient Florence and Pisa. Shortly after his tenth birthday, his family decided to emigrate to the 'promised land' across the Atlantic. When they arrived here, Cesare was sent to the public schools for six years; after which he was ready to take his place as an independent worker. He became an office boy in the very bank of which he is now the president; and climbed up the ladder step by step to his present position.

"Only forty-six, Mr. Conti is the head of a number of firms of the widest activities. Cesare Conti, Inc., maintains immigrant banks in most of the large American cities; the Lloyd Sabaudo Steamship company carries passengers and freight between New York and Boston and the Italian ports; the Italo-American Stores company exports autos, shoes, machinery, tools, etc., to Italy, and brings back paintings hats, wines, cheese, oils, cigars, fruits, lemons and garlic for the princely firms on Fifth avenue and the tenement stores of Mulberry street.

"But no man of his power and temperament could permit himself to be wholly engaged by his business. Cesare Conti is an ambassador between Italy and the United States—unofficial, it is true, but most potent in cementing increased harmony. In furthering commercial exchange between the two countries, he has increased that respect of each for the other which invariably accompanies international trade relations. He acts as a voluntary Italian consul, and gives of his time, his money and his influence to help his compatriots.

WILD MAN OF BORNEO FEARS MANTLE OF G. WASHINGTON

London, August 30.—We all have heard of the Wild Man of Borneo and his dog and his child and his wife and the rest of his belongings as enumerated in the ditty of our childhood, and now comes a description of his characteristics, which prove to be queer enough, from an English clergyman who knows the wild man better than the late Phineas T. Barnum, who first exhibited one of him in the United States, ever did. This clergyman is the Rev. Edwin H. Gomes, who has spent seventeen years among the Sea Dyaks, or wild men, of Borneo and whose account of them is highly entertaining.

According to Mr. Gomes, George Washington would be canonized by the wild men of Borneo did they happen to know that such a person ever existed, for they are almost, if not quite, the most truthful race on earth. So disgraceful, in fact, do they consider the deceiving of others by an untruth that such conduct is handed down to posterity by a curious custom.

"They heap up a vast pile of branches of trees in memory of the man who has uttered a great lie," says Mr. Gomes, "so that future generations may know of his wickedness and take warning by it. The persons deceived start the tugoungbula—the liar's mound—by heaping up a large number of branches in some conspicuous spot by the side of the path leading from one village to another. Every passerby contributes to it, and at the same time curses the man in memory of whom it is."

The Dyaks, who used, of course, to be head-hunters, but are not now to any extent, would also, apparently, agree with Punch's famous answer to the question, "Is Life Worth Living?" which was, you will remember, "It Depends on the Liver," for in Dyak-land this much maligned organ, instead of the heart, is supposed to be the seat of the various qualities and emotions.

"When," says Mr. Gomes, "the Dyaks wish to describe the great courage of a man, they say he has a 'brave liver.' Intelligence also resides in the liver, and a man of knowledge is one possessing an 'enlightened liver.' Kindness is the quality of the man who has a 'large liver,' and perseverance that of one who has a 'hard liver.' A weak, undecided man is spoken of as one who has had a 'soft liver.'"

Logic appears to be the wild man of Borneo's weakest point.

"The most contradictory opinions," says Mr. Gomes, "seem to dwell together in perfect harmony, in the turgid stream of his mind. He cannot distinguish, for instance, between coincidence and causation, and will argue that because his grandfather died after he had climbed a tree, therefore his death was caused by his climbing the tree, and consequently neither his father nor himself nor his children are to climb trees, if they wish to enjoy good health.

"The faculty of moral perception is so indefinitely latent among the Dyaks," adds Mr. Gomes, "that one is inclined to say that they possess no conscience. In spite of this, in his jungle home, the Dyak is remarkably honest. Families are often away from their homes for weeks at a time, and though no one is left in charge of their rooms in the long village house, things are seldom lost. Sometimes Dyaks become demoralized by associating with other races in the towns, but a case of theft among the Dyaks in their native wilds is indeed rare."

This reverend student of the wild man of Borneo winds up by saying that, notwithstanding his lack of initiative and other faults, a consideration of his thoughts, customs, belief and ideals shows that he is every inch a man, that his mental powers are quite equal to those of other races in the same stage of civilization and his moral character far superior to theirs.

CITY SLOT MACHINE ORDINANCE IS VOID

Court of Appeals Holds State Law Against Gambling Already Covers Subject.

According to a decision of the state court of appeals handed down yesterday in the case of Alexander v. City of Atlanta, the city ordinance against the keeping of slot machines in near beer saloons or other places of business, as an incentive to trade, is void.

The court holds that such slot machines are gambling devices and as such are in contravention of the state law against gambling. It is not allowed in a city ordinance to define a crime and provide a penalty for its violation which is already covered by the state law.

A Gambling Device.

T. C. Alexander is alleged to have had in his near beer saloon a slot machine which sold chewing gum by the usual deposit of a nickel. But, in addition to the gum, there was a chance of the purchaser drawing from the machine a number of trade checks, twenty being the maximum, which were good in trade at the bar for 5 cents each. The slot machine could also be fed with trade checks, when no gum would be forthcoming, but there was a chance of increasing the number of checks.

The court held that this machine was clearly a gambling device and a man who had one of them in his place was guilty of running a gambling house in violation of the state law. Gambling was not limited to the wagering of money. When anything of value was staked on a chance, the transaction was a gamble and in violation of the law. Now the checks which were used in this machine were things of value, because they were good in payment of drinks at the bar or for the purchase of cigars. The chewing gum feature was simply a blind designed to evade the law.

Superior Court Reversed.

The case was first tried before the city recorder and a fine imposed upon the defendant for violating the city ordinance. Then it was taken on certiorari to the superior court, where the recorder's decision was affirmed by Judge George Bell. The court of appeals reverses Judge Bell's decision and declares the ordinance upon which it was based void.

Alexander also raised the point that there had been insufficient evidence upon which to convict him, but the court decided to put its decision entirely on the validity of the city ordinance.

The Longest Good Road.

(From The San Antonio Express.)

With the completion of the Meridian highway from Winnipeg, Canada, to Laredo, on the Rio Grande, the most notable undertaking in public road construction in this country, so far as distance is concerned, will have been accomplished, and it seems quite probable that this work will be finished, if not before the close of the year, at least during the first half of 1914.

This highway has already been completed from Winnipeg south to the north line of Kansas, so it is only necessary for the states of Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas to do their part in order that there may be a continuous highway from Canada to the Mexican line, passing entirely through the United States. Already some sections have been completed in Texas, and with the awakened interest manifested in the construction of good roads it may be expected that all the work necessary in Texas will be done shortly.

The road will follow almost a direct line, passing through the states of North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma, thence into Texas, and ending, for the present, at least, at the Mexican border, though it is planned ultimately to construct it farther south into Mexico and on into Central America. It will thus be an international highway, linking together the principal political divisions of this continent and facilitating travel for millions of people.

You'll find the men of friends to have this belief well fixed within them:
The people whom we seek to serve,
The people from whom favors come,
Have nothing else to say to us,
Save little things we've kindly done.

JUDSON C. CLEMENTS MAY LOSE HIS PLACE

Rumored Georgian May Not Be Reappointed to Commerce Commission.

Washington, D. C., August 30.—The possibility that Judge Judson C. Clements will not be reappointed to the interstate commerce commission at the close of his present term, December 30, is being rumored here, ex-Governor R. B. Glenn, of North Carolina, is being urged for the place and is said to stand a good chance of landing it.

The position pays $10,000 a year. Judge Clements was chairman of the commission for one year.

Judge Clements was born in Walker county, Georgia, sixty-seven years ago and formerly represented the seventh district in congress. He is still active and vigorous.

Yuan Shih-kai, the Diaz of China

(From "Yuan Shih-Kai, Master of China," by Carl Crow, in the American Review of Reviews for September.)

Since the abdication of the Manchus, more than a year ago, Yuan Shih-kai has been the government of China. He has talked a great deal about republican principles, but he has ruled with a power as absolute as that exercised by the dethroned Manchus. No other ruler is more carefully guarded; no other ruler, either monarchial or republican, is surrounded with more of the pomp and circumstances of power than Yuan Shih-kai, the master of China.

A few months ago an American newspaper man, in an interview with him, said: "Some persons say you wish to become another Napoleon."

Yuan laughed and replied: "Yes, I know they say that, but they are wrong. I have taken Washington, not Napoleon, as my model. Who is the most admired figure in history? Is it Napoleon or any king or emperor? No. It is Washington. What did Napoleon leave? A torn and exhausted country. What did Washington create? A great and free nation."

In spite of this, the southern provinces believe Yuan is following the example of Napoleon, and hence they have begun civil war against him. There is, in this fight between the south and north of China, a striking similarity to the great war between the states which was waging here fifty years ago. The southern provinces hold that they have inalienable rights of their own, which are threatened by the domination of Yuan Shih-kai. These rights, they claim, include the right to secede from the union of provinces which make up the republic of China. Their statesmen, their politicians, their logicians and their sophists argue that it was the secession of the southern provinces from the monarchy of China which made the establishment of the republic possible; hence, if the southern provinces are not satisfied with the republic which Yuan Shih-kai has dominated, there is no reason why they should not again secede and set up a republic of their own. Against this argument the north (that is, Yuan Shih-kai) is arguing as our north argued more than fifty years ago. And, as in that time, it appears that school book theories will again fail to settle the question, which can only be determined by the results of the battlefield.

He may decide that the present southern rebellion is proof that a republican form of government is not a success for China. In that event there will be little to prevent him from establishing him as the head of a new dynasty.

The editor of the interesting People department of the American Magazine makes the point in the current number that each of us has something of greatness in him. He says:

"This department is not confined to people of fame, genius or remarkable endowment. It aims to present a certain number of 'common, ordinary folks,' whose achievements are nevertheless considerable, either because of their courage, endurance, persistence, or other qualities. Each one of us has something of greatness in him, and stories of 'plain folks' whose qualities of greatness have been put to some use are tremendously inspiring. It is our hope that many readers have derived from these pages some personal stimulus to greater effort."

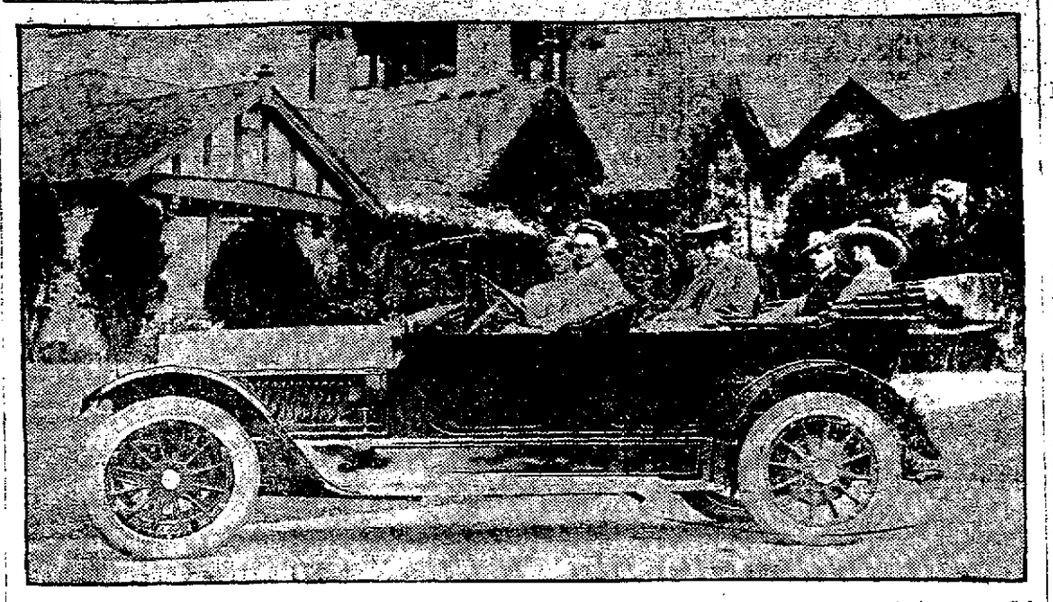
First of New 1914 Cole Six to Arrive in Atlanta



The above photograph shows the new 1914 Cole Six. In the car are H. B. Dwelle, treasurer; J. B. Austin, secretary; H. P. Gregory, city salesmanager (at the wheel); J. W. Jones, city salesman, all of whom were chosen by Mr. Carter, general manager of the Cole Motor Co. of Georgia, to guide the destinies of the Cole through the coming 1914 season. In the rear seat are Mr. and Mrs. Devereux, of Jacksonville, Fla., who are visiting Mr. Gregory, the genial manager of the Cole company. Mr. Gregory was determined that they should see Atlanta and see it in a new Cole Six, and in true Atlanta style whisked them from one end of the Gate City to the other, and in the words of Mr. Gregory, "We showed them the sights in a Cole, and gave them a taste of the true Atlanta spirit."

NEW MODELS ANNOUNCED BY THE COLE COMPANY

Line for Coming Season Consists of a Four and a Six of Identical Construction.

Indianapolis, Ind., August 30.—(Special.)—In announcing to the public their series nine models for the coming automobile fiscal year, the Cole Motor Car company, of Indianapolis, has accomplished what they claim their ambition to produce the standardized car of the industry. A roll of honor among the different automobile parts makers has been established, and it is declared by them that each member of the combination is the standard by which all similar parts are measured.

The Standardized Cole's roll of honor consists of the Timken Detroit Axle and Bearing company, the Northway three point suspension motor manufacturing company, Mayo Radiator company, Gemmer Steering Gear company, Dayton Engineering Laboratories company's electric lighting, starting and ignition system, Detroit Steel Product company springs, Hydraulic Pressed Steel company's frames, Firestone Tire and Rubber company's tires and demountable rims, Stewart-Warner company's speedometer, Taylor Manufacturing company's tire pump and Stromberg Motor Devices company's carburetor.

And in making their announcement as a preliminary the Cole people declare they are talking economic standardization and not mechanical standardization.

Identical in Construction.

Their line for the coming season consists of a four and six cylinder models, which are identical in construction and design throughout.

In mechanical construction throughout both cars are identical, the same axle that is under the six is under the four, the same motor in the four as in the six, less one pair of cylinders, the radiator is the same, the steering gear, the electric lighting starting and ignition system. This, it is declared by the local Cole representative, Mr. Carter, is due to Cole's economic standardization policy.

In the experimental tests which Cole had been conducting before announcing for a strictly five-passenger family car in his four cylinder job. As his local representative, Mr. Carter puts it a car that would be properly balanced as to weight, with an axle to sustain this weight, the proper amount of horsepower to carry the weight with a body that would be a comfortable five-passenger, four-passenger or roadster, as the model demands.

On the new models a six volt Delco electric starting and lighting system, which is the only system that is manufactured this year by the Delco company, is used in conjunction with a three cell battery. The starter is operated by pressing a convenient button on the ignition switch and an independent pedal located on the toe boards. The speed of the motor is in excess of carburetion requiremens, insuring prompt starting.

The lighting system is of the single wire six volt Delco type, all wires being carried in brass conduits, which it is claimed prevents short circuiting, due to possible moisture or abrasion. Both trouble and tonneau lamps are regular equipment. The head lights are extra large. The side lamps are provided with side glass and rear bull's eye to illuminate the running boards. The tail lamp properly illuminates the license tag. The Delco double type automatic distributor is used to disperse current to the spark plugs. It is provided with a resistance unit to prevent sparking of contacts.

Running Boards Clear.

The running boards are clean and clear of tool boxes, tires, battery boxes, etc. The battery box is swung under the front floor board, the tires are carried on substantial adjustable irons at the rear of the body, while provision is made for the tools under the right front seat.

The frames on both models are of the bottle double drop type, permitting of small turning radius and low center of gravity, and at the same time giving proper clearance for spring action and low car. The chassis springs are exceptionally long, the front springs being of the semi-elliptic type and the rears three-quarter elliptic.

On the cowl board are assembled and in easy reach of the operator, the Delco combination lighting, starting and ignition switch, auxiliary hand pump, oil sight feed, gasoline tank pressure gauge, Warner speedometer and an eight-day clock.

The Taylor Noil engine-driven tire pump supplies clear air from the atmosphere insuring the tire tubes against premature decay. A tire can be filled in three to four minutes with the engine running at slow speed.

Timken axles of the heavy pleasure car type are used both in front and rear with Timken bearings throughout, a new feature on the rear Timken being the nickel steel housing to insure complete rigidity. This improvement has been added by the Timken Detroit Axle company at a tremendous expense.

The Cole has entered the left hand drive center control class with their new models; Firestone demountable rims are continued, with Pantasote top and Collins side curtains as regular equipment.

The steam-line body design is handsome, unique and comfortable. Long grain hand buffed leather is used through together with deep flexible springs and genuine curled hair.

The front and rear doors, following European design, on the four and five-passenger cars in the four cylinder models are extremely wide, 24 inches; while on the six and seven-passenger bodies on the six cylinder models they are 24 inches in front and 28 inches entering the tonneau. The auxiliary seats for these models can be operated easily without disturbing the passengers in the tonneau seats, and when folded and not in use are so located that they do not cut off any of the entrance room to tonneau. In fact entrance to the tonneau can easily be made with these auxiliary seats down.

The windshield is of the rain vision type, securely mounted and made a part of the body.

FIRST BAPTIST 8, SOUTHERN SHOPS 2.

First Baptist played its best ball of the entire season when it defeated the crack team of the Southern Shops at Brisbine Park yesterday.

The feature of the game was the pitching of Collier for First Baptist, allowing only 5 scratch hits, winning the game with almost faultless support from the rest of his team-mates.

Parker did about the best pitching of any pitcher First Baptist has been against this year. He struck out eighteen of their strong batters, and but for the fact that First Baptist connected safely for ten hits when hits meant runs, and ragged support, there might have been a different tale to tell. First Baptist featured fast double play in the eighth inning with men on bases, from Abbott to F. Forbes to Chase.

The management of First Baptist challenges any team of amateurs in the city and is at present claiming the city amateur championship, having won twenty-one games out of twenty-two played. Call Lester Forbes, captain, Main 3078, or C. J. King, manager Associated Press, for games.

GRANT PARK WINS ONE.

The Grant Park team of the Grocers' league, won its game with Rogers Company, when the latter's men failed to put in appearance.

JONES COMPANY FORFEITS ONE.

The Jones Company forfeited their game with the Kamper team last Wednesday. Failure of the men to put in appearance was given as the cause.

FAIRBURN DEFEATS CRANE COMPANY.

The Fairburn boys walked away with the strong Crane Company, of the Railroad league, by the one-sided score of 18 to 2. Fairburn began clouting the pill in the first and scored nearly every inning thereafter.

MRS. ASQUITH LONGING TO BE "HERSELF" AGAIN

She's Tired of Being Wife of Prime Minister and "Standing on Hind Legs."

London, August 30.—"I am sick to death of it," said Mrs. Asquith, the premier's wife, to a friend at Goodwood. She was referring to her duties as the wife of the prime minister. "You never can be 'yourself,'" she volunteered, "for you must be forever, so to speak, standing on your hind legs." Her friends who know "Margot" best, predicted this for her. "She'll be so heartily sick of it all she'll wish herself at the bottom of the sea," they said when she went to Downing street.

"I have to wear a hat, or, at any rate, keep my head covered when I play golf," she remarked, "and if there's one thing I dislike when I play it is to do this. It takes away half the pleasure of the game. And all the weary bores one has to be civil to if you are the wife of the prime minister! And you have to put the brake on your tongue all the time."

When the day comes for the prime minister to throw over his office—and people think it is near enough—Mr Asquith is wondering what his wife will do in honor of the event. That she will do something to thrill everybody agrees. She has been practicing the tango "on the quiet" and by all accounts makes a very good hand at it. She has also been to interview her dear friends, the Paris dressmakers, about early winter fashions. Her tastes in things sartorial are choice and highly expensive, but smart women don't care for them, as for one thing they are often eccentric. I have seen her only once in a gown I wanted. It was a wonderful shade of pomegranate tulle and was made by Beer, of Paris. There were never before such drapings on this planet. The prime minister looked awfully proud of her. Mrs. Asquith, like other women who pose as being witty and good conversationalists, never cultivates Americans, possibly because they are too like herself in their ways. Her husband, however, thinks them great fun and sees them whenever he gets the chance.

GORDON WILL FEATURE ALL SPORTS THIS YEAR

Gordon Institute at Barnesville will open next Wednesday, and with its opening interest is centering in the athletic department of the school and the prospects for the football season.

Coach VanTassell is hard at work arranging matters for the opening of the season and will issue a call for candidates for the eleven a few days after school convenes.

Coach VanTassell, in addition to coaching football and baseball, will teach boxing, fencing and tennis. In fact all kinds of athletics will be featured this year.

No Such Simplicity.

(From The Washington Star.)

And yet there was never such a thing as "Jeffersonian simplicity." Mr. Jefferson was not a man of simple life, but of a full and expensive life. He was an aristocrat in all his personal tastes and indulged himself. He had traveled in Europe and observed how the trick was turned there. And both as secretary of state and as president he lived at the top of his time.

One neglect, no matter how trifling will rile the clearness of a long established bond of affection.

It doesn't take much to make a friend, and just a little to lose one.

SEIBERLING PRAISES SUGGESTION OF O'NEAL

Thinks Days Should Be Set Aside to Cause of Good Roads.

"The setting aside each year of one or two days for the purpose of appropriating money or labor to the cause of good roads," says F. A. Seiberling, president of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, Akron, Ohio, "is a fitting suggestion, which, if carried out, will aid materially in promoting the good roads movement.

"Governor O'Neal, of Alabama, certainly hit the nail on the head when he included this in a recent proclamation," says Mr. Seiberling. "If every state would take this step, and its citizens would contribute enthusiastically and liberally, splendid results would be achieved. A large per cent of zest would be added to the public's present attitude towards the question, if they could only realize the beneficial results that would be derived from this concerted action.

"Not only should the farmer be interested in such a move, for the benefit the results would afford him in transporting his products to market, but also the suburbanite who commutes every day by automobile or motorcycle between the city and his home.

"Good roads are a valuable asset in maintaining an automobile, and are a large factor in reducing the expense of upkeep to a minimum. Tires, especially, are subject to improper road conditions which have a severe and detrimental effect upon them.

"When this suggestion of Governor O'Neal's is recognized and taken advantage of by each state, Good Roads day will ultimately result in being observed as a holiday of note. Each citizen of every state will, no doubt, willingly contribute to the cause. Providing this epoch arrives, many localities will be enabled to come in closer touch with the surrounding country."

Godbey Wins Swim.

Memphis, Tenn., August 30.—Robert Godbey, of Memphis, won the annual 10-mile Marathon swim in one hour and 37 minutes here today. With one minute each separating them, Davy Jones, of Memphis, was second; Russell Heath, St. Louis (Missouri A. C.), third, and Everett Cook, Memphis, fourth. The race was sanctioned by the Southern A. A. U.

The course was down the Mississippi river, finishing at the Memphis wharf. Jones, who is 15 years old and weighs but 90 pounds, led for the first six miles. Tom Martin, Birmingham, Ala., A. C., southern champion, was attacked by cramps and was forced to quit at the end of the fourth mile.

Giants Won't Talk.

New York, August 30.—Members of the Giants, who returned to this city on an evening train, were not inclined to talk much about the attack of the Philadelphia crowd upon them after today's game in that city. Captain Larry Doyle minimized the affair. "Two or three of the boys were struck," he said, "but none was hurt to amount to anything."

Southern League Season Ends Next Sunday

Even Break

Long's Homers Deciding Factors; Pels Fought to Last

Love Blew in the First Game, Pels Winning—Three Fierce Hits in Rally in Seventh Wins Second.

By Dick Jemison

Ye housewives of Atlanta owe a debt of gratitude to Thomas Long, of Borden Springs, Ala., left fielder of the Atlanta baseball club. You can thank the speedy little left fielder for the splendid appetite that your husband exhibited Saturday at supper.

With everyone of the largest crowd of baseball fans of the season having on his glummest look over the possibility of the Crackers losing a doubleheader to the down-trodden Pelicans, and a chance to gain a notch on the leaders, who, as a glance at the scoreboard showed, had been defeated by the Chattanooga Lookouts, Rabbit, with one fell swoop, obliterated all the sour expressions.

The Crackers entered the seventh frame of the final fray two runs to the bad, and one game already on the wrong side of the ledger by a 7 to 5 count. And the way the gentleman of the Russian name was hurling for the Pels it looked like curtains.

Rabbit Gets Busy.

But "Rabbit" was yet to be heard from.

In the final session of the first contest, with the count standing 7 to 5, with the locals carrying the small end, Rabbit poled a vicious clout to the score board for the circuit, the final result showing 7-5.

No one in the vast audience expected any such similar blow from the bludgeon of the little speed merchant. But it is always the unexpected that happens. With two and two and Agler on the initial sack as the result of Glavenich's liberality in failing to locate the platter, there was a crash.

Glavenich laid a fast one right in Tommy's wheelhouse. Tommy swung true. Hooking the ball square in the face, he laced it over McKillen's head in left field and, with the fleetness of a deer, chased Agler around the bases to the plate. Again he had come through with a circuit clout and in the time of direst need.

This one blow changed the sour grapes' expression to one of tremendous joy. The bleachers could not restrain themselves, and cushions rained on the field after the great clout. Everyone was delirious with joy.

This blow put heart into the entire Cracker team. It was really the blow that turned the trick, although great is the credit due Captain Wallop and Bizzy for their blows, the former a triple and the latter that old pinch single.

But, after all, it was Rabbit's circuit clout that sent the large crowd of fans home in a good mood, realizing that half a game had been gained on the leaders. And everyone ate ravenously. But for this blow, Atlanta housewives would never, to their dying day, understand what happened to their husbands' appetites.

Nerve-Racking Games.

But we are leaving the main track to go in raptures about the blow that routed the Russian artilleryman.

The locals and the Pelicans battled through two seven-inning games of nerve-racking ball, with both sides threatening to blow up at any stage. The Crackers, with the assistance of the tallest hurler in captivity, blew in one round in the first game. The Pels' hurler blew at just the psychological time in the second game, the time that they write about in books.

The Pels copped the opening melee by a 7 to 5 count, by getting to Slim Love in the fifth round. Six hits for six runs, with a couple of boots by his support and his own idea that all he has to do is to hurl that baseball and then stand flat-footed in the box, no matter what the play, setnt him to the bench, where he ought to have gone before the inning started.

Joe Conzelman assumed the hurling burden and, after he got warmed up in that disastrous fifth, hurled as great a game as he pitched the day before. Four of the seven men that faced him in the two and a fraction innings he pitched, hit nothing but the breezes.

The Pels were the first to tally. Love put McKillen on by issuing free transportation in the first inning. Erwin sacrificed him down, and he moved over to third on an out, scoring on a passed ball.

The Crackers tied it up in their half. Agler singled and stole second and third. Welchonce got a free ticket, and while the Pels were chasing him up and down between first and second, Joe counted.

The Crackers grabbed off enough runs to win with ordinary pitching when they annexed a couple in the third frame. Agler smashed one to left field for three cushions, and counted when Welchonce laced one to the scoreboard for the circuit.

Fatal Fifth.

Then came the large blow-up. Green hit one to Agler, and when Love failed to cover he was safe. Adams slammed one through the box, Love making no attempt to stop it. Stevenson hit one to Agler, and again Love kept anchored in the twirlers' box and a run tallied.

McKillen bunted and, when Agler and Love got tangled up in the play, all hands were safe. With the bases filled, Erwin hit to Bisland, who booted, and a couple sifted across the pan. Then a single by Kraft, a double by Hendryx and a single by Kyle sent across enough to count six, the last clout being made off Conzelman before he got warmed up.

The Crackers were licked from then to the finish. After Chapman had got a hit in the ninth and two force-outs left Agler on first, Long's first circuit clout raised the Crackers' total to five.

The Second Game.

In order to make the second game certain, Manager Smith elected Gilbert Price, who had worked five innings the day before, to do the twirling for the locals. Charley Frank trotted out Luke Glavenich.

For three innings it looked like the Crackers' ball game. For the next three innings it seemed to be the Pelicans' certainty. Then the tide switched again and victory rested on the Cracker banners.

The Crackers counted their first run in the second inning, due to the liberality of Glavenich. He walked Holland, then, with two men out, he failed to locate the plate for Dunn, Price and Agler in succession, and a run was forced home.

The Pels tied it in the fourth. Kraft led off with a single. Hendryx doubled. Kraft was snuffed at the plate, but Yantz came through with a single and sent Hendryx home.

Pels Take Lead.

The Pels took the lead in the sixth. Hendryx singled, and when Long errored he went to second. Green counted him with a smash to right.

The Pels apparently made it safe in the seventh. Erwin doubled to left and counted when McDowell punched out a single.

In the Crackers' seventh, Agler gave the glum rooters, teammates and scribes a chance to cheer by getting a free ticket. But pandemonium reigned when Long pickled one to the left field fence for the circuit, tying up the old ball game.

Then, with confidence galore, the Crackers rushed to the attack. Wallop poled one that hit the bull on the first bounce, and he pulled up at the hot corner. With the count 3 and 2 on him, Bisland poked one between short and third, one of his famous pinch hits, and the honor of the Crackers was saved.

SOLICIT STOCK FOR AUTODROME

Committee Will Start Canvass on Monday—Work Is Progressing Rapidly—Grading Soon Finished.

Committees representing the Atlanta Autodrome Athletic association will start a canvass Tuesday for the sale of stock. More than forty subscribers have been secured during the past few days without any canvass.

Every shareholder will receive a life membership pass good for two free admissions to all the races and a membership in the Autodrome club, a social feature of the new company.

The track site is practically level, the ground has been cleared and but little grading has to be done before everything is in readiness for the actual building of the big board saucer.

The grand stand will have a seating capacity of 10,000 and in front of the grand stand there is a smooth bermuda sod where automobiles are expected to park. Occupants can sit in their cars and see the races.

Ralph DePalma, who won Friday's road race; Gil Anderson, who won Saturday's at Elgin, Ill.; Bob Burman and a dozen more of the best known drivers have written that they will race in Atlanta on Atanta's terms. They believe that a board track, such as the one projected here, will result in a circuit of such courses in the large cities and will put the road races out of the game.

Among the subscribers to date are J. S. Cohen, J. R. Smith, F. J. Paxon, G. W. Hanson, C. I. Ryan, Lowry Arnold, C. L. Anderson, R. A. Smythe, E. Rivers, T. B. Felder, John Aldredge, C. C. TY COBB SOLD TO NEW YORK YANKEES; REPORTS AT START OF 1914 SEASON

Deal Has Been Closed, According to Stockholder of the Detroit Club—Purchase Price $40,000.

New York, August 30.—(Special.)—Ty Cobb, the great outfielder of the Detroit Tigers, will be a member of the New York Yankees next season.

The "Georgia Peach" has been sold by the Detroit club to the New York club for the largest amount ever paid for a baseball player—$40,000.

The announcement of the sale will not be made officially until after the present season is over, but the news of the sale leaked out today through a stockholder of the Detroit club. The latter refused to have his name used at this time.

Clark Griffith, manager of the Senators, got wind of the negotiations between the New York and Detroit clubs and offered $100,000 for the great player. He was willing to bid higher, if necessary, but he was too late, as the deal had been consummated.

Griffith was politely ordered by Ban Johnson, president of the American league, to say nothing about Cobb going to New York, and as a result little was heard from the Washington manager after he made his offer.

When President Navin, of the Detroit club, was informed that Griffith had been tipped off that Cobb was to be sold, and that the Senators' manager had made a bid, through the newspapers, for the services of Cobb, he said:

"The Washington club could not buy Cobb if I offered him for half that amount. Griffith had better figure on paying for his ball park before he makes any such big offer as that. When the Washington club built its new park it was compelled to issue bonds and place them with the owners of other clubs in the league in order to finance the enterprise. I think the club will be more likely to redeem the bonds than to give Griffith $100,000 to buy a star player."

Cobb has not been entirely satisfied with his surroundings for some time, and early last spring threatened to quit Detroit to go into the automobile business. After several conferences with President Navin, he was persuaded to sign a contract calling for $12,500 a season. He then joined the team, which was the first part of May.

TY COBB,
Georgia Peach, whom report has it has been sold to the New York Americans for $40,000.

Clark Griffith Got Wind of the Deal, Hence His Offer of $100,000 for the Great Georgian.

OFFICIALLY, TY COBB PASSES JOE JACKSON

According to figures issued from the headquarters of the American league in Chicago, Ty Cobb has passed Joe Jackson in the race for the batting honors of the American league.

Here are the figures of the big three officially up to and including the games played Saturday:

Gil Anderson in Stutz Wins Elgin Road Race, Breaking Course Record

Elgin, Ill., August 30.—Gil Anderson, driving a Stutz car 302 miles at the rate of 71 1-2 miles an hour today, won the Elgin National Road race in 4:13:38. Ralph Mulford finished second and Spencer Wishart third.

Position.	Driver.	Car.	Time.
1.	Gil Anderson	Stutz.	4:13:38
2.	Ralph Mulford	Mason.	4:20:31
3.	Spencer Wishart.	Mercer.	4:29:58
4.	Harry Grant.	Isotta.	4:42:14
5.	Ralph DePalma.	Mercer.	4:47:24

Joe Dawson, driver of a Marmon, was on his last lap when the race was called, and Bill Endicott, with a Case car, had completed 259 miles.

Weather Ideal.

The weather was perfect and 50,000 persons saw the contest, in which twelve cars started. Rickenbacher, pilot of a Mason, went out of the race in the first lap. The car ahead of him had skidded and to avoid bumping in it, Rickenbacher drove into a ditch, breaking a rear axle. Haupt, another Mason driver, was a contender in the race for 245 miles, when his engine burned out and he limped off the course.

Bob Burman drove a pretty race in his Keaton, but he quit at 159 miles with a crooked cylinder. Henning's Velie car lasted only 33 miles. Bergdell, who drove an Erwin Special, seemed to have third place secured at 259 miles, but he ran out of gasoline on the back stretch and ceased to figure.

Anderson by his performance today broke the record for the event. His speed, 71 1-2 miles an hour, compared with 62 1-2 made by Mulford in 1910; 66.43 in 1911 by Len Zenzel and 68.4 a year ago when DePalma won.

Broke Hoodoo.

Anderson did more, for he emerged from under the shadow of racing misfortune which had gained him the title of the champion hard luck driver of the country. At Indianapolis last May he held second position until the last 30 miles and in this city a year ago he again was second.

Today's race was the first win of his career as a driver, for which he forsook the earlier calling of a marine engineer. The race was remarkable for the number of cars that stayed on the track and for the closeness of the contest as indicated in the summaries. At 100 miles Dawson, Haupt and Burman were only a few seconds apart.

Five Injured.

Five Chicagoans were injured in automobile accidents at the Elgin races. They were:

Mrs. T. Spencer, kneecap broken and badly bruised, condition critical; T. A. Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. John Spence, occupants of the same car, badly bruised; George Grundel, crushed.

The Spences were stalled alongside the public road near Bartlett, 7 miles southeast of Elgin, when George Oglesby, a Chicago druggist, ran into them with an automobile, while traveling, it is said, at a high rate of speed. The Spences were all thrown into a ditch.

Grundel's car turned turtle on a narrow pike 12 miles southeast of Elgin.

OVER TWO HUNDRED PLAYERS BOUGHT BY BIG LEAGUES

Cincinnati, Ohio, August 30.—Exclusive of players obtained by major league clubs from minor league teams through optional agreements, 202 players either have been traded by major league teams, purchased from each other or purchased from minor league teams during the last year, according to a list handed down by the National Baseball Commission today.

All trades or sales from August 20 to date are included.

The Boston Nationals lead in men obtained. Twenty-three players, now in the Boston National team have been contracted for during the above mentioned period. Cincinnati comes next with twenty-one. Detroit is third, with nineteen, while the others are as follows:

Cleveland 17, New York Americans 15, Pittsburg 14, St. Louis Nationals 14, Chicago Americans 14, St. Louis Americans 12, Boston Americans 11, Washington 11, Chicago Nationals 10, Brooklyn Nationals 10, New York Nationals 4, Philadelphia Nationals 4, Philadelphia Americans 2.

The commission also instructed the Nashville club, of the Southern league, to pay the Pittsburg club $1,500 within three days for Player Arthur Hofman.

The commission allowed the claims of the St. Louis American league club against Player E. Walker for $67.25, and against Player C. E. Wares for $27.50. The players now are with the Montgomery club.

VALDOSTA MAKES IT TWO IN ROW

In Post-Season Series With Thomasville—Otto Jordan's Club Hits the Ball Hard. Score 5 to 2.

Thomasville, Ga., August 30.—(Special.)—Valdosta took the second game of the post season series this afternoon, score 5 to 2.

Van Landingham, first man up, started with a home run over centerfield fence and from that time until the end of the rounds, the Valdosta crew pounded Day hard and consistently, getting safe hits in every inning except one.

The game was replete with fast, snappy fielding and the terrific clouting of both clubs.

Hurley's one-handed stab of Murch's liner, completing a double, and Walker's good work in the pinches, gave a touch of spice to the contest.

The Thomasville team was outclassed and outplayed at every stage of the game. Dumb playing with men on bases losing several chances to score. Hawkins hit for a homer with one on in the seventh.

One week from today the thirteenth annual season of the Southern Association of Professional Baseball will come to a close and the flag-winner will be decided.

As yet the outcome is in doubt, though the doubt exists only in Atlanta, where everyone concedes the Crackers to have an outside chance, and will continue to so concede until the four-game series with the Mobile Gulls is played.

The season in Atlanta comes to a close Saturday. The Chattanooga Lookouts have the honor of bringing one of the most successful seasons in the history of Atlanta baseball to a close with a single game that afternoon.

A. M. and P. M. Games.

Monday the Pelicans meet the Crackers in their final games of the season. Morning and afternoon contests will be played, the morning game starting at 10:30, and the afternoon game at 3:30.

Tuesday, the league leaders, the Mobile Gulls, will be the opponents of the Crackers in a series of games that will determine for good and for all where the pennant will fly.

The outcome of the games that the Crackers and the Pelicans play Monday and the double bill between the Lookouts and the Gulls will decide the importance of the four games between the two leaders.

Should the locals manage to grab off both games Monday, while the Lookouts waltz into the Gulls, then old crucial series will pop up right in our midst again, and the four games between the two leaders will decide the ultimate flag winner.

If the opposite result should occur, then it will be all over, but the mere formality of playing out the string of games to the end.

Down to Fine Point.

This is bringing it down to just about as fine a point as one would care to see, and for the good of the game, the league and everyone connected with it, we hope that the four games will be the ones that will tell the tale.

Mobile has a comfortable lead at present, and are really a 2 to 1 bet to win. But until Monday's returns are in, no one can say with certainty, just what the outcome is going to be, and even then it is going to be very much in doubt.

The race has been a pretty one all the way. It has never been and is not now settled. The only places that seem to be settled are the seventh and eighth positions, which Nashville and New Orleans will hold to the end.

Montgomery, Chattanooga and Birmingham are having a fierce fight for the two lower positions in the first division, and the battling between these three teams for the remainder of the season is sure to be fierce.

With a fight on for first place between two teams, and a fight on for third place between three teams, no one could ask for a race that could create any more interest, unless all five were battling or the rag itself.

Season Closes Sunday.

While the season will end in Birmingham, Chattanooga, Nashville and Atlanta on Saturday, there will be two games yet to be played.

New Orleans plays in Mobile Sunday and Memphis plays in Montgomery on the same day. And it may be that the results of these two games will determine the standing of several clubs in the race.

Mobile might need this game to beat Atlanta out for the pennant, and Montgomery might need her game to finish in third place. You never can tell what may happen between now and next Sunday, with seven games remaining to be played by some teams and eight by others.

Baseball is an uncertain game, and there are all kinds of conjectures that one can arive at, all kinds of possibilities that may turn up and spoil the best-laid plans.

The Southern league season of 1913 should go down into history as the best season from a ball-playing standpoint and from a financial standpoint that the league has ever enjoyed.

VARDON AND RAY WIN BEST BALL FORESOME

Chicago, August 30.—Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, the British professional golf stars and former open champions who are in this country to play in the open championship this fall, won a close best ball foursome at the Onwentsia club today. Vardon and Ray played 36 holes with Tom Vardon, brother of Harry, and William Marshall, the Onwentsia professionals.

The local men held the Britons even nearly all the way, but went one down on the thirty-fifth green, where Tom Vardon missed a 4-foot putt, the Britons taking the match 1 up in 36 holes.

The best ball scores were:

Afternoon Round—Vardon and Marshall 72, Vardon and Ray 69.

The best individual score was a 69 by Marshall—par for the links is 75 and all the men played under that figure.

WESTERN TENNIS STARS STILL WIN

Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., August 30.—The international tennis tournament which ended here today was a battle between the east and the west, with the latter the victor. Griffin, of California, a dark horse, won the men's open singles, the most spectacular event of the week. The closing contest between Griffin and Whitney, of Boston, was fast from start to finish and it was either man's games almost to the last stroke. The score stood 8-6, 1-6, 6-4 and 8-6.

On the ladies' open singles Mrs. Robert Williams, of Philadelphia, defeated Miss Mary Browne, American national champion in the finals, 8-6, 3-6, 6-4.

Johnston and Griffin, of California, won the men's doubles from Whitney and Seaver, of Boston, 8-2, 6-3 and 6-2.

In the mixed doubles Miss Mary Browne and Johnston, California, beat Mrs. Williams, Philadelphia, and Griffin, California, 8-6, 6-4.

WHITNEY'S PENNANT WINS THE FUTURITY

Saratoga, N. Y., August 30.—Pennant won the $15,000 futurity at 6 furlongs here today after a desperate drive to ward off Southern Maid and Addie M. who finished second and third, respectively. The result was in doubt until the last few strides. The time was 1:15.

Both Pennant and Southern Maid came from far behind in the stretch, and had McTaggart been able to keep Southern Maid going in the early stages she probably would have beaten Pennant. Bringhurst took the lead in the first few strides, followed by Forum and Early Rose, with Addie M close up. The trailers were Pennant, Southern Maid and Anytime and they were widely separated from the leaders.

Turning out of the back stretch Bringhurst had a commanding lead on Forum and Early Rose, but as they swung for home Pennant entered the argument and Forum and Early Rose dropped back, beaten. A furlong from home Pennant challenged Bringhurst and the two had a race for a sixteenth of a mile, where Pennant began to draw away. Then Southern Maid came up with a wonderful burst of speed. She was taking two strides to the winner's one in the last 50 yards.

Borel went to the whip on Pennant and the colt answered gamely, holding a length's advantage at the close. Addie M was beaten only half a length for the place.

DR. MITCHELL GIVEN HANDSOME WALKING STICK BY PLAYERS

Dr. J. W. Mitchell, the physician of the Atlanta baseball club, was presented a handsome gold-handled walking stick by the members of the Atlanta baseball club yesterday afternoon as a token of their esteem and an appreciation of the many little favors he has done for them this season.

The presentation was made between games in the double-header, Umpire Rudderham feigning an injury to get Dr. Mitchell to the plate, where Manager Smith made the presentation.

Engraved on the handle was "To Dr. J. W. Mitchell, from the Atlanta Baseball Players, August 30, 1913." On the nob was the monogram "J. W. M."

Dr. Mitchell was profuse in his thanks. "The boys could not have picked out anything that could have suited me better," he said after returning to the bench. "I appreciate the gift more than I can state," and turning to The Constitution's sporting editor he said, "You tell them how much I appreciate it."

Dr. Mitchell has been with the Atlanta club ever since 1906 and every team has made him a present, but the gift Saturday struck the doctor's fancy more than any he has ever received.

Rivington Bisland Greatest HITS .384; FIELDS .981 Southern League Shortstop

By Dick Jemison.

Who is the best shortstop in the Southern league?

Unanimous answer by the fan flock—"Bisland," and the echo answers, "Bisland."

Rivington Bisland came to the Crackers by purchase from the Pittsburg Pirates. He came touted as a "real" shortstop and ever since he has been with the locals he has lived up to his advance notices.

He has exceeded his advance notices during the past two months. His playing in the past forty-seven games has been the best shortstopping that has ever been shown at Ponce de Leon park.

We speak of his all-around playing. Sensational fielder that he is, Johnny Lindsay, of Nashville, considered to be the best fielding shortstop in the league, has not even approached the fielding stunts that our Bizzy has .247 to .308.

From the time he joined the Crackers until July 4, Bisland fielded at a .908 clip. From that time until August 27, he fielded at a .981 clip. He boosted his season's fielding average 12 points as the result.

In the last forty-seven games, Bisland has made sixty-seven hits and counted seventeen runs in 170 times at the bat, a percentage of .384.

In the last forty-seven games, Bis uncorked day in and day out.

Great Hitter.

But it has been his hitting that has placed him far in the front rank of any shortstop in the league and has made him one of the most dangerous men in the pinches in the league.

When the team was on its last road trips, the fan flock at the baseball detail counted a run as good as scored with a man on third base and Bisland at the bat.

Just by way of having nothing else to do and to add spice to this little eulogy of our little friend Bizzy, we kept track of the chances that Bisland had to drive in a run when there was a man on the hot corner waiting to dent the platter with his spikes.

Bisland was not as successful driving them in when they were on the keystone as he was when they were on the hot corner. In these forty-seven games Bizzy had twenty-five opportunities to drive in runs with men on third base. He responded twenty-three times. His pinch hitting average was .920.

All the comments that we are making on Bisland and the figures that we are producing to back up our claims include from the games played in July to the one played Thursday with Memphis.

Some Figures.

From the time he joined the Crackers to July 4, Bisland hit at a .247 clip. From July 4 to August 27, he hit at a .384 clip and as the result he boosted his season average from .247 to .308. Bisland has handled ninety-seven put-outs, made 170 assists and only seven errors, a fielding percentage of .981.

We defy any other scribe in the league to say that the shortstop on their team is better than Bisland in the face of these figures: .981 fielding at short is about 50 points better than the average shortstop fields, and .384 hitting is 100 points better than the average shortstop hits in the majors.

But despite the fact that he has been piling up this wonderful average those who have not seen him play do not know how really wonderful it has been.

Great Pair of Hands.

Bizzy never lets the ball play him. He has as fine a pair of hands as any shortstop in baseball and he knows just what to do with the ball when he gets it.

For the season Bisland has made forty-two errors. Now here is a strong point. No matter where he chases for a fly, be it to the other side of second base, back into the outfield or over on the foul line, he is death on them.

Bisland has yet to drop his first fly ball this season. There is only one other player in the league that can boast of the same record. He is his team mate, Wallop. Smith. When you send a fly up within reaching distance of either of these fellows go and sit down. They never miss.

For the entire season, Bisland has had an average of six chances to the game. He got off to a bad start, considering that the ground on the different fields was all new to him, and he did not know how to play for a ball. When he got the swing, notice the improvement—an average of six chances in forty-seven games and but seven errors, four of them on bad throws to first.

Again we remark:

The best shortstop that the Southern league ever saw is Rivington Bisland.

Brooklyn Keeps Walker.

Brooklyn, August 30.—Fred Walker, the Brooklyn pitcher who received his unconditional release last week at his own request, signed a new contract tendered him by the Brooklyn club today. Walker did so well in the games he has pitched since he began working on his ten days' notice that Manager Dahlen decided to retain him.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Doves Win Two.

Brooklyn, August 30.—Boston tied Brooklyn for fifth place today by taking a double-header by scores of 13 to 0 and 6 to 1. Both Tyler and Quinn, the latter just purchased from Rochester, had the local batsmen at their mercy. The Bostons hammered the Brooklyn pitchers all over the lot and took advantage of poor fielding of the Dahlen team. Ceremonies attending the battle of Long Island anniversary celebration preceded the game.

PHILLIES 8, GIANTS 0; BUT GAME IS FORFEITED

Philadelphia, August 30.—New York was awarded today's game with Philadelphia on a forfeit 9 to 0, after the home team had a lead by the score of 8 to 8, and only good police protection saved some of the visiting players and Umpire Brennan from injury at the hands of men and boys. Umpire Brennan forfeited the game to New York after the Philadelphia club had failed to move from a section in the center field bleachers spectators who, New York players claimed, interfered with the vision of batsmen.

Policemen prevented serious trouble in the grounds, but they had some difficulty in getting the New York players and Umpires Brennan and Eason safely to the North Philadelphia station of the Pennsylvania railroad, four blocks from the ball park. On the way several persons attempted to attack Manager McGraw, but a policeman drew a revolver and kept the crowd back. One man was arrested for interfering with the officer.

Umpires Brennan and Eason were escorted up another street by a dozen policemen and when nearing the station they were assailed by a shower of stones and other missiles. The players and the umpires reached the station from different directions about the same time. Policemen escorting the New Yorkers, seeing the attack upon their brother officers, went to their rescue and the crowd that was following instantly rushed forward and attacked McGraw and his men. One of the players, said to have been Shafer, was reported to have been struck by a brick.

The crowd also pressed in upon the umpires, the police say, Brennan was struck and almost knocked down. Once inside the station, players and umpires were safe and they left for New York shortly after 6 o'clock.

After McCormick, batting for Merkle in the ninth, had been retired, Manager McGraw complained to Umpire Brennan that spectators waving their straw hats in the center field bleachers reflected the sun's rays into the eyes of the batsmen. Even though the police were called on, the spectators would not budge. There was no place to go.

After a long consultation, the game was forfeited.

As soon as the word had been spoken the New York players made a rush across the field to the clubhouse. Some fans were there ahead of them and showered upon them all kinds of names.

Manager Dooin said the game would be protested.

The game started as a runaway affair for New York, who scored six runs in the first three innings. In the fourth inning Chalmers relieved Alexander and not a New York player got a hit nor did a runner reach first base after that. The Phillies turned upon Mathewson in the sixth and scored five runs. In the seventh Byrne's home run scored two and another run was added in the eighth.

Score by innings:	R.	H.	E.
New York	111	000	00x—6	6	3

Reds 7, Cards 4.

Cincinnati, August 30.—Cincinnati won a slow and ragged game from St. Louis today 7 to 4. Doak was so wild that he retired in favor of Perritt in the third. The latter was hit freely, while Geyer appeared too late to save the day. Ames, on the other hand, pitched fair ball.

Score by innings:	R.	H.	E.

GRIDIRON PRACTICE

Will Start at University Wednesday, September 10.

Athens, Ga., August 30.—(Special.) Football practice will begin at the University of Georgia on Wednesday, September 10, and all those who will try for the squads are expected to report at that time, according to a statement of Coach Cunningham today. The training table will be operated in Lumpkin hall and scientific feeding of the men will be followed. It is generally reported that Joe Bean may be secured for the coaching force of Georgia for the next year. He is head physical trainer at Marist college and was a baseball player on the Jersey City team at one time. If he should be signed his connection will not effect the relation of Harold Ketron and "Emp" Peacock, who are coming back for the football season to help Alex Cunningham coach the grid workers at Georgia.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Senators Win Two.

Boston, August 30.—Hits for extra bases figured largely for Washington in winning both games of a double-header from Boston today, the first by 4 to 1 and the second a shut-out, 4 to 0. Engle had the better of Bedient in the first game.

Leonard and Green were both batted hard in the second game, but the Washington pitcher held Boston safe when the bases were occupied.

Yanks Win Two.

New York, August 30.—The tail-end New York Americans surprised the pace-making Athletics today by defeating them in a double-header, 5 to 0 and 6 to 4. It was the Philadelphia team's last appearance here in an American league contest this season and marked their first defeat in New York since the spring of 1912.

Caldwell pitched the best game of his career in the opening contest, holding the visitors to two singles. Shawkey was knocked out of the box in the third inning. Houck pitched well until the eighth.

In the second game the New Yorkers gained a commanding lead off Brown in the first two innings. Bush was an improvement. Fisher pitched well for New York until the seventh. Keating finished the inning, but Caldwell was sent in in the eighth and struck out three men that faced him.

Chicago, August 30.—Chicago failed to hit Dubuc safely with men on bases today and lost to Detroit, 5 to 8. The locals' errors also proved costly. Scott, taken out in the fifth to permit Rousch to bat, was supplanted by White. Pitcher Scroggins, a recruit from Hugo, Oklahoma, was released by Chicago to the Lincoln club of the Western league.

Value up—price down

THE 1914 Overland is the most wonderful car of the new season.

And the price is again reduced.

Bigger, better and more beautiful than ever, it is already the biggest seller of its type in the world.

The motor is more powerful; the wheelbase longer; the tires larger; the tonneau more roomy; the equipment more complete, better and costlier than ever. In every respect Overland value has been increased while the price has been decreased.

The manufacturers have turned their enormous facilities over to the building of this one model. In no other way could such value be secured.

The production has been increased to 50,000 cars. There is an even stricter practice of the well-known Overland manufacturing economies. And this means a greater car at less cost to you.

So finely drawn is the big 1914 Overland production plan that 50,000 cars will be built; 10,000 men will be kept busy all the year round; every wheel of the $4,000,000 worth of the most modern machinery kept in constant operation, and never a moment's hesitation permitted in a plant that covers more than 100 acres of ground.

This is the way the Overland makes possible a $1,200 value for $950.

We have the new model 79 Overlands on our salesroom floor now. We urge you to see this new model at once. Ride in the car; feel what a difference the big 114-inch wheelbase makes; note the car's entirely changed appearance. It is neater, prettier than ever—and that means the handsomest car of the year.

The long wheelbase gives increased riding comfort.

The improved Overland motor is rated at 35-horsepower—plenty of power to give satisfying comfort and speed.

You'll find a most efficient and reliable electric lighting system on the new Overland. This costly addition to equipment is worthy a $1,500 car.

The new Overland body has a handsome finish—beautiful, rich, dark Brewster green. The trimmings are of heavy nickel and aluminum. And the big, graceful cowl dash gives to the car an appearance of dignity vainly sought in many other cars of higher price.

Examine the spacious tonneau; note the big, soft, deep and luxurious folds of upholstery. The new Overland is bigger and better; we can show you point for point where it is the best your money can buy.

ARMY-NAVY GAME MAY BE PLAYED

Washington, August 30.—Secretary Daniels, of the navy, and Assistant Secretary of War Breckenridge, conferred Friday on the proposed abandonment of the army and navy football game. Mr. Daniels withheld his opinion until later. The general impression in official circles was that the heads of war and navy departments would make an effort to get the midshipmen and the cadets together.

The directors of the army and navy athletic associations were later ordered to report in Washington Wednesday for a conference with Mr. Daniels and Mr. Breckenridge. No other announcement was made. Mr. Breckenridge favors playing the big game in Washington.

SWINGS HEAVY CLUBS NINETY-SEVEN HOURS

London, August 30.—Tom Burrows, the Australian all-round athlete and champion club swinger, collapsed at the Earls court exhibition tonight in an attempt to swing 3 1-2-pound clubs 100 hours continuously. He kept the clubs in motion for ninety-seven hours and thirty-five minutes and then dropped over. Last April Burrows swung a pair of 3-pound 6-ounce Indian clubs for more than 100 hours, but later became delirious.

SOUTH ATLANTIC

Indians 5, Gulls 0.

Charleston, S. C., August 30.—Savannah won the final game of the local Sally league season here today 5 to 0. Adams pitched steady ball at all times for the visitors. Foster was given poor support, errors being made at the critical moments. A one-hand stab by Dowell, which robbed Menefee of a sure double, featured the game. A pretty catch by Mayer also saved a hit from being recorded against Adams. The Savannah team played great ball.

By winning today's game the Savannah club won the championship of the South Atlantic league, as the victory cinched them the second half honors, and as they have also won the first half, no post series is necessary.

Albany, Ga., August 30.—Columbus took the final game of the final Albany series this afternoon by the score of 3 to 0. With Redding only allowing three hits.

Albany will remain in Columbus for two games Monday instead of going to Charleston as the victory of Savannah this afternoon cinched the second pennant, making it unnecessary to play the championship series as they won the first half of the full scheduled season, and making it unnecessary for Albany to go to Charleston.

Jacksonville, Fla., August 30.—Jacksonville defeated Macon in the last regularly scheduled game of the season here this afternoon 6 to 2. QUERIES ANSWERED

Under this head, the sporting editor will endeavor to answer all questions pertaining to all branches of sports.

Dick Jemison, sporting editor of The Constitution: In the Southern League, should two teams tie, are they supposed to play the tie off?—A. H. M.

Yes; according to the league rules the tie or postponed game must be played off the next day, unless the two managers agree on some future date.

Dick Jemison, sporting editor of The Constitution: Please tell me whether games tied and played over are counted in the total number of games played. Also if the teams all play the same number of games in a season.—A. F.

Tie games, when they are more than 5 innings, count in the league records of batting, fielding, etc., but of course do not count in the standing. The teams are supposed to play 70 games at home and 70 abroad in the league. Weather conditions may make some play more than others.

Dick Jemison, sporting editor of The Constitution: In the world's series of 1911 with the Athletics, how many games did Mathewson pitch and how many did he win?—A. F.

Won 1 and lost 2.

Dick Jemison, sporting editor of The Constitution: When does Atlanta play Mobile? Who does she play Monday?—S. H. T.

Mobile will be here Tuesday. New Orleans will be the opponents of the Crackers on Monday in a morning and an afternoon game.

Dick Jemison, sporting editor of The Constitution: How many games does Atlanta play before the season closes?—J. R. S.

Two with New Orleans Monday, 4 with Mobile and 1 with Chattanooga.

"OREGON KID" WINS THE WEBB TROPHY

Keokuk, Iowa, August 30.—The Webb trophy, carrying a first prize of $1,000, and possession of the trophy for one year, together with the championship of the Mississippi Valley Power Boat association, was won by "Oregon Kid" yesterday. The boat is owned and was driven by S. F. Block, of Portland, Ore. The time for the 20 miles was 26:18. The "Kid" was not pushed to win.

Barnacle, owned by Adam Keikler, of Chicago, twice took fire, but finished third with Hydro-bullet second. Earl Deakin was taken from the latter in the third lap, after being injured when the boat capsized on a turn. C. H. Hanley, of Muscatine, newly-elected admiral of the association, then took the wheel and brought the boat in second.

Four-Cylinder Cars Are Becoming Harder to Sell Every Day

AS proof of this fact, is it not true that over 90 per cent of the high-class manufacturers have dropped the four-cylinder car absolutely, and are today building nothing but SIXES? The dealer or manufacturer can no longer force upon the public ANY car regardless of reputation, price or looks. Enough cars are being built to supply the demand and the public is buying the cars in which it has confidence, which it KNOWS are not out of date, and the price of which represents good value.

How many manufacturers saw the six-cylinder demand six years ago, and developed a SIX? Not many. And yet there are more than five times as many manufacturers offering six-cylinders today than there were a year ago. This means that more than 80 per cent of the sixes offered today are first-year Sixes---UNPROVEN.

Premier Has Been Building Sixes for Seven Seasons---Therefore a Car of Proven Value

The purchaser not only wants a car of proven value, and one of up-to-date features in every respect, but he also demands a car in which he is assured of CONSTANT SERVICE, both at the present time and more particularly in the future.

REMEMBER that the dealer or representative of any particular make of car who loses money IS SOON OUT OF BUSINESS, and the owners or patrons of any such car or dealer are left absolutely unprotected.

Premier Dealers Make Money

Eighty-five per cent of the dealers who were selling PREMIER cars four years ago are selling PREMIER cars TODAY. Some of them were small dealers then, but you know how PREMIER dealers have grown.

THE REASON FOR THIS PREMIER PROSPERITY is that the PREMIER dealer not only sells a car which is a proven car, a car which is up-to-date in every respect, BUT ALSO BACKS UP EVERY PREMIER OWNER WITH SATISFACTORY SERVICE.

AND SELLING SERVICE MEANS WHAT?

Selling Satisfaction

With an automobile, does the carrying of a big stock of parts, having an emergency trouble car available all the time, and a man at the telephone constantly, NECESSARILY mean Selling Service?

Could a railroad claim to sell service which has poor engines and rolling stock, and whose trains do not keep going, although this railroad might at all times have an emergency train to send to the help of the stranded passengers?

Taking you to your destination without delay or interruption is dependable service.

Can an automobile manufacturer or dealer sell the kind of service the people are looking for?

Not unless it is built in the car.

The dealer may assure his patron of prompt assistance and quick relief, but this does not make the car he is selling any more reliable or satisfactory.

The public, the user, knows the cars which give service and are dependable.

What are the weaknesses of your car? Should they be there? Does the factory know they are there? Do they realize that in order to really sell service, that service must be built in the car?

Numerous Premier owners have toured Europe in their cars. When we have been asked what, if any, parts should be taken along, we inquired if experience has shown any parts as unreliable. As a result they left without extra parts. And we have never had a Premier driver stranded in Europe.

Is it reasonable to suppose that ten private owners would have left their chauffeurs at home and undertaken a trip across the continent in 1911, in their Premier cars, if the experience they had had with their Premiers had shown them unreliable or had failed to prove them absolutely dependable?

Records show that in one of the largest cities in America, one of the largest Premier distributing points, Premier has a record of not having lost a Premier owner in three seasons.

Would this be possible if satisfaction was not built in the Premier and if these customers were not getting satisfaction out of their Premiers?

Remember, every car sold represents to the dealer either an asset or a liability.

Every customer is a knocker or a booster. If he is getting service out of his car he is a booster. If he is not, he will tell his troubles.

Investigate Premier's record, analyze Premier construction, and compare it point for point with any car of American or European manufacture, and you will find the answer.

Also Bear This Point In Mind. Selling Satisfaction Means Satisfied Owners, and Satisfied Owners Means a Continuation of a Prosperous Business.

PREMIER DEALERS ARE NOT HERE TODAY AND GONE TOMORROW

THE FAN'S COLUMN

Under this head the sporting department will print all communications from fans without comment provided the fan signs his name to same No anonymous communications will be considered Articles must be written on one side of the paper only

Dick Jemison Sporting Editor Constitution I have noted with pleasure the urgent requests you have been mailing in Whiffs upon the fans of Atlanta to swell the auto dance at the Georgian Terrace in order to lead Birmingham in same and I wish to congratulate you on this as well as the good sporting dope you are giving

There is one great feature that has not been brought out by any of the sport writers of the city in connection with swelling the attendance and I refer to the people attending the games especially when large crowds are on hand as the street car service from the park is the worst

I have heard numbers of persons remark on this subject stating that if it was not for the very poor car service after the games they would attend but on account of not knowing when they would get away they are staying from the game thereby decreasing the attendance to the game

On yesterday being with lady friends I left the park before the game was over knowing that I would have to do so in order to get seat I got on car No 282 the last one in the park but was only two or three minutes after the game I got in the car until the car was packed to the limit I waited seven minutes for the car to leave at which time the motorman could not leave until the starter instructed him to do so We with several others got off of the car and walked up Peachtree de Leon avenue several blocks before we caught a car going our way When we passed the line of cars several other had also filled up and car No 282 was still standing filled with disgruntled people on account of not being able to get to town

I have attended the games in Birmingham and notice the street car company at that point handle the crowds to and from the park as they should and if Birmingham is ahead of Atlanta at the end of the season it will be on account of the car company at Birmingham handling the crowds while the car company at Atlanta is doing so much as few cars as they possibly can with as few people to the park

There are numbers who will attend in face of the above inconveniences but there are many there who will stay away on the above account and there are many who will not carry ladies there by keeping from the attendance

I hope you can take some steps to have the car company to at least give decent service from the park

Barons Win Two.

Birmingham Ala, August 30—Birmingham supplanted Montgomery in third place by blanking Montgomery in a double header 1 to 0 and 2 to 0. Hardgrove and Case pitched invincibly in the first, but Messenger's daring dive into the plate scored the only run on an infield hit Case did not yield a clean hit

In the second Gregory and Manning fought another pitchers battle, but Messenger's timely hit downed Manning After pitching nicely Gregory weakened in the seventh Hardgrove relieved him and saved the game

After losing the first game Manager Dobbs assigned every batter a different position in the line up, but this failed to bring a victory

BOXING SEASON TO OPEN SHORTLY

Classy Bouts Are Promised for New York Rings in the Near Future — Ritchie v. McFarland, Maybe.

By JAMES J. Corbett.

(Former Heavyweight Champion of the World. Written for The Constitution.)

New York, August 30.—(Special.)—The return of cool weather should bring about a decided improvement in the class of matches at local boxing clubs. If the press agents are truthful New Yorkers are in for a season of high-grade entertainment.

In addition to the Garden and St. Nicholas clubs, which between them have monopolized the best matches since boxing was restored to popular favor via the Frawley law, there is the new arena the McMahon Brothers will throw open some time during the the coming month, and which is to be located in the old Metropolitan rink building on Broadway near Fifty-second street.

A better location would be hard to find in the entire greater city, and with the enterprise and liberality that has characterized the policy of the McMahons in the past, and their well-known propensity for going after the best in the market regardless of cost, it is only reasonable to look forward to a fall and winter season of classy boxing.

While promoters are planning for the coming season, it might be opportune to call their attention to a few bouts the loyal public would delight to see clinched, and, what's better and more to the point, would willingly "cough up" shekels galore for the privilege of seeing. We will begin with the lightweight, or "near" lightweight, division, and run over the list of good matches it might be possible to frame up for the entertainment of the fans.

Ritchie v. McFarland.

A bout which would appeal to sports of both high and low degree and probably draw the largest house a New York club has held in years, would be a ten-round session between Willie Ritchie, the champion lightweight, and Packey McFarland, acknowledged the premier boxer in the game regardless of weight.

As McFarland is due to arrive here within the next week or ten days to talk over matches for the coming season, and Ritchie has announced that his plans embrace a busy winter and include matches with all the leading lights in it division, beginning with Freddy Welsh, there is reason to believe that one of our enterprising promoters should be successful in bringing togenner these brilliant stars of pugilism.

It surely would be a match far above the ordinary, and undoubtedly the biggest success, from scientific and financial points of view, that could possibly be staged.

However, if a hitch should arise over the matter of weight between Packey and the champion, which is about the only contingency that could develop to hinder the bout, there are one or two other good lightweights in local stables who would prove good drawing cards, and who could also give the champion spirited arguments over the ten-round course.

Young Shugrue, for example, would make an ideal opponent for the titleholder, and, in addition, there are Jack Britton, Leach Cross and Tommy Murphy, all three of whom are immensely popular in New York, and whose records place them in the front ranks of those eligible for matches with Ritchie.

If Willie should elect to remain on the Pacific coast, the New York promoters would not lack for a sufficiency of suitable match-making material. A series of bouts between McFarland, Welsh, Britton, Shugrue, Cross and Tommy Murphy, all stars in the 133-pound class, would cause the fans to forget all about the champion.

Of course, McFarland looks to outclass the others named, and for that reason it might be a difficult matter to find opponents for him among the lightweights. But if Packey will agree to concede a few pounds here and there, he can find plenty of matches in the division higher up, and unless Ritchie or Welsh should consent to take him on, it looks as if his future ring engagements will be in the welterweight class.

Packey Is Classiest.

Some reports from Chicago say McFarland can easily make 135 pounds ringside, while others state that he has outgrown the lightweight division by 6 or 7 pounds, and is now a full-fledged welterweight. If the latter report is true, it will be a case of goodby to the smaller fellows for Mr. Packey. Even were he able to train down to 133, he stands so far above the majority of lightweights it would be a hard job to persuade his rivals to box him, and there would be no chance of any one of them conceding him weight under any conditions.

That old talk about a match between McFarland and Mike Gibbons has been revived, but I doubt if anything will come of it just now. Gibbons would hardly consent to box under 150 pounds ringside, and that is more weight than Packey would give away to a boxer of the skill of the St. Paul man.

When McFarland boxed Jack Britton last spring, he entered the ring around 140 pounds, but in spite of all the critics had to say about his increasing avoirdupois, the fact is he was several pounds too heavy in that engagement to do his best.

The truth of the matter is that McFarland was so confident of his superiority over his fellow townsman that he did not apply the usual amount of energy to his training operations, and only did a few days' preparatory work for the match. And in the ring that evening he so far outclassed Britton that the bout was too one-sided to be interesting.

To get back to the subject of Gibbons and McFarland getting together. There is no bout in sight with the single exception of one between Packey and Ritchie that would stir up so much excitement as a set-to between Gibbons and McFarland. While the bout would determine no championship, both men being betwixt and between classes, according to the popular interpretation of the weight governing the several divisions, it would furnish the fans with a spectacular exhibition of scientific boxing. But as Packey would hardly weigh more than 140 at the most and Gibbons would stick out for 150, it is not likely the match-makers will be successful in their attempts to bring the boys together.

Glover After Packey.

There is a certain welterweight anxiously awaiting the arrival of McFarland in the big city. His name is Mike Glover and his manager says he is so good that he can't get anybody to box him unless he will consent to give a ton of weight away. Glover is a legitimate welter, 142 pounds being his notch, but so eager is he to get a chance at the great McFarland that he will make 140 for the Chicagoan.

I had occasion to mention the good work of this Glover only recently and believe he would put up an interesting bout with the clever Packey. Glover's suit is speed and cleverness; in fact, Mike professes to be a great admirer of Packey's and has adopted his style of boxing to a great extent. While it might not prove so sensational as an encounter that would call for Gibbons and McFarland as performers, a bout between Glover and Packey would give us an idea of McFarland's standing in the welterweight division if increasing poundage and a disinclination on the parts of the leading lightweight performers to do battle should force him to box welters in the future.

That quarrel (?) of Tom O'Rourke's with Jim Buckley over the merits of their respective fighting machines, Al Palzer and "Gunboat" Smith, had the desired effect of increasing the interest in next Wednesday's bout between Palzer and Frank Moran, the Pittsburg heavy, and the indications are that "standing room only" will be the order of things when the men enter the ring. Foxy coot, that O'Rourke; he seldom overlooks a bet that will contribute to the success of any boxing entertainment in which he is interested.

Palzer Must Make Good.

Whether Palzer will ever again create the same amount of enthusiasm among ring followers as he did a year or so back when he licked Al Kaufman and several other aspiring "hopes," will depend largely upon his showing with Moran on Wednesday. There is no doubt in my mind that Palzer was the class of the white heavies before he was taken ill a year ago.

Big and rugged, possessed of a world of confidence in his ability to overcome all obstacles and with the stamina that youth only knows, he looked the best of the younger heavies and the one man who might develop into the real hope of the white race. But a disagreement with his manager, Tom O'Rourke, which forced him to remain idle for a long time, and a sick spell from which he had not fully recovered at the time he lost to Luther McCarty, set him back so far in public estimation that he has had to begin all over again.

For three months previous to resuming training for next Wednesday's match Palzer led the simple life on his Minnesota farm, and O'Rourke claims that the big fellow has completely recovered from the effects of the operation of last spring which removed the source of all his physical trouble. And if looks do not lie he appears good enough right now to fight the battle of his career. While a trifle high in flesh, he looks more like the Palzer of two years ago who made the sports sit up and take notice when he sailed through several heavyweight tournaments with flying colors and first attracted attention as a championship possibility.

The impending battle is an important one and the victor will have earned a match with the redoubtable "Gunboat."

Morgantown 2, Red Springs 1.

Charlotte, N. C., August 30.—Morgantown took the second game of the series from Red Springs for the amateur championship of North Carolina here today 2 to 1. The third game resulted in a tie, neither side being able to score in eight innings, the game being called on account of darkness. The championship is still unsettled, each team having taken a game each and one game tied.

Cotton States Tennis Tourney Will Be Played at East Lake

The third annual Cotton States tennis tournament will be played in Atlanta this year. The matches will begin Monday, September 8.

There will be several distinct features to the tournament. By scheduling it this late in the season the tennis sharps will get the benefit of the best kind of weather, with the baseball season in the Southern league a thing of the past and all the interest will therefore center on this tournament.

Previously the tournament has been held in New Orleans and Montgomery. This is the first time that the event has been played in Atlanta, and it was through the efforts of Carleton Y. Smith that it was brought here.

The present title-holder is Lee Allen Brookes, of Birmingham, and he will be here to defend his title. The entry list is expected to be large and players are expected to enter from Nashville, Memphis, Chattanooga, New Orleans, Augusta, Montgomery, Birmingham, Knoxville and other cities.

Nat Thornton, Carleton Smith, Bryan Grant, J. K. Orr, Jr., Carl Ramspeck, E. S. Mansfield and others will enter from Atlanta.

The entry list will close Saturday. All entries should be sent to Carleton Smith, Walton building, Atlanta, Ga. Frank Reynolds, the efficient referee, has again been appointed as referee, and this assures clean, fast sport.

EMPIRE STATE LEAGUE ENJOYED PROSPERITY IN ITS FIRST SEASON

Waycross, Ga., August 30.—(Special.) After furnishing six of the most progressive cities of Georgia with as fast an article of baseball as that furnished by any Class D organization, the Empire State league, organized last November in Waycross, came to an end Wednesday. The season just closed was lengthened when the directors decided to divide the season, letting the winners of each half play at the close of the season for the pennant.

Starting May 1, the league at once claimed recognition and has held it ever since. Many records were made during the season, all of them showing that the Empire was a classy organization, and here to stay.

Of the six teams that began the race May 1, only two finished without changing their managers. Thomasville and Cordele have this distinction. The other members of the league changed their managers several times.

Feature Games.

The longest scoreless game of the season was played at Valdosta, Americus and Valdosta battling thirteen innings without a run. The fastest game is claimed at Cordele, although several games were played in less than an hour and a half. Pitchers Wilder and Fillingim, of the Cordele team, have credit for no-hit games, both of them against Waycross, while nearly all pitchers of the league have one and two-hit games to their credit.

Directors of the league will meet in October to make arrangements for next season. Quite a number of changes in the league regulations are anticipated. It is believed that the salary limit will be raised from $1,000 to $1,200, and that this limit will be enforced absolutely without regard of excuses. The season may open earlier next year, too.

It is also rumored that the president of the league another year will reside at some point not interested in the league. Considerable kicking against the rulings of the president this season, much of it unnecessary, has caused members of the board of directors to feel that the selection of an outside man will be best.

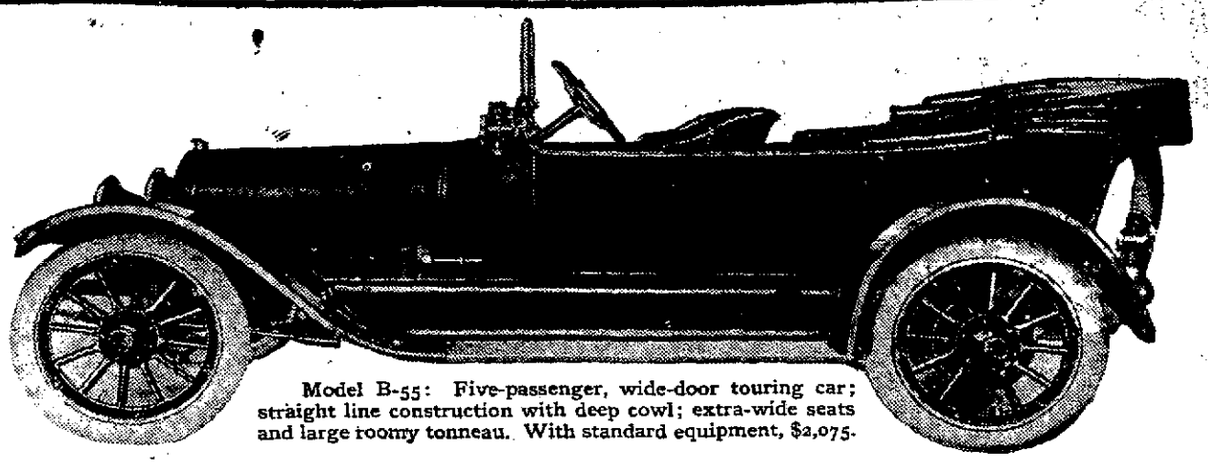
The directors will also endeavor to secure a good corps of umpires and, by backing up the umpires, cut out so much wrangling on the field. No serious disorder marred the season just closed, but in several cities the rows were mighty ugly, and might have caused serious trouble but for the right kind of action.

Rag Winner Undecided.

The league's pennant winner is as yet an unknown quantity. Valdosta and Thomasville started the fight for the rag on Friday at Valdosta. Seven games will be played if necessary.

Baseball in the cities comprising the Empire is not over yet, as a number of exhibition games between Empire league teams and South Atlantic league teams will probably be played.

To the generosity of the newspapers of the state, especially the papers in th acities of the league, is due, to a large measure, the success of the league. The papers have from start to finish done all in their power to boost the league, and but for this assistance it is extremely doubtful if the league would have lasted through the season.



Model B-55: Five-passenger, wide-door touring car; straight line construction with deep cowl; extra-wide seats and large roomy tonneau. With standard equipment, $2,075.

There Is a Buick Model For Every Man Who Intends to Buy Any Motor Car

No matter what style—roadster, touring car, coupe, etc.—we don't believe there is a line of motor cars that can show you more real value for your dollars than the Buick for 1914. It is the logical car for the man who counts upkeep cost, market value after years of use and daily satisfaction in certainty of service, appearance and pride of ownership. You may buy cars cheaper than the Buick, but you can not buy them better.

In the 1914 line every time-tried feature has been retained. Only such new ones have been added as have demonstrated their value beyond doubt. The wonderful Buick overhead valve motor will continue to prove the superiority of the Buick from the power side. It is admitted by the world that the Buick overhead valve motor develops from 15 to 20 per cent more power than motors of other types, all things being equal. Your Buick will take you where any other car can go and over roads and up hills that many other cars could not navigate.

The same economy of fuel consumption, the same durability and consistent service day in and out year by year, coupled with the old recognized go-ability, insure the same reliable Buick. A successful car from the beginning, nine years ago, the Buick of 1914, with its wider, longer and more flexible springs, deeper upholstery, wider doors, low-hung and fully curved body and the Delco System for starting, lighting and ignition, offers a powerful car of handsome lines, with every comfort and convenience known today.

The Delco Unit System for Starting, Lighting and Ignition Is Built In As An Integral Part of Every 1914 Buick Model

We stated some time ago that we would not use a self-starter until we could find one as good in its way as the Buick. Time showed the Delco System to be the right one. We wanted a starting device, not an attachment; one that could be built in as an integral part of the motor and that would work in harmony with it.

Various makes of starting devices were thoroughly tested by us. After close investigation and numerous experiments, we chose the Delco System because it is of the single-unit type, hence is more compact and lighter in weight. And because it is the oldest and most successful starting and lighting device on the market.

Buick Models For 1914

The same underlying principles of construction are followed in the building of every Buick. The overhead-valve motor is in every model. No matter what its price, a Buick car must and will give the maximum of that service for which it was intended.

JACKSON LEADS BY LONE POINT

Ty Cobb Is Pushing Shoeless Joe Closely—Eddie Collins Passes the Century Mark for Runs.

Joe Jackson and Ty Cobb continue to wage their fierce battle for the batting honors of the American league. At the present writing Jackson is leading Cobb by but one point, though the difference in games played gives the Cleveland slugger the advantage.

Eddie Collins, of the Athletics, leads the run-getters of the American league, the little second baseman being the first man in either big league to pass the century mark in runs scored.

Jackson has made the most number of hits, 164, Speaker is next in line with 163, Baker, of the Athletics, is third with 155.

Here are the players who are hitting .250 or better and who have participated in fifteen or more games up to and including those played Wednesday, August 27.

HIGHLANDERS WILL TRAIN IN HOUSTON

New York, August 30.—Frank Chance, according to information tonight, has practically decided that the spring training of the New York Americans next year shall be carried out in Texas. Houston is mentioned as a probable selection, the players to report about March 1, go through three weeks of seasoning in the Texas climate and work north by easy stages. Bermuda, it has been definitely determined, will not see the Highlanders again.

STAR PLAYERS DEVELOPED

Days of Georgia State League

By Charles A. Lamar.

The season of 1887 in the old Southern league was disastrous from a financial point of view. The long jumps and the intense rivalry soaked up the gate receipts and transferred them to the railroads and the players.

So when the smoke of battle had cleared away the league exchequer was empty and the enthusiasm of the promoters of the pastiming business in the south had gone glimmering like beads running off a wire.

Mr. Steve Postell, of Atlanta, and others tried to rejuvenate the league and start the season of 1888 on a more conservative basis. Atlanta, as at present, was the best ball town in the league and the men behind the local team were willing and even anxious to take another chance at losing a fat bank roll in order to firmly establish a southern league.

A Georgia State League.

But the promoters in the other cities had contracted severe cases of chilblains and there was nothing doing. But Steve and his associates were not worried about that. In short they didn't worry about anything. A Georgia state league, composed exclusively of amateurs, was suggested.

That kind of a proposition required a lot of nerve and a big flock of loose coin to boot. Because it's a tough job to inoculate the baseball populace accustomed to professional ball to become hysterical over the amateur variety. Take a long chance and try it out and see where you get off.

But Atlanta rose to the occasion, the league was organized with Steve Postel as president. The season was a success from all angles. From a paying standpoint it was a wonder.

Atlanta, Augusta, Columbus and Savannah made up the circuit which remained intact until June, when Macon came in with a splendid team. From that time until the end of the season there was something doing in the baseball business day and night. Take it from an old timer.

Enthusiasm Great.

The enthusiasm in Macon was at fever heat and the geographical position of that city cut off the long jumps from Atlanta and Columbus to Savannah and the splendid attendance gave the league treasury a great boost.

A schedule for a five-club league would look like a Chinese puzzle to an expert. But Steve Postell was not worried. Oh, no! All he said was, "Leave it to me. That's easy work." And maybe it was. Anyway, he got away with it.

The Savannah team won out after a heated struggle all the way, with Atlanta in second place. Savannah's success was largely due to the phenomenal pitching of Frank Butler. Otherwise the teams were pretty evenly matched.

Moselle, of Columbus; Turner, of Atlanta, and Harry Jones, of Macon—a mere boy—were crackerjacks, but Frank Butler had them faded like a forget-me-not in a rolling mill. He was a wonder.

Butler a Star.

Subsequently Butler played with Macon and Nashville in the Southern league in the outfield. Then with the New York Giants.

In 1892 he was with Columbus, Ohio, in the Western league. On July 4 of that year a cannon cracker exploded in his right hand, which destroyed his usefulness as a ball player.

He was one of the fastest men on his feet who ever butted into baseball. At that time Mr. B. Sunday, now an evangelist, and Arlie Latham were generally conceded to be the speediest men in the game in going from the plate to first.

Butler was a left-handed hitter, and a good one. After seeing him play Hugh Fullerton, a real expert, said without hesitation that Butler was as fast, if not faster, than either Sunday or Latham. He is a native of Savannah.

Hugh Craig, a native of Atlanta and an outfielder for the Atlanta team, went to the Texas league and made good from the jump. For Atlanta it may be justly said that Bob Lawshe at short, Bob Glenn at third, "Pap" Key behind the bat and Fred Lilly at first were amateurs of considerable repute.

Moselle's Slow Ball.

Pitcher Moselle, of Columbus, had a tantalizing slow ball that would arouse the envy of old man John Clarkston. It would float up to the plate as big as a toy balloon, but couldn't be hit with a paddle. Moselle was offered professional engagements, but declined them.

Tom Kilburn was the king bee of the Macon team. He was beyond all doubt the best amateur second baseman ever seen in Georgia, and he could hit, too. Porter, a left-handed third baseman of Macon, was also a good man. Mr. Kilburn is still a resident of Macon, where he stands high.

Such is a brief sketch of the Georgia State league—amateur—of 1888, and I have an overpowering hunch that it would be a hard job to excel it, either north, south, east or west.

Brothers In Baseball.

The Gleason brothers played short and third respectively for the St. Louis Browns thirty years ago. Willee White pitched for Cincinnati forty years ago and "Deacon" White, his brother, caught him.

Monte Cross played short and Lave Cross, his brother, covered third for Connie Mack's Athletics not many years ago.

Are the Delehanty's the only baseball family? Perhaps. And also perhaps not.

What's the matter with that man Frank and his Pelicans? Are they spiked to the subway and whiffed to the discards?

The bee is busy, 'tis very true,
He buzzes day by day,
The ant has piles of work to do
Without a cent of pay,
And yet their match is surely found
For labor wasted flat,
When the Pels are floundering round,

Not knowing "where they're at."
Mr. B. Smith and his faithful allies are going at a lively clip, all right. But the trouble is the Gulls can't lose for winning.

Well, you'll have to slip it to the Crackers and the Gulls. It was as plain as a very large knot on a diminutive sapling as early as May that the Gulls would have to be disposed of before a pennant could be won, and the chance to do so now is very remote.

And such are the ups and downs of professional ball. "Class" will tell.

Excellent Program Will Be Staged at Motordrome; Australian Pursuit Race

The management of the local motordrome have arranged an excellent program for the amusement of the speed fans of Atlanta for their show on Monday night.

Ten events in all will be run, with some features on the program that should interest everyone.

The special match race between Tex Richards, on his famous Indian No. 23, and Morty Graves, on the record-breaking Excelsior, which he has been saving especially to take Tex's number, should be thrilling.

These two boys will race the best two out of three heat, sthe first neat 1 mile, the second two miles, and the third, if necessary, 2 miles.

They have bet $50 on their chances to win, and the local agents of the two motorcycles have wagered a little something that their machines are the fastest of the two.

The added event on the program, the last event, will be an Australian pursuit race, the first time that such a race has ever been attempted with motorcycles. Four riders will be started from a standing start from four different parts of the track, and when one man is passed he drops out.

No special distance has been set for this event. As long as one man has not been passed by the man behind him, he is still in the race. The object is for the man who starts from scratch to pass all the others.

Here is the complete program, and a most attractive one it sizes up to be:

SOUTHERN CHAMPIONSHIP.
(1-mile heats, 2-mile finals; 25 points for first, 10 for second and 5 for third.)
First Heat—Swartz, Graves, Lewis and Glenn.
Second Heat—Luther, Richards, Lockner and Renel.

SPECIAL MATCH RACE.
(Best two out of three heats, 1, 2 and 3 miles, for side bet of $50.)
First Heat, 1 Mile—Graves v. Richards.
Final—Southern championships.

SWEEPSTAKES.
(French point system, 10 for first, 6 for second, 3 for third. Heats 2, 4 and 6 miles.)
First Heat, 2 Miles—Lockner, Renel, Swartz, Luther, Lewis and Glenn.
Second heat special match race, 2 miles.
Second heat, sweepstakes, 4 miles.
Third heat, special match race, 3 miles.
Third heat, sweepstakes, 6 miles.

AUSTRALIAN PURSUIT RACE.

Three-Cornered Battle Being Waged for Purloining Honors

Bob Messenger, of Birmingham; Dave Robertson, of Mobile, and Clyde Wares, of Montgomery, are waging a pretty three-cornered battle for the honor of leading the base stealers of the Southern league this season.

At th present writing they stand in the order named above, Messenger with 60 steals, Robertson with 56 and Wares with 53.

NEW MEA MAGNETO CREATING INTEREST IN THE OLD WORLD

Europe and America are watching a new magneto which is gaining fame abroad. The latest success of this magneto, which is called the Mea, was made in a race across the hills in Craiganiet, Ireland, a few weeks ago, when it was awarded two first prizes. These magnetos were carried in this race on a Gregoire and a Nom motor car, and though the test was extraordinary the magnetos responded to the unusual demands with absolutely perfect scores.

Another triumph for the Mea came in the Grand Prix de l'A. C. F., at the races at Dieppe, France, considered the most important of all foreign motor car events. This race was won by a Peugot car fitted with the Mea. The car winning second prize in this race also carried a Mea. This achievement is all the more remarkable because of the fact that the races in both places were controlled by competitive products, and the magnetos were all selected from stock and the awards were made on the basis of unmistakeable merit.

The winning cars carried only one magneto each, so the entire fortune of each entry depended on the Mea magneto, while all competing makes carried an extra or reserve magneto on each racing car to guard against failure.

The Mea magneto has made numerous records which have gained it great popularity, and it is said the apparatus will be strongly in evidence in America in the year 1914.

The Mea is manufactured in Stuttgart, Germany, and Americans will be interested in knowing that Adolphus Busch, of St. Louis, is the principal stockholder. Marburg Bros. Inc., 1790 Broadway, N. Y., general agents for United States and Canada.

Schwenk to Browns.

Saginaw, Mich., August 30.—A message that came while "Lefty" Schwenk, of the Saginaw baseball club, of the South Michigan league, was defeating Adrian here today and allowing them only three hits, notified the big southpaw to report to the St. Louis Americans Monday, when the Browns are to play Detroit. Schwenk accompanied St. Louis on their training trip last spring, but was sent to Saginaw for further seasoning.

THINKS CLOSED CARS BEST FOR LONG TOURS

Los Angeles Contractor Tells of Cross-Continent Trip in a Studebaker Sedan.

That it is now not only possible, but easy to make a motor trip across the continent in a closed car, has just been demonstrated by J. W. Catron, a Los Angeles machinery contractor. Mr. Catron and his party are now at Rochester, N. Y., attending a family reunion and a wedding celebration. They arrived after their trip from Los Angeles, with a report of de luxe travel that has aroused the envy of all who have heard it.

"My wife and I have always maintained that a one-compartment closed car would be ideal for such a trip," said Mr. Catron. "We bought our Studebaker '35' Sedan in the spring, tried it out in California and found it fully up to our hopes. We laid out a schedule, calling for 102 miles a day, and started, the crew being composed of Mrs. Catron, my brother, Mrs. Catron's maid and myself.

"Before we had been long on the road we revised the schedule to 125 miles a day, and bettered even this figure throughout, making Rochester in twenty-one running days.

"Those who regard their closed cars as suitable only for pavement driving are missing a large share of the enjoyment that might easily be theirs. I have owned and driven touring cars for many years, but I have never made a trip in such perfect comfort as the one we are just concluding.

"We made no effort at extreme speed; in fact, I never let the car exceed 38 miles an hour. On a turn, a Sedan swings a bit more than a touring car, due to its higher center of gravity, so I took all turns, particularly those in the mountains, very carefully.

We studied the various adjustments for ventilation and found that it was perfectly possible to travel even through the deserts without discomfort, keeping a cool, dustless breeze circulating through the interior of the car at all times. Of course, the Sedan body is impervious to rain and cold.

"A feature that adds much to the comfort of our car is the Studebaker electric equipment. The starter never failed to crank the motor and the electric lights made travel in the night over strange roads as safe as by daylight. In general, the transcontinental highway is in fine shape now. Except for a few short stretches, the worst roads we found were in the thickly settled parts of the middle west."

The Catrons will continue their trip from Rochester to New York and will probably return by the same route

Bill Stoddard Offers Cup For Motorcycle Champion

To create interest in the running of the southern championships at the local motordrome every night, W. J. Stoddard will give a handsome silver loving cup to the rider that wins the 2-mile final three times.

This cup will be emblematic of the title of southern champion and the rider that wins the finals three times will be considered the champion motorcycle rider of the south.

The winner of the finals Monday night will have one leg on the trophy.

SONDER BOAT RACE.

International Yacht Race at Marblehead Next Week.

Marblehead, Mass., August 30.—The only international sailing yacht race in American waters this year will take place off here next week in the fifth German-American Sonder boat contest. As in former years, the two countries will be represented by teams of three boats each, selected with much care and manned by expert Corinthian sailors.

The challenging fleet is composed of the Angela VI., owned by his imperial and royal highness, Crown Prince William of Germany; the Serum, owned by Waldemar Tietgens, of Hamburg, and the Wittlesbach X., owned by Christof Alt, of Berlin.

The defenders are the Cima, owned by Guy Lowell, of Boston; the Ellen, owned by Charles P. Curtis, of Boston, and the Sprig, owned by John L. Saltonstall, of Boston.

The races will be sailed in Massachusetts bay. The courses will be alternately windward and leeward and triangular, the former being 12 miles, or twice to the outer mark, 3 miles from the start and return. In the other course the sides of the triangle will be 2 1-2 miles and the yachts will sail twice around.

The sport will start on Monday an hour before noon and the races will be held on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday of next week and on the Monday of the following week, provided no postponements are necessary through lack of wind, there being a five-hour limit on each race.

The owner of the yacht that first wins three races or which wins the fifth race in the series will receive a massive silver cup, for which President Wilson stands as sponsor, while the second price, awarded on points, is given personally by Governor Foss, of Massachusetts.

Grandeur in individuality is not the mastery of vital sin, for he who cannot master such is considered weak, but it is self-control enough to master little things.

Big Outing Labor Day For Atlanta Negroes; Races at Speedway

The negroes of Atlanta will have a big outing on Monday, an automobile race meet having been arranged for the Atlanta speedway. This meet will continue throughout the week.

Cash prizes ranging from $5 for the 2-mile foot race to $100 for the 100-mile automobile race have been hung up and considerable interest is being manifested in all the events.

Running races, bicycle races, motorcycle races, automobile races and aeroplane races are on the program. The 100-mile auto race, of course, will attract the most attention.

Every event will begin daily at 2 o'clock. The affair is under the auspices of Big Bethel church and the proceeds will go to that cause. There will be midway attractions at night. General admission 10 cents.

CHATTANOOGA READY FOR G. A. R. REUNION

Chattanooga, Tenn., August 30.—Former United States Senator Newell Sanders, general chairman, John A. Patton, executive director, and Fred Arn, chairman of the assignment committee, Chattanooga Encampment association, entertaining the Grand Army of the Republic, 47th national encampment here, September 15-20, today issued a signed statement assuring the Grand Army, its friends and others expecting to come here, that all will be properly cared for, and that only reasonable rates will be charged.

TOUGH JOURNEY MADE BY BIG KISSEL KAR

"Northern Route" to Coast Anything But Easy One, Delares Tourist.

Eugene R. Bonlure and a party of seven have arrived in Los Angeles in a Kissel Kar "6-60," after a delightful transcontinental trip from Milwaukee. The car driven by Mr. Bonlure, although taken brand new from the Kissel factory, developed no mechanical trouble, save some minor difficulties which the owner acknowledges were due to his own inexperience in handling a large touring car over mountain roads.

Mr. Bonlure comments to Los Angeles newspaper men in an interesting vein on the disadvantages of what is known as "the northern route" to the coast.

"We came across leisurely over the same route followed by the Hoosier tourists," said Mr. Bonlure, "but you can safely wager that we will go back the southern way. The northern route may have been built first, but it never will be as much used as the southern way. It is impractical in the first place for year around travel. It is not everyone that wishes to tackle an 11,000-foot elevation. Some of the members of my party were dangerously affected by the rarified atmosphere. There will be some terrible accidents on those high mountains' roads. Several times I nearly was overcome. I had presence of mind enough to stop the car and rest until I had recovered.

"Let me give this advice. The northern route is no place for one with nerves or weak heart. I am an earnest advocate of the southern route from this on. I have friends in Milwaukee who are planning to come out here. I shall urge them to think of none other than the southern route."

The Kissel Kar which brought the Bonlure party across showed remarkably few signs of wear. Mr. Bonlure declared that nowhere did he have to call in assistance.

"I regard that as a remarkable record," he said. "I have driven cars for some years, but am not a mechanical expert. In fact, I am only a very ordinary driver. When I struck some of those mountain grades my hair stood straight on end, and with less reliable brakes and motor, I fear that I might not have made some of those places. Everywhere along the line we were told that we would find the best roads in California. We found this true. The new stretches of the state highway are perfect."

WILL BE NO DELAY ON GEORGIA AVENUE

Work to Be Completed as Contemplated, Say the County Commissioners

Stirred by rumors that the county commissioners were preparing to halt work on Georgia avenue after reaching Terry street a delegation of property owners headed by Alderman C H Kelly and Councilman C D Knight appeared before the public works committee yesterday morning and urged that there be no delays on the project.

Alderman Kelly informed the committee that a statement has been made at the meeting of council's street committee Friday afternoon, to the effect that there would be no more work on the avenue after Terry street was reached.

Captain Tom Donaldson, the county's engineer declared that there was no foundation for the rumor

"We have just installed machinery on Georgia avenue at a cost of $1 000 he said, 'and to abandon the work now would be a waste of that money It is my intention of going ahead with the paving and grading until it is completed or until I am instructed to the contrary"

The rumor probably originated because Captain Donaldson has decided to work the street by sections. He says that he is proceeding along those lines because he believes that it will prove most economical in the end. It is also evident that some of the property owners became alarmed over the county waiting for the earth which was dumped into the deep fills to settle before attempting to put on the pavement.

Superintendent W H. Glenn of the Georgia Railway and Power company who was summoned before the committee to explain just what sort of bedding the company will place under the tracks, assured the committee that the company would rush the work.

"I can assure the board that the railway company is anxious to finish up," he said.

Superintendent Glenn gave the committee the further assurance that the track will be put down solid.

MURDER CHARGED TO BOY'S SLAYER

Bailiff R. W. Willis Jailed for Killing Luther Hawkins While Trying to Arrest Him for Small Debt.

Columbus, Ga., August 30.—(Special.) Charged with murder, Bailiff R. W. Willis, the bailiff who yesterday shot and killed Luther Hawkins, an Atlanta boy, when attempting to arrest him for a shortage of 50 cents in his board bill, is in a cell in the jail here. No effort will be made to secure bail for him before his preliminary hearing early next week.

Citizens of Columbus today are condemning the killing as unjustifiable and unwarranted. It is declared that the offense for which Hawkins was sought did not even warrant the officer's firing at him even in an effort to frighten him. Sympathy is with the slain youth, his brother and companion.

Luther Hawkins, his brother, Andrew, and another youth came to Columbus earlier in the week seeking work in the cotton mills. They were poor boys. They secured board at Charles Jordan's home. Friday afternoon they were called upon to settle their bill. The three pooled their cash and counted it. They lacked 50 cents of having enough to meet the bill.

The landlord said he would have them arrested and locked in jail for beating a board bill unless they paid the whole amount. Making good his threat, Jordan telephoned to the sheriff's office and asked that an officer be sent to his boarding house. Bailiff Willis was detailed to answer the call.

Told Boys to Run.

Mrs. Jordan realized the plight the boys were in and sympathized with them, disapproving of the course taken by her husband. She told them to run. They did. Jordan and the bailiff started in pursuit in a buggy. They soon overtook Luther Hawkins and called on him to stop. Fearing he would be landed in jail, the frightened youth kept going. Then Bailiff Willis drew his pistol and fired.

The bullet struck Hawkins in the back of the head, going through the skull and lodging over the right eye. He fell in his tracks, and in a few minutes was dead, never regaining consciousness.

Jordan and Willis left the scene. The killing was reported to the police. Willis later was arrested at his home. He denied any intent to kill Hawkins, declaring that he had fired only to frighten him and aimed above his head.

A brother of the dead boy came to police headquarters Saturday morning and asked Chief Beavers to notify Columbus officials to ship the body to Atlanta, where it will be buried.

Sympathy in Columbus, it is reported, is strongly in behalf of the slain youth. The slayer is being held without bond in jail awaiting preliminary hearing. He is grief-stricken over the occurrence.

His explanation is that he did not shoot to injure, but pointed his pistol in the air to scare the fleeing boy.

The body of young Hawkins will be brought immediately to Atlanta.

ACCUSED OF MURDERING HIS WIFE AND NIECE

Nashville, Tenn., August 30.—The preliminary hearing of William Cook, the Rutherford county farmer arrested yesterday on the charge of murdering his wife, Mrs. Maggie Cook, and her niece, Lucy Stanford, Monday night near Smyrna, will take place at Murfreesboro Wednesday. In the meantime Cook remains in jail here, Rutherford county officials being fearful of mob violence. The people there have been deeply aroused by the brutality of the slayer of the two women, who were clubbed to death.

While no motive has yet been definitely fixed, officers think now the murders followed a bitter family quarrel.

Cook was reared in the vicinity of Smyrna, but has lived in Nashville, working for the street railway and later running a saloon. He went to St. Louis during the street railway strike, remaining there a year, going thence to Chicago and working on the street railway. He was there nine years. The Cooks had been married four years.

SAVANNAH HOSPITAL DRAWS COLOR LINE ON NATIVE OF HAWAII

Savannah, Ga., August 30.—(Special.)—The question whether a native of Hawaii can be properly classed as a white is puzzling the superintendents of the Savannah hospitals. Richard Andren, who at one time was a sailor, was stricken with malaria here, and the police sent him to the Georgia infirmary, a hospital for negroes.

Andren raised quite a fuss at being placed in a ward with negroes. He objected so strenuously that he was taken to the marine hospital, but as he hasn't worked as a sailor in some time, the authorities at this hospital felt compelled to reject him, but they agreed to keep him until tomorrow to give the other hospitals time to determine whether Andren is white or black.

EIGHTH DISTRICT FARM HIGH SCHOOL TO OPEN

Athens, Ga., August 30.—(Special.)—The Eighth District Agricultural High school, with Professor W. G. Acree as principal, opens its doors to students, girls as well as boys, on Tuesday, September 2. Prospects are good for the largest attendance since the schools were established. The buildings and grounds have been put in excellent condition. Some changes have been made in the faculty: Professor Gay has the science department, Professor Peacock, mathematics and shop work; Professor F. Cummings, instructor in the University and teacher in the high school in Athens for two years, will succeed Mr. Foster in the history and English; Professor E. W. Moore, of South Carolina, has been added to the faculty to teach bookkeeping; Miss Irene Colclough is to teach domestic science and Professor Morehead will be superintendent of the farm work.

HOOKWORM DISPENSARY LOCATED AT CANDLER

Athens, Ga., August 30.—A dispensary for the examination and treatment of hookworm will be placed at Candler, a station on the Gainesville Midland railroad, between Athens and Gainesville, and Dr. Verner, representing the state board of health, will be there on September 10, 17 and 24 and October 1.

He is working along the systematic lines laid out by the board for the eradication of the hookworm which has been found in practically every county of the state.

MISS ANNIE WILLIAMS DIES AT AMERICUS HOME

Americus, Ga., August 30.—Miss Annie Williams, aged 17, only daughter of Solicitor General James R. Williams, of the south western judicial circuit, died this morning, her death following an operation for appendicitis performed last Monday. Miss Williams was a beautiful and talented young girl and her death causes unusual sadness here.

The funeral exercises will be held Sunday afternoon from First Methodist church with interment at Edaville. The Americus Bar association of thirty members will attend the funeral exercises as honorary escorts.

DOCTOR IS ARRESTED FOR WHITE SLAVERY

Memphis, Tenn., August 30.—Dr. J. D. Stephens, of Knoxville, Tenn., was arrested here today by Deputy United States Marshal Jolly on a warrant charging white slavery. Dr. Stephens is alleged to have brought Elizabeth Martin, aged 22, from St. Louis to Memphis. According to the government agent, C. R. Nixon, several well-known Memphians may become involved in the case.

Among the Georgians in attendance were: Colonel N. E. Harris, of Macon, and his two sons, Walter A. Harris and John B. Harris, of Macon; Judge Joe Bennet, of Brunswick, Estell Graham, of McRae; Sam P. Maddox, of Rome; A. G. McCurry, of Hartwell.

Bank Employees Meet at Social Gathering

With a delicious old-time supper on the lawn and games which ended at 11 o'clock with a watermelon cutting the officers and employees of the Atlanta National bank were delightfully entertained recently by Mr. and Mrs. James S. Floyd at their home on Fifteenth street. Mr. Floyd is a vice president of the bank and the reception tendered the men who work with him was thoroughly enjoyed by all. The large lawn was tastefully decorated with Japanese lanterns and electric lights.

WOMEN HURT IN FIGHT AT DR. HINKLE'S HOME

Physician's Wife and Mother Injured in Lively Squabble That Follows His Return Home.

Macon, Ga., August 30.—(Special.)—During a free-for-all fight tonight at the home of Dr. A. B. Hinkle, one of the wealthiest practicing physicians in Macon, Mrs. Hinkle was struck in the head and Dr. Hinkle's aged mother, Mrs. L. A. Hinkle, of New York city, received a broken hip.

Though the police were called and were able to take Dr. Hinkle in custody only after a hard fight, they later released him without making a charge against him, after Mrs. Hinkle had requested them to.

The trouble started tonight when Dr. Hinkle returned to the beautiful family residence on Orange street. For several months Dr. Hinkle and Mrs. Hinkle had been estranged and there has been talk of a divorce action by Mrs. Hinkle. The father tonight accused his 17-year-old son, James, of trying to influence his mother, and, according to Dr. Hinkle, the boy called him a liar and then struck his father and knocked him down.

Mrs. Hinkle interfered and was struck in the face by Dr. Hinkle, it is said. Dr. Hinkle's aged mother, who has been visiting at the Hinkle home with her son, also came running to his assistance, and in the scuffle fell and broke her hip.

A crowd of 200 people gathered about the Hinkle home, and considerable excitement prevailed, though there were no threats of violence.

It is said that all of Dr. Hinkle's property has been placed in his wife's name, and that the doctor's efforts to get the property back have been partly responsible for the trouble. The Inkle home is one of the old colonial type of houses and one of the finest in the city. Next to it the Hinkles recently completed the Palisades, the most fashionable apartment house in the city.

A warrant charging wife beating was taken out against Dr. Hinkle tonight by his son, and being issued by Justice of the Peace McCowan. Dr. Hinkle will arrange bond.

DIVORCES 9TH HUSBAND AND PAYS HIM ALIMONY

Oregon City, Ore., August 30.—Ellen Derring Grangerow, a wealthy Umatilla Indian, obtained a divorce yesterday from her ninth husband, Grant Nicholas Grangerow, and voluntarily settled upon him as "alimony" the sum of $2,000. She charged willful desertion.

"FISH HOOK" IN THROAT WORRIES MAYOR GAYNOR

New York, August 30.—The bullet wound which Mayor Gaynor received three years ago this month, when an attempt was made upon his life, still causes him serious trouble, which has detained him at his Long Island home for the last two days. In response to a friend's inquiry as to his health, the mayor described his trouble as a "fish hook" in his throat. In one of his characteristic letters he said:

"My right lung, pneumograstraic nerve and stomach have again taken it into their heads that by combined and violent effort they could succeed in casting this 'fish hook' out of y throat which that bullet lodged there. But as in their former occasional attempts, they succeeded in casting everything out except the 'fish hook,' and have completely done themselves and me up in the bargain.

"These members of my body which try to do this thing now and then are just as foolish as people you and I know who want something done all at once which can only be done gradually and little by little. But they won't have it that way. And so to work they go, night and main, to do it all at once by violence, with the result that instead of doing it they do much harm and mischief and exhaust themselves."

ACCUSED OF CREMATING HIS WIFE AND DAUGHTER

Ardmore, Okla., August 30.—As a result of the death of Mrs. Adelbert Borah and her daughter, aged 12, when their home was destroyed by fire this morning at Tishomingo, Johnson county, Adelbert Borah, the husband and father, was arrested charged with setting the house on fire. Borah and his wife are said to have been estranged for some time. Mrs. Borah was the daughter of Lum Cole, a prominent citizen of Morgantown, Ky.

GOSSIP OF GEORGIANS IN THE METROPOLIS

By R. S. Carraway, The Constitution's New York Bureau.

New York, August 30.—(Special.)—People write to the Federal Children's bureau more letters on child labor than on wayward children, feeble-minded children, the pensioning of mothers, infant mortality and infant care, vocational training or the protection of girls, according to a statement of Julia C. Lathrop, chief of the bureau, in a pamphlet just issued by the National Child Labor committee. But the bureau has no authority beyond investigating and reporting conditions so that all active propaganda for improved legislation and enforcement of laws must be undertaken by private organizations.

As part of the campaign to improve conditions in the backward states, the National Child Labor committee has just issued four new pamphlets on southern conditions by southern men, and promises an illustrated pamphlet on Georgia in the near future.

When the Rev. Dr. Len G. Broughton, of London, formerly pastor of the Atlanta Baptist Tabernacle, entered the pulpit of the Madison Avenue Reformed church last Sunday morning, there was a buzz of excited comment. Something had attracted all eyes. That something was not his black alpaca coat or comfortably low cut collar. It was his right eye. It was smaller and around it was a dark circle.

Aware that all eyes were focused upon that black and blue circle, Doctor Broughton said:

"Lest my hearers sympathize with me too freely I will explain. I have a black eye. It is a sore eye, but I promise you I did not get it in the way you think. You see, I was playing tennis and the ball—well, I guess that explains."

Dr. Broughton remained in New York all of the week, preaching nightly in the Tent Evangel. He will shortly go to Macon, where he will conduct a revival. No doubt on this trip south he will stop over in Atlanta and visit his many warm friends in the Gate City.

Culminating a romance which began only six weeks ago, when the bride went to North Carolina with her younger sister to visit relatives, Miss Evelyn Humphries, of Brooklyn Borough, formerly of Atlanta, was married Thursday in Fayetteville, N. C., to Samuel Harrison Paris, of that city.

Miss Humphries up to two years ago lived in Atlanta, but since then has been staying with her mother, Mrs. May Ivy White, in Brooklyn, and attending Erasmus Hall school. With her sister, Miss Najoria Humphries, she went south six weeks ago to visit in Fayetteville.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Hopkins spent a few days at the St. Regis this week upon their arrival from a fishing and hunting trip in Canada. Mr. Hopkins shot an eagle and is having it mounted for his home at Irvington-on-the-Hudson, where he has a collection of birds. Accompanied by Mrs. J. R. Hopkins, Mr. Hopkins' mother, they have gone to Irvington to remain until late in the autumn.

A company of Baptists, men and women, will sail from San Francisco Tuesday next to attend the Adoniram Judson centennial celebration in India. Judson was a pioneer missionary in the Far East. The Rev. Dr. Robert S. MacArthur, formerly of Atlanta but now president of the Baptist World Alliance, will have part in the celebration.

Just before leaving for the celebration, Dr. MacArthur, in a speech, advocated breadth of sympathy between the different denominations, as well as co-operation of endeavor and unity of organization. He scored Bishop David M. Greer for calling himself the Bishop of New York.

"There will be no Christian unity as long as some Christians assume titles to themselves," declared Dr. MacArthur. "The idea of a man calling himself as Bishop Greer does, the Bishop of New York. No one man is bishop of New York. He struts his way through New York and wants people to regard him as the bishop of that see. Then there will be no Christianity as long as the Episcopalians hope to change the name of that church to 'American church.' Why, they are the smallest of the denominations."

The many friends of Miss Mildred Rutherford in Georgia, and throughout the south, will be pleased to hear of the compliment that has been recently paid to her. Miss Rutherford, whose home is in Athens, Ga., is historian of the United Daughters of the Confederacy and at a recent convention in Washington she delivered an address of historical interest which has been published in the Congressional Record, an honor never before accorded to any woman.

Mrs. James Noon, of Savannah, arrived in New York early in the week, and is visiting relatives and friends in New Jersey.

Miss Nina A. Pape, who has been a student at Columbia university for several months, taking a summer course, has returned to her home in Savannah.

Mr. L. J. Henry, of Augusta, is spending several weeks in and around New York, staying the greater part of the time at Manhattan Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Williams, who have been on a trip of several weeks' duration to Europe, returned to New York Thursday, and left for their home in Macon.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bussey, of Columbus, arrived in Gotham early in the week for a short stay.

Mr. and Mrs. James Menzies, the Misses Menzies and Miss Helen Vorhees, of Savannah, passed through New York early in the present week, on their way to the Catskills for a several weeks' stay.

Miss Mirfree Wiekes, of Atlanta, is in New York the guest of Mrs. Sarah McDonald Sheridan, at her home in Gamercy Park West.

An engagement announced this week was that of Miss Catherine Putzel, of Savannah, to Paul H. Hoeber, of New York. The wedding will occur sometime during September.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Poppe, of Atlanta, were among the passengers sailing Tuesday on board the liner Kaiser Wilhelm. They will spend several weeks in Europe.

Buyers in the city from Atlanta included the following: W. C. Barnwell, for Ragan, Malone Co.; E. A. White, for Davison-Paxon-Stokes Co.; C. H. Smith, J. Rollestone and C. H. Sims, for Keely Co., and Miss L. C. Herman, for J. P. Allen & Co.

that you've tried so long to get rid of is a "goner." You apply "GETS-IT" in 2 seconds, that's all. "GETS-IT" does the rest. "MARY'S LAMB" TO OPEN LOCAL THEATER SEASON

Richard Carle's Success Comes to Atlanta Wednesday for Three Performances

The theatrical season will be formally ushered in Wednesday night when the Lyric theatre will be the scene of the initial presentation in Atlanta of Mary's Lamb with seats for the opening performance while playing to sell out house, one of the brightest of the season's absolutely sparkling musical bills. Richard Carle's play Mary's Lamb. It will be given Wednesday and Thursday nights and Thursday matinee.

Some years ago William Pfirrman was associated with Richard Carle when that inimitable comedian was his own manager, producer and star. It was during this connection that Mary's Lamb, one of the most noted of the successes of the last ten years was produced. And when Mr. Pfirrman decided to enter the lists for himself he resolved to make a gala revival of this great musical medium as the medium of his first venture.

In this undertaking he received the consent of Mr. Carle to his active and personal assistance as well, for it was under Mr. Carle's skillful direction that the revival took shape though he was ably assisted by Jim Doiling who is also active in the cast.

Madame Schumann-Heink's sensational girl which will remain at this full in New York.

The new version has splendid company with it, and the scenic investiture will be of the most elaborate, in every way will the setting and stage investiture will far surpass those of former years. Tuneful musical numbers, catchy specialties, vaudeville comedy creations and specialties have been introduced upon and it is only in the instances that liberties have been taken with the script.

The company selected for it will be well known vaudeville and musical comedy artists, including Den McGrath, who will play the role of Lord Lumley, the Modest Little Woman will play the part of the actress for whose fair sake Lord Lumley is involved in all sorts of complications within the bounds of his hen pecked existence. Frances Gaine, the well known actress, will portray the part of Mrs. Lumley, the actress wife who will be jealous of the notable feature will be the chorus of beautiful girls, numbering about fifty, all of whom are selected for their beauty and grace. The costuming is said to be one of the greatest ensembles ever attempted in connection with a musical production.

Emma Bunting

(At the Lyric)

Beginning with a holiday matinee tomorrow Emma Bunting undoubtedly one of the most popular actresses that comes to Atlanta will play a week's engagement at the Lyric theater and will be seen in a three act play called "The Circus Girl" written by Sydney Grundy. This play was first produced under a different title in London at the Globe theater and was afterwards presented in New York by the late Augustin Daly at the playhouse which still bears his name. It proved to be an extremely popular farce and was all the go for a great many years and has given inspiration to many a playwright since it first illuminated the stage. It is not unlikely that the late Clyde Fitch drew largely upon "The Arabian Nights" as it was first called when he wrote the sensational farce, The Blue Mouse. The part of Rosa Colombier the one played by Miss Bunting in The Circus Girl is not unlike the title role in the last named play although without any of the disagreeable characteristics that marked the heroine of Fitch's naughty play.

Miss Bunting's engagement at the Lyric is for one week only and then after another week's engagement in Birmingham she will go to New Orleans for a stock season at the Dauphine theater the house formerly used for the Hubert road attractions and it is confidently expected that she will duplicate in the Crescent City the success that has been hers on several occasions in Atlanta. In Miss Bunting's company there are a number of well known players chief among whom is George Whitaker the leading man so long associated with this organization and among the others are Louis Dean Sam C. Miller Jack Ball Walter Woodall Charles Houson Louis Webb Marie Harcourt Eva Sargent Virginia Hadley. No doubt Miss Bunting's personal friends and admirers will be out in full force to witness her performances of The Circus Girl the advance sale of seats already indicating that fact. This will probably be the last time that she will appear in Atlanta for a long while. In addition to the Monday matinee the regular ones will be given Friday Thursday and Saturday.

Jewell Kelley Company

(At the Bijou)

The second week of the Jewell Kelley company's engagement at the Bijou promises to be a repetition of the great success of the opening week. The play that is presented this week is a four act melodrama entitled The Man from the West one of the most intensely interesting plays that has ever been produced in dramatic stock. The story tells what unscrupulous speculators will set into which an attempt is made by enemies of Mattie Lawton to get through his holdings of land in the San Diablo mine. The wells and drills that are used to penetrate this rock and the underhanded schemes that are resorted to and finally the routing of the traitors by Jim Farrell the man from the west make up a story that is intense in human interest and dramatic situations and all of which is the author's picture of the rush. The Man from the West Jim Farrell will be played by Jewell Kelley whose splendid physique and remarkable stage presence makes him a picturesque westerner and it is said that his portrayal of the role will be remarkably clever. Harry Lawton the son of the owner of the San Diablo mine will be played by Eddie Black T. C. McDonough will essay the role of Matthew Lawton the stock broker. Earl Hipsley is Simon Dean Richard Mandel as Andrew Burke the villain W. D. Jenkins as Mark Ferris a friend of the man from the west Marie Claire is Mary Lawton Claire Summers as Mrs. Simon Dean and Bessie Morris as Jessie Dean will complete the characters of the play.

There will be four splendid scenes act one representing Matthew Lawton's drawing room in New York act second a garret in New York act three Matthew Lawton's office and act four Matthew Lawton's drawing room. Special scenery will be painted for each act by Reginald Lonie and a perfect and complete production is assured.

Matinees will be given every afternoon at 2:30 and night shows at 8:30. The box office at the Bijou is open daily from 9 o'clock and seats at this may be secured for the entire week.

Keith Vaudeville

(At the Forsyth)

There are some great feature acts on the bill for the Forsyth this week—a better grade of variety entertainment than has been at all possible to secure during the summer. The circuit houses are all opening and the big acts are coming away from the seashore and the mountains to go to work. The Forsyth will get a better grade of real vaudeville this season than ever before simply because there are more and greater acts than ever before in vaudeville's history and the Forsyth is now one of the most important links in the great chain of high class vaudeville theaters.

The headline feature for this week will be Sam Mann and company in The New Leader a comedy playlet founded on what generally happens at a Monday morning rehearsal in a vaudeville theater. Sam Mann is one of the most talented character comedians in vaudeville. He assumes the title role of his sketch and is ably assisted by a corps of clever people who play the parts of stage hands, actors and others who are found around the theater on the busy Monday morning. The act has scored a tremendous hit in every city it has appeared and will surely be a feature that will draw people to the Forsyth during the week.

Willard Simms and company in 'Flinders Furnished Flat' will be another of the headline acts. Mr. Simms appeared at the Grand at the opening of the theater for vaudeville a year ago. He scored one of the biggest laughing hits ever credited in vaudeville and at the Forsyth will eclipse all that has been done before. He papers a room in such a funny fashion that he has been classed as the star of funmakers in sketches.

Alexander and Scott the clever young comedians who have risen rapidly to headline honors in a short time will present their clever singing act, introducing Alexander as about the smartest cullud girl that has been seen since Eltinge left minstrels. The young men are popular here and will be accorded a welcome that means much at the box office.

Pretty Mamie Elmore will make her first appearance in Keith vaudeville in Atlanta. The young lady has been a favorite in many cities and is very well known and liked in Atlanta. She has a beautiful wardrobe and a series of exclusive songs that should make her very popular.

The Gasch sisters who are really remarkable gymnasts will present one of the most sensational thrilling acts that has been seen on a vaudeville stage. They are pretty girls to begin with and they perform some stunts in an acrobatic fashion that have never been attempted by the best male gymnasts.

Art Bowen who draws funny pictures and tells stories about them will be on the bill and Camille's miniature dog circus will be a real treat for the ladies and children.

It is conceded that the bill is one of the strongest that has been announced since the Forsyth was dedicated to the highest grade of Keith vaudeville.

Kinemacolor Pictures.

(At the Grand)

Kinemacolor at the Grand has made this theater most popular. Not since the management inaugurated the motion picture policy has there been such a tremendous interest in the place and its policy. There have been some great pictures shown at the Grand but nothing in any picture theater has ever been received with so much interest as has Kinemacolor. The beautiful natural color pictures attract the interest and the attention of everybody, the black and white first run pictures are as good as seen in any place and surely the comforts and the conveniences of the Grand make it a far more desirable place than any other picture theater. For the week starting on Monday in addition to the regular releases of first run black and white pictures that will be changed daily, there will be an every other day change of Kinemacolor showing some of the grandest natural color pictures that have ever been made.

On Monday and Tuesday the subjects will be The Struggle in two reels a thrilling drama that is splendidly acted by the players who have been drawn from other picture companies and there will be a beautiful travel picture showing motor boat races at Brighton Beach and the great waves that wash the shores at that wonderful place. For Wednesday and Thursday there will be a two reel comedy "Keeping Up With Hubby" and a one reel trip showing life in Lapland and the week will finish with the exhibition of Steam the greatest picture that Kinemacolor has ever made. Steam is a drama in three reels that has been a wonderful drawing card wherever seen.

Kinemacolor is exhibited daily from 2:30 to 7 at five cents admission and from 7 to 10:30 p. m. at ten cents admission.

DEAF AND DUMB BOY HIT BY AUTOMOBILE

When Negroes Gathered Around Car the Frightened Chauffeur Jumped and Disappeared.

The third serious automobile accident within twenty-four hours occurred Saturday night at 9 o'clock at the corner of Auburn avenue and Bell street, when a car driven by Bob Ridgeway, a negro chauffuer, with Dr. J. Cheston King, and Dr. W. A. Gardner as passengers, ran down and injured Clarence Bagwell, a deaf and dumb negro boy, so seriously that attending physicians state he cannot recover.

Immediately after the accident, a large crowd of negroes surrounded the car and threatened Ridgeway so fiercely that he became frightened, and jumping from the car ran down the street and disappeared around a nearly corner. Up to a late hour Ridgeway, who is wanted by the police on a charge of reckless driving, had not been located.

The injured negro was riding a bicycle on Bell street and as he attempted to cross Auburn avenue, the automobile struck his wheel. For some reason the brakes of the car failed to work and it is said that the boy was dragged a distance of not less than 100 feet. He was picked up and placed in the car by Drs. King and Gardner and taken to Grady hospital for treatment.

Dr. King was taken to police headquarters for investigation. It developed there that he was not personally responsible for the accident, and in all probability no case will be made against him. The negro chauffeur is being sought by the officers. Bagwell lived in the rear of 318 Decatur street.

AD MEN ARE PREPARING GIGANTIC JAG OF JOY

The Jolly Ad Men of Atlanta are preparing another gigantic jag of joy, such as was held last spring—only this one is to be somewhat different.

The affair will be held some time very soon, in the Hotel Ansley, in all probability, and it is promised that dull care will take wings during the hours of enjoyment.

One of the features of the evening will be the unveiling of the veiled mystery, in case that the veiled mystery does not get ill at the last moment, or fall off the pedastal, as the case may be. The exact identity of this mystery—whether fowl of the air, beast of the field, or fish of the waters, or something else, will not be disclosed until the last moment.

Besides the veiled mystery, there will be several other attractive features never seen on sea or land before, it is said.

REVIVAL CONVERTS TO BE BAPTIZED AT BUCKHEAD TONIGHT

The revival meeting at Buckhead will come to a close tonight when the ordinance of baptism will be administered to a number of candidates recently uniting with the church.

Evangelist A. V. Pickern did the preaching with power, and the vicinity of Buckhead was greatly stirred. Twenty-five have already united with the church, and the hand of fellowship will be extended to all new members after the baptizing tonight.

Last Sunday marked a great day in Buckhead, when 150 members of the Sunday school, just before the preaching service at 11 o'clock, marched up Peachtree road to the five points and back to the church singing Sunday school songs. They carried a large banner and each child a United States flag.

Preceding the services tonight will be music by the large choir led by Fred Torrance.

BURTON SMITH TALKS OF BAR ASSOCIATION

Burton Smith, who has been for many years a regular attendant of the American Bar association, and an officer of the association, speaking of the meeting in Montreal, said:

"I regret very much that the exigencies of my professional relation to the Crawford case and the Barlow habeas corpus rendered it impossible for me to go to Montreal. I had the pleasure of being present some years ago when Lord Chief Justice Russell, of Great Britain, made a distinctive address to the American Bar association, and I know that this occasion when the lord chancellor is present will be an epoch making event in Anglo-Saxon civilization.

"It is probable that there has never been heretofore such a meeting of English speaking lawyers as will be present on this occasion. In addition to the presence of the lord chancellor, an event will be the earnest effort made by the lawyers of America to simplify legal procedure. I believe, with many others, that the federal court judges should adopt a system of practice for the federal courts. The new rules of the United States supreme court in equity are a tremendous step toward simplicity. As it stands today the federal courts adopt in common the practice of each of the states in which they sit. If these courts, instead of following state practice, should through the judges adopt a system of practice in which useless technicalities are eliminated, the system would soon be known all over the country and all states would soon come to it."

SULZER IS CHARGED WITH DOUBLE-DEALING

Albanay, N. Y., August 30.—Double dealing was imputed to Governor Sulzer in his direct primary campaign by Acting Governor Martin H. Glynn today. Mr. Glynn declared that just prior to the opening of his direct primary campaign Governor Sulzer requested him to convey privately to Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, the assurance that "he must not pay any attention to what Mr. Sulzer might say on the stump regarding direct primaries," as what he would say on the stump would be what he considered to be good for himself and the party.

Mr. Glynn said that he was further requested by Mr. Sulzer to "assure Mr. Murphy that when the campaign was over, Governor Sulzer and Mr. Murphy could get together and fix up matters to their mutual satisfaction."

This happened, Mr. Glynn explained, just before Mr. Sulzer made his first speech on direct primaries. Mr. Glynn said he "positively refused to take any such message or to have anything to do with the matter."

According to the acting governor this is the "only time that Mr. Murphy's name was ever mentioned in an interview between Mr. Sulzer and Mr. Glynn."

SAYS BUMPER CROPS DUE TO USE OF FERTILIZER

How much credit is due commercial fertilizer for the bumper crops of 1913, in prospect, can be gathered from the announcement just made by Director William J. Harris, of the United States census bureau, in which he states that Georgia uses nearly one-sixth of the total amount of commercial fertilizer produced each year.

His statement, which has been received with widespread interest throughout the south and especially in Georgia, is based upon statistics of the fertilizer industry for 1909 and since that time Georgia has greatly increased the use of commercial fertilizer and it is more than probable that this state uses more than one-sixth per annum.

The Georgia planter has learned that fertilizers cost less than labor and through the use of commercial fertilizer not only is plant food returned to the soil where it is so greatly needed but in addition he is helping himself, for a major content of commercial fertilizer is cotton seed meal, which is a by-product of the cotton seed, now an important factor in estimating the value of each year's cotton crop.

ACADEMY OF THE VISITATION, MONTE MARIA,

Founded 1866.

Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies. Beautifully situated, overlooking the James. The course of instruction comprises all the requisites of a refined and polished education. Special attention given to Music, Art and Languages, French in particular. Private courses given in latter branch, by a native during School Year. The Convent of the Visitation was founded in Richmond, September 2, 1866, by band of Sisters from Baltimore, at the request of Bishop McGill, of happy memory. The time following so closely upon the civil war, which laid waste the fair and sunny south, proved the incredible hardships and labor. In these the pioneer Sisters nobly took their part, and thanks to their untiring zeal and energy succeeded in establishing on a solid basis the work of education which their successors have constantly pursued with the greatest devotedness.

Monte Maria Academy was opened on the seventeenth of the same month, the Sisters receiving as many pupils as their limited accommodations permitted. Soon their achievements in the field of education became known, and the steadily increasing number of students testify to the appreciation of both parents and pupils.

Since those days of struggle and toil many improvements have been made, and much ground acquired; which latter promises the best for the future. For, as time advances, the school increases the Sisters will ever endeavor to keep apace with modern requirements, offering their pupils all the advantages of a solid and accomplished training. The school building is spacious and airy, surrounded by beautiful green lawns and extensive play grounds. Tennis, croquet and other games afford ample means of taking healthful exercise, to which great attention is paid.

The Academy is situated on one of the highest of Richmond's many hills, enjoys, we dare say, the most commanding prospect in the old Capital of the Confederacy. On one side the James, with its green islands and picturesque scenery charms the eye; on the other half the city may be seen, with its historic places and the grand monuments erected to the great and noble men. Brisk breezes blow almost continually on those pleasant heights, thus tempering even the excessive heat of summer.

Earnest endeavors are made by the Sisters in charge to promote the welfare of their pupils and train them mentally, physically and morally. A kind and gentle spirit pervades their dealing with these young souls—at the same time discipline is mildly but firmly enforced.

Musicale are given on the second Friday of each month, and entertainments at stated intervals. The young ladies have outings under the care of suitable chaperons.

ATLANTA'S STRIDES FROM DAY TO DAY

All the News of Real Estate and Building.

Activity in the real estate field was rather marked during the past week. While there were no tremendous sales, the volume of medium-sized ones was large, and the majority of dealers were kept busy handling transactions involving $5,000 or less.

The outlook for prospects seems to be good, as one realty dealer remarked Saturday. The architects are busy preparing plans for a number of small residences, many of them for the new subdivisions opened during the last year or so. The prospects of a good cotton crop has buoyed the local money market up somewhat, and it is thought that money will be somewhat easier during the winter months than the earlier part of the year and the summer.

$10,000 West Peachtree Sale.

James Sharp has bought from W. D. Owens a residence at 854 West Peachtree, on a lot 40x200, for $10,000. This property is 400 feet south of Eighteenth street.

Cochran Agency Sales.

H. W. Grant, of the Cochran Agency, announced the two following sales Saturday:

For J. W. Gresham, of Griffin, to Mrs. Eloise Farra, the southeast corner of Bedford place and Fifth street, a two-story brick veneer residence, for $9,800, on a lot 80x120 feet.

For Mr. Gresham to H. D. Newman, No. 287 Bedford place, a nine-room, two-story buff brick-veneered house, for $9,250. The lot is 55x123 feet.

M. C. Kiser Agency Sales.

The M. C. Kiser Real Estate Agency announced the following sales Saturday:

A two-story residence at 25 Colquitt avenue, on a lot 50x150 feet, sold to D. B. Greenwood for an out-of-town client. Consideration, $6,000.

Sold for J. B. Brooks to J. A. Small, a parcel at 21-23 Ashland avenue, 50x100 feet. Price not mentioned.

Marietta Auction Sale.

J. B. Jackson will offer at public auction at the courthouse door, Marietta, Tuesday, at 10 a. m., eighteen choice acreage tracts, the majority fronting the Marietta car line at Turner's crossing. These tracts average from one to twenty acres each, and are some of the best in that part of the county.

Culley Goes With Ansley.

The Edwin P. Ansley Real Estate and Renting Agency has secured the services of John D. Culley for his renting department. Mr. Culley will devote his entire time to the renting department of the agency. He has had fifteen years' experience in that line, and is known as one of the best renting agents in Atlanta.

Sale on Drewry Street.

John M. George has sold to R. A. Agnew a seven-room bungalow on a lot 50x182 at 33 Drewry street, for a consideration of $5,250. W. L. and John O. DuPree handled the transaction.

John D. Babbage, of "Ask Mr. Babbage" fame, has sold to a client a lot at 228 Spring street, 25x98 feet, for a consideration of $5,000. A small dwelling is on the lot.

Ware & Harper Sales.

Ware & Harper, the business brokers, have handled the following transactions during the past week:

Sold to A. J. McLane for a client, the sodawater, cigar, tobacco and ice cream parlor located at 50 E. Georgia avenue.

Sold to J. C. Davis, of East Point, Ga., for a client, the beer saloon and pool parlor at 352 Decatur street.

Sold to J. P. Armistead, of Crawford, Ga., for a client, the hotel located at 50 Houston street, known as the Pasadona.

Sold to H. P. Osborne and W. L. Castles for a client, the sodawater, ice cream business located in McClures' Ten Cent store at 63 Whitehall street.

Altoloma Sales.

W. P. Cole, who is promoting the sale of Altoloma and Altoloma gardens, reports the sale of 153 lots, aggregating a total of $34,250. These lots range in sizes from quarter acre tracts to five acre tracts, the prices being $100 per lot and up.

Altoloma is situated just beyond Decatur, on the Georgia railroad and the Stone Mountain car line, which it is reported will be ready to operate October 1. This will undoubtedly enhance the value of all property along the car line route, and should create considerable activity in Altoloma. Several new homes are already being constructed and many purchasers contemplate building by the time the car line begins to operate.

Mr. Cole is selling Altoloma lots on the easy weekly payment plan, which places this investment before the entire public.

Read the Want Ads and Learn Something to Your Advantage

The "Want Ad" pages of The Constitution have many things to tell you. No matter what you are interested in—whether you want to rent a flat or rent a house—or buy one—they will guide you quickly and correctly.

If you want a typewriter at a reduced price, or an automobile, or a motorcycle, or any one of a hundred useful and pleasurable things, you will find it among the "Want Ads."

The people of Atlanta—during the course of the year—have many things to buy and sell. Like as not you will run across an ad asking for something you have stored in the attic which you'd be willing to sell.

Or you will discover something that you have always wanted, but which you thought you could not afford. Only way you can be sure of discovering these opportunities is to become a regular reader of the "Want Ad" pages. Read them in the future even more thoroughly than you have in the past.

If you have anything you want to convert into money, or some particular thing you want to buy, get up an ad of your own and

SHARP & BOYLSTON

Misuse of the Term "Impeachment."

The whole difference of opinion comes from a use of the word "impeachment" in two senses by a careless drafting committee when the constitution was prepared for adoption. Strictly speaking, the word "impeachment" means merely accusation. But the constitution loosely speaks of the range of penalties in case of conviction after the trial of impeachment charges. Even well informed men of legal knowledge habitually use the word "impeachment," meaning conviction and removal from office. The New York constitution defines the circumstances under which the lieutenant governor might take the place of the governor. These include death, absence from the state, such automatic causes as conviction of crime in court, and "impeachment" is mentioned as the first in the list. Since elsewhere in the instrument the word "impeachment" is used in the sense of conviction after an impeachment trial, it would seem entirely plain to a candid student of the subject in all its bearings, historical and otherwise; that it has not recently been the intention of the state of New York to allow a hostile majority in one branch of the legislature to deprive the governor of his office, and to install the lieutenant governor on a moment's notice under suspension of rules by the mere passage of a resolution to bring impeachment charges. The present constitution of New York was made by a sane and intelligent body, with the Hon. Joseph H. Choate as its president, the Hon. Elihu Root as one of its foremost members. This convention would never have permitted itself to do such an eccentric and ridiculous thing as to depart from what had become the well-established American rule (national and state), and to allow high high executive officers to be deposed, in advance of an impeachment trial, by the mere whim of a political majority in one branch of the legislature. The framers of the present constitution of New York, in our judgment, meant to protect the office of governor as against the Goths and Vandals of a Tammany majority in the legislature, precisely as the constitution of the United States meant to protect the high office of president against the fury of a hostile majority in the house of representatives. If the present Tammany doctrine in New York were sound, and could have been applied at Washington, not only would Andrew Johnson have been deposed from office, but Grover Cleveland would more than once have had charges preferred against him for the mere sake of having him suspended from the exercise of his functions as president. From "The Progress of the World," in the American Review of Reviews for September.

Sewing Human Hearts.

(From The World's Work.)

Probably the most daring chapter in modern surgery is that which treats of operations on the heart. "The road to the heart is only two or three inches long, but it has taken surgery nearly 2,600 years to traverse it," is one writer's striking remark. How recent this work is is made plain from the fact that a book, published by Stephen Paget in 1805, contained a chapter on "Surgery of the Heart"—the words being contemptuously inclosed in quotation marks. The scientist, as well as the layman, looked up on the heart with an almost superstitious awe. Any injury necessarily implied death; any interference with such an injury could only hasten the end. Yet many shrewd observers in the course of the ages had noted that all heart wounds did not result in instantaneous death.

It was not until ten or fifteen years ago that surgeons began to act upon this knowledge. In exceptional cases death did not result immediately from a heart wound; there were intervals of a few minutes, a few days, or a few weeks. Why not utilize this interval in an attempt to sew up the wound? Medical history now reports many successful operations of this kind. An especially noteworthy one, performed upon an Alabama negro boy in 1902, illustrates the resources of modern heart surgery. This boy had been the victim of an especially nasty stab wound. The knife had penetrated the apex of the heart and passed into the left ventricle, making a woung nearly half an inch long. When the boy was placed on the operating table, in a little negro cabin, the signs of death had already appeared. His feet were cold, and his face showed signs of the utmost distress. The surgeons made a little window-like openin just above the heart. Through this they could readily see the injured organ, the blood spurting from the wound at each pulsation. One surgeon put in his hand, pulled the heart upward and held it while another sewed the wound with a catgut. The operation—performed without an anesthetic—lasted 55 minutes; on the sixteenth day the boy was sitting up; in a short time his heart was as good as new.

The Bronchoscope.

(From The World's Work.)

The bronchoscope illuminates the passages so successfully that tacks, horseshoe nails and fragments of bones have been found and removed even from the third branch of the bronchial tree, by the use of delicate instruments.

Another and more dangerous, though sometimes the only possible, and occasionally successful, method now employed for this same purpose is purely surgical. The X-ray is used to determine the position of the object, and then a window in the chest wall is cut, the lung tissue is severed until the trochial tube is exposed, and the tube is slit open and the object removed. Strangely enough, this operation, which has repeatedly defied the skill of city surgeons with every facility of modern hospitals, has once been performed successfully by a "country doctor." Dr. Francis A. Goeltz, then (1907) a surgeon of Erie, Pa., removed a laundryman's metal collar button from the bronchial tube of a 6-year-old boy by cutting through the chest wall, and thus saved the boy's life.

Bather Wears Watch.

(From The New York American.)

Lillian Lorraine, a watch fastened to her costume by a gold circlet, and a bathing costume that even a chorus girl in the "Follies" would have called snappy, dissipated any chances for a quiet Sunday at Long Beach yesterday. With Flo Zeigfeld always within reach, Miss Lorraine paraded the beach.

Every man became interested in the time, of course. Miss Lorraine declared the watch waterproof, and to prove it went in bathing.

WHICH IS BEST?

MONEY IS GOOD, but in many instances money takes wings and flies away. Stocks are good, yet often from one cause or another fortunes are lost. Merchandise is good, yet how many failures occur? How many lose their all in merchandising? With land you can't lose. Buy land, own land. Many thousands are coming and going each year, yet no more land is being produced. Land is the firm foundation on which we stand to win or lose.

BUY LAND! IT'S SAFE! IT'S SOUND!

In eight (8) miles from city, on Covington dirt road, and near Decatur, Ga., we offer for quick sale 50, 75 or 125 acres of splendid land, facing on Covington dirt road.

Cut this land into 5, 10, 15 and 20-acre tracts and double your money. Easy access to Decatur-Atlanta street cars and Georgia railroad in short distance. New driveway from East Lake to Covington road borders this land. Many beautiful building sites. Land is level, and part of land in high state of cultivation. Good stream on this property. Part of land virgin timber. Terms easy and titles perfect.

"The Invisible Government" Under Searchlight.

Congress is conducting a double-barreled investigation of vital moment to the American republic. Started by the charge of President Wilson that an "insidious and numerous lobby" was operating to prevent the enactment of his tariff views, it has spread until it has bared the "invisible government," which, in fact, has been directing the destinies of the people of the United States. It has revealed powerful aggregations of capital working to one end—the protection and development of the special privilege. It has brought to light the feebler efforts of organized labor to better the condition of the working people, and even to secure the upper hand in its war upon capital. It has developed an enormous expenditure of money; the use of secret, unfair, dishonest and sometimes criminal methods, including the corruption of public servants—humble negro and white messengers, stationed at the doors of committee rooms and the office of the president, buy pages of the house, and men elected by the people to represent their interest as a whole. It has disclosed the tactics pursued to influence the organization of the house and of its committees, in order that one side or the other might be advantaged. It has established that special interests have dictated not only the customs duties imposed upon products in which they were particularly interested, but even the language of the law. It has exposed the means by which legislation desired was passed and objectionable legislation was killed. It has unveiled a power so great that national political parties have yielded to it, and accepted its dictum as their policies.

It is an absorbing tale which thus far is in outline only—for there will be further facts developed which, with those now available, will make a mosaic destined to appall the people. During the thirty years the investigation has covered, they will find they have been exploited by cunning adventures, to use no worse term, who have kept their hands upon the throttle of legislation, and who, to gain their ends, have considered no expense too great, no means beneath their service. These men have gone into states and congressional districts, notably in the case of the National Association of Manufacturers, to elect candidates in sympathy with their views and to defeat men opposed to them. Indeed, the ambition of some men seeming to control the policy of the National Association of Manufacturers, as disclosed by their own letters, has soared to the point of influencing the election of president of the United States and the appointment of a member of his cabinet. Literally the great interests have spent money like water and found it profitable; and in order to escape responsibility for their acts they have burned books, sent unsigned instructions, and designated their employees by numbers instead of by their proper names.—From "The Invisible Government Under Searchlight," by John Callan O'Laughlin, in the American Review for September.

A Base Hit That Landed in a Load of Hay.

The American Magazine has been offering prizes for letters entitled, "The Greatest Baseball Play I Ever Saw." The winning letters are published in the September number and the following letter, descriptive of a "rube" baseball game, won second prize:

"The greatest baseball play I ever saw was when the Maple Hill 'Sar'l Tops' were playing the Redfield 'Pine Tree Tops' in July, 1905, at Redfield, New York. The game was on the village square, into which all the streets in the hamlet converged, and across which everybody in the neighborhood was accustomed to walk or drive. A New York summer boarder officiated as umpire. He had a college education and a collection of slang that is still remembered as one the wonders of the world.

"Redfield was one run ahead when Maple Hill went to bat in the last half of the ninth. Two men went out in quick succession, and then a sawed-off runt of a farmer's boy knocked out a two-bagger that started a tumult which rattled the pitcher. Two wild pitches followed, and then the batter caught an in-shoot plumb on the nose of his bat. It looked like a twin home run the way the ball shot up into the air and out in the world, far over the heads of all the fielders.

"But just at that moment a farmer driving a load of hay crossed the most distant corner of the square and pulled up his horses to get a look at the game. The ball landed plumb in the center of the load of hay and was embedded there, while the two Maple Hill base runners legged it for the home plate. Everybody thought that was the end of the game, but one of the Redfield infielders jumped upon a bicycle and raced madly after the runaway team. A fourth of a mile away, in plain sight of the umpire and the crowd, the bicycle rider overtook the load of hay and just then the ball rolled off the rear of the load and the fielder caught it.

"'Out!' yelled the umpire, and he awarded the game to Redfield, quoting national rules and breaking a heavy cane over the head of the Maple Hill captain to substantiate his decision."

Says Sailors Think Evil in Calm Weather.

R. M. Hallett, writing a sea story in the September American Magazine, makes the point that a calm doesn't mean much on a steamship, where the mind is constantly satisfied and appeased by movement. On a sailing ship, however, it is different. On a sailing ship in a calm a skipper is in more danger of having trouble with his crew than in stout weather, where all is action. The idea is that a calm forces a man to think, and the author adds, perhaps too cynically, "You force a man to think and he will think evil."

The Mystery of the Shadow on the Wall

By ROBERT NAUGHTON

COPYRIGHT, 1911, F. H. RICE.

"CONFOUND it, Duncan," said Rand, "what do you think that I am, anyway? Take your spook stories somewhere else. What that hysterical family needs is a doctor, not a detective."

"Do listen, Rand," I urged. "When you have heard me out you can refuse the case just as easily as you can now. I'll take only a minute or two of your time."

"Well, get on with it, then. But you know—"

"I know that you haven't a superstitious cell in your brain, and I thought I hadn't either, but when I tell you that I saw—"

Rand smiles in that ironical way of his, and I hastily began another sentence.

"You know," I said, "that I knew, in a general way who the Danvers were, because my mother lives within a few blocks of thier house. However, they have not occupied it for a long time, because Mr. Danvers stayed in Europe for many years, as most of his interests were there. There is a careaker who has a cottage in the grounds, and all the servants have been retained, so that the place is beautifully kept up. Mr. Danvers died suddenly of some trouble which no one understood and was buried on the other side—in Italy, I believe. The mother and Miss Danvers, who is about twenty, and her brother, who is a year younger, have just returned to America, with the intention of living in the spacious old house where both of the children were born.

"As you know, I went there to call last night. They were evidently glad to renew the acquaintance and tried to make me feel very much at home, but I soon saw that they were all dreadfuly nervous. Suddenly there was a choking kiud of a scream from the back of the house. Danvers and I rushed out, following the sound. He seemed to know what to expect, for I heard him mutter: "My God—again!" and he led me to a small hall back of the staircase, meeting, on our way, a maid who gibbered out her terror at us and then ran on.

"You can smile, Rand, all you please, but I tell you what I saw—actually saw in that commonplace back hall—would take that smile off of your face. At first, it just seemed to me that there was a very queer arrangement of shadows along the floor and on the wall—and then I saw that those shadows moved, and that they made the figure of a tall, thin man. I couldn't make out what the motion was like, until the shadow seemed suddenly to intensify: both Danvers and I backed out of that hall, and we were cold with fear, Rand—say what you like to me, but I tell you I don't want to see that shadow again, cutting its own throat with a long, ugly looking knife—ugh!"

"Is it always in the same place?"

"Yes."

"How is the hall lighted?"

"With a single gas jet."

"Was the gas lit when you saw the shadow?"

"Yes, but it was turned low."

"Where does the shadow appear—I mean where, in relation to the position of the gas jet?"

"Beyond it as you look in from the front entrance—down the hallway."

"Does it ever appear when the gas is not lit?"

"N-no, I think not."

"How many servants have the Danvers?"

"Five or six, I think."

"Besides the caretaker?"

"Yes."

"Seven or eight, in all. Quite a retinue for a small family. Did you say all the servants were retained during the years that the family were in Europe?"

"Yes, they were."

"What was the nationality of Danvers?"

"English or American, I suppose."

"You suppose, eh? Where did you say he died?"

"He is buried in Italy, but I don't know where he died."

"Miss Danvers is a dark, tropical sort of a looking girl, isn't she?"

"Why—yes; but how—"

"It's the sort you always admire, isn't it?"

"Yes, I must say I am rather partial to dark hair, being such a sandy-haired Scotchy myself."

"The boy is dark, too?"

"No, he has light hair and pale blue eyes, like his mother, but his skin is swarthy. It makes an odd combination."

"What did you say the mother was like?"

"I didn't say," I retorted, pleased to catch Rand at one of his tricks.

"No? Well, then, I will. She is a pale blonde, with ash-colored hair, rather long, pointed teeth, a tall, graceful figure, an aquiline nose and a face which may have once been coldly beautiful."

"You know her!" I charged, resentfully.

"No, I never saw her in my life."

Rand's smile is often frank and kind, but when I am trying to follow him through one of his baffling calculations—deduced, as in the present case, from the very things that his informer does not know—I feel that smile to be a very exasperating one. He gave no heed to my protesting "Oh, come now, Rand!" but whistled softly as he stepped about, getting into his coat, carelessly looking through some of his files and lighting another cigarette, yet I knew by that inner flash of his cool eye that he had found something of interest in my unimportant statements.

"You'll take the case?" I hazarded, watching him.

"Yes, I might as well. Tom!" he called out to the tall Sioux who is his cook, bodyguard, chauffeur and friend, and who is never far away, "Tom, just run out and buy half a dozen sulphur candles—the kind you use for fumigating, you know. And Tom—get out the car. We're going to—where did you say the place is?"

"2075 Old Boston road."

I knew that the whole Danvers family felt a distinct sense of disappointment in the "friend" whose shrewdness I had recommended, but whom they did not know as the great detective, for Rand seldom wanted his personality exploited.

The long hall where I had witnessed the fhostly apparition of the night before was, of course, the first thing to which we gave attention. Rand walked its length twice, had us tell him exactly where the shadow was always seen, and asked to be shown the rooms and passages over it. From there he went to the laundry, which extended under the whole back of the house, but declined to let any of us save Tom accompany him.

Dinner was announced soon, but it was an utter failure. Mrs. Danvers could not eat, young Danvers looked too serious for such a young fellow, and even Rand looked graver than I had ever seen him. Happening to glance out into the hall, from which the dining room opened, I saw Tom's tall figure lounging among the shadows. Evidently we were keeping close formation.

"I want mamma to leave here at once," Miss Danvers told me, under cover of some light conversation which had arisen between her mother and Rand.

"Where will you go?" I asked.

She shrugged her shoulders wearily. "Back to Europe, I suppose. Matthew and I were wild to return to America and to this house. You know we lived here when we were children, and it was the happiest time of our lives. We were always talking about America and wanting to return, but—father—didn't care for it, and would never allow us to talk about it."

She continued to talk of Europe, but I replied absently, for, in reality, I was listening to a conversation between Rand and Mrs. Danvers, and the thread of connection which ran through it teased me.

Was Mr. Danvers English? Ah, Welsh. That, no doubt, accounted for the type of beauty to which Miss Danvers belonged. Mrs. Danvers "supposed so" in so faint and disheartened a tone that I felt sorry for her, but Rand went on, praising the old house. How fortunate to have servants so faithful that they would remain with a deserted house for—how many—years? Fifteen, perhaps? Yes, it was fifteen, corroborated Mrs. Danvers, again faintly.

Of course she would advise with the family lawyer before disposing of the property, as, no doubt, she had determined on doing—Yes, it was indeed a pity that he was so far away. How did it happen that Mr. Danvers had all of his business interests represented by an Italian? She hadn't said that it was by an Italian? She hadn't? How odd! Then, of course, he must have known it in some way; one hears all sorts of information. Strange though, wasn't it? Mr. Danvers must have had some strong partiality for Italians—even the servants were Italians and Sicilians, at that. Oh, but Mrs. Danvers must know that those English names did not mean anything. All the servants were Italian—oh, yes, he knew Italians well.

I knew that Miss Danvers must notice my abstraction and she, in her turn, began to listen to the one-sided conversation. Utter perplexity clouded her eyes as she listened, and finally indignation filled them, for her mother's voice was fainter and fainter and terror shook unmistakably in it.

We both turned toward Rand in time to see the pale lady cast one look at him, become paler than before and gently sag down in her chair. I sprang to my feet, but young Danvers had already caught his mother and was holding her up, his face filled with distress.

"Don't be alarmed," Rand said to us, "she will soon revive. Give her a drink of water, Miss Danvers, and loosen her dress a little. Tom," as the big Sioux came softly through the door, "carry Mrs. Danvers to her room and stay with her, please. Miss Danvers, please precede him, make your mother comfortable, and do exactly as Tom tells you."

"You frighten me," the young girl said. "What is all this about? What did you do to frighten my mother?"

"Nothing serious, I assure you, Miss Danvers. I merely showed her that I understood something which she had thought a secret. Please go with her and trust me."

Rand moved easily to the door as they went, and continued to stand in the doorway until we could hear that they had passed into the room above and shut the door. "Well," said he, coming back, "now that the ladies are gone, let us go and visit the hall. You know, I haven't seen the shadow yet." He slowly measured young Danvers with his keen, clear eye, and then quietly drew a pistol from his pocket and gave it to the boy. "I can't stop to explain now," he said, "but there are reasons why I am glad you are so strong a fellow. Perhaps you will trust me when I tell you that my name is Rand."

"Not—Lawrence Rand?"

"That's my name."

"The Lawrence Rand!" Boyish hero worship rang in the excited voice, and Rand turned away, smiling a little. Even he was not proof against that unfeigned admiration and awe.

"Come on, then; all either of you have to do is to follow me and do what I tell you. If by any chance—I should not be with you—see to Mrs. and Miss Danvers."

Somewhere in the upper regions a door opened, very, very softly. I noticed that Rand had his hand in his right hand coat pocket, and I knew what it rested on there. I showed the boy, and he and I did the same. The hint that Rand had given of danger to himself still rang in my ears, and I found that I was looking at the well-known outline before me with a suddenly sick feeling. We never know how near our friends are to us until something threatens them.

At the door to the passage Rand paused, and, prepared as I was for it, I could no more help the start I gave than I could help breathing, for the shadow was there, monstrous, distinct, but still, arrested in the very midst of its horrible gesture. Young Danvers smothered an exclamation and gripped my arm, and so we three stood, for as much as twenty seconds, staring at the incredible thing. I am not ashamed to say that my knees knocked together and that I felt the sweat break out on my forehead and hands.

Suddenly Rand moved resolutely forward and stood directly opposite it. Then he turned, facing us, and leaned against the opposite wall.

"Duncan and Danvers," he said, in the metallic voice which is his battle cry, "you see that this hall is paneled?"

"Yes," we breathed back. Something in his tone told us that we stood in grave peril.

"You see the gas jet?"

"Yes, yes—"

"Count three panels away from the gas jet—where does that bring you?"

"Within two panels of you."

"Yes. Now, while I attend to something, you, Duncan, cover the door and windows at the other end of the passage; Danvers, turn your back to Duncan and watch the other way. Anyone who is friendly to you will have a uniform on. Shoot anyone else you see! Remember—if anything happens to me—see at once to Mrs. Danvers and—"

"Yes! Yes!" I said.

Danvers, good boy, quietly turned his back to me, and I shifted my hand so that my pistol lay just free of my pocket. Rand nodded with satisfaction, then he turned his head backward and said sharply, "All right!"

Instinctively I knew that it was a signal, but to whom I could not imagine. Then he turned toward the wall again and spoke, to my astonishment, in Italian.

"Allora—Presto—Venni a me!" There was no answer, but I could have sworn that there was a confused movement outside the window. A second there was silence, during which, faintly, ever so faintly, a step crept down the front stair. It was good to feel Danvers' strong young body stiffen as he, too, listened. Then Rand did the last thing in the world which I expected; he suddenly drew a very stout knife from his sleve and drove it into the wall, which gave, with a ripping, tearing noise.

At that everything seemed to happen at once. A slinking, crouching figure flung itself headlong from the door leading to the servants' quarters. It had no uniform, so I shot. It crumpled up and lay twitching. Rand, without even looking over his shouder, continued to cut and slash the swaying wall, which suddenly debounced upon him the limp body of a man and a stifling odor of sulphur, and through it all the shadow lay upon the wall!

Rand was stooping swiftly over the body which had fallen from the paneling, and at the fateful lower door another figure was creeping out. I recognized it as the butler, suspictoned a weapon in his concealed right hand and fired.

"This way!" shouted Rand, leaping toward the front hall, and I followed him, turning for a last shot at the three figures who clogged the hall.

"What—what?" I implored of him, as we ran, but before he could answer we had pushed out into the thick of a struggling, cursing, screaming, shooting mass that defies description. Tom, the Sioux, standing on the third step of the stair, towered over the fight, steadily firing into the mass below, and I caught a glimpse of several police helmets, and then I grappled with a vicious little dark man who came at me like a charging snake.

"Get him alive, if you can, Duncan!" yelled Rand's voice. In blind obedience, I wrestled with an upraised hand which held a knife, and a lowered one, which gripped a pistol, and the last I remember is that young Danvers reached over and knocked the knife away and that something bit me a stinging blow on the shoulder.

When I returned to consciousness Rand and Danvers were bending over me, and a policeman was skillfully bandaging my wound. I lay on a couch in the dining room, and from where I was I could see long, still burdens being carried out of the front door by uniformed men.

"He'll do nicely now, sir, till the surgeon comes," said the policeman.

"That's good," replied Rand heartily. "Well, Duncan, old boy, I'm sorry that brute winged you, but you have all the glory of having captured one of the most desperate criminals alive, besides neatly picking off two others."

Young Danvers, who had left the room for a moment, returned and told Rand that Mrs. Danvers was resting quietly, after her fright of hearing such a disturbance, and that she wished the great detective to know that she was thankful that the whole thing was exposed at last. "What she means by that I don't know, sir," concluded the boy, "but she said that perhaps you would tell me."

Rand gave the little short nod which is his sign of commendation as he lit another cigarette.

"Mr. Danvers," he said, "I will tell all that I know as briefly as possible. Your father called himself by the name which you now use, but it was really Danelli." He nodded assentingly at the exclamation which broke from us both. "Yes, he was an Italian, but his mother was an Englishwoman, and for reasons of his own he never acknowledged his paternity. He married your mother, who was a New England school teacher, under the name of Danvers, and I fancy that until lately she had no suspicion that it was not his right name.

"Your father was the head of a secret society, making its headquarters in Italy, and during the years that you were abroad he used this house as a place of deposit for the most valuable papers and property of the society, of which the servants were all sworn members. The place was a gathering ground for every one of the members who came over here."

"But—how could they—about depositing things here, you know? There isn't a place in the house where anything could be hidden." Young Danvers looked incredulous.

For answer Rand walked across to the fireplace, fumbled about a little, and suddenly swung the whole mantelpiece out toward us. Back of it were rows and rows of drawers, neatly labeled.

We were too astonished to say a word, and Rand walked about the room, touching this and that piece of woodwork or carving, and at each touch revealing the same thing—lines upon lines of drawers quietly reposing there, back of the apparently blank wall.

"You see," he said to us, coming back from this demonstration, "the whole house is like that. We found a complete plan of the place, with all of the hiding places marked, on the body of the man who poses as your butler. Mr. Danvers never intended that you or your mother should return here, I guess, but in such a society a man is never sure of carrying out his plans. Dying as suddenly as he did, he did not know that he had been deposed and that people, inimical to his interests, were put in his place. The whole effort, of course, was to frighten you into leaving the place and selling it. No doubt, you had offers for it before you came over?"

"We did?" said Danvers; "a man in Italy said his brother had become wealthy as a contractor over here and wanted it for his home."

"Of course you told him that you also wanted it for the very same thing?"

"Yes, we did."

"And the word was passed on, so that the little entertainment which really shook all our nerves was arranged for."

"Good heavens!" exclaimed Danvers, "I had forgotten all about that shadow. What was—?"

Rand reached out to the table for a little black wooden box which was lying there. On one side of it was a small opening, which he turned toward the opposite wall, and instantly the dread shadow sprang into life there.

"There is your ghost," said Rand. He opened the top of the box and took out a little mannikin. A string hung from its back which, when pulled, made one hand fly up and saw at the throat with the wooden knife it clutched.

"Inside here," continued Rand, "is a tiny, high process dynamo. This little figure was hung on delicately adjusted wires in front of the dynamo; this little lever turned on the power, the camera shutter in front focused the thing—and there you are. All the operator had to do was to pull the string occasionally and produce a first-class spook. The hoax was operated by a man who lay concealed back of the penel of the hall. He got up there through a place in the laundry which had evidently been constructed recently for that very purpose. The paneling had been very skilfully cut away just beyond the gas jet, and heavy gauze substituted, strengthened with boards at the back and painted an exact copy of the real wood. Lying there, the man could dimly see into the hall, but owing to the gauze being right back of the gas jet it was impossible for those who passed by to see anything suspicious, unless they were particularly looking for it.

"The man simply lay there and chose his own time for throwing that shadow on the wall. The gauze at one small point was very, very thin, the box was shoved up flat against it, and the shadow appeared on the opposite wall, being light or heavy according to the time of day, and according to whether the gas was on full or not. The man who arranged that litle apparatus must have been a genius, in his own way. The idea, of course, was to frighten everyone from the house, and then to buy in the place for the society. Even with two weeks' notice of your determination to return here, all the records and valuables could not be gotten out. And besides, it was very difficult to find as safe a place as this."

Young Danvers drew a long breath. He had stood motionless during Rand's revelation of his father's criminality, but now he pulled himself together sharply.

"I thank you, sir," he said, "for telling me the truth. If you will excuse me now I will return to my mother and sister." He turned away, but almost immediately came back to ask, with an anxious face: "Do you think it safe for us to continue living here, Mr. Rand?"

"No," replied Rand, "for as long as a member of the society is left alive they will watch this place and try to get revenge for what they will probably regard as an act of treachery on the part of your mother. The house is heavily guarded tonight, but I should advise you to go quietly away in the early morning."

When he had gone I whispered to Rand:

"Camorra?"

"Yes."

"Rand?"

"What?"

"You know what—how did you know?"

"I didn't, but there was just one thing I was sure of when you finished your tale of the shadow and that was that it must be thrown from the other wall, and as there was absolutely nothing to be seen on the opposite wall, it must be that some one was working the thing from behind the wall. Just as a matter of interest I looked up the record of some famous Italian criminals, for I was sure that some Italian blood lay there. If you will remember our conversation, you will see why."

I shook my head.

"Well, Miss Danvers' type is the Italian type. I knew that you especially admired Italian girls. How often have I teased you when you have looked after some black-eyed little sweatshop worker? Then, the boy having light eyes and hair and a swarthy skin; you'll hardly find any race but Italians and negroes in which the coloring of the skin persists after hair and eyes have had a northern stamp. Eugenics, you see.

"Now, who is most superstitious among the nations of Europe? The Italians. Who would, most probably, have the imagination to evolve such a piece of devilry as that shadow? Italians. Who manages to kill off obnoxious people suddenly, so that they appear to die natural deaths? Hush!—Yes, I'm afraid so. Well, aren't Sicilians famous for that? And where is the stamping ground of the most iniquitous and formidable secret society? In Sicily. And isn't Italy getting too hot for them? And where would be the best place to transfer their most important documents and possessions? To a new country, whose government is such a fool that it does not rigidly inspect all comers? Eh? Well, there you have the train of reasoning."

"And the candles, Rand? What were they for?"

"Why, don't you see? I had made up my mind that somebody behind the wall was casting that shadow, and I smoked him out. Tom and I lit those candles, after we had discovered the little place in the laundry wall where he got into the wall, and we opened that place, put the candles in and wedged a piece of the furnace poker—a piece of iron as long as your body and two inches thick—across the little space between the walls where the person who had made it came down and out. You get the idea? The man up above could not get down and put out the candles and in a short time he would be suffocated, unless he had the nerve to call out for help. If he had, the whole house would have heard him and his life might have been saved. I was expecting a fight any moment. We gradually got five of our men into the house, secreted in stray corners around the halls, and Tom kept his eyes open. The other fifteen guarded the outside and waited for the sound of a struggle before they rushed in."

"It sounds simple," I said, "but then it always does—afterward."

"There's the ambulance," said Rand, as a clanging bell broke on our ears. "Now we'll have you taken care of properly."

THERE THE SHADOW WAS, MONSTROUS, DISTINCT.

LIBERAL BUYING ADVANCED GRAIN

Market Active in Anticipation of Two-Day Holiday—Corn Made Gain of 1-4 to 3-4 Cent—Wheat and Oats Up.

Chicago, August 30.—All grains advanced today, liberal buying in anticipation of the two-day holiday—Sunday and Monday (Labor day)—creating a strong and active market. Corn, the most active of the pits, made a net gain of ½ to ⅞@⅞. Wheat rose ⅛@¼ to ½@⅝, and oats finished with an upturn of ⅛@½ to ⅝. Provisions closed irregular, 12½@15 lower to 15 advance.

In addition to buying or corn by shorts, the market was strengthened by higher cables, by estimates that the year's crop would show a shortage of 488,000,000, as compared with last year's output, and by the fact that offerings were comparatively limited.

September quickly advanced to 73 and December to 69¼. Both options showed firmness and, except for a few small reactions following profit-taking sales, values held up finely all day, closing at or near the top. Firmness of cash corn also held futures. Some experts predicted that corn prices next winter and spring will break all records.

Wheat was helped by firmness of corn, after a rather easy opening on weaker cables and forecast for good weather. A feature of wheat trading was changing of large holdings of September to December. This helped support prices for the near option, as there was renewed talk of considerable export business in prospect. Primary arrivals today were 1,101,000 bushels, against 1,921,000 last year. Seaboard clearances of wheat and flour equalled 1,097,00 bushels.

Outs were helped by firmness of other grain, but trade was not large.

Provisions were dull and lower except in pork, which scored a 15c advance in the September delivery, owing to covering by shorts.

The rice exchange will be closed Monday.

New York, August 30.—The rice market is passing through the usual dull season, partly due to the holiday period incident to this time of the year, and also because the new crop receipts are coming forward very slowly and buyers are disposed to play a waiting game, knowing by the experience of previous years that, with any accumulation of rough, prices must fall away. In fact, values have declined already a considerable item, which of necessity must affect the general situation, and cause the trade to operate with conservatism and caution. There have been some slightly purests received, and there are several "new" lots arriving during this week. Naturally, however, buyers are acting with caution, anticipating a lower plane to be in effect very shortly.

Advices from the south along the Atlantic coast, report crop prospects good. At New Orleans the market is somewhat easier, as receipts are accumulating.

In the Interior—Southwest Louisiana, Texas and Arkansas, all the advices are that the harvesting is being pushed under most favorable auspices, with exception of one quality as the general crop matures. There are some very fine lots of Japan offering on a most reasonable basis, which on account of their high style and finish are attracting attention. These lots are said to be quite the equal of any millings the entire season.

Cables and correspondence from abroad note more inquiry for rough rice, and prices higher. "Spot cleaned" quiet; "forward burma" dearer.

Sea Island Cotton.

Charleston, S. C., August 30.—The close of the sea island cotton season here shows a total of 6,908 bags exported, compared with 6,038 bags last year, and 11,985 bags for 1911. The total receipts were 8,375 bags, 3,235 more than in 1912, and 4,910 bags less than in 1911. The stock on hand yesterday was 1,922 bags. The short staple season shows 310,315 bales sent out of Charleston and 310,293 bales received. Stock on hand 1,057. The season is a bit off.

NEWS OF THE BUSINESS ALL OVER THE COUNTRY

Stock Market the Past Week. Easier Money Rates—Better Feeling in Banking Circles—Government Loan to Banks Prevents Money Becoming Tight.

New York, August 30.—The stock market in the week just closed was a halting, hesitating one and times reactionary affair, principally as a result of the Mexican difficulties. But it turned strong at the end of the week. The volume of business accomplished was small. Certain issues, like the New Haven, sold off sharply because of the poor statements of earnings, as in the case of other issues, because of reductions or passing of dividends. Certain issues were strong because of favorable annual reports or other developments. The list as a whole, however, barely moved. The market was closed today as an extra holiday in connection with the Labor day holiday on Monday. Southern Pacific stock was heavy as a result of the sharp decline in "rights" to subscribe to the $88,000,000 certificates of interest.

The continuation of drouth in the corn states and reports of damage to cotton in Texas and Oklahoma were unfavorable features, but they were offset by the continued firmness in copper metal and the recovery of steel orders and outlook. At times during the week, brief bear raids caused temporary weakness, but on each break support rallied. In fact, it was only on the dips that buying was good in either quality or quantity. Professional trading supplies about all of the transactions still, with the public not taking part to any appreciable extent, though it is expected that here interest will be taken in stocks before long. Investors have hesitated about coming into the market on account of the possibilities in Mexico. Many of the largest interests are believed to be advising caution, thinking that while there are many chances for an upward turn of greater proportions than has already taken place, there are also too many uncertainties to allow of overenthusiasm at this time. Until the balance of the corn crop is harvested, and while there is such a strong chance of ultimate intervention in Mexico, the large financiers are said to be telling their friends not to enter the market too heavily.

Money Rates Easier.

Money rates are tending lower, with funds being offered by bankers who a few weeks ago were unwilling to loan save at prohibitive interest charges. At present it is possible to borrow on six months' prime commercial paper at about 5 per cent, whereas a month ago, even on the best names, 6 per cent was the rule. On three months paper about 4 to 4½ per cent is the prevailing rate Call money has been flat at prices from 2 to 2½ per cent for several months, due to the lack of active demand.

Within twenty-four hours of the announcement of the sale of $7,000,000 Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis railway (Panhandle) 4½ per cent consolidated mortgage bonds, they were all resold to investors. This was the most favorable reception that an offering of more than small parcels of new securities has received in many months. It is hoped that the New Haven's $67,000,000 debentures will be as well taken, but in view of the poor annual report of that road, fears are expressed that a part may be left for the underwriters. The New Pacific bonds are part of an authorized issue of $75,000,000 guaranteed by the Pennsylvania railroad.

The directors of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis, the Big Four railway, passed the dividend due on the preferred stock this quarter. The quarterly rate had been 1¼ per cent. Smaller earnings than formerly have been reported recently, causing this action. The annual threat had been foreseen in Wall street by observers of the downward course of the stock, although definite predictions that such a step had been planned had not been heard. This is the stock which Governor Sulzer is said to have speculated in, and its rapid declines since his impeachment have been paid, in certain quarters, to the revelations at Albany.

Following the report of the New Haven system for the fiscal year to June 30 last, the stock went to the lowest point on record, 91½, though recovering slightly later. As the road only earned 5 per cent on its $180,000,000 stock, paying 7½ per cent dividends, it is rumored that the rate will be cut from the present 6 per cent and only 5 per cent will paid in this fiscal year. It is true that the Ontario and Western dividends on stock owned by the New Haven will be paid this fiscal year, and were not last, but earnings will have to show a big improvement to warrant the payment of 6 per cent dividends this fiscal year, although the one due in September will be for 1½ per cent. The annual report of the road showed $68,815,502 gross, an increase of over $4,680,000 above the year before, but with smaller "other income," larger operating expenses and heavier charges, there was only $8,022,237 surplus for dividends, or $4 460,000 less than the year before. There was a deficit of $4,830,000 after dividends, or $6,827,000 deficit after dividends in the last three years. In the 1910 year there was a surplus after dividends of $1,057,703. As a result of the new debentures, after deducting the charges for rents and other securities which the new issue will retire, there will be an increase of well over $1,000,000 in the total charges for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1914, so that if income and other expenses are the same, there will be but little over 4 per cent available for the stock in the present fiscal year. While there are few doubts but what income will increase, there are many that the increase will be sufficient to provide for 6 per cent dividends.

Stockholders of the People's Gas Light and Coke company of Chicago will be called to meet in the near future to ratify an increase in the capital stock from $35,000,000 to $60,000,000.

As a result of the unsettled conditions in Mexico, the Mexico Northwest Railroad company directors have passed the semi-annual interest of 2½ per cent due at this time on the $24,320,000 5 per cent mortgage bonds.

Southern Pacific Stock.

While the transfer of rights and the taking of certificates of interest in the $88,000,000 Southern Pacific stock now being offered have been moderately heavy, it will not be known until the subscription books close next week whether there will be much left for the underwriters to take up, or not. The first supposition had been that there would be scarcely any left by the time subscriptions were through, but they all may take to the offering as exactly as had been predicted, and it is possible that there may be a quarter of the total of new for the underwriters.

In the fiscal year to June 30 last, the American Car and Foundry company gross was $54,868,-175, a record for the company, and an increase of $24,420,000 over the gross of the previous fiscal period. There was a balance of $4,435,000 available for common dividends, an increase of $4,215,000 over the year before, and also a record. The earnings were equal to 17½ per cent on that issue.

Assessments on the shares of the Wabash railroad, when the reorganization plan is put through, are understood to call for $20 or $25 a share It will be necessary to raise about $20,000,000 to remove the receivership, pay off accumulated debts and provide working capital. There is also a proposition before the reorganization committee to levy an assessment of $40 a share on the stock.

The report of the Canadian Pacific railway for the fiscal year to June 30 showed that 10.56 per cent had been earned on the common stock after deducting all previous expenses and payments. This was an increase of 1.6 per cent over the previous year. The gross earnings of the road were $123,310,842, an increase of $16,600,000. The surplus after all deductions and dividends was $4,711,134. The surplus account of the road totaled $77,395,100 at the end of the fiscal year.

The American Agricultural Chemical company earned about 7½ per cent on its common stock, before declaring dividends on the new $50,000,000 preferred stock, in the fiscal year to June 30 as compared with 7.3 per cent earned the year before, when, however, there was no deduction on the preferred.

The Government Loan Plan.

The actual apportionment of most of the $50,000,000 to be lent by the treasury to banks in the grain and cotton states has already been reflected in a better feeling in banking circles. It is regarded as almost a certainty that there will not be tighter money than normal at any time in the crop-moving period, as a result. A few weeks ago before Secretary McAdoo announced his plan for the relief of congested credit during the time when the crops are being moved, it was thought that beyond doubt, with money so tight then, that rates would soar to almost unheard-of levels in the fall.

After having recovered $9,000 from the low of the year, stock exchange seats took another upward spurt in the past week, with a sale of one at $50,000, or $13,000 above the low of the last few months. It is predicted that stock exchange seats will sell at above $60,000 within a short time. That figure is considered a normal one for a fair market. The high mark on record for a seat is $96,000.

The report of the department of agriculture on Tuesday as to the condition of cotton on August 25 is expected to show that there was a deterioration of about 5 per cent, and possibly as much as 9 per cent in the month to that date. The rapid upward movement of cotton prices, culminating in all of the new crop months going well above 12 cents a pound, as compared with under 11 cents a pound a month ago, has given indication that traders are a little alarmed by the reports of damage in Texas and Oklahoma. Another report which will have considerable influence on trading in cotton will be the first ginning report, to show the amount ginned from the new crop up to August 31, which will be published Monday, September 8 at 10 o'clock. The report on next Tuesday regarding condition will be published at noon. Private reports of conditions which have been made show the most serious deterioration in the condition of cotton for several years. Some place condition on August 25 as low as 69.3, while several look for well below 75, as compared with a condition of 81 on July 28. However, nothing unfavorable has developed in the eastern part of the belt.

While excitement in corn has quieted down, there is still a serious state of affairs in parts of the corn belt, with drouth only partly relieved in certain sections. Prices are not materially lower than when at the high record, and are still abnormally high. There are some reports that the damage to corn was exaggerated in earlier reports, but the most optimistic are not looking for a crop of over 2,350,000,000 bushels, and possibly much less. If is believed that farmers are holding back thir winter wheat for better prices. The International Institute of Agriculture at Rome estimates the world's wheat production, omitting that of South America, at 2,584,000,000 bushels, or 3.9 per cent more than last year. The Argentine crop should equal that of 1913, and so the outlook for the total world's supply is good.

There has been a very gratifying increase in the volume of orders placed for steel products during the last few weeks, and the outlook has improved greatly. In fact, it is predicted that there will be increases in unfilled tonnages for each month after the one just closing for several months ahead. There are many large mill orders to be placed, while a number of railroads are expected to place liberal orders for cars within a few weeks. The roads of the country are in need of many additional freight cars, while other lines of industry using steel are planning to place much of their advance 1914 business with the manufacturers during the next few weeks. The big reduction made in the price of wire products has enlivened the steel wire market and resulted in the placing of many very large orders.

Buying of copper metal has been light, with much of the most urgent demand satisfied. However, there are requirements of consumers during the next few months still to be filled, and in view of the heavy sale for far ahead and the small surplus supply, there are few who doubt but what copper prices will remain close to the present 16-cent level. Consumers anxious to get spot copper have to bid far over the market for future deliveries to get it.

GOSSIP OF FOREIGN COURTS
BY LADY MARY MANWARING

London, August 23.—When the marriage of Prince Arthur of Connaught to the Duchess of Fife is celebrated on October 15 it will be notable in many ways. It will take place in the Chapel Royal, St. James palace, and while it will not be in magnificence with the wedding of the kaiser's daughter, it will leave nothing to be desired as a spectacle, and there will be a great gathering of notables.

It has been pretty definitely settled that the Prince of Wales will be best man and Princess Mary one of the bridesmaids.

The Chapel Royal will only seat 200 persons, and is so dark that it has to be lighted artificially even for morning and afternoon services. The king, however, chose it for the wedding in preference to St. George's chapel, Windsor, because it will enable a vastly larger number of people to witness the arrival and departure of the bride and bridegroom and of the guests than would be possible at Windsor. Furthermore, kings and queens have been married and princes and princesses christened in the Chapel Royal for centuries. It was the scene of Queen Victoria's marriage to the prince consort (when $110,000 was spent on decorating the chapel) and of the marriage of Queen Victoria's eldest daughter to the crown prince of Prussia, afterwards the Emperor Frederick. On rare occasions of late years the king has allowed other than royal ceremonies there. Miss Reid, daughter of the late Whitelaw Reid, the American ambassador, was married to the Hon. John Ward, brother of the Earl of Dudley, there, and Lord and Lady Dudley's twin sons were christened there, King Edward and the present king standing sponsor. There is nothing striking about the Chapel Royal architecturally, but it has a very fine painted Holbein ceiling. It is probable that the wedding breakfast will take place in the state banquet room at St. James palace.

Will Become Royal Duke.

That Prince Arthur will be created a royal duke before his marriage has already been settled, and it is probable that he will receive the time-honored title of Duke of Kent. His oldest son will in due time be in a unique position, since he will be ultimate heir to no fewer than three dukedoms, those of Kent, Connaught and Fife respectively. This would not be a record, however, since the Duke of Richmond possesses four ducal titles. Richmond in the peerage of England, Gordon in the peerage of the United Kingdom, Lennox in Scotland and Duc d'Aubigny in France. When the dukedom is conferred upon H. R. H., which, of course, will entitle him to his seat in the house of lords, it is understood that the Duchess of Fife will abandon her present title in favor of that of her husband.

Very few people are aware that the Duchess of Fife wrote a play. This was a few years ago, and under a pseudonym she sent it to one of the best known actor-managers in London. He kept it for the customary lengthy period and then returned it with a note that hinted that it was rather rubbish, and that the author of it had better turn "his" attention to something more useful. Her royal highness, by the way, has rather strong poetic leanings and has written a few charming little verses that are, however, strictly reserved for "private" circulation only.

Women Smoking Cigars.

Not content with the mild cigarette, many society women in the privacy of their own homes have taken to smoking cigars and pipes. A leading West End tobacconist is doing a big trade in pipes for ladies. They are very light and cost from five pounds upwards, according to mounting.

The king's desire that he should be toasted in Lancashire as "the Duke of Lancaster" is likely to lead to confusion and already the officials of the private secretary's office at Buckingham palace have been besieged with inquiries. There seems to be a general impression that it should take the form of "the Duke and Duchess of Lancaster, Queen Alexandra and the rest of the royal family." This is wrong. The toast should simply be that of "the Duke of Lancaster" and subsequently another toast should be given "the queen," Queen Alexandra, the Prince of Wales and the remainder of the royal family." There is a constitutional question involved here, and it is probable that the king's order will be sooner or later revoked.

A point that is causing uncertainty at court is the question of the representation of the king at the forthcoming marriage of ex-King Manuel. If the latter were still a ruler, King George would be represented as a matter of course and a distinguished member of the household would be detailed for this duty. As it is, though, both the ex-king and Queen Amelia are on terms of the most intimate friendship with the king and queen and Queen Alexandra, it is felt that the republican government in Portugal might find grounds for complaint if Great Britain were officially represented at the wedding. The situation is a peculiar one, and one for which no precedent can be found.

SOME FACTS ABOUT THE NEW FALL STYLES

Materials and Colors for Coming Season Settled at Fashion Exhibits

New York, August 30.—Individual a woman may be, but out of date—never. Therefore, the wise one welcomes the main points of a prevailing style and suits them to her individual taste. The conclusions reached by the American Fall and Winter Fashion show, recently held at the Grand Central palace in New York, may be somewhat modified by the later Paris exhibition; but as Paris couturiers cater only to the exclusive elect, their influence on general styles will not have so great a local effect.

Many important considerations are established beyond question. The kind of materials that will be popular is one of these. In wool, and silk-and-wool mixtures, velour, velour de laine, plush and imitation fur effects, boucle, faille de laine and duvetyn will be much in demand. These materials will be used both for general service and for dress occasions.

FIGURE ONE.

Black velvet for smart functions will be vastly popular in both suits and gowns, and for afternoon and evening wear. It will be effectively trimmed with tulle and lace fashioned into lovely panniers and fichus and bordered with a narrow edge of fur, either ermine, white fox or skunk. The coats of the new coat-suits will show marked variation in length. Those for practical wear will be much shorter than the more elaborate models. The latter will extend to the knees behind, the line being broken at the back waist and sharply cutaway in front. Vests will be a feature of both smart coats and frocks. Simulated vests of lace will be stylishly introduced even in afternoon and evening gowns.

For afternoon frocks large floral effects will prevail. Crepe de Chine, silk and satin, all equally soft and lustrous, will be much favored.

The frock of the first illustration was developed in printed silk of tan ground and tan and brown rose motifs. Collar, cuffs and applied panel are of tan silk. The chemisette is of dotted ecru-colored net, and the girdle of brown velvet. The waist has a back yoke which extends well over the shoulders in front, considerable blouse over the girdle both back and front and attractive short sleeves and round neck. The drapery of the skirt falls gracefully over the hips and terminates in the applied front panel. This fashion of combining two materials in one costume will remain smart during fall and winter. It will be accompanied by another whose allurement first created a furore in Paris, for, as is well known, every little while Paris goes mad. For Paris to go mad is for New York to follow suit.

The fever of the slashed and wrapped skirts is not completely out of the blood before a new one is raging. This is the fashion of the veiled effect. But don't misunderstand. It means a drapery of tulle, lace, chiffon, net or mousseline over a foundation of more or less firm texture. It also means a combination of diaphanous fabrics, as lace and chiffon, with a satin, silk, crepe de Chine, or cashmere background. These draperies are made in tunic and pannier fashion. They are also arranged in double and triple tiers, each tier finished with a narrow ruching and posed over a black or white foundation, as these two tones predominate. They are not used alone, however. Relief is afforded by a touch of red, blue or orange at girdle or throat. Cream, biscuit or straw-colored veiling, touched with cherry-red, old-blue, cerise or orange at corsage or hem of drapery is considered very smart. Black tulle with self-edged ruffles, or Chantilly lace, veils with charming effect a white or black satin foundation. White chiffon is draped over shadow lace, which in turn is suspended over charmeuse or soft silk.

White lingeries frocks, draped with net, are also much worn. The bodice has the wired frill cleverly introduced. The neck is low, the frill terminating at the base of the V-opening. The frock was developed in gray marquisette. The front inserts are of lace and the girdle of red-and-white polka-dotted silk. Drapery, in both waist and skirt, is a smart detail. A feature which has grown much in favor of late, supplanting the close-fitting neck beads, is the long chain. Beads, however, remain fashionable, but the strings are long and extend well over the bust or to the waist.

FIGURE TWO.

The possibilities of veiling the frock will be at once appreciated by the capable woman. She will realize that a charming new frock may readily be evolved from an old one by denuding the gown of all trimmings and furbelows, removing the sleeves and inserting sheer sleeves of lace. A front surplice, rather than back-closing, should be used and the neck cut in V-fashion. The entire garment is then shrouded in tulle, chiffon, muslin, net or any preferred diaphanous fabric. Neck and sleeves are finished in the manner described. A wide girdle of satin or silk, in harmony or contrast to the foundation, is added, and a frock sufficiently smart for any stylish afternoon or evening affair is the result. If the costume be for afternoon, a wide sash, coming well over the hips, of gaily-colored tartan or Roman stripe, and at variance with every other color note of the costume, may be worn. If for evening, the more delicate shades, blue, pink, cerise and yellow, are preferred. These sashes are also made of bright tulle and maline, and are tied back, the ends hanging to the hem of the skirt.

is veiled, and a surplice closing is almost invariably used.

Sleeves of sheer fabrics are very fashionable. They, too, are usually of overlaid materials. The foundation may be of coarse or fine lace, veiled with chiffon or tulle like that used for the drapery of the gown. They are finished with deep pleatings, double but very scant, extending to the wrist. A close-fitting white lace sleeve from the elbow shows through the pleating. The wired in the back, is brought around the neck and down the surplice fronts neck is low. A fluted frill, high and to bust or waist, where the ends are finished by a large rose, matching the girdle in color.

PLEA OF MEXIC REBEL

Given unrestricted opportunities to buy munitions of war in the United States, the constitutionalists will sweep Provisional President Huerta from power, assume responsibility for injury done foreigners, hold a free and fair election and re-establish Mexico firm in cordial relations with the United States, according to a statement from General Jesus Carranza, which Dr. Henry Allen Tupper and Captain J. T. Armstrong of the international peace forum are carrying to President Wilson. Dr. Tupper and Captain Armstrong were commissioned by the peace forum to confer with constitutionalist leaders in an effort to devise possible peace measures. Jesus Carranza is a brother of Governor Venustiano Carranza, of Coahuila, leader of the constitutionalists.

WEST POINT VISITED BY VISCOUNT HALDANE

West Point, N. Y., August 30.—Viscount Haldane, lord high chancellor of Great Britain, who is en route to Montreal, visited the military academy today. Lord Haldane came up the Hudson river from New York on J. Pierpont Morgan's yacht Corsair, which dropped anchor off West Point at 1 o'clock and immediately was boarded by Colonel Clarence P. Townsley, superintendent of the academy, accompanied by his staff and members of the academic board.

In the boarding party also were the Hon. Charles J. Doherty, minister of justice of the Dominion of Canada, and Sir Lower Gouin, premier of the province of Quebec, who came from Canada to meet the lord high chancellor at West Point.

After the usual courtesies had been exchanged on the yacht, the whole party came ashore and was escorted to the "plains" by a troop of negro troops. A salute of 19 guns was fired and the battalion of cadets was up in review formation on the grass plain. Lord Haldane was enthusiastic in his praise of the cadets' appearance and congratulated their commander Colonel Fred C. Sladen, on their excellent showing.

After a reception the academy buildings were inspected.

In the party with Lord Haldane were his sister, Miss Elizabeth Saunders Haldane; Sir Kenneth Muir Mackenzie, clerk of the crown; Hon. Charles J. Doherty and Mrs. Doherty, Sir Lomer Gouin and Lady Gouin, Miss Allen, J. F. Martin, president of the bar of the province of Quebec, and Mrs. Martin; J. T. Nackett, secretary to the minister of justice, Mrs. Hackett Jacob H. Dickinson and Mrs. Dickinson; Alton B. Parker, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Severance, J. Pierpont Morgan and Nicholas Murray Butler and Mrs. Butler.

DUBLIN STRIKE MARKED BY FIERCE RIOTING

Dublin, August 30.—Fierce rioting has resulted from the tramway strike which began last Tuesday, and the government has prohibited as seditious a mass meeting of strikers, which was organized for Sunday. A great crowd assembled about the transport workers' headquarters tonight, and the police charged with clubs in an effort to disperse the demonstration. Stones were broken bottles filled the air and many persons were hurt. James Connolly, a Belfast laborman leader, and Councillor Partridge have been sentenced to three months imprisonment because of speeches inciting to riot. Connolly said he recognized no English law in Ireland and refused to accept bail. Partridge was released on bail.

Between sixty and seventy injured were taken to the hospitals tonight. Five policemen were hurt by stones.

ALLEGED ATROCITIES WON'T BE INVESTIGATED

Salonika, August 30.—Members of the commission appointed by the Carnegie international peace endowment to investigate the alleged Balkan atrocities have decided to abandon their work. Servia and Greece objected to certain members of the commission and declined to recognize. Their objections were chiefly against Professor Paul R. Milukoff, leader of the constitutional democrats in the Russian duma, and the English writer, Dr. H. N. Brailsford, whom they consider pro-Bulgarian.

Congress of Students.

Ithaca, N. Y., August 30.—At the second day's business session of the International Students' Congress today a telegram was received from officials of the Panama-Pacific exposition inviting the congress to the coast in 1915. The invitation probably will be accepted. The delegates tomorrow will visit the George Junior Republic at Freeville.

IN MEMORIAM.

Francisco Barr Marriott.

Francisco Barr Marriott, age 26, son of Captain and Mrs. C. M. Marriott, of Homewood, Ala., departed this life on August 27, in Atlanta, Ga., at the home of his sister, Mrs. J. Cheston King. His death, so sudden and unexpected to his friends, was not a surprise to him. He heard the muffled tread of the grim king, and spoke freely of his approach.

While we were yet hoping for his recovery, he crossed that dark line we all must pass, which separates this life from the vast and vague unknown. All who came in contact with him were attracted by his personal magnetism; his character was free, open and generous, his nature noble and loving. With his fair young bride to rejoice with him over the success of his late invention, an invention that will eliminate the largest per cent of railroad derailments. He had just recently received his patent. But in the economy of God, the call came and his brilliant young career severed its relations with us in this life. Whilst the early morning star was lit by the messenger of death, his soul breathed forth, clear in its ring, "Gloria In Excelsis." I believe that somewhere beyond that star his gentle spirit now looks down upon his devoted father and mother, brothers and sister and loyal bride, and bids them, "that his early departure was the will of God; let not man gainsay" and as his minister so beautifully expressed it to him: "Frank, some day we will talk it all over."

It was a sad fate that left him in the midst of his bright career. His life closing while the sun was shining on fame and fortune just before him. In the old family burial grounds at Homewood they laid him to rest beneath a wilderness of flowers. But his memory will live in our hearts as bright and fresh as the mantle of ever living green with which the oak robes itself, beneath whose spreading boughs he calmly sleeps, and which in life he ardently loved and from which he drew so much inspiration in his boyhood years.

PRESIDENT WILSON AT HIS SUMMER HOME

Cornish, N. H., August 30.—Though in close touch with departments in Washington and with Mexico City, President Wilson announced no change in the Mexican situation tonight. He spent the afternoon and evening at home. On his arrival he received two long cipher messages, relating to Mexico, but their nature was not revealed. The president, however, dispatched none in reply.

In the quiet seclusion of the summer capitol, he enjoyed the first reunion of his family in two months. The president's eldest daughter, Miss Margaret Wilson, has been visiting in the west since June and Mr. Wilson himself had not seen her since early in June.

He was pleased to observe that his second daughter, Miss Jessie, who is to be married in November, had entirely recovered from the injuries she received when she fell from her horse recently.

Miss Eleanor Wilson, the youngest daughter, and Mrs. Wilson accompanied the president on the trip from Washington.

The president plans to stay here until Tuesday, but may prolong his visit if developments in the Mexican situation permit, as his physician thinks a week of mountain air and exercise would greatly benefit him after the strain of the last few weeks in Washington.

J. D. PRICE ACCOUNTS FOR HIS STEWARDSHIP

Watkinsville, Ga., August 30.—(Special.)—Hon. J. D. Price, commissioner of agriculture, returned to the people of his own county, Oconee, today and gave them an account of his stewardship. Over 500 listened to his account of what the department is accomplishing in the way of enforcing the pure food law and regulating the sale of drugs.

Some get a prize in marriage lottery, some a surprise.

CONFERENCE CLOSES ON SCHOOL HYGIENE

Buffalo, N. Y., August 30.—The fourth international congress of school hygiene, which closed today, was one of the most successful in the history of the movement. The membership exceeded 2,000, bettering the record of the third congress, held in Paris, and the registered attendance also was better than the Paris figures.

The congress of 1915 will be held in Brussels.

A symposium of women's clubs was the best attended meeting today. Miss Mary Wood, of New York, struck a popular chord when she declared that from the beginning of time the burden of conserving the morals of the people had laid upon the women, and that the greatest problem confronting the world was a better fatherhood and a better brotherhood.

"We want the husbands to recognize some moral standards they impose on their wives," said Miss Wood. "We have come to the conclusion that not only should Caesar's wife be above suspicion, but that Caesar himself should be above suspicion."

Fifteen Persons Injured.

Kansas City, Mo., August 30.—Fifteen persons were injured, none seriously, when a St. Louis and San Francisco passenger train collided with an oil train of the Kansas City Southern at Elmdale near this city tonight. The St. Louis and San Francisco railroad uses the Kansas City Southern's tracks at the point where the accident occurred.

RHEUMATISM

A Home Cure Given By One Who Had It

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free. Don't delay. Write today.

GARMENT FACTORIES ARE OILED AND FIRED

St. Louis, Mo., August 30.—Several garment factories were imperiled by fire that followed an explosion of an immense amount of gasoline on the fifth floor of a building in the downtown district tonight. The discovery that the floors of the building had been saturated with oil indicated that the fire was of incendiary origin. A strike of the garment factories of the city now is in progress.

The explosion broke scores of windows in neighboring buildings and caused injuries to two persons.

The Political Rights of Women

MRS. MARY L. McLENDON, Editor

President Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association

(By Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, President Woman's Suffrage Association.)

From a letter received a few days ago from Mrs. Anna Howard Shaw, president of the National American Woman's Suffrage association, I cull the following, believing that Georgia suffragists will be interested sufficiently to read it.

President Shaw said in part:

In reviewing the nine months since our last convention, we have every reason for congratulation and encouragement. Two remarkable and significant victories have been gained in our country, and full enfranchisement for women in Norway.

The full enfranchisement of the women of the vast territory of Alaska and the slightly limited vote of the million and a half women in Illinois has added greatly to the voting strength of the enfranchised womanhood of America. Both of these victories were secured without the necessity of a state-wide campaign to win the vote of the men citizens at the polls.

Were the constitutions of the other states so formed that this method could be followed in each, there would be little difficulty in securing suffrage in every one. But there are very few states whose constitutions make it possible. This is the principal reason why it is so much more difficult to secure votes for women in America than in many of the monarchies of Europe.

In the Hands of Women.

The significance of the ballot in the hands of the Illinois women cannot be overestimated, and must be the means of influencing in a large degree, the campaigns in other states where the amendments have already been submitted. The one significant feature is the fact that the vote has been won in a middle eastern state which includes one of the largest cities of the union; so that no longer can the claim be made that western sparsely settled communities are the only ones in which women succeed in obtaining the ballot, or the objection brought forward that it is impossible for the women of a large city to use the ballot to advantage. All eyes will be turned upon Chicago for some time, and I am very sure that the wisdom of the women who have been carrying on the suffrage campaign for years in that state will be equal to the situation. The submission of the constitutional amendments in Nevada, Montana, North Dakota and South Dakota and the passage of the amendment through one legislature of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York and Iowa, have made this one of the most prosperous legislative years in our history.

Work With Congress.

There has never been a year within the last twenty, at least, when so much action, energetic and successful work has been carried forward with congress as during the past six months. Those two remarkable young women, Miss Paul and Mrs. Barnes, aided by a number of Washington suffragists and the wives of congressmen and senators have been able to secure almost unbelievable results and, as one of the enthusiastic Washington women expresses it, "they have accomplished the impossible" in securing hearings at a special session of congress, called for but two purposes—the adjustment of the tariff, and the money problem—in making suffrage a leading part of the discussions of a special session of congress, in securing an almost unanimous favorable vote of the senate suffrage committee which has been enlarged from five to seven members.

Their Perseverance.

They have secured a favorable recommendation from the committee to the senate, and a discussion in that body in which twenty-two members spoke favorably, and but four against the passage of the measure; in keeping the subject of suffrage constantly before congress and the country; introducing large and successful meetings and banquets in mid-summer in Washington; in securing the co-operation of large numbers of influential people, and in raising the means to finance all the work, has been a task never before undertaken by any group of women. I am sure that when the report of the congressional committee shall be given at the national convention the one comment on every hand will be, "How did they do it?"

State and local societies throughout the country have vied with each other in devising means of keeping suffrage continually before the entire nation, and the press has been a most helpful adjunct in our work.

Significant Statement.

One of the significant statements in the misinformed and misleading tirade of Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, recently in the senate, is that suffrage is coming rapidly, but in the conservative southern and eastern states there is hope that it may be prevented and stayed. Had Senator Tillman been better informed in regard to the activity of woman suffragists in South Carolina, and especially in Alabama, Louisiana and Texas during the past year, he would not be so sure of the backward spirit of the south, or that it would become a block to the progress of the suffrage movement.

Personally, I am looking for suffrage to win in any one of the states in the union, and it might be that South Carolina would be among those of the south to first grant it to women. It is only a matter of time, and that a short time for north, south, east and west, and the senator and all who stand with him will better prepare for the full enfranchisement of American citizens, regardless of sex.

Miss Rankin, the National Field Secretary.

Miss Rankin has done some splendid legislative work in the north, east and south, and has more than justified her selection for that position.

Space will not admit of using extracts from this admirable letter from our national president whom many will remember as assisting Miss Susan B. Anthony as vice president when that great convention held its twenty-seventh annual convention in Dr Ginn's opera house February, 1895. Since then Miss Shaw has attended a state convention of the Georgia Woman's Suffrage association auxiliary to the national and has spoken in the hall of the house of representatives.

The municipal council of Paris has, by a unanimous vote, accorded the municipal franchise to women, who will henceforth be qualified to take part in the election of the city fathers. Tax-paying women in Atlanta pay on over twenty million dollars of realty. The small tax-paying women on $2,000 and less are not counted in that $20,000,000, and there are more of that kind than of those who pay on $2,000 and less than that amount. Is it not a shame that they must be silent when it comes to voting for a mayor and other city officials?

When the women of Kansas, after heroic work, were granted municipal suffrage in 1893, they rejoiced greatly because they knew it meant for them total enfranchisement, and it came to them November 5, 1912. Georgia suffragists have begged for municipal suffrage, for a change in the charter which would give them the right to vote on all questions in which the expenditure of money is involved. A deaf ear has been turned to them. Atlanta women are as good and pure as are the women of Paris, they don't know how to dress as well, and they would vote for the right sort of men from mayor down to the lowest official, which is more than can be said of men who have cast the ballots since the Gate City was a baby.

What Voting Women Are Doing.

The Council of Voting Women, which was in session in Washington, D. C., August 13, 14 and 15, discussed such questions as the attitude of the national parties toward woman suffrage; methods for securing a suffrage amendment to the constitution of the United States, and the results of equal suffrage in the nine states where it had been tried. The congressional committee of the council has as chairman Dr. Sara Smith King, and among its members are Mrs. Annie Hamilton Pitzer, of Colorado, sister-in-law of Speaker Champ Clark; Mrs. Frank W. Mondill, of Wyoming; Mrs. Fred Dubois, of Idaho; Mrs. George Sutherland, of Utah; Mrs. Charles Morton, of Washington, wife of General Morton; Mrs. John E. Raker, of California; Mrs. Maude West Prescott, of Oregon, and Mrs. James Wickersham, of Alaska, that brave little territory which was the last to enfranchise the women.

Wives of Great Men.

The majority of these women are the wives of United States senators or representatives. And Jane Addams, who is now a voter in Illinois, Jane Addams, the beloved vice president of the National American Woman Suffrage association, was also present at that great meeting. She was designated the state of Illinois' official representative and was elected vice president of the Council of Voting Women. No doubt those women made a pilgrimage to the Hall of Fame to look upon the calm and placid face of that other great woman, Francis E. Willard, whose marble statue has been placed next to George Washington's as the best representative of Illinois. Frances Willard and her noble mother were ardent suffragists and declared that national prohibition would never come until the women could vote the liquor out. Here are a few of the laws that voting women have succeeded in getting passed:

A Measure.

A measure providing for the commission form of government in cities, a law to prevent traffic in women, a law prohibiting the employment of children under 14 years of age in any occupation dangerous to physical or moral welfare, a nine-hour law for women, many improved health laws, a law against opium, morphine and cocaine. To show what they have done the women of five of the suffrage states have published a pamphlet showing some of the laws passed during one legislative session since women got the ballot. The sessions selected were all in 1911.

Latest Suffrage News From Austria.

The local government of Wiener-Neustadt and Waidhofen recently gave women tax-payers the direct vote, and made it compulsory. The nuns of a highly conservative Catholic convent therefore found themselves, without warning, compelled to take part in public life. Their dilemma was a very serious and grievous one. Should they refuse to vote they were punishable by the law of their commune, but, should they obey that local law they would disobey the law of their church, which bade them not to concern themselves with the affairs of this world. If they decided to attend a political meeting in order to learn how to vote intelligently, they would disobey the imperial law of Austria, which forbids women to have anything to do with politics. The nuns appealed to the pope, and he gave them a special dispensation to use their voting rights. On election day the sisters set out in their carriages, but were attacked by a portion of the Protestant public, which is said neither to have believed in woman suffrage in general nor in that of nuns in particular. They were gallantly rescued before any harm was done and in a quiet and ladylike manner deposited their votes.

The Attitude of Cardinal Gibbons.

But Cardinal Gibbons is quoted as saying: "I think women would make good mothers than good politicians, but suffrage is certain to come to women." If nuns cannot be mothers they can become politicians in Austria, it seems.

The cardinal says suffrage for women is "inevitable." This new departure in Austria will confirm him in that opinion. Don't believe anyone who tells you "it is impossible," that it cannot be done!

It Cannot Be Done!

"There are thousands to tell you it cannot be done,
There are thousands to prophecy failure;
There are thousands to point out to you, one by one,
The dangers that wait to assail you."

Women of Georgia.

If the women of Georgia will decide that they want equal rights they can get equal rights by working, as did the women of Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Idaho, Washington, California, Kansas, Oregon, Arizona, Illinois and the women of Alaska.

Let us be heroes in the strife and not like dumb, driven cattle.

Who Shall Say.

I wonder if the stones she flings
Are stepping stones to better things.

Book Reviews in Tabloid

Laddie—A True-Blue Story. By Gene Stratton-Porter. Author of "Freckles," "A Girl of the Limberlost," "The Harvester," etc. When it was announced that Mrs. Porter, who has given the literary world several beautiful and charming stories, had written another open-air novel absolutely true to the real American life it represents, her admirers became at once interested and at the same time impatient to read her new work. This book was published on Mrs. Porter's birthday, August 17, the date of the first printing of 150,000 advance copies, the above books having found nearly 3,000,000 readers.

"Laddie" is refreshing, for it is another nature's book, full of nature's charm and so far away from the mercenary motive which has been the lever controlling so much of the modern fiction of today that it is a pleasure to know that the other books of this gifted novelist are to have such a worthy successor.

The story is laid during the pioneer days of Indiana; it tells of the sweet home life of the Stantons, the love story of Laddie, the eldest of the Stanton boys, and Pamela Pryor, the princess of the house of mystery; Little Sister, who tells what happened, and several other Stanton children, etc. Few readers will forget the charm of the home wedding of Shelley Stanton, or of Leon reciting his thirteen texts in the little Methodist church, or when Little Sister fell out of the apple tree in her haste to tell that her sister was being kissed, etc. Someone has said: "Here again, as in Mrs. Porter's other novels, one has that sense of being very close to the heart of nature, in flower and bird; and very close to the heart of man, the real man, the manly man, the interesting man who is captain of his own soul." (Doubleday, Page & Co., New York.)

GENE STRATTON-PORTER.
Author of "Laddie," a True-Blue Story.

Comrade Yetta. By Albert Edwards, author of "A Man's World." Mr. Edwards is a fearless writer, and when "A Man's World" was published last fall, it was the subject of comment for some time. Again he paints the tragic story of life in the east side, he lays bare the industrial shame of the metropolis that is rich in excitement and action. The story is woven around "Yetta," a girl typical of thousands who fill our factories and workshops, and tells of her evolution from a worker at the machine to a leader in the unions and a writer of industrial and political topics. This novel will be interesting to those who are engaged in the world's work and are trying to solve one of the many problems which we are now daily experiencing.

Virginia. By Ellen Glasgow. This popular book continues to grow in popularity on both sides of the deep blue sea. The London Chronicle considers it "almost a great book in its knowledge and sympathy, in its pathos and irony." The Pall-Mall Gazette says: "The story of Virginia makes an American novel of very nearly the best class." The Sketch says: "The book is remarkable for its number of beautiful women. Virginia and her mother, of course, belong to the last century, but Virginia's own daughters are like personal friends." The Birmingham Daily Post welcomes it as "a return to the old-fashioned novel of domestic life." These are a few of the appreciative comments of a book whose story is full of pain and grief, yet lifelike in the unfolding of one of the problems of the day, and in this, the now ever-changing southland, it is a vivid picture so full of realism that we question the identity of fiction characters. MAGAZINE CLIPPINGS.

The American Magazine for September says that one of the most ardent woman suffragists in America is Inez Haynes Gillmore, whose newest piece of work is the serial story "Angel Island," which is just beginning in The American Magazine, and which Mrs. Gillmore frankly hopes will stir up feeling on behalf of woman's suffrage. Mrs. Gillmore, now 40 years old, was born in Brazil, educated in Boston and at Radcliffe college; she married Rufus Gillmore, a writer of detective stories sixteen years, and they now live in New York.

"Would You Have Raised This Man's Salary?" Another interesting story in the September American Magazine.

The North American Review for September has quite a number of interesting articles, among them "Reorganization of the Republican Party," "American Ambassadors Abroad," "Social Hygiene," etc.

An autumn harvest of rich reading will be found in September Lippincott's, which is one of the most attractive issues of this popular magazine. Grace Livingston Hill-Lutz, the author, has a complete novel, "The Best Man," in this number.

"The Drifter," by Forbes Lindsay, is a sketch of rare interest telling of the many American adventurers afflicted with wanderlust, who are found all over the world.

"The Broken Shoe Lace" is a vivid story of Irvin Cobb, the first of a series which are now appearing in the Red Book Magazine. The September issue contains no less than fifteen stories by star writers of America.

The September Strand contains a continuation of the two serial stories —"Unto Caesar," by Baroness Orczy, and "Wet Magis," by E. Nesbit, besides contributions by Oppenheim, Steele, Bell, etc., all popular writers.

Pictorial Review for September is from cover to cover full of interesting, entertaining, practical and instructive features for men, women and children.

LITERARY NOTES.

"Daddy-Do-Funny," by Ruth McEnery Stuart, is a collection of plantation jingles, with seventy illustrations by G. H. Clements, which will ben published early in the fall.

"Westways," a charming country estate of middle Pennsylvania in the fifties and sixties, is the title of Dr. S. Weir Mitchell's new novel which will be published by the Century company.

Funk & Wagnalls' new standard dictionary is proving not only attractive but instructive to all people of all nations. Wu Ting Fang, at one time Chinese ambassador to Washington, not only edited all the Anglo-Chinese terms, but supplied a number current among the English-speaking merchants in China and the Far East. Slatin Bey, author of "With Fire and Sword in the Sudan," has also contributed the terms used by the English-speaking people of Kordofan and Darfur.

The first dictionary of English words in which the meaning of the words were explained in English was published three hundred and sixty-one years ago. John Bullokar produced what he called a "compleat dictionary" in 1616 containing 5,000 words, and the last dictionary, published in 1913, is Funk & Wagnalls' New Standard Dictonary of 450,000 words.

Annie Fellows Johnston, author of "The Little Colonel Series," has a new book for the children to be published this fall, called "Miss Santa Claus of the Pullman."

The interest in Mrs. Fisher's "A Montessori Mother," continues to grow. Holt informs us that it is in its fourth American edition and word comes from London that it is being reprinted, arrangements have already been made for Italian and Swedish editions and the author is considering requests for the rights in French and German.

Miss Reppilier, author of "The American Spinster," which was published in the July Century, is quite a pleasant talker. "This is the golden age of spinsters," she says, and that the American woman with any go in her can get along perfectly well by herself, and she is truly to be envied by her sisters in France and Germany who are so woefully dependent.

"The Cat's Elegy," by Gelett Burgess and Burgess Johnson, is the most humorous little volume that the public has had the pleasure of reading for some time. The stanzas of this elegy are inclosed in a decorative design and its author is to be congratulated on its "catty" extraction. The initial stanza runs:

"The tea bell tolls for Nell to pass the tray,
The glowing cook winds slowly up the clock,
The ashman homeward wends his weary way
And leaves a trail of cinders round the block."

NO LABOR DAY PARADE TO BE HELD THIS YEAR

Members of Local Trades Union Will Spend the Day at Home With Wife and "Kiddies."

When Labor day, which comes Monday, comes, there will be no Labor day parade or public demonstration of any sort.

This unique chapter in the history of Labor Day comes about by a decision which has been reached by the local trades unions to spend the holiday at home with the "wife and kiddies," instead of tramping the streets with banners, floats and brass bands.

They believe that the day will be of greater advantage and of more pleasure untilized in this way rather than in the old fashion.

It is probable that each local will arrange a small individual program of celebration or entertainment.

The following editorial, under the captain of "The Day We Celebrate," in the current issue of The Journal of Labor, has this to say about Labor Day:

Labor Day in Atlanta will probably be about the quiest Labor Day which has been spent since the inauguration of the day.

It has been decided by the Atlanta Federation of Trades that there will be no central celebration this year; but each union will celebrate as they desire.

Most of the labor people of Atlanta will spend Labor Day quietly at home with their families. Some have arranged for a big spread at their homes, with many of their friends invited to enjoy their day "at home;" while others have arranged to take their families and friends and go to the woods for an all-day picnic.

Every individual is making great preparations for the celebration of Labor Day, but each in his own way. There will be no pomp and glory in the celebration this year; there will be no playing of bands, tramping of feet and slowly moving floats, but there will be pleasant glory in the celebration this year; there will be peals of laughter, and the hearty ring of the voices of little children in the woods, as they romp and play with daddy while "mamma" spreads the picnic dinner.

While Labor Day will be celebrated in a quiet manner, yet every heart will rise and swell with gratitude and thanksgiving for the day which marks labor's rise from serfdom to honor and standing among men. Many a true union heart will look into the past, and review the "has beens," and reflect that it has only been a few short years since laboring men labored from sun to sun, and then into the wee small hours of the night, before he could call his day's work done.

On Labor Sunday, the day prior to Labor Day, the union men and women and their families will worship and give thanks at the English Lutheran church; then, returning to their homes and families prepared for a day of thanksgiving and enjoyment in the Labor Day which follows.

This being the first time in the history of the labor movement of Atlanta that there has not been great preparations made for the celebration of the day, it is quite a departure, and it is believed that every unionist in Atlanta will enjoy their individual celebrations more heartily.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick, State President, Writes an Open Letter to the Organized Women of Georgia

(The Woman's club department today is given to the president of the Georgia Federation, that she may set forth the several lines of paramount interest to club women, that they may think seriously of the same and be able to discuss them directly at the forthcoming state convention. Next Sunday Mrs. Nicolos Petterson, of Tifton, vice president, will give out a message to the club women of Georgia, these well-known women contributing to the page during the illness of the state editor, Mrs. Harvie Jordan.)

By Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, President.

To the Organized Club of Women of Georgia: While a review of the work of the year is a part of the program of an annual meeting, it is also a time to consider new ways in which to increase the usefulness of the federation. Many vital questions will be brought before our convention in Cuthbert October 28, 29 and 30.

The currents of life and activity that are running steadily and vigorously through our Federation body have brought interest in many significant public questions during the last few months. Come ready to discuss these, for we must be prepared to shape our efforts for an even more efficient future.

The Work Before Us.

Mr. Coulter, many years secretary of children's courts in New York, said recently: "Women have forced our steps toward humanitarian progress." There is no denying the fact that we are a strong factor in the struggle for better living conditions. Then let us press on until there is not a woman who does not recognize the rights of the child, and realize as did Mark Twain, that "a boy that don't get started right when he's young ain't got no show," and work shoulder to shoulder with our school authorities until our schools are supplied with the best teachers—well paid—and every child has, at least, an elementary education.

Wise consideration and careful thought are necessary in determining what is a passing fad or a real advance over old methods, and what new theories should be adopted and what rejected. It is the worthy purpose of our women's clubs to study these questions and further endeavors for the present and future welfare of the rising generation by securing right teaching in early years.

Let Us Find the Cause.

Recent investigations show that five hundred millions more were spent in one year in penal institutions and as the result of crime than was spent in schools, churches, hospitals, colleges and all forms of betterment, religious and educational in the United States.

Let us use our influence to employ some of this for prevention. We are beginning to wonder why it is that our women should have a definite training for everything but the tasks they are most likely to assume.

We know that a woman's destiny is home-keeping; we are told that 95 out of every 100 women become home-keepers, yet our system of education does not take this seriously into account. Let our slogan be: "Every girl, rich or poor, high or low—somewhere in the course of her education a systematic training for home duties."

Sidney Smith well said: "The real object of education is to give children resources that will endure as long as life lasts; habits that time will ameliorate, not destroy; occupations that will render sickness tolerable, solitude pleasant and life more dignified and useful."

We want household economics and domestic science taught in our public schools. We believe that a room, material and a competent teacher in our schools will put these "on a plane in proportion to their importance in life."

Here is a field for our labor. Are we ready for it?

The Dairy Instruction Car.

The dairy instruction car which the Southern railroad has sent through Georgia aroused a keen interest in an industry that brings more money into the state of Wisconsin than does the cotton crop in Georgia.

It could be made just as profitable in this state. The club women have always worked for every form of instruction that will give a better knowledge of food products, their relation to life and the needs of the body so that the health of the people may be conserved. We hear much about the high cost of living, and the cost of high living, but each of us must solve this problem: "How shall we learn the art of right living?"

"Who can tell how much vice and crime may be prevented if we look carefully after the health of the child in his early years? We should carefully inspect our milk supplies the very first of all. It should be perfectly clean. A bottle of milk sent to the Paris exposition because it was absolutely clean, kept sweet for fourteen days. It was believed to be chemically preserved, but the analysis proved that its preservation was due to nothing but cleanliness. We expect to have a speaker on this all important question at our Cuthbert convention.

Let us agitate, too, the length of time in which food can be kept in cold storage. This is what Dr. Wiley said in regard to cold storage foods: "Sufficient to the year are the chickens thereof, and let us have this year's products direct instead of last year's that have been in cold storage. I am always interested in looking at mummies of meat that has kept for thousands of years, but I never want to eat any of it."

Cold storage is an ingenious device to make money and is an ever increasing peril, and it is our plain duty to fight it. To do this we need not "leave our fireside; we need not be in office; it is interwoven with our every day life."

Read the Papers.

Since we are so interested in the big questions of the day and we play no small part in securing measures through legislation, it is necessary that every club woman keep herself informed, to know what questions are up, what legislation is proposed, what men are backing it and "Why"—in other words study legislation closely and earnestly.

The daily newspapers furnish the best medium for obtaining information on all important legislative questions. Read them if you would keep pace with the world and our work, and thus ascertain where our greatest help comes in getting the noble measures the Federation stands for before the public.

We hope to make the keynote of our Cuthbert convention free and open discussions vital to our work. Come prepared to enter into these.

Prominent Georgia Women Lead Campaign for Bird Protection

Miss Nina Hornaday and Mrs. E. H. Barnes, who has been leaders in the fight among Georgia women to have the McLean amendment, designed to restore the bird clause in the new tariff law, are very much encouraged.

Telegrams and letters have been sent saying that the McLean amendment which restores the protective bird clause was on Saturday debated in the senate. Very little opposition was shown. Senator McLean, of Connecticut, spoke for the cause very strongly and convincingly. Senator James O'Gorman, of New York, made a strong appeal to the senate to restore the original clause and pass it unchanged.

The Georgia women have so earnestly co-operated with the leaders for the movement in the state, that they have won the admiration of the national leaders. Over eighteen hundred newspapers have published their work. To no other state has such prominence been given.

Favored by Georgia Legislature.

Our general assembly passed a resolution requesting our national representatives to vote for the bird clause. The resolution was written by Judge Benjamin Harvey Hill, and introduced by Hon. Crawford Wheatley, of Americus, and Hon. Hardman, of Jackson.

Senator F. McL. Simmons, of North Carolina, chairman of the finance committee, announced that at the proper time the committee would ask that section 357 be recommitted to his committee "for re-study" and possible amendment. This is significant of a more friendly feeling in the finance committee.

It is very interesting in this connection to chronicle that on August 4 a similar protective bill was presented to the British parliament. Lord Curzon has been long a worker in this cause.

Will those who are never weary of good works, please write to the gentlemen of the finance committee urging them to consult the wishes of their constituents and help to save the wild life of the world?

The Amendment.

The protective clause in the amendment is:

"Provided, that the importation of aigrettes, egret plumes or 'osprey' plumes, and the feathers, quills, heads, wings, tails, skins or parts of skins of wild birds either raw or manufactured, and not for scientific or educational purposes, is hereby prohibited, but this provision shall not apply to the feather or plumes of ostriches, or to the feathers of domestic fowls of any kind."

This clause, which is earnestly advocated by the women of America for the total suppression of all importations of wild birds' plumage (except ostrich plumes for millinery purposes) has passed the house of representatives and is now before the senate.

ILLNESS OF STATE EDITOR.

It grieves me to announce to you the illness of your state editor, Mrs. Harvie Jordan, who has been suffering with appendicitis, at St. Joseph's infirmary, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. Jordan has faithfully conducted the work of the Woman's Department of The Constitution for the entire year, including the summer months when the duties presented were difficult. During the absence of her husband and daughter in Europe, she assumed much of the responsibility of Mr. Jordan's business, directing his entire correspondence. Her department on the club page proved her devotion to duty. The club women of the state can greatly assist in the emergency occasioned by her illness if they will send to the president of their districts any news they may have of club progress, this news of interest to all club women.

IDA FITZPATRICK,
President.

CLUB PRESIDENTS URGED TO ATTEND STATE CONVENTION

My Dear Madame President: The announcement and all necessary information about the annual convention to be held at Cuthbert, October 28, 29, 30 and 31 will be published soon in a special edition of the Cuthbert paper gotten out by the Cuthbert club women.

The Cuthbert Woman's club will entertain all visiting club women.

Each club is entitled to two representatives, the president and her appointee, and the delegate or alternate. Have these elected promptly, and send names to Mrs. A. H. McCoy, Cuthbert. Delegates should notify their hostesses definitely of the time of their arrival. It is important that all arrive on the afternon of Tuesday, the 28th.

Let us urge your attendance, madam president, unless unavoidably detained.

In some states and in some Georgia clubs it is the custom to pay the expenses from the club treasury of one member, or the sum may be divided between the two delegates.

Credential cards are inclosed in this letter. Please place them in the hands of those who will attend the convention.

An interesting conference will be held. Matters of importance are to be brought before this body. Come prepared to ask questions.

No progressive club can afford to fail to attend this convention of 1913. Cuthbert is planning for 250 delegates. Shall we disappoint her?

IDA FITZPATRICK,
President.

MELON ENTHUSIAST DECLARES FULTON HAS FINEST EVER

During the past week T. J. Powell, who lives near Ben Hill, Fulton county, Georgia, has come to Atlanta several times with loads of watermelons so large that it was all that two mules could do to pull them—especially with Mr. Powell on the wagon, for he tips the beam at something like 250 pounds.

Mr. Powell is one of the brag watermelon growers of this part of Georgia and a fifty or seventy-five pound melon is quite the average of those raised by him for the Atlanta market.

"I have been in this business since 1880," said Mr. Powell yesterday, "and I guess I bring to Atlanta something like from 3,000 to 5,000 watermelons every season. I made a specialty of the old-time 'rattlesnakes' and if you ever saw a finer one than the one I hold in my arms now it was not grown in this section."

The melon referred to was nearly three feet long and was as fine a specimen as was ever grown in Georgia. The photograph was taken by Wesley Hirshburg, and it gives valuable and ocular evidence of what can be done in this section by a man who knows his business.

DAUGHTERS OF AMERICAN REVOLUTION IN GEORGIA

There has been great growth of interest in educational work in the society in Georgia in recent years. In fact, this is true as to the society throughout the country. Large donations have been made in this state for scholarships at different schools, and special attention has been given to the need of poor boys and girls in mountain districts remote from railroads, who are mostly of revolutionary stock.

During the year ending in April, 1910, in which Mrs. Godfrey was state regent, about $1,200 was raised for one school—the Martha Berry Industrial school, which was founded and is conducted by a Daughter of the American revolution. Thousands of dollars have been donated for scholarships at this school by Daughters in all parts of the United States. More than a thousand dollars came in one year from Massachusetts chapters. At the congress of 1913 the contributions of the society for the past year for patriotic education were reported to be $6,573, of which $2,683 went to the Berry school. Georgia Daughters gave $505 of this sum.

Brunswick Daughters Working.

Daughters in Brunswick are making active efforts to have the society take charge of the school established by Mrs. Dodge on St. Simons island, in order that it may be conducted as a D. A. R. institution, Mrs. Dodge having offered to turn over to them the school, an endowment fund and a large tract of land.

Donations of medals and other prizes have been made from time to time by many chapters for historical and patriotic essays in schools.

The law providing for the celebration of Georgia day in the public schools by essays, recitations, addresses, etc., relating to Georgia, its history and the lives of distinguished Georgians, has resulted in arousing greater interest than was ever before shown among the schools in these subjects.

First Concerted Effort.

The first concerted effort to bring about the annual celebration of the date of the landing of Oglethorpe and his colonists, under the name of "Georgia day," was made by the Joseph Habersham chapter, of Atlanta, in January, 1901, though Miss Frances Letcher Mitchell, in her book, "Georgia Land and People," had previously suggested that the day be made a legal holiday. Credit to these first efforts are due to Mrs. W. L. Peel, then regent of the chapter, and Miss Nina Hornady, its "Georgia day" chairman.

In 1894, Mrs. John M. Graham, then regent of the Joseph Habersham chapter, seeing that Mr. Calvin had introduced in the legislature a bill providing for school celebrations on certain days, endeavored to have a similar recognition given to Georgia day, which, since 1901, had annually been celebrated in many schools. In this she was aided by Miss Hornady. The legislative committee on education reported a Georgia day bill as a substitute for the Calvin bill, but it did not pass. At the next state conference, Mrs. Graham (who had brought the matter before the conference) was appointed chairman of a state committee to procure legislation on the subject. At her request, a bill drawn by Mr. Graham was introduced in the legislature by Hon. Madison Bell, and at a subsequent session by Hon. John M. Slaton, then president of the senate. To Mr. Slaton is due the credit for its passage.

The Daughters in Georgia have been working for the adoption of a compulsory school-attendance law, and a committee on this subject, of which Mrs. A. O. Harper, of Athens, is chairman, expects to make an active campaign for such a law at the next session of the legislature.

TO LOCATE GRAVES OF REVOLUTIONARY MEN

David Meriwether chapter, Greenville, has the names of quite a number of soldiers who fought in the war of the revolution who lived in Meriwether county and whose graves are unmarked. The committee appointed by the chapter regent are desirous of locating these graves and request any information that can be obtained concerning their place of interment be sent to Mrs. R. S. Parham and Miss Dora Freeman, Greenville, Ga.

The names of the soldiers are: Charles Jordan, Joseph Peavy, William Hatcher. Their neighbors were Seth Thompson, Dr. Hope H. Tigner and Major John Greer.

Tobias Honea, whose neighbors were Jesse Taylor and Lewis Fay.

George Earnest, whose neighbors were Charles Garrett and Jeptha Smith.

David Jones and William Vickers.

These soldiers were residents of Meriwether county in 1832, as shown by their declarations of service in the revolutionary war, made to obtain the benefit of the provisions of an act of congress passed June 7, 1832. It is believed that as they were old men at that time, they continued to reside and are buried in this county.

INTEREST MANIFEST IN OGLETHORPE MEMORIAL

The sum of $25 was pledged to the Oglethorpe memorial at Frederica, by the local chapter at Eastman, Ga., at their meeting last Wednesday morning, held at the residence of Mrs. W. R. Hall.

Valuable suggestions were offered by the regent, Mrs. A. S. Wilkins, and a committee was appointed to outline the work for the new year. After the business session an interesting literary program was rendered. Mrs. Will McRhae read a sketch of "Nancy Hart," from whom Mrs. McRhea is a lineal descendant.

A "Romance of Jamestown" was given by Mrs. A. W. Bealer, and much appreciated, and a musical number was contributed by Mrs. S. S. Stephens. Delicious ices were served by the hostess. In addition to the regular members there were other guests present. Miss Maud Fisher, from Nathantal Macon chapter, Macon; Mrs. W. D. Webber, Birmingham, Ala; Mrs. W. E. Bulloch and Mrs. James Bishop, Jr.

NEW YEAR BOOK ISSUED BY BRUNSWICK CHAPTER

A most attractive "Year Book for 1913-14, Brunswick Chapter," is just from the hands of the committee, of which Mrs. W. H. De Voe is chairman, with Mrs. D. W. Krauss, Mrs. J. S. Wright, Mrs. C. A. Sheldon, Mrs. B. Whitfield, Mrs. J. A. Montgomery. It presents a most interesting course of study of "Georgia," embracing the several eventful epochs in her history, also emphasizing the "Observance Days"—"Georgia Day, February 12;" "Washington's Birthday, February 12," and "Flag Day, June 14." Each subject for the month is introduced by a particularly appropriate quotation, and the booklet shows much care and patience in its preparation.

It will be greatly appreciated by the members of Brunswick chapter not only for its value intrinsically, but an additional pleasure is to be derived, as the Year Book is a gift to the chapter from their zealous chapter regent, Mrs. J. H. Morgan.

He had daughter, Cynthia, that married Allen Jennings and lived in Fayette county, Georgia, 1825. Wanted, to know where Mathew Varner and wife and Allen Jennings and wife are buried. Williams-Kelly.

Please give me all the information you can concerning the ancestors of my great-grandfather, Paul Williams, and those of his second wife, Mary Kelly.

The Williamses went from North Carolina to Georgia. Colonel James Williams, who was killed in the battle of King's Mountain, revolutionary war, is a relative.

Williams, who distinguished himself in Georgia at the same time, and who is mentioned in a very complimentary manner in the history of Georgia, was Paul Williams' uncle or near relative. Later Paul and his brother, John, lived near Winchester, Franklin county, Tennessee. Paul moved to Bolivar, Hardeman county, Tennessee, and then to Arkansas.

The Kellys were from Kelly's Ford, Virginia.

:: The Switzerland of America ::

Early August finds us in the land where the mountains in stately grandeur rear their green-hooded heads to admire their daisy-embroidered robes in limpid water mirrors at their feet.

All along the route, towering monuments erected to the confederate dead attest the patriotism of southern women. For our own Georgia the very face of nature herself wears the confederate colors. From the red old hills with their glistening bars of Georgia marble which uphold the crimson and white of the confederacy, on down to the land where floating banners of moss of confederate gray are waved by every breeze perpetuate reminders of Georgia's historic part are everywhere "lest we forget."

Several hours at Charlottesville, Va., allowed us a glimpse of Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson. From a lofty plateau, the estate overlooks the town with its many quaint old-fashioned houses, together with handsome modern residences. Beautifully situated on a hill is the University of Virginia, and on the courthouse square is the splendid confederate monument erected by the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Wonderful Scenery.

On across the Blue Ridge mountains in the trail of the lonesome pine, the scenery grows wilder and grander. On one side the bowlders and peaks of towering mountains majestically shelter the valleys rich with grain. The cooling breath of the Alleghenies greets us, and soon there comes into view the waters of the beautiful Greenbrier. Clear and sparkling, it flows over the rocks, here gliding in tranquil silence, busy with its own plans, in the simple life manner, there plunging and dashing in the strenuous Rooseveltian style.

High up in the Alleghenies, in the midst of the Switzerland of America, is the enterprising village of Alderson, W. Va. Camp Greenbrier, a summer school and camp of nearly two hundred boys, a number from our own state, is an interesting feature. Near Alderson are many historic places. Twenty miles distant is the famous White Sulphur Springs, where the hotel and cottages are situated in a beautifully kept park of one hundred acres. Wealthy people of all sections summer here most delightfully, but mdern improvements make a strong contrast to the accommodations at this resort so fashionable in ante-bellum days. Then the aristocrats went in their carriages with horseback attendants, over the old stage coach line. A reminder of those old days is a great tree which grows right through the porch of one of the older cottages.

A Pulpit of Jackson.

A pleasant acquaintance of our trip was a gentleman of courtly manners who had been a pupil of Stonewall Jackson at the Virginia Military Institute of Lexington. Mr. Lewis was one of the older boys of the school, was very devoted to his teacher and related many interesting events in his school life. He illustrated Stonewall's quiet manner of discipline in this incident: One of the boys for some reason was offended with Jackson, and picking up a brick hurled it at the teacher. The brick did not strike him, and Jackson passed on quietly and calmly, giving no sign of having noticed the action. Next morning, however, the boy was placed under arrest and punished. Stonewall was careful and taught his pupils many lessons of patience and endurance. On one occasion, when he was training a number of boys to handle the cannon, he required them to load four time before they succeeded in learning the right method.

When Stonewall Jackson gave up his work and went to the defense of the south, Mr. Lewis was anxious to go with him, but a widowed mother needed the boy at home, and prevailed upon him to stay, so he raised a company and sent it to the war. The federals arrested him, but influential friends secured his release and he remained with his mother at Point Pleasant. His family still occupies the same place which they have owned for 113 years, which bears the distinction of having been surveyed by George Washington. Ancestors of this family founded Lewisburg, the second oldest town in West Virginia. Here we found many interesting historic features. The hill which was the scene of battle in the the sixties is now crowned with beautiful summer homes and near is the Presbyterian school for boys.

We saw the old courthouse in which Patrick Henry spoke. The logs at the sides are held in close embrace of the Virginia creeper, which climbs to the low roof of the small building. The house is used as a dwelling by an old lady who takes pride in its history and is pleased when visitors show interest. Old-fashioned hollyhocks bloom along the picket fence, the door stands hospitably open, and within, a spirit of quiet prevails inviting recollections of the past. We picture the scene as the brilliant orator of the eighteenth century, Patrick Henry, woke the echoes of the surrounding hills with his enthusiasm. The Greenbrier Seminary for girls occupies a commanding elevation, and on the spacious well-kept grounds is the imposing confederate monument erected by the Lewisburg chapter, D. A. R.

Home of State President.

In this city is the home of the state president, Miss Price, a daughter of Governor Price. The courthouse, in present use, was erected in 1837. There is a Carnegie library and other public buildings of recent date in this old aristocratic town. The old turnpike road used before railroads were known is there, and many interesting historic places and buildings were visited.

We have met several West Virginians who attended the reunion in Macon and are enthusiastic over the south.

The matron of honor for West Virginia lives at Alderson, and speaks delightfully of her visit to Macon.

We stand on the massive bridge which spans the Greenbrier, just as the sun is setting. The western mountains stand shoulder to shoulder about the river. The tallest peak, Keeney's Knob, was used as a flag station during the war, but now wears a spirit of majestic calm. Over his head hangs the great ball of fire, while a halo of glory rests in benediction upon the great mountain high priest. In the deep green waters at his feet each tiny ripple wears its own golden crown. Then, suddenly, all in a moment, the sun drops behind the mountains, the golden sheen becoming a transparent silver. Far up the river tiny canoes gleam white. The mountains, once battle scarred, clasp hands in brotherly love, the mist from the river creeps up and up, blending the blue of the sky with the gray of the night. War clouds are no more, but the silver lining alone is visible, and peace reigns over the Switzerland of America, and over all our land!

At the 4:11 Train in Homeburg.

In the September American Magazine George Fitch, the Peoria funny man, writes an amusing sketch entitled, "The 4:11 Train." It is a description of how the world comes once a day to visit Homeburg, and is one of a series of Homeburg sketches that Mr. Fitch is doing.

Everyone goes to the 4:11 train—the only train that stops at Homeburg. Mr. Fitch goes on as follows:

"The crowd is off, and you hurl a few goodbys at the travelers getting on. Our two editors check them o ffas they go. 'Sentinel' and the 'Democrat' get all their news at this train. There's no slipping in and out of town in Homeburg. One and all we face the gantlet. Young Will Wilcox hates to have us beg him not to miss the morning train back, as we do three times a week; but he simply has to go to Jonesville that often, and we all know why, and he knows we know. The Parsons are rid of their Aunt Mary at last. She's worse than an oyster. Put her in a guest room and she grows fast to it. They've had her for six months now. Hello! Young Andy Link is going down to Jonesville. Guess he's got his job back. Andy would be a good boy if he would only stop trying to make the distilleries work nights. There goes old Colonel Ackley on his weekly trip. Wonder if he thinks he fools anyone with than suit case. Ever since the town went dry he's had business in the next county. Hello, Colonel! Don't drop that case. You'll break a suit of clothes! Watch him glare.

"The engine has gotten its breath by this time. Ever notice how human an engine sounds when it stops after a long run and the airbrake apparatus begins to pant? Old Ball has been fussing for a minute and now he yells 'Board.' Aunt Emma Nemcomb gets in a few kisses all around her family. She's going down to the next station. The engine gives a few loud puffs, spins its wheels a few times, and the cars begin moving past. Hurrah! Something doing today. That grocery salesman who gets here once a week is coming across the square two jumps to a rod. Go it, old man. Go it train! Ball will always stop for a woman, but the drummers have to take her on the fly. There! He's on—all but his hat. Red Nolan will keep that for him till his next trip.

"She's moving fast now. The brakeman hops the next to the last car with

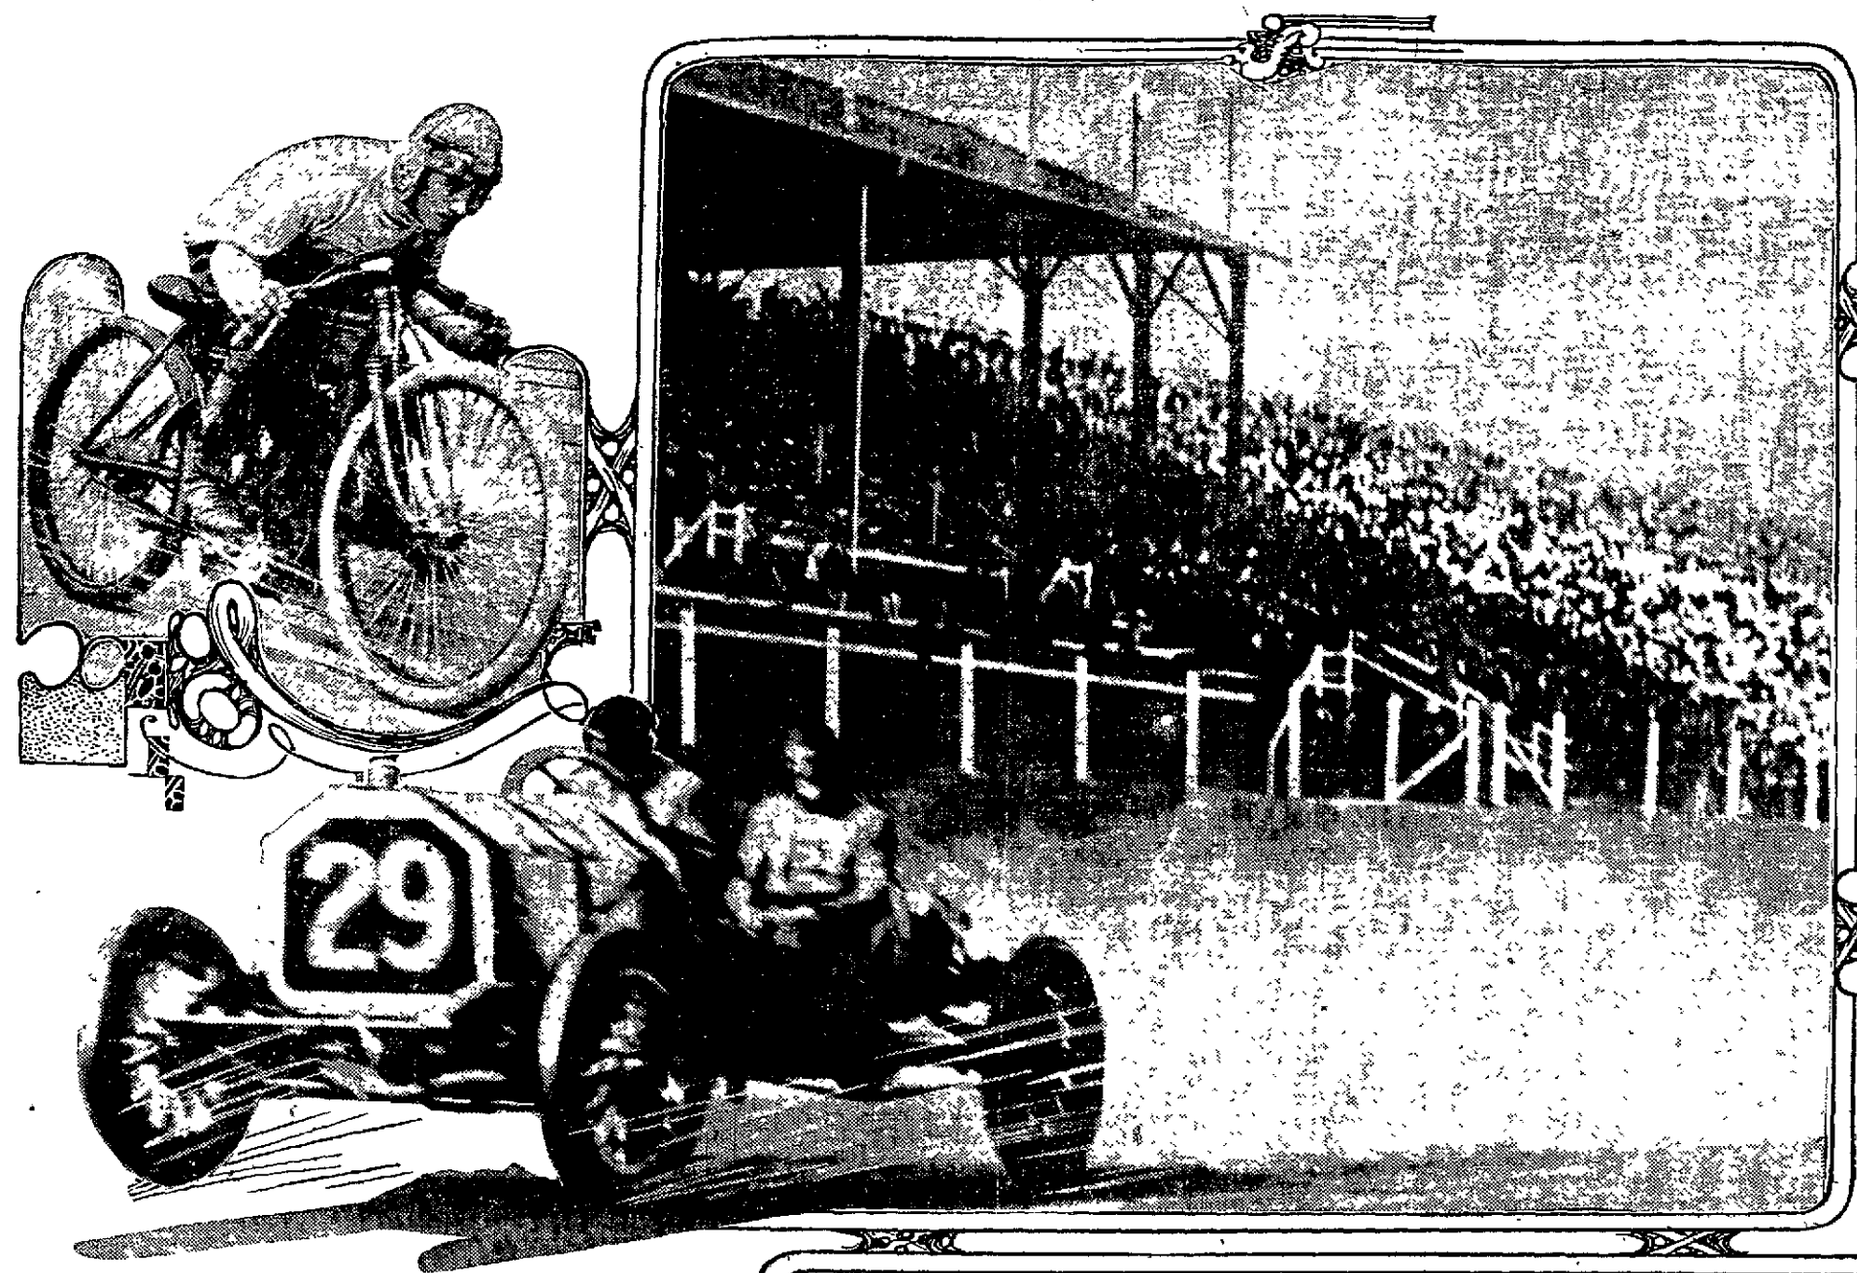
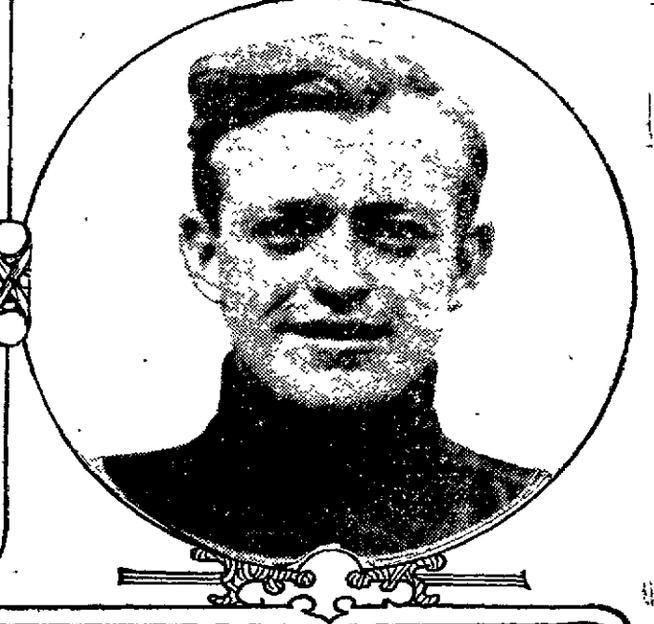
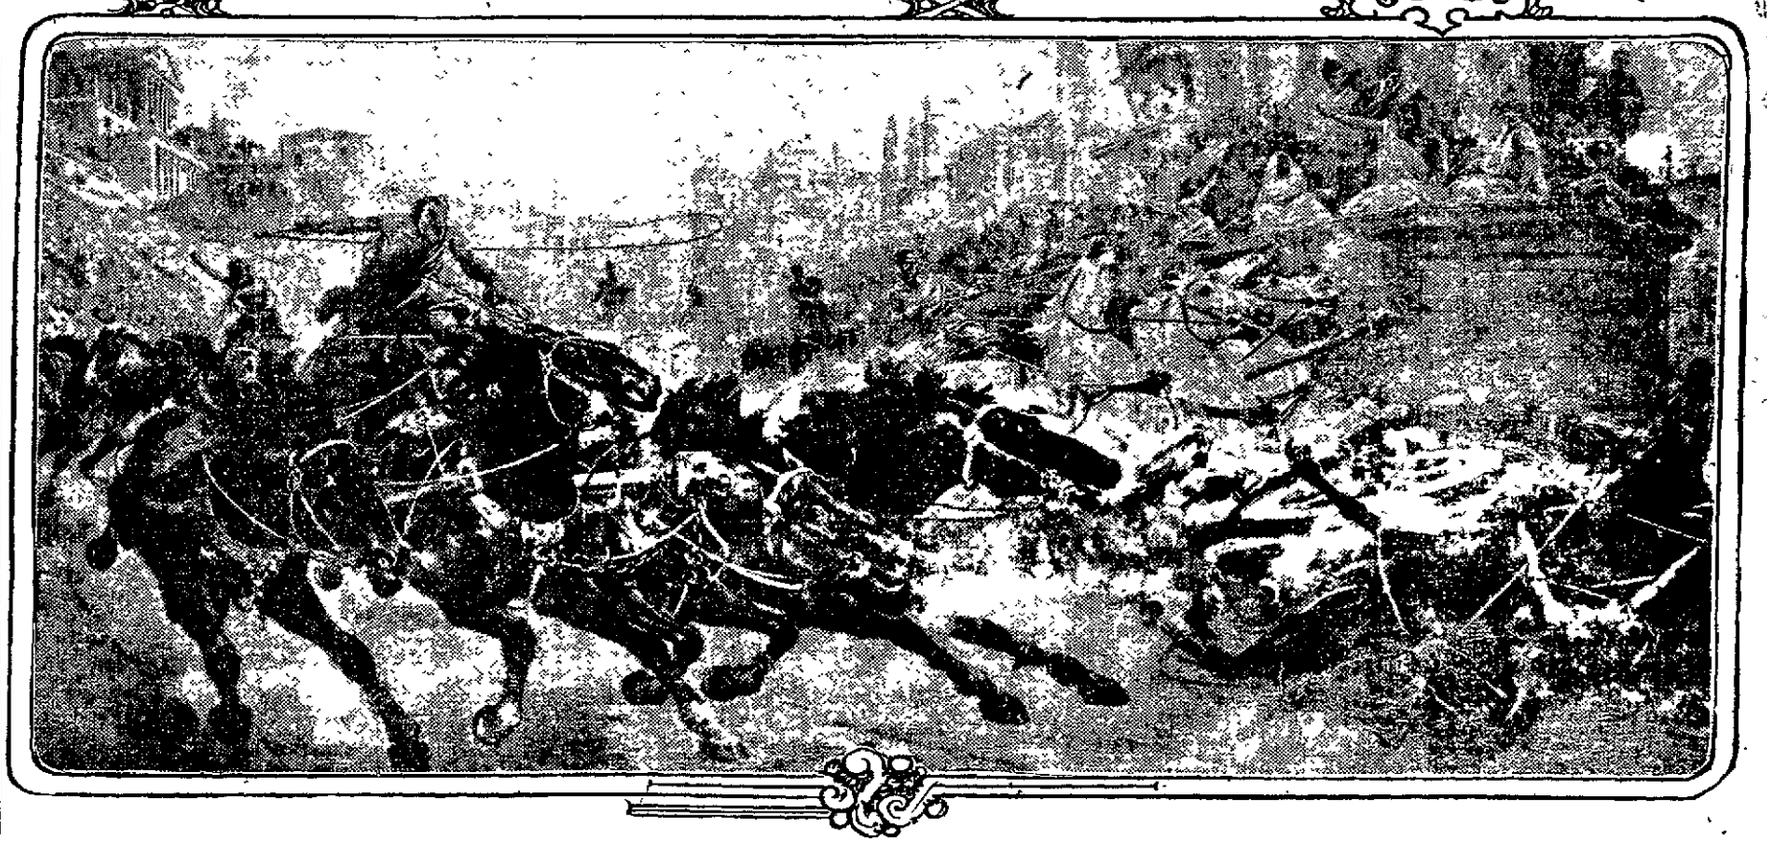
MODERN SPEED MANIACS VERY LIKE THE ROMANS WHO THIRSTED FOR BLOOD OF THE GLADIATORS







The two big pictures in this group show the speed demons of yesterday and today. The top picture was made of a speeding car at the Atlanta speedway while the lower scene is from a famous painting of chariot racing in ancient Rome. The mechanisms shown in the two pictures are widely different, but the same gripping human elements are present in both. At the top left is Jock McNeil, who was killed at the mortordrome last week, getting under way. At the top right is Harry Knight, who was killed at Columbus, Ohio, on the race course some months ago. Beneath him is Harry Glenn, an Atlanta boy, who is one of the most daring racers at the motordrome.

By Ned McIntosh.

"The driving is like the driving of G. Hugh, for he driveth furiously!"

This, we are told, was the report made to the "kink" by the county cop on the tower, or whoever in ancient Jezereel was the nemesis of speed bugs.

Upon receipt of this dope, so the story goes, the "kink" cast aloft his hands and fled.

Now, whether he feared the pace of the high geared chariot of G. Hugh, or was afraid that the speed fiend was too much of a white hope to cope with in personal combat is aside from the question.

The incident simply goes to demonstrate that even in those early days there were speeders who were willing to break a neck to break a record, and, moreover that the fame of them had gone abroad in the land.

While he had no 90 horse power gas wagon, it appears that our friend G. H. in his two-wheeled chariot and four must have sorely grieved the board of road commissioners of Ramoth Gilead by the outrageous manner in which he tore up the bituthic.

It is probable that even earlier than this strike breakers in the famous walk-out at the Tower of Babel found it profitable to be handy with their feet.

Foot Race the First Form of Speed Mania.

The 'foot race' was in all probability the earliest form of competing with Father Time. But so far as all records show the best that a human being has ever done, or, perhaps ever will do, is 100 yards in 10 seconds flat. The earliest exponent of the cinder course, whether racing with his grizzly neighbor for a prize string of beads, or hot footing it to a city of refuge to save his neck, probably never beat this record and there is no indication that the highest physical training will gear a man's legs to a higher speed.

By the time of our friend from Jezereel old Dobbin had come into considerable prominence.

It remained for one Benjamin J. Hur, in the halcyon days of Rome, really to put old Dobbin on the map. This he did in such spectacular manner that history, literature, art and drama never forgot him.

But Rome went to the bow-wows, and old Dobbin went back to the plow.

But the speed bug couldn't forget, so old Dobbin was once more hauled away from his agricultural pursuits. This time they stuck a saddle on him.

But along with certain other Kentucky products he was legislated out of existence—presumably.

Speed Bug Impossible of Extinction.

But the speed bug seems more impossible of extinction than the boll weevil itself. This hefty beetle was not to be outdone. About this time somebody had a brilliant idea that the automobile hove into sight. With the advent of the high powered racing machine the speed bug began to flourish, and I might say, die, after a fashion unparalleled in the annals of history.

Cogitating upon these things I wondered greatly. Why should a man risk his neck for a record? What would a man give in exchange for his life?

Personally I have never been arrested for exceeding a speed limit nor, for that matter, have so much as had a charge of hastiness in discharge of my various and sundry duties flung at my fair name. It may be for that reason that I am incapable of understanding the inner workings of a speed bug's temperamental machinery.

On purely personal grounds, though, I am willing to venture the theory that it is the man on the bleachers with his primal lust for the sight of blood that is the real speed bug, and not the man on the track. And his pocketbook makes the automobile go with all the alacrity of the mare.

How many racers would be in the game if they raced to an empty grandstand? And how many people would be in the grandstand if racing were a perfectly safe proposition—if all the risk of human life and limb were eliminated?

Don't understand me to be militating. I like 'em. I'm Roman enough for that. If all risk were eliminated, I'd rather stroll around to the fire station and play checkers than go to the motordrome on a free pass.

Let's take a look at the records. Since 1904 in the neighborhood of 400 drivers and mechanicians have lost their lives. This gives but a vague idea of the number who have lost limbs and suffered mutilations and lifetime injuries in every conceivable form. Can you figure a man going up against that for the pure love of it?

Now let's rig up a little moving picture show for our own benefit and see what would happen. It would be about after this manner, I think.

The electric piano is grinding out a furious and discordant Dance of Death. The film is "The Carnival of Carnage." Its incidents cover a decade, say. You and I sit halfway up the house.

A Glance at Records of Speed Maniacs.

The operator's card, thrown on the screen, should read something like this, I guess:

License No. 23—This is to certify that the Recording Angel is licensed to operate a motion picture machine, etc.

The picture's begun.

Let's see—Ah, this brings us home. Barney Oldfield is becoming famous for the first time. He is on the St. Louis track. Here he comes hurtling down the track with a blinding cloud of dust in his wake. How can that dim ghost of a driver behind him see where he is going? Let 'im worry about that, though. Watch Barney. Look out! Crash! He's gone through the fence! Crowds are surging around. Watch them cheer. Barney is safe! What matter for the two spectators that he mangled and dead!

Goodness, this next scene carries us back a long way. There is Frank Day climbing into his racer at the Milwaukee track. That was way back in 1903. Doesn't he look young? What? Not but 20 years old? What a pity. He's off. He drives well for a youngster, doesn't he? They say his mother and father didn't want him to race. Careful, boy, careful! Too late! He's through the fence, too! The crowds at the state fair are quiet as they watch him borne off the field.

How Cedrino Met His Tragic Death.

Here's Emmanuel Cedrino. Cedrino—Cedrino—The name sounds familiar. Of course. The greatest automobile designer the world has ever known. That's a Fiat he's driving. Designed by himself. Well, I'll declare. He's opening her up now on the Pimlico track at Baltimore. He will come out all right. He made that machine and he knows every screw and bolt in her like he knows his own name. Doesn't she answer him like an echo. That's some machine! Bang! What was that? Look! One of his tires is gone. My goodness, did you ever see a car turn such a summersault! He's a goner, I believe. Yes, it got him.

I believe I've seen this next track. Oh, yes. Sure. It's over at Birmingham. There's Emil Stricker. Let's see, he raced there in 1907. That's right. He sacrificed his life for the 24-hour record. It's late in the afternoon. That's a pretty sunset in the background, isn't it? It makes the roaring black car look uncanny as it hugs the shadow of the rail. What an explosion! Look at the smoke! And did you see that black object silhouetted against the low red sun? That was the body of Emil Stricker. A rather vivid picture wasn't it?

This next is a scene that took place in the same month. Where is this? Morris Park, New York. Morris Park? Oh, yes, I remember. This track was famous in the days of horse racing. See that 4-inch iron water pipe running around the top of the fence? That's a relic of the old horse days. So? Hush up, here comes young Smeltzer. See him hugging the turn? He's certainly taking a short turn. Ah, I was afraid of that. His car is skidding into the fence. He's all right now, I believe. No, his head hit that iron pipe on the fence. He's done for.

Five Others Lost Lives That Month.

There were five others who raced with Death and lost that month. I believe we will skip those. There are others more exciting, anyway.

Ah, here's something exciting for us. The Indianapolis speedway! God, how the name of it conjures a vision of blood and mutilation!

It's the opening day in 1909. The track isn't quite finished. There's no protection for the drivers along the edge of the track. But that will make it all the more exciting. There's Billy Bourque thundering down the straightaway. He's taking the turn now. What's wrong? His car has refused to take its head. Watch it grind across that 50 feet of track. Maybe he can stop it in time. He's on the brink. Look out! He's over the edge and out of sight! There's the wreck lying in the ditch. I believe it got him. What? Got his mechanician, too? Too bad.

Let's have another of the Indianapolis sort. The others grow tiresome. It's two days later. Charlie Mertz has just lost control of his car and is heading for the fence. Look how thick and black the spectators are lined up. He's into them with a crash and a melange of flying forms. Didn't get but four of them? How lucky!

Ah, here's a very familiar scene. It's the Atlanta speedway. Who's that getting into the long, lank racer over there? Al Livingston? Oh, the California boy that everybody is talking about. There are his father and mother and wife watching him.

We saw this at the speedway, though. This is getting dull.

Let's go out to the motordrome. They say Jock McNeil nearly got killed out there the other day.

Gee, I'll be glad when the new autodrome is finished!

THE PISTOL TOTER.

We publish on this page a striking communication from Representative E. T. Moon, of Troup county, on the fearful significance of the pistol statistics of this country. Nearly 4,000,000 a year are turned out by sixty-six factories of America.

As Representative Moon well says, our very civilization is threatened by the pistol.

The sooner our lawmakers come to a full realization of that fact and enact remedial legislation the better it will be for our whole country.

The evil is not confined by any means to any state nor to any section. It is a blot on the escutcheon of the entire nation.

It is a hopeful sign that such men as Representative Moon are studying this question. Sooner or later they will be able to reach the public conscience, and then, and not until then, will the remedy come.

We are progressing fairly well in the protection of birds and game against the ravages of the gun.

After a while our legislators will realize that human life is as much in need of protection from the deadly pistol, and then they will pass laws that will not only limit the use of the pistol, but that will put the world on notice that when a man uses one for unlawful purposes he will be made to pay the penalty.

Today the cowardly ruffian whose best friend is his pistol feels a sense of security in the knowledge that he can shoot as he pleases and by hiring a smart lawyer and appealing to the endless technicalities of the law evade the ends of justice.

When the appeal of civilization shames our legislators against the toleration of such a condition there will be an end to the destructive work of the pistol toter in Georgia and elsewhere.

In the meantime these are halcyon days for him, and he cares but little that his bloody statistics are shocking the civilized world.

MEXICO'S RESPONSIBILITY.

In his message on the Mexican situation President Wilson said:

"We must let every one who assumes to exercise authority in any part of Mexico know in the most unequivocal way that we shall vigilantly watch the fortunes of those Americans who cannot get away, and shall hold those responsible for their sufferings and losses to a definite reckoning. That can be and will be made plain beyond the possibility of a misunderstanding."

Here is given notice that the United States has almost reached the end of patience; that it will no longer tolerate assaults on Americans.

If further outrages occur, those claiming civil or military authority in the region where the crimes are committed will be held to account.

This is the most pointed allusion to the possibility of intervention the president has yet given. It saved his message from the charge of evasion. It showed that the administration is deeply sensible of the injury being suffered by American citizens in their lives and property.

Definite notice has been served on the warring factions that Americans who are unable to leave Mexico must not be molested. This implies the determination to use force if necessary to sustain that demand.

IS THE COLLEGE MAKING GOOD?

Investigation is the order of the day. Things new and old are being investigated, privately or officially, by investigators, competent or incompetent, whether an investigation is necessary or not. At the present rate there may soon be investigators of the investigators of investigations that were or were not properly investigated.

In The Outlook, August 16, Edward Bok, editor of The Ladies Home Journal, gives his conclusions as a result of his investigation of the question: Is the college making good? Basing his opinion upon 549 letters from seniors in eleven leading American colleges—five for women, six for men—Mr. Bok decides that the college is not making good. His article is interesting and there can be no doubt of his sincerity of purpose, but he has arrived at a conclusion that is not warranted by the facts he presents, for the reason that he holds the college responsible for things that were neglected in the home and in the preparatory schools.

The first fault Mr. Bok finds with his 549 letters is bad spelling; but children should learn to spell before they leave the preparatory school. In the old days, before spelling lessons became diluted, a pupil who had mastered Webster's blue-back could spell well enough to enter college.

The second fault found with the 549 letters is the disregard for punctuation; but a student is presumed to know how to punctuate a composition at the time he applies for entrance to college.

The third fault found with the 549 letters is illegibility; but penmanship is an elementary affair that the college is not presumed to teach. The average student, on entering college, has established an individuality in handwriting that is well-nigh permanent.

Mr. Bok next complains that 1,426 of the students to whom he wrote, inclosing stamped return envelopes, did not reply to his inquiry. Here he raises the question: If the colleges do not teach the rules of business courtesy, why not?

Doubtless many of those students, who declined to reply, were shrewd enough to recognize Mr. Bok's purpose of destructive criticism, and declined to write because they enjoy American freedom. If the failure to reply was due to ignorance of business ethics, surely the literary college is not wholly to blame. The fact is, a person who has never seen a college ought to have enough common sense to know a thing like that. Why does not Mr. Bok blame the college because thousands of people who write for information, advice or testimonials are so stupid that they do not inclose a stamp for the reply?

In determining the efficiency and the inefficiency of his 549 letter writers, Mr. Bok had the letters examined and graded by high school teachers. Thirty-five of the 100 letters from the young women were below a passing grade of 70. Fifty-nine of the 449 letters from young men were below the same mark. Mr. Bok seems to have overlooked the fact that other high school teachers probably gave these 94 delinquents passing marks four years before—when they were finishing at the high school.

Mr. Bok brands the college as failing to make good because some business man has adopted the rule of never engaging a graduate from a classical college until the young man has been out of school a year. If Mr. Bok will investigate first-class business colleges, whose special business is to prepare young men and young women for business—preferably, of course, after they have had literary training—he will find that the demand often exceeds the supply.

In the next place, Mr. Bok is alarmed because his college seniors, in their letters, do not stress "moral and spiritual broadening of character," "personal initiative," and the like. The student scarcely begins to feel, much less seriously to express, such things, until he has grown older.

Mr. Bok is right in his statement that many colleges do not offer practical courses—courses that prepare the student for life; but he goes too far when he holds the college responsible for the neglect, at home and in the preparatory school, of the most elementary matters. If Harvard and Yale and Vassar have to be taught spelling and penmanship, what is left to the preparatory schools? If Princeton and Columbia and Smith have to teach common courtesy, what's the use of parents?

Mr. Bok's article is worth while in calling attention to a weakness somewhere in our educational system, but he has gone astray in locating the source of that weakness.

While we are building school houses and doing our best to educate the young people—many of whom unfortunately care little about an education—let the investigator continue to investigate. The bigger the investigator and the thing investigated the bigger will be the investigation.

GETTING READY FOR SCHOOL.

In a few days the schools and colleges will resume work. Mothers are busy getting the children ready. Prospective college students, girls and boys, who are leaving home for the first time, have begun to pack their trunks, although the schools will not open for two or three weeks.

The college buildings have been overhauled and the grounds put in shape. The city school buildings, inside and out, have been made to look fresh and new. The country school buildings have been neglected!

There are, of course, notable exceptions to the neglect of rural school buildings and grounds during vacation. And there are exceptions to the colleges and the city schools that receive proper attention when school is not in session. As a general thing, however, the colleges and city schools seem to fare better in this particular than the rural schools. The reason is obvious. The colleges and city schools have supervisors and janitors who serve by the year. The rural schools have supervisors, or janitors, only while the schools are in session, and what is everybody's business during vacation is nobody's business.

Now is the time to get the young people of rural communities interested in the work of caring for their school buildings. Some older person—if the teacher, all the better—can superintend the work. It is well to let the children do what they can toward making their school building and grounds comfortable, pretty and homelike. The work, in itself, has a valuable educational quality, and in addition to that it gives the young people a sense of ownership and responsibility.

Modern textbooks do not contain it all by a long shot. Children should be able to study clean floors, clean or decorated walls, and grounds that show the sympathetic human touch.

Quite a number of the rural schools of Georgia are keenly alive to the matter of keeping the school buildings and grounds in good shape all the time so that no special spurt will be necessary just before each reopening. Others go through the form of annually getting ready. The indications of general improvement are indeed gratifying. Georgia will continue to move forward in everything that looks to the happiness and the welfare of her children.

GOOD MORNING, ARE YOU WELL?

The humanity of the world is divided into three classes: Well folk, sick folk and convalescents.

Good health is highly prized by those who have, or have had, it.

There are seasons when the jaded get away from their usual work, for a little while, in search of health. At all seasons and in all places there are those who seem to be in search of sickness—not intentionally, but because of thoughtlessness.

The work of the physician, heretofore, has been to cure the sick. His work, hereafter, will be more largely in the direction of giving advice as to the best means of preventing disease, of discovering early symptoms and of advising against bad habits. This will mean more doctors and better doctors.

Most disease is the result of wrong living. A better civilization, a better adjustment of the individual to his environment, means better health. Improved sanitation cannot cure all the ills of a semi-civilized people.

Unfortunately, people who live right are sometimes sick; but bad health is more often the result of wrong living—uncomfortable homes, poor food, bad habits, thriftlessness, discontent, poisonous animosity and the like. Good health, speaking broadly, is mainly a matter of good morals plus a rational mode of living.

Here's to your health!

TO PREVENT THEATER PANICS.

When a panic in a public building occurs, from fire or other cause, the people in the audience seem always to want to get out the way they came in and usually they want to run. This, inevitably, jams the front entrance and is likely to cause unnecessary loss of life, whereas, if all the exits were used and if the people would move deliberately and orderly, serious accident would generally be avoided.

In New York city the authorities have decided that it is possible to teach the people in an audience just what to do when an alarm is given or a panic threatens. Their plan is to print in bold type, on every theater program, just above the names of the cast, the following:

FIRE NOTICE!
LOOK AROUND YOU NOW AND CHOOSE THE EXIT NEAREST YOUR SEAT. IN CASE OF FIRE, WALK—BUT DO NOT RUN TO THAT EXIT. DO NOT TRY TO BEAT YOUR NEIGHBOR TO THE STREET.

Charles H. Cole, fire commissioner of Boston, suggests that it would also be well to have this same notice thrown upon the screen in motion picture houses, at the beginning of every exhibition and then once every hour afterward.

Children are taught in the public schools, by means of fire drills, to move out of a building quietly and orderly when an alarm is given. It seems reasonable to believe, therefore, that a constant reminder would teach an audience to do the sensible thing even under excitement. The value of human life makes the experiment and the effort well worth while.

It's a job to make an American move on when he's holding down the job of president and treasurer of a gold mine in Mexico.

The plumber returns from abroad; the ice man joins the coal trust, and we're all doing as well as possible, under the circumstances.

By reading his messages to congress the president gives that body an opportunity to rest up from admiring its own voice.

La Follette's threat of another two weeks' speech is enough to make congress renew its oath to sleep through the session.

Premier Asquith wouldn't spar with a couple of suffragetting ladies, so they cheerfully mopped the golf grounds with him.

Mrs. Pankhurst is threatening to emigrate to several countries that are now at peace with all the world.

The president being in close touch with congress hasn't facilitated tariff matters so you can notice it.

Governor Blease talks about having been ignored by the administration. That man seems to think he's a national issue.

New York state will be hot for annexation, if it's the only way to get Thaw out of Canada.

"Goodnight and Goodbye."

I.

Sweetheart, the sunlight fades fast from the sky:
Goodnight and Goodbye!
Memory is left in Life's shadows to sigh:
Goodnight and Goodbye!
Sorrow is now the one Voice in the Night
Over the wild dreams that whispered "Delight,"
But sweet is Love's face, dear, though tears dim the sight:
Goodnight and Goodbye!

II.

Sweetheart, a cross unto all lives is given:
Goodnight and Goodbye!
But tears from Love's eyes are as holy as heaven:
Goodnight and Goodbye!
Joy has been with us, and still the light streams
From a Star all undarkened—with beautiful beams;
I love you forever—I kiss you in dreams:
Goodnight and Goodbye!

ROOSEVELT'S ROYAL LINEAGE

By Sam W. Small.

Sam W. Small.

It is rather strange that Collier's Weekly should report Ambassador Walter H. Page as telling the Anglo-Saxon club in London that all our presidents derived the main stock of their blood from the British Isles, excepting only Theodore Roosevelt. Then Collier's whimsically remarks that Teddy "broke the precedent" in that regard quite as defiantly as in some other instances. All of which would be interesting, if true.

In the first place, Martin Van Buren did not owe any of his lineage to the British Isles. He was distinctly Dutch-American, his father being Abraham Van Buren and his mother was Maria Hoes. There was no admixture of any British blood in his genealogy.

In the case of Roosevelt there is quite a tangled skein of bloods. His father, Theodore Roosevelt, was descended from Hollanders who came over to New Amsterdam in the early years of our history. They intermarried with other bloods during the generations preceding, so that the father of "our Teddy" was not pure Dutch by very considerable degrees. He married Martha Bulloch, of Roswell, Georgia, and from them came this Theodore Roosevelt who has alternately turned the U. S. A. upside down and ransacked several other continents, with one other on tap and another—Australasia—to go!

Constant readers of The Constitution will recall that on his accession to the presidency we published the exact and only reliable pedigree of Roosevelt on his mother's side. In that the line was unbrokenly traced from Martha Bulloch back to England and into Scotland. It included that Kenneth Bailey, who came over to Georgia with Oglethorpe as one of his most trusted lieutenants, and through him to the Bailies of Dunaine. They were the line of the Kings of Baliol, who were driven from Scotland for taking sides with the English monarch, and in England changed the name of their house to "the Bailies of Dunaine." But back of them the line led straight to King Robert the Bruce and the Wallace. So that the most casual student of genealogy would have no trouble in deciding that Theodore Roosevelt really derived as much of his main racial stock from the British Isle as did any of our presidents who did not get both parents from purely strained British bloods.

Colonel Roosevelt is justly proud of the lineage that lies back of his mother and freely credits it with many of the elements which have entered into the formation of his own character. Those who were most familiar with his mother in her life-time and who have watched closely the career of her amazing son declare that he shows many of her most pronounced qualities and but few traits that were marked in the personality of his father. Indeed, about the only one of the latter that they identify is his unquestioned financial thrift.

The fact is that to many Colonel Roosevelt is an insoluble psychic puzzle. Unfamiliar with his ancestry, they are not able to identify the genesis of many of his characteristics, or to understand the vibrations of his unequated dual nature. That he is sometimes rabidly radical and then compromisingly conservative; that he can rage like a jungle tiger and then woo like a ring-dove; that he can play like a Tom-boy and then fight like a Boanerges; that he can be as Southron as Ben Tillman and then as Rebel-phobist as ever old Thad Stevens was—are phases of his performances that have caused millions to pivot on the question whether he is some unique super-man, or a sporadic brain-stormer.

Really, he is neither. He is emphatically the son of his mother. He is erratic only when he tries to combat, from sentiment or policy, the nature she gave him. His greatest fights are within himself and his greatest victories, within and without, come to him when he follows the truth, courage, loyalty and humanity with which his royal-bred Southern mother endowed him.

The Real Trouble.

(From The Americus Times-Recorder.)

It should not be forgotten in the fuss and furore that has attended the Frank trial, magnified and even distorted as have been many features as they were handled by the daily press, that the real trouble still exists. The verdict is evidently a popular one, as the reception of it by the crowds outside the court room in Atlanta serves to show. But even had Frank gone free when so many think him guilty, the real peril of the white slave canker still remains and should loom up before every thoughtful man and woman as the vital matter on trial recently in Atlanta.

How many of the men who cheered the verdict were guilty of a similar offense against womanhood, though they had never been summoned before a court for trial? That is the vital point to be considered, that is the menace to womanhood, that is the terrible poison that threatens to permeate the entire social organism and to paralyze it.

The lax moral code of the day is a peril to the home and to the nation. The conditions of modern life seem to nurture and to multiply this evil. The parents in the home are careless of their daughter's moral welfare. The spirit of watchfulness in guarding the home against insiduous foes that come in most pleasing attire has been weakened. When will the people of the nation arouse themselves to the menace that threatens? The Frank case serves as a terrible warning concerning this social cancer.

Don't Complain.

(From The Kansas City Star.)

Have you been coming down every morning for the last three weeks with the observation to the family, "Isn't this just terrible? Don't you suppose it is ever going to end? Life simply isn't worth living." And yet you have been in good health all the time, and you have a good home, with a family and plenty of friends.

Under such circumstances isn't it really rather petty and unreasonable to be complaining steadily? A well person ought to be superior to the weather. It's a mere incident. Watch a normal child before it reaches the age of self-consciousness. It takes the weather as one of the inevitable things and isn't bothered.

That's the way to do. If you take hot and cold weather for granted and don't let yourself fuss about them you will find they really aren't so bad, and you will get on much better.

THE BLOODY WORK OF THE PISTOL-TOTER

Editor Constitution: What shall we do with civilization's man-killer, the pocket pistol? There are in this country sixty-six factories manufacturing these menaces, and in the year 1911 they turned out 3,484,252, and the output is rapidly increasing. These weapons are not made for the public defense or for hunting purposes, but to kill human beings. Is it any wonder that the number of murders are increasing from year to year at such an alarming proportion?

During the past session of the legislature I introduced a bill to make it "unlawful for any person to carry about his person, either concealed or in an open manner, except on his own premises, any kind of metal knucks, dirk, bowie-knife or pocket pistol, the kind that are usually used in private quarrels and brawls, and not such as are ordinarily used as arms of a militiaman or as weapons of war."

If the legislature will enact this into law and make the penalty for its violation a felony with the discretion in the jury or judge to reduce it to a misdemeanor, in exceptional cases, it will go a long ways in checking this evil.

The constitutionality of an act thus worded will be upheld as has been ruled by many courts of last resort, and among them our own supreme court in the Strickland case. The right of the people to keep and bear arms guaranteed by the constitution is a limitation upon the legislative power to enact laws prohibiting the bearing of arms in the militia, but is not a limitation on the legislative power to enact laws prohibiting and punishing the promiscuous carrying of arms for private fights and brawls.

We are active in passing laws for the protection of birds and game, and have sought to outlaw altogether the pump and automatic shotgun as being too destructive to birds and deer. Yet we have never put on the statute book a law prohibiting the carrying of automatic revolvers in an open manner for the purpose of killing men. We have permitted this until we are looked upon by other nations as a nation of murderers. Are birds and squirrels of more value than men and women? We have societies organized and spending large sums of money for the protection of wild life. They appear before every legislature in the country to lobby for the birds and rabbits, but the pistol-toter is to be protected—he only kills men and women.

In my own county white men are going on negroes' bonds to carry pistols, under the license law, and they are one of the most common articles of merchandise now sold in all hardware stores. As long as this continues, how can we expect anything else than to look over the morning papers and find the record of murder after murder? Is it not then high time that we should outlaw the pistol in every conceivable way? I have known three to fall from pockets and fire off in the courthouse in my town, and we have two cripples that were shot by pistols falling on the streets. No man should be permitted to go around with a pistol on his person. There ought to be a putting up of pistols. The citizens of other countries do not carry them, and why should Americans?

HALL DISCUSSES IRRIGATION SYSTEM

Editor Constitution: I am glad to note in a recent issue of The Constitution an interview with Congressman Dudley M. Hughes, stating that the government is preparing to make irrigation experiments in Georgia.

I am rather disappointed, however, in the statement that the water is to be applied through underground clay pipes, instead of making the application by the ordinary method through open ditches and laterals. Any irrigation plant requiring pipes for distribution is more expensive for installation than the old standard open-ditch system, and for general crops, I am sure that the advantages are not commensurate with the added expense.

In all countries where the rainfall is not sufficient for making crops and irrigation is a necessity, the water is applied to the land by means of open canals and laterals. For grain, grasses and alfalfa the water is run out of the laterals by gravity and spread over the land as evenly as possible by experienced workmen. For crops that are planted in furrows, like corn, cotton, beets and sugar cane, the water is run out of the laterals into the furrows, experience being required to get an even distribution.

This is the prevailing system in the arid west, and in India, Egypt, China, Hawaii, Porto Rico and other countries where irrigation is a business proposition. Ten million acres in the United States and forty million acres in India are watered in this manner, and this is the system that is used by the United States reclamation service, the best and most up-to-date irrigation service in existence. It is just as applicable to Georgia as it is to other regions, and there is no reason for trying other more expensive methods of water application until this cheap standard method has been given a fair trial.

Basing my opinion on an irrigation experience of three and a half years in arid New Mexico and adjacent states, where no crops can be raised without irrigation, and two and a half years in southern Porto Rico, where the rainfall is nearly as great as it is in Georgia, but where irrigation is used extensively to make bigger crops, I feel sure that it will pay handsomely in Georgia, to use the same methods. The most favorable locations are the low lands of river and creek valleys having adjacent hill country from which tributaries flow at a higher elevation. In many localities water can be cheaply pumped to higher elevations with large hydraulic rams, and in the flat country of southern Georgia low-lift centrifugal pumps can furnish water economically.

E. M. HALL.

Lost Love.

Who wins his love shall lose her
Who loses her shall gain.
For still the spirit woos her
A soul without a stain;
And Memory still pursues her
With longings not in vain!

He loses her who gains her,
Who watches day by day
The dust of time that stains her,
The griefs that leave her gray,
The flesh that yet enchains her
Whose grace has passed away!

O happier he who gains not
The love some seem to gain;
The joy that custom stains not
Shall still with him remain,
The loveliness that wanes not,
The love that ne'er can wane.

In dreams she grows not older
The land of Dream among,
Though all the world wax colder,
Though all the songs be sung,
In dreams doth he behold her
Still fair and kind and young.

Fighting Against the Mexicans No Easy Task, Says Whitaker

"War with Mexico will not come as a surprise to the soldiers in Uncle Sams army said George Whitaker, leading man of the Emma Bunting company at the Piedmont hotel last night, as I know they have been expecting it for a long time

Mr Whitaker who is here rehearsing for the opening of Miss Bunting's season at the Lyric theater next week was a member of troop K of the Third United States infantry for three years and was stationed for the greater part of that time on the Mexican border

In speaking of the prospects for war Mr Whitaker said

As far as the United States army is concerned for years there has existed between them and the Mexicans nothing less than an armed neutrality

Fighting with the Mexicans however is going to be no easy task and while it must be admitted that the greasers are poor soldiers it is not going to be easy to whip them Like the Indians they will not fight in the open but will conduct all their warfare from ambush

Along the border where of course in case of war the earliest fighting must take place, it is going to be a hard job for the Americans. In the first place that country is little else than a desert and every mesquite bush, clump of chapparal or cactus may conceal a Mexican

During my service as a member of troop K under Captain Hunter we had many a little skirmish with Mexican bandits, for they are little else than that which was never reported and I know from experience that fighting them in that hot climate is going to be no easy task. The Mexicans are inveterate gamblers and those that we boys of third cavalry came in contact with were in addition to this petty thieves and we always had to be on the lookout for them It is so very hot in that country that it is going to be hard for our troops to withstand the climate

Uncle Sams boys however those who have served on the border line won t be sorry if war is declared as they have long had it in for the Mexicans and will be glad of a chance to settle old scores I quite approve however of President Wilsons stand in trying to prevent hostilities

LaGrange to Advertise Itself In Four Corners of the Nation

LaGrange Ga August 30 —(Special)—At a meeting of the publicity committee of the LaGrange chamber of commerce which is composed of T H Nimmons chairman Fly R Callaway H W Caldwell W C Matthews and P E Redding the committees stamp of approval was placed upon the advertising campaign which has been conducted by the chamber of commerce during the past twelve months and plans were laid for the continuance of the campaign on a much larger and broader scale and which because of its scope and magnitude will attract nation wide attention

The newspaper advertising especially has been productive of remarkable results for the town and county New citizens and new business concerns have come into the town and county not only from Georgia but from all parts of the nation

More than a dozen new business concerns have located in LaGrange and fifty to a hundred individuals as a result of the newspaper advertising

During the heighth of the advertising campaign the chamber of commerce received from three to five hundred inquiries a month regarding the town and territory

In addition to retail business concerns and individual citizens which have been moved to LaGrange as a result of the newspaper advertising the organization is now in touch with more than a dozen large manufacturing concerns regarding the removal of their plants from their present location to LaGrange

Vacant Houses Filled

When the campaign of advertising started there were a number of vacant store buildings in the town and any number of vacant residences To day there is not an available vacant storehouse in LaGrange and a dozen or more business firms are doing all in their power to get a business location

And as regards homes the real estate secretary of the chamber of commerce reports not less than twenty five families on the waiting list and this in the face of the fact that since the 1st of January approximately seventy residences have been erected in LaGrange

Many Buildings Erected

Since the beginning of the advertising campaign of the town about nine months ago there have been erected in LaGrange a total of ninety seven buildings including stores factories and residences at a total cost of over $42 00

The advertising campaign has been expensive but the tangible results are on every hand to show that the money has been well spent New citizens are walking the streets who would never have heard of the town new business houses are located and doing good business and several manufacturing plants will certainly be moved as the result of the negotiations generated during the progress of the campaign

Some Concrete Examples

On all sides the people are talking of the unusual results which have accrued from the advertising campaign of the town There have been striking and unanswerable examples of the value of the campaign One day there came into the office a man from Alabama, who said he had seen the advertising of the town and had come to investigate His business was not satisfactory at his existing location and he desired to move His line was needed in LaGrange

He went home and began to pack up and one day arrived back in LaGrange and walked over to one of the banks of the town and deposited $5 000 in cash The next day he bought a home for $3 000 paying cash for same And it so happened that the party from whom he bought the home had a $1 500 mortgage on same which fell due that very day at one of the LaGrange banks this particular bank complaining that they were very short on ready cash The note would have had to be renewed but as a result of this transaction the note was paid and with money from Alabama

Publicity the Watchword

The advertising committee began work this week on several definite publicity propositons They propose to have erected immediately at the depot in LaGrange one of the handsomest electric signs of any town its size in the country

In November the committee proposes that one day at the county fair shall be known as LaGrange advertising day and on that day will be sent out 20 000 pieces of literature about LaGrange to every part of America and advertisements will be inserted in papers and magazines all over the nation calling attention to the fact that this particular day is advertising day for LaGrange the fastest growing city in Georgia

In addition to this the publicity committee of the chamber of commerce commence work at once on a special magazine edition of The LaGrange Reporter which for completeness size and uniqueness of get up will be above anything yet undertaken by any similar paper on a special edition

The committee unanimously agreed to the following propositions First that advertising newspapers and general pays if properly handled second that during the next twelve months LaGrange in its publicity work must set a pace almost impossible for any town its size or larger to follow thus making sure that the reputation the town has gained on account of its work during the past few months should be more than sustained during the next twelve months

SUES G S & F RAILROAD FOR DEATH OF HER SON

Valdosta Ga August 30 —(Special) Suit has been filed by Mrs Rebecca Overstreet in the city court here against the Georgia Southern and Florida railroad for $30 000 for the death of her son William Overstreet, who lost his life last November by a fall from a train Overstreet was killed at a point 4 miles north of this city It is alleged in the petition for damages that he was asleep in the coach when the conductor or flagman came through the car and waking him up informed him that he would have to go into another car as the one he was in was cut off at Valdosta and did not go to the Florida point to which he was a passenger It is claimed that none of the train crew warned the deceased that the train was approaching a sharp curve and that when he stepped on the platform bound to the other car the train struck the curve throwing him headlong from the platform

COTTON IN LOWNDES BADLY HURT BY RAIN

Valdosta Ga August 30 —(Special) Much damage has been done to cotton by the excessive rains of the past week The crop is opening rapidly but rains are preventing the farmers from picking it The staple already open is being beaten into the earth and much of it badly stained. Unless the rains cease within the next few days the bolls will begin to rot and the seeds to sprout Fortunately the heavy rains which are falling here every day have not extended over a wide area and are generally local.

Wyatt declares that all day long and far into the night the animals stamp and bite and kick at each other and that between times they bite and kick the sides of the barn and create an unbearable disturbance He also objects to the stable odors.

Much Comedy About King Manuel's Coming Wedding to Hohenzollern Princess. Farcical Arrangements for Portuguese Royalists to Attend Ceremony

Copyright 1913 by Curtis Brown

Dresden, August 30.—Pleasant Sigmaringen on the peerless Danube is nervous. Its schloss is perturbed. Its second restaurant hens have shed their quills and its blue Danube has the blues. The trouble is the coming wedding of snub nosed ex King Manuel of Portugal with high nosed Princess Augusta Victoria Wilhelmina Antoinetta Mathilda Ludovica Josephina Maria Elizabeth 22 year old daughter of his fat royal highness Prince Wilhelm of Hohenzollern.

All royal marriages make trouble and this royal marriage makes tumult. It has complications of position of politics and of money. Firstly snub nosed Manuel is a king who is no king; secondly the Hohenzollerns of Sigmaringen are royalties who are no royalties. They are kinsmen of Wilhelm II and think themselves higher than him because they are an older branch but they have no kingdom and it is sixty years since they had even a principality. Thirdly Manuel has no money and the Hohenzollerns have. Fourthly there is trouble in Portugal and fifthly there is the Balkan war. Hence Sigmaringen's perturbations, permutations and combinations and telegrams fly all day and night explaining things and explaining the explanations till the telegraph clerks turn as blue as the Danube itself.

She Doesn't Love Manuel

All this over a marriage de convenance. Manuel indeed is truly in love but his Princess Augustina Victoria Amelia Jaime Marie is not and no man knows why she weds snub nosed Manuel when all the world has laughed at his amours, his debts, his bad shots at golf. However, wifeless kings are rare and Manuel's chances to be real king again are not so small. No one in Portugal wants Manuel but the lairds want a change and being bored with the republic they may try a monarchy. And to become a queen is something even if you are a princess of Sigmaringen and rank yourself higher than kaisers.

In such condition trouble was certain. The first trouble was Manuel's claim to kingship. Although Manuel is called a king in polite conversation he is not a king either in court etiquette or law. All states recognize Portugal's republic formally and they cannot recognize Portugal's king. Manuel's chief counsellor the Anglo Portuguese Marquis de Soveral advised him to be married with full royal ceremony. This caused difficulties. The etiquette at minor German courts (such Sigmaringen likes to count itself) is that the local sovereign is superior in rank to any visitor who is below kinship and the court gives the visitor precedence only out of courtesy. The Prince of Hohenzollern is a great stickler for correctitude and he ruled that Manuel is not a king though as bridegroom and guest he might claim the highest possible position. A debate ensued. Frivolous Manuel cared nothing about it. He had exchanged the substance of kingship for pretty Gaby and he is not going to worry his head about the shadow of it. But his advisers backed by an able intermeddling lawyer named Serroes insisted that he should be full king and that the marriage etiquette be royal.

Sturdy Prince Wilhelm of Hohenzollern keen as he is on etiquette wanted to give way. At this moment Lawyer Serroes did a thing that caused trouble. He sent Manuel a typewritten paper declaring that the Prince of Hohenzollern had no right to claim the position of a minor court. The prince lost his sovereignty in 1849 just as scores of other German princes lost theirs in Vienna congress times and so far from being a full royalty like Anhalt or Schaumberg Lippe he is a mere mediatised royalty like the Salmses and Ho enlohes. The question of etiquette was complicated by the relationship of Manuel to his bride. The bride's grandmother was herself a Portuguese princess and a great aunt of Manuel. Manuel in his kindly infantile way showed the typewritten document to Prince Wilhelm and Prince Wilhelm was wroth and told Manuel in future to seek advice only from the Marquis de Soveral who is a gentleman and would not stoop to use a typewriter.

The trouble was allayed by admitting that Manuel should have full royal etiquette at the wedding but should use the title of king of Portugal only informally and be mere king in formal documents. A dispute again raged over this last point because high nosed Princess Augusta Victoria Amelia Jaime Marie insisted that Manuel must be everywhere king of Portugal. She told Manuel to fight and Manuel who always obeys fought. His valor overjoied the Portuguese royalists. They proclaimed in their newspaper that Manuel is keeping up his claim royally—in reality his high nosed bride was doing all the work—and they brought up the question of sending a royalist deputation to Manuel's wedding. At first four members would come to Sigmaringen to make political arrangements in case Manuel should have an heir. Six more were later to arrive and ten would grace the wedding.

Disliked the Prospect.

Prince Wilhelm Hohenzollern disliked this prospect. He felt sure that the royalists who have muddled everything they undertook would muddle this also and would convert the harmless wedding into a royalist demonstration in favor of Manuel as king and Augustina Victoria Amelia Jaime Marie as queen. He asked Manuel to reduce the number. Manuel who agrees with every one said yes but next day he agreed with his high nosed imperative bride who said no. The bride boldly swore that Manuel is anointed King and that the regicide ruffians of Lisbon are beastly usurpers. If Sigmaringen were independent and had an army and navy a royalist demonstration might cause trouble but we are private individuals and shall make what demonstrations we like.

As usual high nosed Princess Augustina Victoria Amelia Jaime Marie got her way. Were it not for Kaiser Wilhelm and Foreign Secretary Jagow she would have kept it. Herr Jagow is as great a stickler for correctitude as is Manuel's future father in law. Kaiser Wilhelm had promised to send a representative of his family to the wedding and he chose Prince Eitel Friedrich because his figure would harmonize with podgy Manuel and sturdy Prince Wilhelm. When Jagow heard of this plan he made protests. Here was Wilhelm II sending his son to a wedding which was nothing but a demonstration against friendly Portugal whose minister resident and plenipotentiary is in our midst. The minister resident and plenipotentiary as a fact took no interest in the affair but Herr Jagow asked him to come round and talk and he talked the minister into ordering a formal protest against Wilhelm II sending any one to represent him at a royalist demonstration.

Gave Him Piece of Her Mind.

Thereon started negotiations Manuel in his kingly kindly way, said he did not care whether the ten royalists came or not but Princess Augustina gave him a piece of her mind and next day Manuel said he did care and he insisted on the ten strife makers coming. For five days the wires to London and Berlin hissed with explanations explanations of explanations protests and protests against protests.

A compromise resulted. The ten distinguished Portuguese were to come to the wedding but they would come as "personal friends of the king" and they would make no demonstrations at all. Princess Augustina, who runs everything—or tries to—agreed to this but the minister resident and plenipotentiary accepted it chillingly and it is not even now certain that Eitel Friedrich will be there.

A wedding which got over difficulties like these, affecting the highest politics should not have been disturbed by anything else. But this was not the last perturbation, permutation and combination in nerve-racked Sigmaringmen. A new trouble was caused by the infantile simple mind which works in Manuel's head. Manuel is not a budding Frederick the Great he has been uncommonly—even for a king—ill educated and his mind runs eternally on inconsiderable trifles. And when the marriage contracts and drafted settlements were being drawn up he raised a momentous question about an ormolu clock.

Bears Portuguese Arms.

The timepiece is in the museum of Sigmaringen schloss and it bears the Portuguese arms. It was thought by Manuel's great aunt in 1861 when she married the late Prince Leopold of Hohenzollern. When Princess Antonia carried off the clock from Portugal she left behind two ormolu candlesticks to match it and Manuel lately brought the candlesticks to his Richmond house. He asked for the clock. High-nosed Princess Augustina Victoria Amelia Jaime Marie backed him up. "I adore ormolu," she said. "It suits my hair." Sturdy Prince Wilhelm wouldn't give up the clock. He said he couldn't because it was tied up in an heirloom trust of which he and his brother, Crown Prince Ferdinand of Roumania are executors and to let it out of the museum would require the execution of a deed. That is impossible because at present Ferdinand of Roumania is executing deeds with half a million men somewhere down Sofia way.

Brooded Over Clock.

This clock took entire possession of Manuel's mind. He brooded on it and cursed the barbarous Balkan war which severs sweethearts from sweethearts and kings from clocks. But more trouble was in store. It arose over clauses in the marriage contract declaring that "neither of the king parties shall be responsible for the debts of the other half." This clause was inserted at the will of high nosed Princess Augustina Victoria Amelia Jaime Marie, who is a thoughtful, circumspect bride and does not want the hard-earned Sigmaringen millions to go in standing drinks to Lusitanian emigres. To this Manuel said nothing. His thoughts were fixed on the ormolu clock. But severe ex-Queen Amelia was wrathful and she threw out a hint that Portuguese Princess Antonia brought the Sigmaringen Hohenzollerns at least twice as much money as they are settling on Augusta Victoria Amelia Jaime Marie.

All round it is a tedious matter settling a royal wedding especially when the royalties are not royal. Some questions are even now not settled, they plague kind vacant minded Manuel and he almost wishes—. How plain in comparison was Gaby who made her own marriage settlements, and when she wanted an ormolu timepiece simply put it in her bag.

LOVE TAKING BACK SEAT IN THE ENGLISH NOVELS

British Publisher Says Tender Passion Now Plays Secondary Part

London August 30.—Love has to take a second place nowadays so far as novels are concerned.

The utterer of this saddening announcement was Andrew Melrose who is rapidly becoming one of the best known of British publishers. For several years past Melrose has offered a prize of $1,250 for the best novel submitted to him an award which for the fourth time in succession has just been won by a woman.

I had been discussing literary tendencies generally with Melrose as evidenced by the manuscripts submitted to him and had demanded if love romantic or otherwise continued to be the main theme of them.

Quite the contrary, the publisher replied comparatively few of our writers take love as their main theme. The love novel which is a love novel and nothing more appears to be going out of fashion. A love interest still handicaps the majority of novels but it takes a secondary place.

An interesting point in connection with our latest competition, Melrose added, is that whereas fully 50 per cent of the novels submitted last year dealt more or less sympathetically with the suffrage question this year none of the novels dealt with that subject. I do not know whether this indicates a decline in the popularity of the suffrage movement or not.

In spite the fact that an American publishing firm has arranged to issue the latest novel by a woman writer to win Melrose's $1,250 I doubt if anything has been published in the United States about "The Lure of the Little Drum" as it is called and its author for I saw Mr. Melrose on the day following the announcement of the result of the competition. The adjudicators by the way were Miss Mary Holmondeley, Joseph Conrad and W. J. Locke.

The authoress of "The Lure of the Little Drum" is Margaret Peterson and it is her first attempt at novel writing. Miss Peterson who is still in her twenties and whose photograph shows her to be exceedingly good looking proves to be a daughter of a former professor of Sanskrit at the Elphinstone college Bombay so it is not surprising to hear that her novel is a story of psychical research dealing with an Indian princess hypnotic influence over a woman, the scene being laid in India where Miss Peterson has lived almost all her life. Her book was chosen for its extraordinarily concentrated interest and Joseph Conrad and W. J. Locke both were struck it seems by its fine dramatic qualities and its harmonious march to a satisfying finale.

Five readers independently chose "The Lure of the Little Drum" as being the best out of the ninety novels submitted, said Mr. Melrose. But it is astonishing in view of the number of people who write nowadays how few novels are really distinguished. A good literary style is exceedingly rare and so is a book that grips the imagination and lingers in the memory.

Educational Chaos in England to Be Attacked

(Copyright 1913 by Burtie Brown.)

London August 30.—The defects of our so called national system of education are two: it is not national and it is not a system.

This scathing indictment of educational conditions in England was drawn not by an agitator or reformer but by J. A. Pease education minister in Asquith's cabinet in introducing in the house of commons a small bill which he promises is only a forerunner of a gigantic scheme of education reform to be introduced next year and which real reformers hope will sweep away the present educational chaos and replace it with a scheme the keynote of which in the words of a London paper will be every man an M. A. Of course no one supposes seriously that every man under the new system will become an M. A. but if the scheme proves to be anything like what the education minister promises every man will have the chance to become an M. A. if he likes with little or no expense to himself or his parents.

The education system of England which J. A. Pease says is not a system at all—is much like a Chinese puzzle. No one but the experts and a few of them know where it begins and where it ends. As a matter of fact there are half a dozen separate systems and they all overlap one another. All are more or less inefficient and wasteful on account of this overlapping and lack of co ordination and most of them are supported more or less by public money.

Surprise to Many People

This statement will be a surprise to many good people who believe that only what are known as the board schools are supported from the public funds but it is a fact that the great public schools including Eton and Harrow and others where the children of dukes are educated are supported chiefly by endowments—bequests of long dead philanthropists for the education of the children of the poor—and that these endowments are so much considered to be public funds that they are under the control of the charities commissioners.

Roughly speaking the schools of England are divided into the following classes:

Elementary schools including the voluntary and provided schools.

Private schools of all grades.

Secondary schools including the great public schools.

Above these of course are the universities training colleges and various professional schools.

As far as the great majority of the youth of England are concerned however only the elementary schools exist. The law says that every child must begin attending school at 5 years of age and continue until 14 and this law is fairly well enforced. The elementary schools of England and Wales—the systems in Ireland and Scotland are quite different and are not included in the scope of this article—contained 6,075,024 children in the year 1911-12. These elementary schools as already stated are divided into two classes provided and voluntary and this division has been the cause of much of the backwardness in English education. To explain this division it is necessary to repeat a little history.

When the Church Controlled

Originally all education in England was in the hands of the church. Before the reformation the monks did what little teaching was done and after the monasteries were suppressed the parson also acted as schoolmaster. Then as the desire for education spread, regular schools were started by the chuach in which the teaching was strictly confined to the three Rs and the catechims.

Gradually however it was realized that this system was inadequate and school boards were established in the various vestries or parishes still more or less under ecclesiastical influence and in 1902 the school boards were abolished and the work of elementary education was given to the county councils. The church schools however still exist and they are what are officially known as voluntary schools the significance of voluntary being that they are supported by voluntary contributions, small bequests and endowments. The provided schools are the county council schools which are supported by rates or local taxes supplemented by meagre grants from the imperial exchequer.

The standard of the church schools is low. They still confine themselves to teaching the three Rs and the catechism. The standard of the provided schools varies in every county. In London for instance the county council schools leave little to be desired. The curriculum is wide the teaching is good and the buildings are excellent and splendidly equipped. In some of the rural counties the provided schools are no better than the church schools and under the present state of the law the national authorities can do nothing to bring backward county education authorities up to the scratch. In many districts effort is wasted by the maintenance of two schools voluntary and provided when only one is required.

Defeated by Religious Prejudices.

Many efforts have been made to get rid of this overlapping but all have been defeated by the religious prejudices of the parents. The church people insist on church of England teaching for their children and they get it—if little else—in the church schools. The non conformists will not have it and insist on what they call non sectarian or even secular teaching. The Roman Catholics of course have their own schools which on the whole are very good.

This system accounts for the elementary and in most cases the whole education of the children of the poor. In one of the counties maintain secondary schools at which fees are charged and to which poor children may pass by winning scholarships and there are even a limited number of university scholarships available to council school pupils but it is fair to say that as a general rule the education of the English child of working class parents is finished when he passes out of the elementary school at 14.

For the child of middle class parents there is a great variety of schools—mostly bad. It is no exaggeration to say that as far as education is concerned the working class child in London is better off than the child of middle class parents. The working class child has the excellent county council schools and if he is clever the chance of winning a scholarship and going on to the university. English snobbery which is a very real thing and which few parents have the courage to defy decrees that the middle class child must go to a private school where his father pays for his education.

About many of the private schools said the education minister in introducing his bill there is a meager air of social distinction which is not without its charm for parents of a certain type.

Education Is Inefficient.

Most fathers can't pay much and the education is correspondingly inefficient. The rich who can afford to pay of course get good schools but the number of people who can pay $1,000 a year for a boy at Eton or Harrow is limited. The same applies to the universities. In England, at least, most of the universities are the preserves of the well-to-do. A poor boy cannot work his way through college as in the overseas dominions or in the United States or even in Scotland and Ireland. There is nothing for him to work at and if he tried he would lose caste among his fellow students.

Of course any reform in this chaotic system means money and lots of it. The education minister did not shirk this issue in outlining his proposals. He said that reform would be expensive but he did not say how expensive reserving that for next year when the considered scheme will be laid before parliament. In the year 1911-12 the public expenditure on education in England and Wales was nearly $150,000,000. Of this about half was raised by local taxation and the other half consisted of imperial grants. It is admitted that the local taxpayer cannot stand much increase of his burden and that any increase will have to come from the national funds. Since 1902 the local expenditure has increased by about $17,500,000 and the national grants by only $5,000,000. In future said Pease these rates of increase must be reversed.

Very Much in the Air

Of course the new scheme is very much in the air as yet and there is no doubt that the education minister seized the opportunity to foreshadow it so long in advance of its actual introduction in order that he might have the benefit of suggestions and criticism. One of the probable features will be the raising of the school age to 16 and this has already roused a storm of protest from the British working man who has never been able to understand why he should be deprived of the money earning services of able bodied boys of ten or twelve and compelled to allow them to waste their time on what he considers such a useless thing as education. Criticism from another source is aroused by the proposal to extend the feeding of school children to Sundays and holiday time and to make it compulsory on the education authorities instead of merely permissive as at present. Some time ago it was realized that it was no use trying to educate children who were so insufficiently nourished that their bodies as well as their brains were starved and the local authorities were allowed to provide breakfasts and dinners for the children on school days. Now it is being realized that starving is no more beneficial on Sundays and holidays than on school days but the superior persons who see in this speon feeding of the people the beginning of socialism and many other terrible things are talking wildly about weakening the parents responsibility and all the rest of it.

Comprehensive Survey Wanted.

Other features of the legislation to be proposed next year said the minister for education are that the government should take power to make a comprehensive survey of educational institutions of every kind that an obligation should be imposed upon local authorities to provide intermediate education for all who desired, it and that there should be co ordination of such provision between authorities to prevent overlapping and waste. The government proposals will impose upon the council of every county and county borough the duty of providing for the development and maintenance of a complete progressive system of education in their area.

It will further impose on them the children during the latters years of their elementary school life opportunities of obtaining instruction of a more advanced character. For that purpose the resources of the authorities will be extended by removing the limit imposed by the act of 1902 on the amount that might be raised by way of rates for the purposes of higher education. To secure co-ordination it will be the duty of the board of education to review the schemes made by authorities for those purposes so as to secure the maximum of economy and efficiency with the minimum of waste and so as to give the fullest effect to the provision made by the lesser authorities in virtue of their concurrent powers.

With the same object it is proposed to facilitate the establishment of advisory provincial councils in grouped areas who will be empowered to undertake any administrative duties which the authorities may see fit to delegate to them. Problems of more than local interest such as the creation and management of training colleges the control of examinations and to co ordination work in higher technical schools and universities with the work of the secondary school may fall within the province of the provincial councils.

To Decide What Is Education

The board of education will take power to prohibit or limit the exercises of powers for higher education by the smaller authorities and conversely to raise where necessary, the larger boroughs or urban districts to complete autonomy. The board of education will take power to decide what is and what is not education. They will confer powers upon local authorities to provide baths, playing fields and nursery schools, and will simplify the procedure in connection with obtaining sites for schools.

The omission in this scheme which has aroused much criticism is the provision of better pay for teachers. The teachers in the elementary schools now are miserably underpaid and this is being reflected in the increasing difficulty of obtaining recruits. In England for instance 64.8 per cent of the head teachers receive less than $1,000 a year while 3.17 per cent receive less than $600. 72.80 per cent assistant male teachers receive between $600 and $1,000 and 64.56 per cent of the assistant women teachers are paid less than $600 a year. These figures apply to certificated teachers while the uncertificated teachers of course fare much worse. 73.03 per cent of the male assistants and 78.53 per cent of the women receiving between $250 and $375. The average salary of male certificated head teachers is $880 and of men assistants $685 while the figures for women are $615 for head teachers and $450 for assistants. In Wales the average figures are men $740 and $575, and women $560 and $480.

LONG DISTANCE DANCING DONE BY QUEEN MARY

She Revives Old Rule at Court Ball and Everybody Is Bored

London August 28.—As society would not do anything to make the last week of the season gay the king and queen gave a court ball. But it could scarcely be called a success and has been much discussed ever since. It was intimated that when the queen danced no one else must take the floor and as her majesty danced nearly every dance most of the guests stood in gazing amazement or loafing around not knowing what to do.

Some who did not comprehend the new etiquette joined in the dancing but were tipped with a golden wand by Major Crichton one of the gentlemen ushers, and requested to desist. These were quite furious and had a lot to say afterwards not by any means nice. But people could not be blamed for not understanding, for the very good reason that it is an old fashioned rule revived. The present generation of dancers never remembers what took place in the days of the late Queen Victoria or Queen Alexandra, who had long ceased to perform round dances when she came to the throne.

Now and again Queen Mary who is a really fine waltzer came back to the dais and then the general guests got their chance poor things. It was on these occasions one could see how much the son and daughter of the American ambassador were enjoying themselves dancing together. They appeared to know very few in the room and suggested that the whole thing was very different from anything they had ever before seen though the experience was amusing.

The Battenberg princes looked decidedly bored as they had so few opportunities of asking any of the pretty girls in society on whom they are so keen to be their partners but Prince Arthur of Connaught had the time of his life dancing every other dance with his fiancée and her sister. This caused many heartburnings as for years he was in the habit of leading out pretty society women.

By the way when the queen honors a man by dancing with him it is she and not he who gives the invitation and this rule holds good also in the case of princesses. People are saying if her majesty is wise she will rescind this rule of not allowing any one but members of the royal family to dance when she does. Very grave offense is being given and she is making enemies fast and furious by her attitude which is not appreciated by even the most loyal.

"TOLSTOI OF ENGLAND" GETS TERM IN PRISON

Charles Granville Must Serve Fifteen Months at Hard Labor

London August 31.—It is rather an odd and none too happy a coincidence that just as we have been hearing from Russia that several of Tolstoi's favorite proteges have gone more or less to the dogs a gifted writer in this country who was known as the English Tolstoi should have been shown up in the courts as an out and-out bad lot and eventually been sentenced to fifteen months hard labor.

The writer in question was known in the literary world here as Charles Granville though his real name proves to be Hosken and under that name he wrote and published several clever novels. He was a member of the Authors club too and a while back tried his luck in the publishing business. It was his generosity as a publisher—foolish generosity many declared—that earned him the title of the English Tolstoi and altogether he was looked upon as a man of blameless character.

Yet Granville or Hosken was found guilty on unmistakable evidence, of having twice committed bigamy and of having defrauded two persons of a sum amounting to nearly $20,000. There were other charges too but they were not proceeded with as the legal phrase goes. The author publisher who is 46 was first married to a Miss Taylor in 1892 and six years later managed to get $10,000 out of his father in law who never saw his money again. In 1905 under the name of James Hosken made his first bigamous marriage, his victim being a widow named Parker whom he married at a registry office. Mrs. Parker was a teacher by profession and a woman of high character yet Hosken in court had the effrontery to declare that he went through the ceremony of marriage while under a drug administered by her a charge which was disproved up to the hilt. Three years later he "married another another widow named Fawcett in Portobello Scotland. Mrs. Fawcett had some means and Hoskens appears to have lived with and on her until last October when he betook himself to Tangier in the company of a young woman. Meanwhile, the English Tolstoi had applied to his own use a check for $7,500 handed him by a man named Walker in payment for shares in a publishing company which Hoskens had launched and utilizing these funds he seems to have had a fine time on the continent visiting Paris, Copenhagen and Cairo and eventually Tangier where he was arrested by a Scotland Yard detective.

Hosken was found guilty on all the charges brought. Among the witnesses for the defense was A. R. Orage editor of The New Age who described Hosken as a man of commanding abilities and stated that he (Orage) had been he first to christen him the English Tolstoi.

Consider a Moment the Man In the Tower; He Is a Hero Unheralded and Unsung

Were it not for the Tower man, accidents like this would be more numerous than they are

The man in the Tower is a hero of everyday life; but he'd be the last to suspect himself of heroism.

By Britt Craig.

The man in the tower a hero unknown except among his fellows'

He is a plain everyday sort of fellow, with nothing of the dash and ginger that mark the heroes of the gridiron and the battlefield But few know him and fewer care He is just a cog in the powerful machinery of the railroad--a mere cog among countless others

The engineer holds our lives at stake with a jab this way or that of his throttle The policeman protects us from harm of all kind The fireman safeguards us from peril of a blazing home The public hero of any type is a man with whom we all are familiar

We know the engineer and feel a sense of envy every time his overalled form climbs down from his cab The policeman is omnipresent Who is there of us who does not admire the fireman?

They all are of the type that can strut before the public eye and bask in the sunshine of praise and admiration We know them and their duties and we therefore realize the dangers they face and the absolute necessity of their presence at times

Man in Tower Man of Mystery.

It is different with the man in the tower

He works unknown, unnoticed among the mechanism that safeguards the railroad yards of the big city No laurels come his way, no bouquets He breaks into the limelight only when a slip of his brain or hand sends a trainload of human freight into a swift and crashing death at an unguarded switch

You might glimpse his face at times as your train whizzes by his shack of a tower and you see his features pressed against the window. It is only the face of the switchman or the flagman of your train, the same kind of face you see everywhere about the railroads There is nothing extraordinary about it except for the abundance of gray about his temples—gray that is not without its cause

He is only a cog, but a more important cog never went into the mechanism of the modern railway He is only a minor part and portion of the scheme of operation of the big roads that traverse our continent and send us anywhere there is soil enough on which to lay two rails But without that minor part and portion, the road of today could hardly exist, and we would fear for our lives each time we boarded a string of cars

A slip of his finger would spell a terrible toll of death A moment's nap would drive your train headlong into another A second's carelessness would plunge you and your fellow passengers into an open switch and eternity His finger is upon your destiny as you travel A press this way, you speed safely by A press that way and you are hurled to the grave

History Is Crimson With Carelessness.

History is crimson with the mistakes of men in the tower Pages are devoted to the terrible numbers of dead and injured that were hauled from beneath the splintered wrecks of trains that rushed into unguarded switches or obstructed spurs.

Yet, there are not three lines of the same record attributed to the heroism or these cogs of a railway system. Carnegie medals are distributed over every caste of professional, and still are in the process of distribution But, produce a man of the tower with a medal on his breast and you will produce a man who won it for a feat performed outside his duty.

The public never knows of the bravery of these controllers of a traveling public's fate It is rare that even the superintendent of their branch ever knows it. Quite often even their fellow worker is unaware of it. It is nothing to boast of, nothing to exploit Just an instant turn of a handle here, a pull at another there, and an imperiled train leaps swiftly along the path of safety

Perhaps, as you speed along the mystic maze of tracks and switches of the city railroad yards, you marvel at what mechanical genius guides your train so swiftly along its route Other trains sweep past at a rate tempting death Miles of tracks stretch before you like furrows in prairie land

Countless trains and engines hum among each other like a nest of bees rung from their hive It is choice food for wonderment what hand it is that holds death in check as we whiz through these fields of peril. It is the hand of the man in the tower—the hand that moves a hundred trains and engines over his territory as though they were pawns upon a board

Scores of Switches Under His Control.

His job requires the alertness of the prizefighter, the stamina of the marathon runner, the mathematics of the bank clerk, and the energy of the race horse That is the kind of man who clings to the thread of your lives as you race through the network of tracks and switches of the railroad yards.

He is as thoroughly acquainted with the thousand-and-one switches as the average man would be with his own bedroom It would require absolute familiarity with a cross-over switch one mile distant in order to send a flying express train over the main line barely a second after its path was cleared of a toddling switch engine

A careless towerman would be equally as disastrous as a drunkard In the days of the lever system he had to be as muscular as he was alert, as powerful as he was accurate. Exceptional strength was required to slide a switch a mile away purely on muscular power

The heavy switches, frogs and bars weighed from 1,500 to 2,000 pounds. In setting a lengthy cross-over, the towerman, in the lever period, dragged as much as thirty tons of steel in setting a single switch. Eight hours of this kind of labor evidently did not leave him any too energetic

But this system, like the age of the stone hatchet and knife of flint, has gone the way of methods crude It has been replaced by the more effective and expeditious interlocking system, operated by electricity and compressed air The possibility of accidents, too, has been lessened to an appreciable extent

The interlocking method is controlled from a central point—the tower -by electricity and compressed air The shift of a switch releases the air pressure, which, flowing into the pump at a switch sets the two bands of steel into position Where a decade ago, a physical giant was required to set a nearby switch, a child of 6 can now operate switches as far as three miles away.

Miles of Trackage Under His Control.

From his tower, the operator controls an amount of trackage, which, if strung in a single line, would extend miles and miles The Terminal station yards, for instance, would likely reach beyond Stone Mountain There are at least 200 switches, all of which are in constant use It is required of each operator to be unmistakably acquainted with the route of each train that traverses his ground, each engine on switch duty, and a volume of schedules that would fill a young library

He must, at all times, be able to clear the course of an incoming or outgoing train at a moment's notice He must be able to figure in a flash how to send a delayed switch engine across the path of an incoming passenger train barely in time to avoid collision, so as to expedite the handling of yard or accumulated freight and to cope with freight schedule.

Like a general of war, he is required to know the exact position at every moment of each engine, each car, each train within his territory His staff is the intricate interlocking system, his men the rolling stock within the yards The safety and efficiency of the yards, that heart of every railroad, depends as much upon the thoroughness of the switch system as any other factor in its entire makeup

The towermen are usually recruited from the ranks of the telegraph operator, station agent and yardmen For the most part, they are young, energetic men of steady habits, steadier nerves and a clean past. They are housekeepers as capable as they are managers of the thousand destinies under their protection

The switch tower is a small place, about the size of the country station agent's office. It is as spick and span as a new dishpan and as neat as a pin

The huge interlocking switchboard has more the appearance of a show case than anything else. Small handles, like the knobs on office vaults, protrude from the top of the case. Beneath are the locks that dance about like puppets at the touch of a switch.

Recently Photographer Price and a reporter visited the central tower in the Terminal yards where Towerman Orris O'Kelly was on duty A regular city of tracks spread out on all sides, populated by hundreds of noisy trains and cars An electric buzzing and sizzling came from the bowels of the switchboard, and a telegraph instrument chattered in spasms over in the corner.

Bells rang, bells of all kinds and sounds. The operator danced along the side of his board like an officer among the ranks of his fighters.

It was a scene that amazed ever the reporter and photographer They requested a demonstration. Operator O'Kelly demonstrated.

"You see the smoke away over there in the west. That's the N. Y A. & O. limited. She's a minute-thirty off the board. You can gauge her speed by the delay. She'll take track 61, that one over in the center, the one the switch engine's crossing."

"But how's the switch engine going to get across before the train comes along?"

Looks Simple, But It's Far From It.

"Oh, that's easy. The limited'll be along in twelve (meaning seconds) and it'll take the engine only two to hike out of the cross-over. Watch now I'll close the cross-over the minute the engine pulls free."

The tender of the switch locomotive was rattling over the frogs. The shiny brass of the limited's engine was gleaming in the sunlight. The rear trucks of the first engine had cleared the cross-over. The operator jerked out a handle from the switchboard labeled "61" There was an accompanying clatter of tumblers as they fell into place.

A white semaphore from an iron box at the side of the cross-over rose into the air. The limited charged across with a clickety-click. In a second it had flashed past the switch-tower and was swallowed in the monster opening of the Terminal shed.

The reporter and photographer had stood and looked on breathlessly. One or the other stammered:

"How often a day do you have to pull such stuff as that?

"Oh, just eight hours a day. The unions won't permit any more."

And, folks, that's your man in the tower, the one big hero of every-day life—a man who has doubtlessly protected the life of every person who reads this story.

THE "PROFIT" of KENNESAW MOUNTAIN

From Louvale to Luverne; A First Road Experience

When Keith Carson signed up to take a line of shoes in Georgia and Alabama territory, he had an idea that the only real "easy" thing in life had come his way, and he got aboard.

Keith Carson, by the way, resides in Leary, and is a shy, timid young man of most pleasing manner and address, and to be with him for a very little while warms the heart, for he is also very kind and gentle, and extracts orders from the trade very much after the manner of the "painless dentist." (?)

Feeling that road life was the smooth, easy existence, Mr. Carson mapped out his route. He found that two very poetical names appeared in the list of towns, and being of a poetical nature, he decided that Louvale should be his first point in Georgia and Luverne his next point (which is in Alabama). So after checking his baggage to Louvale he sat in the smoker dreaming of the nice order that he would get at Louvale. At last, about 6:30 p. m., the porter called, "Louvale! All out for Louvale." Hurrying out to the platform he looked up the road and all around, and only one small house was in sight. Asking the station agent where the town was, he was informed that there was no town, but that 2 miles up the road was the store of the man he wanted to see. Rushing to the conductor he asked him to take his trunks back on. The conductor said: "I haven't time; all aboard," and was gone.

Carson asked the agent how to get to Louvale, and was told to take a path through the woods and he would save half a mile and keep walking till he saw a store about 2 miles from the depot. He started out, and in due time arrived at the store, just as the man was closing up, and in the meantime "darkness descended and night came on."

The man he called to see said "that he did not want to buy any shoes, anyway, but that I could spend the night at his house and leave there the next afternoon, as the next train came by at 3 a. m., and he would have to flag it with a newspaper on fire, so Carson said: "Well, I will go back to the depot and stay with the agent, and take that train, as I can't wait till tomorrow evening to get away, and I must have an order of some kind from you so that my house will know that I am at work."

"Well," said the merchant, "send me six dozen shoes like this and that and—" etc. In the meantime "more darkness had come on and more night had descended" as he started for the depot.

Carrying his heavy grip the journey back through the woods and over that 2 miles of "patch" was begun. The grip referred to as heavy was at first merely a light suit case, but after the first mile it began to get exceedingly heavy, and before the last mile was passed it weighed exactly 100 pounds.

In order to show that he was not "afraid" he whistled merrily for "quite a spell" as they say, until he saw before him an unusually dark patch of woods, and he stopped and began to walk easy, for fear of waking someone, but mostly for fear of waking "something." Just as he was going under some limbs that met over the path a rabbit jumped from beside the road and ran in front of him. Said rabbit was as large as a calf, and made a crashing noise like a lion, as he "tore through the underbrush," and as Carson's hair rose straight up and lifted off his hat he made a "rushing noise" like unto a foot-race until the depot was reached.

There he found the agent gone to bed, and quite a bit more of "night had come on and more darkness descended." Carson awoke the agent and told him he had to stay there for the night and have some supper. Mrs. Agent prepared him one fried "eggs" and some hoecake, and made a shake down in the kitchen, which was one of the three rooms occupied by the family of six. Putting the alarm clock near, he was soon asleep, and soon awoke, as the clock told him it was 3 a. m. Getting up he went to the depot, and after an hour's wait the train for Luverne came along in a leisurely manner. Lighting the newspaper he flagged it down and told the conductor his destination, which was reached about 6 a. m., "just as the dawn's rosy fingers began to paint delicate tracing amongst twinkling stars," and rabbits resumed their normal size.

Before he got off the train he asked the conductor if he was acquainted in that section and could tell him if Luverne was a village, city or town, and if it were a town that happened to be contagious and adjacent to the depot, or if it lay a Sabbath day's journey from the railroad, that could only be reached by punching a path 2 miles long by 6 inches wide?

The conductor told him that Luverne was a beautiful town, progressive and wide-awake, and that he had learned this from a man two years before, who lived there, and had come to the station to see a train. And that as his train had never happened to break down there he had never had occasion to verify it by walking 3 miles and 8-4 over to the town. As the train stopped the conductor came up and prepared to tell him goodby, asking for his name and address to report to the general passenger agent to show that he had gotten off at this station in case he was not heard of again. And also to have a record of the fact that one passenger in eight months had stopped there, so that the citizens of Luverne would have no grounds to appeal to the railroad commission to build them a new station.

Keith Carson gazed a moment into the tear-filled eyes of the kind conductor, and in a choking voice said: "Will you let me go on to Montgomery with you? I am a new traveling man. I have never been this far from home before, and I got very lonesome last night at Louvale, and I will get "more lonesome" at Luverne. Will you take me on to Montgomery with you, so I can get a ticket back to Leary? And don't misunderstand me; I love traveling on the road, and I am "plumb foolish" about this drummer job, but I know I have appendicitis, and my brother Joe is down with typhoid, Sam is laid up from meeting an ax with his foot while cutting wood. I know I am needed at home, and I have a perfectly lovely job waiting for me as section hand on the X. Y. & Z. R. R., and I am fond of healthy work, you understand, work where folks are. I never did like a job that took me out away in the woods alone at night, among all kinds of wild beasts."

The kind conductor pressed his hand, and lead him to a seat and said: "Yes, I know how it is, son. I'll take you back, but what do you want me to do with your trunks?"

"Cap, you know where we cross the Chattahoochee at Eufaula? Just drop them off as you go over that trestle."

But he didn't; he tried again, and, like all those who keep a trying, he succeeded and made good.

MAKING BIG RECORD.

Dry Goods Salesman Is Making Fine Showing for First Year.

P. H. Jeter, the well-known dry goods and notions salesman, passed an important mile post last week. Mr. Jeter is now in the midst of his first year as a salesman for an Atlanta house. Previously connected with a Lynchburg house, many people thought he would find it a little harder sledding when he joined the force of John Silvey & Co. However, he passed the hundred thousand sales mark for the year last week, and with the big business which he is yet sure to get, he is certain to go far beyond the biggest year he ever had before.

This is an interesting sidelight on the popularity of the goods handled by the Atlanta jobbers and shows that the salesman who registers "Atlanta" is probably making bigger sales than the one who writes the name of some other city after his signature in "mine host's" diary.

"EVERY BIT HELPS," SAYS E. F. MALONE

Capital City Tobacco Co. Man Offers Suggestion Which the Atlanta Jobbers Should Carefully Consider.

In an interview the other day E. F. Malone, of the Capital City Tobacco company, made a suggestion which is worthy of careful consideration by every Atlanta jobber who is sincere in his statement that he wants to boost the Atlanta market.

"I have often thought," said Mr. Malone, "that there is one apparent little matter which, if carefully considered by the Atlanta jobbers, would result in big benefit to the whole of us. That is, that we should all endeavor to patronize the merchants who patronize us. For instance, I wonder how many men who are themselves engaged in the wholesale business here think for a moment of giving the preference to the brands of cigars which are handled by we Atlanta tobacco jobbers? Of course, I naturally think of cigars first, but it can be applied to every line. Let us stick to the cigar business for an example, however, as I know more about it than any other. Take Mr. Rambo here, with John Silvey & Co., or Mr. Little, of the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company, or Mr. Brown, of Brown, Perryman & Greene Co., or Mr. Williamson, of Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, or any of the other hundreds of men engaged in the jobbing business here. How many of them, I wonder, ever take the trouble to inquire even as to who jobs the cigars they buy from the retailers? Yet, when they buy cigars which are sold "direct from manufacturer to consumer" from Tampa, or Key West or somewhere or other, aren't they simply placing ammunition in the hands of people who are working to boost their own towns at the expense of Atlanta, if need be?

"I would like to see all us jobbers enter into an agreement that whenever we need anything for our personal use we shall give the preference, whenever possible, to those goods which are either manufactured in Atlanta or at least handled by Atlanta jobbers. We shall thus be encouraging our fellow business men in the city and the total amount will be surprising if we all go into the idea with all the force we can."

Mr. Malone's idea is well worth deep study, and every business man who is swelling the slogan, "Buy in Atlanta," should make a note of the suggestion contained herein, and act as his conscience prompts him.

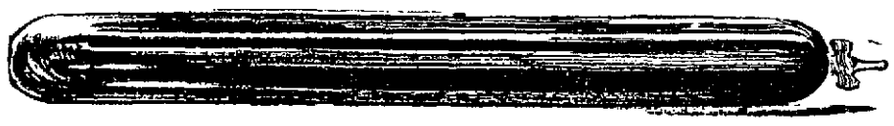
Read "The Poison Belt"

By A. CONAN DOYLE
Creator of Sherlock Holmes

Begins In THE SUNDAY CONSTITUTION
September 7—NEXT SUNDAY

"The Stillness and Silence of Universal Death— * * Challenger breathed two or three times with Enormous Gulps."

The Greatest Modern Mystery Masterpiece Ever Published In Any Newspaper



IT COST $5,000.00

"WE ARE ALL POISONED"

"The earth has swum into the poison belt of ether and is now flying through it at the rate of many millions of miles a minute."

So declared Professor Challenger, the strangest and most fascinating of all the many characters created by the famous writer, A. Conan Doyle, whose $5,000 story, "The Poison Belt," will begin in The Sunday Constitution September 7.

Professor Challenger was seated on the table in his study, swinging his legs as he spoke. His coal black beard and shaggy thatch of coal black hair seemed to intensify the light that flashed from his eyes. For he was in deadly earnest. He, the world's greatest scientist, was positive that the world was rapidly hurrying to destruction.

Around Challenger stood the three men who had accompanied him on his exploration of the Lost World in South America. You may remember the story. It set the world agog and won for A. Conan Doyle the title of Master of Modern Fiction.

They were Professor Summerlee, a sour, crabbed old Scotchman. Himself a scientist of renown, he pooh-poohed Challenger's statements and ridiculed his theories. But he was always convinced in the end. Then came Lord John Roxton, a powerfully built man of iron nerve, famed as a crack shot, all around sportsman and gentleman adventurer. Last, the chronicler of events, Robert Malone, the star man of The London Daily Gazette.

These three men hung upon every word Professor Challenger spoke. They knew he talked fact, not fiction; knew he had made good too many times to be doubted long. They had all been summoned by telegrams which curtly read, 'Bring Oxygen. Challenger."

Why on earth had he bothered them to buy tanks of oxygen and then bring them to his home outside of London? Why hadn't he ordered the stuff direct from the supply houses? What did he want it for, anyway? Was there to be another wonderful revelation in which only the four should participate? Or had he planned another of his practical jokes in which he took such a fiendish delight?

What had the sudden blurring of Frauenhofer's lines of the spectrum to do with the sudden illness of the natives of Sumatra? Cablegrams had been received in London stating that the island was in the grip of a terrible malady that mowed down man and beast before it. Was it the end of things?

Why did people act so queer? Malone, though paying strict attention to what Professor Challenger was saying, found his mind wandering at those intervals when Summerlee interrupted. He recalled the antics of Summerlee's chauffeur. The man was an expert at driving a motor car. Yet that day he had very nearly killed them all by his apparent lack of control of the wheel.

And Summerlee, the dry and austere man of science, who had ridden on the same train with Roxton and Malone to Challenger's home: why had he been so quarrelsome, and why had he insisted on imitating a crowing rooster and a barking dog?

Why had Roxton, who was usually so silent, insisted on telling a silly story about a wounded buffalo and an Indian prince. It had no beginning and no end. And Malone, the keen listener and infrequent speaker, why had he told and retold that football yarn and then sobbed and sobbed like an hysterical woman?

Were people going mad? Malone's train of thought was interrupted by Challenger's voice, which boomed like an organ. He was just concluding the story of his queer actions of that morning. He told how he, the wonderful man of science, the man of enormous brain and will power, had thought it decidedly funny to crawl under the dining room table and bite the foot of Martha, the staid old housekeeper.

What on earth was wrong? Was there anything in Challenger's statement, "We are all poisoned?" Was the earth really swinging into a belt of ether different from that which usually enveloped it while in its regular orbit? And was this belt of ether poisonous?

Did death await them? Perhaps that was why he had ordered the three men to bring him the oxygen instead of sending for it. He wanted not only the life-saving gas, but his comrades as well. Malone was staggered at his thoughts. Were the four of them to witness the sudden devastation of the world by poisonous ether and with the aid of the oxygen live and look on a sight never before seen by mortal eyes?

Professor Challenger was still swinging his legs as he sat on the table. The three men to whom he spoke looked at one another and shuddered at the sudden realization of what the professor meant. Were they near the end of things? And, as if in answer to their thought, the professor replied, "We are assisting at a tremendous and awful function. It is, in my opinion, the end of the world."

If you delight in reading a story that is entertaining, slightly amusing and at all times instructive. If you delight in losing your own personality in that of one of several unusual characters, don't fail to read "The Poison Belt." It is beyond any doubt the greatest mystery masterpiece of modern times. To get it complete, subscribe now for The Sunday Constitution. The first installment will appear next Sunday and generous installments will be published every Sunday until the end. To miss the opening chapters would be like entering a theater after a great play had begun.

You will hang upon every word. You will be impatient for Sunday to come around and with it the next installment. For in this story you will not be an outsider, a stranger. No! So skillfully does A. Conan Doyle pen his mysteries that the reader becomes one another and shuddered at the sudden realization of what the pro- makes hairbreadth escapes.

And when the end has been reached, you will have not only spent many pleasant hours in a wonderland, but you will have learned the answer to many riddles which you have been unable to solve. A. Conan Doyle's knowledge of science enables him to weave facts with fiction so as to instruct at the same time he entertains.

Be sure to start reading "The Poison Belt" with the first installment which will appear

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 7th

and every Sunday thereafter until the story is finished.

If you are not a subscriber become one immediately. Write or telephone while you think of it.

New and Beautiful Suits in Special Display Monday

Some of them have not been shown before. Those that have been seen have been called charming.

The wide variety of new suits here, including such high-class models as Beller's Wooltex and Picadilly's are priced from $20 to $75. The materials are Bengaline cloth, chiffon broadcloth, duvetyne, eponge, matelasse, velour cloth and other fashionable fabrics.

There are serviceable cloths for utility; there are delicate fabrics for very dressy occasions. Conservative designs for those who look best in them; there are girlish, youthful styles for those who have the temperament that suits them.

High Distinction of Styles

The average of charm, of distinction, in the new styles is higher than ever before.

And good looks are by no means the only merit in the new suit fashions. Even the beauty-loving, volatile woman who courts what is fascinating in dress will succumb to the tailored suit, for dressy occasions, for walking, for travel, for sports.

Some Important Style Features

Coats are nearly all in cutaway effect, short in front, long in the back, with draped or two-tiered skirts. Some suits have collar and cuffs of cut velvet, embroidered cloth or tapestry fabric. Many are copied from foreign models and are as handsome and well tailored as could be.

The more elegant and dressy suits are fur trimmed.

About Colors

So much has been said about colors, one might think that to be in fashion this coming season one must be arrayed like Solomon in all his glory, plus Joseph's coat.

But have no fear. There is a refinement of art as well as the courage of art, and the blending of the season's color tones is remarkably artistic. Even those that are gay are not garish, and there are many conservative colors for those who prefer them.

Must Be Seen to Be Appreciated

It is impossible to do justice to the real beauty and charm of the new suits in telling you of them, for mere words are poor raiment for the impression one gets in going through the display here.

So we want to show them to you Monday—or any day this week.

Dame Fashion's Dress Secrets for Autumn Are Mirrored in the Salons of Women's Apparel Here

All the latest innovations of fabric and designing—including the Leg-o'-Mutton sleeve in afternoon frocks.

And how graceful and pretty are the softly clinging crepe meteor, charmeuse and messaline of these early fall dresses. Subdued shades for street, such as the new browns, duck blue, bronze or olive, green, taupe, navy or black, with high crushed girdles, sometimes of queer Oriental coloring; white net vests and effective lace touches on collar or blouse.

Draperies Galore

Skirt draperies in delightful, new fashions are cleverly indicated. Some hint of the simple, "tucked up" idea, others are wrapped about in almost turban-like multiplicity of folds.

There are new dresses here for street, for afternoon, for evening, for all occasions. You will enjoy seeing them! We will enjoy showing them to you!!

Prices range from $25 to $100.

The Early Autumn Hats Are Black Velvet or Satin

Such an appearance of lightness, however, do they give in their trimmings that one forgets they are velvet and sees only the distinctive note they give to light-colored costumes.

Take, for example, a small jaunty shape with soft crown and flared brim of lace, as illustrated. Or a black velvet hat with a high swirl of black moire ribbon, and on the very top a large poised butterfly of black net. Or a new Talbot sailor with long curved quills.

Any number of new and stylish models are here for your consideration, and prices begin as low as $5.00.

Beautiful Dress Fabrics for Fall

Plan your fall costume as an artist paints a picture.

The artist conceives his painting in simple elements. He sees first the big things, the important features, leaving the detail till later.

In planning your costume or suit the first thing to consider is the fabric. It is the important element—the very foundation of style and wear. Choose it for beauty of weave and luster and color and for adaptability.

Moire Wool Poplin

Is a new and elegant silk-and-wool material which will be very popular for smart costumes. It is superb of quality, weave and finish. To be had here in the new eggplant shade, Copenhagen, golden brown, black, wistaria and Alice blue; 42 inches wide; $2.00 yard.

New Silks Arriving Daily

Among the latest received are exquisite brocaded crepes de chine; yellow, Copenhagen, navy, black and white; 40 inches wide; $1.75 yard.

Pompadour Satin Taffeta, dark or light ground with pink rose design; 36 inches wide; $1.50 yard.

Monday--A Sale of Little Black Silk Coats at $3.00

They Were Made to Sell at $7.50

Already the autumn chill of the early morning is being felt, reminding one that a light silk coat is needed.

This shipment of smart little wraps—bought to sell at $7.50, was belated, and we have priced them for quick selling Monday at $3.00. They are very jaunty and becoming little coats, cutaway effect, very short in front—of black silk poplin, with white crepe de chine collars and cuffs. They will go quickly to those who come first tomorrow morning.

A "Handing Out" of New Long White Kid Gloves at $1.98

They have just come and are priced for quick selling Monday at much less than such gloves usually bring. Beautiful gloves, of fine, soft, glace kid; 16-button length; white only—for Monday at $1.98 pair.

Silk-Boot Hose, a Special Sale at 50c Pair

Hose of good wearing value, high spliced heels; silk-boot, lisle top; black, tan, white, bronze, pink, smoke and sky; priced for selling Monday at 50c pair.

Knitted Silk Auto Scarfs

Priced at $1.25 and $2.25.

Toreador Sashes

Quite the latest thing! These are pretty and will no doubt be very popular. Of Roman stripe or plaid silk in rich colorings, also solid colors: Green, cerise, taupe and black; they have knotted and fringed ends.

Priced $2 to $5.

Observe What You May Buy in THE DOWN STAIRS SECTION

These are the days when we "clean house." Stocks must be sold NOW—shelves must be cleared.

Moving the goods is far more important than making profits.

Fall and winter merchandise—a new season's production is, partly in the house, more on the way. Room must be made for it.

And wise shoppers watch for announcements of these clearance sales—the price reductions all round with the same reward in view as stock and bondholders watch for declarations of dividends.

All that remains of Women's Summer apparel is ordered out Monday at prices that seem absurdly low.

White Pique Skirts at 49c $1.00 Values

$10.95 Is the Special Price for These New Wool Suits

The First Showing of Wool Suits in THE DOWN-STAIRS SECTION.

As we intended, they are the best suits we have ever offered for so low a price. In fact, they would sell just as quickly for a considerably higher price—but we bought them specially for this initial display in the new Down-Stairs Store—and so have marked them at this special price. You will readily agree they are the best suits you ever saw at such a price.

The illustration shows the attractive and becoming style. But what is more pleasing still is the quality of materials, the linings and the good tailoring. Some of the suits of men's wear serge in navy or black, cutaway coats lined with Skinner's satin, which is guaranteed for two seasons' wear. Others are of Bedford cord, in navy and Copenhagen blues, taupe, brown and black; coats lined with good yarn-died satin. There are all sizes, and a most unusual opportunity for those who wish a good, inexpensive suit.

$1.50 for Women's Two-Piece Suits—Values to $15.00

Some of the suits were earlier priced even higher than that, but we say up to $15—a conservative estimate. Good two-piece coat suits of pure linen, crash, ratine and pique; tans, blues and white—such suits as one would like to carry over to another season. You may choose from a good assortment tomorrow at $1.00 each.

40 White Lingerie Dresses, Worth up to $8.50 Are Priced at $1.95

Think of it! $1.95 for dainty little white dresses which earlier in the season would have cost you from $5 to $8.50. They are prettily made and trimmed; some have little touches of blue or black intermingled. Only about forty all told. They will not long remain at this price.

$1.95 for Colored Dresses, Values $6.75 to $10

Here is a collection of good dresses, of such materials as linen, pique and ratine, a variety of kinds—good washable fabrics and colors, and good styles which make them desirable to carry over to the next season, when they may be had at such a price as this, for Monday—$1.95.

Beautiful Bamboo Baskets—all kinds for fruits and flowers. China department. See them Monday.

Fall Beauty—Rich Colors And Artful Designing

Exhibited In New Ready-to-Wear at ALLEN'S

A change of season brings renewed beauty. Just as the limitless loveliness of summer is brilliantly enhanced by the approach of autumn with its high colors, so nature, as ever the example of man, directs the deeper harmonies of the Fall in Fashions. This autumn 'tis more strictly followed in the forest shades of green and brown and the varying shades of reds and yellows. There's even a crude resemblance in the natural unfinished effect we have before us in the roughly woven fabrics. Such is the sentiment so far suggested in the early Fall Suits and Silks, and one should, indeed, feel grateful that so much consideration for the wearer is shown in the plan. It is as though she had been painted in the picture.

At Allen's you may find the highest touch of the art, the highest authority in the fashioning. We deal only with the best manufacturers, modistes and milliners in this country and Europe. Our progressive experience has enabled us to realize the needs—and we make it a rule to anticipate the ideals of our customers. That's why you always find what you like at Allen's.

Women's and Misses' New Tailor Made Suits

Broadcloths, Plain Serges, Cords and Rough Weaves—Oh, all the new and exceptionally pleasing fall fabrics are here. In some, the cuffs and collars are trimmed with velvet turned back to allow pink satin to peep out. In others fur is used as a trimming on collars and cuffs. This gives a quaint and artistic finish.

Black and white stripes and checks vie with the solid colors for favor, and combination suits—black coats and checked skirts—are also shown. A special feature in these new tailor-made suits is the new draped effects in the skirts. There is seemingly no end to the many different ways of draping, both in the front and in the back, and the effect is especially pleasing. While not bizarre, there is not one of these suits which once seen would be soon forgotten. Priced at Beck-Batterton.

The marriage of Miss Margaret Beck and Mr L B Batterton was a beautiful event yesterday, taking place at the home of the bride's parents, Judge and Mrs Marcus Beck.

Artistic simplicity and the intimate spirit of a wedding company limited to the family party, with a few close friends, marked the occasion

Dr W W Landrum was the minister officiating, and the only attendants were Miss Rachel Beck and Mr L Bissel

The bride wore her traveling costume, a brocade cloth in blue and gray with a black hat, her corsage bouquet of bride roses

The maid of honor was gowned in white, and Mrs Beck wore black satin

Mrs W J Ellis, the bride's grandmother Miss Ellis and Miss Wallace, of Forsyth were out-of-town guests

The scene of the ceremony was the large living room, and the back ground for the bridal group was an effective arrangement of palms, out of which rose three Russian candelabra, the seven branch stands burning white candles At each side were bursts of white flowers Smilax was a mural decoration and pink and lavender and white bloomasters, hardy hydrangeas and hoses were masses of delicate color on the mantel and in window recesses

The entrance hall leading to the living room was glowing in late summer yellows, the brilliant hues of marigolds and goldenglow and sunflowers harmonizing with the prevailing brown of woodwork and furnishings

The porch was picturesque with hanging baskets trailing their delicate green, with wall pockets of nasturtiums and marigolds and jardinieres of ferns and of sunflowers

Refreshments were served from the dining room which found its decorative motif in the reds and yellows of nasturtiums and marigolds

Mr and Mrs Batterton left on their wedding trip for his former home in South Dakota and returning they will have an apartment in the Rossin

Their marriage centered a cordial social interest The bride is pronouncedly pretty and attractive and Mr Batterton who represents the Washburn-Crosby Co has made many friends here during his several years residence in Atlanta

Advance Showing Of Fall Apparel

Stunning and Original Effects In Millinery, Suits and Dresses

Fashion's demand for clever new ideas and more original effects is attractively represented by our alluring display of early Fall offerings. The styles are strikingly varied, and the rich tone colorings happily replace the flaring gaudiness of past seasons.

A special feature of our Millinery Department is the display of "Chapeaux Francais" Hats This celebrated manufacturer is an old Fifth Avenue favorite; and his offerings are always true representations of the most favored Paris models These models are imported direct from Paris, and are faithfully copied in hand-blocked shapes. And, being made by hand, they are preferable to much of the flimsy patterns put out by the French Milliners. The new soft and semi-soft crowns are being shown in rich shades of plush and finest silk velvet. We are showing about one hundred other styles in small and medium shapes

Hat Trimmings for this season are also unusually attractive Black will be worn more than ever before Butterfly effects in malines and nets are good. Bright Ribbons, Wings, Feather Bands, Paradise and Paradise effects are exceedingly popular, as are also the fancy Ostrich Stick-Ups.

Tunics and Draped effects predominate the Dress styles. Fine, soft textures in rich and bewildering colorings are being shown Plum, wistaria, black, taupe and navy are the favorites. Many new cutaway effects, with side or front draped skirts, are shown in our display of Serge Suits.

Our Prices Average

½ Less on Millinery

⅓ Less on Suits and Dresses

And even at these prices, we make no charge for alterations.

Our operating expenses are so small, and our business is done on a cash basis, so at all times we are able to save our friends many dollars on their purchases. If you are a regular customer here, you KNOW this. If not, we would like the opportunity to PROVE it to you.

Is Society in Atlanta as Full of Vice As Our Country Sister Has Pictured It?

A LETTER THAT BURNS AND AN ANSWER TO SOOTHE

By Isma Dooly

STUDENTS of Life tell us that human nature is the same the world over. They tell us that in their relations with one another men and women are very much the same in the high builded city—in the remote rural community. Statistics prove that in comparison of population, the matter of crime is no more confined to the slums of the large city than to the community, which, because of isolation, has none of the dangers of the city. The court records in certain counties of Georgia prove that.

True, the capital city of Georgia has been shocked recently in the criminal cases of two women, who shot their husbands. Neither was a native of the city, but it is no use to charge that coming to the city made them criminals, any more than the conditions of the beautiful mountain community, near Gainesville, Ga., can be censured for the murder which has placed a woman in jail there for life. Nor can the progressive town of Millen be blamed in any sense for the fact that a woman there the other day shot down a man whom she had divorced and the woman he chose subsequently to marry. Crime is not confined to any race, nation or element of people, but is a calamity which may break out at any time, anywhere, among any element of people.

Are City Women Failing in Duty?

Recently, letters have come to me which indicate the idea that the women of the city are failing in the sense of the reform work which women are naturally expected to do. One of these letters so duplicates the idea frequently expressed in this direction, that I publish it (unsigned) that I may answer not only this particular writer, but the others who are laboring under the same impressions.

They are ideas which, if held, will obstruct that union which should exist at this moment, between all the women of the state—those living in the peaceful valley of the rural community, and those struggling with the complex problems of city life.

Following is the letter:

Editor Woman's Department:

(1) Your article in The Atlanta Constitution on the womanly virtues of Mrs. John ——, of ——, was very interesting, and it affords food for thought to others, who will give it the attention I have—just a plain country woman. Is it possible these womanly traits are so few that it attracts the attention and gets into print?

(2) It is a great work, our noble club women are doing to extend knowledge and science into the rural home, uplifting the country mother to a higher plane of intelligence.

Don't you think, though, they are remiss in their duty to society in its present day modes of pleasure? What great good would they accomplish if they followed the example of the woman mentioned in the article above?

(3) The country mother plods from sun to sun, a helpmate to her husband, endeavoring to follow the example taught by our Savior. While the leading women of our cities, by their intelligence and influence are leading the young to sin and perdition. It is time they were stopping in their mad rush for fame, and pleasure, to look and think.

(4) I guarantee, if six of the most prominent women of Atlanta today, would band together to exclude wine, cards and modern dances, from their entertainments, it would not be long until others followed, and these vices would be forgotten. Our cities need these good women!

(5) So let them, then, be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate—
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait.

Respectfully,
MRS. ——, Ga.

Will Answer All Questions.

I have marked the letter into paragraphs, subdivided, so I can not be accused of evading any of the questions asked. I am going to answer them directly. I do not intend what I write as a defense of the city women at large whose spirit of philanthrophy is questioned. They need no defense. The record of their work is too often seen marked on the corner stones of Atlanta's charitable institutions which are as warmly hospitable to the child of the "plain country woman" as to the child of the hardworked city woman. Their names are on the lips of the girl of the night school, who knows who her benefactors have been, and their names are indelibly put on the hearts of many a man, woman and child who suffers this moment in the hospitals, in the jails, in the needy homes of this and other Georgia cities and communities.

Why Virtues Are Exploited.

Paragraph (1) You graciously commend, dear madam, the article which attracted your attention, and which referred to the womanly virtues of a prominent woman from a sister state. The article was not written by me, but by an authorized correspondent of The Constitution writing from a resort frequented by women from all parts of the south. Taking your word for it, the article provided "food for thought" as well as "attracting your attention," which then and there, provided the newspaper value of the article, which was to attract the paper's readers and please them.

The correspondent followed the direct policy of the Woman's Department of The Constitution which is constructive; which is to please women; to exploit them in the fullness of their accomplishment, whether it be in their social graces; in their philanthropies, in their culture clubs, in their political aspirations, or in their activities in the mothers' congress work which is to inform the woman, womanly or unwomanly, wherever she may be. The correspondent was writing about the little world of the summer resort, and she consistently selected the woman about whom the most admirations seemed to center. That woman was one who possessed the social graces, which proceed just as directly from the heart as the graces which find their expression in woman's work in the church, in the school or in the mission society.

This woman is well poised, therefore gracious and graceful in manner and I here remind you that poise is as dependent on spirit and mind, as on physical culture. She is considerate of old and young. She does not carp at, and ignores the hen-minded, gnat-spirited women who sit against the wall and tell all they know about the rooster-hearted, red-faced man on the other side of the room. The womanly woman is so tolerant of even these people, that the aforesaid lady leaves off her muttered fault-findings to her neighbor, and begins to see in more miniature form the awful aspects of turkey trotting, which is no worse, as a popular pastime in the minds of some, than unchaperoned buggy riding is in the minds of others.

It seems that this womanly woman whom I chance to know very well (the one singled out by our correspondent) was so much the one who saw the good and the joyous in the life of that place that she brought that atmosphere with her. She was a continued protection to those who needed it, and everybody wanted to know her, and came to know her.

I claim that to single out such a woman and exploit her presents a good lesson in the recreative part of life—call it society or what you will. Such a woman is the inspiration that leads others to see God's creatures and their virtues as He intended them to be seen.

To exploit her as the woman most marked at the place, indicated this is the type most acceptable to all. She is in every community, in every gathering. Find her, and follow her example, and you will be the better for it!

Look for the Good.

To exploit the good is the principle moving the best institutions of this period of civilization.

For instance, the daily papers of Atlanta have devoted pages in the last few months to the splendid welfare work for operatives being done in a large industrial institution of this city, where men, women, boys and girls are employed. The result has been that the good work being exploited has brought on more like it, and in nearly every institution of the kind in Atlanta work for the betterment of conditions surrounding employees, is on foot.

The individual who stands for the good, the institution representing the good, and the people making for both—they are the subjects to be exploited. Whether they appear on the sky line of my endeavor, in the form of the womanly woman, in the very ballroom of social pastime, or just as a womanly woman doing her part in the dairy of her happy farm home, I intend to reach out and exploit her, as an inspiring example to the world at large.

About the Club Woman's Work.

Paragraph (2) of your letter, dear madame, contains a deserved tribute to groups of very worthy women, when you say: "It is a great work our noble women are doing to extend knowledge and science into the rural home, uplifting the country mother to a higher plane of intelligence. Don't you think, though, they are remiss in their duty to society in its present day modes of pleasure?"

To the first sentence of this paragraph, I answer, "yes—thrice yes." To the question contained in the second sentence I answer "No." In both cases, I can justify my answers.

When I agree with you in your reference to the great work of the noble club women, I must add that I do not think they deserve any undue credit for what they are doing. They are simply fulfilling the requirements of the twentieth century call which is for organization and co-operation.

With the inspiration they have of the great spirits which are leading them and becoming more influential each day, they would be reprehensibly laggard, if they were not trying to acquire knowledge and science for the better working out of their own part of civilization, and certainly they would be antagonistic to all principles of progress if they did not try to extend the results of their work into every community in the state whether it be in the rural district, in the small town near that district, or in the congested center of the very town in which each and every club woman may have to be.

I grant you, madam, that the rural women who live near that beautiful and modern little town in which you live, probably not only do not need help from their organized sisters, but probably can help them with the work they are trying to do for those who do need it. Not long ago I had the good fortune to motor through your town, being told of its beauty and prosperity by a patriotic Georgian who knew of it.

I saw every opportunity for the man and woman there to make that place a model, and I feel sure that the rural women who live near you can exploit conditions in their homes, in their dairies, that will lead us to worry less about the millions of dollars which go out of Georgia each year for butter. I feel sure that the cattle near there is well sheltered, and not as I have seen in it certain other parts of rural Georgia, and I trust that the Girls' Canning clubs down there, will measure up well with those in other parts of the state.

Now, maybe it would be interesting to you and others to know why the club women first became interested in extending whatever comes to them in the way of advantages to the sister of the rural parts.

How Club Women Do Their Work.

Some years ago, when the state health board of Georgia began their active campaign to eradicate from Georgia certain diseases which were due to insanitary conditions, polluted soil, and other diseases, the state board said the trouble was traceable to improper, badly prepared foods. The women of the Georgia Federation asked the health board, "What can we do to help you in the conservation of health in our state?" They did not ask how can we help you to save the "rural child," or the "city child;" they just asked for the privilege of helping the board in its work in the state.

The reply which came from the wise and studious man, the mouthpiece of the board, was; "start a campaign for teaching the women in the state to cook; and how to rid their home of flies; and how to look after the milk."

The crusade began in the city and women of the city did not feel affronted when they were told this; they knew that they did not themselves know how to cook properly though they are right in the heart of a city which affords the latest equipment for the perfect kitchen. They knew that mortality from typhoid fever and similar diseases had been frightfully on the increase; they were told flies were breeders of this, and they realized that they must do something to warrant a milk supply which would be pure. They went to work and got teachers to talk to them on the subject; they started a campaign against flies; distributed literature on the subject, and attended the meetings of the dairymen's association. They had medical authorities lecture them at their clubs, and it was their duty when they were reaching out to get this that they try to extend the fruits of their study to their rural sisters who did not have the same advantages. They were still further convinced of this, when subsequently an appeal came from the authorities of the college of agriculture asking the organized women of Georgia to aid them to get an appropriation which would warrant women teachers going out with the men teachers who were carrying the message of practical agriculture to the farmers of the state, that the farmers' wives might hear the last word in the progress of farm life as it related to them. And it seemed rational that when the farmer was receiving helpful instructions, his wife should receive it too.

Then leading men of the church, preachers who had served their time on country missions, plead with the organized women of the state—"help the woman who is far from the city to make her home better. She has not the chance that you have."

The club women of Georgia then began their appeal that domestic science be taught in the common schools of the state everywhere, that there might be better homes everywhere.

Now, to answer the question: Are not the club women remiss in their duty to society in its present day modes of pleasure?

I don't know whether you mean "society," in the broad sense of the "world at large," or whether you mean that contingent of leisure people in all communities whose social pastimes and recreative sports are of general interest. I take it you mean the latter, and I presume the pleasures popularly include dancing, cards, the theater, the opera, swimming, rowing, athletic sports, etc. Then there are music, picture shows, motor races, baseball, etc. Suppose all of these are barred from the youth of the community, what would you have them do during their recreative times?

What would you suggest their pleasures be?

I believe dancing is by many considered the most reprehensible of pleasures. As more of it is chronicled as taking place in the city, and as the modern dance most attacked now is the turkey trot, a harmless, graceless dance. I will pass on with just this suggestion.

Buggy Riding Versus Turkey Trotting.

When Miss Dorothy Sweet danced the turkey trot with young Algernon Swift the other night until both of them were out of breath, they were being chaperoned by some hundred or more people, who claimed dancing was good exercise. Over in the rural community near by, little Susie Jones had started early in the morning in a buggy with Bill Wright the village cut-up, and had ridden miles with him alone to camp meeting. She returned with him late that evening. They had been alone all day; no one chaperoned them, yet it would be the base man or woman who would claim that in any way Susie's good conduct should be questioned, or Bill's either. I claim the same consideration for Dorothy Sweet and Algernon Swift in the modern dance (their parents and grandparents sit by and see.

Paragraph (3). You note the praiseworthy attitude of the country mother who plods from "sun to sun a helpmate to her husband, endeavoring to follow the example taught by our Savior."

Permit me to say that the country woman with her plodding can not be a better help mate than thousands of city women I know, for the helpmate of the city finds her duties as such, more involved, more complex, forced along many more lines. Frequently she has not only the duties of her home, and the care of her children, but she has some of the responsibility of the homes and children who are unfortunate, and have no one to look after them. It would be the selfish woman indeed who would plod so closely in her own individual sphere, that she did not hear the call of the helpless child at the door, in the slums or in the orphan asylum, and if she did not let her maternity extend beyond her own fireside.

No more beautiful picture is presented in the new scripture, than our Savior when He said "suffer little children to come unto Me," and the great masters of art have portrayed Him seated and around Him, little ones gathered.

I do not think He made the address to individual women about their individual children, but I think He intended it for universal motherhood directed toward humanity.

The City Woman As Helpmate.

That is the interpretation of the city mothers I know best, put upon the sacred scriptural word, and they have founded and established every kind of institution to meet the needs of the little child. Nearly every institution in Fulton county for the help of humanity has been promoted and made possible through the efforts of the women.

Through a group of splendid women, two women are employed to meet every railroad train that comes into Atlanta, that these women may be ready to offer protection and care to the untutored girl who is entering the city for the first time, and may not know what the angles of the new life may lead to. In another institution, directed by women helpmates of Atlanta's best citizens, unfortunate young women are harbored, many of whom have been led away from the standards of honor, even in the retreats of the peaceful rural valley, before they knew the temptations of city life, and asked shelter there. For, I reiterate what I said in the beginning of this article, "that human nature is the same the world over."

Again it is a group of women helpmates who have established and are carrying on most successfully the Young Woman's Christian Association home, where young women can live and pay for their board and lodging, and have the comfort, protection and inspiring influence which proceeds from the interest of "intelligent, influential women."

Now, about these you mention, who are leading the young to "sin and perdition." I can't account for them. I do not know who they are or where they are. I have known the women who frequent the balls, receptions and entertainments of the society about which so much is said by the people who know it not. I have not seen these women leaders "to sin and perdition." I have gone with the women I met at such festivities, to visit the hospitals where all kinds of women lie and suffer, but I have seen not the female vultures you describe. I have gone to the institution for every form of charity, in my professional vocation for the paper on which I work for my daily bread. I have gone to the jails and talked to the women sentenced there, and I have noticed always in helpful attitude women of the class you call "intelligent and influential," doing all in their power to help the young and lead them upward—onward.

I know there is the woman of the street, she whom the Divine Teacher listened to, and said "Go and sin no more," but she is not a product common to the city any more than the community farther away. Her spirit unfortunately, shadows every place where the human family finds itself, and all that the helpmates of the city can do about her, is to open to her whenever they can, the door of hope, and extend to her the woman's hand to help, and that I know many "intelligent influential women" do.

We Have Them By the Thousand.

In paragraph (4). Your guarantee, that if six of the most prominent women in Atlanta could band together to exclude wine, cards and modern dances from their entertainment others would follow, and these vices would be forgotten. Our cities need these good women.

Why, we have them by the thousands—women who do not serve wine at their tables, who do not play cards, who do not indulge in the modern dances, and who probably wield an influence in that direction upon others. But what right has any one to call these the vices of society? Everybody may not consider temperate wine drinking, harmless card playing, and dancing as coming under the head of vices.

Temperance is a call civilization, as well as religion, makes upon the human family. Excess is always to be deplored and is a vice, but it is idle, untrue, to assume that because individuals are excessive, that all the people in the community in which they are, encourage vice.

A band of six women maintaining their standards and setting good example will always make for good, but when it comes to their construing as vicious the actions of other people who happen not to believe as they do, that is irrational. To attempt to coerce in this direction would be as officious and intolerant in spirit as if they went into another community and cried "stop your scandalous back biting and censoring; stop your tobacco-chewing and snuff-dipping," for these latter indulgences if carried to excess are certainly vices.

And Now Let Us Pull Together.

In paragraph (5) I quote with you:

"So let them then be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate,
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait."

Let us not assume that right-doing is incumbent upon the women of the city any more than it is the woman of the country, both "plodding," in their different ways, as helpmates, "from sun to sun."

Let us be up and doing together: let us here in Georgia, pull together—all women of the state, for state betterment. We will have to "labor and to wait," before much which we know we ought to have will come to us.

Since we are all naturally expected to be reformers, let us get together, we women of Georgia, and see why it is that our great commonwealth stubbornly refuses to raise the age of consent law from ten years. Think of it! I shall not go into the discussion of this. Suffice it to say, that every state in the union has raised the age except Georgia.

As helpmate, as the mother of the child, find out why in the community in which you live, the lawmakers are opposed to raising the age. Call the attention of your pastor to it, for surely the women of Georgia will not have to wage this campaign, unhelped by the men of God, who fill the pulpits in Georgia, who preach the gospel of righteousness, who uphold the moral law, and stand for the virtue of society.

AFTER THOUGHTS OF A SUMMER VACATION

There are two kinds of vacations: One turns the mind out to graze; the other pampers it for a season with extra and special nourishment. And it is just a question what the object is, whether the stall-fed process or the other is the more effective.

But surely there is more of lasting treasure to be gotten out of the unexpected bed of clover when it is munched leisurely or eagerly, just as sweet, clover, than as needed nourishment.

At Battery Park.

There is Asheville, N. C., for instance, a city grown around a pleasure resort. The Battery Park hotel is the apex of it, and you could sit on the porch there and look over the panorama spread out and around you—a view than which there are surely few more wonderful—and you could meditate on municipal histories and the altruistic spirit which you are told is the spirit of Asheville. But you don't, if you are having the right kind of vacation. You just breathe in the air and drink in the sunset, and harbor them if you can for future health and memories.

The rich colors of the passing sun on the right, reflected even against the white pinnacles of Biltmore away over on the hills to the left, soon fade into paler lights, and you see the mists rise between the cool gray mountains away yonder in front of you; the lights of Asheville begin to show below you, and when you come back from your supper—even scenery does not make you miss your meals at Battery Park, because the mountain air is laden with inevitable appetite—there is the young moon hung right up on one end before you, and attendant Jupiter is close by. Music floats out from behind you, and if the rise and growth of cities or the altruistic municipal spirit is the thought uppermost in your mind, "you should worry."

The Lure of the Place.

Among the debutante belles this season who made part of the popularity of the Friday night dances at Battery Park were young girls whose mothers had known their first experience of summer resort life at Battery Park; mothers who return that their daughters may "grow up with the country." The pleasure of this younger generation is, however, not circumscribed by the social activity of the hotel alone, bright as it is, but the social life of Asheville merges with it, Asheville people seeming to regard the Battery Park as their social center in much of the same way that other cities look to their country clubs.

"On the Broad High Road."

It is conspicuous, too, on the high road from everywhere, its visitors drawn from every section. A stranger entering the dining room would wonder at the number of faces apparently familiar until they grew up to know their owners and found them men of achievement from everywhere whose photographs in magazines and newspapers have made them nationally known.

At Biltmore.

Mr. and Mrs. George Vanderbilt and their little daughter have spent quite a considerable part of the summer on their wonderfully beatiuful estate, "Biltmore," and their guests from time to time, among whom are Asheville people, have been entertained; also, at their lodge on Mt. Pisgah, which is clearly outlined and not so many miles from the front terrace of the Battery Park.

Biltmore parties ferry across the French Broad river (the estate lies along both sides) to the Pisgah road, and the ferry landing marks one of the most romantic spots in Biltmore, every inch of which finds nature at her best and the landscape artist missing no opportunity.

The high points of Biltmore's beauty are all the casual tourist has time to touch upon, but even then he carries away with him a strong impression of the practical foundation which underlies this beauty.

The farming is not merely ornamental. It is proving the value of the land and what it can be made to yield. The dairies are not only supplying Asheville and the surrounding country with the finest certified milk and other dairy products, all under the careful supervision of bacteriologists who have their pretty homes on the estate, but the highest type of cattle are bred there, and the homes of the dairy farm people are models of neatness and charm.

So complete is Biltmore as a country home that when an ebony-hued coachman from the Biltmore stables, who took the usual pride of his race in "our" chicken farm and "our" dairy, was asked if there was a golf course in Biltmore, he looked crest-fallen only a moment that it should lack anything, and answered, "Yes'm, I guess they'se got one at the house."

Nature's Hostelry.

Grove Park Inn, probably the most talked of hotel in the south today, excites the two-fold interest of Atlanta visitors in Asheville. First, because it is a structure so thoroughly unique, and then for the reason that it is doubtless "Atlanta-made." It must have been evolved in the mind of Mr. F. L. Seely when he was still a citizen of Atlanta, for he went at once to Asheville, after leaving Atlanta, to hew out of the North Carolina mountains this rare structure, its principal material great boulders which have been set in place according to a plan so cunning as to appear without artificial plan and yet to preserve a peculiar symmetry.

An Ibsen Setting.

"The Hall of a Mountain King" the great lobby might well be called, and the orchestra around a rich toned piano seemed to make their surroundings articulate when they played "Elsa's Dream" and Grieg's "Peer Gynt" suite.

The lighting is according to an invisible system, so that it almost seems to come through the openings between the rocks, and even the elevators continue the mountain illusion, simulating grottos.

Gray in its softest, most reposeful tones, is the prevailing color in decoration, with just enough of warmer hues to avoid monotony, and the bedroom suites harmonize with wonderful effectiveness the demands of a beauty which is reserved and refined to the point of severity, and of a cleanly daintiness which apparently could not be marred.

Sunset mountain is the background of the inn, and the long terrace in front has the country club golf links for a "front yard" with Sunset Park, Asheville and the mountains beyond.

After Vacation Peel Your Discolored Skin

(From Broadway Weekly)

Women returning from the seaside with browned, reddened or freckled complexions will be wise in immediately taking up the mercolized wax treatment Weatherbeaten skin had best come off, for no amount of beautifying will ever make such skin pretty to look at The surest, safest, easiest way to shed the despoiled cuticle is with the treatment suggested Put the wax on before retiring, as you would cold cream and rinse it off next morning with warm water Minute particles of scarf skin will peel off day by day, gradually showing the healthy youthful skin beneath One ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, is enough to make any discolored or spotted complexion clear, white and satiny soft Its action is so gentle no injury is caused and the face shows no trace of its use

Burning heat, irritating winds and dirt are such wrinkle-makers that the daily use of the following astringent-tonic lotion at this season is highly advisable Powdered saxolite, 1 oz, dissolved in witch hazel, ½ pt. Used as a face bath this is a splendid wrinkle remover and preventive—adv.

FAMOUS ACTRESS LOSES 70 LBS. OF FAT

Texas Guinan, Star of the "Passing Show" Company, Offers Her Own Marvelous New Treatment to Fat Folks

NEW TREATMENT GIVES ELEGANCE OF FIGURE AND STARTLING RESULTS QUICKLY

If You Are Fat and Want to Be Thin, You Can Reduce as Many Pounds as You Desire By This Astonishing New Method

As Texas Guinan had to perform at the matinee it seemed the easiest thing in the world to arrange an interview without consulting her The vigilant stage doorkeeper was easily passed The dressing room was hospitably turned open by a maid, and then—well Miss Guinan that is who is left of her appeared

"So you have come to learn the story of my weight reduction have you?" said Texas in her breezy style with her glorious countenance beaming in smiles at her supreme gladness realizing how appreciative the world was in bestowing admiration and applause upon her all on account of the new glory of her form which she had formed almost as if by magic with her own marvelous new treatment

While you are not going to give away with my secret" said Texas It is true that my seventy pounds of weight reduction was brought about with my own delightful treatment but it cost me a pretty sum of money to learn of it and I am not giving my secret of how I lost my weight free to reporters but I have written a book telling all about this wondrous new treatment which rescued me from the thralldom of fat This book has just come off the press and is offered free to fat burdened men and women, as I early learned in life that the only learned in life that the ONLY WAY TO KNOW HAPPINESS WAS TO GIVE IT TO OTHERS and if by letting the world know of this harmless quick method of reducing my weight I can do a great good then I will feel that I have not lived in vain

"But won't you give me an inkling of its component parts? Just a suggestion as to what it is, or will I have to be content to read your free book telling all about it?"

That is exactly it" said Texas but I don't mind telling you what the treatment is not It does not consist of internal drugs or medicine there is nothing to take internally Neither is there any pink colored camphor water or worthless, harmful stuff to rub on the body There is no sweating, no bandages, no Turkish baths. The treatment does not consist of a single exercise or physical culture of any description There is no diet. One may absolutely eat all the food they desire of any kind and get right on reducing without depriving themselves in any way

There are no enemas or flushing of the colon no harmful massaging no sweating garments to wear no immersing yourself in hot baths with the tub filled with OBESITY WATER or EPSOM SALTS nor does it include any medical concoction of any doctor and it has nothing to do with any drug store prescription to have filled There is no formula to carry out no soaps to rub on the skin neither is it a religious faith cure or Christian Science stunt It is not a vibratory electric massage treatment mental suggestion—no and it is not a belt or mechanical device of any kind

I have tried many such fakes I tried drugs pills capsules, harmful concoctions to rub on the body I have tried sweating and taking Turkish baths, exercising physical culture and everything known to science without result and without losing weight As I was about to despair and give up in disgust all further efforts to reduce my enormous weight, which was two hundred and four pounds, by lucky accident, learned of the most simple, harmless, rapid, safest fat reducing treatment on earth I tried it on myself with astonishing results My friends stood aghast in amazement, marveling at the wondrous change in my appearance My fat just rolled away After the first three days I noticed it beginning to leave me. My reduction grew greater and greater until finally I was almost appalled with delight when I realized the stupendous success of my efforts and when I awoke to the fact that I had reduced 70 pounds of my fat without leaving a wrinkle and the glory of my new figure and the grace and beauty of my sixteen years me the admiration of the world and enjoyed the triumph of my life as the success of my whole career when my manager Mr Shubert, on account of my glorious new figure, made me the star of the Passing Show and, mind you, this very same manager had said I was doomed to oblivion just a short time before when I tipped the scales at two hundred and four pounds I was crushed and bewildered when he told me he could not give me a part in the Passing Show unless I could reduce my enormous weight and my heart hangs heavy with the memory of the fat days that are gone when my fat, ungainly figure made me realize that I was doomed to despair and failure

My success in reducing my own fat proves that there is no such word as 'fail' I simply would not be resigned to my fate, and although everyone said Texas there is no way out of your dilemma,' and told me that no fat reducing specialist could reduce my weight I determined not to give up in despair, with the result that I absolutely conquered my fat My new, great book on obesity, which gives full particulars of my simple safe, quick harmless fat reducing treatment is now ready and will be sent free to all who wish to reduce their weight any number of pounds

It is simply astonishing the furor this new treatment is causing among the intimate friends of Miss Guinan to whom she has given it A letter from the world's most famous dancer, La Petite Adelaide, reads, "Dear Miss Guinan, Let me congratulate you upon the high excellence of your remarkable new obesity treatment, which I find reduces me as rapidly as I desire Sincerely, Adelaide" Other letters of praise and gratitude are pouring in to Miss Guinan from all parts of the country from those who have reduced with her successful treatment Louise Brunelle, the Quaker maid one of the earth's greatest beauties states she lost 10 pounds the first week with this astonishing new treatment. It is said this remarkable treatment is not unlike the treatment used by the court ladies and famous actresses of the Old World, who have been using a similar remedy throughout Europe and the remarkable thing is that Texas Guinan is the first to introduce it in America. Her free book, which is now ready for distribution, should be requested by all who desire quick reduction It is written in a fascinating style It explains how by her treatment Texas Guinan, who is acknowledged America's most successful star reduced her own weight seventy pounds and conquered the monster FAT

This glorious little woman is doing her utmost to benefit fat men and women who are in need of a perfect home treatment. Everything will be sent to you in a perfectly plain package so that in your own room away from all prying eyes you may plan to reduce your weight at once Miss Guinan wants to help all who are burdened with superfluous fat, and thereby make life really worth while

Write her at once and learn the anguish she felt when her girlish beauty started to develop in abnormal proportions Read of the tears she wept when that monster "fat" made her realize that she must give up her profession and fade into oblivion Learn how she experimented, how she tried everything and finally with patient effort and determination she conquered her fat Learn of these things so you may improve your own form and destroy your own fat so it will not be longer necessary for you to suffer the jibes and sneers of others Remember there is no exercising or physical culture of any description in her treatment no harmful massage or worthless poison body lotions. You may eat as many meals daily as you desire and go right on reducing, including A most astonishing part of this fat reducing treatment is that it does not produce wrinkles or leave the skin flabby All who have been dieting and starving themselves trying to reduce their weight and who have been taking exercises and internal baths and who have been taking internal and external remedies should write for a copy of her great FREE book entitled "RAPID WEIGHT REDUCTION WITHOUT EXERCISE DIET OR INTERNAL REMEDIES," so that you may start to reduce your burdensome fat as rapidly as you desire Simply write a brief letter or a postcard and ask for her new book Everything will be sent absolutely free DO NOT SEND ANY MONEY because it is ABSOLUTELY FREE

FROCKS FOR THE WANING SUMMER

BY THE AMATEUR DRESSMAKER

ALWAYS at this time of the year we realize that our clothes are beginning to show how much they've been worn. Cleanings and pressings innumerable have also contributed to the wearing-out process for a garment that is in the least degree soiled or crumpled never looks smart. We've gone about so much this Summer and our wardrobes are in such a delicate state of health, that we decided to have two entirely new costumes apiece. It happened that we made some rather dressy frocks first because we were expected to take an active part in an open air fair for the benefit of the town hospital because father's chairman of its board of managers. Mildred was assigned to the flower booth and her frock precisely suited its environment. It's a pompadour-flowered white China silk with a straight two-width skirt whose back hangs in a broad panel-plait from the belt to the feet. At the center of the front, the material is laid in a six-inch box flanked by a single side plait, a scheme which produces a fan-like and slightly bouffant effect about the hips and an exceptionally narrow effect from the knees downward. About the waist is a peplum of side-plaited white mallines which gradually widens over the hips and runs under the panel at the back. The slightly curved-out neck and the elbow sleeves of the white mallines bodice are finished with a lace picot edging and upon this under-body is draped wide lengths of the pompadour flowered silk that cross the shoulders and the armtops and meeting at the center of the back and front are caused at the waist line under a black velvet ribbon girdle finished behind with two raveled up loops and dropping ends and before with a wide plastron bow. Narrow box-plaited mallines frills edge the V of the sill draperies in front while at the bust their plain edges lie flatly against the figure. It's a charming little demi-toilette and Mildred plans to vary it sometimes by wearing over the mallines bodice a coquettish looking Eton jacket which she's contrived from two yards of all-over shadow lace and some tulle frillings.

WHEN Louise brought home a three-yard remnant of rose-figured cream voile and said that it was for her hospital fair frock we told her she was attempting the impossible. Then she showed us an additional two yards of plain cream voile and declared that the materials would combine beautifully. And they did. Father says that she looks like a picture after Watteau in her new frock which has a narrow-gored skirt of the flowered material finished about the feet with a two-inch wide vertical seam ruffle of the plain voile applied under a narrow self-cording. The upper half of the blouse and its cut-in-one elbow sleeves—finished to match the skirt—are of the figured voile and the lower half attached with a join stitching is of the plain voile and is gathered at the normal waist line under a broad belt of the flowered material. The bodice fastens straight down the center of the back under a fly but in front it forms a V extending to the belt and that space is filled in with a cream chiffon guimpe gathered into a rounded out neckband. Louise was in the candy booth at the hospital fair and some of the boys confided to me that she looked sweeter than anything she has to sell.

♣ ♣ ♣

THE girls' fair looks were so inexpensive that they declared that nothing worth while could be afforded for the out of our allowance and so we bought five yards of leaf green surah and made it up in a straight narrow skirt cut not longer than the figure so that it could be puff draped about the hips at front and sides but dropped to the knees and then caught up at the center of the back. Originally, this is one of the extreme models that is draped in front to display the ankles, but we don't go in for extremes in anything. The bodice of this green surah is merely a blouse with straight, plain-ly set-in elbow sleeves. Its fronts crossing below the bust, terminate under a broad soft girdle of the material and are defined by a wide low-rolling collar of white satin forming a straight line across the shoulders at the back which runs below the girdle in points that simulate little tails. Widely turned back white satin cuffs are finished at their lower edge with a tiny frilling of white lace and a broader width of the same lace frills the neck and furnishes a single rever for the left side of the collar which folds over upon the right side and partly covers a guimpe in white mallines. I think that this frock is going to be one of the most satisfactory that I've ever had and don't a bit regret the money that its materials cost although Louise and I both want Mildred to always have the nicest things. By conspiring together we did contrive to work off the most expensive material upon Mildred when it came to buying the other set of frocks. She picked out a blue and white striped voile that she supposed was fifteen instead of fifty cents a yard, and before she had discovered the mistake we had it cut off and bundled. She's never found the sale ticket because we burned it. The plain underskirt, overlapping at its front center is veiled part way down with a laundress overskirt having a ten-inch wide hem-top finished with a narrow frilling in white batiste. At the top this overskirt is gathered to the waist band under a pink soft silk belt, closing with a single a-jour hemmed sash end that starts as a fan rosette. The blouse, closed at the throat under a wide turned-over collar in white batiste, flares downward into a double pointed bodice and the semi-triangular opening thus formed is filled in with a white batiste chemisette trimmed with a row of tiny buttons covered with striped voile. Wide puffs of batiste at their lower edge corded tightly to the arms, simulate undersleeves for the rather close-fitting cut-in-one voile sleeves.

♣ ♣ ♣

LOUISE'S second costume is of Canton blue cotton poplin. It has a plain underskirt, covered to the knees in front and slightly below them at the sides and the back, with a gathered-into-the-waistband over-dress that is bordered with a two-inch band in white cotton openwork dotted with Canton blue floss French knots. With this skirt she wears one of her tucked white net blouses, but it is almost covered by an Eton jacket with cut-in-one elbow sleeves. At the sides and back, the jacket covers a girdle of Canton blue grosgrain ribbon but the shorter fronts slant to the bust and from there fasten to the throat with a row of tiny blue grosgrain buttons. Rows of tiny buttons trim the widely turned-back self-material cuffs while the turned-over collar and the bordering on the jacket's lower edge, matches the trimming of the overdress. It's a girlish looking costume and the shade of blue promises to be so serviceable that I bought enough of the same material to make an afternoon gown for myself, in an absolutely different style. Just a two-width skirt, fan-plaited to the waistband in front and dropping in long, shallow folds at the sides into a plain back, and a one-piece kimono waist with wrist-length sleeves. This bodice is slightly draped at the side seams, its fronts open over an attached vest of white pintucked batiste and there is a collar of hemstitch bordered batiste. Mildred gave the gown a French touch by adding a black velvet ribbon belt that fastens in front with a big, two-looped bow.

♣ ♣ ♣

RUTH positively demanded a squaw play costume because all of her playmates have them. Personally, I don't consider this aboriginal costume pretty, but the rest of the family are delighted with our 'baby's' pair of khaki frocks. They go on over the head, hook on the left shoulder and under both arms, and are trimmed about neck, sleeves and skirt hem with dark brown denim bands patterned with tiny white china beads. Ruth has a pair of white beaded doeskin moccasins, but I firmly drew the line at a war-bonnet of dyed quills and so she wears a beaded brown ribbon bandeau about her brow. There's no doubt that the band-trimmed squaw frock, cut in two pieces, looks better on a little girl than does the romper suit and it's only half the trouble to make.

SALIENT FASHION POINTS

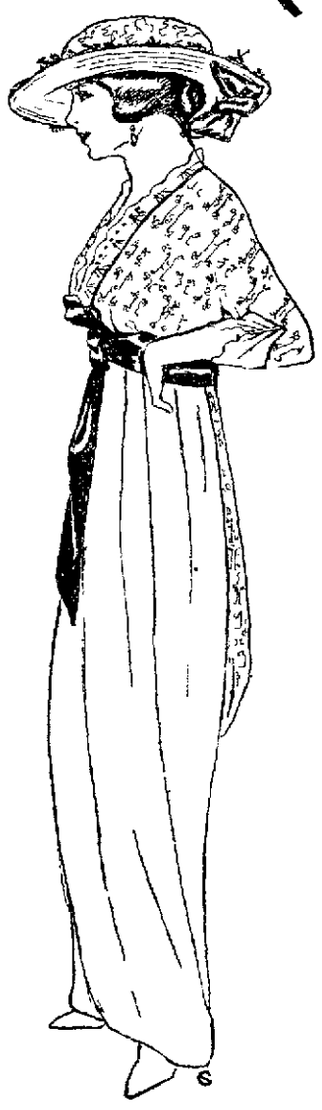
Costume, suit and wrap fashions for the coming season will be characterized not so much by novelty of form as by novelty and beauty of materials and colorings. The Oriental form is still maintained, but the Eastern influence is lessening considerably, and is already on the decline from a novelty standpoint. Women of good taste are demanding liberation from too uniform a dress, and there will be more individuality than heretofore from the Paris dressmakers. Each big maker will stand for what is his conception of the proper dress for the fashionable woman of 1913-14. Despite this variety, however, there is an accordance. Thus, while some makers show long coats and other short jackets, the two seemingly opposed forms are brought into harmony through the fact that in the long coats there is nearly always a break at the waistline, brought about by a girdle, the cut of the vest, etc.

SLEEVE STYLES

The kimono form will be retained in dressy effects, but usually the forearm will be closely fitted, this, in combination with the kimono cut, necessitating the retention of a very large armhole. This cut will be much used in transparent bodices and in evening wraps. Generally speaking, day dresses and separate blouses will have long sleeves, with frills or lace falling over the hands.

An attractively designed costume of plain and flowered voile is shown here. It is made with vest of white batiste, with the upstanding collar which is almost universally becoming.

A debutante's frock of flowered chiffon over a foundation of white crepe de chine. The bodice is of white chiffon partly concealing bands of lace. The bows which adorn the frock are of black velvet. The hat, which is wreathed with daisies, has a crown of black satin and is faced with apple-green chiffon, with bow of black velvet at one side.



This gown is a Bernard model. It is composed of rose voile in a pale shade. The waist and panel in back are of a deeper pink Chinese crepe, with green, white and blue figures. A black satin girdle with bow and ends hanging in front adds a smart touch to the gown. The yoke and cuffs of lace are bordered with black satin ribbon. The hat is a white straw, with crown and outer brim veiled with flowered chiffon. A bow of old rose velvet is placed at the back.

The New Millinery

By Marion Morris

THE Paris modistes deserve all praise this season. And not only for the best of their models, but because they have actually succeeded in making a radical change in styles. Indeed many millinery authorities say that the new hats are the best that they have seen in years. Without an idea to reflect upon the genius of the Parisian modiste the millinery models of the last year or so were rather tiresome and not nearly as artistic as those that have just made their debut. It may be that the craze for tulle and lace during the Summer inspired the crowning of distinctive flares, chic angles and the wonderful poems of trimmings.

As the entire world considers Mme. Georgette the most notable modiste I shall give her modes precedence. Her Louis XIII chapeau is regal as well as chic. Indeed the way it crowns and flares at the left side and turns down in an artistic angle at the right makes one think that it would be just the hat for the chic little Empress Eugenie. Georgeous ostrich plumes rise in a line with the flare at the left side and extend to a high degree where their exquisite ends droop very gracefully. This hat is superb when in the rich tones of Russian green.

THE ostrich tips of black intermingled with the rich cashmere colors are posed in the form of a wreath around the crown of an elongated black velvet hat by Georgette. It is not the beauty of the ostrich but the harmonizing of the wonderful shades of red, green, yellow and the other colors that make the hat such a gem. And, the fact that the long plumage of Paradise that extends at sharp angle from the left side (that back of the hat is in a deep shade of blue instead of the usual black) gives distinction that shows the art of Mme. Georgette.

Quite the extreme of these queenly hats is a coquettish little bonnet that gives the head the same contour as a coiffure dressed with a psyche at the back. This is adorned with a single crushed pink rose which is artistically posed at the left side where is fastened a long streamer of black velvet ribbon that is loosely draped about the neck and on the left shoulder. Although a petite bonnet it can be successfully worn by women of more than a score-and-five years. Some people consider this to be Mme. Georgette's most remarkable model this season.

EVEN though Mme. Louison is always clever and original, she has surpassed herself this season. Her models, while not extreme, are very chic and are quite different from the creations of the other modistes.

She introduced the first of the Autumn modes at the Stock Exchange Races at Auteuil towards the end of June. This model which is a bell-shaped turban of black velvet has a high pleated and wired crest of Chantilly lace that almost conceals it—and that gradually increases to an extreme height in the back. This hat recalls a fashion of the Directoire days during the Summer and how it is captivating the admiration of well-dressed American women.

Just as an artist's personality is frequently reflected in his paintings Mme. Louison's pertinence and charm are quite apparent in her leading models. For instance the little cap-like turban of black velvet that is draped to seem as though it swathes the head in a careless way. The ends of the velvet are crossed and tied to form wings at the back and it is one of these wings that wee butterflies of pearl blue feather wings are artistically posed. Indeed when one sees the chapeau, it requires no imagination to picture this clever modiste posing the butterflies in this unique way.

A similar turban of black velvet has a dashing bow of the velvet at the back and an ermine head and a few tails arranged to form a motif directly in the center of the front. The brim is finished flat and in a way to suggest a brim.

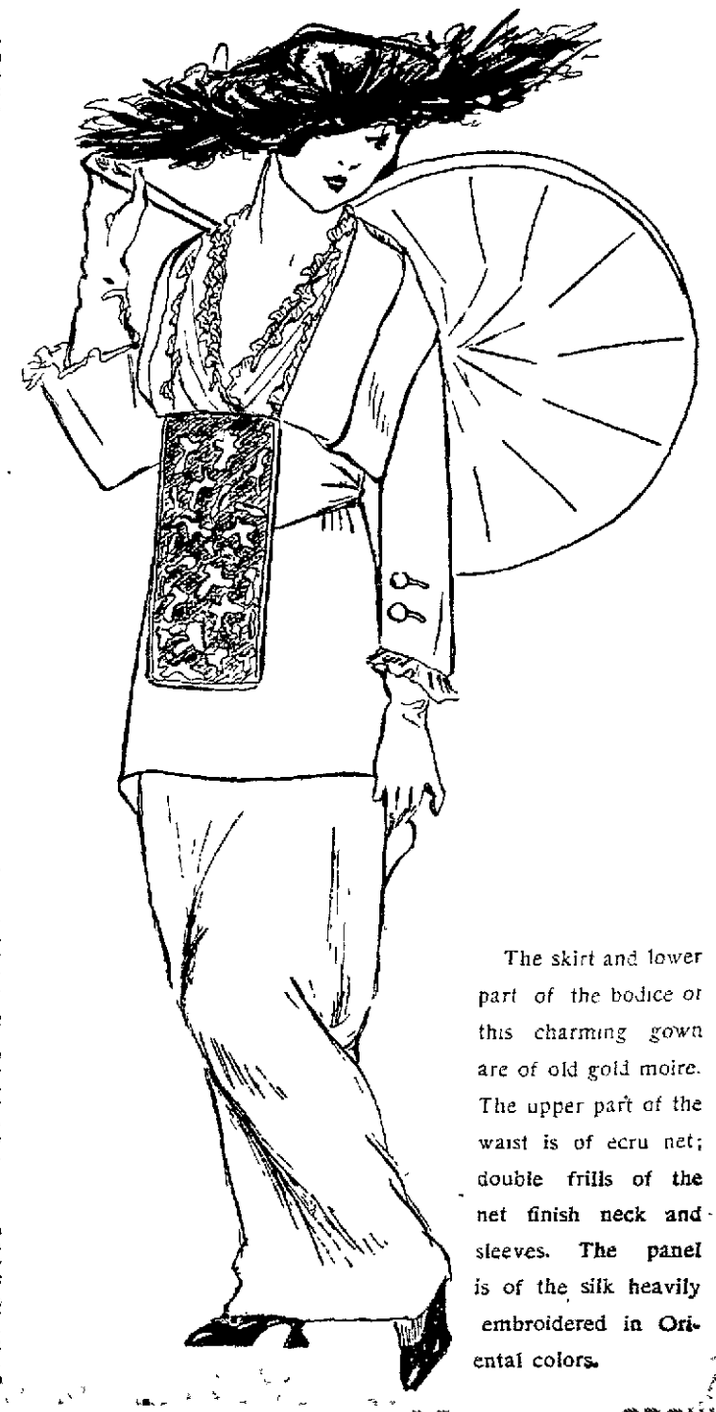
LOUISON'S latest chapeau is a masterpiece. It is an almost flat black velvet with wee upturned sides that are edged with Bird of Paradise to give the effect of high flares.

Evelyn Varon who is quite a newcomer in the realm of notable modistes has attained her fame because she is a master of lines. Lines that are different as well as beautiful. One of her loveliest models for the Autumn surely has the distinction of being the most successful side flare that its high line at the left side is broken by a slight point from which ascends a high mounted triple pompon of the exquisite velvet bird. Of course this hat designed in an equally extreme angle at the right side. In seal brown velvet it is most attractive.

One of her tailored models seems commonplace—I must admit—until one puts it on. Then presto it is a wonderful hat! Its roll brim becomes a stunning flare around the left side and across the back until it is turned over and fastened to the crown with stiff blades of the silk that are made to suggest an aeroplane bow. This hat while as simple as can be is without question one of the most remarkable hats of the season.



The skirt and lower part of the bodice of this charming gown are of old gold moire. The upper part of the waist is of ecru net; double frills of the net finish neck and sleeves. The panel is of the silk heavily embroidered in Oriental colors.

In bag there are but two materials that give perfect satisfaction broadcloth the heavy variety which does not fray and satin Satin is the more artistic the less durable Suppose then, we suggest something in one of the dark shades of brown You will find something quite handsome in chamois shades Too they embroider richly in self tones or a deep tan with some gold in it The gold is often employed in making small ornaments but seldom used to complete a whole pattern Bulgarian embroidery however is never done in a solid color It is in its richest form made up in peacock tints with a great amount of russet brown interwoven throughout the pattern If you wish satin then select a pastel tint or black Black is always good form and is likely to be very pretty in any form of embroidery Black embroidered in black or black embellished in deep tones of green and blue have an Oriental effect. The idea is to make the bag so there will be nothing garish or too conspicuous If intended for general use then select something in not more than two good dark colors if however the bag is intended for dainty purposes you have all pastel tints from which to make a selection, then you should choose a favorite color and one most likely to match the best gowns This pattern could be made up in leather or chamois The stitching is done on the machine with ordinary dress silk and the bag presents raw edges. They are rather extreme in style, yet quite nobby at all times Sincerely yours

WASH blankets in soapsuds and rinse thoroughly—the water for all processes nearly or quite cold—then hang them out on the line When nearly dry beat them thoroughly with a bamboo or rattan furniture beater they will be as soft and fluffy as when new

THE secret of an especially delicious omelet served in a certain home fell out the other day More yolks than whites are used and a little rich cream goes in when it is to be plain or is to be seasoned with cheese

ONE of the innumerable uses to which glycerine may be put is cleansing material on which coffee has been spilled The dark stain and even the grease spot from the cream, are easily removed The material should be carefully rinsed in lukewarm water and pressed on the wrong side

THE white of an egg beaten in lemon juice and slightly sweetened with powdered sugar is a simple and pleasant remedy for hoarseness The mixture should be slowly dissolved in the mouth and swallowed

A PASTE made of fine starch and a very little water spread on a bruised spot immediately after a blow will often prevent discoloration

AN economical and really excellent pad for cleaning and testing hot irons is made of several layers of heavy brown paper This may be renewed each ironing day and is quite satisfactory For a fine polish a little wax or paraffin should be used

TO save time and trouble in making two kinds of ice cream at home a twin freezer has been put on the market. Each compartment holds a quart and two flavors or a cream and an ice or frozen pudding may be prepared simultaneously

ANY article—children's dresses hubby's coat or trousers, books or even the cat—that has had the misfortune to come in contact with a sheet of tanglefoot can almost instantly be cleaned of the sticky substance if sponged off with benzine

WHITING rubbed on with flannel will remove baking stains from discolored cups and dishes

INSTEAD of trying to cream sugar and butter for a cake with a tiresome spoon or knife blade try using a wire potato masher This chops the butter finely and blends the two with little trouble in a comparatively short time

A SLIGHT sprinkling of powdered cinnamon just before serving is said by some greatly to improve the flavor and aroma of a cup of cocoa

A SOFT and light filling for a sofa pillow for veranda and hammock use can be made by cutting up into small pieces bits of cloth or scraps left from sewing In this way the little pieces that accumulate are made useful

WATER bottles which obstinately remain stained may be treated with a solution made of tea leaves water vinegar and a lump of salt After this has stood for a couple of hours the bottle should be rinsed and left to drain neck down

RAG SHOWER

A CLEVER surprise got up for a bride to be was a rag shower The so called rags were bags for all kinds of housekeeping—dish cloths dusters and every other thing of the kind that the neatest of young housekeepers might wish for

There were dish towels neatly hemmed and of different sizes for glasses silver and dishes floor cloths chamois for windows and iron holders

Among the bags were laundry bags, pudding bags a shoe bag and others that looked like it to hang on the inside of a door for dust brushes and the like to go into

Then there were workbags and bags for daintily waists and even sachet bags

The individual articles are not expensive and they should be most acceptable

FASHIONDOM

BY MRS KINGSLEY

IN millinery all black effects are fashionable, as are also all white effects

Flat trimmings of all kinds predominate on lingerie Narrow skirts make it impossible to wear the ruffle as formerly

The separate blouse of white satin is very smart It is usually cut low in the neck and is finished with an adaptation of the sailor or robespierre collar

Many simple three-quarter sack tailor coats have girdles of black satin ribbon There are some short coats of chiffon or thin silk to be worn with white lingerie frocks

Pale blue batiste is used for a charming frock and the low belt of folded taffeta is caught at the side with a pink rose

Large flat or bullet buttons of wood are used on many of the cloth tailored suits and leather buttons appear on motor and steamer coats

A gradual change in the silhouette has been noticed during the last month and the greatest width is at the hips reviving the pegtop effect

Following the natural order of things, the fall coat promises to be long for many of the advance models have three quarter length coats

Smart little coats of white serge have collars and cuffs of colored satin Ball buttons covered with the same material are used to fasten the coat

The fishwife sash of brocaded silk in brilliant coloring adorns many of the smartest gowns It is drawn well over the hips and the long ends are bordered with bead or silk fringe

JEWELRY

JEWELRY is supposedly worn for ornament, but much of it is kept in such a condition that it is anything but ornamental There is no surer sign of carelessness than to wear pins rings and chains so black and greasy that onlookers may be pardoned for questioning the personal cleanliness of the wearer

There is no excuse for this dirtiness when soap and water are to be had It is well to purchase a small box of jeweler's sawdust to expedite drying and polishing A rouged chamois is also helpful

It is particularly ill-adviseed for the girl who works to wear dirty jewelry Indeed she should wear as little as possible A watch, cuff buttons and a simple brooch or pin at the neck is all that is permissible for good taste These should be kept shining.

FRENCH IDEALS

BY MRS McCUNE

TO those who have furnished expensive and ambitious houses it is well known that no style of decoration is so disproportionately costly as the French Unless one is prepared to be really prodical in expenditure, it is foolish to attempt a Louis Quinze or Louis Seize room an empire or any of what in a well known play is humorously called One of them Louies It is the Louies that eat up money as the minotaur goggled up young girls—a single piece of reception room furniture—for instance a commode of French walnut with touches of gold often costs from $300 to $600 where as, an old colonial pier table answering the same purpose with another style of decoration, could be bought on exquisite lines for $75 or $100

A gold sofa antique sometimes brings $300 and $400 while a modern replica costs $150 a small gold chair is $50 and large ones in proportion and when one has acquired a taste for fine old tapestry or even modern Gobelin they are compelled to cut loose from calculation and sink or swim in deep waters It will readily be seen that a small room can thus drift into a cost of many thousands of dollars, and yet, after all, it is only a little French room Not a dollar has been expended on a fine painting or a piece of statuary which would be a joy forever or even perhaps on an oriental rug which would send a thrill of delight down the spine of any connoisseur who sees it

The thousands that the small room has absorbed do not include a grand piano or any of these other most desirable acquirements This realization sometimes comes as a startling disappointment to the amateur who has started in on French furnishing To live up to a French room is an expensive matter indeed and to furnish the remainder of the house in such a way as to correspond with this room requires the background of a real fortune To avoid the shoals and quicksands that await the unwary amateur, there is no better plan than to commit the entire scheme to paper, pricing each article desired for every room and writing it all down before one single dollar has really been expended

One should never shop or consult a decorator until she has in mind a clear, fixed idea of what she wants To buy vaguely and promiscuously for a house means in many cases a frustration of the entire scheme When this has been carefully worked out and the scheme adapted to the amount one proposes to invest, the whole matter should go through smoothly

It should not be forgotten that the ornaments in a French room must always be of the most expensive description—nothing less than Sevres and the finest Limoges Dresden and rock crystals in vases and ornaments should be placed among Buhl and marquetrie furniture To consult a decorator before one has formulated plans as to style, etc, or a distinct idea of how much she wishes to spend is also a mistake, for naturally when a beautiful scheme is unfolded before the dazzled imagination of the amateur furnisher actual prices are glossed over and expensive features are treated as mere bagatelles A shrug of the shoulders may cost an unsuspecting woman a thousand dollars, a lifting of the eyebrow several hundred She is supposed to be informed as to the value of the thing she desires but as an actual fact in nine cases out of ten she has only the vaguest ideas of actual cost

OLD IDEA MADE NEW

TOURNURE is the French word for bustle which device at the back of the skirt, is now often needed by many figures The padding does not bulge out in the old ridiculous way It is merely intended to fill in the hollow below the waist line and where the skirt or gown has a plain back this filling in is absolutely ecessary

A tournure cushion is easy to make, but it should be cut out, basted, and tried on with the garment before the edge is finally shaped or thickness decided upon Get somebody to cut a paper pattern the exact size and shape of this hollow, and follow this with the material, allowing something for seams and for enlargement, if necessary The ready made cushions of this sort are of white cambric, with a cotton filling, and there are always big perforations for ventilations These can be punched with a large embroidery puncher and worked around with cotton after the pad is made It must curve into the waist at the top and be rounded at the bottom, with the narrowest tape used for strings A shallow and wide half-moon cushion may be needed, one long and straight, or the tiniest square It all depends on the figure Many women attach these cushions to the skirt band so that it goes on with the garment Again, it may be pinned to the corset after the strings are pulled and tied

THE green tips of celery or minced leaves of Brussels sprouts may be substituted for parsley when that is not obtainable for garnishing

VACATION FRECKLES

BY EDNA EGAN

"SUMMER is here' says a girl, "and I freckle horribly What must I do?

Massage, use a skin invigorant a freckle lotion and—if you have done all the foregoing things—leave the rest to Providence Freckles are rather hard to banash and the most efficient bleaches, with their deadly poisons, are too unsafe to put in girl hands or even the hands of the average mother However, here is a freckle lotion commended by careful physicians

Lactic acid four ounces, glycerin, two ounces rosewater one ounce

Apply several times daily with a soft cloth pouring the lotion as needed into a saucer This is a cleanly precaution to observe with all the skin lotions

If, after several applications, the skin is much irritated go a night or two without the lotion using a soothing cold cream instead

A good invigorant for inactive skins, especially those which are merely thick and dull, may be made from the following

White-wine vinegar, one pint; honey three ounces isinglass, one and one-half ounces, nutmeg, one ounce, red sandalwood (shredded) one-half dram

Put all together in porcelain-lined saucepan and let the mixture simmer for a half-hour over a slow fire without boiling Strain, and apply after giving the skin a bath with warm water and almond meal or soap For skins easily irritated almond meal is often a safer cleanser than soap

Pimples mean so often a bad physical condition that I am inclined to tell a girl affected with them to consult her physician Still, they are often the result of dust-filled pores, when after the cleansing processes described, a little special local treatment may be applied For the ordinary sort of pimple which usually troubles young girls, here is a simple cure

Bicarbonate of soda thirty-six grains, glycerin, 1 dram, spermaceti ointment one ounce

You Can Hardly Romp In Your New Fall Gown

THE three views of the gown pictured to-day give a clear impression of the drapery, which is quite odd but very new and striking. The gown is an imported model, and the original is of wistaria colored brocaded crepe. The bodice is made in kimono style, the upper portion and sleeves being of wistaria colored chiffon over buff.

The narrow sash is a continuation of the bodice and ties loosely at the back.

The skirt is made in two pieces, a foundation, and a sort of tunic which is elaborately draped in black, and has narrow pleats in front. Both the foundation and over drapery are of the same wistaria crepe. The gown is really not as intricate as it appears.
