53 PERSONS BROWN IN TEXAS FLOODS; 3,000 IN THE TREES

Valleys of the Brazos and the Trinity Rivers Have Been Turned Into Vast Inland Seas.

Boats Plying the Flooded Districts, Rescuing the People Who Took Refuge in Trees.

Bryan Texas, December 6.—Fifty-three persons are known to be dead and scores of others are reported to have lost their lives in the floods which have been sweeping the valleys of the Brazos and Trinity rivers in central and south central Texas since early in the week

Three thousand persons have been driven to the upper floors of their homes by the rising waters or have been compelled to seek refuge in trees where they remained for hours in some cases for two days before being rescued

Estimates of the damage generally center around $4,000,000. No homes visible.

One of the deepest overflows was in the Brazos bottoms of this section where boatmen reported no houses visible when they made their final trips before dark this evening

The Colorado river a third Texas stream on a rampage is also adding its aid to the flood situation

At Alton a small place on the lower Colorado, tonight the water was 3 feet deep over the highest elevation

The worst single situation was caused by the breaking of the levee, 30 miles in length on the Brazos opposite Bryan

SINISTER SURPRISE BY MEXICAN DICTATOR FEARED BY REBELS

Gen. Villa and His Advisers Suspect That Huerta Has Set Trap for the Insurgent Army.

MARCH TO THE SOUTH BEING SLOWLY MADE

Believed Huerta Would Like to Get the Rebels Massed and Risk All in One Great Battle.

Juarez, Mexico, December 6.—The feeling spread among rebel leaders today that the Huerta government was preparing some sinister surprises in connection with the projected march of General Francisco Villa's army toward Mexico City

At the federal troops had abandoned nearly all of the northern part of the republic after they had been beaten and forced to seek safety in the mountains or on the United States border, and that General Salvador Mercedo, the federal commander, had pronounced his forces bankrupt, was not accepted as indicating that the rebels will be unresisted in their advance south

Some belief was expressed that the federals had an object in evacuating Chihuahua and other isolated federal garrisons where it was impossible for them to do much more than defend themselves, and that their purpose in abandoning their posts was to permit a more concerted and energetic defense in the central and southern states, where forts are more numerous and communication among them is easier

Reconstruction of telegraph lines and temporary rebuilding of the railroads marking the first semblance of peaceful industry in northern Mexico in many months, occupied General Francisco Villa's federal army today

General Villa was encamped at Saun tonight, about 30 miles north of Chihuahua. Communication between the city and his camp was by courier as the telegraph between the two points had not been restored

QUALITY and SERVICE
The Foundation of Success

We have built up the largest Photo-engraving business in the South by offering a better QUALITY and a better SERVICE than those who were once our competitors could offer.

Believing that the South wanted and would support an engraving house capable of turning out work as good as the best, we have by the expenditure of both money and effort made the Southern Engraving Company such an institution.

By constantly adding new apparatus and employing more men we builded a plant that today stands without an equal in this section. Results show that our efforts have been appreciated.

We are today producing more plates than all the engraving houses in the State combined. We have the largest and best equipped plant in the South. We employ higher priced men and more of them than any two shops combined.

Here is the "Biggest" A

CHECK the measurements—leg room, depth and width of seats—with those of any car selling from $1000 up to $1400—you'll find this is a "big" car in inches as well as "immense" in efficiency. Note up-to-date stream-line body design, left hand steer, center control and other features of the highest priced cars. (SEND FOR THE BOOK.)

Maxwell

Extravagant Asser

WHO WAS the "biggest" general in the world? Napoleon, he conquered Europe—and he was five-feet-three!

WHO WAS the "biggest" statesman in the world? Bismark, he built the German Empire—and he was six-feet-four!

SO YOU SEE MERE SIZE DOESN'T determine who nor what is biggest. It's achievement that confers that title "biggest."

WE MAINTAIN that the biggest automobile in the world is the one that does the biggest things—and does bigger things than a bigger car can do at the same cost.

AND THAT CONFERS THE TITLE on the Maxwell "25," which sells for $750, and which, though of ample capacity for carrying five full grown adults anywhere any car will go, yet weighs only 1,650 pounds.

THIS CAR CANNOT BE CALLED either small or large—in inches. It is neither a Napoleon nor a Bismark in physical proportions—but is a combination of both in efficiency and—in competition.

IT IS THE MOST FORMIDABLE rival other cars have ever encountered.

ITS CONQUESTS have embraced the territory formerly held by both the very cheap, and the overly-large, under-efficient cars, selling for $1,000 and more.

IT CONQUERS because it meets the needs and the ideas of the majority of informed buyers. It appeals at the same time to the logic of common sense and the sense of the beautiful.

ITS BEAUTY is shown in looks and in performance—hand-some is as handsome does—and handsome as is.

THE BUYER WHO must take a peep into the purse before buying, here finds a car within his reach and made to his heart's desire.

ON THE OTHER HAND, the buyer who is easily able to pay the first cost, but whose experience has taught him to look still more closely into maintenance cost afterward, finds in this 1,650-pound, five-passenger car the one he has been looking for—because it will do all any 2,600-pound car will do—and more—and at half the upkeep cost—or less.

COST OF UPKEEP increases as the square of the tire makers tell us. And Standard Oil can confirm the statement.

CUT THE WEIGHT IN TWO and you divide the cost by four! Get that—it's the kernel.

BUT WE'RE A NATION of aristocrats—no matter protest we're democratic, we are aristocrats. American deems himself of the Royal line. We pride, plus—more per capita than any other part of the world.

AND SO IT HAPPENS that your American demands more than mere utility in the car he buys—he wants well as size.

A FEW YEARS AGO a lot of misguided persons had a false idea. They maintained that the "farmers' car" had yet been built.

WHEN ASKED TO SPECIFY, they said the farmer should look like a farm wagon or a dump cart—other familiar vehicle.

SO THEY MADE A FEW of those ridiculous, high-wheel, air-cooled "putt-putters," and gleefully invited the world to come and see.

FARMERS DIDN'T COME—they were too busy using the latest improvements in real automobiles. High-wheeler soon went out of business.

THAT PROMPTED US one day to make a little investigation and to compile a few statistics—and what do you think?

WE FOUND that, contrary to the prevalent supposition, the best markets for second-hand cars were not where you call the "backwoods and the prairies," but Erie and 42nd, New York; and Michigan Avenue, and 30th and south of Congress, Chicago!

"ALL THE RUBES LIVE ON MANHATTAN," once said a famous showman. That was more than half the other 49 per cent are positioned out to Chicago other large centers. There live the Fourflusher Johnny-speeders and the remittance boys.

MAXWELL MO

(INCORPORATED)

DEALERS

Some makers demand exclusive representation. Still others insist on your taking on a full line to get one vehicle model. We don't do either. Don't need to. We don't believe in "strong arm" tactics nor will we ask you to keep another make of car you have contracted for. We welcome competition and stand this car on the floor beside any other at any price—and the Maxwell will get the lion's share.

MAXWELL AUTOMOBILES ARE SOLD IN ATLANTA BY THE

Automobile in the World

$750

Let's Analyze It

GET RID OF THE FREAKS—the experiments, the unfit—these is your market. But to the up-to-date farmers of the East, West and South you cannot sell any but the latest model, made by a responsible concern—nor to the business men living outside the cabaret zones of the big cities.

SO in designing this car we set as our standard a car not only of the highest utility, efficiency and economy, but of style and beauty as well. Because this car must appeal to those who know—business men and successful farmers—who have pride plus—and are entitled to it.

EVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY DOLLARS is a lot of money to a lot of people—and we designed this car to meet the needs and demands of a lot of people.

WE TO MAKE A LOT of them, to make them at all, at the price.

THOSE PEOPLE HAVE A RIGHT TO EXPECT, in the car they buy, something of which they may be proud, as well as one that will perform the service.

THAT WAS NO EASY TASK. In fact, it was—it had proven to be—an impossible task to other makers, other designers.

JUST CONSIDER FOR A MOMENT It's child's play to design and make a $5000 car. Mechanically the latter presents no problems at all—for the engineer can use any material and as many pounds as he pleases to achieve his results—the buyer of such a car will not only pay the price but pay the "freight" also—the tire and other maintenance bills.

THAT'S CHILD'S PLAY as compared with the task set our engineers and metallurgists—to design a touring car of ample capacity to take five full grown adults anywhere, over any roads, in comfort,

STRONG it will withstand the usage and neglect such a car receives at the hands of the average owner who drives—but hasn't time or inclination to care for it—himself;

LIGHT that the tire bills and the maintenance cost will, like the purchase price, be within the reach of that "lot" of people who insist an automobile should be an economy, not an extravagance;

AND FINALLY, of external design to conform to the current mode of "streamline body," and finished and upholstered so that the wife and daughters will be just as proud of the appearance as the owner is of its performance.

THERE WAS A TASK to test the skill and the experience and knowledge of the best corps of engineers, and the learning of the best metallurgists known to this industry.

AND THIS $750 MAXWELL IS THE RESULT.

HAS IT OCCURRED TO YOU that in the entire history of this industry this is the first time that feat has been accomplished? Well, it is.

AND WE CONTEND it is still impossible to any other concern—any other organization.

WE WERE PECULIARLY SITUATED—ideally equipped to do it. Had no old models to get rid of—none with which this would compete. We had the plants, the capital, the talent and—the experience. You can't beat that combination.

NOW, READ THIS—it's what you are most vitally interested in—deliveries.

WE ARE MAKING 50 CARS PER DAY of this model. That isn't a circumstance, of course. Demand is for five times as many even at this season. Spring demand—we don't dare contemplate.

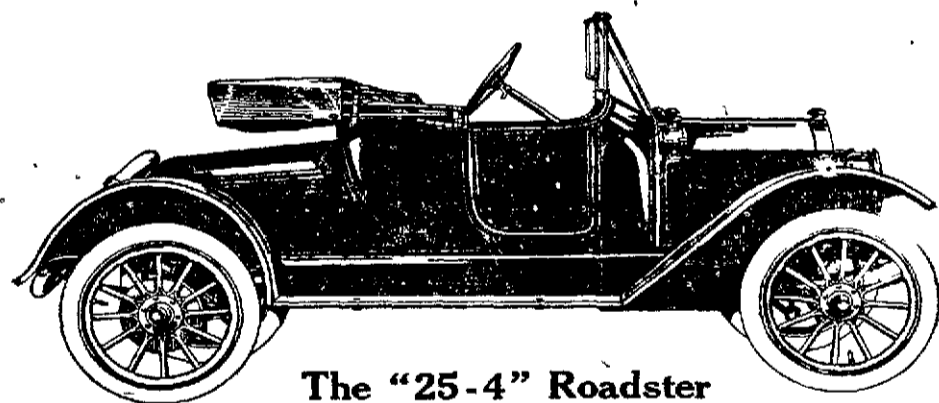

OUR PLANTS ARE BIG ENOUGH to make 300 per day—and that is what we are preparing for. But special machinery can't be made over night nor produced by necromancy. So we can't hope to reach a production of more than 200 per day before February at earliest.

SO YOUR MOVE IS—to see the car at once—your nearest dealer. Have a thorough demonstration. Talk to your acquaintance who has been fortunate enough to get one. He'll say more than our modesty permits—more than you'd credit from an over-enthusiastic maker.

THEN DON'T DELAY—get your order in. Pay a deposit to guarantee delivery and to assure it at a time when others will be offering premiums. Then you'll be able to rest easy in the knowledge that you've secured the greatest automobile value ever known.

Mitchell Little Six Fully Equipped $1,895

The Mitchell Little Six at $1,895, is definite confirmation of the fact that high-priced cars are too high-priced. There is nothing you can ask in any car—no matter how high the price—that is not embodied in the Little Six.

No sane business man who is familiar with the inflexible rule of values, can overlook this Little Six or fail to be impressed by its sterling character.

This is not the era of high-priced cars. True, they will always have a following among those persons to whom money means nothing, but the bulk of the people ask for a high-class, low-cost car that will preserve their pride and fill their practical wants.

BRYAN NEARLY WALKS INTO SUFFRAGE AMBUSH

Secretary Has a Clash With Women While Speaking on Popular Government.

Washington, December 6.—Secretary Bryan narrowly escaped a suffrage ambush today at a meeting of the National Popular Government League, where he spoke on popular government. A delegation of women suffragists, fresh from their convention here, took place in the hall at which it had been advertised the secretary of state was to speak and near the conclusion of his address Miss Helen Todd, a California suffragist, arose and called upon the secretary for women. Mr. Secretary said: "With flashing eyes the secretary said: 'Madam, in your work you doubtless have followed your judgment and conscience. In my work I have followed mine. The suffragists made no further efforts to secure an expression from Mr. Bryan. The secretary immediately thereafter left the hall.

Right of People to Rule.

Assertion of the right and the capability of the people to rule characterizes the address of Secretary Bryan. The people might make some mistakes, he said, but would rectify them more quickly than we are inclined to think. He pointed out several mistakes the people had made during the last twenty years. Speaking of President Wilson's declaration in his message for presidential primaries, Secretary Bryan said he thought that before another presidential campaign the people would vote at home for their choice and that the president, when he entered the White House, would know not individuals, but only the people. To rather trust the people, he declared, Secretary Bryan has had any group of people tell what questions shall be acted on. The amendment for the direct election of United States senators had opened the door, he said, for much remedial legislation which had become impossible to have considered in the past.

For Presidential Primaries.

Joseph W. Fork, solicitor of the state department, in a message to the presidential primaries, declared that if such an idea had been advocated by a president ten years ago it would have been attacked as dangerous and revolutionary. The appeal which the president's suggestion had made, he indicated, the wonderful progress which had been made in this country in the last few years. He pointed out the popular government. With slight change, he favored what is known as the "backway amendment," now pending before congress, which proposes plans for easier amendment of the constitution.

The hope of the nation is in a non-partisan party," declared Senator Norris of Nebraska, addressing the meeting. Eventually would get control of their government through measures for which the league stands. Representative Kelly of Pennsylvania, made an attack on Senator Penrose, declaring that while he may be a serious, he is not perpetual, as we are going to show him in 1914. Speakers from various states told of progress in direct government. Senator Owen of Oklahoma, chairman of the committee which has been set up to study the question of the intelligent majority of the people. This great movement, he added, is an effect of a religion, broader than party lines, as broad as human brotherhood. Senator Owen also declared the archaic rules of the senate, which are costing the nation several millions by delaying action on the currency bill.

DESPERADO ESCAPED FROM POISONED MINE

Bingham, Utah, December 6.—Search of more than half the town—any name—has been made for a desperado, who was completed tonight without result. The probability is that the slayer of six men has escaped. The poisonous gases forced into the mine for the purpose of asphyxiating the desperado, following the killing of two deputies in an underground fight a week ago, were cleared from all the passageways and tonight the search was continued in parts not yet explored. The clearing away of a cave-in in the upper workings showed that Lopez had not taken refuge in the stope. It is as had been expected. More than 200 miners, who were thrown out of employment when the mine was closed in order to fill with gas, returned to work in the lower levels today.

JOHN D. GIVES $25,000 TO CATHOLIC HOSPITAL

Cleveland, Ohio, December 6.—John D. Rockefeller has contributed $25,000 to the fund of $250,000 being raised for St. Vincent's hospital, a Catholic institution generally known as the Charity hospital. The Rockefeller gift came as a surprise to the executive committee of the hospital fund, as members of the committee recently were informed by the Rockefeller board of benevolence that the board had voted not to permit a donation of such a fund. Today the committee received a telegram from the chairman of the board, making the gift, which would be broken at Rockefeller's direction. The subscription is conditioned on the entire fund being raised, but less than $30,000 remains to be obtained.

E. J. Rollston Dead.

Natchez, Miss., December 6.—Edward J. Rollston, 32, telegraph editor of the Natchez Daily Herald, was found dead at his home here today. Death was due to acute indigestion. Mr. Rollston was a native of Natchez, where the body will be sent for interment. He had worked on newspapers in New York and Memphis. He is survived by his parents, who reside in Paducah, a brother, Roy, a reporter on the New York World, and a sister who resides in St. Louis.

Atlanta Theater Records Broken By Great Ben-Hur Crowd Saturday

All records for the Atlanta theater were smashed yesterday afternoon when the biggest crowd ever in the playhouse for a matinee saw "Ben-Hur," presented by the Klaw & Erlanger company, which is now touring the south. Every seat in the house, from the last row of the gallery to the stage line, was sold and many stood for three hours to witness the matinee. The wonderful strength of the production's drawing power is thus shown by the sell-out. Friday night was also sold out and last night was practically sold, only a few seats on the far sides and in the last two rows remaining when the curtain went up.

GERMAN TROOPS MOVED FROM ALSATIAN TOWN

Zabern, Germany, December 6.—Headed by its energetic commander, Colonel von Reuter, the Ninety-ninth infantry regiment, whose officers have caused so much strife between the military and civil authorities in Alsace, was ordered to Zabern under the way to uncomfortable camp quarters. Half of the men go to Hagenau, situated in the north of Zabern, in the forest, and the other half go to Bitzach, a small fortified town at the foot of the Vosges mountains in the north Alsace. Not even the customary detachment was left in Zabern, a guard being detailed for this service from the garrison of Strasbourg.

Denial by the Chancellor.

Berlin, December 6.—The imperial government, through the Reichstag, returned this morning to Berlin from Donaueschingen, after conferring with the emperor and his cabinet. He immediately issued a denial of a published statement, explaining the military situation in Alsace. The statement had been attributed to the Secretary of State, Count von Wunschaff, who was quoted as saying that the chancellor was "unwell" when he spoke in parliament and, therefore, forgotten to mention the emperor's interposition against the military authorities at Zabern. "The members of parliament that the emperor had ordered the army officers to keep within the law and not permit Major General Kuehne to Zabern to take charge of the situation. The emperor's interposition in the affair, according to the published explanation given by Her. Wunschaff, is not going to be 'smashed into fragments,' nor is the territory to be made a part of the Reich. The emperor's declaration from him that its constitution shall be upheld, and its official correspondence in an article announcing the transfer of the Zabern Garrison station.

Furthermore, the viceroy has firm assurance from the emperor of his will that hereafter the constitutionally guaranteed rights of law and order shall find stricter observance in all respects. The return of Count Charles von Wedel, the governor general of Alsace-Lorraine, from Donaueschingen recalls the departure of Count von Wedel, who appeared in the London Daily Telegraph in October, 1908. Chancellor von Eue had been able to announce that his majesty has promised to impose greater restraint upon himself. Now comes the governor general of Alsace-Lorraine with the important declaration of the emperor's will, that the government shall be a government of laws.

BRAKE ON DIVORCES IS URGED BY JUDGE

Portland, Maine, December 6.—"If marriage is to mean anything, a brake must be put on the granting of divorces," said Judge Joseph E. Connolly in the superior court today when he insisted that all the facts in the case on trial should be presented. "I'm not going to grant divorces," he continued, "to accommodate people because they want to take up with some other man or woman." Judge Connolly's statistics showing the number of divorces in Maine is one to every 6.55 marriages, while in Kansas it is one to every 3.1 marriages, Massachusetts one to 1.7 in Minnesota one to 2.4, and in Maryland one to 3.1.

CROWDS GROWING AT EAST POINT REVIVAL

The great revival which has been held for a week in the Baptist tabernacle at East Point continues with increasing crowds. All of the pastors of East Point have attended the meetings and the people crowd the tabernacle at times to its capacity to hear Evangelist Bridges. Today he preached at 11 a. m. and to men only at 3 p. m. and to men and women at 7:30 p. m. Evangelist Bridges has a future engagement that will take him from East Point before next Sunday, but the pastors and people must pray for him to remain in East Point three more days.

Philippine Officials Resign.

Manila, December 6.—C. M. Cotterman, director of the bureau of posts, and Richard Campbell, judge of the court of first instance, resigned their positions today.

LOAN SHARK MULCTED FOR $5,448 DAMAGES

Victim Appeals to the Kansas Courts and Gets Heavy Verdict.

Topeka, Kan., December 6.—Judgment for $5,448 against D. D. Drake, a loan agent, was awarded to Joseph H. Stalker, a railroad employee of Kansas City, Kan., in a decision of the Kansas supreme court today. Stalker alleged he borrowed $26 in 1907 from Drake's agency in Kansas City, Kan., and that he was to pay $2.50 monthly interest on the loan. Suits filed against him when he was unable to meet the obligation led him to travel about the country at great expense, he said, and resulted in his losing several positions. Finally he fled suit for damages against Drake in the Waudon county district court, and was awarded $900. This amount the supreme court today reduced to $5,448.

GOV. GLYN OPOSED TO STATE CONVENTIONS

Albany, N. Y., December 6.—Abolition of the state convention as a nominating body and adoption of the Massachusetts form of ballot at primary elections are provided for in bills which Governor Glynn will send to the legislature next week. By the Massachusetts ballot party opponents will be eliminated at primary elections and figures will be substituted for the convenience of those who have difficulty in marking the ballot. In a statement tonight the governor also advocated the passage at a future date, a referendum on the constitution and the adoption of the Massachusetts form of ballot in general elections. The bills will go to the legislature next week, apparently with the support of all factions of the democratic party.

Answers Card of J. W. Alexander, Who Denied Dying Shooting.

Lyerly, Ga., December 6.—(Special)—Answering the card which J. W. Alexander, formerly deputy sheriff of the county, issued to the public last week denying the charge that he shot Sheriff Mark Wimpee several weeks ago, Sheriff Wimpee issues the following card:

I had hoped that there would be no newspaper notoriety as to my being shot on October 22, 1913. I had tried to be quiet in this matter on account of my feelings and respect I had for the Alexander family. We have been the best of friends in the past and on my part hope to be in the future. It was dark and Mr. Cash and Mr. Bohannon were present and they never saw any pistol and I never saw any but as I passed Mr. Alexander the pistol fired and he started home the other way. As I had no pistol at that time with me I asked Mr. Bohannon and Mr. Cash for a pistol and they both claimed they had none. Mr. Alexander started this provocation with me and I was trying to avoid any altercation with him and started home. The reason I was out at this time was I had received a phone message to come to the oil mill at some party was shooting in the vicinity of the mill. I will say this is my last card to the public in regard to this and would not have published this reply but only in self defense.

Ansley Tells of Terminal District's Growth from Boarding House to Business Property

THE F. M. STOCKS PROPERTY THAT WILL BE AUCTIONED OFF. Forrest Adair will act as auctioneer, on December 12, when eight lots will go under the hammer. The property faces railroad tracks, and part of it lies on Nelson and Walker streets. Edwin P. Ansley and George Adair have charge of the sale.

By Edwin P. Ansley.
Real estate in Atlanta does not go backward. About the worst thing that ever happens to it is that a particular section may go through a process of seasoning or any additional value. Then began the invasion by wholesale and manufacturing concerns, resulting in a complete change in the status of this property. It is now treated by all real estate men as business property.

For certain lines of business a railroad track is a vital element. The Nelson street property has the advantage of central location, proximity to everything that goes to make up the activities of the city, having the additional advantage of a railroad track in the rear.

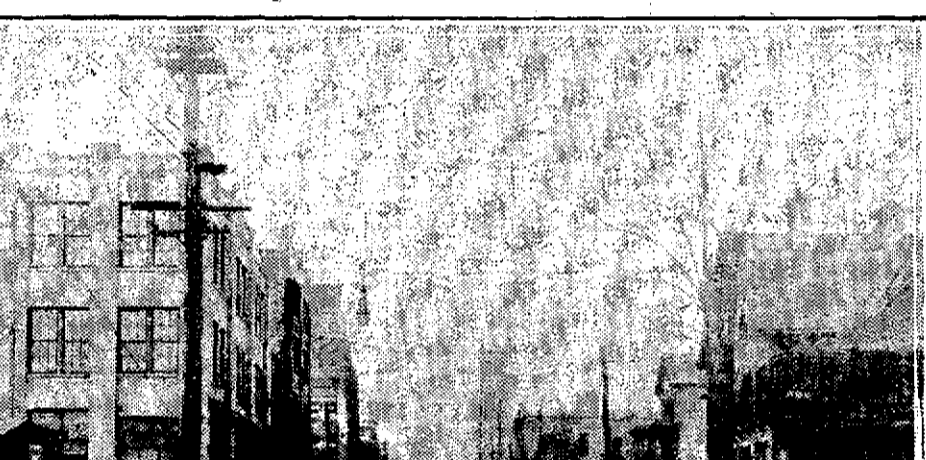

Business efficiency determines success, and in these days of sharp competition, a concern located on Nelson street, right in the heart of one block of a passenger station, with all of Atlanta easily accessible by all-day hauls, and all the south reaches by day-trading railroad lines, this concern would be hard to down.

City Is Offered $13,000 For 9-1000 of Acre; Work Out the Value of an Acre

If there is any doubt in the minds of prospective real estate dealers as to the extraordinary increase in Peachtree street values, a record on file in the office of Dan Carey, general manager of the park department of Atlanta, is convincing proof.
This particular record relates to the purchase by the city of a piece of land, which measured in fractions, is but 9.1000 of an acre, it is located at the junction of Peachtree and West Peachtree, and was once the site of the Brekintown.

AUCTION, DEC. 12, 10 A. M.

OF THE

F. M. Stocks Development

Mr. Stocks (Frank Stocks) is no exception to the rule of Atlanta citizens who, thirty years ago, knew that Atlanta was to be a great city and he got busy and began to acquire property. He saw it before the railroads or any of the present large property holders in this section did and today he, like a young man, comes to the front and presents the savings of a lifetime with one of the most logical developments Atlanta has been presented with in its history.

ATLANTA IS GROWING

SOUTHERN RAILWAY

6--Lines Out of Atlanta--6

2--Atlanta, Birmingham & Atlantic--2

The Southern Railway has six lines in and out of Atlanta covering the territory as specified below and all these points can be reached within one hour the $2.90 per car switching charges, and if you will look this list of districts over, you will immediately see that you have a connection through the Southern and the A. B. & A. that covers more hundreds of thousands of square miles of territory than possibly another system in the United States

Terminal District

By Forrest Adair

Real estate in Atlanta does not go backward. About the worst thing that ever happens to it is that a particular section may go through a process of seasoning for a few months. At the end of the seasoning period trade starts up with renewed activity, higher values are established and the trend is ever upward.

Only a few years ago Trinity Ave., Mitchell St., Garnett St., Forsyth St., Central Ave. and Pryor St. were looked upon only as a boarding-house district. It was not considered the property had any further usefulness or any additional value. Then began the invasion by wholesale and manufacturing concerns; resulting in a complete change in the status of this property. It is now treated by all real estate men as business property. During the transformation from boarding-house to business property values readjusted themselves, increasing from $100 and $200 a foot up to $500 and $1,000 a foot.

Nelson St. frontage is just about as near the middle of Atlanta as it would be possible to establish a wholesale and manufacturing district. Proximity to center is sometimes acquired at the expense of disconnection from railroad tracks. For certain lines of business a railroad track is a vital element. The Nelson St. property has the advantage of central location, proximity to everything that goes to make up the activities of the city, having the additional advantage of a railroad track in the rear.

Business efficiency determines success or failure in these days of sharp competition. A concern located on Nelson St., right in the heart of Atlanta Terminal District, within one block of a passenger station, with all of Atlanta easily accessible by down-hill hauls, and all the south reached by eight radiating railroad lines, this concern would be hard to down.

Conditions right now are favorable to the buyer. The man of brains and cool judgment has the best opportunity he has had in a long time. By this time next year buyers will be pushing each other out of line.

FORREST ADAIR.

The great Northwest has been fully built up and populated, and the only available lands for immigration are now in the South, and immigration to America has been continuous since America's birth. There will be many millions more people in the United States, and every citizen adds value to every acre of land, to every city block, to every foot of railroad property, and the Terminal District in which Mr. Stocks' property is located is the heart of the clearing house of their supply depot.

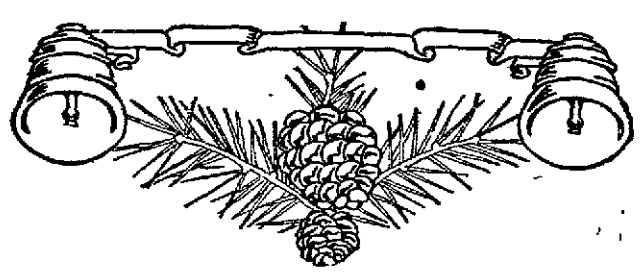

Before the present Terminal Station was planned Mitchell Street property was high at $100 per front foot, yet Mr. Asa Candler last year paid Martin Amorous $5,000 per front foot for the northeast corner of Forsyth and Mitchell Sts. for a bank corner, and made a splendid trade.

Only Short Time Left in Which To Raise Endowment Assessments

By January 1 1914, the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs has been asked to complete its apportionment to the general endowment fund, and add to the nucleus in hand toward the state endowment. There is but one way to do it, and that is to respond promptly to the call now before us. "Twenty-five cents per capita. Let us meet the call, discharge this obligation and turn to something else. At the request of Mrs. Shepherd, president of the eighth district, Mrs. Lipscomb sent to all the clubs in her district the following letter, which may be used as a model and inspiration in other districts.

Mary H. Washington Chapter To Erect Drinking Fountain

The November meeting of the Mary Hammond Washington chapter D A R was held at the home of Mrs J A Selden. Mrs Selden and Mrs Harry Roberts being hostesses. Mrs Reeves gave a splendid report as treasurer and a vote of thanks was extended her for her very efficient work. The chapter will entertain at luncheon the state conference which will be held in Milledgeville on the 20 to which will be invited the state officers and distinguished guests. This luncheon will be given at the new Dempsey hotel February 17 1914. Mrs. Selden reported that the Mary Hammond chapter to erect in the O. W. R. river near Macon a drinking fountain to mark the birthplace of the first white child was baptized in America. A committee with Mrs William Lee Ellis as chairman was appointed said committee to petition council for permission to erect same.

Report Read at Moultrie On Bartow Memorial Fund

The convention passed from the roll and formal into a period of most interesting interest very suddenly when the report of the Francis S. Bartow memorial fund was made through Mrs. Grady of Savannah. The report announced the completion of the work of raising $100,000 for the Bartow memorial fund. Miss Alice Baxter who was then president of the Georgia division, presided at the reception of the report. Miss Mildred Rutherford offered the following resolution:

THE WORLD'S GREATEST WAR. Many men have gone singing into battle sustained by this thought: "It is not I but the man next me on the firing line who will be stricken by a bullet or torn by bursting shell. It is true that in war a certain number must fall. Statistics prove that. But it is he and not I who will fall to answer the next muffled roll; it is his wife and not mine who shall shade her eyes and watch vainly for his coming down the long road which leads back to peace."

These emotions are common as humanity and they rise in the old human dread of facing ugly facts and the preference for soothing ourselves by pleasant subtleties. It is extremely probable that most men and women encourage these sentiments about tuberculosis, the greatest world plague of history. This is Tuberculosis Sunday. It is a good day and opportunity to think with courage and candor about a subject so vital to the happiness and the health of every person in the land. Evading is not going to help. It will simply make harder the task when we realize its true dimensions and set out to grapple with them.

Elsewhere The Constitution publishes a special article on tuberculosis by Dr. Mary E. Lapham, of Highlands, N. C. Ask any well-informed physician and he will tell you that this remarkable woman stands in the front rank of the American specialists who are patiently and with intelligence fighting this disease. She calls her article a "sermon." It is that and more. It is a revelation, and if the true meaning of the sale of the Red Seal stamps, and the year-round work of which they are only a part, sink home, men and women generally will do well to scan the text and heed its teachings.

Dr. Lapham's ideas will come as a shock to most laymen. We have been surrendering, she says, to the supposition that if we could please every case of tuberculosis and every bacillus on an ocean island, we could have "obliterated" the plague. We believe we can only manifest the disease when the germ enters our bodies from the outside. What, she asks, if it should have been lying dormant in our bodies since or almost since birth? What if with the overwhelming majority of people this bacillus is ever present, in a great many harmless, in many others, to be fanned into activity by some outside condition or individual weakness of which we are now ignorant?

Like all leading questions, these ones startle. But there are others. What if we share these bacilli as a universal inheritance with many animals, which she names, and many plants, which she names? It is demonstrated that we do, she says. What if the germ should intrinsically be a harmless organism, a part of the very blood and tissue as are other germs, but becoming dangerous because we do not understand its laws and the laws of our bodies? What are we accomplishing if we do reduce the death rate, and we are, when the number of new cases, especially among children, mounts yearly?

The whole plea of Dr. Lapham is that we spend effort on finding cause no less than in combating effect. Our measures of prevention are today only partially effective, imperative though they may be. What are we going to do about it, when babes and adults who have never come in external contact with the tubercle bacilli develop the disease? Here is made plain the parallel in the opening paragraph of this editorial. Science today believes that most men and women and children harbor, or have harbored, the germ of tuberculosis. Yet with the blithe spirit of the soldier they go singing into battle, knowing that tuberculosis must claim its yearly toll of nearly a million, but leaning on the risk that it will be some other, and not themselves, who will pay.

This is hardly so much courage as it is costly foolhardiness. The remedy lies in acting liberally in supporting the present warfare, such as is afforded in the Red Seal stamps now on sale throughout Atlanta. But there goes along a sterner duty, if we are to cure and not merely palliate. The states individually must hire men and provide equipment that shall enable us to battle intelligently with a menace for which we now only grope in the dark. Money spent in that direction will eventually wipe out a visitation that now costs many hundreds of millions each year in lives and impaired efficiency, and more than words can estimate in human anguish.

MRS. OTTLEY'S REJOINDER.

The Constitution presents in its news columns today the reply of Mrs. John K. Ottley, of Atlanta, to Judge Samuel E. Adams, of Savannah, in his views published last Sunday and opposing woman suffrage as a menace to home and state. It is superfluous to introduce Mrs. Ottley to our readers in either city or state. As one of the constructive and temperate leaders in the woman's movement, she has gained a reputation for courage, penetration and poise that carries its own recommendations. Her reply is a vital and an unusual document. We hope every man and woman in Georgia, whether they believe women should or should not vote, will read its every line. For Mrs. Ottley sheds upon a subject now very large, and here and there very acrimoniously, in the public mind a clearness and a tolerance and a wealth of information that comes as an educational revelation.

Mrs. Ottley's argument pivots upon the premise that today's demand for the ballot is nothing strange nor sinister. She believes it is merely one step in the natural evolution by which women have been emancipated from a condition of quasi-bondage. Years ago, she says, we gave women the right to control their own property. Is the control of property, amounting in some instances to the power swayed by millions, to be compared to the right to cast one solitary ballot? If we fear woman's vote and do not distrust her commercial acumen, into what impasse do we lead ourselves, she argues. Mrs. Ottley also insists upon making clear the distinction between contentions over the right, per se, to the vote, with the bitterness engendered by the very struggle itself. We must not confuse principle, she declares. We make a mistake, when we confuse cause with effect.

It is a privilege for The Constitution to reproduce these two splendid expositions of a dominant world issue, from a Georgia man and a Georgia woman, animated by so generous and broad a spirit. What Judge Adams and Mrs. Ottley have to say upon the subject will make not only interesting reading; it will do admirably to preserve as sources from which public opinion can mold its judicial and conservative line of thought and action.

"YOUR PRESIDENT AND MINE."

One would not turn to "Uncle Joe" Cannon, erstwhile czar of the national house of representatives, for a sermon on civic patriotism, but such is the tenor of a speech he recently delivered at the annual dinner of the Illinois St. Andrews Society in Chicago. Uncle Joe had returned in jocular mood to the former accusations against him as a despot, saying that at no stage in his career had he matched the "cazardom" of President Wilson over his party. "But," continued the ex-speaker, "he is your president and my president," intimating that until time had developed the error of Mr. Wilson's course the country must stand back of him, and that the constitution provided plenty of redresses for rescuing the nation from the clutches of a misguided president and his party.

The thing that is significant is Mr. Cannon's interpretation of non-partisan citizenship, "your president and my president," is becoming increasingly the viewpoint of the nation. Up to the civil war, the American people took partisan politics with deadly seriousness. To see on "the other side," except in time of war, was to be guilty of one of the deadly sins. The animosities and bitterness of the old political campaigns, and how they alienated families, are familiar if unlovely history.

With the broadening of the national point of view, the spread of the newspaper and the general increase of educational facilities, a change has come over the spirit of our prejudices. We still fight valiantly under party banners, but it is a government of parties. But we no longer unathematize the fellow on the other side. In our cooler moments, we are ready to admit that he may be actuated by sound patriotism according to his lights, even that we may ourselves be wrong. We have ceased to believe that we, individually, enjoy a monopoly either of patriotism or of individual political wisdom.

In no respect is this evidence of growth shown so encouragingly than in the national attitude toward the president of the United States. Let the president once take the oath of office, nowadays, and the people generally, except the few irreconcilable cranks and partisans, are willing to give him a fair trial and a square deal. They want to see him make good. They are tolerant of his mistakes, if they are the mistakes of strength and not of weakness. As long as there is a definite promise in his performance, they are apt to be friendly toward him, despite the demarcations of partisanship.

IS GEORGIA GOING BACKWARD?

Among the interesting items cited recently in The Constitution as those in which Georgia takes priority over the whole nation was in relation to the so-called "married woman's act." In other words, this was the first American commonwealth to recognize and put into law the fact that though a woman married it did not deprive her of the right to manage her own property. In the days when that act was taken, it was the "rarest north" for the rights of woman in America, now conceded as commonplace.

Is the Georgia of today less progressive with regard to ethics than the Georgia of those times? The question is legitimate. Only last summer we had legislation placing mothers and fathers on a plane of equality with regard to the custody of children, in the event of a legal separation. Previously, the law did not recognize the mother's right, though the father might have violated every commandment in the decalogue.

But there is still present in Georgia an anachronism that indicts the state's reputation for progress and that is the fact that it does not admit women to the practice of law. They can freely, and when qualified, practice medicine and serve as trained nurses, in both of which professions they hold life in the hollow of their hands.

Their brains and energy are welcomed in the business world and they "make good" in many positions of high responsibility. But when it comes to arguing before a Georgia tribunal, they have no status whatever. We present the anomaly of maintaining law schools which graduate women, sometimes with first honors, but closing the doors of the courts to them. States all around us years ago cast off this ancient embargo.

The next Georgia legislature should set the state in line with modern thought, redeem the principles of justice toward women in which Georgia once led the nation. And we believe that when the legislature fully recognizes the import of that justice, action will be forthcoming.

THE WISDOM OF WILEY.

What Dr. Harvey W. Wiley recently told a representative of The Constitution about the prevention of infant mortality and the general conservation of health ought to sink deep into the intelligence of the people of Atlanta. Dr. Wiley, who spent part of a day in the city on his way to New Orleans, stressed the progress that would come not only from an elevation of our standards of milk inspection, but as well of our general health laws.

He said, with perfect truth, that while we strive to keep our police and fire departments on a plane of high efficiency, spending much money on them, we put health in the background, with a niggardly appropriation. It is right and necessary to have an adequate police and fire force. No city can exist without them. But it is equally necessary to unite the hands of those who are fighting disease, and the other's the straight and narrow road that leads to hell's fire and everlasting damnation.

The above recalls the Georgia colored preacher who wished to "line out" the hymn beginning "Plunged in a gulf of dark despair, 'You wretched sinners, come out of dar'." In the matter of milk inspection, Dr. Wiley showed that the lives of many infants could be saved here annually, if we took due precaution as to purity, cleanliness and manner of dispensing. Already the energies of Dr. Claude Smith, city bacteriologist, has accomplished wonders in this direction. But he is handicapped by lack of funds, and by lack of co-operation in not having a sufficient force of inspectors, and the latter are unavailable because of the so-called "poverty" of the city.

THE BURDEN OF PARDONS.

Recorder Nash R. Broyles, of Atlanta, one of the undoubted authorities on crime in the southern states, commends The Constitution's exhortation of the pardon record of Bleasde, of South Carolina, and names other offenders, hardly less mischievous. He believes there is almost universally, an abuse of the pardoning power. He thinks too much fearful and tragic responsibility is vested in the governor in the way of pardons, and he would favor laws lifting or modifying it.

Recorder Broyles is right. There is entirely too much power vested in many American executives with regard to the function of clemency and the personal pressure upon them is unjust, and in some instances positively damaging to their health. That is not to mention the feature of expediency. It is needless to relate instances in Georgia where the time of the governor, the incumbent or his predecessors, has been diverted for days from public business in the hearing of applications for pardon. In Georgia, especially, the situation is unfortunate, in that the wide latitude given the governor under the law makes him virtually a retrial court, duplicating the functions of the pardon board, and in cases where the incumbent is not conscientious, opening the way to serious and flagrant abuses.

No one who has not sat in the chair of a governor, or any other official holding life and death in the hollow of his hands, knows the tremendous psychic drain upon him, when mothers, fathers, wives, brothers, sisters and friends approach him with every argument possible to the wide range of the human emotion. The man who can resist such appeals needs to be made of heroic fiber. It is not humane or just to subject him to such a strain and it is not justice to the public business to saddle this added weight on him.

The way out is, of course, a difficult and intricate one. It ought to be possible to find a solution without erring on the side of mercy or justice, mercy and justice to society as well as to the man or the woman who has offended against its laws. One thing is certain, and that is that our judicial processes, and our pardoning machinery cannot much longer sustain the unequal strain under which they now labor.

A presidential compliment puts congress in such a good humor it gets down to business again with a look of real enjoyment.

Huerta is trying to borrow money abroad—probably for funeral expenses.

Pretty soon eggs will be running a race with diamonds in the commercial reports.

The clipping bureaus will lose a paying patron when Huerta subsidizes.

"I like America," says Mrs. Pankhurst. Naturally—$20,000 worth.

Mr. Bryan ought to know all about the currency problem, being an expert at ringing the cash register.

There is no doubt at all about the earning capacity of this congress.

Roosevelt's presidential messages would fill a five-foot shelf. You can wade through Wilson's while waiting for a quick lunch.

Why should Huerta send abroad for money when he is staging battle scenes for the film companies?

"Scatter sunshine," says Deacon Rockefeller; but of course you mustn't forget to replenish your lamps with Standard oil.

Just From Georgia By FRANK L. STANTON. The Chimney Corner Children. I. The Chimney Corner Children seem sweeter as the time Comes for the bells of Christmas to cheer them with their chime; In rosy groups they gather when the Night Wind sings his song And listen to the Christmas tales we've known and loved so long.

II. The Chimney Corner Children—You see each curly head There, at the morning fireplace, ere the sun is out of bed; When the wind sings down the chimney they think it comes to say: 'I'm from the land of Santa Claus where all the toys stay.'

III. Sweet Chimney Corner Children, let me be one with you And dream that in your eyes of light my dreams are coming true; And the heart's door shall open and Grief shall be at rest, And Life shall hold the love of you like illness on Love's breast!

But the Sermon Went On. An old darkey preacher is quoted as follows in The Kansas City Star: "Brudderin, dey's only two roads through this dar'k vale of woe. One's the broad and crooked road that leads to eternal destruction, and the other's the straight and narrow road that leads to hell's fire and everlasting damnation."

Sermon In a Sentence. The editor of The Longview Times Citizen strikes home in this: "Try printers' ink for a change from the fence corner style of advertising. The robins and sparrows are an illiterate lot, anyway."

We Need a Gorgas to Combat Ravaging Great White Plague; A Sermon for Tuberculosis Day.

Mary E. Lapham, of Highlands Camp, Sanatorium, Highlands, N. C., is among the first national authorities on tuberculosis. She has written especially for The Constitution a frank analysis of the status of the fight against that disease, to be read on Tuberculosis Day. Dr. Lapham states, with startling candor, that we are attacking tuberculosis at the wrong angle.

By Mary E. Lapham, M. D. "For which of you, desiring to build a tower, doth not first sit down and count the cost, whether he has sufficiency to complete it? Lest haply when he hath laid a foundation, and is not able to finish, all that behold begin to mock him, saying, 'This man began to build and was not able to finish.'"

The sale of Red Cross seals this year was not as markedly successful as heretofore. There was a lack of enthusiasm, which possibly expressed a deeper instinct—a feeling that tuberculous work had come to a standstill, that there was nothing new—no new ideas to attract attention and arouse interest—nothing but the same old story in the same old way. The need for beds, for nursing, for milk and eggs is steadily increasing, but the burden of carrying down on us now because we see no hope of a change for the better in the future. As the magnitude of the suffering becomes more apparent, the difficulty of relieving it is magnified to such an extent that we are reduced, and that the number of cases steadily increases up to maturity. The demand for beds, for relief from suffering, becomes ever greater. In spite of our efforts, the flood is rising, and the taxpayers that are building and supporting $20,000,000 hospitals may well call a halt and ask for a report from a tuberculosis committee justifying the expenditure of so much money by a plain statement of the facts upon which this expenditure is based. This committee would have to state that tuberculosis is menacing our future, and that it must be stopped. That the only way to do this is to take care of all cases, for two reasons: First, to prevent their being sources of contagion to others; second, to get them well and educated so that they never expose anyone else to such a danger.

Prevention of Exposure. The main justification for our present methods of expenditure is the prevention of exposure. It is universally believed that this is the only way that can be required, and therefore if we could prevent the transmission from one case to another we could stamp out tuberculosis as we have smallpox and other communicable diseases. If we can keep tubercle bacilli out of our bodies we can never have tuberculosis, is the cardinal point—the point upon which all our work turns, and therefore the ideal way would be to place every case and every tubercle bacillus derived from a case upon an island, and to the end of the world, thus effectually obliterate all means of perpetuating the disease. This is what we mean when we speak of "obliterating tuberculosis," because we believe that the tubercle bacillus is only resident in the human body, and cannot grow outside, and that its transmission from case to case is the sole supply. We are doing our best to prevent this transmission, but our methods are not perfect. We can never have tuberculosis, is the cardinal point—the point upon which all our work turns, and therefore the ideal way would be to place every case and every tubercle bacillus derived from a case upon an island, and to the end of the world, thus effectually obliterate all means of perpetuating the disease. This is what we mean when we speak of "obliterating tuberculosis," because we believe that the tubercle bacillus is only resident in the human body, and cannot grow outside, and that its transmission from case to case is the sole supply.

In making a critical estimate of the tuberculosis situation, we must clearly see the need for the reduction of the death rate and the reduction of the total number of cases. Because of improved methods of treatment, the death rate, as tuberculosis decreases? No. On the contrary, it is steadily increasing. The number of cases is increasing, and the greater complexity, until it is beginning to be found in intractably interwoven and intermingled cases, which are never recovered. A small proportion of tuberculosis cases are cured, but the vast majority are not. The fact cases are all that we take cognizance of, beneath this small percentage is an enormous number of cases never recovered, existing as all sorts of failures in health and strength, so that at the least calculation the number of cases of tuberculosis existing in our total population is undetermined. With 1,000,000 manifest cases and 5,000 unsuspected latent cases, we may well ask: Are you sure that we are working the right way? Can nothing more be known? Would it be worth the cost of the lives of our most scientific men to carefully study the problem and report the latest scientific findings to the world? Would it be worth the cost of the lives of our most scientific men to carefully study the problem and report the latest scientific findings to the world?

We do not know when the disease begins nor how; whether it is an intestinal infection constantly resident and constantly entering and leaving the blood stream, as do many other infections do, and manifesting itself at any time in any way; the bacillus of Koch may be but the tip of the iceberg of the most widespread of all diseases, and the only one affecting so many forms of animal life, and about which we know so little. Tuberculosis and our disease are an analogous phenomenon, or separate and unique. The disease of the cow, the sheep, the pig, the turkey, pigeons and birds, so have pigs, sheep, cats, dogs, cows and monkeys. All of these animals have the same kind of tubercle bacillus, produced by the same kind of tubercle bacillus. Shall we infer that this is handed from snake to snake, from frog to frog, from pigeon to pigeon, from cow to cow, in sealed transmission, these birds could break this transmission, each class of existences would be saved? Or shall we say that this is an extraordinary fact? That as a rule a disease affects a very restricted number of species; the boll weevil does not attack any other species; the locusts eat only apples; Anthrax is harmless to horses; foot and mouth disease does not touch frogs.

Would it be worth the cost of the lives of our most scientific men to carefully study the problem and report the latest scientific findings to the world? Would it be worth the cost of the lives of our most scientific men to carefully study the problem and report the latest scientific findings to the world? Would it be worth the cost of the lives of our most scientific men to carefully study the problem and report the latest scientific findings to the world?

We do not know when the disease begins nor how; whether it is an intestinal infection constantly resident and constantly entering and leaving the blood stream, as do many other infections do, and manifesting itself at any time in any way; the bacillus of Koch may be but the tip of the iceberg of the most widespread of all diseases, and the only one affecting so many forms of animal life, and about which we know so little. Tuberculosis and our disease are an analogous phenomenon, or separate and unique. The disease of the cow, the sheep, the pig, the turkey, pigeons and birds, so have pigs, sheep, cats, dogs, cows and monkeys. All of these animals have the same kind of tubercle bacillus, produced by the same kind of tubercle bacillus. Shall we infer that this is handed from snake to snake, from frog to frog, from pigeon to pigeon, from cow to cow, in sealed transmission, these birds could break this transmission, each class of existences would be saved? Or shall we say that this is an extraordinary fact? That as a rule a disease affects a very restricted number of species; the boll weevil does not attack any other species; the locusts eat only apples; Anthrax is harmless to horses; foot and mouth disease does not touch frogs.

What We Need. If we could have an X-Ray apparatus, a well equipped laboratory and the right men, we could handle the matter in a way that would be of handling these questions as Ravenel should be by studying our children, we should in a few years know how many children are born with the tubercle bacillus, and by resting these children, we should be able to establish the relationship of the primary tuberculosis of children to the secondary tuberculosis of adults. We are waiting until the disease kills its victims down into beds, instead of trying to stop it at the start. This is bad finance. Millions for detection and true prevention instead of waiting until we can only palliate, would be much better economy. The greatest need in tuberculosis work is not more money, but more expenditure in brains, in comprehension. What we spend in detection will save an immense amount later on in beds. Let us have a committee of men to show us the way and co-ordinate our efforts. Fewer beds, and more brains.

The relation of the state boards of health to this is not a matter of minor importance. The presentation of the true dangers of tuberculosis to the people in order that they may know how to protect themselves is a matter of the highest importance. The people must first know in order to act, and the means of defense must come from an intelligent understanding of the disease. The state boards of health should be equal to the task and instruct their taxpayers in the fundamental principles of the disease. Unfortunately, some health officers are too eagerly pursuing private gain in the study of tuberculosis demands far more time and far more strength than these officers have. It is not possible for these officers to devote his entire time to the prevention of tuberculosis according to the scientific principles of modern medicine, and to the dogmas and traditions inherited from the past. Things move in the tubercle bacillus as well as in other things, and who stands still gets left.

Four or five thousand dollars spent on a scientific man to devote his entire time to the study of preventive medicine and the instruction of the people, would be about as good a plan as we could have. Such men are being trained at Cambridge especially for public health work, and their services are exacting and of inestimable value in the future.

A Paradox. We find these bacilli present in the milk and dung of cows very often, and the cow seems to be perfectly well. With a marked tuberculin reaction and tubercle bacilli in the milk and dung, the milk and dung, and the cow had tuberculosis. Of necessity, when slaughtered, not a sign of harm may be seen. Shall we say that the cow is healthy? That the cow taken in these bacilli will be the grass or hay she eats and the water she drinks, and the milk and dung, and the tubercle bacilli are part and parcel of ordinary life and a normal phenomenon? We drink our milk and eat our hay and our grass, and 300,000 children in the United States have tuberculosis caused by tubercle bacilli derived from the milk of healthy cows. Would these cases be "obliterated" by quarantining this anything to do with transmission from case to case, or residence in the tubercle bacillus? Evidently, to prevent the class of infection, we must sterilize the milk, but this is not a practical proposition. We can in no way prevent the presence of tubercle bacilli in the milk of healthy cows.

It begins to seem as if the tubercle bacillus is too great for us to combat, that it is so universal and so stupendous that an infection by tubercle bacilli is absolutely unavoidable. There is a great distinction that must be clearly recognized between an infection by tubercle bacilli and tuberculosis. We are all striving with might and main to keep tubercle bacilli from entering our bodies, and have been ever since our lives began. We know beyond all doubt that during the time our children are in the world, they are all infected by tubercle bacilli, because they all give positive tuberculin reactions. However, not all of these children have tuberculosis. Far from it. But it does mean that the tubercle bacilli are there, and that the child is a possible victim. Since all are infected, the point of greatest importance is to know when the tubercle bacilli are in the body in any way prevent the entrance of tubercle bacilli into the bodies of all our children, and that the number of cases of tuberculosis is too great for us to combat, that it is so universal and so stupendous that an infection by tubercle bacilli is absolutely unavoidable.

THE PYRAMID MAKE-UP OF NEWSPAPER PAGES

An Address Before the Rotary Club of Atlanta by W. L. Halstead, Business Manager of The Atlanta Constitution

THE PYRAMID MAKE-UP is the scheme by which newspaper pages are assembled with the news matter at the upper left corner and across the top, and the advertising at the lower right corner, built upward and to the left, the larger advertisements at the bottom and the smaller ones pyramided according to size. It does not apply to classified advertising, to full page or other advertisements of full column length. In the last couple of years all the Atlanta newspapers have adopted it, in a modified form, however, as they have not enforced it strictly.

For a thorough understanding of its purpose and effect and the reasons for its wide adoption, it is necessary to study critically several of the fundamental phases of advertising and some relating principles underlying the newspaper publishing business.

CHARACTER IS THE VITAL FACTOR IN A NEWSPAPER'S POTENTIALITY AS AN ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

A newspaper should be made primarily for its readers. Its popularity with them and their confidence in it controls to a very large degree its potentiality as an advertising medium. Quantity of circulation, irrespective of other factors, has little value. It is the easiest thing imaginable to get circulation for even a handbill. The character of a newspaper as represented by the kinds of news matter it prints, its treatment of the news, its attitude upon public questions, its aims and purposes, its performances as an institution, the character of its ownership, are the vital factors in relation to results from its advertising columns, because it is those things which actually control, in the end, not only the quantity of its circulation, but the kind of people who read it, and the degree of credence they give its advertising.

The greatest newspapers are the best advertising mediums. The only way to make a newspaper a fine advertising medium is to make it a fine newspaper. When people read the news in a newspaper they read the advertising. When they believe the news they believe the advertising. The editor of a newspaper has more to do with the productiveness of his paper as an advertising medium than the circulation manager, the advertising manager and the business manager combined.

MR. DON SEITZ'S FORMULA.

I once heard Mr. Don Seitz, business manager of The New York World, give this formula for the business success of a newspaper: "Print the news and print it first," which when developed into its full significance means that the way to make money in the operation of a newspaper is to make it the best newspaper in its field.

Joseph Pulitzer, the shining genius of present-day Journalism, had a contemptuous disregard for the business side of his paper, although he was an able business man. He devoted the entire capacity of a wonderful mind to making The World a great newspaper. Tremendous profits came primarily because The World was a great newspaper to every one of its readers.

As strange as it may seem, those papers which are the most determined in the policy of giving their readers first consideration and which are the most rigid and arbitrary in subordinating the individual interests and personal preferences of advertisers, to that end, are the ones that are paying their advertisers best.

THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS' POLICIES.

The Chicago Daily News is a notable example of this. It is one of the most arbitrary papers in this country with respect to advertising rates, position, and other terms. Until recently it charged double price for all space occupied by cuts, and even penalties for breaking column rules in advertisements. It treats advertising strictly as a by-product. It will omit advertising without the slightest hesitation to make room for news or for any of its similar policies. It limits the amount of space an advertiser may use on certain days at congested periods. If an advertiser wishes to be sure of space on a certain day he reserves it in advance.

These policies are unpopular with advertisers who seek special advantages. But The Chicago Daily News is conceded to be one of the most profitable mediums in the world for nearly all lines of newspaper advertising, and carries more of it than any other six-day paper. It is one of the three or four biggest money-makers in this country. While it has a very large circulation in a small area and its rates are quite low, nevertheless the thing which gives it its remarkable productiveness is that it is built for its readers. The New York World, The New York Herald, The Chicago Tribune, The Washington Star, The Kansas City Star and many other leading advertising mediums follow the same general principle.

A STORY OF MR. KEELEY.

I heard this story told the other day of Mr. James Keeley, the able publisher of The Chicago Tribune. A slight elevator accident had occurred in a department store which used a great deal of space in The Tribune. A reporter investigating the matter, learned the trivial nature of the accident and turned in a few lines about it, which probably would have been crowded out of the paper. The store owner sent a peremptory message that nothing was to be printed about it. Mr. Keeley heard of this, made a new assignment of the accident, secured a photograph of the lady, who merely had had a finger scratched and printed the story conspicuously on the front page.

I think this was going a little to extremes. But Mr. Keeley, a great newspaper man, was so jealous of The Tribune's independence that he would not permit his best advertiser to think that he could influence the news policy of the paper in the slightest particular.

NEWSPAPERS ARE AT A DISADVANTAGE TYPOGRAPHICALLY.

Newspapers are printed on paper that costs 2 1/2c a pound or less, with ink that costs 6c a pound or less, and at a running speed for each press unit of from 9,000 to 12,000 impressions an hour.

All other kinds of printing, which pretend to typographical excellence, are done with paper costing at least three times as much as newspaper, with ink that costs from four to six times as much as news ink, and at a press speed of one-half to one-fourth as great. For example, the standard magazines, such as Cosmopolitan, Everybody's, McClure's, are printed on paper costing 8c to 6c a pound. The ink costs 25c to 30c a pound. The impressions are made at from 4,000 to 5,000 an hour. For such publications as The Ladies' Home Journal, The Metropolitan and The Country Gentleman, which specialize in fine printing, these costs are higher.

Newspapers are in competition for attention with all other periodicals. With these handicaps, it is essential that whatever opportunities they have for typographical excellence, be realized upon to the fullest extent. Under the most favorable conditions, from a critical standpoint, newspapers are typographically inelegant. They are even cumbersome in size. If in the make-up they are still more unappealing, they suffer in this competition and to the degree that they so suffer are they depreciated as advertising mediums.

Nobody reads a newspaper as a matter of duty. Newspapers are read only to the degree that they are interesting. If they are offensive typographically, in so far as they are unattractive. The typography of a newspaper is analogous to a man's dress. Men who do not dress in good taste are at a disadvantage in business and social activities. A newspaper which is not printed in good taste is handicapped similarly in circulation expansion work. It is a well established fact that a paper, to secure new readers, must have the appearance of being newsy and enterprising.

THE WHITE PAPER FORMULA.

The number of pages in a newspaper is determined in most offices by some formula based upon the percentage of news and advertising matter. I imagine the public thinks a newspaper gathers all the advertising it can and all the news it wants, printing enough pages for both.

That is not the case. It gets all the advertising it can and then says to its editor: "You have so many columns in which to print all the news and print it interestingly." He must apportion the space for the various departments accordingly.

Unless the formula, whatever it may be, is closely adhered to, the consumption of white paper will defeat profits. One sheet, or two pages, in The Constitution, for example, including composition, costs approximately $75. Two extra pages a day over the formula for a month would create $2,325 in net expense, with no additional revenue. Papers of large circulation omit advertising to control the number of pages, and will not increase it unless there is enough excess advertising to justify it.

Under present conditions a newspaper, to make normal profits upon a normal investment, should receive for its advertising space, not less than 1 3/4c per inch per thousand of circulation and sell 50 per cent of its total space at that figure. That is predicated, of course, upon a fully developed advertising business. This formula gives a rate for a paper of 60,000 circulation, of 87 1/2c per inch. If it does not sell half of its total space at this rate, it is unlikely to make money. The average rate for newspaper advertising space for the entire country, recently ascertained, is 2.1c per inch per thousand of circulation. Small papers receive 3c and 4c an inch. Metropolitan papers of very large circulation receive 1 1/2c or even less, but only about one in five make money.

THE PRACTICE OF ATLANTA NEWSPAPERS.

For the month of October, The Atlanta Journal's advertising was 48.6 per cent of the total space; The Constitution's was 47.5 per cent; The Georgian and American's was 40 per cent. In November The Constitution's percentage was 51 per cent; The Atlanta Journal's 52 per cent, and the Georgian and American's 45 per cent. These are months of heavy advertising. In the late spring and summer, when advertising is light, The Atlanta Journal's percentage fell to 40 per cent; The Constitution's to 42 per cent; The Georgian and American's to 30 per cent. The year round, The Atlanta Journal and The Constitution will average about 45 per cent advertising, showing that Atlanta papers are generous in the amount of news matter they print. The average advertising rate of these two papers is a fraction less than 1 3/4c per inch per thousand of circulation.

Many of the best papers average 60 per cent advertising. I imagine The New York Evening Journal averages 70 per cent or more. I have seen issues of The Chicago News and The Chicago Tribune average 75 per cent for single issues.

In order to approximate the percentage between news and advertising matter that will provide a profit, the number of special advertising positions must be limited. If a paper should attempt, for example, even to give position next to reading matter on every display advertisement, large and small, it could not average to exceed 33 per cent advertising.

Consequently, there are two big problems to a publisher in relation to special positions. If he gives them to any large proportion of advertisers it is impossible for him to make his paper pleasing and attractive typographically to his readers, and in so far, he depreciates the potential advertising value of his paper.

He will also inevitably increase the number of pages of enough issues to greatly reduce if not wipe out normal profits, for a great deal of advertising must be massed to create a profitable percentage between news and advertising. A newspaper is just as much entitled to profits as any other business.

THE READING OF ADVERTISING IS PARTIALLY ACCIDENTAL.

Undoubtedly it is true at the present time, at least, that the reading of advertising is, to a considerable extent, accidental. I mean by that, that comparatively few people take up a newspaper for the specific purpose of reading the advertising. Many women read retail store advertising systematically. A great many people read the classified advertising with as definite an interest as the news columns. But it is only fair to say that these probably constitute the minority of readers. Most of them read a paper for the news, which is its chief function, encounter the advertising incidentally, are attracted by it for one reason or another and read it extensively. That they do read the advertising is no longer debatable.

Quite naturally, therefore, advertisers seeking maximum results from the space they buy want the positions they think will attract the most readers to their particular advertisements.

There is the widest difference of opinion as to the positions which are valuable. One advertiser wants a right-hand page. Another wants a left-hand page. One wants the back page, on the theory that the majority of people turn from the first immediately to the last page. Another wants the second or third page, in the belief that most people read the pages in the order that they are assembled. One wants the society page in the conviction that everybody reads the society news. One insists upon the top of the page, believing people read across the page before going downward. Another wants the bottom of the page following reading matter for some fanciful reason. There are dozens of preferences of this kind, many of them based on contradictory and some on fantastic psychological theories of the habits of the public mind.

Very few papers outside the large cities, where the tendency in all lines of business is to enforce strict business rules with all customers impartially, are able to resist giving some preferential positions as inconsistent and as valueless as many of them are. Every one likes to please his customers and especially his business friends. Few business men relish persistent refusal to favor patrons.

THE POSITION PROBLEM.

The matter of position is one of the most difficult problems that business and advertising managers have to meet. It involves perpetual partiality, frequent friction, very great inconveniences and often needless expense. The mechanical problem in a composing room of fulfilling position requirements is often acute. In my own office even the pyramid make-up has not entirely solved the problem. I have seen the printers calculate and scheme and shift advertisements and news about from page to page, with the press hour pressing, trying to approximate the pyramid make-up and at the same time fill a lot of special positions which have been bought and others requested, many of them of absolutely no value, as far as results were concerned.

THE VALUE OF SPECIAL POSITION IS LARGELY IMAGINARY.

The value of the position usually desired by advertisers, such as enumerated, is largely imaginary. Most of them are based on pure theory of little or no actual significance.

Any advertisement that relies upon trapping readers by sensational headlines, freakish cuts or set-up, or advantageous position on a page, is a bad advertisement. Any advertisement of reasonable size, containing a legitimate and opportune business message, properly written and typographically pleasing, will produce profitable results. If it does not contain real merit as an advertisement, it will fall despite all efforts to force it upon the readers unwillingly.

Classified advertising pays, in a definite and unmistakable way. It is devoid of typographical display of any kind and the only position is by classification.

Magazine advertising pays when many pages are assembled in mass far removed from reading matter.

THE POLICY OF THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

The last time I heard it quoted the advertising rate of The Saturday Evening Post was $3 an agate line per insertion. This is $112 an inch or $5,376 a page. The Post stands at the very top of the list of profitable advertising mediums of its class.

Not only does it censor its advertising columns as to the character of the matter admitted, but controls by the most rigid rules the typographical appearance of every advertisement. It permits no solid black illustrations to mar the symmetry of pages. It prohibits freakish composition of every kind. Every advertisement must conform strictly to the typographical style which it, and not the advertiser, prescribes. If you don't happen to fancy the prescription you can swallow it or stay out. You are likely to be humiliated if you suggest special position, except in reference to the few that it offers for sale at special prices.

THE NEW YORK HERALD A MARVELOUS PRODUCER.

For many years The New York Herald not only gave no special positions, but set advertising only in outline type. All the advertising was, as is most of it now, as mild typographically as the news. Recently competition forced it into a partial waiver of the rule. Its daily circulation is about 100,000 and its Sunday circulation about 250,000, less than a third that of several other New York papers, charging substantially the same advertising rates. Yet The New York Herald has stood for years on a parity with its competitors, no matter what the quantity of their circulation, as a positive result producer.

AN EXAMPLE OF RESULTS WITHOUT POSITION OR TYPOGRAPHICAL APPEAL.

The Constitution has been conducting a somewhat experimental advertising campaign for Sherrer, the grocer, at No. 38 Gordon street. It has been strikingly successful. The biggest day's business created during the campaign and the advertisement that apparently produced the most direct results, was one buried by large advertisements, far removed from reading matter, on a page of no special selection, and contained only small type and no cuts, crowded even to the point of unattractiveness.

APPROPRIATE CLASSIFICATION THE ONLY ESSENTIAL POSITION.

In my opinion, about the only point of real significance in the matter of position is that of classification. I believe that advertising is entitled to be placed near appropriate reading matter. A cigar advertisement on a society page would be considerably depreciated, because every one knows that few men read that class of news and such an advertisement so placed would be missed by most of the class of readers to which it is directed. A millinery ad on the market page would encounter the same condition.

Newspapers are too large in size to be read in their entirety. It is of actual importance that ads, especially those not large enough to command attention by their size, be put in that part of a newspaper to which the class of readers it is seeking to reach are likely to turn, because, to reiterate, as yet most people peruse a newspaper for the news and read the advertising incidentally.

But it is of much more importance to the advertising that the department of the paper in which it is located be highly interesting and artistically made-up typographically, as to attract and hold the reader. When that each advertisement be so placed that he will stub his toe on it, so to speak, utter a mental curse and skip to a page that is made-up for him and not the advertiser, where he is given only an invitational opportunity to read the advertising and not be compelled to dig the news he is seeking out from a potpourri of advertisements.

THE PYRAMID MAKE-UP.

The pyramid make-up is a compromise of all these conditions I have attempted to describe.

It enables a paper to give preferential position at the left side and across the top of pages to news, to which it is entitled, from both the standpoint of the reader and the advertiser, as difficult as it is to make the latter appreciate the favor.

It enables the paper to increase the percentage of advertising per issue without any apparent diminution of news. Through a kind of optical illusion, a newspaper page with 50 per cent of pyramided advertising will appear to contain 60 per cent or more of news matter. A page containing 50 per cent of advertising, placed indiscriminately, will appear to contain 40 per cent or less of news matter. This does not take into consideration at all the very much more pleasing typographical appeal that can be given the pyramided page.

The pyramid represents the square deal. The larger an advertisement the less it needs position consideration of any kind, its very size helps it to attract readers. It gives opportunity for full descriptions of business propositions and for appealing typographical display as long as the reading of advertising is partially accidental. The smaller advertisement is at some, although by no means a fatal disadvantage in all these particulars, as some of the most successful advertising campaigns ever made were with small copy. But the small advertisement is entitled to an equal chance for attention with the big one. If it is buried by the big one it hasn't an equal chance.

The giving of large customers low prices and concessions is a relic of the period in business when "the buyer had to beware," when commerce was a matching of the wits of the buyer against those of the seller. The rapid tendency in all lines of business today is to treat all customers alike. Quantity discounts are going out of practice. Honesty, fairness and impartiality are the policies of modern business.

ADVERTISING IS A BUSINESS SCIENCE.

Advertising is very nearly a business science. In general terms the formula for its success is to offer the public honest values at honest prices, describe the merchandise, the service or whatever is for sale, truthfully, but interestingly, in a typographical form that is pleasing, placing the message in an advertising medium of known circulation, but of good business character, at standard rates.

Cleverness, trickery, veiled or unveiled deception, exaggeration, freakishness and all other artifices are the relics of the primitive and experimental days of advertising, are not sound practice and in the long run decrease the best results from the expenditure of any advertising appropriation.

For precisely the same reason, when advertisers stop harassing the advertising manager with—

"Bill Jones' ad was over mine this morning and mine was ruined."

"Nobody saw my ad today, because it was on page 10."

"Put my ad tomorrow at the top of the page or leave it out," and begin to talk like this:

"Your paper is wooden and lacks that element of interest as a whole which will make people read it thoroughly. If the paper does not hold the interest of your subscribers absorbingly they are unlikely to read my advertising."

"Your paper is not aggressive enough in its discussions of public questions. I want the paper I advertise in to be a power for public good. I want it to be a factor in the industrial, moral and educational uplift of this community, because I want my advertising to absorb some portion of the editorial prestige of your paper."

"My advertisement this morning was bad typographically. It jarred upon your readers. It was unappealing. Better get some better printers."

"My advertisement today was adjoining that of a quack doctor whose business not only is in disrepute, but whose advertising is unclean. I do not want my advertisement read either before or after his. I am as jealous of the company my advertising keeps as I am of my own personal reputation. Put my advertisement on the cleanest page in your paper."

"My advertising is not pulling properly. I think the copy is not right. Give me your critical opinion of it."

Then will the advertiser and the newspaper be co-operating in the constructive betterment of both the advertising and the paper as a medium in the essential things that constitute true merit in both.

SCHOOL CHILDREN ENJOYING EVERY MINUTE OF THEIR RECESS

PREP CROSS-COUNTRY TO BE RUN MONDAY

Part of the third grade children playing at recess. Basketball team at Crew Street School.

Tech High Will Have Great Basketball Five

By A. Ruben.

Coach McLarty has at last called the basketball squad out and Tech high is hot on the trail of another championship. The prospects are extremely bright and every one is looking for the basketball team to duplicate the feat that the football team did. Three old men are back, and Coach McLarty says that he will get some better men out of the school than played on the last year's team. None of the old varsity men are sure of their places as yet, on account of the especially good showing of the new material.

Class games have been called off on account of the nearness of the Prep League games. Our first game is with Marist, soon after Christmas, and we are determined to win it.

Star Nucleus.

Our star pair of forwards, Clint and Myers, and one guard, Captain Bedell, are back. Captain Bedell was an all-around man last year and he is determined to lead a winning team this year. There is a wealth of new material in the center position, and there is going to be a lively scrap for the vacant places.

Colored is showing up especially good at guard, and promises to make good there. Farmerlee is also doing good work at the center, the doubtful one as yet. Several boys are showing up to such good advantage that Coach McLarty is sure that he will fill that position. Beutell Fincher and several others are about the same as yet, so it is up to them to put on a spirit and outdistance the others.

We have a new court this year, and it is one of the best in the state. The athletic association went to a great expense to give up a good one, and they certainly got it.

With the loss of the football season, Tech high has certainly hung up a record that any prep school in Georgia and won from it.

The part large for prep schools not over 100 miles from here have seen fit to try to cast a damper on our record.

FIRST GRADE C AT BOYS' HIGH NAMES SOCIETY

By Willie Grant.

At the beginning of the 1913 school year the first grade C of Boys' High school took pleasure in naming their society after one of the most well-known men in the city. The gentleman is Hon. Hugh M. Dorsey, who distinguished himself in the recent Frank trial.

The society was named "The Hugh M. Dorsey Literary and Debating Society."

All the members of the class were in favor of this name and we confidently expect a visit from Mr. Dorsey in the near future.

Boys' Night School.

The eighth grade boys have been reading Shakespeare's Henry VIII, and have thoroughly enjoyed taking the parts of the different characters. The Queen Katharine was the favorite and was always spoken for, sometimes in advance. One night Dave Rogers used his hand with this play. He mumbled below his "O, how Humphrey some queen!"

Very interesting to the sixth grade. We are glad to have Willie Anderson in the class.

In the fourth grade the following boys received the highest average in the month of November: John Miller, Howard Page, Jeff Coler, Milton Thomas, Paul Stafford, Branton Jarrett, and Stewart Allen.

The thirteenth class deeply sympathized with their teacher, Miss Dye, whose note on the appendix of a serious surgical operation this week.

The school board endorsed itself to the night school when it voted to make Friday a holiday. The rest did us all good, and we are going to show our appreciation by the hard work between now and Christmas.

All this year our foreign class has been doing a fine job. They cannot even speak the simple English, the poor fellows have had a hard time of it trying to master a difficult language without constant attention from the teacher.

They were all smiles Monday night when the superintendent sent an assurance to the class.

The construction of the small building on the High School campus has made it possible for the superintendent of repairs to clean up our basement building, which has been used as a storeroom for all manner of junk.

The removal of old racks, old barrels, paint cans, broken desks, etc., has made the basement a safe and healthy place.

The boys at the Night school have had a hard time this week, as the poultry show was at the Auditorium-Armory, and while they were studying they could hear chickens crowing and when it was time for them to recite the average was so bad that they could not be heard.

WRITES SCHOOL NEWS

Formwalt Street School.

There was a nice surprise awaiting us Monday morning when we reached school. Our feelings were beautifully level on during the Thanksgiving holidays, and we are now impatiently waiting for the rock sand to be spread over it. This will make it much more convenient to play on.

All of us came to school Monday after spending a delightful Thanksgiving, and we all join in thanking the board of education for giving us another day.

The spelling pins of the eighth grade were won by Paulie Eison and Marton Dameron. These pins insure us to a great extent in our spelling.

The seventh grade has been enjoying their athletics very much during this beautiful weather. Captain Ball is enjoyed by both boys and girls, for the class is large enough to have a team of each.

Prater, in the broad jump, holds the record for the boys having jumped 7 feet 8 inches, and Leon Shimm has jumped 18 feet 8 inches.

Mary Howell and Lillie Harrington have each thrown the basketball 59 feet. These two girls and Ruth Granberry have jumped 5 feet 2 inches.

The attendance banner was captured by the sixth and seventh grades. It was a close race between these two classes, but the end of the week brought them to a tie.

The sixth grade has the spelling banner this week for the second time in succession.

The fourth grade boys and girls are trying very hard to have perfect papers in spelling and to write them neatly. They are all very busy, and they wish to extend their sympathy to the little girls bereaved by the death of their mother.

The tots of the first grade A enjoyed very much the drawing of Thanksgiving pictures.

Prep Basketball Season Will Soon Be Under Way

Now that the prep football season has ended and the championship awarded beyond a doubt to the Tech high school, the attention of the prep fan is directed to basketball.

Hereafter the season has been opened about the first of December, but on account of the interest manifested in the sport the board of education has decided to delay the opening of the league until the early part of the season. This will give the teams time to perfect their team play. As a result of the committee's action, the season will get under way immediately after the Christmas holidays.

The coming season will witness the advent of two teams in the league who until this year had no part in the local prep organization. The two new entries are the Stone Mountain and Donald Fraser teams.

With the Donald Fraser and Stone Mountain teams numbered among its greatest years in its history, as the association already included the leading prep schools, G. M. A. and Peacock, in and around the city.

Good Team at Tech High.

At the present writing it looks very much as if the Tech high school will turn out another championship team similar to the one which carried off the championship last year. The team has a great nucleus for a pennant-winning team, together with a good-sized bunch of players who have shown that they can produce the goods by their work in the interschool league which has not been brought to a most successful close.

From last year's team they have Captain Bedell, considered by many to

A debate on a very interesting subject was held by the Junior High school last week. The subject was "Resolved, That tobacco is more injurious than alcohol." The judges, Edward Griffin, Katharine Vickers and Lucien Harris, gave the award to the negative side.

Anna Corley and Gertrude Orr gave recitations which were greatly enjoyed.

The eighth grade was present at a delightful Thanksgiving entertainment in the seventh grade last week. The "Fourth of July" Standards, one of their plays, was acted to perfection.

In the play, Priscilla was represented by Mrs. J. H. Mackay, Joan Alden by Abel Wambun, Robert Jones represented the unsuccessful lover, Miles Standish.

The first grade B children had their first debate Friday. Their subject, "Resolved, That the pig is mightier than the swine." The negative side was represented by Edw. Everett, Walter Cooper and Donald Burt, who decided in favor of the negative side.

The winners of the medals were Nancy Sullberger and Frank Acker, one of the sixth grade were fortunate in making the highest average of their class last month.

The seventh grade had a history match Tuesday. The first and third sections were given a reward for staying in school.

The girls of the seventh grade are enjoying captain ball very much. A hotly contested game was played Tuesday morning. The side of girls under the management of Nettie Logan were victorious.

The soccer football team of this school played against the Lee Street school team Wednesday afternoon. The score was 1-0 in favor of our team.

We have at last received our graphophone from Jacobs' drug store. The boys are very glad to have it and out at the little recess by the inspiring music of the "Children's Toy March."

We have taken quite an interest in the Child's Welfare exhibit which is now in progress.

We hope that we can all visit the show so that in the future years we will profit greatly.

MARIST CADETS MAKE GREAT SHOW IN PARADE

Cadet Corps Praised by Father Rapier—Good Team in Road Race.

By Eugene Oberdorfer, Jr.

The Marist cadets took part in the corn show parade on Thursday, December 4, 1913. The cadets led the cadet division of the entire parade, which included Marist and Georgia Military academy, under their commandant, Major Eugene R. Schmidt, who praised the cadets for their soldierly appearance and military bearing throughout.

This occasion was the first public one in which the cadets have had a chance to use their new government appearance.

The cadets made indeed a natty appearance in their dressy white pants, navy blue caps with gold trimmings, and immaculate white gloves and collars. Regulation tan shoes, tan uniforms and regulation rifles.

This has been the first occasion upon which the cadet band has had a chance to show its real worth and they testified to their immense value by the dazzling success and all the latest popular band music.

The organization is undoubtedly due to the untiring efforts of Mr. Barber, Lieutenant Hubert and Sergeant Manning, who were in command.

Reverend G. L. Rapier complimented the corps upon its good showing, as did several army and national grade officers.

The Marist athletes are faithfully practicing for the big prep road race which will be held Monday, December 8.

Cadet Captain McCall is now in Athens, Ga., where he is visiting friends at the university, who invited him to attend the big dance of last Friday night.

The basketball men are working very hard, and unless some serious mishap occurs they will surely make an enviable record during the approaching season.

In the Railway Carriage.

(From December Lippincott's)

The British custom of locking passengers into railway carriages is a very curious and amusing habit.

On one occasion I was a witness of this one. I was in a station with a woman with a large bundle. She asked me to hold the bundle for her. I did so, and she opened the carriage window and put another woman's bag at the next station. She gave a look at the open window and asked me to hold the bundle for her. I did so, and she opened the carriage window and put another woman's bag at the next station. She gave a look at the open window and asked me to hold the bundle for her. I did so, and she opened the carriage window and put another woman's bag at the next station.

"This window is closed, I shall not forget it," she said, and she went on her way. Then the porter came around. At the request of the second woman he began to open the window. At a furious glance from the first woman, he stopped. "Clear!" he said in a pretentious manner. "What would you say if I should do it?" she asked. "I should say that the man, as he rose to leave the train, is in the habit of locking the window, and that I shall be frozen to death!"

Splendid Shows Will Be Presented in Atlanta This Week

Top row Robert Hilliard, in "The Argyle Case," at the Atlanta, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday; Mary Dennison, who will play with Madame Ribbedoff Friday, December 12. Eleanor Montell, in "A Butterfly on the Wheel," at the Lyric all week, middle row, Wilton Lackaye, Robert Peterson and Lohita Robertson, in a scene from "Fine Feathers," at the Atlanta on Thursday, Friday and Saturday; Miss Rosaire at the Forsyth and, Helena Hall, at the Columbia.

"The Argyle Case."

(At the Atlanta.)
 Robert Hilliard appears at the Atlanta Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday with Madame Ribbedoff in "The Argyle Case" under the direction of Klav and Lilianer. This instantaneous success and the remarkable six months run in New York, covering the greater part of the past season, are matters of record in the history of the Argyle Case was conceived by Harriet Ford, a well-known writer of stories, dramas, and plays, who has done a great deal to establish her name in the world of dramatic writers. This work was under way with the assurance that William J. Burns the famous criminal investigator would co-operate with her in finding the murderer by tracing "The Argyle Case" precisely as if the crime upon which it is built was an actual case. The fact that he had been employed to solve through his own agency these were those of intricate complications and when the issue was finally worked out every incident had been subjected to the scrutiny of the police department and the detective and the police department and the police department and the police department.

is reported to be the finest dramatic offering of the generation. It is a grand play in five acts, which succeeded to Eugene Walter's masterpiece, and the remarkable success of this play is that presenting it. The company includes Robert Hilliard, Wilton Lackaye, Mary Dennison, Rose Corbett, Robert Hilliard, Lydia Dickson and the others. The play is coming here for Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights and special matinee on Saturday and then for a week of matinees. The cast of the play is a compliment to the star cast of the company, a compliment to the author.

The coming of "Fine Feathers" with its original company in its entirety will be a great success. The company for Manager Place cannot hold its coteries of stars together much longer and therefore the cast of the principal cities will have an opportunity to see this play just as it was presented to the public. Eugene Walter, author of "Fine Feathers," stands foremost among American play-writers. It is he who gave the stage such simple documents as "Paid in Full," "The East West Man," "The Lonesome Pine," and in his latest play he pursues the same relentless path towards uncompromising truth and logical conviction. He has taken another familiar phase of our modern life and made it a comedy. The play is a drama which holds the audience in a vice-like grip from the curtain rise to the final scene. The author can only be described as a writer of a modern man of business—a man who understands the modern man of business and wishes to battle with it, his part is a mixture of humor and pathos, from pathos to comedy with the versatile facility that has made his name a household word. The play is a masterpiece of skill and experience. There is Lohita Robertson young and charming, bringing a new wealth of life and ability to the role of Jane Reynolds, the wife for love of whom the husband strays from the marriage path. There is Lydia Dickson, cleverest of comedienne, in a character role, and the other parts are equally well handled.

"Fine Feathers" was last season's dramatic sensation in New York, and it will be presented here in the identical form, without the slightest change, in cast or production.

"The Girl of My Dreams." (At the Atlanta.)
 A musical play of distinction is "The Girl of My Dreams," which will open at the Atlanta next week. It is seldom that tunefulness and wit

Girl Flees Screaming Into Street From 'Ghost' in Church at Athens

Athens, Ga., December 6.—(Special.) Literally thousands of people in the past two weeks have come down town nights to see the "ghost" in the parlor of the First Baptist church of this place, which was discovered only about two weeks ago, though it has been present just as visibly for fifteen years or more and never noticed before.

The discoverer was accidental. A young lady stepped into the entrance of the church in the heart of the business section of the city one evening after dark to tie her shoe lace. She fled screaming to the sidewalk and her explanation was that she had seen the apparition and members of the church in the heart of the business section of the city one evening after dark to tie her shoe lace. Atlanta Society Is Delighted With Week's Entertainments

Brilliant entertainments marked the week socially and challenged the art of florists and caterers and tried the strength of musicians.

The first of the larger entertainments was that given by Mr. and Mrs. Ed. and Mrs. L. J. Geison of Brunswick, and Miss Sarah Stern of Savannah.

which the eye turned there was foliage and flowers.

Delicious Refreshments.
 Mr. Thomas B. Payne led the beautiful cotillon with Miss Grant, and the favors included jessamine, daisies, flower fans, corsage bouquets, fancy headgear, canes, caps and boutonnieres.

At 1:30 o'clock the fun of hot coffee and chocolate drew the guests to the loggia, and there being massed on silver platters were delicate little but bitter biscuits, each holding a tiny country sausage, or a crisp piece of bacon. The biscuits were like the proverbial "hot cakes" though the dinner served several hours before had proven an elegant repast.

Assisting Mr. and Mrs. Inman in entertaining their guests, were Mrs. Hugh Richardson, Mrs. Emily McDougald, Mr. and Mrs. John Grant.

Charming visitors included Miss Davis of Virginia and Mrs. Charles Dana, of New York. The costumes were markedly at high and picturesque, the costume of the lovely young hostess an artistic one in white satin, with tulle overdress of golden brown, sparkling with crystal sequins. Miss Robert A. Smith wore one of the handsomest toilets—a white tulle overdress in rainbow sequin.

Miss Grant was charming in a dancing gown of turquoise blue satin with trimmings of lace, and she carried lilies and orchids.

To Miss Jackson and Mr. Aloop.
 The dinner dance which Mr. and Mrs. Morris Brandon gave Thursday evening at their home on Pace's Ferry, was a most artistic and beautiful hospitality which extended to some forty guests and a compliment to Miss Edith Jackson and Mr. Edward Aloop, whose wedding takes place December 12th.

Mrs. Brandon made a veritable garden of her front porch, the canvassed walls hung with foliage, and hanging baskets from the ceiling filled with blooming pink begonias and fern. She had palms here and there and swings with lights from shaded lamps. The living room and dining room made a ball room of simple proportion for a guests, and in these two rooms American Beauty roses were used to decorate.

In the sun parlor, the plants from the conservatory showed blooming narcissi and lilies and carnations producing a spring like atmosphere.

Mrs. Brandon's becoming dancing gown was of white chiffon and satin, with tulle of lace, a touch of color in the folds of rose tinted tulle on the corsage. Visitors included Mrs. James Graham of Ohio, wearing a

Business of Being Society Woman Is a Serious and Important One

WHAT COULD WE DO WITHOUT HER?

By Isma Dooly

Spiritual grace is one of the requisites of the society woman and there are those who believe that no society woman has spiritual grace. The carper is the woman who has time to waste in this moment of civilization when nobody has a right to idle.

She selects as her motive of activity the continued scrutiny of the one she calls the society woman.

Now let me see what I can tell of the society woman and her doings this week. She began early Monday morning and I had to start out early with my notebook and pencil to keep up with what she was doing. I met her at 9 o'clock at the welfare exhibit and she had a humber in hand and was putting pictures on the wall of the model nursery. She quitted a baby whose mother had left it in the hospitable swing basket, and helped the nurse get the baby ready for medical inspection. She phoned somebody to get her to look into the case of a little corn club boy who had coughed all the night before and was overheard by his hostess. She would have sent the crippled child she favored home in her machine sooner only the machine had gone to convey an elderly friend to the city.

NOW SHE MUST GO HOME

It was 1 o'clock before this society woman who earns no wage of any kind for her labors remembered she had to get home to be there when her husband came to lunch and talk over the little boys party to be given the next day.

She was back at the welfare exhibit at 3 o'clock to see what could be done to get the mothers of the kindergarten districts there free for the winter. She felt she would be so benefited by what this did see.

She unwrapped the toys which another society woman had sent for the children in the nursery and she got to the dressmakers a half an hour late in a fitting and was much reproached by the goddess of fashion presiding there. She was tired after this went home but cold cream on her face relaxed sleep and was the cheeriest prettiest most entertaining of individuals at the dancing class meeting that night.

YES, SHE DANCES THE NEW STEPS

Yes, parson she dances the new dances and dances them well. You wouldn't do it? No, you couldn't but how does your work of one day measure up to the work done by this society woman last Monday?

And if you had happened to be at the welfare exhibit when the school children came in Tuesday you would have seen another young and beautiful woman with the light of angels in her eyes, that look direct from her soul, as she led the little folks over the building, told them the things she thought would interest them. She smiled back smiles for smiles to the little deaf children during their exercises and she lifted a little tiny, weak fellow in her arms that he might in the downstairs exhibit, see the kindergarten children at their games.

No day passes with this woman that she does not do things for others. She has a little girl of her own but she does not forget the little girls of other less fortunate mothers or little girls who have no mothers. Her eyes were filled with tears when I saw her Tuesday afternoon, leaving for home, because she had seen the pictures of crippled children who had to be sent back to the country because Atlanta had no provision for the help of crippled children.

WORRYING AND WORKING FOR LITTLE UNFORTUNATES.

I shall never stop until something is done to give those little ones a chance, she said.

The next time I saw her pretty face it was wreathed in smiles. She was at a dinner wearing a Dresden blue and crystal gown. Later she taught her husband some new dance steps he did not know and went home rather early because she had dolls to dress the next day for some bazaar being given to help some element of people.

And then the society woman whose given hair is drawn back from her dear pretty smiling face whose many veins of service to humanity have worn her body but not her spirit! How busy she was Wednesday she had done the first organized work in Atlanta for the child in the hospital. She had given to dozens of trees each year where little hands reach out for the Yuletide baubles. She wrote a check for the empty stocking fund as her maid brought her gloves and told her the car was waiting to take her to the friends luncheon. She went to the almshouse later in the afternoon and brought a box of things to an unfortunate one there and she never lets a week go by that she does not extend to the many in gracious gifts or comforting words.

LAZY, GOSSIPY ONES ARE EXCEPTIONS

There may be those who believe that the only inspiration the society woman gives the writer is the gown she wears, the party she gives or the grace of her hospitality but for every line that is written describing the more pitiful side of the society woman's life a column might be written describing the institution could not live without her. The Associated Charities recognizes her power and helpfulness, the man and the woman and the child in the slums have felt the touch of her benevolence. The society woman in Atlanta who is not a continued and patient worker in all the good works the city boasts is the exception. The lazy ones those who idle, who gossip, who talk ill of their neighbors, who find fault and who are obstructionists in spirit are few and far between, thank God!

When after a week like the one just passed I recall only partially the real work accomplished by the woman called the society woman. I wonder scribbling the good she does. The charder that she is not more often the theme for the Sunday sermon. Why not let her good works be selected some day as the central theme for the sermon, rather than the recreations she chooses, when she and her husband are on pleasure bent.

Many Brides and Visitors Present at Dinner-Dance

One hundred and fifty guests were assembled last night at the dinner-dance at the Driving club, and the occasion was a very delightful one. There were several large parties, and the usual numerous small groups dining together.

Mr. Stewart Witham gave abscissal dinner in compliment to Miss Gula Jackson and Mr. Edward Alsop, the bride party his guests.

The table had a handsome decoration in pink roses and lilies of the valley. A mound in the center was made of each and there were baskets at each end. At each young lady's place was a corsage of the roses, and for the men there were boutonnières of lilies. The place cards were charming. Little figures of ladies in pink, and elaborate detail was in this color.

Mr. Witham's guests were: Miss Jackson, Misses Harriet Chubb, Jeanette D. Harris, Passie May O'Leary, Margaret Grant, Katherine Ellis Dothly, Virginia of Washington, Helen Dargan, Adgate Ellis, Mamie O'Leary, Mr. Alsop, Dr. J. D. Osborne, Messrs. James Alexander, Charles Seiple, Dan McDonough, L. S. Shear, James Hill, Lewis Carhart, Marsh Adair and Harris Reid.

The decorations for all the tables were in pink and white, and for the large tables, there were big baskets of pink roses, the handles fluffy with tulle.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant entertained in honor of Mrs. Graham, of Cleveland, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. James Dickey, and their guests were: Mrs. Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Dickey, Mrs. and Mrs. Francis Brown, Mr. and Mrs. James D. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Kiser, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ellis, Mr. Murchison, Mr. Willis Ragan, and Mr. Brooks Morgan.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Howell entertained in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Draper. The party numbered eighteen.

Mrs. Hugh Willet Organizes Xmas Red Cross Seal Campaign

Mrs. Hugh Willet is general chairman of the volunteer committee which will sell the Anti-Tuberculosis Red Cross Christmas Seals. At a large meeting held at her home yesterday Mrs. Willet planned for systematic and active work to begin Wednesday, December 10, and to last through December 24.

Chairmen from among Atlanta's energetic women workers have been secured for the fourteen working days. Each chairman will have a committee of five who will be stationed in office buildings, department stores, drug stores, hotels, and other public places.

Mrs. John Perkins is assistant general chairman to Mrs. Willet, and Mrs. Samuel Sampson is chairman of the City Federation, which is interested in the sale of the seals. Mrs. Willet's committee will have charge of selling the seals in the residence parts of the city.

Mrs. A. C. Coles will have charge of the committee on Women's Club day and will bring the seals to the club before her club Monday afternoon. Miss Mary Griffith, president of the Children of the Confederacy, will bring the seals and the Boy Scouts under their leader will have a day.

Mrs. John Hill with a band of charming children sold seals Thursday at Fort McPherson. Other church organizations, their committees, Mrs. E. J. Stafford, Mrs. W. J. Wilford, Mrs. D. R. Hootes, Mrs. Luther Rosser, Jr., Mrs. James D. Palmer, Mrs. C. H.

Booth, Mrs. Leo Grossman, Mrs. J. M. Cooper, Mrs. E. M. Smith, Mrs. W. W. Martin, Mrs. A. C. McMan, Mrs. Jerome Jones, Mrs. John Justice, and Doctor W. C. Harris.

The sale of the Red Cross Christmas Seals is under the auspices of the Anti-Tuberculosis Society, and is for the praiseworthy purpose of fighting the white plague.

That action in this direction is timely is proven in the death rate from that disease here, the number of cases being looked after through the agency of the Atlanta Red Cross, the exhibit at present being made at the Child Welfare of the Anti-Tuberculosis work in Atlanta, and the exhibit from the Battle Hill sanitarium.

The work of this year's campaign is assigned a valuable and important spring leadership of Mrs. Hugh Willet. No Christmas package will be complete in the message of the day unless someone upon it there is the sign of the Red Cross Christmas Seal.

Artistic Recital

The Council of Jewish Women enjoyed an unusually interesting program at the Standard club rooms last Wednesday. The following artists appeared: Miss Sylvia Spritz, contralto; Mrs. Greenfield, pianist; Mr. Lindner, tenor; Mr. Green, cellist; and Mr. James Wardwell, tenor and reader.

A group of solos was given by each artist and numerous encores were given. The finale consisted of Benberg's tragic "Ballad of Despair" for contralto, reader, piano, violin and cello. Miss Spritz was heard to fine advantage her dramatic mezzo voice bringing conviction with every subtle variation of this difficult selection.

Mr. Wardwell's tense portrayal of his despair and hopelessness of the finale left an effect upon his audience which was visibly apparent. The company went was superb.

To Mrs. Haynes

Mrs. W. W. Varnum will entertain at 7 o'clock on Monday at her home in compliment to her friend Mrs. W. A. Haynes.

Beautiful, Appropriate, Lasting—

Diamonds Are the Best Christmas Gifts

The gift of a diamond is permanent. The image—the spirit of the giver—flashes from every facet through life. The lights of a diamond flash steadily through all time. No matter where a diamond is placed its beauty and brilliance distinguish its surroundings. The gift of a diamond typifies the most perfect faith—unwavering confidence.

Diamonds, like all things true, enhance in value as time goes on. The demand for diamonds has kept pace with the world's increase in wealth—but the supply is diminishing, until today a diamond is a most desirable and solid investment for idle funds.

Our diamonds are carefully selected and skillfully mounted. They are priced as low as sound business methods will permit and we guarantee the quality and weight in every instance.

BRILLIANT SOCIAL SEASON IS PLANNED FOR 1913-14 BY MEMBERS OF YOUNGER SET AT COLUMBUS, GA.

Columbus, Ga., December 6.—(Special)—For generations past Columbus has been known as "Charming Columbus" due, perhaps, in a measure to the beautiful wide parks and avenues, the charming hospitality that is always extended to guests and, most of all, to the charming matrons and young girls of the city.

Each autumn the matron of a large number of the young girls who have finished school the preceding June are added to the social register and in other cities they are instantly called "debutantes," but for some inexplicable reason the young girls of Columbus positively refuse to submit to that name.

It is most unusual for the young society girls of Columbus to be introduced formally at afternoon receptions followed by a dance in the evening. Perhaps they feel as if they need no introduction during the school year days they have always assisted in serving at afternoon teas before they were old enough to stand on the receiving line, and very few of the dances before they were old enough to dance.

Blackmar, of Columbus, for the distinction of the prettiest girl in the school. Miss Mary Slade is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Slade.

among the tables dressed in special costume for the occasion. Simply in dress is the keynote of Miss Slade's charming appearance, which is especially becoming to her patrician beauty.

Miss Minnie Hunt Hall completed her education last June at Washington college, Washington D C and although she prefers not to give a formal "debut" party, the handsome residence of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. C. Bradley, with whom she has always made her home, will be the scene of many delightful informal affairs during the winter season.

Miss Mabel Pearce is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Augustus Pearce. Here are the grace and dignity of the colonial belle, and by her gentle and refined manners, has endeared herself to hosts of friends.

Miss Mary Slade is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Slade. She is not only one of the most popular members of the younger set, but is also one of the most graceful dancers in Columbus.

Miss Louise McMath is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. McMath. Here is the happy faculty of doing everything well, for she dresses well, plays cards well, is a splendid dancer and an excellent swimmer.

Japanese Suggestions for Xmas

Y. KAWASUMI

ATLANTA'S FEMALE DETECTIVES ARE NOT ONE BIT LIKE THE ONES YOU OFTEN READ ABOUT IN BOOKS

Mrs. Hattie Barnett, the state's only licensed female detective. In the first picture she is shown in a manning evidence in with her assistant, Miss Emma Wright. The next picture is of Mrs. Barnett in street clothes. The bottom cut is one of Miss Wright's best poses. The sketches show the different attitudes in which a woman detective is likely to be seen any day.

By Britt Craig.
In yellowback fiction, the heroine of the female detective story usually springs from concealment in a walnut cabinet, throws a brace of pearl-handled automatics in the face of the wrongdoer and holds him—or them—with palms aloft while the detective-hero applies the manacles.

The fiction detectives has done many, many things, including climbing church bellies on rainy nights and appearing on the scene forty-some-odd seconds prior to the proposed electrocution of the innocent hero. She can inspire the love of the most incorrigible crook on Decatur street and lead him to police station while he is under the belief he is being towed to the altar.

They are superb characters, these fiction female sleuths. But you just ought to see a real, live one. I did. And she wasn't equipped with a pearl-handled automatic beneath her skirt. Neither did she have a gold-enameled badge with diamond stud.

She was dressed in glenghams with a snow-white apron, a towel wound around her hair, and she was sweeping the kitchen with a broom heavy enough to daunt a stalwart man.

I had heard that she was a detective—in fact that she was the only licensed female detective in Georgia. No matter how much faith I had put in rumor it was difficult to believe my eyes. Why, her kitchen was as sparkling as a pin and the tinware reflected your features every time you got in front of it.

She was busy with an inept cobweb in the ceiling when I have up her assistant, a comely young woman with brown hair and sleeves rolled up, who said to be a regular flesh-and-blood Neccissa to shoplifters, was washing and drying dishes.

MAYBE I'D STRUCK THE WRONG PLACE.
I was more inclined to suspect that I had struck two thoroughly domesticated housewives than two "Halt, there, Hair-breadth" female sleuths of the first wood.

So I said, rather timidly: "I'm a reporter on The Constitution. Somebody said you were detectives. Is it so?"

Mrs. Hattie Barnett stopped assisting the inept cobweb. Her assistant, Miss Emma Wright, threw the towel in the crook of her elbow and sat a china dish aside. Both looked at me with pitying gaze.

"Why, certainly. Do you think we wash dishes and sweep kitchens for a living?"

I asserted that I did not—that they each appeared talented enough on the surface to follow more temperamental avocations.

This is one of those both, one reporter fellows Emma. Mrs. Barnett told her assistant, who has been out here to occupy our time. And, just think—we haven't even finished the kitchen, yet!"

"Fourteen years! You must have been very young as a beginner." (It was an old trick of the trade, but it worked.)
"Oh, yes! I was only 16."
"Thanks," I replied, making a note of her age.

YOU WOULDN'T TAKE HER FOR A SLEUTH.

You never would suspect that Mrs. Barnett was a detective. She is just a neat, striking woman of 38. She says her personal appearance is one of her saving graces. Folks never suspect her. Her appearances are adaptable, and she can preside behind the ribbon counter of a Whitehall street department store with the same grace and skill with which she maintains her poise at aristocratic marriages, where she keeps a trained eye on the wedding gifts.

As Christmaside isn't much of a wedding season, Mrs. Barnett will be more in evidence behind the department store counters for the coming few weeks. Shoplifters are her specialty. She can detect a secret compartment in a woman's skirt the minute the woman gets within sight. And she knows how to handle the type.

That's the greatest gift of the detective. It's usually an easy matter to spot the kleptomaniac customer, but to catch her with the "goods on" and then diplomatically relieve her of aforesaid goods is a task worthy of a female Nelson O'Shaughnessy—you know him—that manipulator of diplomacy down in the Mexico climate.

"It was last week that I had one of the hardest jobs of my career with a shoplifter," she told me. "She was a young girl, evidently one of those irrefragable kleptomaniacs who have the habit so deep that she would prefer money out of one pocket and put it in the other."

"She was pretty, too, and I really pity for her. She came into the store late one afternoon during a rush hour. That's the shoplifter's method. They work the counters when everybody is absorbed in something else. Beside suspicious characters. I noticed her over at the glove counter."

HOW TO CATCH A SHOPLIFTER.

"I was supposed to be selling novelties. But the minute I saw this girl keeping a wary eye on the clerk behind the glove counter, I turned my job over to a real clerk and sidled over. The first thing I knew she was wearing off a costly pair of kids which she had tried on. I followed her to the elevator."

"There was a crowd at the gate. This girl was dressed splendidly, and I could tell by her appearance that she was well-bred enough to afford to ride a tremendous howl the minute I started anything. So, as the car came up, I managed to jostle her into it with the crowd so she would have to go on up to the office floor."

"It's a mighty and you know how to get them up to the office. They know they're guilty and try to avoid detection by every kind of ruse. A few minutes got to the office floor. I saw the last—I asked her to step off with me a moment, as pleasantly as I could. She didn't seem to suspect me—she only probably I had mistaken her identity. But she got off."

"Where you speaking to me?" she asked.

she began to put up a front. Before she could say anything I asked her, "Where did you buy those gloves?" She looked at them—they were stull on her hands—and I could see her face redden.

"Why, I bought them downstairs. Why do you ask?"
"Then, I told her, 'would you mind going down to the glove counter with me?' I think there is a mistake somewhere."

"That girl broke down completely and fell over in a chair, crying like a baby. I had just about made up my mind to let her go, take back the gloves and say nothing about it, when she suddenly jumped up and went into a fury. She threatened to have the store sued for everything from slander to malicious prosecution."

"She accused me of being an old hen and said I was so crude that I'd accuse me the chauffeur come up and whip her.

GOODNESS, BUT SHE STORMED!
"Oh, Lord, but that girl went into a tantrum. By the time she was half way through, an inexperienced person would have thought she was a vestal virgin. She lambasted me until I had begun to feel like a wad of dough under a rolling pin. When she had finished she stopped for breath, then started for the door."

"Now, she stormed, 'I shall go down to the bank and have father come up and see about this.' Gee, but she was the indignant little thing. 'Oh, no you won't,' I told her. 'I'm going to do a little "seeing about things" on my own hook.' About this time the manager knocked on the door and I let him in. The girl raved and blazed and tromped up and down on me with both feet, and told the manager she was going to take her trade and her father's trade and the trade of her whole family away from his old store."

"The manager was convinced that a mistake had been made, but I wasn't. I insisted that the girl accompany me down to the glove counter. She got furious and asked the manager if he would stand for any such business. It made me mad and, when I get tired, you had better look out—there's a storm brewing."

"Very well, then, would you mind

down to the glove counter. She got furious and asked the manager if he would stand for any such business. It made me mad and, when I get tired, you had better look out—there's a storm brewing."

"Wait a minute," she called, "I don't think there is any use in that. It will cause too much notoriety and humiliation. Here, take the gloves."

"I took them. But I wasn't satisfied with merely the gloves. I demanded that she let me search her. She finally yielded. The manager stepped out. Later, when I called for him to return, he found the whole sofa covered with every article from jewelry to linen towels, and the most subdued little girl in the world sitting in the corner, looking shame-facely out the window. She was one of the most expert shoplifters who ever struck the town. Several days later she was arrested in a department store downtown and was convicted. She tried to put up a glorious bluff to the judge, but the evidence was against her. I would have gone down and testified against her myself, but I admired her ability and respected her talent—to a certain extent."

Mrs. Barnett has made an extensive study of the shoplifting type. It is a mania with most of them, she says, and she has encountered numerous cases of well-to-do women who can't resist the impulse to steal a pretty piece of finery. Some of them, she says, find an inconsequential piece of goods—maybe some trinket—that strikes their eye. They are ashamed to purchase it, and naturally steal it.

WITH THRILLING STORY OF CONDITIONS IN MEXICO, GEORGIANS RETURN HOME TO PEACE AND SAFETY

By Edward Young Clarke.
LaGrange, Ga., December 6.—(Special.)—Fresh from the very seat of the hottest part of the fighting in Mexico, and glad to be home, though in a day a fortune of years had been won, Mr. Tom Watson, of LaGrange, tells a story thrilling in the extreme, and which throws a new light on conditions in Mexico.

"Hopeless" is the word which frequently comes to the lips of Mrs. Watson as she tells of conditions, and those who know anything of the state of affairs in the country are ready to agree with her that the situation grows more so every day.

In her description of the situation in Mexico, Mrs. Watson shows her knowledge of human nature, and the broad quality of her mind. She is a woman of unusual personality and impresses all who meet her as far above the average in intelligence and educational qualifications. She numbers her friends in LaGrange and surrounding territory by the hundreds. Her mother lives in LaGrange, with whom she is temporarily residing, until her husband gets located in business.

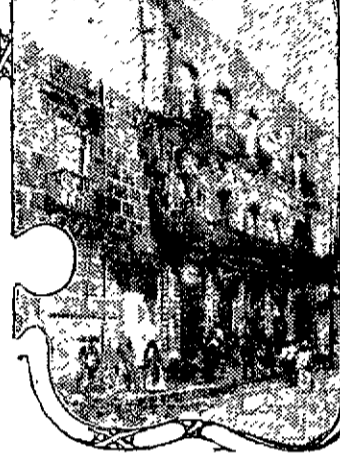

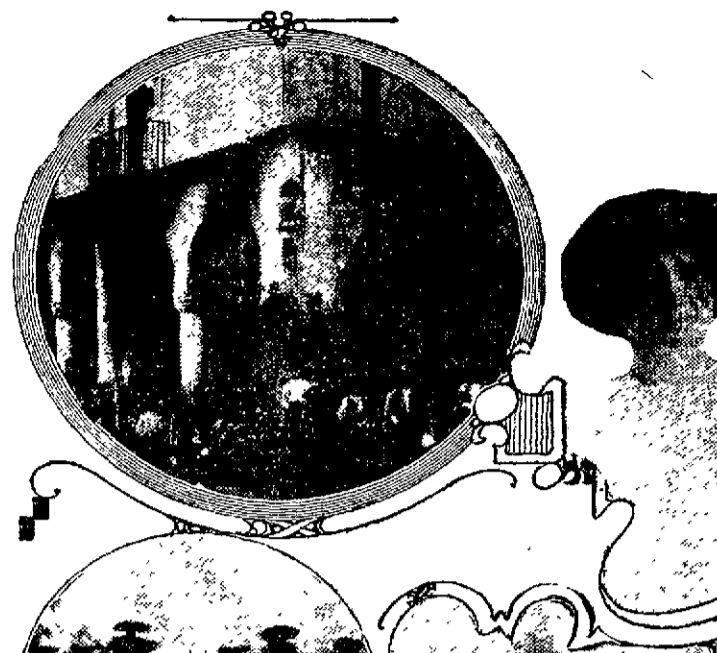

THE PITY OF IT ALL.

Both tragic and pathetic is her description of the cowardice of the higher grade of Mexicans. In telling this part of her story she exclaimed: "Why, the pity of it all is this: The high-class Mexican has for generations lived in luxury and idleness, until he considers any work, and the carrying of a gun to defend his country, quite beneath his dignity. The volunteer band which was formed in Durango, our home town, was ample to defend the city from the small band of rebels that were making the attack. In fact, the foreigners had little to do in regard to the matter. But when the rebels arrived, and these higher class Mexicans realized their lives were at stake, they threw down their guns, tore off their uniforms, sent their wives and children at the mercy of the rebels, and ran and hid in the market places and just anywhere to be out of danger. When the best people of a country have no bravery and no patriotism, what is the hope of the country?"

MR. WATSON GOES TO MEXICO.

About fifteen years ago Mr. Watson went to Durango, Mexico, and took up his abode there as his future home for life. He went into business, and the American Grocery company, of which he was manager, established itself in the favor of the people and he built up a fine business. He made money and began to accumulate a small fortune. About three years ago Mrs. Watson joined her husband in Durango.

Soon after her arrival they established themselves in a beautiful home, of Mexican architecture, and but for the occasional rumors of troubled conditions in other parts of Mexico their home was one of peace and happiness. Then came the fatal eighteenth of June, when all their property was swept away in a day, and they had to flee the country if they valued their lives. They came straight to LaGrange, and here is the story told by Mrs. Watson:

"Late in the afternoon of the seventeenth came the call for volunteers to defend the city against a roving band of rebels. About 11 o'clock that night, a beautiful moonlight night, the shooting began, opening apparently from the inside, by those in the city who were sympathizers with the rebels. The shooting was from house tops and from windows, and the loyal Mexicans soon realized they must act quickly to protect their families and themselves from inside as well as outside dangers.

"The shooting continued at intervals all night long, and about one hundred people were killed during the night. More ammunition was wasted that night than at the battle of Atlanta, as the rebels are very unaccustomed to the use of firearms, having been deprived of weapons for years by the richer class in Mexico.

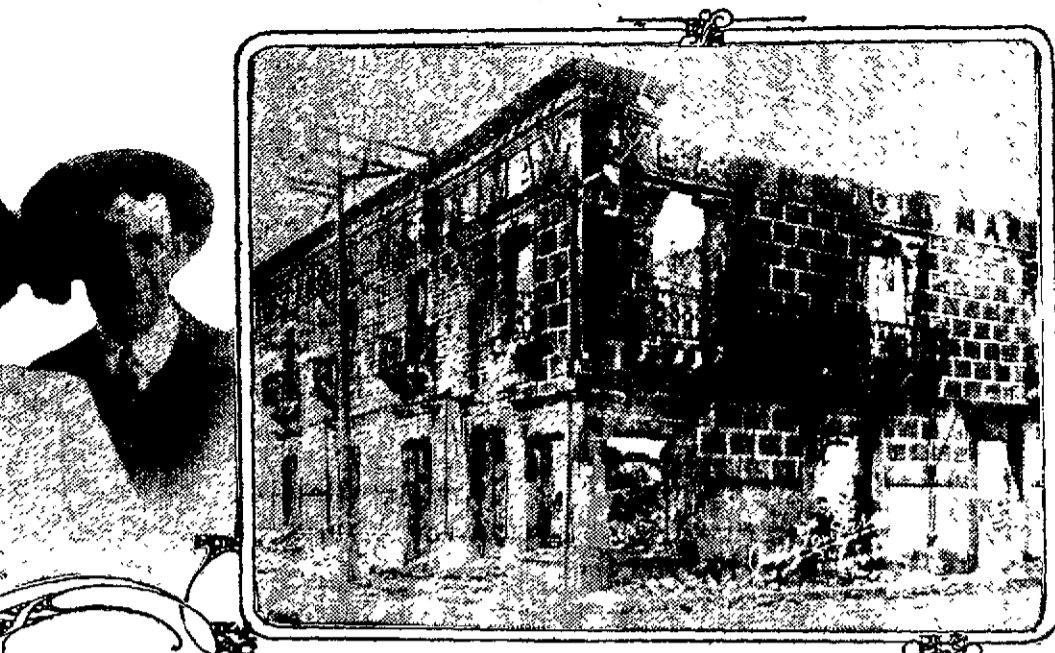

"Between 12 and 1 o'clock of the day of the eighteenth the rebels came into the town yelling and screaming, and throwing hand bombs which caused much destruction of property. We learned afterwards that an American and two German filibusters had taught them how to make the hand bombs and how to use them to best advantage.

"The day before the actual fighting began the American consul, Mr. T. C. Hamm, who came to Durango as consul from a clerkship in the state department at Washington, had notified all Americans that if they considered their homes unsafe they could go to the American Mission school and there get protection.

"During the morning of the eighteenth about one hundred people went to the school, going through the street while it was filled with rebel soldiers, and the property destruction was at its height. We reached the school about 10 o'clock, and a little later in the day the first bunch of rebels reached the school. Mr. Watson, being one of the few Americans who could speak Spanish fluently, naturally became the spokesman of the mission in dealing with the rebels who came to the school, as the consul had found it impossible to leave his home.

IN STATE OF SIEGE.

"Beginning at about 1 o'clock of the eighteenth and continuing on for about forty-eight hours the school was in a practical state of siege. Bunch after bunch of rebels came to the place demanding arms, ammunition and money. In fact, they insisted that everything of value be given them without controversy on peril of life.

"As long as anything lasted the rebels were given freely all they asked for to keep them from entering the school building. Awful threats were made against the women, and they had been hidden in various parts of the house, but no woman was molested at any time. In fact, so far as we could learn, no harm came to any woman, either foreign or native, during the siege of the city.

"In their destruction of the town the rebels had no system. To take what they wanted and destroy what they did not want, seemed all they cared to do, and when they had finished with the town it was a wreck.

"In their work of destruction and thievery the rebels destroyed Mr. Watson's business, the American Grocery company, including account books, records and stock on hand, and then in addition they went to the home of Mr. Watson and riddled same with bullets and hand bombs, ransacked the house, taking away even the bed clothing and personal clothes. This took place at about 9 o'clock in the morning, just after we had left our home to go to the mission school.

It is a good thing we had left before they reached the house.

"In this one day we lost the savings of years, and all we have to show for it is a possible claim against the tottering Mexican government.

REAL CAUSE OF CONDITIONS.

"Going back to the real cause of the present conditions in Mexico it is interesting to note that it is practically a fight of the laboring classes against the rich. For years the land owners and better class Mexicans have ground down the poor people, deprived them of arms and the right to education, and lived in ease and luxury of their degradation.

"The common people have risen en masse against this condition and the better class, long used to lives of ease and luxury, and utterly devoid of courage or patriotism, are unable to cope with the situation. Thus the better class are not able to handle the conditions and the lower class by years of slavery are not fit to govern, and a general condition of chaos exists.

"Practically any Mexican will do anything for money. The leader of the Mexican troops at Durango suddenly disappeared while the fighting was going on in Durango. He was either a coward or had sold out to the rebels. When it became known that he had disappeared of course his men deserted also and the rebels had things at their command.

HOW REBEL BANDS FORM.

"Many do not understand how the rebel bands are formed. It is very simple when you know the facts. On the ranches and at the mines a few dissatisfied laborers will leave in a bunch and later make a raid on a ranch or a mine for ammunition and guns and horses. In roving around this bunch will meet another similar bunch and then still another. Then they elect a leader. As soon as they are strong enough they proceed to take some small village, and the commander of the bunch becomes famous immediately. Several of these 'village takers' get together and a head leader is selected and they then proceed to take some city. Thus the army grows until a real formidable body of men get together, often as many as several thousand able bodied men. This is a nutshell is the story of the organization of the various branches of the rebel army.

"And the hopelessness of the situation is in the fact that the rich and better class are cowards without patriotism and the poorer class without education and not fit to govern. Therefore, where is there reasonable hope for Mexico to get from out present conditions?"

"Added to this also is the fact that a Mexican of almost any class will for money do most anything. For a few paltry dollars he will sell out any trust in his possession.

ON THE WAY HOME.

"The rebels having taken everything we had, and left practically penniless, we decided the best thing to do was to come to America as soon as possible. Accordingly we got two horses and saddles, and with three men an escort, furnished us by the American consul, on the sixteenth day of July we left Durango and wended our way to the American border, reaching San Diego, Cal., on August 18, after many thrilling experiences."

Rich With Memories of Ante-Bellum Times Is This 100-Year-Old Plantation House

Martin - Jones Estate Has Been in One Family for 150 Years. Second to Be Deeded to an Individual.

By Dora Buser Webster.
New Cross, Ga., December 6.—(Special.) It is unusual to find a landed estate in Georgia that has remained in one family for more than one hundred and fifty years. This is true of the Martin-Jones plantation home, located in Gwinnett county, twenty-four miles from Atlanta, on the Chattahoochee river.

The present owner, Mrs. Mamie Jones Skinner, having inherited it from her maternal ancestors.

The original tract, consisting of 2,000 acres, on both sides of the Chattahoochee river, is owned by John F. Martin, the first of his name was the second made to an individual in Georgia; the first deed being made to Daniel Putnam.

A man of his name was Morgan, drew the land in the government office of the Creek and Cherokee Indians, were driven out. Mr. Martin was a large slave owner, having owned more than one hundred negro slaves. He was never married, but left a will providing that the negroes be equally divided among Thomas, Robert, John, Archibald and William Martin his nephews. To his niece, Anna, Lucy, Mary and Sallie Martin, he willed his land.

House 100 Years Old.

The old house, which is wonderfully preserved, was built in 1813, of hewn logs, but has since been weatherboarded. The first roof was put on with wooden pegs. There is a hall ten feet wide, running the entire length of the house, with large, square rooms twenty by twenty feet.

The chimney to the front room, on the left is a curiosity, and a wonderful piece of masonry. At its base it is more than ten feet and it is built of immense rocks, the arch-work in the fireplace is said to weigh more than two tons.

In front of the house on each side of the walk are two very tall and stately trees, which stand like sentinels guarding the past history of the old home.

Colonel George H. Jones, the venerable father of Mrs. Mamie Jones Skinner, still lives in this old home and is a custodian of many rare old documents which have been carefully kept in a bookcase and secretary that has stood in its accustomed place since before the Civil War. There are bills of sale of negroes dated 1814, 1815, 1818, and grants made in 1818, during the term of office of Governor John Clark.

Interesting Documents.

Other interesting documents in this valuable collection which is of interest to the present generation are bills of sale of negro slaves by Mrs. Martha Bullock, grandmother of ex-President Roosevelt to John F. Martin, as follows:

Received December 27, 1818, from Mr. John F. Martin, eight hundred dollars, and sum being in full payment for one negro woman named Bess, and her child, John—Martha Bullock Roosevelt, Ch., December 27, 1817.

There is another, even more interesting in that it shows that Mrs. Bullock warranted the health of the negroes in whose flesh and blood she trafficked.

Received of John F. Martin, fifteen hundred dollars in full for my four negroes, to-wit: Brister and his wife Sylvia, and their two grandchildren, Albert and Sylvia, the boys, Albert about eight years, and the other six in September next, and I will hereby warrant the health and title to him and his heirs, etc. "Witness my hand and seal, first day of February, 1814," Martha Bullock.

Grandmother of Roosevelt.

Colonel Jones says the maternal grandmother of ex-President Roosevelt sold these slaves that she might obtain ready money with which to purchase the trousseau for the wedding of his daughter, Martha Bullock, to Theodore Roosevelt, Sr., of New York.

Colonel Jones relates many other interesting stories connected with the old home and its inmates. One showing the faithful devotion of a slave man to his master's family. Colonel Jones had enlisted in the confederate army in the early sixties. He was much grieved at leaving his young wife and small children unprotected, when faithful old Henry, a trusted negro slave said: "Mars George, I will look after Mars Anna and de chillun, and if anybody pesters dem, dey will do it over my dead body." Faithful to his promise, old Henry slept each night in the four years of the war, on the piazza in front of the door leading to the apartment of Mrs. Jones and her children. This same old slave was her man at the Martin-Jones ferry during the war.

It was during a visit to the old Martin-Jones home that the inspiration came to Miss Annie Maria Barnes to write "The Ferry Maid," in whose characters can be recognized members of Colonel Jones' family.

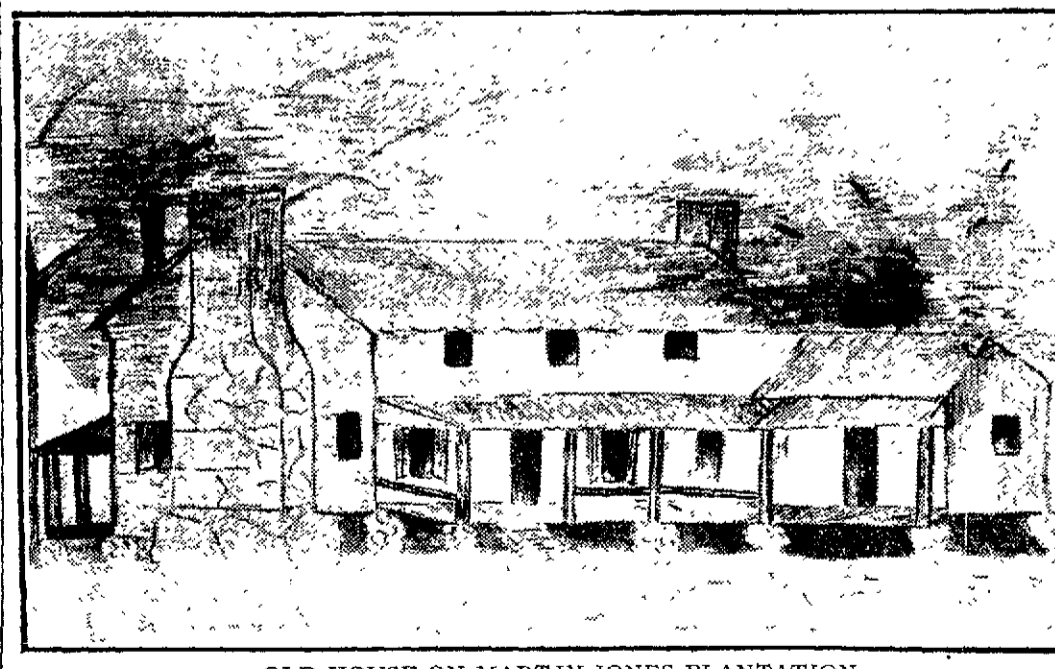

The Chattahoochee's Song.

The Chattahoochee still sings the old Cheroke song as its waters sweep onward to the sea. The white stretch of road leading by the century-old home, here smiling in the sun, and Colonel Jones, in the evening time of life, sits in the autumn sunshine and dreams of the past, when there was life and joyous there, then his recollections a sad chord when the joy in his life had gone, which he describes in his lines:

"TO THE CHATTAHOOCHEE"

Winding through a verdant valley,
Lined on either bank with trees,
While sweetly sing birds in spring-time,
And flowers wave in the breeze,
Glancing on the leaden green,
Chattahoochee ripples onward,
With its ever-changing shoen.

"Long ago my childish footsteps
Loved along its banks to stray;
And later found I sweetest pleasure,
Watching still its changeful play;
Weaving garlands from the blossoms

OLD HOUSE ON MARTIN JONES PLANTATION.

That beside the streamlet grew,
Dreaming of the distant future—
While the waters of the streamlet
Dreams fulfillment never knew.

"After years enhanced its beauty,
Oftener drew my willing feet,
By its dear association,
With the hopes of life, most sweet,
When I strayed beside its waters,
It was not as one alone,
And I listened to its music,
Mingling with a deeper tone.

"Now again my footsteps linger

By the dear old placid stream,
Not as of before, to ponder
On some bright, alluring dream,
Autumn skies are dark and chilling,
And the leaves betide the ground,
While the waters of the streamlet
Murmur with a low, sad sound.

"As though sighing with my spirit
For the brightness of past hours,
O'er the days that only left me
Broken dreams and faded flowers;
For the hopes, so fondly cherished,

Withered by the hand of death,
As the leaves, so fresh in springtime,
Perish with the autumn's breath.

"Some time in the bright hereafter,
When the peary gates unfold,
Where the streets are paved with gold,
Where the sunlight ever lingers
And the weary heart finds rest,
We shall see with dearer vision,
What God does for the best

Origin of "Dixie."

(From The Wall Street Journal.)

The Financial Times of London in a review of the history of the Citizens' Bank of Louisiana, at New Orleans, which was converted into the Citizens Bank and Trust company in 1911, recalls the interesting origin of the word "Dixie" as applied to the south. After describing the prosperity of the old Citizens' bank, founded in 1812, with some unusual provisions in its charter, and the manner in which the institution stood its ground throughout the vicissitudes of the civil war, it says:

"The Citizens' bank was so closely identified with the south that it gave its name 'Dixie Land,' since preserved in the famous southern war song, 'Dixie.' It came about in this way: Prior to the civil war in the state the Citizens' bank had the power to issue paper money notes just as the Bank of England does today. These bills were issued in denominations of $10 and $20, but preferably $10, to the extent of a few millions. They were well known and good all over the country.

"These $10 bills were engraved in French, and on the backs was the French word 'Dix' very prominent, and the ignorant Americans living along the upper Mississippi river, not knowing how to pronounce the French word, called the bills 'Dixie.' Finally, the bank's money became so popular that Louisiana was referred to as the Land of the Dixie, or 'Dixie Land.' Afterward the term was made to apply to all the southern states."

Father's Ultimatum.

(From December Lippincott's.)

The father of a large family of children was trying hard to read the evening paper.

"What's that terrible racket in the hall, Martha?"

"One of the children just fell downstairs."

"Well," he replied, turning over another page of the paper, "you tell the children if they can't fall downstairs quietly, they'll have to stop it."

SON OF LORD ROSEBERY HUNTING FOR A BRIDE?

Neil Primrose Comes to the United States, It Is Rumored, to Seek American Wife.

London, December 6.—By the time this is in print Neil Primrose, Lord Rosebery's second son, will have been a few days in America. It is not, of course, his first trip to your side; indeed, he seems particularly fond of your climate—or is the attraction in another quarter? You will all like him when you get to know him, only, you, like other Scotchmen, he does want knowing. Decidedly standoffish at first, when he likes people he soon enough thaws and his heart is most emphatically in the right place. A few days before he departed he was waiting up Piccadilly behind him and noticed that he gave a coin to every beggar on the way. They gave you the impression that they all knew him and that it was by no means their first attempt at the game.

He says his special object in going to the United States is to get an insight into how things are done in educational and public institutions and incidentally to have a look at the style of life in America. He is not a tiring down. He is extremely well off, for a wealthy relative on his mother's side left him some years ago a handsome fortune and a charming home in Great Stanhope street—the very one, you know, that is being bought by the "James brothers," as the late Willie James and his brother Arthur, wealthy Americans, used to be defined. Besides, his father, Lord Rosebery, is one of the richest peers whose already considerable wealth will be further replenished by a Rothschild heiress who was the mother of Lord Dalmeida. Neil Primrose and Lord Rosebery's two daughters

The Reason.

(From December Lippincott's.)

Among the employees who duties are supposed to be discharged in the rear of a certain shop in Baltimore, while the proprietor looks on matters in front are a couple of dorkies, who occasionally "take things away."

"One afternoon they were engaged in a quiet game of seven-up on a bar, when they were disturbed by a customer who asked the name of the man who they supposed to be in his usual place in front."

"The boss has been out on a job," he answered, "that I find you fellows playing one."

"I don't know, boss," was the response of the customer, "but I'll be on account of them rackets, see you is wearing."
