MINISTER HELD ON STORY TOLD BY YOUNG GIRL

Rev. Crawford Jackson Accused by Stenographer and Bound Over in Justice of Peace Court.

ADMITS KISSING GIRL AND OFFERING DRINK

Declares He Wanted Her to Take Drink in Order to Cure Headache—Girl Goes on Stand.

Accused of making improper advances by Miss Louvenia Durden his 16 year old stenographer Rev Crawford Jackson secretary of the Juvenile Protective association and well known in every section of Georgia was bound over by Justice of the Peace C H Girardeau late yesterday afternoon His bond was assessed at $1 000 and this sum was furnished shortly after 10 o clock last night

His accuser the daughter of Dawson Durden a detention officer who lives at 432 Central avenue told in court a story of alleged advances she charged the minister with making while she was in his employ in his offices in the Third National bank building during the absence of her sister his regular stenographer who is now on a vacation

Said Minister Embraced Her

One of her charges was that Rev Mr Jackson had kissed and embraced her and had offered her intoxicants which he himself had been drinking The minister admitted having kissed the girl and having offered her drink explaining that his attitude towards her was that of a father and that he proposed that she drink in order to cure a headache from which she suffered

This was on Thursday afternoon of last week after which she is said not to have returned to Rev Jackson s office

The accused minister was taken into custody Saturday afternoon upon the issuance of a warrant from Judge Girardeau's court. He accompanied an attache of the justice court to the courtroom, where the trial proceeded at once. The only relatives of the girl present in court were her father, Dawson Durden, a detention officer, and her brother in law, Clyde Scarborough

Warrant Is Issued.

The warrant was secured by the girl's father at the instigation of Scarborough who was among the first to learn the girl s story Friday afternoon Scarborough visited Rev Mr Jackson a office after having heard of the alleged insult and upon talking with the minister gained the same admission which the divine made during the trial

Scarborough stated on the stand that on Thursday afternoon the day the advances are said to have been made, he came into a room of the Durden home, at which he and his wife are living, and overheard the girl telling her story to Mrs. Scarborough, her sister She feared telling her father or Scarborough, she said

Scarborough informed her father with Saturday s trial as a result The girl admitted the story explaining to her father that she was afraid he would do the minister physical harm if she told him. The Durdens and Rev Mr Jackson were friends of long standing the latter having boarded with the Durden family frequently

While her sister Sophronia who is Rev Mr Jackson s official stenographer was out of the city on her vacation, Louvenia had been employed in her place She had been in the office only a few days she stated, before the alleged advances were made

A Fatherly Feeling

During the course of his statement the minister declared that he had often kissed his accuser while boarding at the home of her parents and had called her such endearing names as sweetheart' and dearie It was the fatherly feeling he held toward all children, he said which inspired his attitude toward the child

I have clasped her to my bosom in the presence of her family he said

You Can't Get Something for Nothing

Two men met on Peachtree

What are you doing these days?" asked number one

'Looking for a job Guess I'll have to advertise," replied number two

"Good chance to advertise right now I see one of the papers is printing want ads free, and another is giving away automobiles"

"Yes, but I don't put much stock in this something for nothing business If a paper is worth anything to its advertisers it has a right to charge for its space

'I think I'll put my ad in The Constitution It is charging regular rates for its ads, and I know all the business men I've ever met in Atlanta read The Constitution every morning

"They know that the want ads in The Constitution mean something or people wouldn't pay to have them printed. I want a good job, and I'm going to advertise where men like that will see my ad"

Sounds reasonable, doesn't it?

ALL IN READINESS FOR FRANK'S TRIAL MONDAY MORNING

Greatest Legal Battle in the History of Dixie Is the Prediction of Atlanta Attorneys

ATTORNEYS FOR STATE HOLD FINAL CONFERENCE

Representatives of Leo Frank Still Non-Committal About Report That Postponement May Be Asked

Practically every detail for the trial of Leo M Frank has now been completed and with the state declaring its readiness and determination to go to trial and the defense maintaining its same silence in regard to the much mooted matter of postponement every thing awaits the calling of the case at 9 o clock Monday morning in the criminal branch of superior court before Judge L S Roan.

In far more than one way the trial of the young factory superintendent for the murder on April 26 of Mary Phagan an employee, is expected to exceed any criminal trial in the south

Extensive preparations have been made by both the state and the defense since Frank was bound over by the coroner s jury on May 8 and since then the lines of the two armies which will fight the legal battle to determine his fate have been gradually thrown out and maneuvering has been going on for advantageous points.

Greatest Legal Battle.

When the clash actually comes in the court room Atlanta attorneys freely predict that the greatest legal battle of southern history will be seen

Solicitor Hugh M Dorsey held a final conference Saturday afternoon with those who have been aiding him Assistant Solicitor E A Stephens and Attorney Frank A Hooper who will aid in the legal fight, were present, and also Detectives Pat Campbell and John N Starnes who have been practically attached to the solicitor s office during the preparation

At the close of the conference the solicitor announced that he had made every preparation, and would take a good rest today in order to be in physical readiness for the severe strain of next week.

'Go home and sleep well tonight and go to church tomorrow and pray that

G Airington who was selling watermelons at a negro picnic He became involved in a dispute with four of his customers regarding payment for a melon They threatened him and he ran After pursuing him for aquarter of a mile Airington was caught, three of the negroes held him while a fourth drew a razor and severed his head from his body They threw the body to one side of the road and fled.

NAME OF THE NEGRO MAY BE WITHDRAWN

Reported President Didn't Know He Was Nominating Negro for Treasury Register.

By John Corrigan, Jr.

Washington July 26—(Special)—So emphatic have been the protests from southern congressmen against the president s nomination of Adam E Patterson of Muskogee Okla for register of the treasury that the nomination will probably be withdrawn

There are a number of white employees—men and women—in the office of the register of the treasury and democrats have been eager that after sixteen years of waiting a white man should be appointed to this place so that white women will not be forced to work under the direction of a negro

Senator Vardaman of Mississippi, who immediately took up the fight against Patterson s confirmation stated this afternoon that he understood the nomination was sent in by inadvertance, the president not knowing that the man was a negro He predicted that the nomination would be withdrawn

Patterson is a negro lawyer of Muskogee, Okla He was indorsed by Senator Gore, of Oklahoma, and was reported to have had the support of Senator Shafroth, of Colorado He made a number of speeches for the democratic ticket in the last campaign Senator Owen who lives in Muskogee, did not indorse Patterson and declines to comment upon the nomination

Nomination to Be Fought

In addition to Senator Vardaman Senators Hoke Smith of Georgia Tillman of South Carolina and others today expressed frank disapproval of the president s action

I will fight the nomination of Patterson to the last ditch said the Mississippian Lincoln himself was opposed to negro officeholders No negro will be appointed to a $4 000 position, where he will be in authority over white women, with my assistance

I think the defeat of this appointment is of more importance than the passage of the tariff bill and the enactment of currency legislation It rises like a mountain peak above the other questions of the day I shall use every effort to defeat the confirmation Every senator from the south I have spoken to on the subject has expressed his intention of opposing the confirmation

I made a trip to the white house to oppose the nomination and I also spoke with Secretary McAdoo concerning it It seems that the appointment was made in view of Patterson s campaign activities in the interest of democracy I don't think much of the policy that pays party obligations at the expense of the purity of the greatest race on the globe

To Fight Every Negro Appointment.

I shall fight every negro appointment that is made If a colored recorder of deeds for the District of

Blazing Bull Puts Fear of Hereafter Into Campmeeting

As Parson Preaches on Torment, Fiery Prodigy Appears and the Worshipers Scatter.

Millwood Ga, July 26—(Special)—Soon after Elias Griffis a prominent farmer of this vicinity had built a fire in his pen to bring the cows home the other day a big bull strode in The animal had been rubbing against the tar face of a turpentine box and his head was covered with tar When the bull saw the fire in the pen he took to the boistrous notion of hooking out the flames ust as an east side rowdy shoots out the lights However when the bull commenced to butt the fire his coat of tar caught afire and he dashed out of the pen while the smoke and flame poured from his head

Now a darkey camp meeting was going on in the vicinity and the eloquent brother of the platform was preaching upon the subject of torment and the fire and brimstone that was sure to be the lot of his auditors if they did not mend their ways It happened that just as he was telling this lo and behold, through the trees could be seen a roll of smoke and fire thundering toward them with incredible swiftness The colored apostles didn t await further details, but scattered like a swarm of bees in a sudden hailstorm

BURNS VESTMENTS AND PRAYER BOOK AND QUITS CHURCH

Rev. Chas S. Davidson, Formerly of Atlanta, Renounces Priesthood in Sensational Manner at Charlottesville.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH BITTERLY ATTACKED

Minister Says He is Leaving Church to Assert a Spiritual Democracy Against a Religious Aristocracy.

Charlottesville, Va., July 26—(Special)—At the gates of historic Monticello yesterday evening the Rev Charles Steele Davidson, former pastor of St Mark s Cleveland, Ohio Holy Apostles Brooklyn, Epiphany Atlanta, and assistant rector of Christ church this city, severed his connection with the Episcopal church by burning his vestments and prayer book.

Later in a written statement he caustically criticised the workings of the church which he has served for many years

He Attacks the Church.

The statement reads

I charge that the Episcopal church is the gentleman s church in general, and in Virginia, in particular It is powerfully financially and socially, stupid intelectually and spiritually dead that it needs a change of heart, repentance or utter obliteration She favors the rich and the cultured and has no vital interest in the poor and the common She either segregates the poor in missions on the back streets or relegates them in churches to the back pews

"In Virginia the Episcopal church is a mere relic of the old social feudalism and stands for a dry-rotted conservatism that bars the progress of the kingdom. Virginia, after her long depression, is aroused and is marching on, but the church is slowly retreating to the citadel of tradition and materialism. It is taking up the matter of physical uncleanness and is leaving vile the inner man. It is wasting time on eugenics and putting no time on eupsychics. It is contending with the ritualists about purity of worship when it has lost the spirit of worship.

"Shot Through With Materialism."

WHILE FLEEING U. S. OFFICIAL IS SHOT DOWN BY MEXICANS

Immigration Inspector Chas. Dixon Probably Fatally Wounded by a Squad of Huerta's Soldiers While on Business Trip to Juarez.

AMERICAN WAS FORCED TO RUN THE GAUNTLET BY HUERTA'S SOLDIERS

"CASE LOOKS SERIOUS," SAYS SECRETARY BRYAN

Washington, July 26—"It looks like a serious case We will do whatever is necessary," said Secretary Bryan tonight, when told of the shooting of Immigration Inspector Dixon by Mexican soldiers

President Wilson was also advised of the shooting, but made no comment.

El Paso, Texas, July 26—After arguing all afternoon with Colonel J N. Vasquez of the Mexican federal army in Juarez, F. W Berkshire, supervising inspector of the United States immigration service, Clarence G Gately, inspector, Dr J. H Tappan, surgeon, and American Consul Thomas D Edwards were unable to secure permission from the federals for the removal to an El Paso hospital of Charles B. Dixon immigration inspector, who was shot, perhaps fatally, this afternoon by a squad of federal soldiers n the southern part of Juarez.

Dixon had been arrested by the soldiers and says he feared execution at their hands and tried to escape by running down an alley

The federal authorities refused to allow the wounded American to be removed from the military hospital where he was taken Federal soldiers guard the ward where Dixon lies, refusing admission to every one except Dr Tappan A Japanese male nurse is waiting on him Dr Tappan stated that Dixon is resting easily and has no fever

Struck By Two Bullets.

The judge who is hearing the case, has taken the evidence of the complaining witnesses he says, and tonight Supervisor Berkshire is endeavoring to arrange a bond to enable Dixon's removal to El Paso

The arrest of Dixon, the immigration men say was the result of a 'frame-up" between a negro, Arthur Walker and certain soldiers stationed in Juarez It is alleged that Walker had secured a warrant in advance of the appearance of Dixon to investigate a white slavery case today.

Walker is said to have represented to the Juarez authorities that Dixon was coming to arrest him, then chloroform him and kidnap him from the border town.

Arrested by Federals.

Dixon was in Juarez on official business, investigating a white slave case, when he was arrested by a band of federals, who started marching him away from the city in the direction of the foothills where many executions have occurred. Dixon started to run and after getting a block away was fired on and hit in the back.

Dixon's father lives in Wharton, Texas. Dixon made a statement this afternoon in Juarez to American officials that he believed the Mexicans were marching him out to shoot him when he ran. He says the Mexican soldiers were drunk.

Shot at Him as He Ran.

Dixon was sent by a superior to Juarez to see a negro in connection with a white slave case that was being probed. He says he believes the negro bought drinks for the soldiers and induced them to arrest him.

"I told the soldiers I would go with them to the commandant's office," Dixon said this afternoon, "but instead of taking me in the direction, they started with me toward the outskirts of the town. As I had on a suit of khaki, I thought they had mistaken me for a United States soldier acting as a spy, so I ran and they shot me after I had got about half a block away from them."

Dr. H. J. Tappen, of the immigration service in El Paso, went to Juarez and treated Dixon. He found Dixon was shot in the small of the back, the ball going completely through his body and coming out through his stomach. It did not strike the spine.

Two U. S. Officers Arrested.

F. W. Berkshire, supervising inspector of the United States immigration service on the Mexican border, at once went to Juarez, accompanied by Clarence Gatley, an inspector, to look after Dixon. Both were arrested and detained at the military barracks for a short time, but later were released. They took up the matter with Miguel Diebold, inspector of Mexican consulates in El Paso, with a view of having Dixon removed to El Paso.

Immigration men claimed a mulatto lieutenant in the federal army in Juarez, a friend of the negro under investigation, was instrumental in causing the arrest and the shooting.

Ordinarily United States immigration men are permitted to work in Juarez under an agreement with Juarez officials.

CASE LOOKS SERIOUS, ACCORDING TO BRYAN

Washington, July 26.—"It looks like a serious case. We will do whatever is necessary," said Secretary Bryan tonight in commenting on the shooting of Dixon. He telegraphed American Consul Edwards for an immediate investigation.

Secretary Bryan was at his office in the state department when he received a brief message from Consul Edwards advising him of the shooting. He also was shown the press dispatches and manifested keen interest in the situation. President Wilson was advised of the incident, but made no comment.

While immigration officials on the border frequently have had their troubles with Mexicans, officials being detained until their identity could be established, no incident so serious as the affair at Juarez could be recalled tonight in official circles. It was pointed out that strict orders often have been issued to American soldiers on duty from going into the Mexican towns just across the international line, in times of revolutionary disturbances, and that little difficulty has been experienced.

It was apparent that the state department would call upon the defacto government in Mexico City, whose troops are garrisoned in Juarez, to punish the offenders, though no one would authorize any statement of the course to be pursued.

TURKS ADVANCING; POWERS DO NOTHING

Proposal of Russia to Check Moslem Invasion of Bulgaria Declined by Powers. Russia Fears Massacres.

St. Petersburg, July 26.—The proposal made by the Russian government that a joint naval demonstration be made off Constantinople to coincide with the mobilization of Russian troops in the southwestern provinces has been abandoned. Germany flatly declined to consider the plan and Russia's allies, Great Britain and France, replied evasively.

Russia is unable to assume the task single-handed of bringing pressure to bear on the Turks in Europe and she is unwilling to do so in Asia Minor, realizing that such a course would encourage an Armenian uprising which would only further complicate the Turkish problem.

Owing to the break down of the European concert, Russia sees no hope of arresting the Turks by force. No military or naval preparations are proceeding at present. Russia, however, may land a force at Burgas, 76 miles northeast of Russian subjects, if the Turks march in that direction.

At a council of ministers today it was agreed that the Russian government had done its utmost to avert further bloodshed in the Balkans, and that if the progress of the military operations led to wholesale massacres in that region the responsibility would rest on the other powers.

The Russian policy, it is understood, is now concerned with patching up a new Balkan league, including Rumania, as the means of arresting the Turkish advance.

Foreigners Murdered by Bulgars.

Paris, July 27.—A telegram from Saloniki printed in the Paris edition of The New York Herald says the Greek army occupied Xanthi Saturday and that all the inhabitants, including Americans and Englishmen, are believed to have been massacred by the Bulgarians. Seventy foreigners are said to have been put to death.

Twenty thousand Greeks and many Mussulmans and Jews are reported to have perished in the town, which afterwards was pillaged by the returning Bulgars.

No confirmation of the reported massacre has been received from any other sources.

Peace Delegates Meet Monday.

Bucharest, Rumania, July 26.—Peace delegates of Servia, Greece and Montenegro will arrive here Monday, when they will be joined by Premier Venizelos of Greece, and the Bulgarian plenipotentiaries.

Official circles hope terms of peace will be arranged as soon as the armistice now being discussed at Nish is concluded.

Shorter Hours for Women.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 26.—Governor Tener today approved the bill reducing the working hours of women from 60 to 54 a week, with not more than ten hours a day. No female under 21 years of age is permitted to work in a manufacturing establishment all night.

Spanish Hidalgos Still Sore.

Madrid, July 26.—The newspaper, Imparcial, asserts today that members of the old aristocracy of Cadiz refused the invitations sent them by officers of the American training ship Illinois. The refusal, according to the newspaper, was due to the lingering ill-feeling engendered during the Spanish-American war.

RECORDS BROKEN FOR STREET WORK

Fifty-One Streets Paved and 10.6 Miles of Sewers Laid During First Six Months of 1913.

A statement issued Saturday by W. A. Hansell, assistant chief of construction, shows that the city this year has broken all records for street and sewer work.

Up to and including Saturday fifty-one streets were paved and more than 56,360 feet, or 10.6 miles of sewers constructed. More than five miles of sewers—which included the Butler, Highland avenue and McDaniel street sewers—are under construction.

According to estimates made in the construction department about 34.1 miles of sewers will be the record for the year.

Engineer Nym Hurt, in charge of the street paving work for the city, cannot estimate the number of streets which will be complete at the end of the present year.

"We are running far ahead of estimates we made during the first of the year," he said, "and with a run of fair weather this year will break all records."

In addition to the construction of sewers the city has made more house connections up to the present time than at any other time in the history of the construction department.

The Streets Paved.

The streets paved up to the present time and in progress are as follows:

Brick—Central avenue, Highland avenue and DeKalb avenue.

Old Belgian Block—Orleans, Hill, Walnut.

Where Sewers Were Laid.

Of the 56,360 feet of sewers constructed this year the following are some of the most important:

Peachtree, 690 feet; Elmira place, 1,395; South Moreland, 5,100; Ashby, 1,500; East Fair, 3,100; Page and Euclid avenues, 2,450; East Fair, 1,050; ninth ward sanitary trunk, 1,500; Martin street, 2,150, Kennedy street, 2,200; Cain street, 1,350 Bradley street, 1,400, Ashby street, 1,150; Ashland avenue, 1,250; Racine street, 1,250; Paines avenue, 1,800; McMillan, 2,700; Flora street, 1,800; Exposition street, 2,500, and Curran street, 2,100.

Exactly 29,380 feet, of 5 1-2 miles, of sewers are now being constructed.

Results Due to Harmony.

The progress of street and sewer work is attributed to the harmony existing between Chief R. M. Clayton and the construction department forces and the street and sewer committees of council.

Councilman Orville H. Hall, chairman of the street committee, adds that the city is getting better results on all its street paving this year than ever before.

"The construction department has been busy this year, and will continue active for the balance of the year," Chairman Hall said Saturday. "This is going to be a record-breaking year in street construction, in fact I have been informed, and the records will show, that every department of Chief Clayton's office has kept ahead of the estimates."

Since the city has placed in operation the repair plants great progress has been made in putting the streets in shape.

BURNS VESTMENTS AND PRAYER BOOK

is shot through with materialism. Its overtures in the matter of unity are insidious and hypocritical. Behind closed doors it claims superiority to all. The leaders are misleading. The church is not divine on the side of its human imperfections. Today in its conventional aspect it does not know God.

"Here, therefore, on this Friday, the 25th day of July, 1913, at the gate of Monticello, at the home of the apostle of the people's political freedom, I burn the vestments of priesthood, the empty emblems of ecclesiastism—the mockeries of a royal priesthood.

"Here I burn the prayer book—the fetich of a false worship— the idol of the diluted word of God.

"Here I renounce and repudiate the ministry of the Episcopal church which I received from Bishop Randolph—and all digital succession—and I retain the ministry which I received from Lord Jesus and which the church never gave and cannot take away.

Bible Rule or Faith.

"Here, too, I proclaim the Bible as the sufficient rule of faith and order as the sufficient guide book and prayer book for every one that is born of the spirit, and here at the shrine of political and social freedom I assert the religious identity of the American people—a spiritual democracy against a religious aristocracy.

"Here I proclaim the day of the spiritual poor and here I call upon Virginia, the mother of presidents and the mother of democracy, to take the lead in replacing the special privilege of a part of the church with the right of all the church."

Rev. Mr. Davidson is a son of Captain Hunter Davidson, who did torpedo service on the James during the civil war and later was recognized by President Grant and sent in 1871 to make investigations during the Franco-Prussian war.

Receipt for a Good Memory.

Lord Beaconsfield's receipt for a good memory was simple—never take a note. Dr. Jowett used to say: "Great memories, like that of Sir William Hamilton, are apt to disable judgment. Sheer memory flourishes best where note-making is impossible." Dudley Kidd tells how he saw a council of Kaffir chiefs discussing a legal case. A precedent of sixty or seventy years ago came up, and the old men, who ha dbeen children at that time, reconstructed it to the minutest detail, even to the exact color of the cattle concerned, with perfect unanimity.

the right side may win," were his parting words to Attorney Hooper, who answered, "Well, Hugh, I always done that before I entered a big case, an' I've always left it to the Lord to decide which was the right side."

When the solicitor and his assistants left his office the books and papers which the solicitor will carry into court with him Monday had been wrapped up and placed in the safe to be taken out before going to court.

Defense Non-Committal.

On the side of the defense Attorneys Reuben R. Arnold, Luther Z. Rosser and Herbert Haas have very little to say. To the query as to the probabilities of their asking for a continuance the answer invariably is, "We are not in a position to make a statement now."

It is not believed that the defense will announce its intention until Clerk John H. Jones actually calls the name of the defendant in court.

It is known, however, that the defense has been working for the past two days in closing up the final gaps and bringing together the last stray bits of evidence with as much zeal as though they fully intended to go to trial.

Witnesses for the defense have been summoned to the number of 150 or more, and these summonses have been served by attaches of the lawyers who will defend Frank.

While it is said that practically all of the witnesses for the defense have been served with subpoenas and thus must come into court or face contempt proceedings, it was said Saturday that several had not been formally served and that efforts were unavailing to reach one witness.

One Witness Missing.

This man, about the material value of whose testimony the defense will give no inkling, is said to have joined the navy and been sent away from Atlanta within a short time ago. Whether he did this out of love for Uncle Sam's ocean life or whether it was because he desired to avoid the tiresome task of waiting each day to be called upon to testify is not known.

As to whether or not his absence would give grounds for a continuance lies in teh value of his testimony, as were he a material witness the case would in all probability be delayed until he could be brought back to Atlanta.

In the courtroom itself preparations are complete to the last detail. Extra benches and chairs have been placed in the room until every available seating space is filled up, and the judge has announced that when these are filled that his deputies will be required to exclude others who may desire to enter.

Courtroom Will be Cool.

As a means of keeping the air fresh and cool eight electric fans have been installed about the walls of the room and seven ozonators have been placed in various parts of the room. The latter machines, which are a novelty to the average man, are somewhat on the pattern of those machines used by rescuers in mine disasters and by an electrical process free oxygen and send it forth to supply that which the people in the courtroom have used up.

Deputy Sheriff Plennie Miner and Lon Burdett with a corps of assistants will be in direct charge during the trial. Judge Roan has given them strict orders about handling the crowds that are expected.

On Saturday Deputy Miner asked that the following announcement be made in regard to conditions which will prevail. Inside the rail which surrounds the judge's desk the lawyers and principals will be allowed, and a table in one corner has been reserved for the press.

In the seats reserved for spectators anyone who comes in early enough will have a seat. No one will be allowed to stand, as there is no room left which is not taken up by chairs, except that reserved for the aisles.

Theoretically every citizen of Fulton, or any other county, has a right to attend the hearing, and theoretically every bona fide member of the Atlanta bar has a right within the railing. On account of the physical impossibility of accommodating everyone within the confines of the courtroom many will have to be excluded.

There Will Be No Space.

"I want to ask my good friends to maintain perfect quiet and order," said Deputy Miner in his usual soft drawl, "an' I want them to remember that when I ask them to stand back and not try to come in, it's because there is no space for them an' not because I have any desire to keep them out. I wish every one who wants to hear the case could do so, but they can't, an' it's for the sake of the folks who can't get in that I have reserved a table and seats for the newspaper men who will report the trial."

Deputy Miner practically finished serving the veniremen on Saturday and the list of the 144 names drawn Thursday from the jury box was made public.

From the 144 veniremen drawn from the jury box the lawyers will select the jurors. Provided that this list is exhausted before twelve men are chosen other venires may be drawn, for talesmen may be brought into court by the deputy sheriffs.

It is expected that more than the 144 men drawn will be required before the jury is picked, as numbers of these men will have formed conclusions one way or the other, while possibly many others will state that they oppose capital punishment. When the venireman states that he has formed a conclusion or opposes capital punishment he is thereby removed from the list. Other reasons may strike many more off the list, while the state has the right to strike ten names arbitrarily and the defense may strike twenty in a similar way. In the list which was given out by the court officers Saturday the addresses are given for all but nine veniremen.

Oklahoma City Firemen Strike Because Their Wages Are Cut

Oklahoma City, Okla., July 26.—The Oklahoma City fire department, consisting of ninety men, struck today because the city commissioners had cut their wages and dismissed their chief. Thirty citizens have been detailed by Acting Fire Chief John Von Elm to take the strikers' places, and other Oklahoma cities have been asked to lend their experienced extra firemen to the department.

The firemen were receiving $85 a month. The city administration, in the interest of economy, proposed to reduce their wages to $80. The salary of Fire Chief Mark Kesler was reduced from $180 to $150 a month.

When the reduction was announced several days ago the firemen announced they would quit in a body if the wage schedule was put into effect. The commissioners then discharged Kesler and declared the cut would stand. At a given signal today the whole department walked out of the fire stations.

GIRL AND SWEETHEART ARE HELD FOR MURDER

Cairo, Ill., July 26.—Miss May Copeland and her fiance, Lucien Turk, members of prominent families of Bardwell, Ky., are under arrest charged with killing Hugh Atchison, Miss Copeland's brother-in-law.

Miss Copeland declared she fired the shot that killed Atchison, but Turk is being held also. The shoting took place Thursday night after Turk and the girl had returned to the latter's home from a ride. Miss Copeland says Atchison started a quarrel, as the result of which she shot him.

Miss Copeland formerly lived with the Atchisons. She left recently and went to the home of a cousin because, it is alleged, Atchison insisted she should stop going with Turk if she continued to stay at his house.

Accompanied by Turk, she returned to the Atchison home for some of her clothing.

According to the story told by both Turk and his sweetheart, Atchison abused the girl for returning to the house, whereupon she shot him. The weapon with which Atchison was killed was identified as belonging to Turk.

Conference of Governors.

Madison, Wis., July 26.—Arrangements for the sixth annual governors' conference, which is to be held at Colorado Springs, Col., for five days, commencing August 26, were completed today by Secretary Miles C. Riley, of Madison. The function of the governors' conference is to bring governors together yearly for an exchange of views on subjects of general importance, promotion of greater uniformity in state legislation, and the attainment of greater efficiency in the state administration.

He Killed Gould's Manager.

Greensboro, N. C., July 26.—Lurton English, charged with the murder of Jack Armstrong, manager of the George Gould hunting estate in Randolph county, North Carolina, on March 24, 1913, was convicted at Asheboro, N. C., this afternoon of murder in the second degree, and sentenced to the state prison for a term of twenty-five years. English is a hunter by trade. The plea of the defendant was insanity.

Public Opinion.

(From The Philadelphia Press.)

A ruling of the supreme court of Alabama which has received a great deal of attention is the recent announcement that it would reverse no more decisions on grounds purely technical. This has been the subject of much comment, but so far as we have seen it has received only commendation.

Laymen naturally would be unanimously for it. The average practicing lawyer is probably against it, but great lawyers and some great judges have from time to time given this principle their hearty indorsement. It is somewhat surprising and very gratifying to have it laid down as a rule by a state supreme court, which all subordinate courts in that state one bound to follow, that no case shall be reversed for a technical error unless it is shown affirmatively that the whole cause of the defendant has been injured thereby.

Lawyers are officers of the court. Those who seek justice through the courts have no choice, but must secure the services of one of the guild who are officers of the court to conduct their cause for them. Nothing can convince a litigant of the righteousness of a decision which defeats his claim or deprives him of his property because of some mistake of his counsel which his unfortunate client is unable even to comprehend. If these mistakes are so vital the one who makes them should suffer for them and not his innocent client.

ASCENDS 12,950 FEET FLYING IN BIPLANE

Rochester, N. Y., July 26.—A dispatch from Bath says that Frank Burnside, flying in a biplane, today broke Lincoln Beachy's American altitude of 11,680 feet, made in Chicago two years ago, by attaining a height of 12,950 feet.

Burnside, who lives in Oneonta, was in the air for an hour and forty-six minutes, flying over a six-mile course.

GEN. HUERTA LOSES FINANCE MINISTER

Mexico City, July 26.—Esquivel Obregon, Mexican minister of finance, today resigned from office. It is reported that he is not in full accord with the Huerta administration.

It was Senor Obregon who recently conducted the negotiations with American and European bankers for a $50,000,000 government loan.

FOES OF HUERTA ARE DENOUNCED AS JUST BANDITS

ADMINISTRATION AGENTS CRITICISED BY WILSON

Doesn't Think They Should Have Been Sent to Mexico. Washington Is Ignorant About Mexicans, He Says.

Washington, July 26.—President Wilson had before him tonight the report written here today by Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson on conditions in Mexico from the time that a revolution overthrew the regin of Porfirio Diaz, through the stirring events of the Orozco revolt, the downfall of Madero and down to the establishment of the Huerta regime. A period of three years.

This report was transmitted to the president tonight by Secretary Bryan, who had spent the greater part of the day in conference with Ambassador Wilson. The president expects to examine the report before Monday when he will confer with Ambassador Wilson on a possible solution of present difficulties.

Bryan Gets Other Information.

Secretary Bryan, in sifting the mass of varying information which has reached Washington from all parts of Mexico, did not confine himself to official channels, for as soon as Ambassador Wilson left the state department, Reginald E. del Valle, of Los Angeles, Cal., whose identity as an agent of the government has been variously stated and denied in official circles, appeared in Mr. Bryan office. For nearly an hour after Ambassador Wilson left Mr. del Valle was closeted with Secretary Bryan and much secrecy was manifested as to the nature of the conference. Mr. Bryan was silent, declining to state how long he had known Mr. del Valle or anything of the character of his mission in Mexico.

Mr. del Valle afterwards admitted he had spent almost two months in Mexico, traveling through the trouble zones, and had presented a full report of conditions everywhere in the republic. He said he had been a political acquaintance of Mr. Bryan and had been at one time a state senator in California.

Even the Mexicans Don't Know.

Able to speak Spanish, del Valle, who is of Mexican ancestry, though born in the United States, had little difficulty, he said, in making his way through territory held by rebels as well as that held by federals. He declined to state the results of his explorations.

"The odd thing," he said, however, "is that people in the north of Mexico do not even know conditions in southern Mexico and vice versa."

Mr. del Valle declined to indicate what he thought of the situation, but spoke highly of some constitutionalist leaders in Sonora, whose names were mentioned to him.

Coincidentally del Valle came up from Mexico City on the same steamer with Ambassador Wilson and arrived in Washington on the same train. That they had little in common was apparent from Ambassador Wilson's remarks earlier in the day that he did not think the government had exhibited courtesy toward him in sending unofficial representatives to investigate conditions in Mexico.

Ambassador Wilson Caustic.

He spoke caustically of the methods pursued by both del Valle and William Bayard Hale, a personal friend of President Wilson, in obtaining information. In fact, the ambassador said, he had been told by a legation official in Cuba that del Valle had a copy of the state department code in his possession, an impropriety for an unofficial representative, in the ambassador's opinion.

While Ambassador Wilson expressed his views on Mexican affairs quite freely early in the day and before he reached Washington, he began tonight a policy of reticence. He said he had been asked by Secretary Bryan to refrain from discussing the situation and would abide by the wishes of his superior officer. In fact, the ambassador expressed doubt as to the accuracy of some published statements attributed to him criticising suggestions of the Washington government for the establishment of peace in Mexico.

The ambassador was not willing to say what he had written in his report, but declared unequivocally that he had not altered his views about affairs in Mexico since coming to Washington or after his talks with Secretary Bryan. He admitted he had at various times suggested the advisability of recognizing the Huerta administration.

Financial Losses Enormous.

It was understood the ambassador's report deals extensively with the economic as well as the political situation in Mexico. It was said on good authority that he pictured a gloomy condition in financial circles in the southern republic, pointing to several big banks as being on the verge of bankruptcy and a general condition of distress in business circles. It is declared the ambassador spoke of the continuous deficits both of the national treasury and of the railway systems and estimated foreign losses as very heavy. The French losses alone he is said, to have placed at $250,000,000 in gold within recent months. That American investments had greatly depreciated and that no estimate could be placed on losses also is said to have been included in the ambassador's report.

Constitutionalist representatives here exhibited a lively interest in Ambassador Wilson's utterances, declaring that some of the things he was reported to have said in interviews about the Mexican people were offensive and would make it impossible for him to return as ambassador.

The ambassador was in the dark about future plans. He would go back on the steamer sailing next Thursday if the president desires, he said, but he has received no intimation on this point. It was reported on good authority that one of the recommendations presented to Secretary Bryan was that the American embassy at Mexico City should be continued in charge of Nelson O'Shaughnessy, its first secretary, and the resignation of Ambassador Wilson accepted. His resignation, with those of other diplomats, has been in President Wilson's hands since the Taft administration ended.

Special U. S. Agents Attacked.

The ambassador describes his treatment by President Wilson and Secretary Bryan hitherto as courteous in every respect, except one—the sending of separate agents to investigate conditions in Mexico. He severely criticised both William Bayard Hale, and Reginald Del Valle, whom he declared were acting for the administration there.

"I don't think Mr. Del Valle should have been given the state department code," said the ambassador. "I know he had it, because he went to the secretary of our legation in Havana to get help in deciphering it. Indeed, I believe the senate committee might investigate the distribution of the state department code to private individuals."

The ambassador said he had every disposition to carry out the wishes of the president and Secretary Bryan. Mediation, however, he looked upon as impossible, because the Mexican federal government would not entertain such a suggestion.

"I regard mediation," he added, "as venturing on dangerous seas."

The Maderos Attacked.

Mr. Wilson was vehement in his criticism of the constitutionalists and the Madero family.

"The Madero family," asserted the ambassador, "have maintained a paid bureau in Washington to poison the public mind. As to the rebels there really are none except in Senora, where there is an organized government. Elsewhere there are bandits."

The ambassador was asked about Coahuila, where Governor Carranza is in charge of the constitutional cause.

"There are bandits in Coahuila, too," he answered. "I don't mean to say that Carranza is a bandit, but in order to keep his men together he has to allow them to loot, and tehy, therefore, become bandits."

Mr. Wilson suggested that scarcely *anyone in Washington realy under*stood the Mexican and the characteristics of Latin peoples.

"Some of the proposals I have heard," he remarked, "sound like the dribblings of mere children; for instance, the proposal to have foreign powers from Central and South America act with us in mediating the trouble in Mexico. Why, that would be an overthrow of the principles of the Monroe doctrine, and the Mexicans would resent that interference. I know this proposal was once made by Mr. Barrett, director general of the Pan-American union. Mr. Barrett and I are personal friends, and I have great respect for him, but I don't think much of that suggestion."

Costing Bryan $2,000 a Day.

The ambassador met Mrs. Henry Lane Wilson and his two sons, who had preceded him here. Asked just how soon he would finish his conference, he said:

"I'll certainly hurry them," and then added with a laugh:

"I understand from the newspapers that my presence in Washington is costing Mr. Bryan $2,000 a day by losing his lecture engagements. Well, I must be an expensive visitor."

After he had breakfasted Ambassador Wilson hurried to the stae department, where Secretary Bryan was waiting. President Wilson had gone off to play golf. He will not see the ambassador until Monday.

Secretary Bryan would make no announcement of his conference with the ambassador, further than to say that Mr. Wilson had made a preliminary report.

Mr. Bryan was asked about the statement that Del Valle had been furnished with a copy of the state department code, but beyond saying he never had announced that Del Valle was an agent of the state department, he refused to discuss the question.

"I was impressed," said Ambassador Wilson later, "with the receptiveness of Secretary Bryan and his breadth of view. Our interview was very pleasant, and Mr. Bryan impressed me as not having reached any determination of the situation, but as desirous to know the facts."

Mr. Wilson said he would ask the president to permit him to speak freely about the situation, as he believed *the public was not generally in*formed.

Did Del Valle Spy on Wilson.

It was learned later tonight that Del Valle not only had been on board the same ship and train by which Ambassador Wilson had come to Washington, but stopped at the same hotel in New York, followed him on the street cars there and observed the men with whom the ambassador talked.

Del Valle, it also was said, was the man from whom Secretary Bryan received a recommendation that the American embassy be kept in charge of a secretary for the present and Ambassador Wilson's resignation be accepted.

Del Valle declined tonight to discuss any of these points, but said he was about through with his mission. He said he was a lawyer, and had no interests in Mexico. He added that he would be here a few days longer conferring with Secretary Bryan, and would in the meantime pay his respects to President Wilson.

Manuel Perez Romero, confidential agent of the constitutionalists in Washington and brother of Mrs. Francisco I. Madero, tonight denied statements purporting to have been made by Ambassador Wilson that Mrs. Madero had published letters that were forgeries and that the Madero family was maintaining a paid bureau in the United States for the purpose of giving publicity to false statements respecting conditions in Mexico. He declared that Mrs. Madero had published no such letters, nor caused them to be published, and that the Madero family had made no contributions for maintaining a publicity bureau.

Constitutionalist headquarters here gave out a copy of a telegram sent today to President Wilson by General Francisco Villa, a rebel commander at Ascension, Chihuahua, declaring that the anti-American demonstrations in Mexico City did not express the real feeling of the Mexican people toward the United States. He appealed to the president to lift the embargo on arms and permit the constitutionalists to obtain munitions of war on an equality with the Huerta government.

Secretary Bryan told the foreign realtions committee today the administration would make no immediate change in enforcing the neutrality law against shipments of arms to Mexico. This indicates that President Wilson will continue to refuse to issue export permits to both the Huerta and constitutionalist factions.

Release of Americans Demanded.

Washington, July 26.—Consul Lecher, at Chihuahua, has been instructed to demand the immediate release of Charles Bissel and Bernard McDonald, reported held there by the Mexican federals in a prison pen, under sentence of death.

The state department has taken a more aggressive attitude than in most similar cases, and has made representations to the Mexican government, both through the embassy in Mexico City and the consul at Chihuahua.

Bissel and McDonald are mining engineers. McDonald is said to be an Englishman. They were captured while attempting to take American refugees from Parral.

The American colony in Madero, for whose safety much fear has been felt, has been unmolested, and all is quiet there, according to a report by messenger from Madero to Chihuahua, which American Consul Letcher today wired the state department.

Advices received at the state department today confirmed earlier reports of the capture of Torreon by constitutionalists under Governor Carranza. These reports had been denied from Mexico City. It was said the federalists continued their occupation of Monclova.

Charges Minister With Kissing

MISS LOUVENIA DURDEN,

MINISTER HELD ON STORY TOLD BY GIRL

The girl was the first to take the stand. She is a pretty child and looks younger than her age. She was dressed in a simple summer frock and wore a wide straw hat.

The first advance was made, she said, on Wednesday preceding the Thursday on which she had fled from Rev. Mr. Jackson's office. Her employer had come to her desk and, placing an arm over her shoulder, had kissed her on the check. She said she was unable to account for his strange action and resented it, thrusting out an arm to prevent a second kiss she says the minister attempted to give.

Shows Her Resentment.

She jumped from her chair, moving away and plainly showed her resentment. She stated that Rev. Jackson endeavored to apologize. She returned to her work, leaving the office at the regular hour, 5 p. m. The following afternoon, about 2:45 o'clock, she stated the minister was drinking.

"He had some stuff in bottles," she said, "that resembled beer. He drank some of it and poured out a glass for me, asking me to drink it. I wouldn't do it and told him so. He said it would do me good and was healthful.

"When I wouldn't take the drink he came over to my chair and put his arm on my shoulder. I sat still, not knowing what he intended doing. He kissed me and when I objected tried to kiss me again. I shoved him aside, got my hat and left his office.

It was between 2:30 and 3 o'clock, more than two hours before the time I usually left work for home."

Says Minister Admitted Story.

Scarborough stated that when he confronted the minister with the story of his sister-in-law Rev. Jackson acknowledged having kissed her and having put his arm about her shoulder. He declared, however, that there had been no wrong motive in his action.

"I guess I drank a little too much beer," the brother-in-law quoted him as having said.

Rev. Mr. Jackson made this statement on the stand:

"I used to board at the Durden home and frequently carried the girls to the moving picture shows. Being fond of children, as I am, I was kind to them all. This child who accuses me I have held to my bosom at her home and in the presence of her father.

"I have called her 'sweetheart' and 'dearie' in the hearing of her parents. It is characteristic of me to call children 'my dear' and use endearing terms to them. The day this incident occurred I was in a playful frame of mind. It is customary for me to go through calesthenic exercises with dumb bells. I was showing this girl through these exercises and how to breathe deeply.

"I touched her once upon the chest to demonstrate the art of deep breathing, and that was all. Once, while she was combing her hair before the mirror in my office, she told me of a sore upon her lips. I salved it with mentholatum. That was all."

Thought It Would Help Her.

"I admit drinking a bottle of Bass' ale—only one bottle. I also asked the girl if she would not drink a little, thinking it would help her. My physician has advised me to use stimulant for weakness of the heart. She refused to drink, and I did not insist.

"On that day I was tired out from a a long trip into the two Carolinas, from which I had just returned, and *because of two speeches I had deliv*ered on the previous Sunday. It was a trying trip, and a tax on my system.

"On several occasions the girl answered me crossly. I could not tolerate it, being nervous and unstrung, and told her to go home. The following day Mr. Scarborough appeared at my office and accused me of making improper advances toward the child.

"I told him of the fatherly feeling I felt for her and of the source of delight children were to me, a fact proved by my twelve years' association with them in work for their uplift. *I frequently called her sweet*heart when she would come into my office with her sister, my regular typist.

Denies Her Story.

"I did not struggle with her on the day she alleges, except once when I caught her arms and she tried to pull away playfully.

"The girl has often sat in my lap, and I have kissed her goodby and acted as a father to her. She seemed to realize the fatherly spirit, and we were more in the relation of father and child than anything else. In many respects her story is incorrect—some of it is untrue"

The girl was recalled to the stand. Frank L. Haraison, her counsel, asked if the minister had ever kissed her at home or if she had ever sat in his lap.

"No," she answered. "I never have. He never even tried to kiss me. His past conduct has been of the best, and I never had him to approach me before in such manner."

Called Her Sweetheart.

She stated, however, that upon visiting his office with her sister he had occasionally called her "sweetheart," and "dearie."

Her father was called to the stand, and, upon being questioned, stated that he had never seen his daughter kiss the minister or sit in his lap. He declared, though, that Rev. Jackson had often been in a drunken condition at the Durden home, and on many mornings required his breakfast sent to the room.

"We have often found empty whisky and beer bottles in his room," Durden said, "some of which were thrown out of the window by Dr. Jackson."

Attorney Haralson, in his speech at the close of the testimony, denounced the minister.

Attorney George P. Whitman, who represented Rev. Jackson, admitted in his speech that his client had committed an indiscretion, saying, however, that there was no impure motive in his actions or any *effort at im*morality.

"The entire affair," he said, "was nothing but a harmless indiscretion on the part of Rev. Mr. Jackson."

While the lawyers were arguing the case, the girl was led from the room by her father, and into a small ante-room, where she broke into tears. Her father appeared affected as deeply as she, for he frequently dabbod at his eyes with a handkerchief.

Mr Jackson Well Known.

Rev. Mr. Jackson has been secretary of the Juvenile Protective association for years, and, in fact, is one of its founders. He is a graduate of the University of Mississippi, from which he departed for the ministry. He is 45 years old, is married and has seven children, six of whom are by his first wife.

Came From South Carolina.

His original home is Gilford, S. C., to which his family now reside. His wife is unaware of the charges brought against him. His temporary residence in Atlanta is in a local sanitarium. He is a minister of wide prominence throughout both Atlanta and Georgia. His connection with the Protective association carries him on extended trips throughout the state, Carolinas and Virginia.

In 1889 he was pastor of the Centenary Methodist church, at Macon, and is a former pastor of the Fayetteville church and the First M. E. church in Lewisville, Ga.

He informed reporters that he would fight the case with a brilliant array of counsel, and that, in the end, he would find complete exoneration. The case will be heard before the Fulton superior criminal court.

Defends Rev. Crawford Jackson.

In a talk over the telephone with a reporter for The Constitution last night Judge W. R. Hammond, who has been associated with the minister in the juvenile protective work, stated that he did not believe there was any grounds for charges against Dr. Jackson. He paid high tribute to the Rev. Mr. Jackson's career and success with the association.

TAKES TWO BRIDES IN JUST TEN WEEKS AND SHOOTS HIMSELF

Kansas City, Mo., July 26.—Douglas Hertz, of Kansas City, whose wife disappeared from a hotel in St. Louis last Thursday, shot and dangerously wounded himself after a telephone conversation with her here tonight.

Mrs. Hertz was located tonight at the home of a friend. Hertz entered a saloon and telephoned his wife from there. After a long conversation he stepped away from the telephone and shot himself.

Soon after Hertz was taken to a hospital a woman, whom tthe officers said was Mrs. Hertz, telephoned police headquarters to learn whether a man had shot himself.

Hertz is a graduate of Cambridge university and it is said his father is a member of the British parliament. Hertz said his father was worth $5,000,000.

Hertz has had two brides in the last ten weeks. His first wife, Miss Madeline Lawless of Strong City, Kan., was killed in a motor car accident near Safforaville, Kan., while they were on their honeymoon trip. Eight weeks later he married Miss Mamie Roy, of this city. The second wife disappeared from their home in St. Louis Thursday. She refused tonight to explain why she had left her husband.

GUARD STATIONED OVER FOREIGNERS

Volunteers Protecting Thousands of Women and Children in China—No Decisive Battle Yet Fought.

Pekin, July 26.—Volunteer American, British and other citizens are tonight guarding the approaches to the mountain town of Ku-Ling, where thousands of foreigners, mostly American and British women and children, have taken refuge from the heat of the Chinese summer months. The few American bluejackets on the heights are maintaining signal communication with the United States gunboat Helena, which is lying off the river port of Kiu Kiang.

Foreigners have been able to see some fighting between government forces and rebels from their position on the mountain top. They advise other foreigners to remain away from Ku Ling.

The Rt. Rev. Logan H. Roots, bishop of Hankow, advocates the safeguarding of Ku Ling as a place of refuge for foreigners. Civilians believe, despite the proximity of the fighting, that Ku Ling is a safe place.

After a fortnight of rebellion the government forces have had the better of the fighting at the three main points of contact, namely, Shanghai, Kiu-Kiang and along the Tien Tsin-Pukow railway.

No Decisive Battle.

While much ammunition has been expended there has been no decisive battle, which foreigners believe is essential to Provisional President Yuan Shi Kai's ultimate success.

At Shanghai the northern troops on shore number 2,000, while pitted against them are 4,000 southerners. The army of General Chang Haun numbers less than 5,000 officers and men. The largest northern army consists of probably 15,000 to 20,000 men, and is in the province of Kiang-Si.

European and American sympathy in the Yang Tse Kiang ports and at Pekin is overwhelmingly in favor of President Yuan Shi Kai. The Japanese and Russians apparently favor the southerners.

The opinion prevails among foreigners here that Yuan Shi Kai soon will be victorious. It is pointed out in some quarters, however, that the ability of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, first provisional president of the republic, and his party to create a rebellion and to spread disaffection among the troops in the principal cities along the lower Yang Tse river was not suspected three months ago.

Foreign Sailors Landed.

Shanghai, July 26.—The landing of sailors from foreign warships at this city today has greatly relieved the foreigners and better class of Chinese, and the country people are beginning to return to their homes.

The country districts around Shanghai present an aspect of desolation. Villages have been burned and crops ruined. Decomposed bodies are lying everywhere. Philanthropic organizations are caring for the refugees, thousands of whom still are camping in the streets here.

The forces manning the Wu-Sung forts went over to the government yesterday, but on the same evening they rejoined the rebels. The commanding general fled and the 4,000 troops elected a new leader, who declares he will not participate in the fighting until attacked. A special train is being kept in readiness to remove the foreigners from Wu-Sung if the situation makes it advisable. All was quiet around the arsenal today. The bombardment which it received from the government forces yesterday seems to have removed the rebels, who now are concentrated in the neighborhood of Chapel, north of Shanghai.

Foreigners Fear Trouble.

Nanking, July 26.—Nanking has been denuded of troops. Only enough soldiers to maintain order have been left. Foreign residents fear trouble from the thousands of coolies who have been thrown out of work.

The Su-Chow-Fu rebels have retreated to the Hual river, where they have extended their front several miles to resist the northern army advancing from Ngan Hwai province.

Northern troops today fired upon the imperial customs steamer Kutwo, on the Yang-Tse-Kiang at Ching Kiang, 45 miles from Nanking. The British gunboat Woodcock escorted the Kutwo up the river, and demanded that the commander of the government forces explain. He apologized, and said the attack was a mistake.

CAMPAIGN FUND PROBE DEMANDED BY HOWARD

Congressman Wants Investigation of Alleged Solicitation in Atlanta Postoffice.

By John Corrigan, Jr.

Washington, July 26.—(Special.)—Representative William Schley Howard has taken steps to air the facts in connection with the alleged solicitation of campaign funds in the federal building in Atlanta last summer to aid the republican national campaign. Such solicitation on a government reservation, or from federal officeholders, is a felony under the federal statutes.

Mr. Howard charges that evidence of the solicitation was collected by Captain George S. Darnell, secretary of the civil service commission, who caught the campaign solicitors red-handed, and forwarded the evidence to the civil service commission at Washington. The matter was next called to the attention of the department of justice.

Henry Lincoln Johnson, recorder of deeds for the District of Columbia and formerly a negro lawyer of Atlanta, interested himself in the matter and the result was that the prosecution was dropped.

Representative Howard charges that President Taft himself ordered the department not to pursue the case. He has, therefore, introduced a resolution in the house calling for all the facts and evidence in the possession of the department of justice bearing on the case.

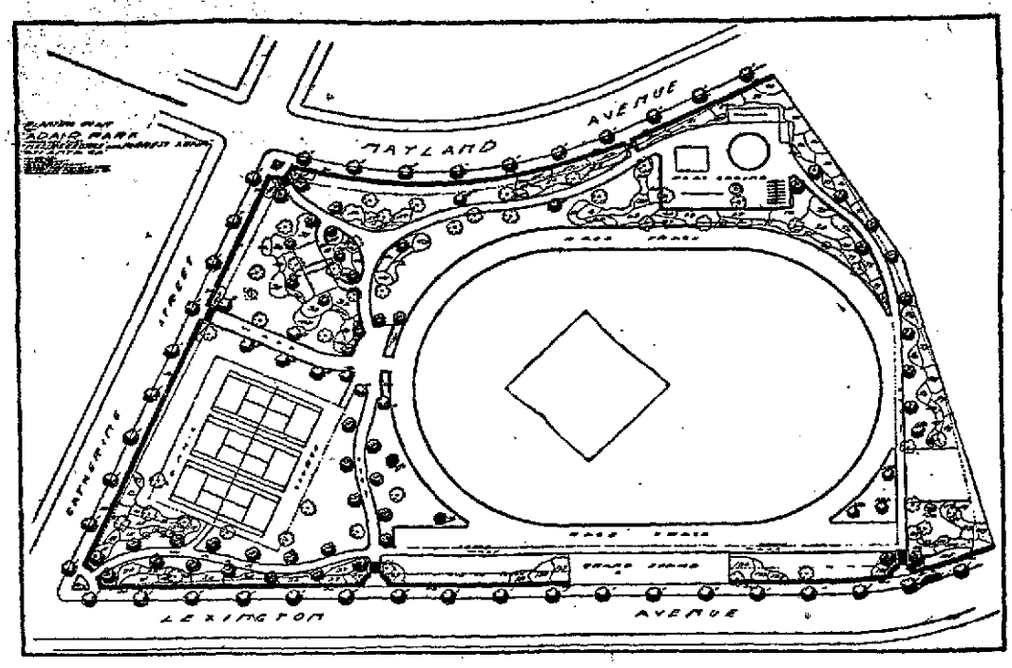
"Captain Darnwell was brought to Washington and E. H. Jennings put in his place as secretary to the commission," said Mr. Howard. "This was poor reward for a man doing his duty, and I propose to have all the facts in the case made public."

FARM COMMISSION BACK FROM EUROPE

Washington, July 26.—(Special.)—After six weeks spent in investigating agricultural conditions in Europe, with particular reference to farm credits and farm co-operation, the commission appointed by President Taft, with another from the Southern Commercial congress, returned to Washington today.

Harvie Jordan, whose letters in The Constitution telling of his tour, have attracted considerable attention, passed through today accompanied by his young daughter, en route to Atlanta.

Model Playground and Recreation Center Outlined in Landscape Plans for Adair Park



Landscape plans for the Adair park, in the tenth ward, were received by General Manager Dan Carey, of the park department, yesterday morning.

The drawing was made by Thomas Meehan & Sons, of Philadelphia. It exemplifies the policy of the park department to carry out every form of outdoor activity on the smallest amount of space.

The park will be laid out on seven acres of land. The site was given to the city by Forrest Adair, and is estimated to be worth about $10,000. To carry out the designs of the landscape engineers, the city will spend in the neighborhood of $15,000. General Manager Carey declares Adair park will be a model playground and recreation center, and that it will be worth ten times more than the original cost, when it is completed.

"There can be no value placed on an improvement of this sort," Manager Carey says. "Adair park will be made one of the most beautiful spots in the country. We hope to make it an example for other cities to follow."

On the seven acres, which the park will cover, Manager Carey has provided for a spacious baseball field, three tennis courts, a playground and wading pool for children, a comfort house, lawns and plenty of space for trees, benches and swings.

Around the baseball field there will be a circular track and inside the track will be plenty of space for school boy field and athletic sports. There will be a straightaway track and plenty of cement walks.

Manager Carey will present the plans to the park board at the meeting which will be held during the coming week. He will urge that work be started immediately in order to have the park ready for next summer.

PELLAGRA SPREADING TO NEW TERRITORY

Disease for Which No Cure Has Been Found Rapidly Increasing.

Washington, July 26.—Pellagra, for which physicians have found no cure, is spreading beyond the zone to which it previously has been confined and is invading new territory, according to officials of the United States public health service, who base their belief upon statistics on the prevalence of the disease in Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas, from 1907 to 1912, which were made public today.

Reports from these three states, bordering on the area in which pellagra has most extensively existed in this country, show, says Surgeon C. H. Lavinder, the prevalence of the disease "to no inconsiderable degree."

"This suggests rather strongly," he adds, "that pellagra is increasing in the area in which it was prevalent and invading new territory. Further inquiry is needed to determine this with any degree of accuracy." The figures indicated an increase in the disease during 1912. The total number of cases in Oklahoma during the six years was 472, with a death rate per 100 cases of 54.91; in Texas 2,628 cases, death rate 46.61, and in Arkansas 945, death rate 41.90. The figures for Arkansas for 1912 were incomplete.

Today's report, which supplements a previous pellagra report giving statistics for other states, is of peculiar interest at this time in connection with the bill of Representative Johnson, of South Carolina, for a large appropriation for the erection of a hospital at Spartanburg, S. C., for the study of pellagra. The public health service has been urged to support the bill.

RAILROADS CUT RATES FOR NORTH CAROLINA

Norfolk, Va., July 26.—The North Carolina corporation commission and the representatives of the railways who have been in conference at Old Point since Tuesday have reached an agreement on the North Carolina rate trouble, according to an announcement made by E. L. Travis, chairman of the commission.

However, no formal statement will be given out regarding the agreement until the matter has been referred to Governor Craig next week. It is thought that the railways agreed to reduce the rates 25 per cent, as the commission demanded.

SCOTT IS SUMMONED BY FRANK'S LAWYER

Chief Lanford Declares H. B. Pierce Has Not Kept Faith With His Department.

Harry Scott, the Pinkerton detective who planned the third degree which exacted the confession from Jim Conley, the negro sweeper, has been summoned by the defense in the coming Frank trial.

He was served with a subpoena yesterday from Frank's counsel. At police headquarters in the afternoon he expressed belief that Chief Lanford, Detective John Black and others connected with the third degree which gained the negro's admission would also be summoned by the defense.

Frank's attorneys would make no comment upon this move. Chief Lanford and his men, however, say they have not yet received such summons.

In a lengthy interview Saturday afternoon, Chief Lanford denounced H. B. Pierce, general superintendent of the Atlanta Pinkerton forces, for alleged questionable procedure in the Phagan investigation. When application was filed for permission to establish a branch in Atlanta, Lanford states that it was on condition that the Pinkertons work in harmony with police headquarters that the right was granted.

"The promise has been kept by all but Pierce," the detective head declared. He also intimated that the police board will be requested to take action.

"Detective Scott has carried out his contract with the police department," said Lanford, "and has turned over to us all evidence he and the men under his direct supervision have obtained. During his absence from the city recently, however, a bloody stick was found in the pencil factory, along with an envelope supposed to have been Mary Phagan's.

"Neither of these was turned over to the police, but their discovery was kept a secret while they rested in the hands of the defense. The finding of these clues, I am forced to presume, was done at the direction of Pierce. His action in keeping them secret is an open breach of faith."

Lanford also strongly hinted of planted evidence in both the discovery of the envelope and bludgeon.

UNABLE TO GET WORK, GIRL DROWNS HERSELF

Chicago, July 26.—Letters found in a clump of bushes near where the body of a young woman was recovered from Lake Michigan last night, convinced the police tonight that she had committed suicide because of her failure to obtain employment.

The victim was supposed to be Miss E. Lee, of Elmo, Wis., although she has not been positively identified. The pistol which brought her death was found on the beach. The weapon was traced and found to have been sold here Wednesday to a Miss Lee, who gave her residence as Elmo.

The two letters which explained the woman had been out of employment and had been unable to procure work, bore no wording to indicate the city from which they had been sent. The coroner's inquest was continued until Thursday to allow police to make further investigation.

FOR "BIRTH STRIKE" SOCIALISTS ARGUE

Berlin, July 26.—A "birth strike" as a means of bringing about electoral reform in Prussia is reported to be under discussion by a socialist gathering which heard the idea recently advanced by a speaker.

The father of the idea was Dr. Alfred Bernstein, who declared that most successful pressure would be exerted on the government if mothers would make some such announcement as this:

"We will bring no children into the world to become citizens of this state unless better rights of citizenship are accorded."

BLALOCK SUCCEEDS JACKSON AUGUST 1

Will Take Over Office of Internal Revenue Collector Friday Morning.

A. O. Blalock, successor to Henry S. Jackson, collector of internal revenue for the state of Georgia, has been officially advised of his appointment, has made the requisite bond and will take over the office of internal revenue collector Friday morning, August 1.

So far Mr. Blalock has not given out any information as to the members of his staff, but as the greater part of the official force is under civil service rules the probabilities are that the new collector will retain, at least for the present, practically the present force.

STATE OFFICER GUILTY, SAYS MISSISSIPPI JURY

Jackson, Miss., July 26.—W. A. Montgomery, member of the prison board of trustees, was today found guilty of misfeasance in office by a jury in the Hinds county circuit court. The jury was given the case last night and returned its verdict this morning with a recommendation for mercy.

Colonel Montgomery is a veteran of the war between the states, was actice in the ku-klux klan, commanded the Second Mississippi regiment in the Spanish-American war and served two terms as commander of the Mississippi division of the United Confederate Veterans.

The principal charge against him was that he aided in allowing work delegated to the trustees to be done by Lawrence Yerger, former secretary of the board. Because of this Yerger more easily embezzled state funds, for which he stands convicted.

Judge Henry imposed a fine of $100 and decreed that Mr. Montgomery shoud be dismissed from office in accordance with the code. Mr. Montgomery's counsel obtained a writ of supercedeas. This serves to delay execution of the sentence until the case is finally decided by the supreme court and Mr. Montgomery will remain in office until then.

The case of T. H. Turley, steward of the insane hospital, charged in four indictments with embezzlement from that institution, was called for trial. He obtained a change of venue to Rankin county.

The Hinds county term of court expired tonight.

FAST PROGRESS MADE ON TARIFF MEASURE

Washington, July 26.—After several hours of long tariff discussion in the senate today, during which the republicans were consistently defeated on amendments, the minority leaders began to tire of fruitless efforts to amend the bill, and rapid progress was made. The chemical schedule practically was approved without change when the senate adjourned.

In protesting against the heavy cut on the duty on whiting, Senator Lodge declared he knew it was useless to offer amendments. He also protested against the duty on lithopone, saying he would not uselessly delay the senate by offering an amendment.

Senator Smoot also refrained from offering certain amendments, saying:

"I will not offer an amendment because I see it will do no good."

All the paragraphs of the chemical schedule were approved with the exception of those referring to barytes and lead products which were passed over by request.

PARCEL POST CHANGES IN EFFECT AUGUST 15

Washington, July 26.—Final action on Senator Bryan's bill to repeal the power of the postmaster general to change parcel post rates and the size of mailable packages was today postponed until Monday by the senate postoffice committee. The changes will go into effect, however, August 15.

ANNAPOLIS EXAMS ATTACKED BY HOWARD

Atlanta Congressman Quotes Some of the Questions That Are Asked.

By John Corrigan, Jr.

Washington, D. C., July 26.—(Special.)—To prove his contention that the examination which applicants for admission to the naval academy are required to stand is entirely too difficult, Mr. Howard has had some of these specimen examinations put in the congressional record.

"Some of the questions are ridiculous," he said. "I do not believe Yale or Princeton college professors could answer. Here are the questions in history:

"'Arrange these battles in chronological order, stating in each case between whom they were fought, the names of the commanders on either side and the victor: 1, Antritam; 2, Big Horn; 3, Bull Run; 4, Chapultepec; 5, Chesapeake and Leopard; 6, Fallen Timbers; 7, Five Forks; 8, Gettysburg; 9, Kings Mountain; 10, Lake Erie; 11, Lexington; 12, Manila Bay; 13, Monmouth; 14, New Orleans; 15, Palo Alto; 16, Plains of Abraham; 17, Santiago; 18, Tippecanoe; 19, Trenton; 20, Wilderness.

"'Explain briefly the significance in American history of the following names: 1, Peter Stuyvesant; 2, Pere Marquette; 3, Oglethorpe; 4, Shay Rebellion; 5, Monroe Doctrine; 6, John Brown; 7, Farragut; 8, the Panama Canal; 9, Andrew Johnson; 10, the New Nationalism; 11, Greenbacks; 12, Boxer Rebellion; 13, the X Y Z correspondence; 14, Nullification; 15, Dred Scott; 16, Dorr's Rebellion; 17, Harriet Beecher Stowe; 18, Missouri Compromise; 19, Clayton-Bulwer treaty; 20, Lecompton constitution.'"

Mr. Howard thinks they might have asked for the significance of Dog's Tooth, Buzzard's Roost and Sun Dance. The latter place has 700 inhabitants and was recently voted $60,000 public building by congress.

NAME OF THE NEGRO MAY BE WITHDRAWN

Columbia is appointed my protest will will be still more vehement.

"I would rather see tariff and the money legislation defeated, than this nomination confirmed.

"I am not hostile to the president nor am I an enemy of the negro. I believe the races should be segregated and the negro protected in life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, but he should not be permitted to share with white men in the government of white men.

"I believe as Lincoln did when he said: 'I am not, and never have been, in favor of bringing about political or social equality between the white and black races. I have never been in favor of making the black man a voter, or juror, or permitting him to hold office or inter-marry with whites. There are physical differences which forbid this.'

"I will fight this nomination to the last ditch, and every other nomination of a negro to public office. I will also do my best to bring about a segregation of the races among the employees of the government departments.

"I believe I will have every southern senator with me in this fight, and most of the northern senators who understand the situation."

Hoke Smith Surprised.

Senator Hoke Smith expressed surprise at the president's action and said he felt sure the white house did not know Patterson was a negro. He said he would oppose confirmation. Senator Tillman said:

"I do not think a negro should be exposed to the temptations that go with a $4,000 salary. There are a good many white men who rendered good service to the party who would be glad to have this position."

Summer Foods As Cause of Dyspepsia

Many Also Get Diarrhoea—What To Do in Either Case.

Summer ought to be the months of most perfect health, but owing to contaminated water and milk, unripe fruit, germs and insects the average of health is not good at this time of the year. There is much skin trouble from acid fruits, and much dyspepsia and diarrhoea from cold foods and iced beverages.

The skin trouble is easily stopped by discontinuing fruit for a few days, and by the use of a mild laxative to clean the bowels and tone the blood. The dyspepsia is likewise corrected by the use of a laxative that has combined with it the elements of a digestive tonic. Hence the best remedy to use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which, as its name indicates, is a pleasant laxative combined with the virtues of pepsin, which we all know is the best cure for indigestion.

Use Syrup Pepsin also for summer diarrhoea. Avoid astringents, physics and cathartics, as they are unnecessarily harsh. Thousands of good American families prefer Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, among them those of Mrs. W. A. Taylor, Beloit, Wis., who finds she can give it to her baby without causing cramps or pains, and Mrs. Wm. O. Richter, Clayville, Va., who considers it a laxative to absolutely unexcelled. They know no pleasanter cure for constipation, liver trouble, indigestion, summer diarrhoea, etc. It is valuable to the family from infancy to old age. Children like its taste. All druggists sell it at fifty cents and one dollar bottle, the latter being the family size.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it, postpaid, by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 502 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE

is a disease, the thought of which holds terrors for most people, yet all cases are not necessarily fatal. Bright's disease follows neglect of the early stages of kidney disease and failure to take a good, efficient remedy and correct kidney trouble in its incipiency.

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy

has proved most effective in the condition which makes possible the insidious advances of disease of the kidneys when taken in time. Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy has brought welcome relief and a return to health to sufferers for over 36 years, as thousands testify.

RAILWAYS AND UNIONS AGREE TO ARBITRATE

Board of Mediation Breaks the Deadlock and There Will Be No Strike

New York July 26—The threatened strike of 4 000 conductors and trainmen of forty five eastern railroads for higher wages and improved working conditions will not be called Articles of agreement to arbitrate under the Newlands act the questions at issue were signed today by the employees representatives and conference committee of railroad managers

The agreement was not reached until the managers had withdrawn the proposal that their own grievances against the men also should be arbitrated This claim the managers announced today they had relinquished to protect the public from a tie up which they said the employees intended to force if the railroads persisted in pressing their point

Today's peaceful outcome of the dispute was the result of efforts made by the board of mediation and conciliation recently created in the hurriedly passed Newlands act to meet the situation The board consisting of Judge William Lea Chambers Judge Martin A Knapp and G W Hanger brought about today's agreement after conferences with the disputants which continued more than a week

With the elimination of the eight grievances for which the railroads desire consideration the article of arbitration comprise without alteration the sixteen original demands presented by the conductors and trainmen The eight demands which the railroads will submit to the board of arbitration for consideration when it shall be constituted later at a time to be agreed upon shall take effect October 1 next instead of May 1 last the date requested by the employees

The articles were signed on behalf of the railroads by W G Lee president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and W B Garretson president of the Order of Railway Conductors and for the railroads by the chairman of the various conference committees

The members of the board retired at once to prepare their report to the president Within the board will enter into active duties the three additional members nominated by the railroads and the four will agree on a fifth and select a chairman who will complete the arbitration board that contingency if it should arise will select the two necessary members

Following hard on the settlement today that the railroads waived their claims against the men in order to protect the public from the conductors and trainmen participated in the movement for a better settlement of the issues concerning the employees and that the railroads gracefully withdrew the matter from arbitration The effect was to say

There never has been a time when we had even the slightest doubt that the law governing the settlement of disputes between railroads and their employees On the contrary we recognize the right of the railroads to invoke its provisions at the proper time and in the proper manner but we will not concede to employees a right to sweep aside the prescribed method of presenting grievances

Mr and Mrs John K Ottley have moved into their new home still called Joyeuse and occupying one of the most beautiful sites in the country Joyeuse was one of the first suburban homes built around Atlanta and it has been centuries most charming social life The little cottage which formerly made the home was nestled in a forest of trees and the news that it was to give place to a bigger one was not cordially received by the many who had enjoyed hospitality there They feared they might be closed in from the nature notes—"the lisp of the leaves the ripple of the rain

A gifted Georgian has written that a residence belongs to civilization and home to nature Joyeuse combines the spirit of both and although now one of the trees sang hosts that has sung there has carried on the spirit of the line in the full flower of the spirit of Joyeuse

Atlanta's Ocean Is Just Ten Minutes' Ride From Five Points, and With Mame Along It's Got the Seashore "Skint a Mile!"

This seaside scene is not the Atlantic ocean, but Atlanta's ocean, more generally known as Mr. Dan Carey's Piedmont lake!

And on one of these scorchin' hot days—about 98 in the shade, say—it's a mighty fine place to go. Did you ever try it? Bundle out early in the morning before you go to work, or maybe late in the afternoon when you're hot and tired! Man alive! It's as fine as the mythical spring of eternal youth.

Just wrap your bathing suit in a newspaper, tuck it under your arm and grab a car. Be sure and take Mame with you, for she's half the fun. What is a beach without a "peach?"

By the time the breeze down shady Peachtree has blown in your face for ten minutes you're at the seashore feeling fit as a fiddle, and a thousand miles from the cares and heat of Five Points, with its sweltering skyscrapers.

In a jiffy you are both rigged out for the water. Twin splashes from the boardwalk out over the lake, and the fun is on!

It's got the seashore "skint a mile!" Try it!

These things were reported to Sam. He went down to his office to compose a fitting reply.

EX-PREMIER COACHES CHILDREN OF ROYALTY

Lord Rosebery Is Teaching Sports to English Princes and Princess.

London, July 26.—Lord Rosebery has already had his invitation to stay at Balmoral with the king and queen this autumn. The young princes think the world of the ex-premier because for one thing he enters thoroughly into all their ideas of sport and knows all about it. One of Lord Rosebery's pet aversions is to see a gun in a woman's hand and neither of his daughters ever shoulders one or plies a rod.

Though not a golfer he is a great authority on the game and the boy princes and Princess Mary having taken it up with great zest of late go to him for information on knotty points. He was the special guest Princess Mary recently invited to her confirmation. Something of the splendid horsemanship of her royal highness is also due to the admirable tips she has had from him from time to time.

All his friends are aware how absent-minded Lord Rosebery is. Recently the queen was consulting him, as she often does, as to whether she should get one of the royal secretaries to send a card to a certain lady and her husband for the court ball when looking her straight in the eyes he replied: "It is a nine-hole course." He was thinking of the new golf links he had recently put down at Dalmeny. Fortunately her majesty has a keen sense of humor, so she was not offended. He has never been interested in American women and thus are never invited to Dalmeny, though he has expressed some admiration for Maxine Elliot.

ATLANTA CIVIC LEAGUE PLANS CHANGE OF NAME

The Atlanta Civic league held a meeting in Carnegie library yesterday and plans for changing the name to the Woman's Suffrage league were discussed. Mrs. Harry Smith the president alternated with Mrs. A. D. Howell in the chair and Miss Frances Whitesides and Miss Ida B. McClelland took a prominent part in the discussion.

Miss Frances Whitesides announced the campaign of education planned by the Atlanta Civic league which will celebrate the suffrage pilgrimage to Washington from all parts of the country on August 31. She has enlisted on a campaign for members for the new Woman's Suffrage league and reports splendid progress.

Trial by Jury on Its Trial in England

(Copyright, 1913, by Curtis Brown.)

London, July 19.—Trial by jury in England is in the melting pot, and no one can now tell how that institution which patriotic British orators have been in the habit of alluding to as "the palladium of our British liberty," will emerge. There are a lot of people, and among them an uncommonly large number of judges, lawyers and other experts who would like to see it suppressed altogether, but it is hardly likely that the man in the street who has a deep-rooted distrust of the expert will consent. At the same time he is deeply dissatisfied with the system which compels him to give up days and sometimes weeks of his time to listening to other people's troubles, so it is not unlikely he will agree to some compromise severely curtailing the system.

The first step in changing any old established law or custom in England is to appoint a royal commission to take testimony and report on it. That was done in the case of the jury system in December, 1911, and the commission has just published its report. It is worthy of note that this is almost a record in speed for a royal commission. Perhaps this businesslike promptness is due to the fact that this particular commission was presided over by Lord Mersey, who also had charge of the Titanic investigation. Lord Mersey before his retirement and elevation to the peerage was a great judge and was noted for the expedition with which he conducted the cases in his courts, and no man is better fitted to hold an inquest on the jury system, for he has sat as a criminal judge, where juries are the invariable rule, as a judge of the king's bench, where cases are sometimes tried by jury and sometimes without, as a chancery judge, where juries are usually dispensed with, and as president of the probate divorce and admiralty division, where sometimes he was assisted by a jury and sometimes not.

What He Thinks of Juries.

What he thinks of juries in criminal cases may be judged from a remark which he is said to have made at a gathering of lawyers. It was:

If I were placed on trial for a criminal offense and had my choice, I would choose a trial by jury if I were guilty for then I might get off but if I were innocent I should strongly prefer to entrust my life and liberty to a judge.

More vigorous but much to the same effect was the address made by a famous Scottish judge to a jury who had just brought in a verdict of "Not guilty" in a murder trial.

Gentlemen of the jury," said the judge, "If ever it should be my misfortune to commit murder and be placed on trial for my life, I pray God that I shall be tried before twelve such asses as yourselves."

As in all solemn inquests on old established institutions in this country the first steps of the royal commission on the jury system was to try and discover the origin of the system, but in this case the effort wasn't particularly successful. Like Topsy, the system doesn't seem to have been born. It just growed, and something like it seems to have been in existence in these islands before the dawn of history. Popular legend credits its invention to Alfred the Great, but the commission found that there were traces of it before the time of the Romans. Blackstone calls it "a trial that hath been used time out of mind in this nation, and seems to have been coeval with the first civil government there of."

It is clear, however, that when the Normans came they found the jury system in full swing, and they adopted it and developed it. At first however, it was rather an assemblage of witnesses—of a man's neighbors who knew of their own knowledge all the facts in the case and were called to assist the king's judge in doing justice. Especially in civil cases the jurors were men of local knowledge and high character who were sworn to speak the truth, and they were known as "sworn recognitors." They did no more than agree on a state of facts and swear to it, and the judge formed his opinion and gave his verdict on the evidence.

Gradually Lost Character.

Gradually the jurors lost their character as witnesses. This was due to the process known as "afforcement," which was applied when the jurors felt they had not sufficient information. They were then empowered to "afforce," or add to their number, persons who had the necessary knowledge, and gradually the afforced jurors became separated from the uniformed jurors, who assumed the semi-judicial character they now hold.

The reason for most of the present complaint against the jury system as an instrument of justice is that life is much more complicated than in the days when any twelve "lawful men" of the village could be relied on to know all about any of the problems which might be brought before them. If Giles moved his boundaries and encroached on Hodge's land there was little difficulty in arriving at the truth of the matter, and if the lord of the manor unduly oppressed his tenants the men of the village knew what was just. Now, however, the complaint is made that the ordinary juryman is incapable of understanding the intricate commercial and scientific problems that come before him. The clauses of a charter party, for instance, are often so involved that they puzzle skilled admiralty lawyers, and yet common juries in the city of London, made up of small shopkeepers, caretakers and such persons, are daily called on to interpret them.

In murder trials, too, common juries are compelled to decide between the conflicting statements of scientific experts. In the case of the American dentist, Crippen, for instance, who was hanged for the murder of his wife, the identification of the fragments of Mrs. Crippen's body which were found, depended wholly on whether a mark on a couple of square inches of skin was a scar from an old operation or a crease caused by the skin being folded when it was buried in the cellar of Crippen's house. One set of experts swore that the arrangement of the cells proved it to be a scar and the other swore just as positively that it was a crease. The jurymen peered at it through a microscope, looked wise and plumped for the scar and Crippen was hanged. In this case no one believes that a mistake was made, but if the jury in their wisdom had decided for the crease theory—which was just as strongly supported by experts as the theory that accepted—Crippen would have been alive today.

The Waste of Time.

Another serious cause of complaint, this time no from the lawyers, but from the public is the waste of time involved for the man who is unfortunate enough to be summoned on a jury. Some one in the sheriff's office takes the tax books and picks out at random a number of names of persons who occupy houses worth more than £10 a year. He chooses two or three times as many as will be needed to provide for all emergencies, and the unfortunates thus summoned must attend at court. When a jury is selected, if the case is likely to be a long one, the judge tells the men who are not chosen that they may go, but that they must return next day or next week, as the case may be. The men chosen may be detained for a day or a month listening to evidence which is of no interest to them and thinking of their neglected business.

British jurymen are not paid and real hardship sometimes results. One of the witnesses before the royal commission was a laborer who lived at Bournemouth, a south coast watering place. He earned only $7 a week, but he was the nominal occupier of a house worth $150 a year. He sublet half of it, however. He was summoned on a jury and had to attend at Winchester, the country seat, forty miles away, pay his own railway fare and support himself for more than a week, during which of course he earned no wages. If he hadn't done so the judge would have sent him to jail.

Somewhat similar is the complaint made by the 'lawful men' of the county of Middlesex, which takes in most of London. The high courts of justice are situated in London and much the greater part of the litigation for the whole of the country is tried in them. Middlesex must supply the juries for the high court, so that in addition to settling the troubles of their own neighbors the men of Middlesex have to judge between the citizens of Liverpool and Birmingham and other places of which they know nothing. It is hard to see how, if the jury system is to be retained at all, this can be avoided, for it would obviously be a greater hardship to compel men from Yorkshire and Lancashire, for instance, to travel to London to serve on a jury.

Special Jury Attacked.

Particularly severe criticism is leveled at what is known here as the "special" jury. As stated above, the ordinary or 'petit' jury is composed of men living in houses of the value of $150 a year or more. Litigants who want a more intelligent jury have the privilege of demanding a special jury whose members must live in houses rented at $1,000 or more. But in England the great majority of persons living in $1,000 houses are publicans, because the value of their liquor license monopoly adds a fictitious value to their premises and the result is that most special juries are juries of publicans and in many cases less intelligent than petit juries. Add to this the fact that most publicans are tories and you can imagine the plight of a liberal candidate for parliament, for instance, who sues before such a jury for damages for a campaign libel.

Then there is the coroner's jury. If you are walking along the street and a man taps you on the shoulder and tells you the coroner wants you, go along with him. The coroner doesn't want to "sit on" you. He merely wants you to sit with him on a corpse, and if you happen to be an alien he will excuse you. This is the coroner's method of summoning a jury. He send his officer into the street to pick up the first twelve men he meets, and if you happen to be one of them you are in for a week of work.

The commission does not see its way at present to abolish trial by jury altogether but it does advise that in the majority of civil cases it might well be dispensed with. It also advises the creation of one class of jurymen only and some fair system of rotation in summoning jurors—and, what will be most appreciated by the jurors, it advises that they be paid for their service.

Hard Baby to Amuse

—From Chicago Inter-Ocean.

GIRL MOTHER HELD AT POLICE STATION

She Will Be Sent to Reformatory and Her Baby to the Orphans' Asylum.

After a chase which began in Atlanta a year and a half ago, Mary Ogle, a blue-eyed girl-mother of 14 years, with a laughing baby girl in her arms, was brought to police headquarters Saturday night in company with her foster mother, Mrs. Junie Harvey, by Detective Coker. The detective made the arrests at the request of the girl's step-grandfather, J. H. Bedford, of 373 West North avenue, and H. C. Ogle, her uncle, who have been following her ever since her disappearance more than a year ago.

The little mother will be sent to a reformatory institution in Cincinnati, while the little baby girl will be placed in an orphans' asylum or foundlings' home.

The mother of Mary Ogle died when Mary was born, and Mrs. Harvey then became the little girl's foster mother.

Disappeared From Atlanta.

They lived in Atlanta until about 18 months ago and suddenly disappeared. The step-grandfather, who had always looked upon little Mary as if she was his own grandchild, immediately became alarmed, and, with her uncle, instituted a search for her. The first news they had was thirteen months ago, when they learned that in Macon she had become a mother. Before they could reach her there, however, she and her foster mother had moved on, and were next heard of in Barnesville, from where they came to Atlanta about a week ago.

Detective Coker had been working on the case about a week when he located them Saturday night at 162 South Pryor street. With them was a Miss DeLaughter, who is said to have come to Atlanta with them from Barnesville.

The little mother and her baby were turned over to the care of Matron Bohnefeld while Mrs. Harvey and Miss DeLaughter were allowed to return to the South Pryor street house.

Mary Ogle's Father Coming.

W. M. Ogle, father of Mary Ogle, who lives between Atlanta and Marietta, is expected to call for the pair Sunday morning.

At police headquarters the little mother looked up with big bewildered blue eyes at the policemen and the disturbance about her as if she did not understand. She was yet in short skirts, and her black hair hung in a long plait down her back. She never smiled except very faintly and wistfully as she glanced occasionally at the golden-haired baby girl which nestled and cooed beside her.

Meanwhile this chubby little lady was greatly amused, laughing and cooing at the policemen who paid her attention and grabbing every rough finger that strove gently to chuckle her under her rosy little chin.

One way to avoid a quarrel is to be absent at the psychological moment.

If a man has too much money it's no task at all for him to acquire more.

BLACKHEADS AND PIMPLES ON FACE

Would Itch and Burn. Caused Great Disfigurement. Also Had Dandruff on Scalp. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured Perfectly.

R. F. D. No. 2, Box 46, Matthews, Ga.—"For three years or more I was troubled with pimples and blackheads. At first my face would itch and burn and then the pimples would break out. They looked almost as if I had measles, causing great disfigurement. They would make my face very red and sore. Then they festered and came to a head and large boils would come on my chin and nose.

"I also had dandruff which caused my scalp to itch and burn. It itched and burned so that I had to scratch it until it was irritated. The dandruff scaled off and showed plainly in my hair. It also caused my hair to break off and become very thin. I used several remedies which did not cure and gave but little relief. After I received a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment I began using them according to directions. I secured two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment which cured me perfectly." (Signed) Miss Willie M. Walker, July 31, 1912.

OUCH! HELP!

Leaders Take Both From the Crackers; Brown Boys Strong

Elmer and Curly Tight With Men on the Sacks—$7,000 Beauty Fanned Eleven of the Locals.

By Bradley Alley.

Montgomery, Ala., July 26.—(Special.)—Montgomery took both ends of a double header from Atlanta today. The scores were 2 to 0 and 3 to —. Both games were seven innings by agreement. Montgomery won the only two games played here with Atlanta the other scheduled game having been rained out.

Elmer Brown's pitching was decidedly a feature in the first game, and had it not been that Congalton was up against the pitcher that he was, he would probably have gotten away with the big end of the score.

Brown struck out eleven batters in the seven innings which surpassed the southern league strike out record this year, when C. Brown struck out thirteen in a nine-inning game. The only Atlanta batters not to fall a victim to Brown's speed and curves were Bisland and Westhouse.

Fast Fielding.

Both teams fielded fast behind their hurlers in the first game, and the Crackers pulled two fast doubles. Four Montgomery players attempted to steal on Chapman and all were thrown out. Bisland, for Atlanta, stole second base in the first inning after having been walked.

Only one Atlanta player reached third base during the game that Elmer Brown worked and that was in the sixth inning, when, with two down, Bisland hit to right for two bases. Westhouse beat out a slow hit ball to Knaupp and Bisland advanced to third. Long couldn't find Brown, and retired striking out with two on bases, the only time during the game that two Crackers occupied the bags at the same time.

Montgomery scored her first run in the second inning. Walker opened with a single to left. Wares sent him to second by sacrificing, and Elwert struck out. Sloan singled sharply to center and Walker scored. Sloan was out attempting to steal second.

The last run of the game was scored in the fourth inning. With one down Elwert walked. Sloan hit by short for one, and Elwert took second. Jantzen singled to center and Elwert counted. Knaupp lifted and Jantzen was forced at second by Snedecor on a fast ground to Bisland. Alperman scored the run.

Second Game.

The second game was featured by a home run over the left field fence by Knaupp in the second inning. This was a third ball pitched over the left fence that day.

Clark succeeded Price, too, but he pitched brilliant ball. He allowed but one hit during the four innings that he worked, but that one batter and walked four. Three of the four passes he issued came in the sixth inning, and one of the three in this inning was passed purposely.

There was much 'conversation' with the umpire in the second game and Difficult put Dobbs out of the game for protesting that Dunn did not have his foot on the rubber when Jantzen was forced at home in the sixth inning, and when Bisland was called out at first on a close play he was chased.

Atlanta scored her first run in the fourth inning, when, with two down, Manush hit to deep left center for three and scored when Dunn hit to the same place for two.

Atlanta had a good chance to tie the score in the sixth but only scored one run. Long placed the inning over with a slow one to Knaupp and beat it out. Alperman out to left center for three and counted Long. With no outs and a runner on third, it looked sure that the score would be tied. Smith hit fast ground to Wares and was at first, Alperman was held on third. Manush struck out and Dunn was forced to Knaupp and was out at first.

Price Hit Hard.

Montgomery batted Price from the box in the first two innings, scoring all three of her runs. Price hit Walker, the first batter to face him, and he took second on Wares' short single to right. Elwert was caught at the plate, Wares going to third and Sloan stealing on first. Sloan started to second and Wares for the play. Dunn threw wide of second, allowing the catch throw to the plate. Smith hit Wares with the ball, Wares scoring, but Sloan was tagged before the ball was put on the plate again.

The last two runs were counted in the second inning, after which there was no scoring by Clark, Knaupp in the first inning allowed the visitors to get their only hit off Price, but Walker drew a base on balls.

THE REASON THE BILLIES ARE UP IN THE RACE

JOHNNY DOBBS.

The peppery manager of the Montgomery Billikens, snapped in action on the third base coaching lines by The Constitution's staff photographer when the Billikens were at Ponce de Leon park last. To Dobbs' irresistible supply of pepper can be attributed the good showing of the Billikens this season. The "pepper" just oozes out, permeates his team and he has his entire club fighting all the way through the nine innings, regardless of how the score may stand against him. Johnny is the greatest coacher we have ever had the pleasure of seeing in action in the Southern league. He has just the voice for a successful coach and he makes the best possible use of it. His men take their cues from Johnny and no more scrappier team has ever been seen on the local field. Dobbs is to the Billikens what McGraw is to the Giants. Individually, the Billies do not stack up as well as some of the other teams. Dobbs is the margin that makes them equal and in many respects better. You've just got to hand it to Johnny.

Six-Foot Southpaw Bought; Joins Crackers at Mobile; Six Hurlers for Locals

Manager Billy Smith, of the Crackers, has announced the purchase of southpaw Love of the Selma, Ala., team, the leading twirler of the Cotton States league.

As the Cotton States league pennant season came to a close yesterday Love will join the Crackers at Mobile, and will probably twirl one of the four games against the Gulls.

No member of the present staff will have to be disposed of to make room for him, now left himself is the Atlanta club is not up to either the salary or player limit and Love could easily be signed.

Is a Giant.

Love is a giant in stature measuring 6 feet 7 inches in his stocking feet and tipping the beam close to the 200 pound mark. He is a product of north Mississippi, and is only 20 years old.

Love's chief stock in trade is his control, which is considered remarkable for a southpaw. His speed is excellent, and he is said to be a fair hitter as pitchers go.

During the Cotton States league season on the home grounds at Selma, Love twirled fourteen games, winning ten and dropping but four. His record away from home cannot be obtained, though it is said that he won two-thirds of his games on foreign soil.

Unofficial figures claim that he won ten games and lost but on foreign diamonds, though these figures have not been substantiated. Presuming they are correct, this would give Love twenty victories and nine defeats for the season, a percentage of .690.

Twirled No-Hit Game.

On June 2, Love shut out Jackson without a hit or a run during the nine innings. He established a league record, by working four full games without being scored on, and during the thirty-six innings he pitched free transportation to only three men.

A wire to the president of the Cotton States league for Love's official figures brought no reply. As soon as the figures are obtained The Constitution will print them.

The acquisition of Love will give the Crackers three left-handers and three right-handers—a most formidable staff. If the batters can get back into their stride again, the team will start climbing once more, as the pitching staff looks good now.

Invitation Golf Tourney At East Lake Next Month

Elaborate preparations are being made by the golf committee of the Atlanta Athletic club for the invitation golf tournament that will be held on the East Lake course August 14 15 and 16.

Visiting golfers will be here from Chattanooga, Macon, Birmingham, Montgomery, Memphis, New Orleans, Nashville and other southern cities.

The golf committee is planning for the largest entry list in the history of golf in Atlanta, and well they should, for the interest in the great game is now at its highest point.

The local players are practicing hard for this tournament in order to make a good showing and to keep as many of the handsome trophies that will be awarded at home as is possible.

The invitation tournament of the local club always attracts a large crowd of golfers, but this year there promises to be more out-of-town entrants than ever before.

American Doubles Tennis Team Wins Over Defenders

Wimbledon, England, July 26.—As the result of today's victory by Maurice E. McLoughlin, of San Francisco, and Harold H. Hackett, of New York, over H. Roper Barrett and C. P. Dixon in the doubles match, the United States team leads by two matches to one in the struggle for the possession of the Dwight F. Davis international lawn tennis trophy, and requires only one more victory in the two remaining singles matches to carry off the cup.

The match went to its full extent of five sets of which the Americans took three to their opponents' two, the score reading 7-5, 6-1, 2-6, 7-5, 6-4.

The English defenders, who began to play tennis together when McLoughlin was still in knickerbockers, tried all the wiles of which they are masters, but without avail. McLoughlin had recovered his form, and lost only one of his service games.

Once Hackett played the game which his opponents liked by feeding them low volleys at the net, where the English veterans formed an absolute stone wall. They made every possible return to Hackett, recognizing in him the weak line of the American defense.

Although often tempted McLoughlin did not poach on his partner's preserves often heroically allowing him to take the overhead balls which he himself loves to smash. Toward the end of the match Hackett became more sure in his volleys and lobs, which had been falling short before.

A moment later McLoughlin smashed his racket in the fourth set and the Britons were within a point of winning the set and the match, but the Californian never faltered and pulled his own service out of the fire.

If the draw is adhered to for the singles to be played on Monday, McLoughlin will face Charles P. Dixon who was defeated by Williams in Friday's match, while the young Harvard player will be sent against John C. Parks, who took the Californian's measure Friday. Either of the Americans has, either in the present series or in the all-England championship this year, played against his opponent in the singles matches to be contested on Monday.

Wallie Smith to Be Given Try-Out With Washington; Griffith Wants Long Also

Washington, July 26.—(Special.)—Wallie Smith, the hard-hitting third sacker, of the Atlanta Southern leaguers, is to receive a trial with the Climbers next spring. He will be one of the two men recommended by Mike Kahoe, prize scout, for a tryout in the big show.

Smith, who once had a trial with the St. Louis Cardinals, has been rapidly forging to the front among Southern league swatters. He is now well above the .300 mark and still moving. He has the happy faculty of hitting in the pinches and has driven in many runs for the Crackers.

In a fielding way Smith also shines. He is considered the best of the third basemen in the circuit. Since he was last in the big show he has picked up many fine points at the time unknown to him, and Kahoe believes him worthy of a chance with the Climbers.

Tommy Long, the Gadsden galloper, allowed to sink into the minors because of a weak throwing arm, is said to have regained the strength of his whip and stands a chance to join Smith at Charlottesville next spring for another trial with the Griffmen.

Long's hitting has been the talk of the Southern league all year. For a month or two he led the circuit, but has now been passed by a couple of sturdy swatters. Long's improvement is most gratifying to Kahoe, who originally found him in the wilds of Alabama and sent him to Jimmy McAleer in 1911.

Crackers Close Trip With Four Battles With Mobile Club

Return Home Thursday. Five Games With Vols in Three Days—Then Off on Final Trip of Year.

By Dick Jemison.

The Crackers are on the last of their present road trip, which comes to a close Wednesday.

This afternoon, the Crackers open up a four-game series with Mike Finn's Gulls at Mobile, a series that will be a vital one in the ultimate standing of the teams at the finish of the pennant scrap.

The Gulls have been the hardest nuts for the Crackers to crack the entire season. The only time the locals made a good showing against the Gulls was on the last visit to Mobile when they won both games played.

An even break is all that can be expected of the Crackers in Mobile and they will have to fight their hardest to get that, but they are going to fight for every game of the series and have hopes of landing the odd game in the series.

Home Thursday.

After the game Wednesday in Gulltown, the locals return home for a stay of three days. Five games will be crowded into those days—Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

A double header is scheduled for Friday. Then there is a 3-3 tie game from the last visit for the Vols to Atlanta, which will have to be played off. Whether this will be on Thursday or Saturday has not been decided on as yet.

After this brief home stay, the locals take their final trip of the season. Chattanooga will be visited first, for three games of August 4, 5, 6.

Then comes the last visit to Nashville. The game that was claimed by both teams by reason of a misunderstanding may be played over this trip. President Kavanaugh will probably make a decision in the matter. The chances are that he will throw the game out and order it played over.

Last Road Games.

The last games on the road trip will be played in Birmingham, August 11, 12 and 13.

Then the Crackers return home for a stay that will last until the season ends, September 6. Every team in the league, with the exception of Nashville will be played on this stay.

There are twenty-two scheduled games and four postponements or ties to be played off during this windup.

Chattanooga 4, Birmingham 3, Montgomery 4, Memphis 4, New Orleans 6, Mobile 4, and Chattanooga 1 come in that order.

If the locals continue in their present position in the standing until this long home stay starts, they will be in a great position for a final dash to the flag.

VETERAN CLOTHIER YIELDS TO JOHNSTON

Boston July 26—Youth had its way at Longwood today veteran tennis players going down to defeat before the younger representatives in the semi final rounds of the eastern doubles championship and the all comers tournament for singles It was a day of upsets

Perhaps the most prominent individual in the days play was young William Johnston of San Francisco who vanquished the veteran William J Clothier of Philadelphia former national champion The match required five sets 4 6 2 4 6 6 0 6 5

Another surprise was the elimination in the doubles of Beals C Wright and William A Larned by Gustave B Touchard and W M Washburn the score being 2 6 1 6 8 6 6 4 6 3

Still another upset was the defeat in the morning of Nathaniel W Niles of Boston by G P Gardner Jr, also of this city The score was 6 8 6 2 6 2 6 3 The second semi final in the doubles tournament was won by Niles and A S Dabney of Boston against H R Scott and S L Beals at 11 9 6 2 6 4

Johnson played a sure back court game his forehand drives repeatedly finding Clothier at a loss for a defense His speed also offset Clothiens strategy.

WARREN K. WOOD WESTERN CHAMP

Former Golf Title Holder Regains Honors by Defeating Allis at Homewood, 4 Up and 3 to Play.

Chicago, July 26—Warren K. Wood, of Homewood, is the new western golf champion He defeated 4 and 3, E P Allis, III, of Milwaukee in the finals of the Western Golf association tournament, played over the links of the Homewood Country club today

Allis, one of the youngest players in the tournament has the championship of Wisconsin to his credit and took the measure of such redoubtable golfers as former Western Champion Charles Evans Jr, and former National Champion Robert A Gardner of Milwaukee in the present tournament He gained notice at the opening by making a 300-yard hole in one

In Wood however Allis met one of the steadiest tournament players in the United States playing over his home course and the Milwaukee lad was behind all the way

Allis holes went out at the twenty ninth hole He was three down He had far the better of the drive and for his second bounced his ball off the flagstaff with a splendid 200 yard clock shot Wood put his second on the green from a bad line in a clump of trees. Allis missed an easy put for the hole and lost the next hole by slicing his drive into the rough and putting his second over the green, while Wood laid his approach dead to the flag. Allis tried hard to win another hole, but Wood held him to halves, and the match ended on the thirty-third green

Charles Evans, Jr, took the gold medal for low score in the qualifying rounds, turning in 78-73-151

Wood, who was runner up last year, made his way int othe finals by defeating H E Lee of Detroit, John Simpson, of Galesburg Fraser Hale, of Skokie, and Joseph LeDuc, of Calumet.

Allis defeated J S Thompson of St. Paul J N McDonald of Chicago Charles Evans, Jr, the title holdtr, and Robert A Gardner

MONTGOMERY WILL KEEP FRANCHISE

Montgomery, Ala. July 26—Montgomery will retain the Southern league baseball franchise and the club will be under a different management next season

This was decided at a well attended and somewhat spicy mass meeting of business men and fans in the auditorium of the Business Mens league this morning After having been accused of underhand methods of dealing with several Montgomery men who had an opt on on the franchise, and after having left the hall and refusing to return to make an address to the body Richard Tillis owner of the franchise made an offer which the meeting accepted

Mr Tillis offer was that those interested buy the franchise for $16 800 less the sum for players sold amounting to $4 000 which would leave a net total of $12 800 to be paid for the franchise The offer will remain open for fi e days

Mr Tillis offers to entirely relinquish his interest n the club or to take as much stock or twice as much as any other man A committee of five was appo nted to raise the funds and arrange the details of the transfer

Eight Race Meets---No Accidents; Eleven Meets Were Postponed; Star Riders Are Coming Here

Nineteen race meets have been scheduled for the local motordrome since it was completed More than half were postponed by the weather to be exact eight meets have been run and eleven have been postponed The local ... drome management has been backing a losing proposition namely Th y will continue to buck believing that the Atlanta public wants go d motorcycle racing and will attend such meets as they staged Friday

The owners of the local saucer estimate that losses from rain postpone ments at $18 000 yet they are gamely sticking at the promoting and announce that the best is yet to come

No Accidents

The fact that not a spill of any nature has occurred is proof positive that the local management knows how to build a track and how to conduct race meets Incidentally the local riders know how to ride

When Jack Prince built his track he pronounced it safe for riders and spectators than any board track ever built including the larger tracks that are a lap to the mile the local saucer being ... the ...

Prince ... the operation his te ... They have rode in sports ... many ... of the game have been ... plays No attempt to ride ... writer off the tracks or catch ... in a pocket thus causing a spill has been attempted

The riders are a unit in praising the local track T ... it is the safest in the world Spills are the last thing that enter their head

Speaking for the crowd Jock McNeil said

McNeil Talks

There is ... of having all ... the local riders know how to ride and ride cleanly and, unless some mechanical defect crops out in one of the machines there will not be any accidents here

All the boys are riding good races the stories that ... appeared in the ... Tom ... the ... come out and see the ... spilled does us and the motorcycle racing game an injustice

One reading these reports would think that we were always trying to kill and hurt some ... Just the opposite We ... best every time we're on the track ... ride cleanly ... if ... be avoided we're the ... kills

When you start killing riders the ... authorities will swoop down on you and bing goes your track and our livelihood No s r tone of this ... ident stiff for any of us

Every one of us like Atlanta We have been treated royally and we are going to give local speed fans the best we've got every time we open up our machines Spills do not mean speed Our machines are traveling faster on this track than they have traveled on larger ones, and without a spill I consider it wonderful

New Riders Coming

The motordrome management is planning a bigger campaign for the near future The local riders have written other riders in the west ... t ... and in all parts of the country telling them of the fine sport Atlanta is putting on

Challenges are being received from the riders at Brighton Beach Chicago Detroit Denver and on the coast for match races with the local contingent over any distance for side bets

These races will be put on in the near future and ere long all the best riders in the country will be brought here Every rider now performing on the tracks of the east and west will be seen in Atlanta They have all written the local management that they want to come

Some of them will be brought here next month The seasons close in the east and west on Labor day By the middle of September there will be nearly forty riders composing the cream of the world on the local track

Tex Richards is sore over that tire blow out Friday night and has issued a defy to Jock McNeil Jock has accepted The two will lock horns in match races Friday night the best two out of three heats The distances have not been decided upon Both boys are going ... bet on their own chances They will make final arrangements in the next day or so

Team Match Race

For Tuesday nights meet the feature of the evening will be a team match race distance 30 miles The ten riders will be paired off and all ten will be on the track at one time five riding at the bottom of the track ready to relieve their partner at any time he sends the distress signal

One hundred and twenty times the men will circle the track with the boys actually in the race making 90 miles an hour and those at the bottom 60 or better It will be one wild scramble for first honors

Special match races and a series of short races to be announced later will round out the program

The Old Time Fan Delves Into Baseball History; Old Timers Given a Hand

During the ... of 1895 Lew ... istler the ... managing the Chattanooga b ... with Atlanta with ... abbr ... ed ... sally ... managed ... He h ... men and ... put a ... t ... over ... own ... had ceased ... ng to ... didn t even grunt ... gh lu ... mong ... dles ... an ... ners ... the ... ue ... ble ... at ... the ... tire ...

Fisher had ... signed with ... nta ... Knowles ... ther But ... they dubbed ... the outfield ... spill with chance ... what he could do nd the plate he became disheartened and asked Knowles where he was in anyway

Well replied Knowles Red Armstrong and Wilson look good to me and I'll be fair with you You come in at all You go out

Fisher Made Good

All ... was Fishers come back It doesn't sound like fairness to but an awful raw deal I'll choke down, but listen If I don't catch this league I'll make Armstrong and Wilson look like a pair of cripples That ended the debate the ... all right ... kept it from an observer

Whether snapped up Fisher in ... twinkling and what the Chattanooga team with Weekes ... Fish as the ... Knowles and ... his ... partners was a shame that's all

But one of the most interesting and magnificent figures with the Chattanooga was John Dobbs ... a natural ball player He essayed to cover center field and did it well albeit he lacked experience but was there with the courage the speed and the noodle

The writer asked Whistle where he found the speedy kid and he said I dont know But I think some of the gang caught him with a ... Anyway hes the goods He doesnt start soon enough for a fly ball but when he corrects that fault he couldn't be kept in this league with a log chain And Lew was right He went to the big tent and made good from the getaway

He is now the capable and aggressive manager of the Montgomery team and right in the heart of the hunt for the flag

Fisher and Dobbs were two of the most ambitious ball players it has ever been my lot to see Not even excepting Ty Cobb, Frank Chance and Fred Clarke They played with the dash and spirit of amateurs but the absolute sureness of professionals

Sureness the Margin.

The truth is the word sureness forcibly expresses the fundamental difference between the amateur and the professional The former is usually erratic and the latter sure Because the amateur has a belfry stuffed with the theory of the game driven there in many cases by professional coaches who are strong on theory

The average professional is not enamored with the theory of baseball but he knows how to do things He is indifferent at ut what makes a ball curve What interests him is to throw a curve that will force the batsman to cut three nicks in the weather instead of clouting it to the tall timbers Thats the dope that counts

Frank Wilson better known as Zeke who went from the south to the Clevelands in the long ago was one of the best pitchers of his day or any other day and a powerful hard man to lo either in a ball game or a personal encounter

One day Sockalexis the Indian outfielder for Cleveland got jewed with Wilson and proceeded to lift his scalp with a butcher knife but Zeke crossed him and bounced a baseball bat off his coco and when the melee was over the Indians battered bean looked like a nickels worth of canned tripe and the yell he emitted would make the farewell blast from Gabriels time honored trumpet sound like the despairing cry of a sick kildee

Tebeau sent a hurry call for the ambulance and chucked Sockalexis in a hospital to hybernate and think it over He did But say when he got out again he was tamed a plenty believe me

Failed to Come Back

Tebeau gave h ... a ... ance in the outfield and he made the ... to come back But nothing doing he had done business too long with the emporiums of liquid joy He had been lit up like a Chinese lantern on dress parade one time too often

His brain was in a trance and his joints creaked like a rusty oarlock on a dilapidated yawl He was all in and ready for the pickle vat but didn't know it But Tebeau did so he handed the Indian the icy late and a pink slip o the side ... h ended the spectacular career of Sockalexis ball player and formerly ... ed hot Indian Now then

Considerable commenting on the folly of hooking up with booze jar lets and looking on the licker when its red You cant tune a piano in a boiler factory and get away with it Neither can a boob make good as a ball player and a two handed booze grafter at the same time

Clinch that back of the ears if you want to get by Its on the level I should worry I should sneeze ... some lines just like there ... bout the birds and budding trees The fe ... fans and farming bees the gifted poeters—considerable wheezer What? Believe me NOT

In 1893 Frank Wilson went against Tebeaus Cleveland Spiders and let them down with one hit It was a spring practice game of course and the polling glims of the Spiders needed a lot of trimming But gents and fellow bugs that was pitching some even at that That Cleveland bunch could hit Jesse Burkett Bobby Wallace Patsy Tebeau Rowdy Jack O Connor Cupid Childs and others could

Tebeau Bought Wilson

Tebeau gobbled up Wilson right on the spot and Zekes career in the big show was brilliant from all points of view Once the Clevelands landed second and then trimmed the New York Giants in the temple cup series

Wilson had the honor of winning the crucial game and against the mighty Rusie at that He had the Giants breaking their backs ... the way swinging at his underhand delivery which couldn't be hit with a twelve inch plank

In 1902 he was a tower of strength the Atlanta team ... side from himself and a few others was a ghastly joke mainly because of mismanagement of the very sorriest sort

In a game with Chattanooga with Atlanta preliminating by one tally he fanned the three best hitters of the Chattanooga team in the ninth inning —Molesworth sometimes called Moley now with Birmingham leading off and bagged his game

Wilson was a pitcher who could pitch He is now ... resident of Montgomery ... Flynn is ... Fisher in Nashville ... George Weekes is in business in Atlanta

Good Old Timers

All ... good ball players ... last week ... is Billy ... sed to ... Atlanta ... but ... less interest ... season And the ... inside stuff of which ... is printed daily in the newspapers than ... the ... field ... life ... just a peg on which ... the ... ball is simply the ... of ... speed and skill which enables the play ... to drive at the ... the cross and ... in executing it

One bucolic ... informed us that the reason for the supremacy of Macks Athletics is that all his players thoroughly understand the game One is tempted to ... a wheeze on that

Of course they understand it But thats the rub The ambitious incompetents and boneheads understand ... But the trouble is they are ... executing ... thats the reason they are in the bushes and always will be

Macks stars not only understand but they can execute too See the point? Simplest thing you know

I should worry be a sprint runner and lose my number

Mr Tifield one of Judge Kavanaughs umpires pitched for Little Rock in 1895 Wonder if he is from Rochester too?

He was quite a pitcher then but it maltreats the truth to call him an umpire now But there are others, Yes!

Athletics Have Averaged Six Runs to the Contest

Connie Mack's White Elephants, pace-setters in the race for the American league pennant, have averaged nearly six runs to the game. In the first seventy-one contests in which they participated the Mackmen crossed the plate 404 times errors of the opposition helping them to 49 counters and battery misplays of their adversaries enabling them to acquire 10 tallies. Eleven markers were secured through the medium of steals, leaving 334 runs that the Athletics actually batted in

Mack had a splendid quintet of timely hitters in Frank Baker Jack McInnis Eddie Collins Rube Oldring and Jack Barry the best of the lot according to the records being Baker The mauling Marylander who stands a good chance of winning the Chalmers car offered to the American league player who does the most for his team has hammered home 62 tallies and if he keeps on hitting in the pinches as he has been doing will possibly set a new record for the American league in driving in runs

"Stuffy" McInnis ranks second as a timely hitter among the Mackmen He has put the finishing touches to 50 tallies Eddie Collins with 41, ranks third and Oldring and Barry are tied for the fourth position each with 38 runs batted home and Strunk is a fine sixth with 30 counters driven in to his credit

In fact all the Mackmen have been hitting in the pinches, which is the principal reason the team shot to the fore and has stayed there

Even Ensign Cottrell, a slabman who was never accused of being a heavy hitter batted valiantly while he was with the Athletics He took part only in one full game but in that contest he cleared the bases of their three inhabitants with a double

The number of runs batted in by the Athletics in their first seventy-one games are revealed below

After living sixty years in the old country an old farmer found himself more than a little at sea when he decided to cross the briny on a visit to his son in Canada In his cabin he felt a bit cramped but he obviated the lack of space by stowing his trousers and shoes into a round cupboard in the vessel on going to bed.

At 7 o clock the next morning he made startling discoveries 'Steward,' he cried last night I put my clothes in that there little press and they ain't there now

Cincinnati's Steep Hills Put Severe Strain on Auto Tires

"Cincinnati, with its steep hills, uneven, cobble-paved streets and badly laid car tracks, presents one of the most difficult problems as yet encountered in motor truck service," said S. V. Norton, manager of the truck tire department of the B. F. Goodrich company. "The demands of traffic impose a severe strain on motor truck and motor tire alike, and the test of the Cincinnati streets is considered a most exacting trial of tire efficiency. A recent census of 121 cars representing seven leading makes of trucks and including practically every heavy duty truck in service in the city, disclosed the fact that 75 of them were equipped with Goodrich wireless tires, as against 46 over all other makes.

"This is a total of 62 per cent of all the trucks in service in the city; 50 of the 87 Packard trucks in service are using Goodrich tire equipment; 90 per cent of the Pierce-Arrow and Universal trucks are running on Goodrich wireless tires—3 out of 4 Walker Electrics use them, while two-thirds of the White truck and just one-half of the Peerless and Alco cars are equipped with them. The closest competitor equips but 21 trucks and 16 of these are used on one make.

"What is more, this overwhelming percentage of equipment is constantly increasing. Truck owners are demanding the most efficient tire in the market for this sort of service and it would seem that the durability and resiliency of Goodrich wireless tires have met the demands of Cincinnati streets in a way that has not been approached by any other make of tires. The truck operators apparently appreciate this, for last month there were 36 change-overs to Goodrich wireless tires from other tires which have not given satisfactory service.

"Goodrich wireless were the first American tires of steel base construction, and their superiority has been made evident through many illustrations of this sort. In districts where heavy service and bad conditions must be met, Goodrich wireless invariably predominate in truck-tire equipment."

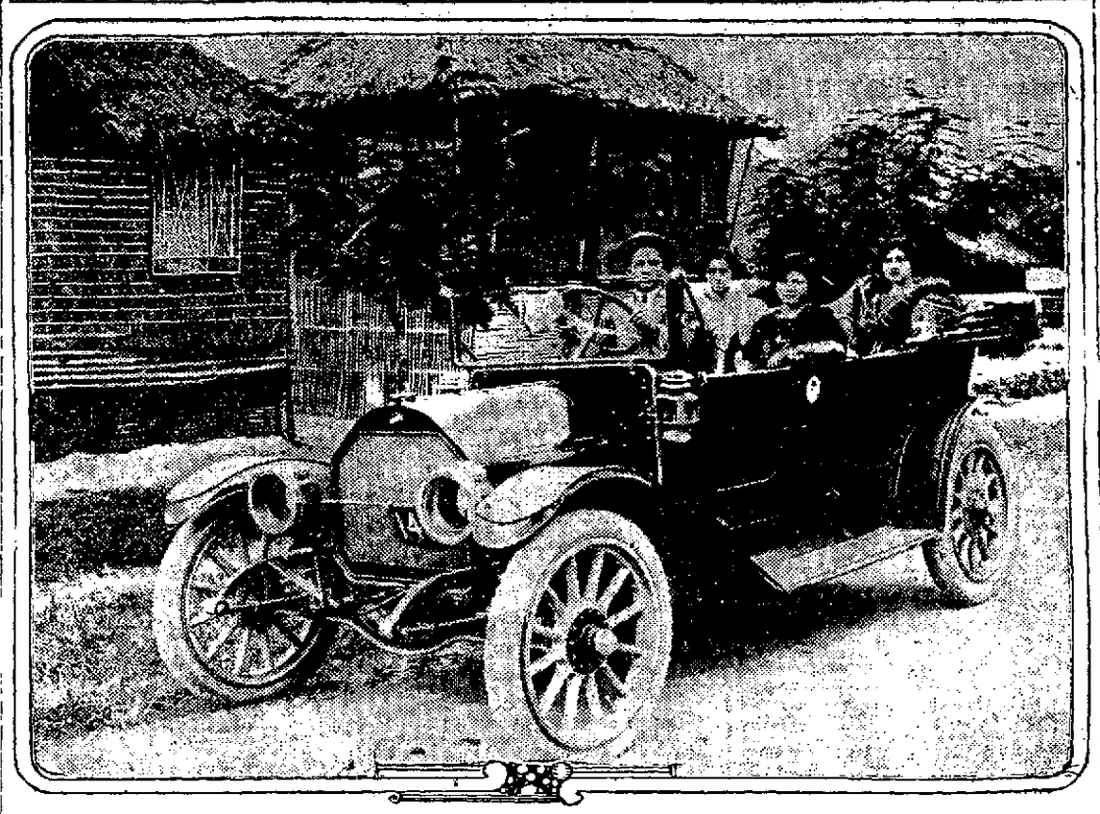
Courting a la Overland in the Philippines



Courting a la Overland in the Philippines. An Overland model 69-T on one of the excellent highways near Manila.

The people of the Philippines have seen some remarkable innovations introduced since the United States wrested the control of the islands from Spain in 1898 and undertook the task of preparing the inhabitants for self-government. Habits and customs that dated back for centuries have been changed or abolished. The entire mode of living has undergone a transformation. Children who formerly received their education from the jungles now get their learning in modern American schools from American teachers. And the introduction of the automobile has even changed the forms of courtship.

In the old days when a young Filipino heard the call of Cupid and desired to show the object of his affections those little attentions that appeal to women the world around, be they white, black, brown, red or yellow, he made use of the means at hand. When he went riding with his lady love it was in a rude two-wheeled cart, drawn by a stolid bullock. Today the ardent swain sits at the wheel of a big Overland motor car, his sweetheart enthroned on the shiny black leather cushion at his left. A photograph recently received by the Willys-Overland company, of Toledo, from Bathrach Garage and Taxicab company, Manila dealers in Overlands, shows a young Filipino, his sweetheart and her two sisters taking the air on a Luzon highway.

The picture gives an interesting demonstration of the startling contrasts later-day developments have brought about. In the foreground is the automobile, the last work in modern transportation facilities and typical of the progress of civilization. In the background is shown the flimsy bamboo huts with roofs thatched with grass, exactly the same in material and architecture as those built hundreds of years ago.

The picture is not as uncommon a one to residents of the Philippines as to Americans who have never visited the islands, however. In the few years the Toledo company has been shipping its product across the Pacific the Overland has jumped into favor to such an extent that even the half-wild headhunters of the far interior provinces, who are still fighting the United States troops quartered there, are by no means strangers to the motor car. The Manila dealers write that Overlands are now as numerous as bullock carts on the island road and that they are rapidly becoming the popular pleasure vehicle of the whole country.

LUDWIG VELIE MANAGER IN ATLANTA DISTRICT

F. B. Ludwig, until recently sales manager and advertising manager of the Edwards-Knight Motor company, of New York city, has been made southern district manager of the Velie Motor Vehicle company, with headquarters in Atlanta. Mr. Ludwig will also have charge of the local branch office in Atlanta.

Mr. Ludwig is not a stranger to Atlanta and the south, having traveled the southern states with headquarters in this city for more than twelve years. However, this is the first time that he has been in Atlanta, where he will make his future home, in more than nine years, and the remarkable growth of the city during that time is a great surprise to him.

"When I was in Atlanta a little more than nine years ago," said Mr. Ludwig, "there were no tall sky-scrapers such as you see today, and an auto row, say, that wasn't even thought about. Where you have auto row today then some of the city's most beautiful homes graced both sides of Peachtree street."

Mr. Ludwig is very enthusiastic over Atlanta and the south and is looking forward for a large business for the new 1914 Velie cars. He expects shipment for the 1914 line to arrive some time about the first or middle of September.

FAST CARS ENTERED IN GALVESTON BEACH RACES

Only Beach Event Scheduled for This Year Will Draw Large Crowd of Enthusiasts.

With twenty-one speedy cars entered in the beach races to be run at Galveston, Texas, July 28, 29 and 30, indications are that the meet will be the greatest beach event ever run in America. This meet is the only beach event scheduled for the 1913 season. Practice has already begun and daily hundreds of motor fans line the course to watch the tuning up sprints. The drivers already located on the course are for the most part amateurs of Texas and neighboring states who are to be pitted against the veteran pilots from the north. Ralph Mulford, who is to drive Mason entries, left for Galveston early last week, together with Joe Horan, who is to drive Otto Applegate's Lozier as well as a Mercer entry.

Ferguson On the Way.

Armour Ferguson, with his new love, the Peugeot, left New York yesterday on the steamship Lampasas. Louis Disbrow and his racing outfit of six cars will arrive on the course early this week, while the Stutz and Studebaker entries are already on the course.

Keen rivalry exists between Mulford, Horan and Ferguson, as each driver is determined to lower the present beach record now held by Disbrow. Disbrow will drive his Simplex "Zip," the car with which he has broken many world's records, and the "Jay-Eye-See" racer. Bill Endicott and Joe Nikrent, who with Disbrow make up the Sloane racing tour, will drive the other cars of the Sloane family.

Fifteen-mile Course.

The work of getting the beach into shape has been started. The course will be laid 15 miles westward from the Fort Crockett military reservation. Although a stretch of 30 miles of firm and hard-packed sand is available, Captain J. W. Munn, director of the meet, desires to keep the cars in view of the spectators most of the time, and for this reason only 15 miles of the course is to be used. Every contrivance and patent known to modern racing promoters will be seen in operation in Galveston. Electrical timing devices, course telephones, electric score boards and other modern necessities will be installed. The beach appears to be in the best of form and the dates for the meet have been set with a view of obtaining the most desirable tidal conditions.

L. E. Bissell Takes Charge of Stearns Co.'s Wholesale Business

Will Have Entire Charge in the Territory Controlled by Atlanta Branches.

The many friends of John F. Toole, former Atlanta branch manager of the F. B. Stearns company, manufacturers of Stearns-Knight motor cars, are congratulating their fellow townsman on his return to Atlanta in his old capacity as branch manager.

Mr. Toole takes the position vacated by Mr. Bissell, who for the past year has been branch manager, Bissell now having charge of all the Stearns company's business in the territory controlled by the Atlanta branch. Mr. Bissell, in his new position, will have a larger field for his activities, and by devoting his time to building up the wholesale busines of his company, will undoubtedly create a much larger demand for Stearns cars throughout the south.

Mr. Toole, who has bee na resident of this city for many years, had charge of the F. B. Stearns company for a long while, and has an exceptionally wide acquaintance not only among the automobile trade, but among the purchasers of high-grade motor cars. Toole and Bissell will work in conjunction. Tole handling all the business of the Atlanta branch and Bissell devoting himself to the outside work.

News Wise and Otherwise Of Boys Who Put 'Em Over

The following was received here during the past week by C. L. Du Pay, manager of the Standard Auto company: Charles Mertz, who will always be remembered by his sensational finish in the blazing Stutz car at the recent Indianapolis 500-mile speedway race, has purchased a Paige car.

Mr. Mertz spent several days at the Paige-Detroit Motor Car company's plant carefully inspecting the Paige line and in speaking of his selection of the Paige car said:

"I have been approached during the past month by a dozen well-known automobile dealers, propositions have been made to me that would sound like fairy tales were I to tell you, but I refused all of these offers because I was not buying price, but automobile.

"In placing my order for a Paige '36' I have every confidence in believing that I have made the best possible purchase in the line of a popular priced car."

The value of the motor truck for the purposes of business promotion is emphasized every now and then by some firm which finds it worth while to advertise to the trade, the improvement in service it is able to afford its customers through the replacement of its horse-drawn equipment by motor trucks.

Not long ago in Cincinnati the M. B. Farrin Lumber company installed a Peerless truck for making deliveries from its lumber yard outside the city to the various railroad stations in town.

A good deal of the Farrin business is with people outside of the city and an important part of its delivery problem is to get stock to the railroad stations promptly in response to a letter or telegram containing a rush order.

After the truck had been installed the company found it was nearly always possible to get the lumber to the stations on the day the order was received. This quickened service to out-of-town customers nearly twenty-four hours on the order.

It gave the company a distinct advantage over its competitors. A series of folders for mailing to the trade was prepared on this subject. And the results of the advertising campaign increased the business quite considerably.

The progressive tire dealer of today is much different from the average dealer of several years ago. Their business methods are changed entirely and they are all rapidly realizing the importance of advertising.

The bigger tire companies are largely responsible for raising the level of the dealers' business. Their advertising departments are constantly offering suggestions whereby the dealer can increase his sales and build a permanent clientele.

The Firestone Tire and Rubber company has gone a step further by offering to their dealers absolutely free of charge imprinted metal or muslin road signs. This is saving the dealer 100 per cent on this form of publicity and it has proven a great thing for the dealers who sell Firestone tires.

This enables the dealer to mark all the highways leading into his town and the motorist in need of a tire or other sundry is thus directed right to the dealer's door.

F. L. Elleby, secretary of the Atlanta Automobile and Accessory association and office manager of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company, has been forced to give up his position with the latter company on the account of a severe attack of sciatic rheumatism, which has confined him to his bed for more than a month, and according to advice received from his doctors will not be able to attend his duties for some time to come.

Mr. Elleby has been secretary of the Automobile and Accessory association ever since its organization and has always been a very enthusiastic and tireless worker. To his many friends the news of his distressing illness will be received with much regret and they hope that he will be on his way soon to a speedy recovery.

Frank J. Long, well known to the automobile fraternity here in Atlanta and who has been one of the Atlanta Automobile and Accessory association's most enthusiastic members, left the hospital Friday and will spend a few weeks in his old home town of Statesville, N. C. Mr. Long's many friends will be glad to learn of his being able to leave the local sanitarium and hope to see him back in the auto game again soon.

To the Hartford Suspension company in its suit against the Western Manufacturing company has been awarded damages amounting to $30,572.76, according to report of the master, Henry D. Oliphant, who was appointed bey the district court of the United States and the district of New Jersey, following the favorable decision given the Hartford company in its suit against the Westen company for infringement of the Truffault-Hartford shock absorber patents.

The final decision in favor of the Hartford company resulted in a permanent injunction restraining the Westen company from doing business of any kind, after which the court appointed the master to decide the amount of damages that should be awarded.

MOTOR CAR BIG AID TO BACK-TO-FARM MOVE

"I believe that the motor car, perhaps, more than any other one thing, is responsible for the 'back to the farm' movement," said W. H. Mahoney, district branch manager, Carter-car company, of Atlanta, Ga., recently, in a talk to some of his salesmen from small country towns." And this statement is all the more interesting, because of the general discussion of the opportunities for the city man who leaves his place in the big industries and takes to tilling the soil.

"People today are going back to the farm by the hundreds of thousands, not mostly because of the splendid opportunities that have been developed during the past few years, but largely because of the great change for the better in farm life conditions. Instead of the solitude and wilderness, we have been taught to think of so long, the country now seems rather inviting than otherwise, and especially if the person can own a motor car, it is the ideal life.

"And so I say that the motor car has done more than anything else to better living conditions on the farm, and has thus been largely responsible for the great movement back to the soil. And people are not going back because they want to farm, but because they think it will be more pleasant living, more healthful for their families. The motor car is of more real benefit to the countryman than to his city brother. The motor car has entirely revolutionized the life of the countryman. It has made his life pleasant to the utmost, whereas before it was monotonous and dreary."

1914 CADILLAC IS AROUSING INTEREST

HAS TWO-SPEED DIRECT DRIVE AXLE.

New Mechanical Element Has Started Discussion and Comment — Distinct Step Forward Amazes Autoists.

Motorists, mindful of the Cadillac achievements in the development of the automobile, and therefore accustomed to look to that car each year for new and progresive features, are reading with avidity the 1914 announcement just issued, in which at last is revealed the nature of the latest models. In view of past Cadillac accomplisments, which included the introduction of the first practical electric cranking device, and therefore the regulation forever of the awkward method of pumping the engine into activity by means of hand labor, the keenest curiosity was aroused as to what the new mechanical element would be.

That curiosity has been appeased by the announcement that the 1914 Cadillac will be endowed with a two-speed direct drive axle. While curiosity has been somewhat satisfied, the new mechanical element has started a buzzing of discussion and comment, because the device will have a revolutionary effect on the results attained in luxury, flexibility and economy Executives of the Cadillac are already assured by letters, telegrams and a rush of visitors that no other forward step ever taken has created such a profound impression or aroused more widespread interest.

Most Appreciated by Mechanics.

The methods by which the 1914 Cadillac two-speed direct drive axle secures increased luxury, efficiency and economy are most appreciated by the man who is thoroughly versed in automobile mechanics. Some idea, however, may be given of this revolutionary feature in more or less non-technical language.

It is not merely as an axle that this mechanism is a great advance in motor car construction. Its peculiar function is of another nature. Heretofore the power of the engine has been transmitted to the rear axle by a single bevel pinion and a single bevel driving gear. Therefore there could be at all times, and under all the various conditions of travel which might arise, only one ratio between the revolutions of the engine and the revolutions of the rear axle as it absorbed the power, except for the transmission gears by the hand lever. Now, however, by means of the new axle, the Cadillac will have two direct drive gear ratios in transmitting the power to the rear wheels.

Usually the single direct drive gear ratio ranges from 3.5 to 1 down to 4 to 1, according to the car and according to the success of the mechanical designer in securing that ratio best adapted to his paarticular car. That single ratio had to do the best it could under all circumstances. Now, with two ratios, there is just double the means for promoting the economical and efficient application of the power developed by the engine to the driving of the car.

Electric Switch Changes.

On the 1914 Cadillac the low direct drive gear ratio is 3.66 to 1; the high direct drive gear ratio is 2.5 to 1. The low is especially adapted for city driving where traffic problems are met, where speed must be low and stops and starts frequent. A simple convenient electric switch changes the gear ratio from the low direct to the high direct and the car is ready for conditions which permit a speed rate of 16 miles per hour or more.

With the high direct gear ratio in operation at any given speed of the engine the speed of the car is increased about 42 per cent over what it would be with the low direct gear ratio. This point is illustrated thus: At an engine speed of 700 revolutions per minute with the low direct gear, the car speed is 21 miles per hour; employing the high direct gear will increase the speed to thirty miles per hour without any increase in engine speed.

One of the prime benefits claimed is lower fuel consumption because of the fact just stated and because the fuel is used to greater advantage. Other advantages include less friction in high gear by reason of the parts moving more slowly, hence less wear and almost the entire elimination of vibration. There is also greatly increased comfort due to a luxurious smoothness of operation; yet these desirable results are obtained without complicating the engine.

There are several other featrues of the 1914 Cadillac that are attracting much attention, an improved and simplified Cadillac Delco electrical automatic cranking, lighting and ignition system; a more efficient carburetor; stunning body designs and many refinements of details.

Sheriff Stops Fight.

Put-in-Bay, Ohio, July 26.—The scheduled eight-round bout between Kid Julian, of Syracuse, N. Y., and Cal Delaney, of Cleveland, featherweights, was stopped two minutes before the close of the last round this afternoon by Sheriff Wolfe, of Ottawa county. Delaney had a shade the better of the fight.

FIRESTONE CO. ENLARGES ITS GREAT TIRE PLANT

Fifty tons of finished tires, representing the daily output of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company, have been found insufficient to supply the demand for this product so the directors prepared to increase the manufacturing facilities by the erection of new additions.

Work is now progressing on the new structures with every assurance that they will be ready by the fall, at which time the daily output will be doubled. The Firestone company at present has the largest exclusive tire plant in the world and with the added buildings should be enabled to keep ahead of its rapidly growing business.

The Firestone company only recently took possession of a new addition, but scarcely had the machinery been installed and the wheels put in operation than it was certain that still more manufacturing space was needed.

The history of the Firestone company dates back about fifteen years, at which time H. S. Firestone, president of the concern, selected Akron as the location for his then small business. He opened a plant at Miller and Sweitzer streets. The Firestone side-wire carriage tire was the chief product of the new but aggressive company. The business under the guidance of Mr. Firestone grew rapidly until more room was needed to handle the product.

The factory was enlarged. "Now," said Mr. Firestone, "this building will take care of us for a long time."

But space in the new, big structure was soon at a premium, crowded to capacity with new departments caused by growing needs. It was found compulsory to erect the gigantic factory on South Main street. Already several additions have been annexed to this plant and more will follow as the business warrants. The first plant, large and complete, is now used exclusively for the manufacture of Firestone rims.

The Firestone plant covers 15 acres and gives employment to more than 3,000 persons. It was designed and constructed with the idea of providing light and sanitation as well as safety against fire. In fact it embodies every comfort and convenience that tends to a happy environment for the employees.

The new addition now under way will be completed about the time President Firestone returns from Europe. He left recently for an automobile tour on the continent with his family. He plans to motor through France, Switzerland, Italy and possibly Germany.

ECONOMIC FACTOR IN PRESENT DAY BUSINESS

A. M. Dodd, Special Representative of the United States Tire Co., Discusses Motor Trucks.

That the motor truck has conclusively proven itself an indispensible and economic factor in modern business, is evidence by the great numbers of them seen daily on our streets and almost daily additions.

The industry, as far as possibilities are concerned, is as yet in its infancy, yet the growth has been tremendous. Big business was the first to realize the economic value of the truck, but as each line of business woke up to the realization of the fact that the truck was not only a time, but a money saver, the truck concerns were ready with vehicles to meet the demand. There is no line of business at the present time whose demand for a motor driven delivery vehicle cannot be filled. From the heaviest, duty truck designed to haul steel beams, coal, ice, etc., down to the light delivery wagon of 500 pounds capacity; for florists, laundries, etc.

Must Show Business Man.

No business man, of course is going to buy a truck unless it can be demonstrated to him that it will save him money, and be an improvement over his present system of delivery. Yet so carefully has the matter of motor truck delivery been studied by the manufacturers, that the representatives of the truck manufacturers are in position to thoroughly analize the delivery system of any business and can prove by figures and a preponderance of evidence the greater efficiency and economy of motor truck delivery over horse or mule delivery.

A motor truck to deliver the utmost in service is called upon to run hour after hour, day in and day out with a capacity load with few stops for repairs, and with operating cost and upkeep expense kept at the lowest point.

Simultaneous with the rapid growth of the truck industry has been the demand for a solid rubber tire, built to give the greatest mileage and with features which make for ease of replacement. In the early days of the industry the truck owner did not object to sending his wheels to the tire company's service station for the application of new tires. He was not in a position to apply them himself as they were of a complicated nature and special machinery was required in order to properly apply the tires.

Eliminating Time Wasters.

Realizing the necessity of eliminating this time-waster, the United States Tire company looked over the tire situation, and set its engineers to work to perfect a tire built along the lines of greatest simplicity, both as to construction and ease of application.

The result is the United States Solid Demountable Tire. This tire is what is known as steel base construction. To an endless circular steel band of anywhere from 2 1-2 to 7 inches in width, and of varying diameters from 28 inches to 42 inches is vulcanized a hard rubber base which when cured, becomes almost as tough as the steel itself. To this is vulcanized the tread rubber, making a solid rubber tire inseparably united into one unit. Years of experience has taught us the proper composition to give the greatest resiliency under varying conditions, with the result that we can supply a tire built to carry any weight, and yet have sufficient spring to minimize jar and vibration on the mechanism of the truck.

Bear in mind that solid rubber tires are not steel. Proportionate to the load carried they have remarkable resiliency. Yet one overload, or a hard blow will sometimes cause an over deflation; stretching the rubber beyond its greatest stretching point, causing separation and almost inevitable destruction of the tire. An overload is destructive to both truck and tires. Load your truck up to its rated capacity only and it will last longer and require fewer repairs and the tires will surprise you with the mileage delivered. The motor truck is an economical method of delivery, its basis.

Cadillac leadership in scientific motor car development is once more strikingly demonstrated

A new element of efficiency

A new quality of luxury

A new source of economy

Each year you have looked to the Cadillac for the real and substantial progress in motor car development.

You have looked to the Cadillac for the great essentials in the practical motor car.

And you have not looked in vain.

Now conceive, if you can, a Cadillac with its essential functions sharpened, accentuated and refined.

Conceive such a process of refinement culminating in an entirely new riding quality of unexampled ease.

That is precisely what has come to pass in this new car.

The principal contributing factor—the two-speed direct drive axle—is described in detail elsewhere.

The Cadillac Delco electrical system of automatic cranking, lighting and ignition, the first practical system ever made and first introduced by us, has, after experience with it on 27,000 Cadillacs, been still further developed, improved and simplified and the slight attention required from the user materially reduced.

The carburetor has been improved, its efficiency and its well-known economy increased. It is hot water jacketed and electrically heated to facilitate starting in cold weather.

The rear springs are six inches longer.

These and many other refinements of essential details make for a greater and a better Cadillac and serve to more firmly establish its position as America's leading motor car.

The Cadillac Company has never disappointed you in the smallest particular or in a single promise.

We promise you again, in this new car, a positive revelation in motor car luxury.

Cadillac two-speed direct drive axle

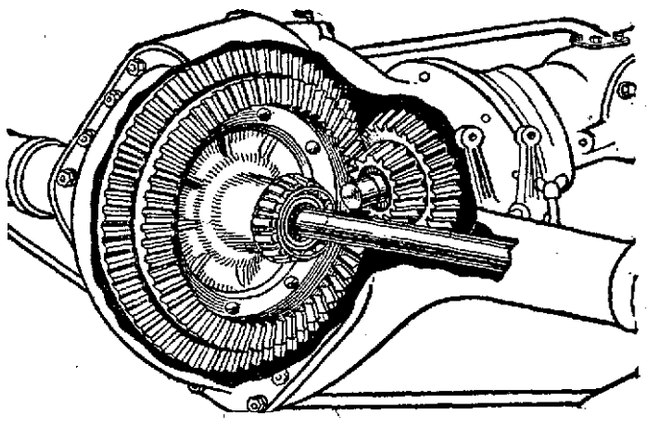
In this new axle the Cadillac Company once more gives evidence of its leadership in motor car development and motor car progress.

The advantages of this axle do not lie in its being particularly an improvement so far as its functions as an axle are concerned, but rather in the manifold advantages attained in other directions through the medium of the axle.

In place of the single bevel pinion and single bevel driving gear common to ordinary construction, there are two bevel pinions and two bevel driving gears. This affords two different gear ratios, each driving direct from the engine to the axle without intermediate gearing.

The usual single direct gear ratios range from about 3.5 to 1 down to 4 to 1 according to the car. Any single gear ratio is necessarily what it is because a single gear ratio must be, or should be, the particular one which is best adapted for all ground general use.

No one single gear ratio can possibly be just right for all speeds and for all conditions. But by using two direct gear ratios we have exactly doubled the means for promoting the economical and efficient application of power developed by the engine to the driving of the car.



In the new Cadillac axle we have, as before stated, two direct-drive gear ratios. The low direct drive gear, which is 3.66 to 1, is especially adapted for city driving, where starting, stopping and slowing down are frequent and where cautious operation is necessary.

The high direct drive gear ratio, which is 2.5 to 1, is of special advantage where speeds of about 16 miles or more per hour are permissible and desirable.

The change from one gear ratio to the other is made by means of a simple, convenient electric switch.

The advantages of the high direct drive gear ratio lie primarily in the fact that with it, any given speed of the engine produces an increase of about 42 per cent in the speed of the car. For example: at an engine spe d of 700 revolutions per minute, with the low direct gear engaged, the car will travel approximately 21 miles per hour; while on the high direct gear it will travel approximately 30 miles per hour with no increase in engine speed.

This great increase in car speed in its relation to engine speed accomplishes a number of desirable things. Among these is a decrease in gasoline consumption for a given mileage. This is due to the fact that with the engine turning over slowly—comparatively speaking—a given quantity of gas is utilized to greater advantage and generates more actual power than with the engine turning over more rapidly. Friction also is materially reduced by reason of the parts operating more slowly and this, too, is a factor in reducing gasoline consumption when driving on the high gear.

Another great advantage is that with this direct drive high gear ratio, there is obtained an extraordinarily luxurious smoothness in running, together with a marked quietness and a comparative freedom from the vibration which to a greater or less extent, is ever present when traveling at high speed with a low gear ratio.

In attaining these much desired qualities, instead of adding complications to the power plant which make for greater fuel consumption and for greater upkeep expense, they have been attained by methods which are strikingly the reverse, viz., by methods which lessen the fuel consumption, methods which decrease friction with its resulting wear and methods which make for longer life, together with an appreciable decrease in the cost of operation and maintenance.

HANDLEY HEADS NEW AUTO COMPANY

INDIANAPOLIS HOME OF $1,250,000 CORPORATION.

Object in Forming It Is to Centralize All of Mr. Handley's Auto Interests in One Concern So as to Obtain Better Results.

Indianpolis, July 26.—Another important step toward the more definite and specific departmentization of "Big Business," and one which marks another milestone in the rapid progress of Indianapolis as an automobile center, is announced today. It is in the form of a $1,250,000 company headed by J. I. Handley, into which all of this man's individual holdings have been consolidated.

The newk corporation is know nas the J. I. Handley company, and will own all of the Handley interests in the American Motors company, the Marion Motor Car company, the American Motors Realty company, the A. & M. Sales and Service company, all of Indianapolis; the American-Marion Sales company of New York, and the American Motors California company, of San Francisco.

New Company's Big Line.

The new company becomes the sole selling agent of the American Motors company, and the Marion Motor Car company, marketing all American Understung and Marion models.

In an interview today President J. I. Handley states:

"This move is to accomplish two definite purposes: First, to unify all of my present interests in the above companies. Secondly, it will departmentize more specifically the work of the various companies. Through definite departmentization we hope to achieve the maximum efficiency in all departments.

"We have not relied solely upon our own judgment in this matter, but the general plans have been carefully analyzed and passed upon by some of the country's most noted efficiency experts in industrial organization. As a whole the plan has been pronounced to be a step in advance, and a complete realization of departmentization deals which have been frequently conceived in other parts of the automobile industry, but unfortunately been unfinished.

Get Better Results.

"With the sales, advertising and service work entirely removed from the manufacturing companies and thrown into another individual company, whose function will be the successful distribution of the product of both the American Motors and Marion Motor Car companies, we will be able to pursue a more concrete manufauturing program. In other words, the American Motors company will have nothing to do but to build the famous American Understung. Similarly the Marion Motor Car company will concentrate entirely upon the production of the Marion 'Sixes' and Marion 'Fours.' Thus the new company will be able to specialize and concentrate all its efforts in successfully distributing and promoting [illegible] products."

Mr. Biggs is very well and popularly known to the automobile trade of Atlanta, and his going away to a new and larger field, while his friends wish him every success which is due him, nevertheless auto row will lose one of its best-known and most enthusiastic workers.

Mr. Biggs also states that the new 1914 Velie models are hummers, and that he is going to Tennessee with the full intention of making the name Velie automobile the biggest noise in that state. Mr. Biggs will assume his new position August 1.

NEW OFFICE MANAGER FOR THE FIRESTONE CO.

Wylie West Secures Leo R. Jackson From Head Office in Akron.

Wylie West, Atlanta manager of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company, has just returned from a trip to the factory office at Akron, Ohio. He brought back with him Mr. Leo R. Jackson, who will be his office manager.

Mr. Jackson sprang into the limelight several years ago because of his prowess in athletics at Buchtel college. Jackson played fullback on the football team and the way he used to "hit the line" is known by every lover of football in the middle states. The fair state of Ohio never graduated a better or a more popular player than Jackson.

This "hitting the line hard" became a habit with Jackson, and he used the same tactics after he went to work for the Firestone company at Akron.

Mr. West has had his eye on Jackson for some time, but he could not convince his home office to let him go until now. As Mr. West said today: "Our Atlanta branch is one of Firestone's leading territories, and we want live wires only on our payroll here. That is why I went after Jackson good and hard, and I'm glad he is here."

OVERLANDS ENTERED IN ENDURANCE CONTESTS

Good Records Reported From Every Entry in Various Races Over Country.

Though they were not manufactured for racing cars, and were only hastily prepared for contest work by their individual owners, four Model 69 Overlands in widely separated sections of the country have recently shown considerable class in speed and endurance competitions. Two of the cars started in races in California, one in the first automobile race ever held in New Mexico and the fourth in an endurance run in Wisconsin.

The Cobb-Evans Auto company, of Fresno, Cal., has added two notable achievements to its string of racing honors since the national holiday. On July Fourth one of their stripped Overlands, with Thomas McKelvy at the wheel, took fourteenth place in the big Pacific coast road from Los Angeles to Sacramento. But nineteen of the forty-three starters in the race finished, the gruelling pace set over 446 miles of good, bad and indifferent mountain and valley roads, through rivers and up and down hills, having eliminted the twenty-four other contestants. The showing of the little Overland in this contest is considered especially remarkable, since the high-priced foreign and American cars, one of which had a 120-horsepower motor, were among the entrants.

Another stock Overland, fitted with a racing body, took first prize and the prize in New Mexico's first motor car contest, an endurance run from Albuquerque to Santa Fe and return. Still another Overland, owned and driven by Dr. H. S. Roby, gave material assistance in the winning of the Wisconsin Motorist trophy, the prize in a Milwaukee interclub endurance run, for the Milwaukee Automobile club. This organization met the Milwaukee Athletic club on June 28, each entering eleven cars for the run of fifteen miles to Lake Geneva and return. Three cars in each team were penalized, the Athletic club's entries having 171 black marks against them, to their competitors' 81. The Overland was one of the cars to finish with a perfect score, standing the difficult run as well as did the higher-priced and higher-powered cars of which it was a running mate.

C. F. REDDEN BECOMES MAXWELL MANAGER

After Long Consideration Accepts Position With $37,000,000 Concern.

Announcement comes from Detroit that C. F. Redden has finally accepted the sales management of the Maxwell Motor company, the big $37,000,000 concern of which Walter E. Flanders is president and general manager.

That a man would hesitate to accept what is one of the two or three biggest positions in the sales end of the automobile industry seems almost incredible, especially when, as in Redden's case, his long experience and splendid record indicated that he possessed all the qualifications for the job and his selection for it by Mr. Flanders indicated no less clearly the "big chief's" confidence in his ability to swing it.

Nevertheless it has been known in trade circles that Redden has been hesitating for some time about accepting the title, though he did assume the load some two weeks ago.

In speaking of the matter Redden says: "I hesitated for two reasons mainly. First, I was not so carried away by the flattering offer as to underestimate for a moment the tremendous responsibilities that go with such a title. To have marketed thirty millions dollars' worth of automobiles in a year will be some record to look back at a year from now—if I make good. But—and here's the rub: just suppose a fellow fell down. No one would then consider the task or admit any extenuating circumstances. 'Failure' would be the verdict, and he would be a fool who, knowing the task, would attempt it without the most careful consideration.

"An angle that might not occur to the average person, but that figured prominently in my deliberations was, whether or not my appointment would be taken kindly or the reverse by the district managers and other heads of departments. For I assure you no one man could put this trick over. It calls for co-operation on the part of everyone—co-operation without a mental reservation."

"You see, my appointment is in the way of a promotion from the position of district manager of the New York territory. Rather than being an advantage to me, I figured that that might work to my disadvantage.

"And it would have, had there been the slightest jealousy on the part of even one other district manager. On the contrary, each acted, when I met them, as if he thought something had been 'wished' on me and as if sympathy, rather than congratulations were due the victim.

"But that's the kind of organization we have. It is wonderful the way those fellows enthused over my elevation—or proposed elevation for I still had it under advisement—and came forward with proffers of enthusiastic support at every point."

REFEREE EYTON CZAR OF THE RING

Has Been Taking Matters in Own Hands Regardless of Rules—Ledoux Robbed in Williams Bout

BY JAMES J CORBETT,
Former Heavyweight Champion of the World
Written Exclusively for The Constitution

New York July 26 (Special)—If the first [illegible] counts [illegible] the recent [illegible] weight contest between [illegible] Ledoux and Kid Williams are [illegible] little foreigner was [illegible] Press [illegible] Williams had the better [illegible] rounds and from [illegible] the fatal sixteenth [illegible] held the upper hand. In the sixteenth round Williams [illegible] to Ledoux body [illegible] held his hand to his [illegible] he had been hit [illegible] followed up his advantage with two more to the same place [illegible] the floor [illegible] with [illegible] the rules [illegible] Williams the winner.

Ledoux protesting was [illegible] from the ring and later [illegible] was [illegible] have been badly injured by the [illegible] foul blows. Eyton to justify his decision said that Ledoux [illegible]

Investigation Due

Seems to me this calls for investigation by Tom McCarey in whose arena [illegible] it was fought [illegible] badly hurt by a foul blow that he was forced to take to his bed [illegible] shouldn't be accused of [illegible] is not the first time complaint has been made that Eyton [illegible] things to suit himself and [illegible] regard for the rules supposed to govern boxing contests.

Several times he has [illegible] when there appeared [illegible] excuse for his actions. Tom O'Rourke has always [illegible] stepped his [illegible] in the McCarty Pelzer fight that Pelzer was not hurt and was in shape [illegible] the battle. O'Rourke's [illegible] has been borne out by [illegible] other eye witnesses [illegible]

It is a shame that a visitor to [illegible] country should be given such shabby treatment as [illegible] Eyton's hands. We have [illegible] instances where American fighters have been given the worst of it in England, but this is the first [illegible] within my knowledge that a foreigner has not been accorded fair treatment [illegible] this side.

If McCarey [illegible] not take steps to prevent the possible [illegible] such an [illegible] is a different [illegible] I think he [illegible] It would seem to me [illegible] for a purse for the two to meet again—and take good care that [illegible] are protected by the referee.

It was bad enough to rob [illegible] of a decision [illegible] as a result Williams [illegible] entitled [illegible] blows but to [illegible] is under the [illegible] case [illegible] adding insult to injury.

Williams has been given the match with Eddie Campi [illegible] as a reward [illegible] victory over Ledoux [illegible] the very least McCarey could do would be to offer Charley [illegible] Williams [illegible] up to [illegible] Ledoux should [illegible] the winner [illegible] with Coulon.

As to Champ Coulon

Speaking [illegible] isn't it [illegible] Johnny [illegible] Williams is without [illegible] little fighter [illegible] entitled to a match with the title holder [illegible] previous to the [illegible] seem [illegible] Coulon because [illegible] to take on this tough customer [illegible] health.

Coulon has [illegible] for years [illegible] all comers [illegible] above his class [illegible] laid up [illegible] to [illegible] account [illegible] inclination to fight.

Personally [illegible] great fighter. His style [illegible] very much of [illegible] McCoy [illegible] that former [illegible] class—excepting that [illegible] not carry that terrible [illegible] made Terry famous [illegible] months. But at the same time I am an admirer of Johnny [illegible] believe [illegible] the time for his retirement [illegible] work should [illegible] own judgment.

He knows his condition [illegible] anyone else and should know [illegible] whether he will be able to fight [illegible] or not. If he finds that he [illegible] into condition to defend the championship Coulon will probably retire and let the rest of the youngsters fight for the title. But until that time he should be left alone.

Coulon has been fighting for [illegible] years and [illegible] he is [illegible] comparison [illegible] ahead [illegible] enough [illegible] foolish [illegible] his [illegible] laurels if not [illegible] best [illegible] While I [illegible] sport I am anxious to see Coulon defend the title at the earliest possible date I would hate like the [illegible] to see him come into the ring in no shape to do himself justice.

"A New Welter Marvel"

Mike Glover is the young man's name and he has been cleaning up in this neighborhood the last few months. Mike is a welter weight who can [illegible] reason why he shouldn't be declared the champion. Among his most recent victims was Gus Ellis the Englishman who came to this [illegible] to show the Americans how [illegible] ed as [illegible] weight the [illegible] country [illegible] years. Glover had [illegible] since Mr Hatts that [illegible]

According [illegible] manager [illegible] gentleman [illegible] Bos [illegible] ton [illegible] any legitimate [illegible] in the country over any [illegible] weight from [illegible] which shows Mike is a [illegible] young man and not [illegible] pound or two.

Glover has [illegible] challenges to a number [illegible] welters [illegible] the country [illegible] stars are afraid [illegible] meet him. Mike has even been so bold as to throw down the gauntlet to Packey McFarland and Mike Gibbons [illegible] Now the latter [illegible] ringside. Which is perfectly safe for the Bostonian by the way, as Gibbons could not very well [illegible] that weight without cutting off a limb or two. On the other hand the offer to McFarland is an exceedingly liberal one as Mike agrees to make 140 for the champion.

There is little chance of Glover getting Packey right away [illegible] later on perhaps but not just now. For the next few months McFarland will be busily engaged trying to convince Willie Ritchie that he (Packey) is the legitimate and logical contender for the championship and therefore will have no time to waste on welters no matter how soft they look. Bigger game is in sight and Packey is a [illegible] hunter.

Who Quit First

That story about Joe Rivers quitting to Willie Ritchie may or may not have some foundation in truth but the yarn about Ritchie wanting to quit [illegible] Rivers beating him to it is the funniest [illegible] I've read in a long [illegible]

According to the latest dream Willie was [illegible] during the early rounds and [illegible] signs of the white feather. As far as that goes the detailed accounts [illegible] the fight gave Rivers the best [illegible] first few rounds. If Ritchie isn't game and wanted to quit why [illegible] He was getting the worst of it and would have had a first class alibi. However he stood by his guns and took his medicine like a man and instead of laying down Willie kept right on fighting until he had solved the Mexican's style. The rest is history.

As for Rivers dogging it I don't know. It is easy enough for some sore head to circulate a yarn about a boxer quitting under punishment and still easier to get the public to accept it as gospel. But let me tell you something. A boxer who has climbed so high in his division as this young Rivers can't be very yellow. For that matter it takes a game man to be a fighter. It only a poor one.

As I sized the fight up it was simply a case of a good fighter beaten by a better one. Rivers had proved himself a boxer of merit long before the Ritchie contest and to my way of thinking the question of his courage should never have been brought up at all.

CARTERSVILLE CITIZENS COME BACK AT FITE

JUDGE'S CHARGES WARMLY REFUTED

Declare He "Labored Under Excitement, Anger and Dissatisfaction With Everything and Everybody"

Replying to charges made recently by Judge A W Fite of the Cherokee circuit at a mass meeting called by him in Cartersville prominent citizens of that place have prepared a signed card in which they give what they declare is a full and impartial statement of the facts of Judge Fite's activities in local municipal matters.

The card is signed by many of Cartersville's most prominent citizens among them being the mayor, two of the commissioners, every member of the board of education except one and the president of the chamber of commerce.

Appended to the card are signed statements from the two representatives from Bartow county and the senator from that district in which they state that they will neither introduce nor vote for any measure to amend the charter of the city of Cartersville relating to the school system of the city. Judge Fite's attack on the officials of the city it is alleged was on account of failure to name his daughter as one of the public school teachers and he declared at his mass meeting that he was going to have the legislature make certain changes in the charter of Cartersville.

In view of the intensity of the feeling which has been shown by Judge Fite and the officials that he attacked the card makes intensely interesting reading.

It is as follows:

In the account of the meeting as published in The Constitution of the [illegible] addressed by Judge A W Fite at Cartersville on Monday the 1st of July [illegible] reference was made to the fact that he [illegible] [illegible] in bitter language denouncing [illegible] of their references to him to be [illegible] wilful wicked and malicious falsehoods, also the fact that certain resolutions were passed [illegible] Judge Fite's proposed bill [illegible] members of the school board [illegible] the people against the effort to reduce the corporate limits of the city of Cartersville and to establish a recorder's court for the city.

As citizens of Cartersville desiring only that the facts be published in [illegible] concerning the recent activities of Judge Fite in local municipal matters pertaining to Cartersville, we [illegible] submit over our signatures the following statement of facts in relation thereto:

1 Two years ago Cartersville by a vote of the people adopted a commission form of government. Judge Fite favoring the amended charter. This charter included a clause prohibiting the board of commissioners into whose hands were committed all the affairs of the city including the schools and the management thereof from electing or appointing to any office or employment any person of kin to any one of the commissioners within the third degree either by consanguinity or affinity.

2 Cartersville being an old settled town with a population of less than [illegible] it was ascertained that the ramifications of kinship among its inhabitants were so extensive that serious embarrassment would result and so limit the commissioners in the selection of teachers that the best results might not be secured. The most ardent supporters of the commission form of government favored one year [illegible] an amendment to the charter creating a board of education and leaving out that clause relating to nepotism for the reasons above stated. [illegible] other reason which was advanced was that the commissioners were [illegible] upon the idea of their business capacity for handling the business affairs of the city than for their knowledge of school systems, courses of study, knowledge of pedagogy, etc.

3 Thereupon a bill was presented to the 1912 session of the legislature at which time no open active opposition to the amendment developed.

4 Upon the bill creating the board of education becoming a law the board of commissioners of Cartersville elected [illegible] the board of education as members C M Milam, Walter White and John A Stephens.

Judge Fite has not been known to have objected to anything being done by either the board of commissioners since their induction into office nearly two years ago or to the actions of the board of education until soon after June 2 1913 except, possibly a decision of the mayor with reference to the treatment of a complaint made to the mayor concerning the alleged violation by a certain citizen of a city ordinance.

Fite's First Objection

[illegible] June 2 1913 all old teachers applying for re-election were chosen by the board leaving thereby only one vacancy to be filled the same being [illegible] for the new term by the addition of one grade, this grade being deemed necessary between the grammar department and the High school due to the high curriculum established and the fact that so few pupils were able through hard study to make the promotion from the sixth grade of the grammar school to the first grade of the High school. For this position there were two applicants from Cartersville, one the daughter of W W Daves, the daughter of Judge Fite and several out of town applicants. The school board saw fit to elect the daughter of W W Daves who had taught school one term at Emerson and one term at Atco near Cartersville while she had made good. She received the unanimous vote of the board all three members voting for her. Judge Fite's daughter had never taught school anywhere except as a supernumerary in the Cartersville school during which time she received her voucher as extra teacher, drew her money and there was no complaint as to the management of the school system.

7 The following day Judge Fite made known to a large number of people his displeasure and dissatisfaction with the result of the election of teachers and proceeded to criticise severely the members of the board of education and particularly its chairman Mr Milam. In conversation he freely charged that the board, through Mr Milam and Mayor Young dictated the selection of teachers and charged that the defeat of his daughter was the result of prejudice against him existing in the mind of Mayor Young through Mr Milam.

Wanted To Amend School Act.

8 He informed a number of his friends that he intended to amend the School Board Act, so as to cause it to include a nepotism clause and thereby force out as teachers two relatives of Mr Young the mayor and Mr Milam's step mother all of whom had taught in public schools of Cartersville for a number of years prior to the change of the form of government and the change in the manner of handling the schools. Mr Milam's step mother being one among the first teachers employed in the school system of Cartersville and all being universally esteemed as excellent teachers. He did thereupon insert a notice that week being the first week in June 1913 as provided by law concerning the intention to [illegible] local legislation that a bill would be introduced prohibiting the selection of any teachers of kin to either the board of commissioners or the board of education within the third degree either by consanguinity or affinity.

Attacks Made by Fite

9 Within the next few days following Judge Fite vigorously assailed in conversation the board of commissioners and the board of education. He said also that he had discovered after a careful reading of the law that the nepotism clause was not taken out of the original commission government [illegible] by the School Board Act and that he had sought and obtained the opinion of many good lawyers to this effect. He stated that mandamus proceedings could be and would be brought against the teachers who were kin to any one of the board of commissioners. He called up W T Sewell superintendent of schools and told him to inform the board of education that unless G W Young resigned as mayor or Miss Heyward and Miss Hogan withdrew as teachers a mandamus proceeding would be served upon them.

10 He thereupon withdrew and abandoned his notice expressing an intention to incorporate a nepotism clause in an amendment to the School Board Act and the mandamus proceeding was never brought. In about two weeks later however he inserted in the local paper another notice to amend the School Board Act so as to provide for the election of the board of education by the people and to increase the membership of said board from three to five. By the terms of this act as drawn the terms of office of the present commissioners which now extend to [illegible] were made to terminate absolutely January 1 1914.

Cole Asked To Introduce Bills

11 For the legislature Judge Fite favored the election of W A Dodd and opposed the election of E D Cole both of whom were elected to the lower house. After he gave his notice he asked Mr Dodd to come to his office which he did and then and there Judge Fite read a number of bills which he claimed were [illegible] by the Bar Association and then began to read the bill in regard to his proposed change of the board of education of Cartersville. Mr Dodd soon asked him to stop and not to ask him to introduce the same as he had only lived in Cartersville a short time and would prefer not to [illegible] Judge Fite later approached Mr Dodd again and asked him to introduce the bill and to urge its passage and he again declined. Thereupon Judge Fite informed Mr Dodd that he would call a mass meeting and have him instructed to favor the bill and to vote for its passage. He did not personally solicit Mr Cole but through friends Mr Cole was asked to favor the bill immediately after Judge Fite had given notice of his intention to present the bill to the legislature.

12 Judge Fite did not favor the election to the senate of Mr J W L Brown who was notwithstanding elected. Mr Brown was not personally solicited by Judge Fite to favor the bill but likewise he was approached by friends immediately after notice was given that the proposed amendment to the school board act would be presented to the legislature for passage.

13 The senator and both representatives having made known their position with respect to the proposed measure to Judge Fite directly or through friends who informed him he called a mass meeting to be held at the courthouse Monday evening July 13 the July term of the superior court of Bartow county convening that day. Advertisements were inserted in both local papers without any signatures thereto in which the people of Cartersville were called to meet to consider the proposed drawing in of the city limits, the proposition to create a board of education of five members and elect the members thereof by the people and to create the office of city recorder and to consider other matters of public interests.

Charge to Grand Jury.

14 On the morning of said date Judge Fite charged the grand jury at length and made the subjects of his special attention the matter of schools particularly praising the work of the county schools and criticising the management of the city's affairs. After completing his charge to the grand jury he informed all present in the court room (who were largely country people) that a mass meeting would be held at the courthouse that night to which they were all invited. In the afternoon upon announcing adjournment of court for the day he again announced the fact that there would be a mass meeting in that room that night at 8 o'clock and all were cordially invited to attend.

15 Deeming it no more unfair to invite people from the country to a place of amusement than to have them present at a meeting wherein was to be discussed purely municipal affairs the friends of the city administration arranged free tickets to a moving picture show good only for the hour of the mass meeting. When court adjourned that afternoon enterprising merchants were at the door of the courthouse presenting free to each man as he filed out a ticket to the show. When the hour for the mass meeting arrived there were none present except Cartersville people who were tax payers and voters and at which were present many of the leading business and professional men of the town.

16 At the instance of the city commissioners notice had been given that the city limits of Cartersville would be so drawn in on the south side as to cut out certain railroad frontage and farming lands with the idea that freedom in this way from municipal taxation would encourage the location of industries in that quarter. The proposition met with strong opposition on the part of the people and the commissioners ascertaining this to be so abandoned the proposition and made known to the public such facts through both local papers. However the whole town was agog with the question.

17 At this time Judge Fite published notice of his mass meeting and when the printers informed him that the proposal to draw in the city's limits had been abandoned he nevertheless insisted on their being included as one of the matters for consideration at the meeting. The result was that his call for a mass meeting and the notice by the city of the abandonment of the project to cut out certain sections of Cartersville appeared side by side in the same issue of one if not both of the local papers. It thus developed that Judge Fite knew when he issued his call that the city had already responded to public sentiment with reference to this matter though by persisted in using it as a leader for the call of the mass meeting and the first of the items to be considered.

Mass Meeting Assembles.

18 The mass meeting was organized by the election of a chairman and secretary. The officers taking their seats the chairman promptly called for some one to state the object of the meeting after which there was considerable delay followed by a motion to limit the speeches to five minutes, which motion was put and carried, Judge Fite opposing. The chairman again called for some one to state the object of the meeting and again there was considerable delay. Whereupon a motion to adjourn was made there being no business presented for consideration before the body.

Judge Fite then arose acknowledged that he had called the meeting and thereupon the maker of the motion to adjourn withdrew it stating that he wanted merely to produce it. Judge Fite then offered a resolution opposing the change of the city limits which resolution was read from a batch of papers containing several sheets. C M Milam stated that the city authorities had publicly withdrawn the proposal to change the limits and had advertised the fact in the local papers and that the idea had been absolutely abandoned. Judge Fite stated that although it was true the city authorities had withdrawn the proposed bill still there was nothing to prevent them from bringing it up again.

To which Mr Milam responded that the action of the meeting would not prevent them from bringing it up again were they so inclined but that the city authorities had in good faith withdrawn it that respect for them and their action necessitated taking their word for it and that a resolution asking them to do what they had already done would be of no effect. A motion was then made to table Judge Fite's motion and upon its being put before the house the motion to table was adopted.

Feeling Manifested

19 Judge Fite then moved that his resolution be taken from the table and voted on immediately, to which Mr Milam raised the point of order that it would require a two thirds vote to do that, no intervening business having been transacted. At this point was manifested the only feeling displayed at the meeting. Judge Fite stated that he could see that the meeting had been stocked by the gang that always stops everything when they can do it in this town. "I move the meeting be adjourned."

20 Judge Wikle arose and addressing the chair said Judge Fite ought to know if he knows anything. I have always been his friend and supporter and I have not been at a meeting in this town in five years. The statement of Judge Fite is unjust, untrue, unrighteous and a great injustice to the citizens present. Therefore I now second the motion to adjourn. The motion was then put and carried without opposition.

Fite Calls Second Meeting.

After adjournment Judge Fite manifested his disapproval of what had been done and announced that he would call another meeting for the following Monday evening. This meeting was attended by perhaps 100 citizens a large majority of which showed that it was not in sympathy with the effort to amend the charter any way notwithstanding only one subject embraced in the call was considered. The evident purpose of those who participated in the call was to discredit the work of the city administration and the result was interpreted by the friends of the city commissioners and members of the board of education as an indorsement of their course in public affairs.

21 For some reason Judge Fite saw fit to change his plan of holding a second mass meeting which he had announced for the following Monday night but instead announced through the papers and through hand bills that he would speak in the courthouse Monday morning at 9 to 10 o'clock, before court convened.

22 Promptly at 9 o'clock he began his speech taking up the entire time before the hour for convening of court and encroaching upon the court's time from 20 to 30 minutes thereby giving no one an opportunity to make reply.

Makes Bitter Arraignment.

He bitterly arraigned the board of education, the mayor of Cartersville the correspondents of The Atlanta Constitution and Chattanooga Times and the publisher of The Bartow Tribune—because he published a report of the mass meeting which harmonizes in all respects with the stenographic copy of the proceedings of that meeting. The latter he denominated a falsifier because the report of the meeting concluded with the statement that the purpose of those who participated in the call was to discredit the work of the city administration notwithstanding his speech was directed to this end and because further The Tribune had stated that the friends of the city commissioners and members of the board of education interpreted the result of the meeting to have been an indorsement of their course in public affairs, unmindful of the fact that he admitted that he was unable to control the mass meeting that upon adjournment he complained that the friends of the administration and those not in sympathy with him applauded and cheered the leaders who antagonized him complaining also that they had passed a five minute limitation upon speeches and tabled all motions made by him or positions taken by him except his motion to adjourn.

Anger Plainly Seen.

During the course of his speech he took occasion to pay tribute to the ability and capacity of the teachers whom he had threatened by invoking the application of the act prohibiting nepotism through mandamus proceedings. It was plainly evident that he labored under great excitement and gave frequent expression of plainest anger and dissatisfaction with everything and everybody who disagreed with him or whom he suspicioned as not now being in accord with his purposes and views concerning what should be done.

He drew on his vocabulary for such words as "contemptible," "puppy," "false," "lie" and all words synonomous therewith. Everything mentioned by him brought forth the fiercest criticism and there was nothing to praise. From three to five minutes he devoted to the matter of the drawing in of the city limits whereas forty-five minutes was spent in discussing the local schools and the existing management thereof.

He spent much time concerning an item of $20 paid out by the city for the survey of the line when it was designed to cut out certain territory for manufacturing purposes about the item of premiums paid by the city on the bonds of its officers executed by authorized surety companies and concerning the expenditure of something over $200 under the item of "incidentals" appearing in a condensed quarterly report of the city wherein it is shown that upwards of ten thousand dollars had been received and over sixteen thousand dollars disbursed.

He recklessly declared that there were only three classes who could get places as teachers in the schools of Cartersville. They were as follows: First, relatives of either the mayor and commissioners of any member of the school board; second, those who have not graduated in the public schools here or anywhere else and have not gone off to college; third, one who is not a resident of the town and don't own any property in the town. He then said what is left is given to the girls of the town provided they had not gone through school here or gone off to college and graduated there, for if they have they have no chance. He said all those who did not come in under these heads have as much chance to secure a position as a tallow legged dog has to catch an asbestos cat in hades.

The Eloquence of Antony.

He said that he was possessed with the impassioned eloquence of Marc Antony when he thought over and considered the condition of Cartersville and what had been done to it by the school board recently. "Oh! judgment thou art fled to brutish beasts and men have lost their reason." He said that the fight had only begun that he would be found forever here after battling for the rights of the people as he had always done in the past. That one thing was sure the mayor and commissioners would have to put back in the treasury the money that was paid out by way of premiums on their bonds.

During the course of his speech he applied many opprobrious terms to ward all whom he saw fit to criticise and once resorted to ridicule and sarcasm. His remarks concerning the Knights of Pythias were particularly offensive and his references to an alleged conversation had with a kinsman of Charles M Milam chancellor commander of the local lodge and supreme representative from the grand domain of Georgia concluded with a statement that the kinsman aforesaid did not say so but I inferred from what he did say that the password of the Knights of Pythias was "Stick to Charley." The aforesaid kinsman was made indignant at the use made of the conversation and the interpretation which Judge Fite put upon it.

Calls for Vote

23 Upon the conclusion of his speech he asked all those who were opposed to the drawing in of the city limits to rise to their feet. He afterwards asked all those who were in favor of his bill to create a new board of education and elect them by the people to arise. He followed this with a similar request concerning the amendment to create the office of recorder.

The invitation to vote was put in this way: "I want every man present in this house who believes that this is a fair bill and believes that it ought to be a law. I want you to stand up and let me see who you are whether in town or outside every man who believes it's right." The majority voting were those who were non residents of Cartersville and therefore not qualified voters of Cartersville. The various estimates as to the number of citizens of Cartersville who voted favorably to his proposals range from six to twenty.

24 The house was comfortably filled and it is believed that from 30 to 40 per cent of those present voted on the propositions presented there being no one who expressed dissent when given an opportunity by the judge to vote in the negative. More than 75 per cent of those present were non residents of Cartersville.

25 It thus appears that Judge Fite's activities in city affairs began June 3 1913 and have continued unceasingly each day since that time when not compelled by court duties to go into other counties.

Fite's Activity.

26 Within that time he has drawn the notices of and inserted in the local papers his intention to apply to the legislature to have it pass two bills amending the charter as to schools has twice seen in person the only local representative toward whom he was not persona non grata urging his school board bills, friends have seen the other two about the same subject about the same time, has interpreted the existing school board act to still be object to the nepotism clause contained in a former act, has obtained as he claims the opinion of several good lawyers to the same effect, has threatened mandamus proceedings, has called one mass meeting, has prepared and sent to the papers notices of the same, has had circulars issued advertising the meetings called by him, has delivered a public speech in the courthouse wherein he has been recently holding court, has charged the grand jury concerning city affairs and in addition to all which he has spent much time on the streets and in his office criticising public officials and their municipal acts and has denounced all newspaper reports containing accounts in harmony with the foregoing statement of facts as false and the writers and correspondents responsible therefor as falsifiers."

NEGRO RESISTS ARREST AND IS BADLY INJURED

After a terrific fight with Officers L O Askew and W L Payne when the latter tried to arrest him a Decatur street negro known as "Slick" is lying in Grady hospital with a badly battered head.

Officer Payne found the negro at Decatur and Butler streets early Saturday night and started to arrest him for a fight he had had when the negro drew a long-bladed knife and struck at the officer. Payne struck him with his club in time to save himself the slash and the negro closed in, trying to choke Payne. Meanwhile Payne had grabbed the negro's knife hand, but was still in bad straights until Officer Askew came to his assistance and subdued the negro with his club.

Both officers were covered with blood but neither was hurt. The negro will recover.

Belgian Farms Are Small.

(From Wallace's Farmer)

An outstanding feature of Belgian farming is the small size of the farms. More than half of the Belgian farms are less than an acre in size.

One cause of small farms in Belgium is a law prohibiting the leaving by any man of all his property to one child. It is required that the property be divided among the children. Of course the children can agree to hold the land intact but in practice the result has been a great subdivision of land.

The average acre of Belgian land rents for a cash rent of about $10, but there is some share renting, the agreement being half and half and the landlord to furnish half of the fertilizer.

The average value of Belgian land is now about $300 an acre, pasture land averaging a little more than this, and cultivated land a little less. Eighty years ago Belgian land was worth just half this much.

Why is Belgian land so high? It is not so fertile as much of the land of England or Germany yet is more valuable because there are some half million Belgians who have the ability to make $300 land bear interest on the investment. They are able to do this because they work hard and are satisfied with little. Another reason for the high price of land is the keen competition for it. Because of the small pieces into which it is divided, land is constantly on the market and there are always farm hands and renters who are eager to own a piece of land for themselves and so the price is bid up to the limit.

They Didn't Meet on Elevator.

(From The English Exchange)

A well dressed woman walked into a prominent city office building the other day and took one of the lifts. Her husband saw her from across the street and hurrying over took the next lift. He went to the office where he knew she had business and found she had stopped in for a moment and had gone down again.

The lift man said to her: "Your husband just went up, and I think he's looking for you."

She took the next lift up. Just then her husband came down. He looked all around and then inquired:

"Have you seen my wife here?"

"Yes she went up this minute."

He took the next lift and was just out of sight when she came down.

"Your husband has just gone up."

Down came her husband a second afterward.

"Did my wife come down again?"

"Yes and just went up. She thought you'd wait for her."

After waiting a few moments he became impatient and went up again. She had been waiting for him, and came down.

"Husband just gone up."

"Then I'll wait here as he will surely come down."

She waited a few moments and then hurried up again just as he came down.

"Wife here?"

"Just gone up."

"Well I'm going home, and you can tell her——" He paused, turned around and went up again. Down she came.

"Did he come down?"

"Yes and he's gone up again as mad as a hornet."

"Then I had better go right up."

Up she went and down he came.

"Well I hope they'll meet in heaven."

TWO SOUTHERN TRAINS IN COLLISION ON SIDING

Fireman Jones Has Rib Broken. Engineer Jennings Injured. Negro Porter Killed.

Macon, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—Southern passenger trains Nos. 13 (northbound) and No. 24 (southbound) had a head-on collision on a siding at Hilton, near Macon, this morning at 3:10 o'clock, resulting in the death of Will Jackson, the negro porter, who opened the switch, and injuring Engineer H. G. Jennings, of Macon, and Fireman W. E. Jones, of Atlanta, of the train No. 24.

When the train No. 24 was within 100 yards of the siding the porter became excited over the apprehension that he had not turned the switch properly. He turned it again, opening the siding to the approaching train. He was struck by the engine of train No. 24 and instantly killed.

Engineer Jennings sustained a bruised shoulder and sprained back, and Fireman Jones had a rib broken. None of the passengers was hurt, although all were severely jarred.

A delay of less than an hour was occasioned by the wreck, train No. 23 taking train No. 13 on to Atlanta, while the passengers from No. 24 were transferred and brought to Macon.

Just three minutes after the head-on collision on the Southern railway at Holton this morning, a Georgia Southern and Florida train No. 4 was wrecked while taking a siding to allow another train to pass at Dakota, 79 miles south of Macon.

While making a curve the combination baggage and mail car left the rails and a day coach followed, shaking up the passengers considerable, though none were seriously injured. Traffic was delayed five hours.

NEGRO SENTENCED TO GANG FOR WIFE'S ROW WITH NEIGHBOR

Mollie Jones, black and corpulent, who was ordered before Recorder Broyles on a charge of disorderly conduct, was too sick to appear in police court yesterday morning. She sent her husband, George, as a proxy prisoner. He shuffled before the bar with an air of resignation, an apparent victim of henpeckism.

"I'se got to answer for whatever that 'oman of mine happened to do, jedge," he said. "You sees the sukkumstances, so be ez lite as possibul, please."

Missouri Scruggs, the negro neighbor with whom Mollie had had the fight, testified that Mollie had beaten ways preaches true democracy and fact that her assailant couldn't suffer punishment instead of George. Evidence tended to show that Mollie was the aggressor.

A fine of $10 75 was assessed upon both George and Missouri. George told the judge that, inasmuch as his wife had created such outlandish disturbance, he didn't blame her for lying in bed and sending a defendant by proxy.

He will serve eleven days in the stockade.

CHAS. OLIPHANT DROWNS

Found Dead After Search by Fellow-Campers.

Louisville, Ga., July 26.—(Special.) Charles Oliphant, a young Augustan, was drowned at Clark's mill pond late yesterday, where he was in company with a party from Augusta. Some of his camp fellows were fishing and he decided to go a short distance below them and take a swim. His friends, after waiting for some time, instituted a search and soon recovered his body in about six feet of water. He was a good swimmer and the accident is hard to account for unless he struck something when diving.

Young Oliphant was a son of Dickson Oliphant, a prominent farmer near Wrens, Ga. He was a first honor graduate of Mercer university, class of 1912, and for the past year has been a student at the Augusta Medical college.

WOMAN FATALLY BURNED

With Dress Ablaze Mrs. J. D. Ridley Rushes Into Street.

Waycross, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—While preparing today's dinner Mrs. J. D. Ridley's clothing caught fire in some unexplained manner and the burns inflicted caused her death shortly before noon. The woman ran into the street screaming for help, and neighbors rendered such assistance as was possible. All the clothing was burned from her body, and physicians who hurried to aid her held out no hope for her recovery.

Mrs. Ridley rallied a short time after the accident, but was unable to tell how her dress caught fire. She was using an oil stove. Her husband and a 7-year-old son survive.

Mrs. Ridley's home was originally in Baldwin county, near Milledgeville, and she had recently returned from a visit to relatives.

Funeral services will be held here tomorrow, and the remains taken to Cadwell for interment.

MOTION OF W. C. LANIER POSTPONED TO AUG. 16

Waycross, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—The motion of W. C. Lanier, under life sentence for the murder of an infant boy, for a new trial was not heard by Judge T. A. Parker today, as scheduled, but was postponed until August 16.

Since Lanier's conviction in superior court his wife, indicted jointly with him, was tried and acquitted.

Attorneys for the state and defense today fixed August 6 as the date for the preliminary trial of Tom Bullard, the 19-year-old white man, held here as a suspect in the mysterious murder of Mack Spain, a farmer at McIlco, on the Waycross and Western, three weeks ago.

MACON MAYOR TO ENTER CONGRESS RACE IN SIXTH

Friends of John T. Moore Have Already Raised a Campaign Fund of Considerable Size.

Macon, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—The situation in the sixth congressional district as regards the race to succeed Judge C. L. Bartlett when his present term expires is growing more complicated. Today it was announced that Mayor John T. Moore, of Macon, will probably get in the race, his friends having already raised a campaign fund of considerable size with promise of more.

The mayor says he has it under advisement and will announce his intention in due course of time. Under the law he cannot be a candidate to succeed himself as mayor.

This makes four possibilities in the congressional race, J. Walter Wise, of Fayetteville, and Colonel John R. Cooper, both opponents of Judge Bartlett in the last race, have already announced and it is said that Colonel John T Bolfeuillet is giving the question consideration.

The next place for the holding of the Chattooga convention was decided for Trion and will be held on the fourth Wednesday and Thursday in July, 1914.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE HELD AT EATONTON

Eatonton, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—A farmers' institute was held at the Putnam county courthouse Friday.

WIFE TIES HER HUSBAND AND THEN SHOOTS HIM

After Untying the Corpse, Mrs. Rodriguez Stretches Self Beside It and Suicides.

Tampa, Fla., July 26.—First tying him securely in bed as he lay asleep, Mrs. Avelina Rodriguez, a comely young Cuban woman, shot her husband to death at their home in the eastern part of the city this morning.

When she saw his life had fled she cut the bonds from his body, and, stretching herself beside him, fired the remaining shot from the pistol into her own heart, and was dead when neighbors rushed to the house. The pair lay side by side, and the slender ropes which still partly held Rodriguez's body to the bed and the pistol grasped in Mrs. Rodriguez's hand told the story.

She did not leave any note to explain her deed, but the police and the neighbors were able to piece out the story, which was one of abuse and knavery on the part of Rodriguez, who last night gave her the final beating of a series covering their year of married life.

Last week the woman had Rodriguez arrested on the charge of stealing money from her. Yesterday she secured his release on bond. Last night he beat her, and this morning's double tragedy was the sequel.

$100,000 BOND ISSUE IS VOTED BY ALBANY

Albany, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—By a good margin over the necessary two-thirds, the entire municipal bond issue of $100,000 proposed by the city council was carried in the election of Thursday.

The special registration held for the election was light, and therefore the number of votes necessary to carry the election was not large. The registration was 236, making a vote of 158 in favor of bonds necessary to carry the issue. In the election 184 votes were cast and each proposition was carried.

The new school proposition received the largest vote—181 for and 3 against. Bonds were also voted for obtaining site for school building, for street paving, for the extension of city water mains, for improvement of drainage and sewerage system of city, for improving city cemeteries, for the purchase of additional fire fighting apparatus.

The Political Rights of Women

MRS. MARY L. McLENDON, Editor

History of Suffrage in Georgia Told by Mrs. William H. Felton

(The department of the Political Rights of Women has courteously extended the space of the department today to the history of the Woman Suffrage Movement in Georgia, as told by Mrs. William H. Felton, who has seen the movement since its first expression in this section. Mrs. Felton was invited to speak at the open meeting held in Atlanta Tuesday night for the purpose of discussing Suffrage, and over which Mrs. William Lawson Peel presided. Mrs. Felton could not be present, but sent to Mrs. Peel the very valuable communication which will be published in two parts today and next Sunday.)

How Long Will It Be?

"How long will it be before the male voters in Georgia shall see fit to give equal suffrage to women—their mothers, wives, sisters and daughters—I am not prepared to say. It may not come in your time, it is very likely it will not come in my time, but that it will come before many moons shall wax and wane' is an established fact, according to the history of precedents, in all great political and national movements. When I was a young woman our Georgia voters were positive in their declarations that slavery was in the south to stay. That it was a divinely ordered institution and it was thus spoken of by scores of pulpit orators—in a most authoritative manner. Slave-owners were continually seeking astute lawyers to draw up wills, deeds of trust and entailments of slave property, for the benefit of their heirs and lawful descendants. The south had billions invested in slave property, and the buying and selling of slaves went on without hesitation long after confederate batteries were trained on Fort Sumter.

With all respect to those who were honestly mistaken, I will here say that it was most astonishing stupidity which deterred every sensible thinker on the subject from discovering that every civilized nation except Brazil had already issued its ultimatum against human slavery.

Back History.

Our Georgia politicians rung the changes against Exeter Hall and William Loyd Garrison, and some of them almost foamed at the mouth in denunciation of Henry Ward Beecher and his extraordinary sister, Mrs. Stowe.

It was preposterous and also unthinkable that southern planters should ever be forced to see their slaves emancipated—on southern soil—and we contended that we should depart in peace" and set up a new confederacy because we were not willing to live under the conditions that free states had announced for themselves and for us and we were entirely satisfied that slavery was of divine institution and, therefore, these divinely ordered relations of master and slave must be upheld. Do not forget, my dear madam, that I was full grown and twenty-one at that time and I am a living witness to the facts in this case.

Now, after nine states of this federal union have legally emancipated their women voters, and ten others are preparing to meet similar legislative requirements. It is more than likely that many northern and western states will do as Illinois has done and pass up the ballot through legislative action, to be ratified at a popular election. It makes me tired to hear our so-called wise men in the south declare that Georgia white men will fight to the end and die in the last ditch before the Empire State of the South will do likewise. I heard a very talkative neighbor of mine say, in public company, a few days ago: "I want to die before that infamy is put upon southern women!"

Work in Ohio and New York.

It was brave enough to say, "The time of your departure may be nearer at hand than you now believe." If Ohio and New York will do as Illinois has done, before 1916 the presidential primary will succeed in the states already in line for equal suffrage without any more. If Pennsylvania, Indiana, Wisconsin and Minnesota grant the ballot to women within that time, the solid south will do what it did for sixteen years under Mr. Bryan's leadership. It will only be planted on the losing side of the question. Whether you or I are for or against equal suffrage has nothing whatever to do with these established facts and conditions. In nine states the men vote already. We may rave and go crazy against it, but the fact remains they have doubled the voting power of those nine states, and if a presidential primary is ever authorized, and Mr. Bryan is loud in its advocacy, then we shall have nine states that will count as eighteen, because the women voters have the legal authority to double the actual vote that was counted previously by the men of those states deliberately went to the ballot box and said to the women of those nine states, "We must call to our help the virtue and intelligence of the women, or we must yield and surrender to hostile forces that have crowded us out of our state and national privileges."

Whether bad women will vote and good women will refuse to vote has nothing to do with this existing condition. Both can vote in nine states just as bad men had voted along with good men—ever since the Declaration of Independence in all the states. There is no retreat in this war. There is no power in the nation to disfranchise those who have the right—the unqualified right—to select their own rules.

The Handicap.

Therein lies the handicap that the white men of the southern states placed upon themselves when they ratified the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the federal constitution. They had the choice. They could have refused to ratify. After the terrible sacrifices of the civil war it has always seemed abnormal to me that the surviving white men of the bloody sixties should have said to the Abolition States, "Only restore the ballot to us, and we will agree to give it to the blacks of the late confederacy." In the year 1901 former Governor Allan G. Candler, in a letter written to me used the following words:

"The truth is, we started wrong in 1865.

"We had been overpowered by the northern invaders. The flower of our manhood had perished in battle. Those of our men population who had survived the conflict and returned to their ruined homes were disarmed and put on parole.

"The fanatics whom the fortunes of war had enthroned in Washington first demanded that we repudiate our war debt. We did it. Secondly, we were ordered to emancipate our slaves, and we did it. Thirdly, they demanded that we arm them with the ballot to protect them in their newly acquire dfreedom, and we did it. Then they said we must educate them to make good citizens out of them, and we have for thirty years been taxing ourselves to the verge of confiscation to fit them for citizenship and we have failed. Education has no more effect on them morally and intellectually than it has physically.

God made them negroes, and we cannot make them white folks by education. We are on the wrong tack; we must turn back, etc., etc. In another place, Governor Candler says: "We must limit suffrage to virtue and intelligence. The taxpyers are in the minority, and in almost every county there is an unreliable, irresponsible vote which constitutes the balance of power, and the law-makers consult this class rather than the interest of those who sit on juries, who pay the taxes, fight the battles and bear the burthens of our government."

This was Governor Candler's view when he was chief executive in Georgia, twelve years ago.

A Leading Question.

Now I feel sure the following question is legitimate in this connection: "If the white men of Georgia could get their consent to enfranchise ignorance, superstition, unreliability and irresponsibility, to re-obtain the ballot for themselves, after the war, why should the dissenters to woman suffrage in Georgia draw a line at the virtue, intelligence, reliability and responsibility of the womanhood of this era? It would insult the manhood of Georgia to say to them that they still choose a black man's ballot when they might have had the ballot of virtuous and intelligent womanhood to hold this old south steady to its traditions and ideals.

Nine western states have felt obliged to fall back on this bulwark of virtue and intelligence. The late disturbance in California with the Jap problem would not have been possible two decades ago. Why? Because California was in the grip of the Dennis Kearneys on one hand and corrupt railroad lobbyists on the other hand. The tax-paying minority did not have a ghost of a chance, until the white women of California were given the ballot.

100,000 WOMEN CRY FOR RIGHT TO VOTE

The Non-Militant Suffragettes Make Monster Demonstration in London — Every Constituency Represented.

London, July 26.—The long pilgrimage to London of non-militant women suffragists culminated this evening in a monster gathering at Hyde Park attended by fully 100,000 women.

Headed by banners bearing the motto "Reason, Not Force," which is the battlecry of the law-abiding of the National Union of Women's Suffrage societies, the petticoated battalions with bands playing and banners flying swept through the four principal gates of the park and converged at a central point where 70 speakers addressed them from 20 platforms.

At the sound of a bugle a resolution was simultaneously adopted amid scenes of tumultuous enthusiasm, begging parliament without further delay to give women the franchise.

Drew Enormous Crowd.

The vast concourse of women is believed to constitute a record in any political agitation. It furnished a picturesque and impressive spectacle and drew an enormous crowd of sightseers.

Among the speakers was Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt.

Many thousand non-militant suffragettes paraded London this morning as a preliminary to a great service in St. Paul's Cathedral and a subsequent demonstration in Hyde Park. The suffragettes, in emulation of their American sisters whose march to Washington to influence legislation favorable to the suffrage cause attracted so much attention, converged on London along the five great roads which end at the Mansion House, center of the British world.

Great Columns Formed.

Every constituency in the country sent representatives. The small detachments of suffragettes who originally started from Land's End and John O'Groat's, the two uttermost limits of the island—were augmented on the way until they formed great columns.

The women started out on June 15. They were cordially received in all parts of the country, clergymen, college professors and business men speaking at their meetings.

JACKSON AND EAGAN CITE CONVICT'S DEATH

As Evidence of the Fact That the Present System of Control Is Wrong.

Marion Jackson and J. J. Eagan, in behalf of the executive committee of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, make the following statement in reference to the death of Charley Stevens, a convict—referred to with no name being mentioned, in their recently published bulletin No. 65:

Editor Constitution: Bulletin 65 referred to Charley Stevens:

In fourteen months five convicts have been reported to have died as the result of heat in Fulton county.

Four of these, when hot, drank too much ice water according to the authorities.

They died.

And there are those who say, they were beaten the night before.

Of the last, Charley Stevens, Dr. McDonald says:

"His death was caused by sunstroke and there were no marks or signs upon his body of any ill treatment."

His skin was neither bruised nor broken, but the cold clamminess of his body proved him dead.

You see the poor man's thought: "The lash!"

"God, I will escape its cutting bite."

"I will work."

The man fell in this hell.

His offense was playing a game for money.

Death for this, since he could not pay forty-five dollars!

Something is wrong in Fulton county and in Georgia.

We ask those in authority to remedy it in the name of Him, Whom "Visage was so marred more than any man."

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT.

Gallant Act by Seaman.

Washington, July 26.—Acting Secretary Roosevelt has commended Martin J. Halvey, seaman at the naval training station, Newport, R. I., for his gallantry in jumping from the ferry boat Inca, July 1, and rescuing a man who had fallen overboard from one of the launches of the torpedo tender Dixie. The Inca was making a landing when the accident happened and Halvey without hesitation dived into the water and rescued the struggling man.

THREE WOMEN IN SWING SHOCKED BY LIGHTNING

Mrs. Frank Stegers and Two Daughters Have Narrow Escape From Death.

Macon, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—Three members of the family of Frank Stegers, president of this division of the Order of Railway Conductors, had a narrow escape from death this afternoon during an electrical storm, when a bolt of lighning struck their home, 262 Jeff Davis street.

The bolt demolished the rear porch, passed through the house and came out at the front gallery and went down the chains of swings in which Mrs. Stegers and her two daughters, Misses Francis and Aleen were sitting. The latter two had hold of the chains at the time and were severely shocked. Mrs. Stegers received a shock also which made her body rigid for a few minutes.

TRIES TO BRAIN JAILER.

An Attempt at Jail Delivery in Spalding Foiled.

Griffin, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—A clever scheme for a wholesale jail delivery was knocked into a cocked hat here when Peter Rawls, the janitor of the Spalding county jail, beat into unconsciousness Will Banks, a prisoner, who had made an effort to brain him with a sodawater bottle as he entered to give the prisoners their breakfasts. As Rawls entered and before he could relock the doors, Banks leaped upon him and rained blows upon Rawls' head, but Rawls was a little quicker than his assailant, and whirled and beat him with the heavy brass keys until Banks was stretched out unconscious. Several other prisoners were waiting ready to make their escape had the plot carried through successfully.

Two Lyceum Courses.

Griffin, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—Griffin's first experience in the chautauqua work was so successful and satisfactory that it has been determined not only to have another and bigger chautauqua next year, but in the meantime to spend the winter enjoying two lyceum courses. Bills are now out to this effect.

WASHINGTON SOLDIER BEATEN BY NEGROES

Washington, July 26.—George H. M. Bennett, a private in the District national guard, is in a hospital with a fractured skull, while three of his negro assailants are in jail awaiting the outcome of his injuries. Bennett, it is believed, will die.

The negroes were rescued with difficulty from an infuriated crowd of Bennett's mates, two mounted policemen holding the guardsmen off. Three companions of the negroes who joined in the attack on Bennett, made their escape.

The trouble occurred yesterday when Bennett, who was doing sentry duty at the rifle range used by the national guard, received a short answer from one of the negroes when he issued a command. The sentry sought to use his bayonet, whereupon the negro fled.

Shortly afterward Bennett, who had been relieved from sentry duty, left a baseball game between two companies of the regiment and started back to camp. When a short distance from his fellows he was set upon by six negroes was severely beaten. When his plight was discovered he was unconscious, but three of the negroes were overtaken by pursuers, from whom they were rescued with difficulty by the mounted police.

Early this morning an operation was performed on Bennett in the hope of saving his life.

AUTOS ARE WANTED BY LABOR SECRETARY

Washington, July 26.—Secretary Wilson, of the department of labor, who has informed congress that one touring automobile, an electric runabout and an auto truck are necessary to the good conduct of the new department, apparently has launched his request upon a rocky legislative road.

Members of the house who were friendly to the cabinet officer's demand admitted today that the minority members probably "would have fun" with the item, which likely will be included in the urgent deficiency bill that the appropriations committee now is preparing.

"Other departments have their motors and Mr. Wilson should have his, but this is the day of reprisals," said one of the democratic leaders.

Mr. Wilson has estimated that the three cars would cost not to exceed $8,500.

TEN POOR MOTHERS GRANTED PENSIONS

Seattle, Wash., July 26.—Ten women were granted pensions yesterday by Superior Judge Frater, when he heard the first batch of cases under the mother's pension law, enacted by the legislature last winter.

Fifteen cases were heard, three being denied and two referred for further investigation. The largest pension granted was for $37.50 a month to a destitute widow with seven children. The amounts granted in the other cases ranged from $15 a month to $30 a month, according to the circumstances of the petitioners.

The investigator of the pension department reported to the court that three hundred applications for mother's pensions have been filed, of which 150 were found to come within the provisions of the law.

TALLAPOOSA MEN BUY TOP OF TALLY MOUNTAIN

Tallapoosa, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—A party of Tallapoosa men have bought the top of the historic Tally mountain, near this city, and it will be improved as a resort. Many of the most prominent men of the city are in the deal.

The development of the place will begin at once. An automobile road will be constructed probably next week, and a supply of water will be supplied at once. For this season the mountain will probably be used as a private park and camping place, but it will be opened to the public when the improvements are complete. The pinnacle of the mountain is 1,476 feet above the sea, and several hundred fee above this city.

Probe of Moose Initiation To Follow Birmingham Deaths

That the death of two Birmingham men during a Moose initiation last Thursday night will be investigated by the supreme lodge of the order, and may result in the expulsion of the Birmingham lodge, is the declaration made by H. L. MacEwen, a well-known Atlanta Moose and dictator of Atlanta lodge, No. 523.

Mr. MacEwen says that he intends to lay before the session of the supreme lodge, which meets next week in Cincinnati, the circumstances of the tragedy with demand for an investigation.

"There is nothing in the authorized initiation ceremony that could have possibly caused such a result as the death of the candidates by a shock of electricity," said Mr. MacEwen Saturday.

"The ritual of the Loyal Order of Moose appeals to the finer senses of the candidates and endeavors to instill some weight in deciding their final as duty to his neighbor as well as to himself. We do not attempt to play on as fears or his imagination. Our ritual is simple and impressive, being built round our motto, 'Purity, Aid, Progress.'

Action Expected This Week.

"If it is true that the Birmingham lodge has so far violated these principles as to bring violence, electric shocks or 'horse play' into the initiation, it will meet with severe action by the high tribunal of the order. While the deaths have not yet been fully explained, it is believed to be likely that they occurred during initiation into the 'side degree,' and not the initiation into the order itself. The supreme lodge at Cincinnati will take up this matter of side degrees which have been instituted by several of the lodges and pass on it, and I have no doubt that Birmingham occurrence will have some weight in deciding their final action.

"We feel that the entire order has been to an extent injured by the false impression created by the death of the two men, and for this reason we ask that due publicity be given to the fact that the order condemns such methods. The very purpose of the order forbids it. Every man who has gone through the ceremony in Atlanta knows that there is no electric shock nor any other kind of violence practiced.

Home to Be Dedicated Monday.

The order itself is in splendid condition over the country. Among the projects we have under way is the establishment of an industrial home for sons and daughters of Loyal Moose. This institution will be dedicated on Monday, at Mooseheart, Ill., Vice President Marshall delivering the dedicatory address. The technical and academic instruction here will be of a high order, at which the children of Moose may be educated free of cost to the individual member.

"This institution will also have a department as a home for aged and infirm members, a general sanitarium and also a tuberculosis sanitarium. It will be an institution of education and refuge builded upon lines never before conceived—where the sting of pauperism is unknown—where moral and civic lessons will be impressed, equipping our children for cleaner and better citizenship."

Sensational Developments Likely.

Birmingham, Ala., July 26.—(Special.)—Sensational developments are promised as a result of the investigation of the violent deaths of Donald Kenny and Christopher Gun, who were killed while undergoing the initiation ceremonies of the local chapter of the Loyal Order of Moose, here Thursday night. Post mortem examination of the bodies of the two young men failed to show any defect in heart or other organs. Physicians who held the autopsy gave the cause of death unknown.

Coroner Spane, who began investigation into the deaths of the young men today, announced that the undertakers who embalmed the bodies on Thursday night would be prosecuted for taking such action before the coroners examination. Both undertakers have issued statements defying the coroner, and claiming the right to embalm all bodies taken to their establishments, without such delay.

The coroner's jury will be empaneled Monday when developments of a sensational nature are expected. Coroner Spane, in a statement tonight said that the lodge would not be allowed legal representatives.

A telegram from Cincinnati tonight summoned John Abbott, director, David Williams, secretary, and R. E. Vanderhaar, prelate, of the Birmingham chapter of Moose to appear before the grand council of the lodge in Cincinnati Sunday night, when, it is understood a sweeping investigation of the situation will be made by the lodge authorities.

Editors at LaGrange Impressed By Talks of Slaton and McCord

LaGrange, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—The twenty-seventh annual meeting of the Georgia Weekly Press association will be long memorable in the hearts of all those who attended. The business practically suspended, and LaGrange gave herself over entirely today afternoon to Thursday morning in an effort to eclipse every other town that has ever entertained the Georgia scribes. And how well she succeeded the editors themselves are the best judges. They are singing the praise of the town in no uncertain tones.

The high tide of the present session was reached at the banquet which was given in honor of the press association by the LaGrange Chamber of Commerce on Wednesday night. All were present as invited and honored guests, in addition to the association delegates, the following:

Invited Guests.

Governor John M. Slaton, Mrs. John M. Slaton and Mrs. W. D. Grant, sister of Mrs. Slaton; Hardy Ulm, executive secretary; Evelyn Harris, city agent Southern Bell Telephone company; Lauren Foreman, city agent Southern railway; W. Massey, street railway promoter; E. Stanley, commissioner labor and commerce; W. H. Leahy, G. P. A., N. & A. railroad and Jas. A. McLeod of the Third National bank, Atlanta.

The banquet was an occasion which long be remembered by both the editors of the press and the citizens of LaGrange. With lavish expenditure of money and painstaking care, the ladies of LaGrange, turned the Security Cotton Warehouse, into a veritable fairy land of beauty, and with the dazzle of electric lights, the strains of music, and the fluent words of eloquent Georgians, the occasion was one which reflected credit on the town and honor to the press.

Slaton Strikes Deep.

Governor Slaton, well typified his administration of the affairs of the state by delivering not a popular banquet speech, but making an address on the financial condition of Georgia, pleading with all his power that the boss of the state co-operate with him in righting Georgia financially in the eyes of the nation and her own people.

The speech was still being discussed when the delegates took the train Thursday morning for their outing at St. Simons, and only words of praise were to be heard for the stand he took.

McCord Makes Hit.

Hon. J. A. McCord of the Third National bank of Atlanta, made quite a hit with his impromptu speech, in which he heartily endorsed Governor Slatons' address, and urged the people of the state, to pay part of their children's tuition at the public schools for a year or two, through added taxation, in order to assist in putting the state on a firm financial footing.

He gave a ringing endorsement of the plans of the LaGrange Chamber of Commerce for the development of Troup county, and stated that the establishment of neighborhoods, as proposed by the chamber, with schools and facilities at the command of each neighborhood, and the diversification of crops, together with deep plowing, would mean the salvation of the south.

He pointed out the state of Georgia could raise many fold times as much as she now raises if proper cultivation methods were indulged in, and the plans of the LaGrange Chamber of Commerce along these lines were in harmony with his own.

Piano Solo By Mrs. Grant.

A pleasing feature of the banquet was the piano solo by Mrs. W. D. Grant, who was called from her seat and urged to give one of her old-time southern melodies. The crowd cheered her as she took her seat.

J. E. Dunson, a prominent member of the LaGranged Chamber of Commerce, and one of the leading financiers of the south, spoke on the progress of LaGrange as related to the claims regarding same by the LaGrange press.

He said that the LaGrange people were large claimers, but that they had reason for such claims. That the newspaper claims were true he said, was due to the fact that "things in prospect" in LaGrange meant things actually done, because LaGrange always did what she planned. This statement brought a hearty laugh to the audience.

Joins Press Association.

IN THE THEATERS

ELSA WARD,
The California songbird, at the Forsyth this week.

Keith Vaudeville.

(At the Forsyth.)

Joe Welch, the famous character comedian, will be one of the season's features at the Forsyth, and a headline attraction for the week that commences on Monday. There are other Keith acts that will make the bill one of the most inviting of the season and probably one of the best of the summer. The seven numbers that make up the program are the sort that have always stood the great test in Atlanta. The bill is going to be tremendously strong on comedy. It will be one of the best laugh winners of the vaudeville history locally, and it will serve to introduce some people who have never set foot on a local stage before.

The week will serve to introduce Robert L. Daily and his company in their original burrah comedy creation "Our Bob." Daily is one of the most popular comedians in the profession. He is a brother of the late Pete Daily and entertains very much in the same style the famous Weber and Field star did. He is a laugh winner with peculiar methods and is surrounded by a company that will make the Forsyth very popular.

O'Brien Havel and company will offer "Monday," a sketch that is filled with good things and that will be entirely acceptable here. Havel is a splendid comedian and his company including Miss Valeska, who is a superb dancer, will assist in making the week a decidedly brilliant success.

Elsa Ward, the California Songbird, will make her first appearance in Atlanta. Miss Ward has won fame ever since she reached New York from her successes in the west. She has been featured in prominent position on a number of important bills and it is believed she will become popular with the Atlanta theatergoers. Karl Kress promises a novelty that will be refreshing because it is a real novelty. Kress is a rapid-fire artist and will make some wonderful pictures in oil. He will produce realistic effects, and prove that he is alone in his style of entertainment. Cunningham and Marion, the "talkfest acrobats," will present a comedy number that is going to have a keen value, and the Welling-Levering troupe in the funniest of all bicycle stunts will add to the merit of the bill.

The combination of Keith acts is one of the strongest that has been brought to Atlanta, is crowded with good comedy and novelty and is just the sort of show that will keep the Forsyth busy.

Novel Pictures.

(At the Grand.)

The Grand is fast becoming a mighty popular home for high-grade motion pictures, and like the famous Broadway in New York, and some of the principal theaters in other large cities, will soon be the busiest of all such places of entertainment. The management is using every influence and every effort to secure the finest photo-plays and unique motion pictures. During the few weeks pictures have been offered at the Grand there has been a constant and steady increase in interest and attendance.

The attraction for the week commencing on Monday, matinee and night daily, the Carnegie Museum Alaska-Siberian pictures will be presented. There are six magnificent reels in this picture and a lecture that describes everything that will be put on the screen. The scenes were taken at great risk and expense and are entertaining, instructive and decidedly interesting. In addition to the Alaska-Siberian pictures there will be reels of the highest grade of first shown pictures, the releases of the best producers in the land.

There will be daily matinee performances at 2:30, an entertainment that will continue for two and a half hours, at 10 cents for all seats; at night the exhibition starts at 8:30 and the prices will be 10, 15 and 25 cents.

There is a great interest these days in "movies" and the biggest producers in the land are making wonderful productions, while the regular picture makers are turning out more interesting pictures than ever before. The Grand management is in a position to secure the very best productions and already Atlanta has been treated to "Quo Vadis," "Les Miserables," Edison's Talking pictures and other features, and the coming of the Carnegie Museum Alaska-Siberian views means that the best that the market contains will be sent here and that the Grand will grow more and more popular.

"The Girl From Dublin."

(At the Bijou.)

The splendid performances of the past week have whetted the appetite of theater-goers to an unusual degree and patrons of the Bijou are looking forward to the coming week with unusual interest on account of the flattering reports that have been received concerning the attraction. "The Girl from Dublin" is the title of this week's bill at the Bijou. It is said to be an hilarious, rip-roaring musical farce with fun enough to furnish laughing material to at least a half dozen musical comedies, and with a dozen clever musical numbers that will be participated in by a chorus that has been the talk of every city where "The Girl from Dublin" has been presented. The company is headed by Charles Brownie, J. G. McCaffrey, the Four Manning Sisters and Shannon and Straw. Musical comedy tabloid has received a big boost in the past few weeks on account of the splendid performances that have been given at the Bijou, and judging from reports concerning next week's attraction, there will be many new faces to enjoy the performance at the Bijou. "The Girl from Dublin" will be the bill the entire week, with matinees every afternoon at 3 o'clock, and night performances at 7:30 and 9.

Long Lockout Ends.

Kansas City, Mo., July 26.—The seven weeks' lockout of 1,300 union workmen of the Building Trades ended today when members of the Building Trades council agreed to take back the union men. Conditions of the agreement are that no strikes in the future are to be called except after arbitration and that no wage scale shall be changed on any building under construction.

Agnew Improves.

Washington, July 26.—Catcher Agnew, of the St. Louis Americans, struck in the face by a pitched ball during yesterday's fifteen-inning game with Washington, was in a local hospital today doing well, surgeons said. Some small bones of the face were fractured and concussion of the brain was feared last night. Agnew will be out of the game several weeks.

SOLDIER BOYS LEAVE CAMP AT ST. SIMONS

Two Sham Battles, the Surf and the Girls Featured Stay on the Island.

St. Simons Island, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—At seven o'clock this morning, the call to break camp was sounded and every tent fell while the regimental band from Shellman played "God Be With you 'Till We meet Again." The equipment was quickly prepared for shipment and loaded on the lighters for Brunswick, where the special trains were waiting to carry the different companies to their respective destinations.

The week has been very interesting in camp with a baseball game Sunday afternoon between Americus and Columbus and a full dress parade Monday afternoon. The duties have been diligently performed, being very liberally interspersed with dancing and surf bathing.

Early Thursday morning the regiment began its hike under the direct rays of an exceedingly hot sun. The temporary camp was located about five miles from headquarters, and the men enjoyed a night of "roughing it." Each man prepared his meals and slept in the dog tents.

The camp was featured by two sham battles, one Thursday afternoon, the other Friday morning as the regiments were returning to camp. Every man seems to have enjoyed the ten days at St. Simons as the maneuvers were very instructive and intelligently carried out and the girls and the surf were great.

The nightly dances at the new St. Simons hotel pavilion were sources of pleasures that were appreciated by a large number of soldier boys. Everything considered the encampment this year far surpassed any previous one and it is no doubt the wish of the entire regiment that the same place be chosen for future state encampments.

Kills Negro Cropper.

Thomasville, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—Reports have been received here of the killing a few days ago of John Evans, a negro, by Roscoe Eubanks, a prominent farmer of Mitchell county. Evans, who has been a cropper on the Eubanks place, was lectured by Mr. Eubanks about not working his crop. The next morning as Mr. Eubanks went out of his lot he met the negro with a shotgun on his shoulder. Upon asking what he was doing with it he swung it around as if to shoot and Mr. Eubanks drew his pistol and shot, killing the negro almost instantly.

THIN FOR YEARS --- "GAINS 22 POUNDS IN 23 DAYS"

Remarkable Experience of F. Gagnon. Builds Up Weight Wonderfully.

"I was all run down to the very bottom," writes F. Gagnon. "I had to quit work, I was so weak. Now, thanks to Sargol, I look like a new man. I gained 22 pounds in 23 days."

"Sargol has put 10 pounds on me in 14 days," states W. D. Roberts. "It has made me sleep well, enjoy what I ate and enabled me to work with interest and pleasure."

"I weighed 132 pounds when I commenced taking Sargol. After taking 20 days I weighed 144 pounds. Sargol is the most wonderful preparation for flesh building I have ever seen," declares D. Martin, and J. Meier adds: "For the past twenty years I have taken medicine every day for indigestion and got thinner every year. I took Sargol for forty days and feel better than I have felt in twenty years. My weight has increased from 150 to 170 pounds."

When hundreds of men and women—and there are hundreds, with more coming every day—living in every nook and corner of this broad land, voluntarily testify to weight increases ranging all the way from 10 to 35 pounds, given them by Sargol, you must admit, Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Thin Reader, that there must be something in this Sargol method of flesh building after all.

Hadn't you better look into it, just as thousands of others have done? Many thin folks say: "I'd give most anything to put on a little extra weight, but when someone suggests a way they exclaim, "Not a chance. Nothing will make me plump. I'm built to stay thin." Until you have tried Sargol, you do not and cannot know that this is true.

Sargol has put pounds of healthy "stay there" flesh on hundreds who doubted and in spite of their doubts. You don't have to believe in Sargol to grow plump from its use. You just take it and watch weight pile up, hollows vanish and your figure round out to pleasing and normal proportions. You weigh yourself when you begin and again when you finish and you let the scales tell the story.

Sargol is absolutely harmless. It is a tiny concentrated tablet. You take one with every meal. It mixes with the food you eat for the purpose of separating all of its flesh producing ingredients. It prepares these fat making elements in an easily assimilated form, which the blood can readily absorb and carry all over your body. Plump, well-developed persons don't need Sargol to produce this result. Their assimilative machinery performs its functions without aid. But thin folks' assimilative organs do not. This fatty portion of their food now goes to waste through their bodies like unburned coal through an open grate. A few days' test of Sargol in your case will surely prove whether or not this is true of you. Isn't it worth trying?

50c BOX FREE

To enable any thin reader, ten pounds or more underweight, to easily make this test we will give a 50c box of Sargol absolutely free. How to Write Retail Advertising Copy

By HERBERT KAUFMAN

A skilled layer of mosaics works with small fragments of stone—they fit into more places than the larger chunks.

The skilled advertiser works with small words—they fit into more minds than big phrases.

The simpler the language the greater the certainty that it will be understood by the least intelligent reader.

The construction engineer plans his roadbed where there is a minimum of grade—he works along the lines of least resistance.

The advertisement which runs into mountainous style is badly surveyed---all minds are not built for high-grade thinking.

Advertising must be simple. When it is tricked out with the jewelry and silks of literary expression, it looks as much out of place as a ball dress at the breakfast table.

The buying public is only interested in facts. People read advertisements to find out what you have to sell.

The advertiser who can fire the most facts in the shortest time gets the most returns. Blank cartridges make noise, but they do not hit---blank talk, however clever, is only wasted space.

You force your salesmen to keep to solid facts---you don't allow them to sell muslin with quotations from Omar, or trousers with excerpts from Marie Corelli You must not tolerate in your printed selling talk anything that you are not willing to countenance in personal salesmanship.

Cut out clever phrases if they are inserted to the sacrifice of clear explanations---write copy as you talk. Only, be more brief. Publicity is costlier than conversation---ranging in price downward from $10 a line; talk is not cheap, but the most expensive commodity in the world.

Sketch in your ad to the stenographer. Then you will be so busy "saying it" that you will not have time to bother about the gewgaws of writing Afterwards take the typewritten manuscript and cut out every word and every line that can be erased without omitting an important detail. What remains in the end is all that really counted in the beginning.

Cultivate brevity and simplicity. "Savon Francais" may look smarter, but more people will understand "French soap." Sir Isaac Newton's explanation of gravitation covers six pages, but the schoolboy's terse and homely "What goes up must come down" clinches the whole thing in six words.

Indefinite talk wastes space. It is not 100% productive. The copy that omits prices sacrifices half its pulling power--it has a tendency to bring lookers instead of buyers. It often creates false impressions. Some people are bound to conceive the idea that the goods are higher priced than in reality--others, by the same token, are just as likely to infer that the prices are lower and go away thinking that you have exaggerated your statements.

The reader must be searched out by the copy. Big space is cheapest because it doesn't waste a single eye. Publicity must be on the offensive. There are far too many advertisers who keep their lights on top of their bushel--the average citizen hasn't time to overturn your bushel.

Small space is expensive. Like a one-flake snowstorm, there is not enough of it to lay.

Space is a comparative matter after all. It is not a case of how much is used, as how it is used. The passengers on the limited express may realize that Jones has tacked a twelve-inch shingle on every post and fence for a stretch of five miles, but they are going too fast to make out what the shingles say, yet the two-foot letters of Brown's big bulletin board on top of the hill leap at them before they have a chance to dodge it. And at that it doesn't cost nearly so much as the sum total of Jones' dinky display.

Just so advertisements attractively displayed every day or every other day for a year in one big newspaper, will find the eye of all readers, no matter how rapidly they may be "going" through the advertising pages, and produce more results than a dozen piking pieces of copy scattered through half a dozen dailies.

REAL ESTATE TALK
BY ADAIR

LET US learn a real estate lesson from the story of the Sibylline Books. The story is old and oft told, but it is full of meaning. The sibyl came to Tarquin the Proud, and offered him nine books at a certain price. Tarquin thought the price was exorbitant and declined to buy. In his presence the sibyl burned three of the books, and demanded the same price for the remaining six. The proud ruler still declined to buy. The prophetess burned three more books, and demanded the original sum for the remaining three. Thoroughly alarmed Tarquin bought the three books for a sum that would have purchased all nine.

ISN'T this exactly the way of Atlanta real estate? The early suffragette who figured in the story must have been the forerunner of all the real estate agents. She was, as Mr. Tennyson would say, "No agent, but a dearer being all dept in agent instincts." Thus from mythology do we learn the lesson of not waiting for real estate to get cheaper. It usually gets higher. A gentleman from south Georgia used to visit Atlanta and was interested in buying a certain corner lot, 100x100. It was priced to him at $5,000, but he thought the price too high. On his next visit he was offered the corner, 50x100, at $10,000. He hesitated a long time, finally deciding not to buy. On a following visit he inquired about the same corner and was offered 25x100 for $15,000. He then bought it.

ONE of the distinguished ex-mayors of Atlanta loves to tell how he was offered a share in the original Ansley Park syndicate, which purchased 200 acres. He declined to put up $10,000 to go in, yet afterwards paid that much for a single lot on Peachtree Road. For this sum of money he could have been a member of the original syndicate and cleared $50,000 to $100,000. Truly, the Sibylline Books were offered in this case, but there are hundreds of illustrations just like it. Rarely ever does a buyer gain much by waiting. Many a property owner has longed for years to get hold of a certain adjoining parcel to fill out his holdings. Many a land-owner has for years had in mind to purchase some little parcel that cut him off from the corner, or stood in the way of additional improvements. Sometimes these parcels are offered for sale only once in a lifetime; they must be accepted quickly or the opportunity passes away.

IN THE upheaval following the Ne... Bank failure in 1908, several fi... parcels of central property came ... the surface. One was a lot on Hunt... street, between Whitehall and Pry... streets, fronting 60 feet, and priced ... $60,000. This land was under a lon... term lease, occupied by a big depar... ment store. They declined to pay $70,0... and the chance was forever lost. Si... then offers of $126,000 for the sa... property have been declined.

IT IS a churlish thing to be alwa... harping "I told you so." We ... not going to dwell on these illust... tions, and would not mention them ... all except for the lesson they carry. It must be borne in mind that c... tain real estate parcels cannot be ... plicated. Reviewing the real estate situation of the north side, especially in the Brookhaven district, one of the larger recent developments in suburban property is Fernwood, a 97-acre tract placed on the market by the Charles P. Glover Realty company, situated on Peachtree road opposite the grounds of the Capital City Country club.

This property has been subdivided with a view of obtaining for residents the larger lots and spacious grounds which have characterized and identified Peachtree holdings as the most valuable in the city.

The feature of this residence subdivision consists of two parks of several acres each situated near the center, surrounded by large family lots containing from one-half to one and one-half acres each. The parks will be reserved for the private benefit of residents.

No Walking for This Man

London, July 26.—There is only one man in England who has the right, should his own carriage or auto happen to break down, to turn any other person out of his carriage or other conveyance and take the latter's place, and that is the speaker of the house of commons. There are only two men in this country whose invitations to dinner constitute a command—to disobey which is to risk all sorts of pains and penalties—one of these being the king and the other the puissant speaker of the house of commons again, who also has the proud title of first commoner in the realm, and exercises a despotic power unequalled, so it is said, by any other chairman in the world.

The present holder of this office, the Right Hon. J. W. Lowther, is perhaps more in the public eye at the moment than any other man in England, his recent decision regarding the liberal government's long-promised franchise bill having provided the sensation of the parliamentary year. As a result of it, this bill, which was designed to grant, for the first time, almost universal male suffrage in this country, has been shelved indefinitely, and incidentally, a settlement of the women's suffrage question in England has been postponed for months and perhaps years. Probably at no time during his twenty years in the house of commons has the many-sided man and all-around athlete who, clad in solemn robes and a wig, presides over the deliberations of that body, found himself so squarely in the limelight, and never, incidentally, has he stood so good a chance of being assaulted as he does at present at the hands of the infuriated women whose long-matured plans he has upset at the eleventh hour. If he is not strongly guarded, nowadays, when he leaves his official residence in the palace of Westminster, on horseback, to take his regular morning canter in the "Row," then Scotland Yard is neglecting its duty. Meanwhile Lowther has just been attacked bitterly by George Bernard Shaw, who accuses him of "gross partiality."

Job Is No Snap.

Being speaker of the house of commons is no snap, however you look at it, but the rewards are many and various, likewise a bit funny. To begin with, there is the excessive dignity, for as first commoner in the realm, "Mr. Speaker" takes precedence of the entire nobility in state processions, coming, in fact, directly after the archbishops who, in their turn, are preced only by royalty. At the end of his ter mof office, moreover, he invariably is elevated to the peerage, usually with the title of viscount, and draws a fat pension for the remainder of his days. His official salary is $25,000 a year, which is not bad considering that he lives rent free in the palace of Westminster during his term of office, to say nothing of being provided with a gorgeous state coach. The possession of this ornate vehicle, however, is a mixed blessing, the "speaker's coach" being an antiquated, lumbering contraption which, as like as not, would break down did Mr. Lowther entrust himself to it (a thing he has not done since it came into his possession), thereby enabling him to utilize his legendary privilege of ousting whomsoever he likes from his carriage and ensconcing himself therein. They say that when Lowther's predecessor in office, Speaker Gully, used the state coach at the time of the diamond jubilee, a couple of big dray horses found it all they could do to drag the creaking and swaying vehicle, and everybody was intensely relieved when its occupants, who included, besides the speaker, his chaplain and private secretary, and the sergeant-at-arms of the house of commons, got back with whole skins from their brief excursion from New Palace yard to Buckingham palace.

The "perquisites" mentioned above are only a few, however, of those enjoyed by the speaker. On being appointed to the chair, a generous nation awards him $5,000 as "equipment money," and he receives an allowance of "1,000 ounces of plate" and $500 to keep him in "stationery," which must be ample unles he writes more letters than even Mayor Gaynor. Another queer "graft" he enjoys is an annual gift of two hogsheads of claret wine and a buck and a doe killed in the royal preserves at Windsor also are sent to him every year. Again, at Christmas time the speaker's heart is gladdened by the Clothmakers' company (one of the ancient "guilds" of the city of London), which solemly presents him with a generous length of the best broadcloth made in England.

It's a Boring Position

Perhaps all these emoluments compensate the speaker for being intensely bored and, occasionally, being made to look and feel a fool, and perhaps they don't. As presiding officer of the house of commons he is the kingpin of the elaborate system of tomfoolery which tends to make what is usually described as the most dignified legislative assembly in the world actually one of the most ridiculous. He has between 500 and 600 cast iron rules to remember and enforce and a large percentage of them are the sheerest absurdity, admirably fitted for a comic opera, but ludicrously out of place in the legislative machinery of the greatest empire in history. Any nation but England would have "scrapped" the bulk of them a century or more ago, but, as everybody knows, tradition dies harder, here, than perhaps anywhere else on earth.

It is the speaker who has to call an "honorable member" to order should he commit the heinous offense of proposing an amendment to a bill while standing, hareheaded (as common sense would suggest), instead of seated with either his own or somebody else's hat on, as is solemnly laid down in the rules of procedure. There are about a hundred more rules about the "deadness" in the house of commons (whose members, of course, sit with their hats on), and each of them must be enforced rigorously by the speaker else there will be frantic yells of "Ordah! ordah!" from all the old parliamentary fossils on each side of the chamber to whom "usage" is as the breath of life.

Likewise, the speaker must rebuke the member of the house, who, in the excitement of speaking ventures to remove both feet from a certain rug which is laid over the cocoanut matting on each side of the chamber. One foot may be taken off this rug, but not both, or there will be more bawling of "Ordah!" until this terrible solecism has been put right. The rule about this is supposed to date from the days when the knights of the shires came down to the house with their swords by their sides, and at that time it would no doubt have been risky to let the opposing parties get too close to each other, but the insistence on the thing to this day is a fair example of the way in which the time of parliament is frittered away.

Keen Sense of Humor.

Since the present speaker was elected, in 1905, after having been chairman of committees and deputy speaker, there have been many evidences that he possesses a keen sense of humor and if he does not laugh in his sleeve, occasionally, at the queer figure which he cuts, it must be because his job is too exciting to give him time to think about it. The word "Gilbertian" positively begs to be used in writing about the solemn farces that so often are enacted in parliament and no description is more fitting for a historic scene in which Lowther sustained, not only the chief, but all the roles. At this time he was chairman of committees, and disorder having broken out when he was unable to quell, he had to report the matter to the speaker. It happened, however, that Speaker Gully was not present and, therefore it was Lowther's duty to take his place as deputy speaker. So he had to stand at the head of the table as chairman of committees, report to himself what had been going on, and then step up into the speaker's place and consider the merits of the case which he had submitted to himself and decide upon it. Lowther emerged from this ordeal more gracefully than a man of less tact and dignity would have done, but if he didn't feel "rather an ass," as they say in England, all the time, he must take himself a lot more seriously than do most of us.

Gladstone once edeclared that no man in England (unless it were Henry Labouchere) would have the courage to suggest doing away with the speaker's wig, but that was a good while ago, and there are a lot of folks today who would not lament the disappearance, not only of the aforesaid wig, but the whole of "Mr. Speaker's" state procession, which includes, besides the "mace-bearer" and other flunkies, a menial whose business it is to hold up the speaker's long train! As for the performance that is gone through with when the speaker is elected, it is funny enough to make a cat laugh.

King Must Approve.

The first thing tha has to be done after the house has chosen its speaker is to have its choice approved by the king. Nominally, that is, for as a matter of fact the king has just as much to say in the matter as you or I and no more. This "gracious approbation" on the part of his majesty is supposed to come through the house of lords, and prior to obtaining it, the speaker-elect, wearing ordinary court dress (i. e. a swallow-tail coat and knee breeches) and sporting a small "bob" wig, seats himself at the table in the house of commons. To him there comes "Black Rod," the official messenger of the lords, who escorts him to the sacred precincts of the upper house, while the sergeant-at-arms, the speaker's chaplain and other functionaries bring up the rear and the guardian policemen cry, "Make way for Mr. Speaker-elect."

So the quaint little procession arrives at the bar of the house of lords, where the lords' commissioners, as representatives of the sovereign, are sitting, robed in scarlet, on a bench in front of the throne. Chief of them is the lord chancellor, to whom the speaker-elect makes a profound obeisance and proceeds to inform him of his election, winding up by saying, "I, therefore, present myself at your lordship's bar and submit myself, with all humility, to his majesty's gracious approbation." Whereupon the lord chancellor, after explaining that it is inTyre. Miss Francis Ansley, Miss not convenient for the king to be present in person and that, therefore, he has turned the approbation job over to the lords commissioners, proceeds to express his majesty's "entire confidence in the talents, diligence and efficiency of the speaker-elect," and much more to the same effect, after which the speaker-elect makes another solemn reverence to the lords commissioners, and the lords commissioners make a series of "reverences" to him. The procession then reforms and flies back to the house of commons, where the now duly elected speaker changes his "bob" or "fatigue" wig for a full-bottomed one and dons his long robe of office, after which he takes his seat in the great canopied speaker's chair, the mace is laid on the table, and "Mr. Speaker" proceeds to announce to the "faithful commons" that the king has graciously approved their choice of a presiding officer. Then prayers are said, for minus the presence of the speaker, the house cannot even pray, let alone transact business.

Many Duties of Speaker.

There is not space here to describe the many duties of "Mr. Speaker," nor would such a description make entertaining reading. More than any other member of the house, except, perhaps, the chief government whip, the present presiding officer has reason to be thankful for the new "11 o'clock rule," which practically put an end to all night sittings, the bane of life in the house of commons. The record sitting in the experience of Mr. Lowther was one during a debate on the agricultural land rating bill, which began at a quarter to 3 o'clock on one afternoon and ended at 5:30 o'clock on the following day, but before the adoption of the new rule it was nothing unusual for a session to last from 2:45 o'clock in the afternoon until 4 or 5 o'clock on the following morning.

Despite his long hours and heavy responsibilities, however, the Right Hon. J. W. Lowther—who is 58, wears a neatly trimmed beard, and is noted as a careful dresser—always looks in the pink of condition, and no doubt this is due to the many forms of exercise in which he indulges. His favorite sport is deer stalking and he would far rather be crawling on all-fours in the rain over a sodden Scotch moor than presiding over the deliberations of the house or acting as host at one of the "full dress dinners," to which his invitation constitutes a command. When last nominated as member of parliament for his district he rode to the ceremony in his hunting pink, and he rarely misses his morning canter in Rotten Row, but it is as a swordsman that he is most famed.

Lowther is said to be one of the most expert masters of the foil in England, and three times a week he has a lively bout with a renowned maitre d'armes. The scene of these encounters is the famous terrace of the house of commons, which is overlooked by Westminster bridge, and it is said that more than once worthy citizens, having seen, to their horror, what looked like a life and death struggle going on in the sacred precincts of the house of commons itself, have hurried off to inform the police at near-by Scotland Yards and got the merry "ha-ha" for their pains. While at Cambridge, too, the speaker showed himself to be no slouch of an amateur actor (appearing under the pseudonym of "Lowther R. Cade," the name of a historic little alley off the Strand which now has disappeared), and was associated in these university productions with Charles H. E. Brookfield, the playwright, wit and author of "Dear Old Charley," who is now to the disgust of the whole world of "high brows," official examiner of plays.

Wife a Society Woman.

Lowther was married, in 1886, to a society woman who is said to make a model hostess. He was first elected to parliament in 1885 as a representative of Penrith, for which Scottish constituency he still sits. To assist him in his decisions he has four little volumes which contain the rulings of all the speakers of the house for the past fifty years, and, so far as one remembers, this is the first time that his impartiality ever has been called in question, even by the turbulent Irish members.

No one can accuse the speaker of a lack of pluck anyway, for more than once, in important crises, he has decided against the powers to whom he owes his continuance in office. In 1905, for example, just after the speaker's election by his conservative friends, A. J. Balfour, as prime minister, decided upon a scheme to redistribute constituencies, a reform which both parties considered to be overdue. He introduced resolutions laying down the lines on which the scheme would be based and proposed that these resolutions should be taken, not separately, but in one debate as a whole. The liberals objected and appealed to the speaker, who ruled, without flinching, against his political friends, declaring that each resolution must be debated by itself. This ruling killed the scheme and hastened Balfour's resignation.

It would be the basest flattery to describe the speaker as a wit, yet he possesses a brand of humor which vastly pleases the house, and often brings all parties out gracefuly from a complicated situation. During the first suffragette disturbances, for instance, it was decided that the ladies' gallery should be closed to all save relations of members, and one day a rather imprudent radical asked the speaker how he would define the word relative.

Lowther rose slowly to his feet, wearing upon his countenance an aspect of immense gravity. "I cannot," said he, "undertake the responsibility of saying in what relation members stand to the ladies whom they introduce into the gallery. That is a subject which I can only leave to the consciences of honorable members themselves."

What Would Happen.

Just what would happen to anybody who had the temerity to refuse one of "Mr. Speaker's" dinner invitations is not known, but it is believed that he would be arrested instanter and imprisoned in the clock tower, as was Charles Bradlaugh, the great free thinker. As for the speaker's right to turn whomsoever he pleases out of his carriage, if must be confessed that this rests on precedent and not upon any recorded judicial or other enactment. The precedent in question was established over 260 years ago by a notoriously aggressive speaker, in the person of Sir Edward Seymour. Sir Edward was driving to the house one day and his carriage broke down near Charing Cross. There were no 'buses nor taxis then, and so Sir Edward directed his attendants to bundle some private party out of his carriage, and the speaker stepped into it. The private party protested, but Mr. Speaker's ruling was, "Sir, it is more proper for ouy to walk in the streets than the speaker of the house of commons." If Sir Edward Seymour had the right to do that in 1672, one supposes that J. W. Lowther has the right to do it today, but the undersigned, for one, would like to be present when he tried to exercise his right.

THREE INQUIRIES INTO BINGHAMTON HORROR

Before the bodies of one-half of the victims of the fire in the Binghamton Clothing company's plant had been removed three investigations into the disaster were under way. Coroner Seymore arranged for the inquest in the grand jury room at the county courthouse. Fire Chief Hoag got word from Deputy State Fire Marshal Roesch that he is coming to Binghamton to represent State Fire Marshal Ahearn and conduct a separate investigation. He wants to know why it took the Binghamton fire department twenty minutes to respond to a fire only half a mile from the central station house. Deputy Factory Inspector Nash, who was the last inspector to pass on the plant of the Binghamton Clothing company, heard from Albany that Acting Labor Commissioner Rogers also will be here to find out how it happened that a building officially inspected by a state deputy not a year ago and unofficially passed on within the last month could burn up in a single puff, as it were. The upper picture shows how completely the factory building was destroyed and how utterly hopeless was the condition of those penned on the upper floor. The lower picture shows Dr. Hal Sears at the left and Dr. N. B. Ross in the center superintending the work of removing the brick in the search for bodies.

Easy to Get Rid of Corns

When you know HOW. But you can't do it by peeling, paring, gouging or picking at them. These barbarous methods are cruelly painful and seriously dangerous, for frequently the corn bleeds and then there is always the possibility of blood poisoning. Furthermore, these methods do not remove the corn completely, for the root usually goes deep into the toe to the bone.

Jacobs' Magic Corn Liquid is a scientific formula from our own laboratory, which we have thoroughly tested and guarantee to be successful with any corn, whether hard or soft, and no matter how stubborn or how deep the growth. It removes the corn completely and positively without pain or danger. The first application instantly stops the corn from hurting you. Use it tonight and end your agony. 20c, by mail 22c.—(Adv.)

UNIFORMS ARE COOL, SAYS CHIEF BEAVERS

Lighter Than That Worn in Any Previous Summer, He Declares.

Chief Beavers says that there is one class of workers in Atlanta who do not suffer from the intense heat of the past several days—members of the police force.

To a Constitution reporter he said yesterday afternoon that the policeman's uniform was probably the coolest garb worn by any professional, and that from his three hundred or more men he had not received a single complaint.

The uniform this season, he stated, is lighter than that worn any previous summer, and, although it looks warm and uncomfortable, is deceivingly light and airy.

This was in comment upon a letter received by The Constitution from Mrs. E. B. Smith. It follows in full:

"The establishment of drinking founts for horses and mules of the city is most humane, indeed, and it is to be hoped that they will be established before the summer is over. Our traffic policemen, however, as well as the patrolmen on regular beats, are suffering this hot weather as severely, or more so, than the dumb beasts on our streets.

"It is true that the policemen can drop into a fount and get cooling draughts. He does not suffer from thirst, but they are dressed in uniforms, buttoned from bottom to top of the high collar, gloved and helmeted and forced to walk the hot and sweltering streets throughout the day, no matter how hot.

"Our traffic men stand in the broiling sun throughout their long hours, encased in heavy uniforms. It is inhuman on the part of police commissioners to demand this uniform, and inhuman on the part of Atlanta to permit it. Uncle Sam has only recently put his mail carriers in regulation uniform which is humane and sensible, the blue shirt waist, trousers and hat. Why can't such sensible uniforms be made the regulation garb for the policemen of Atlanta, the traffic men, at least?

"The straw helmet could, at least, be provided and the discarding of the uniform coat for the blue shirt waist would would not mar his dignified appearance in the least. His authority would not be less and his star would be just as prominent. One thing certain: he would be a better officer, both mentally and physically.

"Let this humane move for the horses and mules of Atlanta extend to 'Atlanta's finest and give them relief this hot weath.

"MRS. E B. SMITH,
"P. O. Box 716, Atlanta."

GOV. COX IS STIRRED BY MULHALL STORY

Dayton, Ohio, July 26.—A denial of any part or the whole of his letter to James A. Emery regarding the alleged "deal" for the site for the Dayton postoffice, was offered by A. C. Marshall, of Dayton, to Governor Cox tonight, according to a statement given out by the governor at his country home near here.

This morning, in Columbus, Governor Cox made public a letter which he had written to Mr. Marshall, calling on him to make a public retraction or correction of the Emery letter, which figured yesterday in the testimony of Martin M. Mulhall, ex-lobbyist for the National Manufacturers' association, before the senate lobby investigating committee.

Mr. Marshall was told that the ottaement would have to be made publicly through the governor's legal representatives in this city.

"The die is cast,' said the governor. "Marshall either will make an entire correction of the letter to Mr. Emery reflecting upon my integrity as a member of congress or I will force him to through the courts."

STORES BEING BURNED IN STRIKE DISTRICT

Calumet, Mich., July 26.—Morgan & Grierson's general store and market was burned tonight at Centennial, two miles from Calumet, and the proprietors assert that the building was set on fire by sympathizers of the 15,000 miners who are on strike, because the proprietors today announced that hereafter no credit business would be done.

A dwelling next to the store also was partly burned. Two companies of troops were dispatched to the scene of the fire.

The fire was the first destruction of property incident to the strike affecting interests not directly connected with the mine managements.

MISS THEO PRIOLEAU NOT SERIOUSLY HURT

W. F. Prioleau, of 70 East Merritts avenue, whose sister, Miss Theo Prioleau, was badly injured Thursday night in an auto accident in Monroe, La., when Victor Smith, son of a wealthy planter, was killed, telegraphed his mother, Mrs. E. L. Prioleau, yesterday that his sister suffered only from a broken leg and was doing well.

Miss Dolly Prioleau, another sister, who was in the car at the time, is reported by her brother as not being injured. Mr. Prioleau left Atlanta immediately upon learning of the accident. The Prioleau girls, who are well known in Atlanta, were visiting friends and relatives in Louisiana and intended returning home within a few days.

These two loads were bought at the top figures of the week by the Atlanta packer. The market has ranged reasonably strong on the better kinds which were scarce. Plain cattle were mo.e plentiful and prices varied, owing to quality and condition. A big per cent of the cattle were grassy and only about half fat, they were therefore mean and undesirable as killers. Prices ranged irregular and lower.

Tennessee lambs continue to come freely.

MORE RAIN FOR TODAY, DECLARES FORECASTER

A heavy rain, during which .51 inch of rain came down, cooled off the atmosphere Saturday afternoon in Atlanta and lowered the thermometer from the maximum of 94 degrees, which it had reached at about 3 o'clock.

The weather during the whole of the past week has rarely exceeded a maximum each day of 84 degrees, and has proven decidedly refreshing after the severe heat of the previous week.

For today the weather forecast announces more rain and a temperature which is expected to duplicate that of Saturday.

Rains in the past week have been general throughout the state, and the farmers report that their late crops are growing as they rarely ever grew before.

M. E. ROGERS HELD UP.

Highwaymen Get $93 by Aid of Two Pistols.

By the aid of a pair of pistols, two highwaymen robbed M. E. Rogers, of 492 East Fair street, a Decatur street saloon keeper, of $93 at 11 o'clock last night at Mozeley and Grant streets.

Rogers was on his way home at the time when the two men leaped from behind a wall at the corner and before he realized what had happened, poked the muzzles of their guns in his face.

"Hands up!" came from the robbers as quickly as did the poking of the guns, and Rogers, taken completely unaware, flung up his hands and was forced to remain helpless while the men searched him.

The robbers found the large sum of money in one pocket and, hastily sought through the other pockets, but in their haste missed $3 which he carried in the watch pocket of his trousers. Rogers made an immediate report of the affair to police station and officers began an investigation.

BUYING CAUSED WHEAT TO RALLY

Black Rust Reports Helped the Bulls and the Market Closed 1-8 to 1-4 Cent Advance—Corn Also Gained.

Chicago July 26—Buying that started with one of the largest houses [?] in the trade lifted wheat today after a show of weakness at the outset. Black rust reports from Minnesota tended to aid the bulls. The market closed steady at a net advance of 1-8 @3-4 to 1-4@3-8. Corn finished with a gain of 1 1-4 to 1 3-8@1 1-2c oats up 3-4 to 1 1-8 and provisions ranging from 2 1-2 off to an upturn of 12 1-2c.

Bearishness in wheat early resulted from weak cables and from reassuring domestic advices concerning the outlook for the spring crop. Purchasing however, soon became general, helped by statements that every bushel of wheat which can be bought in any quarter of the country finds ready sale for eastern shipment at about 3-8c over the September option. Export sales at St Louis and New York counted also against the bears. Black rush talk seemed to make no impression in the wheat pit until the last hour. The fact that Minneapolis quotations appeared to be influenced by fresh developments regarding danger from the fungus was to a considerable extent what held Chicago prices finally at the top level reached. Export clearances of wheat and flour equaled 3[illegible]1,000 bushels. Primary receipts of wheat were 1,816,000 bushels a year ago 1,564,000 bushels.

Failure of expected rains in the southwest brought about active buying of corn. High temperatures in Kansas served also to increase the desire for a material advance in prices. There were extremely bad crop reports from Indiana Illinois and Nebraska.

REVIEW OF THE WEEK IN AMERICAN MARKETS

Cotton.

New Orleans July 26—The cotton market displayed great irregularity in its fluctuations this week chiefly as the result of the liquidation of the July position. The net results of the week's trading were a loss of 48 to 59 points. The high prices were made on Monday and Tuesday and the low prices on Saturday. At the highest the trading months were 24 points over to 8 points under last week's close at the lowest they were 44 to 59 points under. The range was 41 to 83 points.

The main feature of the week was the trading in July. The month was sold heavily by longs who seemed to be either tired of their holdings or afraid of the rumors that leading long interests had quietly liquidated their contracts. Selling spread to August and the new crop months but July bore the brunt to the pressure losing about three quarters of a cent a pound in two sessions. A little hedge selling and a very little short selling accompanied the liquidation. At the end of the week, it was generally considered that no more operations of consequence in the old crop months were possible.

The new crop months were adversely affected by rains that fell over the belt. At the end of the week Texas and Oklahoma still claimed to have sections that needed moisture, but nearly all other states appeared to have received sufficient precipitation for the time being. Very little interest was taken in the pending report on condition by the government although the condition period ended Friday.

In the spot department prices lost seven sixteenths of a cent middling closing at 12 against 12 7-16 last week and 12¼ this week last year. Sales on the spot amounted to 851 bales against 508 last week and 746 this week last year. Sales to arrive amounted to 1,056 bales against 192 last week and 454 this week last year.

Financial.

New York July 26—The action of the week's stock market indicated the maintenance of increased confidence. This was partly due to the further necessities of bearish traders who persisted in putting out fresh lines on advances only to be obliged to buy again as the rise preceded. Buying for foreign account was a feature of the week's events and this had a sentimental effect in strengthening the market.

The declining tendency of discount rates abroad however was arrested. The great central banks especially the Bank of France and the Imperial Bank of Germany continued their policy of up building and conserving gold holdings as though in expectation of further strain. Nevertheless there was appreciable relaxation of the New York money market banks showing more willingness to put out time loans for the shorter periods up to 90 days. In consonance with this there was improvement in the bond market and some notable price recoveries in low grade bonds.

On the other hand there were reminders that difficulties in the enlistment of capital still remain. The announcement of a proposed large issue of New Haven convertible bonds resulted in an abrupt fall in price of the outstanding 6s to the lowest price ever recorded. The stock also receded to about its previous low level. United States government bonds broke into new low ground.

The special troubles which beset the New Haven and the question of treatment of outstanding government bonds in the new currency law had some part in these movements but they were significant also of the general investment situation. The analogy of foreign government bond prices does not encourage a hope of prices at par for United States bonds divested of the circulation privilege even with the interest rate increased from 2 to 3 per cent.

The question of increase of wages to eastern railroad trainmen possesses an interest to security holders beyond the immediate solution of the arbitration problem. That an award will carry some increase is generally expected. There is a belief also that such an outcome might help the contention of the railroads for higher freight rates. Higher charges it is believed would not lessen the volume of traffic. Much of the return would find its way back into increased outlay both for wages and supplies. It is argued also that the improvement of the railroads credit would help the sale of bonds and the pushing of new enterprises with an impulse to a wide variety of industries.

Steel trade advices report a better sentiment [illegible] but [illegible] market a [illegible] among buyers. Orders for pig iron were placed at price concessions. Republic Steel good half year strengthened the promise of United States Steel's showing. Leading producers of copper advanced prices and the strike in the Lake Superior mines was taken as an advantage to the companies not affected.

Possibility of ultimate good to corporations having interests in Mexico was inferred from the new policy [illegible] by the government. Impairment of the corn crop was recognized from the hot wave but enough to destroy hopes of a profitable harvest. The growth of the idle freight car surplus at this time in contrast with last year decreasing tendency marks the divergent course of trade activity this year from last.

Cotton Goods

New York July 26 Cotton goods markets are quiet but general firm. Trading is confined very largely to deliveries in the next few months although some business is being placed in the late fall months and for spring distribution. Fine and fancy cotton goods trading is confined to high novelties. Road salesmen are expecting to book considerable new forward business as the crop harvesting period approaches and the uncertainties in legislation are removed. Stocks continue at a very low point.

The summer vacations of work people are tending to restrict the output and selling agencies report a lack of seasonable accumulation of spot goods. This is doing much to hold prices steady. Prints are quiet in narrow widths. Percales are being sold well for future delivery. Bleached cottons are behind in delivery owing to the pressure for so merchandise. Ginghams are quiet. Duck rules steady and unchanged. Denims are sold ahead for the next two months. Tickings are sold closely till September 15. Jobbers are doing a moderate business and after the retail inventories are completed next week they look for an active inquiry from retailers.

Prices are as follows: Print cloths 28 inch 64x64 3¾ cents 64x60s 3½ 38½ inch 64x64s 5 standard sheetings southern 7¾c tickings 8 oz 13 1-4c denims 9 oz 14c standard staple prints 5¾c standard staple ginghams 6¾ dress ginghams 9 1-4c.

Steel and Iron

New York July 26 The most encouraging features of the steel trade last week were the larger buying of steel bars by the agricultural implement manufacturers heavy specifications for steel pipe and some improvement in railroad equipment orders. Some steel bar orders in the last ten days were close to 120,000 tons. It is understood that buying was stimulated by protecting prices against decline. The rail mills secured orders for 8,000 tons from the Memphis Dallas and Gulf six thousand tons from the Tampa and Northwestern three thousand tons from Cuba and one thousand tons from Lisbon. The Southern Railway orders for 28,000 tons previously noted have been practically consummated. The Baltimore and Ohio ordered 3,000 tons for bridge work.

The Carnegie Steel company established a price of $4 cents per bundle on steel cotton ties for the season. It is estimated that 2,500,000 bundles will be needed for the cotton crop about to be gathered and baled. The American Steel and Wire company met competition on orders for plain wire and wire nails at $1 per ton under its previous asking prices but made no announcement of a change in the base prices as other lines were not affected.

The settlement of the buildings trades strike at Chicago is expected to bring out more orders for fabricated steel in that territory. In other sections there was a moderate volume of business developed by the keen competition among fabricators most of the contracts being for small tonnages. Among the more important orders were 4,300 tons for the Ritz Carlton hotel at Philadelphia 1,475 tons for export to Cuba. Another contract for Panama Pacific exposition buildings [illegible] 00 tons was placed in San Francisco. The largest steel companies are again operating 9[illegible] to 100 per cent of capacity but the output for the current month will be considerably below the June average. The same is true of orders and specifications.

Steel is in more ample supply in the open market but thus far prices are well sustained.

A better sentiment was reported in the pig iron trade but business was spasmodic and prices were irregular. In the Buffalo territory prices dropped close to $13 on some round tonnages although open quotations were not under $13.50 at furnace. In the last ten days [illegible] furnaces have booked orders for about 50,000 tons.

DULL TRADING IN THE STOCKS

American Express Shares Declined 5 Points—Some Railroad Stocks Weak—Bonds Quiet and Steady.

New York July 26—Trading in stocks during today's brief market session was in most essentials, characteristic of the midsummer season. The undertone was irregular, and at first mainly downward, the only striking exceptions being the Hill groups, these stocks responding to favorable crop advices. Lehigh Valley and minor railers and specialties also contributed slightly to the constructive side, while Canadian Pacific, Louisville and Nashville and Soo' were weakest of the standard railway shares. In the special group American Express yielded 5 points and made another new low record.

Operations were altogether professional and of narrow proportions. Generalness was without very direct bearing upon market conditions except for the heaviness of the London market, due it was declared, to fears of an other outpouring of new securities. The outstanding feature of the London market was a decline of practically 4 points in National Railways of Mexico first preferred.

Washington advices again dealt with proposed congressional investigation of the New York Central's refunding project and of a general halt by the interstate commerce commission in freight rate advances.

The general bond market was quiet and steady. United States coupon 3s advanced ½ per cent on call but other issues were from 1 to 2 points lower on the week. Total sales par value $701,000.

Coffee

New York July 26—Trading in the coffee market was quiet with early prices steady on strong European cables and firm primary markets. Wall street supplied the demand and prices eased off closing at a net loss of 2 to 4 points. The cost and freight situation continues strong.

A Recommendation

(From The Boston Transcript)

Still a cabinet job for Boss Murphy would be no more than is due to the man who made Mr Wilson's nomination possible by declining to cast New York's vote for him.

MANY PERSONS FALL; ONLY TWO INJURED

Marietta, Ohio, July 26—Several hundred persons were thrown into a heap and two were seriously injured tonight when the center section of the floor of the Airdome theater collapsed under 1,000 persons and fell 12 feet.

When the floor collapsed the audience was thrown into confusion and for some time it was believed several had been killed and many seriously injured. The audience however, quickly picked itself from the ruins and it was discovered only two were seriously hurt.

A friend of Tom Watson in Georgia, has named a watermelon for him, which shows how Tom is appreciated at home.—Knoxville Journal and Tribune.

Hubbard Bros & Co.

New York, July 26—Liverpool advances were about as due and the prospects of rain in the southwest over Sunday appeared more favorable. Selling followed at the opening further liquidation of July August and pressure on new crops. With slight rallies the market was heavy during the day. Yesterday being the date to which government observations are made the trade expects a decline of from ½ to 1½ below last months figures—81 8. Weather conditions east of the Mississippi have improved and rains in the southwest are expected. Good reports promise a large fall business.

BRYAN'S FINANCES SUBJECT OF GOSSIP

Washington Is Still Talking About Inability of "Commoner" to Live on $1,000 a Month

By John Corrigan, Jr

Washington July 26 —(Special)—Mr Bryan's finances have been the topic of most absorbing interest in congress during the past week

Senator Bristow's resolution asking the president what salary would induce Mr Bryan to abandon the lecture platform and devote his time to the government's business was a telling stroke for the republican opposition

No finer piece of irony sarcasm and biting humor has been injected into the official records of congress in some time In the debate which ensued over the resolution Mr Bristow had his own head cracked but he stood up to the line and took his punishment His repartee involved his accuser Senator Ashurst in confusion for when charged with having sought a $ 500 Panama canal commissionship so that he could spend more half of his time at home Mr Bristow charged Senator Ashurst with having grossly abused the franking privilege

But the Bristow resolution which precipitated a debate in which a good many toes were stepped on is worth reproducing here in full It follows

Whereas from 1789 to 1909 the salary of the secretary of state was $8 500 per annum during which period the office was occupied by Thomas Jefferson and Edmund Randolph and

Whereas from 1789 to 1819 the salary of the secretary of state was $6 000 per annum during which period the office was occupied by such eminent statesmen as John Marshall James Madison James Monroe and John Quincy Adams and

Whereas from 1 93 to 1819 the salary of the secretary of state was $6 000 per annum during which period the office was occupied by such eminent statesmen as Henry Clay Martin Van Buren Daniel Webster John C Calhoun and James Buchanan and

Whereas from 1819 to 1869 the salary of the secretary of state was $8 000 per annum during which period that high office was occupied by such eminent statesmen as W L Marcy Lewis Cass James G Blaine Thomas F Bayard Walter Q Gresham Richard Olney John Sherman and John Hay and Elihu Root and

Whereas during this long period of time no one of these eminent statesmen was compelled to neglect the duties of the office because of the meagerness of the salary and

Whereas during the year 1911 the salary of the secretary of state was increased from $8 000 to $12 000 per annum and

Whereas the Great Commoner now holding that high office Hon W J Bryan has stated to the public press that the salary of $12 000 a month is not sufficient to enable him to live with comfort and that he is compelled by the meagerness of the salary of $12 000 per annum he is compelled to neglect the duties of his office and go upon the lecture platform in order to earn a living and

Whereas there are now pending before the department of state matters of the highest importance to the nation affecting the relations of our country with Mexico Japan England and other foreign countries that demand the most earnest consideration and attention of the secretary of state therefore

Be it resolved That the president be requested if not incompatible with the public interests to advise the senate what would be a proper salary to enable the present secretary of state to live with comfort and enable him to give his time to the discharge of his public duties for which he is now being paid the sum of $12 000 per month and

Be it further resolved That the president be respectfully requested to give this subject his immediate attention as his convenience will permit in order that congress may take immediate steps to relieve the country from the great loss which it suffers by being deprived of the services of the present secretary of state though it is now paying for such services at the rate of $1 000 a month

Mr Bryan's action it may be stated embarrassed his democratic associates of the senate who felt at the moment to defend his course His original mistake was in offering any explanation at all for his conduct and his second was in offering the explanation he did namely that he needed the money to live

It is a matter of common repute that Mr Bryan has made a great deal of money since 1896 He has written and published books he has delivered innumerable lectures for which he received from $ 00 to $1 000 each he has edited The Commoner which is rented to be a money maker

Senator Ollie James of Kentucky in defending Mr Bryan denied the widely circulated report that Mr Bryan has made a fortune of $ 00 000 I am confident he is worth over $200 000 said Mr James The hostile press is trying to destroy Mr Bryan as they have been trying to do for sixteen years and using the incident as a means

Other democrats have not taken so kindly a view of the secretary of state's devotion to the lecture platform especially during the pendency of so many and weighty problems of diplomacy in his department Senator Bryan of Florida announced his dislike of his namesake's course Senator Tillman of South Carolina who formerly had the lecture habit himself said to The Constitution's representative that he had made as much as $25 000 in one year in this way

He added

It is a perfectly legitimate way to make money but I regret to hear of Mr Bryan doing it Just at this time when there is so much important work before his department I would prefer to have him stay in Washington He can't better afford to impoverish himself than I can afford to neglect his official duties

The limitation principle—though I don't know how we founded it believe that Mr Bryan has made a great deal of money since 1896 He has published two or three books I think The Commoner which has a wide circulation and has lectured extensively I love the man so much I hate to see him do anything that will belittle him in the eyes of the people as this certainly will do While his speaking tours will serve a good purpose in that he always preaches true democracy and patriotism and Christian living he can never again appear as a knight errant of democracy

In the senate debate over the Bristow resolution which the democrats refused to pass democratic defenders of Mr Bryan insisted that he had not neglected his duties nor been absent from his office any more than his predecessors They recalled President Taft's addiction to the Pullman car habit Mr Knox's trip to Central America and the tour of South America undertaken by Mr Root when secretary of state

Despite that, democrats secretly lament Mr Bryan's attempt to further capitalize his high official position which pays him $1,000 a month, believing that his course has belittled him and impaired his efficiency

The democratic party has not been hurt The general concensus of opinion is that the better man is in the white house

Senator Ashurst's Petty Graft.

Senator Ashurst was charged on the floor of the senate with having abused the franking privilege Such an attack by one senator on another provoked personality Mr Ashurst was white with heat as he denied the insinuation

Later he was called before the senate committee on audit and control of the contingent expenses of which Senator Bristow is a member and asked to explain

He offered to pay for the messages if the committee thought they were not such official communications as should have been sent at government expense He had wired to fifty five Arizona papers he said at length, pressing for support for the selection of a federal judge for the state He said he assumed this was legitimate as the results of sending these messages was incident to his duty as a senator The committee has reached no conclusion in the matter

The American In the Tropics

See Nature in summer that knows no rest of first walk the central boulevard of lindens and firs that lure the traveler from the north and make a northern forest a sterile desert by comparison Cibot trees and palms arbol de fuego (fire trees) flowers brilliant and bizarre and everlasting white mottled splendor in the eternal springtime of the tropics Butterflies eight inches from wing tip to wing tip Grasshoppers as large as sparrows hawks buzzards kites and the condor dazzled and shining his empire with the sun and the air Coiled in the grass the deadly serpent couched in the forest the jaguar puma and jaguar This is a lost world fermenting A steaming pot of primordial creation gnarled and roasted and bent and twisted a rare and garden wasted since the foundation of the world

Hither comes the giants undismayed regardless American incomparable mind of adaptability and amid reeking shambles and death houses in the midst of despairing fever and despoiling plague to be builds him palaces cools them with snows of the Arctic cleanses Natures stables of Augean sweats fever tramples plague defies lightnings earthquakes volcanoes and devouring tides and builds his Panama canal in the Canal zone more healthful than any city of his native land

Here the tender and delicate American woman adapts herself to climatic conditions in a few years better than the Spanish senoras did in four hundred Three thousand American women fifteen hundred American children and six thousand American men meet here and fraternize and build homes and bring up families as if it happened in Massachusetts or Iowa Society here seems clean and fine mixed with the mud only so far as the sordid is in everything human —Peter MacQueen in National Magazine for July

Reviving Classics In Congress

Now and then there appear in the Congressional Record classic allusions which are somewhat confusing since classical quotations an dillustrations of the Nineteenth Century are not so much in vogue now as in the fifties

After a certain congressman had aired his knowledge of Latin and classical lore there were some rather shy comments in the cloak room on the story of a congressman who had come over to look in upon the floor of the senate and dream of the time when a senatorial desk and a swivel chair were to be given him for his very own

One new congressman was introduced to the senators as a classical scholar and orator who had roamed with Romulus ripped with Euripides soaked with Socrates prated of Plato and soared with Caesar but when asked if he could discuss both sides of the Japanese question or the several items in the new tariff bill the student of ancient and dead languages found his classical lore of little value

At the same time the careers of such members as Henry Cabot Lodge and John Sharp Williams testify to the value of an adequate acquaintance with Greek and Latin in attaining a full command of the English tongue In these prosaic days however the problem for most of us in how to make every penny count The only classical revival I foresee remarked a senator whose taste runs to modern literature and art is through the Greek fruit peddlers and Latin bootblacks who serve today but may be in command tomorrow Perhaps they and their college bred sons will introduce a system of classical politics — Affairs at Washington ' Joe Mitchell Chapple in National Magazine for July

WITH THE MOVIES

Lynch's Theater Opens.

Tomorrow Lynch's theater will open at 98 Whitehall street James T Lynch has taken over the lease of the Old Mill and appointed L L Roberts manager During the past week the house has been thoroughly overhauled and redecorated The new management announces that there will be no vaudeville The program will consist of first run pictures good music and singing Miss Vera Stork violinist and Al Johnson are engaged for the opening week

Harry Bickford Returns

Patrons of the moving picture houses will be glad to learn that Harry Bickford has returned to the Montgomery for a short engagement singing the popular hits of the season Harry has been pulling off stunts in and around New York city for the past four months and will probably introduce many hits here heretofore unsung in these parts The Dixie Tenor in previous engagements has won a host of friends in Atlanta and will no doubt be readily received Monday afternoon

Auriema's singing picked up by three reels of first run pictures and Manager Clark's suave way of handling crowds gave the Montgomery the biggest matinee audiences the house ever played to last week

Prisoner of Zenda Coming

The reproduction in moving pictures of the great dramas of the past decade and the actors who have made them famous has at last become a reality an exhibition at regular film theaters The first of these to be so presented—The Prisoner of Zenda with James K Hackett in the leading role—was enthusiastically received at the regular performances at Marcus Loew's Yorkville theater and his Avenue B theater

The Prisoner of Zenda films were made by the famous Players Film company of which Daniel Frohman is the sponsor The pictures are clear and the story of the exciting drama is unfolded before the eye with all the effectiveness it had in the original production

Mr Frohman has just completed arrangements with Manager Jackson of the Alcazar to show the picture to the movie crowds of Atlanta and Georgia at the Alcazar theater beginning one week from next Tuesday August 5 and running the balance of the week

Lamey and Coombs Popular

Three reels of first run pictures Jack Lamey and Joe Coombs singing and a cool and commodious house continues to attract capacity houses to the Vaudette every day From the day Manager John Evans first planned a theater until the present time his first attention was given to the comfort and convenience of the audience That the Vaudette has been successful and has thousands of friends goes without saying Jack Lamey and Joe Coombs are as popular as ever with the patrons and seem to warrant an endless engagement The coming weeks features include a two reel American entitled The Scapegoat with Warren Kerrigan playing the lead Little Dorritt a two reel film from Dickens story and a broncho war feature A War Time Mother's Sacrifice Late in the week Banzai a Japanese story with scenes laid in Japan and California produced by the Kay Bee company in two reels will be shown

Dignity of Senatorial Visiting

There is something impressive in the way one senator generally calls on another in the office building at Washington A repressive dignity precludes the old time free and easy method of dropping in to see Tom or Jim or Jack—kicking in the door and sitting down on the table or desk and smoking up without invitation Today there is a sedate step measured and regular as the senator sets out to call with a manner and bearing that at once suggest senatorial dignity and courtesy Such a bearing and dignity must perforce take the place of the impressive senatorial toga of the old days and a visiting dramatist (a lady to be sure) has suggested that it would be most fascinating to come to the senate on some holiday and find the distinguished gentlemen who now wear tweed and business suits attired in the Caesarian toga and mantle—a mise en scene that would leave Shakespeare's Julius Caesar at its best presentation hopelessly in the background — Affairs at Washington Joe Mitchell Chapple in National Magazine for July

Decreases in Beef Cattle.

Judson C Welliver Washington correspondent of Farm and Fireside writing an article in the current issue of that publication entitled The Farmer and the Future publishes many interesting facts An extract from his article follows

In six years past there has been a decline of over 30 per cent in the number of cattle in the country At the beginning of 1907 there were by the department estimates 51 566 000 beef cattle in the country while on the same date this year the number was only 36 030 000 Not only this Over half the meat animals are killed under government inspection The number of them thus killed was 18 per cent less in the first three months of 1913 than in the like period of 1912 Here is the statistical dope on it

First three months of 1912 1 753 882 cattle 458 309 calves 10 149 088 hogs 8 640 390 sheep total 16 001 556

A steady decrease right down the line It can't be accounted for on any assumption that the market has been bad for we all know prices and demand have been highly favorable Thus at Chicago the 1912 average price for native steers was $7 90 as against $6 50 in 1911—an increase of over 22 per cent Hogs showed an increase from $6 70 to $7 65 or a little more than 14 per cent

FOREIGN MEATS COMING TO THE UNITED STATES

By John Corrigan, Jr.

Washington July 26 —(Special)—In anticipation of meats and cattle being placed on the free list in the Underwood Simmons tariff bill the department of agriculture has already taken steps to safeguard imports of this country from Argentina and other foreign countries

Dr A D Melvin of the bureau of animal industry has been dispatched to Argentina by Secretary Houston, of the department of agriculture, and will investigate the slaughter houses and methods of packing in that and other South American countries Dr E C Ross has also been ordered from Portland Ore to Australia on the same mission

The department of agriculture has $3 000 000 to enforce the pure food law and safeguard the health of the people from this source of contamination Secretary Houston believes in being forehanded and that precautions now will save much confusion and trouble later He wishes therefore, to instruct foreign shippers as to the pure food laws to insure prompt entry into our ports

Heavy importations of meat products are expected from South America particularly Argentina and from Australia and it is expected that these imports without the payment of duty will have an immediate effect upon the cost of living

At present the beef trust absolutely dictates the price of fresh and cured meats and unless they can also dominate the source of production abroad, some relief to the hard pressed consumer should follow the adoption of the democratic tariff bill

Of course if the packers can handle all the imports from abroad as is feared by some the decrease in price may not result and only the packers will benefit from the new source of supply They are already increasing their facilities for handling these imports

The department hopes to encourage competition and the building of independent abattoirs in this country But immediately the difficulty is met that there are not sufficient cattle ships plying between this country and Argentina or Australia and only the beef trust has sufficient resources to provide such ships Here is where the public is in danger of being hamstrung Meat products must be refrigerated and vessels engaged in this trade must be specially constructed In the present state of trade they will return empty as our export trade with those countries is not largt

It is possible the advocates of a merchant marine may again press for mail subventions to such ships to encourage regular sailings

Beef production in this country has not kept pace with the increase in population That is admitted Americans are now rivalling the British as beef eaters and the demand for beef cattle has far exceeded the supply For the past six years there has been a decrease in the number of beef cattle in this country Southern farmers have been held partly to blame for this since the department of agriculture charges that they have sold for beef cattle that which should have been kept for breeding purposes

Dr Melvin on Situation

The home demand for meat has been increasing with the population We have 29 000 000 more people to feed than we had twenty years ago The bureau of animal industry recently estimated the meat consumption to be 182 pounds per capital annually of which beef constitutes 80 pounds and veal 7½ pounds This is about 20 pounds greater than the British consumption per capita, and approximately 40 pounds more than in France and Germany

Until the farmers of the south begin to live at home by raising their own beef supplies in a systematic and intelligent way it is said no relief can be expected In Georgia Alabama and Tennessee especially where there is fine grazing land and an abundance of water it is said beef production can be successfully carried on now that the cattle tick menace has been practically eliminated

This increase of production is expected to be the safest and most dependable means of reducing the cost of living to the individual farmer as well as increasing his profits since beef production can be easily carried on as a side issue A score of head of beef cattle and a dozen hogs will not test the resources of any two horse farmer

MOTHER KIDNAPS ADOPTED CHILD

Robert Dyer's Widow Caught After Driving Off With the Child She Gave Up Eight Years Ago.

Tallapoosa, Ga., July 26 —(Special) The widow of the late Robert Dyer residing a few miles from this city kidnaped her own child near Heflin Ala., yesterday

Some years ago the father of the child died and the mother gave the baby to Mrs. Roy Starr, an aunt of the child It was about 2 years old then and is about 10 now Recently the mother married again and yesterday decided to go to the Starr home and get the child having tried before to persuade the woman who adopted it to give it up

Yesterday she went to Heflin, secured a team and driver and went out to the home, ostensibly on a friendly visit She remained there for some time and when the men all left the house the mother coerced the child into the yard and near the buggy When she had it well out of every one's sight she grabbed it jumped into the buggy and hurriedly drove away

Mrs. Starr soon discovered what had happened and telephoned to Heflin and the woman and child were taken in charge Habeas corpus has been instituted and the case will be heard in Heflin next Wednesday

FOR INTERVENTION IN MEXIC AFFAIRS

Senator Fall Makes Vigorous Plea—Many Americans Killed and Their Property Destroyed

By John Corrigan, Jr.

Washington July 27—(Special)—Recognition of the Huerta government by the United States would be a serious even a fatal blunder according to Senator Albert B Fall republican of New Mexico Mr Fall was a member of the investigating committee of the United States senate which conducted the inquiry into Mexican affairs under the Nelson resolution and is considered an authority on Mexican affairs

He would like to see President Wilson serve notice on the various Mexican leaders that this government will hold each of them personally responsible for damage to life limb or property of Americans in the territory in which they are exercising control

Since the Madero revolution began he says that more than 120 Americans have lost their lives and $1 000 000 of property belonging to citizens of this country has been destroyed Recognition of the various Mexican revolutionary leaders to the extent of holding them personally responsible for the acts of destruction of their followers would eventually force the United States to take a hand to enforce its demands Senator Fall expects that course will be necessary

"It would be idle and foolish to make the demand unless we are prepared to back it up he said These Mexican leaders would get the idea that we are afraid Many of them already refer to us just as the Spaniards did as American pigs It would be useless—worse than useless it would be criminal—not to carry out the threat if it was made

Mexico and Japan

The Mexicans think we are afraid of Japan and that if we become involved in a difficulty with Mexico the Japan would land on our backs I do not mean to intimate that I think Japan would listen to any talk of an alliance with Mexico The reports that said Japan had been in communication with Mexico itself is unfounded I do think if Japan had an desire to strike at the United States she would seek a lodgment for her troops in Mexico rather than attack our Pacific coast and would try to effect an alliance with the Huerta government whom she has already recognized She would thus obtain a base of operations on Magdalena bay or Salina Cruz She would have access by railroad with the Isthmus of Tehuantepec and be within easy striking distance of the Panama canal Personally I anticipate no trouble with Japan

Senator Fall emphasized the impossibility of the Mexicans themselves working out a solution of their problems He said there were not two factions contending for control but twenty separate and distinct rival movements

Referring to Senator Bacon's speech declaring that the white men of Mexico, the men of education and wealth who form 20 per cent of the population, could put 500 000 men in the field and restore peace Senator Fall said "It does not seem to have dawned on Mr Bacon that there is as much division of sentiment among these 500 000 as there was between the north and the south at the outbreak of the civil war That same reasoning might have dictated a note to Armenia to rise and repulse the Turks at the time we sent our ships of war to Turkey to prevent massacres

Attitude of the Mexicans

"When you ask the average Mexican why he does not take up arms and restore order he replies That is the government's business That only explains their point of view Not a single Mexican patriot in this whole distance has volunteered to contribute a dollar to restore stable government even to the extent of subscribing for the bonds of his government Revolutionists have in one instance offered to raise a regiment of 600 men to defend Madero against the Orozco revolution but he never contributed a dollar or fought a soldier Thomas Braniff his brother is also a wealthy man and if it be known he had $3 000 000 to put himself president but has never contributed a dollar to restore peace The view has been expressed that further intervention or interposition by the government in Mexico would mean a long drawn out war costing many lives and much money In my judgment no more than 20 000 American soldiers would be necessary to restore absolute order and maintain peace A just judgment is based upon an intimate acquaintance with the Mexican people and conditions With that many well disposed in the country I could insure a quiet election and the installation and protection of a stable government in Mexico

Would Welcome Intervention

The great majority of workingmen in Mexico would welcome immediate intervention by both American people of property which they have acquired during the Madero administration Many of the leaders who have sworn to annihilate the Americans will flee at the first sound of the American bugle and the restoration of law and order will follow

Reports of conditions in Mexico are based upon the reports of consuls who are stationed there Consul Shanklin at Puebla reported that intervention or protection should be delayed as long as possible with the object of compelling the Mexican people to pay for acquiring Mexican properties The United States after performing this task should withdraw its soldiers and civilians and turn the country over to the Mexican government absolutely and look to it for compliance of payment in full of all just and rightful claims for damages to Americans and others as well as for expenses of the military and naval forces of the United States by occupation of Mexican territory

A Familiar Metaphor

(From The Washington Star)

Once upon a time said the little boned lady who tells fairy stories there was a terrible lion who ate everything and everybody in sight Children don't talk about the lion," interrupted the boy who reads current politics This is a figurative story

The average clergyman knows more about a surplice than he does about a sermon.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

ELLEN GLASGOW

Whose new novel Virginia is published this spring by Doubleday Page & Co

In a recent interview Ellen Glasgow whose latest novel Virginia published by Doubleday Page & Co, declared that she could not under any circumstances turn out more than one book in every two years

My last book she said was begun the day after the predecessor was finished but now I must rest Indeed I must go rather slowly about writing I cannot write more than one book in two years That is not very many—I cannot understand how anyone can finish and publish two books a year regularly It seems that one ought to give more of oneself to a book than that For my own work I should like to write each novel and keep it ten years before I publish it But my friends tell me of course that is impossible You change so much in ten years—all would be different You would be obliged to write it all over again I suppose that is true

When asked more directly about Virginia her latest book Miss Glasgow said

All of my novels have been cast in the south In this last book of mine two or three chapters are set in New York city My idea was to tell the life story of a woman in the transition period—the book begins in 1884 in the south The years since then have been the period of transition—the human has come in that time from the old to the new

A book should never serve any purpose but the telling of life as it is—being faithfully realistic

And realism is only the truth of life told and is the writer's true business Hawthorne was strongly realistic He did not try to be pleasing or pleasant He wrote things as he saw them

April Panhasard By Muriel Hine Author of Half in Earnest The heroine of this story whose husband had developed into a dipsomaniac is forced to leave him and tries to hide her identity under the name of April Panhasard the titles of three novels picked up at a railway station bookstall Young April Peter Pan and The Hazard of the Die But a quiet village is not sufficient to hide a sweet and charming woman and many suitors appear and how she manages not to disclose her identity to them is what the story is about (Publishers John Lane company New York City)

A Prisoner in Fairyland By Algernon Blackwood The Boston Transcript once characterized the author of this book A Prisoner in Fairyland is as charming a story as any Mr Blackwood has ever written as rich in beauty of imagery and as significant in its symbolism and more than once has the title an artistic realist of the unseen world been applied to him (Publishers The MacMillan company New York)

Delgarmo's Wife By David Graham Phillips This volume contains three very interesting stories First Delgarmo's Wife is a story of a happy contented family and shows what a clever wife can do by being tactful loving and sensible A real story about real people

Enid A story of a young married couple who had decided they did not love each other but was willing to make the best of it and by so doing find that they really are very much in love with each other

White Roses and Red May and December A young girl's love for a man of forty five (Publishers D Appleton & Co New York)

Aunt Olive in Bohemia By Leslie Moore Aunt Olive in some way becomes mixed up with the romantic love affairs of a lot of lovable Bohemians and is in the end the arbiter of their destinies Just the book for a summer day Publishers George H Doran company New York)

The What-Shall-I-Do Girl. By Isabel Woodman Waitt The north and the south in fact the whole world is full of girls fresh from public schools and colleges who are not rich enough to fill their lives with pleasures only and yet not poor enough to know in what channel they can realize their best efforts without the right guidance and women of today through our personal association of our best men and women of today through our friends or through the many helpful books now being given to us from the same source Such helpful suggestion will be found in this volume from the pen of one of our popular woman writers

To quote from the first chapter Every year since I can remember father and I have made our resolutions for the new year as we watched the old fade into the past But he will never watch with me again I realized it fully for the first time sitting there thinking—thinking alone There was a troublesome problem on my mind It was myself What should I do with myself? What could I do with myself? How could I better make me take charge of myself? In the words how could I find myself?

I seem was in winds their trackless way

In some time His good time I shall arrive

He guides me and the bird

Phagan Trial Will Be Great Legal Battle

By VERNON STILES.

One of the most spectacular battles in the legal history of Georgia is expected to open up tomorrow morning when the case of the State versus Leo M. Frank for murder is formally begun and the superintendent of the National Pencil factory goes on trial for the murder of little Mary Phagan, an employee whose dead and bruised body was found in the factory basement by police officers one bright Sunday morning in April.

Since that Sunday morning when The Constitution's exclusive extra appeared upon the streets, telling the simple story of the crime and of how Newt Lee, a negro night watchman, had called police headquarters at 3:15 o'clock that morning and informed the officers that he had found a dead body in the basement, Atlanta people and those from many other sections have been talking of almost nothing else.

Every bit of news, from the arrest of Lee, who is yet held, having been bound over, but never indicted by the grand jury, to the arrest of J. M. Gantt and of Arthur Mullinax, of Frank and finally of the negro sweeper, James Conley, has been seized upon with avidity.

The horror of the crime upon the little girl seemed to have impressed itself upon the people at large almost as strongly as it did upon those few who went to the basement that morning and saw the body as it lay there.

Various developments—the freeing of Gantt and Mullinax, the alleged confession of Conley to aiding Frank in disposing of the body, and the various other sensational affidavits which have been made public—have been eagerly seized upon by the public.

Great Legal Battle Over Frank.

Leo Frank is the only man at present under indictment for the crime, and while the various sides of the case have developed, some of the shrewdest lawyers in the country have been planning on one side his conviction and death on the gallows, while on the other side, his acquittal has been as industriously planned.

Leo Frank was arrested a few days after the crime, and, realizing the seriousness of the charge, he sought legal advice at once. His friends and relatives are persons of wealth and influence and legal talent of the highest order in the state has been employed to defend him from the hideous charge.

Luther Z. Rosser was first called and later Herbert Haas, a younger lawyer and one of less experience, but of much legal ability, was selected to aid in the defense. Not satisfied, these men sought out the legal advice of another lawyer who is noted throughout the state for success in criminal cases, and Reuben Arnold joined forces with the defense.

Attorney Rosser, despite his legal reputation, has "hobbies," like any other human. Hobby No. 1, which the "lino man" would spell with "caps" if he knew the Redoubtable Rosser, is a hatred of having his picture taken. He loves a camera like a bull does a red flag.

"Oh, I just hate pictures; never have 'em taken," he told The Constitution reporter who ventured to ask him to pose.

Hobby No. 2 pertains to a hatred of cravats, which nearly vies with that of pictures, and the other is a cane, black cane, that is as much a part of Mr. Rosser as is his legal ability and his dogged pertinacity in fighting a case.

The Constitution photographer, however, "snapped" one of Mr. Rosser when he was an "angel unaware," and it might be mentioned that it was a good thing for the photographer that Mr. Rosser was "unawaring" at the time, for a story is going the rounds of how he chased out of his office with that cane of his a photographer and another paper who stuck his head in the door and poked the machine at him.

Than Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold no men in Georgia are better known for successful criminal practice, except possibly John W. Moore, who with his partner, J. A. Branch, successfully defended Mrs. Daisy Lee on the charge of shooting her husband, Eugene Grace, and later Mrs. Leslie Appelbaum on the charge of murdering J. A. Appelbaum, her husband.

Since counsel was employed for Frank a persistent rumor has gone the rounds that John Moore was one of Frank's counsel. The rumor has been as persistently denied both by Mr. Moore and by the acknowledged counsel and the former has taken no public part in the case.

However, it is known to several that Mr. Moore was called from his law office to that of Mr. Rosser, when attorneys Rosser and Arnold were preparing a statement in which they criticized the attitude taken by Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey in relation to the proposed indictment of the negro Conley, and it is generally understood that Mr. Moore has given them the benefit of his wonderful knowledge of criminal law many points to the defense.

Dorsey Heads State's Side.

On the side of the state, Solicitor General Dorsey is the principal counsel and has worked on the case from the time that Leo Frank and Newt Lee were bound over by the coroner's jury.

As solicitor general of the Fulton superior court, Mr. Dorsey has had a world of experience in criminal cases and before that time he had made an enviable reputation for himself.

He will aid him in gathering together the evidence desired from the mass of detail, and presenting it to the court, he has two men to assist him. Reuben Arnold are his assistant. E. A. Stephens, who has worked with him from the first, and Attorney Frank A. Hooper, a man who holds as high a reputation as any in Georgia for success in legal practice.

The case will be called tomorrow morning and at that time the mooted question of its postponement will be taken up. During the past week much has been said of the possibilities of a continued postponement. Solicitor Dorsey has declared vigorously that he wished the case to begin on the date set. Attorneys for Frank have made no definite statement, except Mr. Arnold, who declared that to try such a long case in the heated weather would be a terrific strain on all concerned. Judge Roan stated last week that if Monday proved as hot a day as was the Saturday a week ago when the heat wave reached its highwater mark that he would be willing to postpone the case. The matter will be taken up in open court Monday.

Legal Giants to Meet in Court.

That a brilliant legal battle will be fought when the case opens is common knowledge to all who know the lawyers in the case, and tomorrow out of the many who seek to get a place in the courtroom there will be as many drawn by the desire to watch the way in which the counsel will handle the case as there will be those drawn by the innate morbidness in human nature which loves to watch the excruciating trial of a man whose life hangs in the balance.

The trial to decide Frank's life is due to be held on the first floor of the old city hall building where, pending the completion of the new courthouse, a civil branch of the superior court sits. Ordinarily criminal cases are tried before Judge Roan on the fourth floor of the Thrower building, temporarily used by several branches of the court, but owing to the low ceilings and to the lack of proper ventilation in this room, Judge Roan has announced that the place of trial will be changed.

A trial is necessarily a public affair, in order that decency and fairness may be guaranteed, and only in cases where public decency demands it are any persons excluded from the courtroom. Theoretically, everyone is entitled to attend the Frank trial, but on Monday morning it is expected that more people will be gathered outside the doors than can enter the rather small room where the trial will be held.

Arrangements have been made by Deputy Sheriff Plennie Miner and his corps of assistants to allow the entry of those directly interested in the case, including the judge, the veniremen, lawyers, the principal and certain members of his family and the prosecutors and newspaper men actively engaged in reporting the case.

Great Crowd Expected.

Seats have been prepared inside the railing around the judge's desk for all of the above with the exception of the veniremen and none of the spectators will be allowed inside this railing. In the other part of the room are ranged benches and the crowd will be allowed to file in until these seats are taken. Then, on account of the heated term of the year and the desire to keep the air as pure as possible and not to cause disorder by too large a throng, the others will have to be excluded.

Inside the rail will be seated the lawyers and newspaper men and Leo Frank and his close relatives. Mrs. Ray Frank, his mother, who has come all the way from her Brooklyn home to be with him, is expected to be at his side. His wife, too, who has daily visited him in the tower, will be with him during the trial.

When Leo Frank is brought to court it will be the first time that he has left the tower since May 8, when he was bound over by the coroner's jury, and it will be the first time that probably three-fourths of the spectators who have read of his case will have ever seen him.

To many who will consider themselves fortunate as on one day or the other they secure a seat in the courtroom to hear the trial, there will be many of the points of law governing the case that will be clouded and obscure.

Almost every piece of machinery has its hidden cogs and wheels which are never seen by the visitor who is taken through the factory and which would lie unknown to the careless spectator who views the product manufactured, and so it is with a trial in law.

The wheels of justice grind openly and plainly apparently, but there are many fine parts that the lay mind does not understand and only the experts—the lawyers skilled in the study of law—know of these points.

Some Legal Points.

The fact that Frank is under indictment today means to many minds that he is therefore guilty, and even those of education and high intelligence sometimes give this meaning to an indictment. In the eye of the law, Frank is an innocent man, as innocent as is the soul of little Mary Phagan, and before the law he will remain so until a jury of twelve men shall have heard all the evidence presented and then agreed unanimously that he is guilty.

The indictment of a man is merely the state's formal charge against him, and means that there is sufficient ground to suspect him of the guilt. A man is indicted by a body composed of from 18 to 23 of his fellow citizens, known as the grand jury, and who are chosen from the men who compose the veniremen for the trial juries. They are theoretically of a higher class of citizenship than the men who are on the trial juries.

A grand jury hearing is ex parte, that is, only one side is heard. When Solicitor Dorsey presented to the grand jury a bill of indictment against Frank, who had been bound over after an investigation by the coroner's jury, Frank had no chance to defend himself.

The question at issue was not whether or not he was guilty, but whether or not there was sufficient reason to suspect his guilt and to cause him to go to trial for the crime the coroner's jury had charged to him.

Had the state, through its solicitor, not been able to bring enough evidence to show that there was reason to suspect Frank, the jury would have returned a "no" bill and the matter would have presumably ended. However, at any other time that grand jury or a succeeding one might have reopened the case and either indicted or found a "no" bill.

Detectives Appear As Prosecutors

Frank was indicted and Detectives Pat Campbell and John Starnes appear on the indictment as the prosecutors. In Georgia anyone may prosecute anyone for any crime and in criminal cases, unless some other person comes forward as formal prosecutor, it is customary to appoint one or more of the officers who have worked on the case as the prosecutor or prosecutors.

The indictment formally presented to the court contains the specific charge against the man indicted, giving in detail the state, county and city in which the crime was alleged to have been committed, the date and the name of the person injured.

It bears the signature of the solicitor and of the prosecutors and of the witnesses who appeared before the grand jury to secure the indictment. It also bears the names of the grand jurors who returned the bill and when court convenes the counsel for the defendants enter upon it in writing the plea of the defendant.

Should the plea be "guilty," the judge will, after such investigation as he deems proper, impose sentence. In Frank's case the plea will be "not guilty," and in this case the finding of the grand jury and the plea of the defendant constitute the issue to be tried.

As a usual rule all of the witnesses to be used and the veniremen from whom the trial jury is to be drawn have been summoned to court by subpoenas and the first move after the formal presentation by the solicitor of the bill of indictment and the plea of not guilty on the part of Frank will be for the solicitor to swear all of the witnesses in the case.

Swearing In Witnesses.

"All witnesses in this case will please rise and be sworn," Solicitor Dorsey will announce and in stentorian tones Deputy Plennie Miner will repeat the order.

When the witnesses have arisen they will be asked to raise their right hands and swear to "tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth in the case of the state against Leo M. Frank."

In all important cases it is usual for both sides to desire that all witnesses be "put under the rule," which is a legal term meaning that they must be excluded from the courtroom until such time as they shall be needed to testify.

In the trial of Mrs. Appelbaum for the murder of her husband, Jerry A. Appelbaum, her young son, Claude Henderson, who was used as a witness, was not allowed to remain in court with his mother until he had been put upon the stand and had completed his testimony regarding the relationship between his mother and stepfather.

Following the swearing in of the witnesses, Clerk John H. Jones will call the names of the twelve men on the first jury panel. The names of the men from whom a trial jury of twelve is expected to be selected were drawn out last week by Judge J. T. Pendleton from among the names of 6,000 others. These men who constitute the ones from whom petit or trial juries are selected are chosen every two years from the voting population by commissioners appointed by a superior court judge. They are supposed to be the 6,000 highest class of citizens among the registered voters.

When the names of those expected to try Frank were picked out last week Judge Pendleton drew the names from the jury box, selecting by chance the names of 144 men and from these selecting in the same way 48 men who are divided into panels of twelve each. The panels, in the order in which the names were drawn out, were numbered first, second, third and fourth panels respectively, and it will be the names of the men constituting the first panel that Deputy Jones will call.

Selecting a Jury.

All of the 144 will have been served with subpoenas and unless prevented by providential action will be in court. The twelve men on the first panel will be requested to step into the jury box and be sworn.

Solicitor Dorsey will then administer the oath to each one by which they will swear to answer truthfully all questions pertaining to their fitness to try the case at issue.

The solicitor next questions each one to determine whether or not he is legally qualified to serve.

Should a venireman, as he is called, show by his answer to one of the questions that he is not legally fit to serve, his name is struck from the list and the solicitor states to the court: "Off for cause, your honor."

On the other hand, should he show by his answers that there is no legal reason why he should not serve, the solicitor states: "He is competent, your honor."

At this point begins the selection of the jury. When a venireman has shown by his sworn answers that he is qualified the real fight begins.

Theoretically the first twelve men whose names are drawn out would give Leo Frank a fair trial, but in a spirit of fairness the law gives both Frank and the state some leeway in the selection of the twelve men, "tried and true," who are to pass upon the question of his guilt or innocence.

In all felony cases in Georgia the defense may arbitrarily "strike" from the list 20 names and the state may in the same manner strike half that number.

Giving Defendant a Chance.

It may be that a man has been drawn upon that particular panel who bears an ancient grudge against Leo Frank. The cause of that grudge may have not been Frank's fault in any sense, and he may have the utmost confidence in the individual's integrity, but still the law recognizes that it would not be fair for that man to try Frank for a serious offense.

Frank may not be able to prove that to the court and the law provides for that. The man's name may be arbitrarily stricken off the list and he is then excused.

The same thing may be true regarding the relation of the potential juror with the state's side of the case, and in that case the solicitor would strike off the name arbitrarily and without giving a cause.

While each side may strike, the state is given the first chance to pass upon a possible juror and after the solicitor has declared a venireman competent to serve on the jury, he and his assistants consult among themselves as to the advisability of choosing him. While this is going on the defense is also at the same task, so that if the state accepts the man as a juror, they will know what to do with him.

Should the man prove acceptable to the state, the solicitor utters the formal: "Juror, look on prisoner; prisoner, look on juror."

Then the defense indicates its decision in regard to him and should he prove acceptable to the defendant the leading counsel says: "You may be sworn."

In this case the juror passes into the juryroom where he waits until twelve men are selected and then all return to be formally sworn in.

Picking Jury a Fine Art.

It is in their ability to pick jurors that many lawyers have laid the basis for their legal success. In many of the large law offices of Atlanta men are employed who do nothing but aid the attorneys in selecting juries.

Some of these men are lawyers who have become so noted for this that they are more valuable in that way than in any other, and others are men who have never practiced law, but who come from walks of life where they have a wide acquaintance, and who have in addition to this made a study of the characteristics of various men.

The list of 144 men chosen by Judge Pendleton is not kept secret and before the case is opened the lawyers for both sides will have in their possession many facts as to the individual characteristics of each. The past history of these men will also be known and also their records in the past when serving upon juries.

Sometimes past knowledge of a venireman is not always complete and again it fails to aid the side which has it in possession. There is a story going the rounds of the Atlanta bar of a certain lawyer who in representing the defense was much gratified to note that the state had accepted as a juryman a contractor who the year previous had built a house for him.

The relations between the contractor and the lawyer for the defense had been most pleasant and the lawyer was happy in the thought that this man would certainly listen favorably to him instead of to the other side. It was that same man who hung out for a conviction for twelve hours and caused the case to end in a mistrial.

"It will take at least two days to pick the jury," Reuben Arnold declared in open court when Frank's trial was postponed from June 30 to July 28, and it is known that both sides have made extensive preparations for this important task and will devote much time and thought to it.

When the entire 144 men have been called into the box, twelve at a time, and twelve men have not been chosen, other names may be drawn similarly from the jury box or the judge may order the sheriff to go out on the streets and gather in as many citizens as may be necessary to select from. These are known as talesmen, and must show that they are qualified as the others have done before they can be named as jurymen.

State Will Open Trial.

The state, which is always the plaintiff in criminal cases, will then open the trial, either by the solicitor giving a short outline of the case before the court, or by the introduction of the first witness.

In case a postponement is asked by either side it may be given on a "legal showing," which is decided upon by the judge. The absence of a material witness, when he or she is shown to be material; the illness of leading counsel, or any cause which seems sufficient in the mind of the trial judge may constitute a "legal showing." This necessarily comes before the choosing of a jury.

The state as the case goes on will introduce its witnesses and evidence one at a time. The solicitor may ask no "leading" questions of the state's witnesses, as the lawyers for the defense may ask none of the witnesses they may introduce.

By "leading" questions is meant such questions as would suggest to the mind of the witness the answer desired. On the other hand, when the other side is cross-examining the witness, the lawyer may ask any questions he deems fit, provided they are pertinent.

After the state has introduced all the witnesses it desires to and has submitted what it desires in the form of evidence that has been allowed, the state "closes," and the defense proceeds to bring forth its evidence and testimony in practically the same manner. Sometimes the defendant opens for the defense by giving his statement or version of the affair.

The defendant may give any or no statement, or as long or as short as he may desire, provided he sticks to matters that are adjudged pertinent to the case. He makes his statement not under oath and neither counsel for or against him may ask him a question or lead him unless he gives his consent to be cross-examined by the state, in which case the state's attorneys may ask him whatsoever they will and he may answer what questions he sees fit to reply to.

The law says: "The defendant has the right to make to the court and jury such statement as he may deem proper in defense; it should not be under oath and shall have only such weight as the jury may see proper to give it. The jury may believe it in whole or in part; they may believe it in preference to the sworn testimony in the case."

A defendant in a felony case usually makes a statement, but it is exceedingly rare that he allows himself to be cross-examined.

Another feature of the case that lies with the defendant is the question of his character. Should Frank be openly known to be of the vilest character on record, no matter pertaining to this could be mentioned by the state, unless he first, either by testimony or evidence or by his own statement, put his character in issue.

What Will Frank Do?

Should he put his character in issue he then lets down the bars and the state may attack it.

Should Frank do this and despite the attacks that the state might see fit to make, prove an unblemished reputation, this would not necessarily mean his acquittal.

The law, as explained by a leading Atlanta attorney, means by not allowing the prosecution to put character in evidence that a man is to be tried for one particular thing at a time, and also by not allowing good character of previous record to make an acquittal, means that same thing.

It is too easy to get some one to swear something to a man's hurt and it is not in one case in a thousand that a defendant voluntarily puts his character in issue, no matter how pure and unblemished a reputation he may have.

While Leo Frank apparently has no cause to fear putting his character at issue, it is believed that there is not one chance in a hundred that he will do so.

NEITHER "BANKRUPT" NOR "CARPETBAG!"

The darkest hours in the history of Georgia were passed under the reign of the carpet-bagger. The era was one of a riot of mismanagement, an orgy of extravagance, a nightmare of treasury looting the suppression of the statesman, the supremacy of the freebooter.

Papers of national reputation printed far away from Georgia are asking wherein our government—in view of its systematic pilfering from the state's country school teachers—has established any higher standard.

The Houston (Texas) Post, in another column, lists Georgia among the southern states whose finances are hopelessly tangled. It cites the unpaid school teachers. It intimates that the cause is the death of statesmanship in Georgia, as in other southern commonwealths. And it is the comment of The Post that leads The Topeka (Kan.) Capital to ask if our government is an improvement over the carpet-bag governments.

The Fort Worth Record, edited by Clarence Ousley, a former Georgian, wants to know if Georgia is "BANKRUPT." The arraignment is justified by the seeming facts. As The Constitution has shown, the one potential asset of the state road could cancel all Georgia's debts and leave a margin of millions. It never will be sold, but it is there just the same, a tangible asset and an index to Georgia's wealth and superiority in assets over other states. No state in the Union is in a better financial condition than Georgia. That is the shame of the situation.

But the uninformed outsider does not know these facts. He is ignorant of the state road. He is ignorant of the wretched and dishonest tax system of Georgia. He sees only that first and inevitable sign of distress—

REFUSAL TO PAY HONEST DEBTS!

And he is forced to the logical conclusion.

Our Kansas contemporary sees the same spectacle. It knows that repudiation of debts and inability to muster finances—

WAS THE DOMINANT CHARACTERISTIC OF CARPET-BAG GOVERNMENT.

He also draws the logical conclusion.

So it goes forth to the nation, on evidence which we would waste our breath in denying, that Georgia is BANKRUPT!

We in Georgia know these charges to be false. We know the country school teachers' scandal was born in only providing for their pay a year after the system was created. We know that the system has been in effect for forty-four years. We know that eventually the teachers are paid. We know, too, that before they are paid, they frequently shylock their scrip at from eight to twenty-five per cent.

We know in Georgia that the state is good for every cent of its indebtedness and that, if tax-dodging were stopped and EQUALIZATION made effective this specter of bankruptcy would melt away into the ghost that it is. We know that increasing appropriations every year are but the evidences of healthy growth. We know, too, that they operate to pile up a deficit because the tax system is so loosely constructed that it fails to catch the revenues which should meet expenditure.

This soothing self-knowledge doesn't do us a bit of good in the eyes of the world. We are placarded with the brand of the bankrupt and of the odium of the carpet-bagger, and WE CUT THE GROUND FROM UNDER OUR OWN FEET IN REBUTTAL.

Can any legislator, any Georgian, rest content under this indictment? Can they be content, when they know that, in addition to this libel, which is hard enough to bear, we are stultifying honor by withholding pay from the country school teachers; and that we are gradually forcing the educational and eleemosynary institutions that spell the life or death of Georgia's future and reputation into starvation?

There is as much statesmanship in Georgia as there ever was. The present legislature is as able to solve these basic problems as any one of its predecessors since the civil war. THE MANTLE OF THE MEN WHO WRESTED THE STATE FROM THE CARPET-BAGGER HAS FALLEN ON THEIR SONS AND GRANDSONS. In the veins of our people and of our legislators is the blood of the sixties and the seventies and the eighties.

It is incumbent upon the sons and grandsons of these great sires to redeem the state from the contemptuous scoff of "carpet-baggism"; from the plausible sneer of "bankruptcy"; from its own consciousness of dishonor and repudiation.

There can be no partisanship in honor. And the honor of a people and the honor of a commonwealth are at stake!

A SABLE BANQUO'S GHOST.

President Wilson has nominated a negro politician as register of the national treasury. In this capacity he must deal with many white men and women as subordinates and with the public generally as an official.

Of latter years the principal complaint of the south against the republican party has been based upon the identical practice now sanctioned by a democratic president. What is left today of the democratic solidarity of the south is largely explainable upon that ground. We do not pass upon the ethics of the matter. We are content to rest with the facts.

Is it not, therefore, dangerous, at least from a party standpoint, that a democratic administration should conjure this old and troublesome issue? With what grace can the south protest in the futuro against negro officeholders foisted upon it by republican administrations when the republicans can answer with the precedent approved by a democratic administration? With what consistency can the south justify its political solidarity when its own party trenches upon the very crux of that solidarity?

Is there not some way to handle the unavoidable question of negro patronage without creating an Ethiop Banquo's ghost that will inevitably rise up to haunt us?

THE FRUIT OF THE SYSTEM.

Is the legislature going to automatically deprive itself of salary and as well embarrass the state institution for the insane and the civil establishment generally in Georgia? That possibility is more than theoretic and it looms out of the action of the house in amending the appropriations bill so that henceforth it shall be impossible to divert amounts from the school fund.

The school fund is fed by half the rental from the state road, from the poll tax and from other sources. On account of the increasing state deficit, due to legitimate growth, and to Georgia's system of tax returns, when most of the revenue comes in at the year's end, it has with each year an increasing problem to finance the state during the first half of each year.

The civil establishment, for instance, must be kept going. The institution at Milledgeville, and others, must be kept going. So, in lieu of other resources, many successive administrations have been compelled to divert funds intended for school purposes to uses of sheer maintenance.

The practice has, of course, always been a makeshift. It could have been enjoined had any Georgian taken the issue to court. But now the house has written a ban into the current appropriation bill, and where does that leave the system? If followed literally, the situation is such that the state would be forced to borrow money next spring to keep the ordinary institutions running. It could not "kite" from the school fund. Under this condition the members of the general assembly will receive no pay for their work next summer—THAT IS, THEY WILL HAVE TO WAIT THEIR TURN.

Now, of course, the teachers deserve their money just as well as any other servants of the state, more than a good many. The action of the house was a commendable recognition of the principle. And while the funds thus diverted would pay only a fraction of the total salaries, the help would be substantial.

Put the point is this: The house has torn the mask off our wretched fiscal system. It has shown just where our juggling and kiting lead and just how precarious is the financial footing of each institution that of the legislature itself. The problem will have been complicated, not simplified, unless this same measure enacts some form of equalization and a thoroughgoing reform of the fiscal situation and the deferred payment of teachers.

A BRUTAL DISCRIMINATION.

Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over a lamp and started a fire that cremated Chicago. It's the small things that start constructive and destructive avalanches. An avalanche that will wipe out a cold-blooded discrimination against the mothers of Georgia is badly needed. Perhaps the story from Augusta, told elsewhere in our local columns and in an editorial from The Augusta Chronicle, may prove the impetus. The facts are soon related. An Augusta mother with two baby girls separates from her husband. Both are reputable. So far as we know, neither has been guilty of moral turpitude. But the ancient Georgia law tears these babes from the mother that bore them and gives them to the father. In other words, under our statute the mother in Georgia has no more right to her children than the veriest outsider. After she has faced death in bearing them, and hardship and sleepless nights in rearing them—the husband can claim them from her, without a scintilla of legal redress.

Of course, this is a crime against motherhood. It is a greater and more brutal injustice than the old law which made the wife the slave and chattel of the husband. Georgia has repealed the statute that gave control of the wife's property to the husband. She is given a free title to her dollars. She has none whatever to the children of her body.

In time we shall, perhaps, give women the right to practice law, now curiously denied them, while they can practice medicine and engage in any other business. But there should be no delay on part of the legislature in righting this antiquated and pitiless discrimination regarding children.

Give the mother at least the same right in court as the father! Her right should, by nature, take precedence. At least, put her on a plane of equality with the father!

START IT WORKING RIGHT.

The Constitution publishes elsewhere a statement from Chief of Construction R. M. Clayton, in which he points out how the efficiency of the Peachtree creek sewage disposal plant may be seriously impaired unless the creek is quickly cleared of accumulated debris. The county commission has promised to do this work but, as Captain Clayton points out, the plant will be in operation by September and the creek-bed should be cleared by that time.

As it is now, the creek beyond the disposal plant for a stretch of more than a mile, to the old dam, is congested with debris of every description. An ordinary rain causes the water to back up and overflow. A torrential rain makes this backflow an important item. The sewage disposal plant is situated on the creek below the bridge crossing Peachtree road. It is indispensable to the efficient operation of the plant, that there be an unobstructed flow of the creek current that the product of the plant may be safely carried off. Under present conditions it is feared by the chief of construction that even an ordinary rise and congestion of the current in the creek will prevent the products of the plant from being borne away and perhaps seriously interfere with the entire plant.

A few days work will remove all obstructions from the creek-bed and eliminate any possible menace to the plant. The county commissioners will, no doubt, give attention to the matter at once. Lessening the efficiency of the plant would entail hazard to health not only in Atlanta, but the surrounding territory.

LIVES V. DOLLARS.

The question of a few thousand lives v. $10,000 is involved in the request of the state board of health for an appropriation of $10,000 for the manufacture and free distribution of typhoid vaccine. To refuse this request is not simple parsimony. It is equivalent to throwing away practically every life forfeited yearly in Georgia to typhoid fever.

Elsewhere is told the story of the request of the board and the scientific facts upon which it is based. There is no longer any shred of doubt as to the preventive efficacy of typhoid vaccine. Dr. Harris cities statistics from our own army and the armies of the world's largest powers, to prove the absolute conclusiveness of immunity. It is impossible to go behind these figures. They are compiled by men whose business it is to be skeptical as well as accurate. In Georgia and throughout the nation physicians in private practice administer the vaccine constantly. They recommend it urgently to their patients. Vaccine will not cure typhoid after it has developed. It will prevent it from developing, with the practical certainty with which we have come to depend upon vaccine for prevention of smallpox.

The board now has 500 calls a week for vaccine from physicians throughout the state. It plans to put in an extra man at the statehouse laboratories to manufacture the product and to employ four physicians who will administer it absolutely free in all parts of Georgia. It is $10,000 against millions of dollars in the value of human lives, and hur an anguish that cannot be estimated.

The terror-stricken Bulgarian troops can give the war-aeroplanists points in the art of flying.

If the tariff doesn't fall before speeches a week long there will be no hope of its ever becoming reasonable.

"IS GEORGIA SIMPLY BANKRUPT, OR A CARPET BAG STATE?" QUESTIONS NATIONS PRESS

The scandal of Georgia's unpaid school teachers and of her growing deficit is a matter for comment throughout the national press. The Topeka (Kan.) Capital asks how the government of Georgia and other southern states differ from that of the "carpet-bagger." The query is inspired by the following comment:

What's the Matter With Georgia?

(From The Houston, Texas, Post.)

"Over in Georgia, a great and wealthy state, several thousand public school teachers have not been paid their small salaries.

"In Tennessee the curse of factional politics is interfering with the refunding of $11,000,000 state bonds about to mature.

"In Alabama a financial scandal in the penitentiary management is disturbing the people.

"In Mississippi there are hints of hundreds of thousands of dollars of public money being taken by grafters.

"In Texas, the wealthiest of all the southern states, and one of the wealthiest in the union, the treasury is empty and the state is paying its current obligations with warrants which cannot be redeemed in cash for months.

"We have seen in Texas session after session begin under the most promising auspices and before it closed become so embroiled that nothing of consequence was accomplished. The Texas legislature is no exception. Other states experience similar trouble and we should not be a bit surprised if the Georgia legislature were to disappoint all who consider it an able body.

"Able men sit in all legislatures, and every legislature is confronted by important constructive tasks, but the rule is the able men do not control and the constructive tasks are seldom performed.

"Of late years, our state capitols have been caldrons of bitterness and hate. Wrangling over futile issues, quarreling over questions that ought to be kept out of legislative bodies and subordinating the general welfare to political considerations—all these have marked legislative activity in nearly all the states of the south.

"The trouble is deep seated. The southern states have outgrown their traditional politics. Before the war politics was an amiable game of a leisured class. After the war, for twenty years, it was a struggle against the submersion of the intelligence of the south. There was no trouble then in engaging the interest of all classes in politics.

"But industry and commerce now claim the attention of the most forceful and practical men. Politics has been left to a small class of office-seekers and their backers. More and more it has become a struggle for place and power and livelihood. Questions of public interest are relegated to the last place in the minds of legislators and county politicians or are purposely confused for personal or factional advantage."

Is Georgia Bankrupt?

A Libel on Georgia.

(From The Macon News.)

The Fort Worth (Texas) Record refers to Georgia as a state that is bankrupt, as one of several southern states whose finances are hopelessly involved and depleted.

This is a libel on the great and prosperous state of Georgia, and yet it is an impression that necessarily must have been created in other states by reason of Georgia's lamentable and inexcusable failure to promptly pay the school teachers.

"School teachers not yet paid for last year's work," reads the news story sent broadcast over the land under Georgia date lines, and it is only a natural consequence that the belief should obtain that Georgia is insolvent.

On the other hand, Georgia has undoubtedly more assets than any other state of the south, and is not facing bankruptcy, even though the school teachers are treated so shamefully by being deprived of their lawful and hard-earned wages for tedious and prolonged periods. As pointed out recently by The Atlanta Constitution, the state road alone is an asset that is sufficient to pay every bit of the indebtedness of the state and then leave a tidy balance, should it ever be put on the market and sold.

The News trusts that the Fort Worth Record will rectify its statement about Georgia being bankrupt. The statement might deter Texans from emigrating to Georgia and locating in this state whose assets are ample and bountiful and whose prosperity is assured.

STRIKES.

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Siwash"

By GEORGE FITCH
Author of "At Good Old Siwash"
(Copyright, 1913, for The Constitution.)

A strike is a determination on the part of a large number of men to abstain from working in a firm and vociferous manner.

This is usually pretty hard on the men and they lose weight rapidly because their pay checks also refrain from work during the strike and the cruel grocer asks for cash in advance. But the strike is not very hard on the owners of the factory whose employees are unanimously resting. A factory which is enjoying a strike is about as useless and expensive as a private yacht. It requires a tremendous effort of the will to envy the owner of a factory whose workmen are all on the outside, picking daisies and brick bats, while the interest charges and taxes on said factory go relentlessly on.

Men do not strike for the mere joy of sitting around and waiting for last week's meal to materialize. They strike because they have been abused, or underpaid, or imposed upon, or because they want something, or because clause 78 of the contract has been broken or bent by the party of the second part. Nothing in the line of argument approaches a strike in eloquence. Many a body of men have argued with their employees for years without doing more than to jar an "Ah, indeed" out of them, and have then struck and have made said employers see the whole point in less than a month.

Strikes have been so successful that almost all workmen are now organized and can strike whenever they feel like it. Moreover, almost all employers are now organized and can tell the strikers to go to thunder with great emphasis. Everyone is organized except the consumer. The consumer ought to have sense enough to run a few strikes by himself.

What we need in this country is a strike by the National Union of Porterhouse Steak Consumers for lower prices. It would help a good deal.

A strike by the Amalgamated Theatergoers would make the ticket scalper curl up and die in great pain.

A strike by the Journeymen Car Catchers would cause the street car companies to hang seats all over their cars if necessary.

"Argued with their employers for years without doing more than jar an 'Ah, indeed' out of them."

If the Allied Telephone Users were to go out in a body and parade the streets for a few weeks, the recording angel would no longer have to summon help whenever a quick tempered man tried to use a telephone.

Strikes are a grand thing if properly used, but they are not appreciated by the consumer and he in turn will not be appreciated until he learns how to strike with ease and grace on all occasions.

The Novelist in Haste.

(From the Manchester Evening News.)

Novelists are in a hurry at times, but only a few of their readers are critical. In a detective story of many years ago the villain carried up to his room a basket containing fifty thousand sovereigns and handed it to accomplices on a ladder. This is eclipsed in a novel by Mr. Guy Boothby. Here the villian stipulates that 100,000 pounds "in hard cash" shall be brought to him secretly at the place appointed. A gentleman with a weakness for arithmetic states that this amount of gold would weigh a large part of a ton.

He Raised the Dead.

"Shortly after Galvani's invention came out he visited America, and with a letter of introduction called upon Dr. Doane, medical officer to the Bank of New York," writes a correspondent of the London Chronicle. "He found the family in distress at the death of the infant son. Galvani asked to be allowed to try his battery; the child revived, was christened Galvani Doane, and is probably alive today; at any rate he was three or four years ago. His father was a cousin to Longfellow."

Augusta Chronicle Attacks "Monstrously Cruel Law"

(From The Augusta Chronicle.)

Not so very long ago, the public stood aghast when Senator Ben Tillman's son made an aggressive effort to legally take from their natural mother his and her young children, girls of a tender age; it being the contention that, under the laws of South Carolina, the father was their natural guardian and the mother had no right to her own children, even though there was no charge nor even insinuation, that she was unfit to rear them.

The whole country rose up in arms against such a law, and severely condemned the effort to separate this mother from her children; the very prominence of the families making it a causus celebre in the courts of that state.

The Chronicle, as much as any other newspaper, took the side of the mother: and we were gratified, in common with the public generally, when the court finally did the best it could under this law and permitted both mother and father to have the care of their children for about an equal period of each year.

But Augusta has, just recently, furnished a similar case; similar, at least, in the fact that two young girl children have been taken from their mother—against whom there are no charges—under the guise of law; in fact with the clear sanction of law; or, it might even be said, under the distinct command of the law, the reviewing judge clearly intimating that he was not in sympathy with such a law and that personally, he would like to have an opportunity to rule otherwise.

Far be it from us to attempt to interfere in a domestic trouble of this or any other character—and what we have to say on the subject is entirely impersonal, and does not even attempt to discuss the merits of the particular case—but our views on this subject have not changed in the least since the famous Tillman case was before the public nor have the public's views changed.

We would speak not so much of this case or this particular mother and father, but of future cases of like character and of other mothers and fathers who may agree to disagree—with the right given, by law, to any man to snatch the children from their mother's breast.

Verily, as Judge Hammond pointedly estimated, such a law is a relic of barbarism, for, as he says, while, some generations ago we took away from the man the right to hold his wife as a slave, a chattel, and to beat and even murder her at will, we still left her without a vested right in the children which she brought into the world and nursed at her breast. It is simply unthinkable; and no such law should be permitted to remain on the statute books of any civilized state—certainly not the Empire State of the south.

Listen to this from the reviewing judge as defining Georgia's attitude, her deliberate policy, toward the mothers of this state where a question of the possession of their own children is concerned—and shudder:

"The court expressly refrains from any reference to the natural rights of the mother who conceived and bore these children, who nursed them at her breast and whose heart and soul is wrapped up in them. The court refrains from discussing these natural rights because they are not legal rights—in law they do not exist. Certiorari dismissed."

The Georgia legislature has barely two weeks longer to remain in session; surely, it can spare a few hours, or a few days, of this time to the passage of a law which will, in a measure, at least, recognize the natural rights of mothers in this state. Were we a member of that august body, we couldn't sleep—in view of the fact that have recently come to light concerning this present cruel law—until we had made an effort to correct this injustice.

We may not yet be ready to give the women the vote in Georgia, but we should at least give them an equal right with the father to the possession of their children; in fact, the sensible thing, the right thing, the humane thing, would be to put the burden of proof, always, upon the father, where he would separate mother from child, the burden of proof to show that the mother is grossly unfit and incapable or caring for her own children—and the place for such a mother is in an institution.

All of which we offer without the slightest personal bias in the particular case under discussion—indeed; with much reluctance to discuss it at all— but solely, in the hope of arousing the public conscience to strike from the statute books of Georgia a law strously cruel, wicked, worm-eaten law which makes of motherhood a mere incident and deprives it of all of its sacred rights and privileges.

COTTON BAGGING TRUST DENOUNCED BY BACON

Georgia Senator Wants Advance in Price Probed by the Government

Washington July 26—(Special)—Severe condemnation of the cotton bagging trust for arbitrarily putting up the price of bagging 2 cents a yard and advancing the price of cotton bands for baling cotton was heard in the senate last week The secretary of commerce was directed to make an investigation into the causes of the increased cost

Senator Smith of South Carolina, in offering the resolution of inquiry estimated that the advance in price of bagging and ties now when the new cotton crop is about to come on the market would cost the cotton producers $1 800 000 on this season's crop

Only fourteen firms are engaged in the manufacture of these articles said Senator Smith on information from the department of commerce and all were subsidiaries of the American Manufacturing company of 63 Wall street New York

The effect of the democratic tariff bill free listing cotton bagging where the present law taxes it six tenths of a cent a yard was injected into the debate by Senator Smoot

This is refreshing he said because in the past I have always heard from the Senator from South Carolina that the tariff was responsible for these advances in prices In the future under his bill he will find the foreign manufacturers dictating the prices of cotton bagging

If the American manufacturers were preparing to go out of business Senator Smith suggested that might account for their final coup which would net them an additional $1 800 000 of profits

Senator Bacon Calls on Anti-Trust Law

Senator Bacon suggested that this was a case for the department of justice instead of the department of commerce Confirmation of the reported advance in prices had reached him from Peacock's warehouse at Pave Ga he said Bagging had advanced 20 per cent and ties 15 per cent they informed Mr Bacon He said

"I have heard the expression of the desire that the anti trust law should be one that should have teeth in it That is a somewhat coarse expression but it is one frequently used If the statements now made are true that this combination of bagging manufacturers have diliberately without any justification and solely in the lust of extortion deliberately set themselves to work through the power of their monopoly to levy a tax between $1 000 000 and $1 800 000 upon the cotton growers of this country then Mr President if the Sherman anti trust law is one of which has any efficacy it is a time when not simply the penalties of fine should be imposed but when the prison doors should be closed upon these men

It is difficult to conceive of a thing more iniquitous than this The most laborious never ceasing hard working people in this country are the agricultural classes and chief among them are those who raise cotton It takes twelve long months in the year and there is in general very little direct profit in it to the men who grow it except when unusually conditions are such that the price goes above the normal standard When men have been engaged in this important industry devoting to it during all the year all their time and their entirties and just at a time when there is a possibility of their reaping some small profit as the fruit of their labors to have a lot of men sit in an office and by this monopolistic combination in violation of law extract from these men nearly $2 000 000 certainly presents an occasion when the powers of the department of justice should be brought into play and practically demonstrated

"I think that here is the place for the activities of the department of justice to manifest themselves I trust that the resolution whether it will accomplish anything or not through the department of commerce will have the effect of calling the attention of the department of justice to a situation which requires immediate attention I trust that it may result in securing such a judgment against them as will be a warning in the future to those who will flagrantly defy and violate the law of this country which prohibits such combinations and such extortionate exactions from the people of the land through combinations and monopolies

The Cry of Conservation

By Robert J. Lowry.

Editor Constitution Wherever nature has bestowed her vast riches in abundance upon any section of a new country, it has been the tendency of humanity to be wasteful and wantonly destructive of natural assets, which should prove a permanent source of maintenance and wealth to succeeding generations Willful waste makes woeful want we have heard from childhood and to destroy natural resources which should be converted into earning assets is well nigh inexcusable not to say criminal, in this day of enlightment

My attention has been particularly called to the cry of conservation and preservation of natural resources of our great section of this great country and I have felt constrained to urge the private individual as well as the general publi to conserve the natural assets of this section that the south may in the coming years realize the commercial prestige and importance to which these natural resources justly entitle her Various national conservation organizations are urging upon our people today that the destructive policy of the country must call for atonement in the shape of want sooner or later The utilization of all nature's gifts is man's prerogative as well as his duty but the despoiling of these gifts will certainly meet the just punishment which is deserves because in this day of enlightenment we know better

Two or three years ago the opening of the Appalachian exposition at Knoxville was the sounding of a note of warning against further destructive measures in that magnificent section the Appalachian range and the Piedmont section in which Atlanta is so favorably located

Exposition to Show Growth

The National Conservation exposition which will be open in Knoxville from September 1 to November 1 has the same object in view to show how in the promotion of legitimate development it is not necessary to be destructive but on the other hand constructive This exposition will be one of the largest perhaps that has been held in the south and in view of the great purposes before it the people of this section could not do otherwise than foster and encourage its benign objects Right here in the foothills of the Blue Ridge mountains nature has smiled upon us with a magnificent climate with a gorgeous verdure with beautiful and powerful streams with mountain storehouses of minerals of all kinds and truly we are blessed

In utilizing these resources we should not forget that there are others to come after us who must earn their bread and who are entitled to have these boundless resources developed and conserved that they may be here for their use and benefit The development of these resources should be of a permanent and not a temporary nature Wanton destruction of the forests is culpable They can be utilized as far as necessary for the present generation and yet be conserved well nigh intact for future use There are ways in which the resources of forests waters minerals, animal life and human efficiency may be effectively used by the present generation and not only be here for future generations but in better shape for them to utilize If we destroy any great natural asset as the American buffalo has been made totally extinct as a species we have not only gained nothing ourselves but we have culpably robbed posterity and the sins of the fathers are visited upon the innocent children

Putting Waste to Work.

Many things that now go to waste may be converted into fruitful sources of revenue The application of modern machinery makes possible the development of these great natural resources into great producers of wealth both for the present and for the future When it becomes necessary for an individual a corporation or a nation to encroach for current expenses upon its virgin capital the hideous shadow of bankruptcy appears on the horizon When such a warning appears the careful man or manager or political economist utters a cry of halt and says Do not impair your capital but increase your efficiency with the means at your command, and live upon the earning of your capital and not upon the principal The man who year after year, draws a crop from the soil and never restores to it the plant food and soil nourishment which has been steadily withdrawn from it, simply impoverishes his son who must till that same farm and who must of necessity waste much valuable time and means in correcting the mistakes the blunders and the wanton waste of his father Agriculture, forestry mining and manufacturing can go on in this country for centuries and centuries to come, if each generation will conserve the capital of the country and through the increase of efficiency make that capital earn more and live within their income

End of Waste in Coming.

The day of waste and recklessness cannot last much longer The voice of conservation must be heard Nature has wonderful recuperative and reproductive powers she can stand many a buckset and recover but continual waste and wanton recklessness in using natural resources with no eye to their conservation for future productivity will soon or later discourage Nature in her effort to repair the blunders of ignorance and she will become atrophied and visit her punishment upon the nation because we know better

It behooves every patriotic citizen to ponder upon the possibilities of effective drainage and irrigation of the feeding of the soil of the eradication of insect pests of methods of cultivating and harvesting, so as to multiply the production per acre, and at the same time not impoverish the soil We should study the preservation of timber supply the production and regulation of the flow of natural streams which furnish power domestic supply irrigation and means of navigation We should study means for the prevention of destructive forest fires the means of rehabilitating the forests and in fact we should learn to use up for daily needs the culls and try to preserve the best that nature has given us for our best uses and for future generations

Not Opposed to Water Power.

If the man who put his garden to work a half a day he would hardly put on his dress suit if he wanted to kindle a fire he would hardly pick out a beautiful piece of dressed hard wood which might serve to beautify the floor of his parlor He would hardly feed his house cat upon the best cream from his dairy Yet some of the most magnificent timber in this beautiful Appalachian section has been slaughtered for uses that might as well be served by using culls and waste timber Some of our streams which were absolutely necessary for the fertility of farms and for domestic water supply have been despoiled and contaminated to such an extent as to render them worthless for these purposes I have no objection to the development of water power for manufacturing purposes but there is no necessity for ruining the stream for other legitimate purposes in order to make it useful for manufacturing There is no reason why we should not keep the streams reasonably pure and uncontaminated so that they can be utilized for domestic and agricultural purposes while at the same time the kinetic energy of these streams may be used to turn the wheels of our factories

Need Human Efficiency, Too

I would not have it understood that I do not favor industrial development I favor all forms of development but I also favor a conservative use of natural resources which result in constructive and not destructive development All the natural resources of this wonderful section in which our thriving city of Atlanta is located can be turned into permanent productive sources of wealth for this and all future generations We should increase both natural and human efficiency through training of the young people of our country in the arts and sciences looking to permanent development with an eye to conservation The man who spends his capital instead of living off the income of it dies poor and his posterity inherit his poverty The nation that spends its capital likewise will die poor and its posterity must inherit serfdom

In this day of enlightened scientific research there is no excuse for waste There is no excuse for failure to increase efficiency There is no excuse for our natural resources diminishing in productive power We must heed the cry of conservation preserve our capital and increase its volume and earning power by the application of business and scientific principles and the rules of ordinary economy

MUST CLEAR CREEK OR INJURE PLANT

Commissioner Clayton Urges the County Commission to Early Start

The city's new $196 000 sewage disposal plant on Peachtree creek—the most essential of the units—nearly complete the sewer committee and bond commission backed by Captain R M Clayton chief of city construction are making ready for a conference with the county commissioners to urge immediately the clearing of the channel of Peachtree creek from the bridge to the dam at the old Howell mill

Chief Clayton told The Constitution Saturday that the plant will positively be in operation on September 1, and with more emphasis than he put in his previous statements declared that it was absolutely necessary that the creek be cleared by the time the city is ready to begin operations

Can Be Quickly Cleared

With a force of fifty convicts the creek can be cleared in about ten days Chief Clayton estimates The successful operation depends in a large measure on the free flow of the products through the creek beyond the old Howell's mill dam I am certain the commission will start the work when it realizes how essential it is to the sewage system

A word from the public works committee of the county commission is all that is necessary to start this important work according to city officials The county commission passed up the work more than eighteen months ago but it was put aside in order that other more pressing improvements might be carried through to completion The city did not heretofore press the county to do the work because it was not really necessary the sewage plant at that time being merely in contemplation

The entire valley of Peachtree creek from Armour to the river is very flat and the bed of the creek is much obstructed with fallen trees roots a few ledges of rock etc On account of these obstructions added to the lack of fall the velocity is very little and consequently a compartively light rain fall causes the creek to overflow its banks Those overflows leave lagoons which are stagnant and soon become mosquito infested The prevailing winds are from Peachtree creek toward the city and the mosquitoes are blown into the whole north side If the obstructions were removed the velocity would be so increased that the present bed of the creek would be able to take care of all the water except under heavy storm conditions In addition the reduction of floods would help the operation of the Peachtree creek disposal plant The filters discharge into the stream only a few feet above the normal water level and back water will interfere with the proper discharge of the filters The bed of the creek is filling up more and more each year because the flow is not enough to keep it washed out and the clearing out of the stream with the increased velocity would help the stream to keep itself clear To do this work it would be necessary for the laborers to be in the water and therefore the time to do it is the summer time With a force of about fifty men this work could be done in about two weeks and the results would be of great benefit to a very large territory both in the city and in the county

Commissioner Winn Talks.

Commissioner W Tom Winn the only member of the county commission now in the city declares that he realizes the necessity for an early start and will urge action at the next meeting of the public works committee There will be a meeting next Saturday at 10 o'clock Captain Clayton proposes to ask the commissioners to start the work shortly after that meeting

When the city was contemplating the location of the plant, says Chief Clayton Peachtree creek was reckoned with as being the most important factor of the Peachtree unit chiefly because it provided a channel for the products of the plant to flow out to the river The wash of debris from the hills for years has shallowed the creek Logs and brush have been washed into the channel and in some places solid rock boulders obstruct the flow of the water

Present Flow of Water

In heavy rains the obstructions prevent the easy flow of the water and often the bottoms are overflowed and considerable damage is done Along the stretch between the plant and the old Howell mill dam water backs up in heavy storms

It is necessary when the plant is completed to have the channel cleared of these obstructions It is the intention of the city to start operations at the plant just as soon as the two acres of filter bed are completed The work should be complete not later than September 1

With only two acres of filters in use the city cannot hope to get results as satisfactory as with nine acres in use as will be the case in a few months The product will be purified to a great extent but it will carry matter which must be carried on and on until it is dissolved It is very apparent therefore that the creek will have to be cleared of debris to prevent back water flooding the plant and the surrounding lands

The county will be asked to clear only that stretch from the Peachtree bridge to the old mill dam The distance is but little more than a mile

Chief Clayton estimates that the work can be finished in twelve days at the lease

It is essential he says to start work before the fall months

Unfailing Weather Signs.

(From Answers)

Those who live by the coast do not want a better weather sign than the gulls which in the various winds that will bring the rain collect in big flocks and gather in the fields or circle high over the land wheeling and screaming uneasily They will not come in on a false alarm and none need fear they will make a mistake

A spider spinning its web is a sign of fine days If in the morning a day's excursion may be taken without fear of summer costumes becoming spoiled by the wet and if in the evening then at least the whole of the night and the following morning will be fine

As long as frogs remain yellow in color nothing but fine weather may be expected Should however their coats begin to assume a brown hue it is a sign that bad weather will shortly arrive A good frog barometer may be made by keeping two of them in a large glass bowl filled with water and furnished with small wooden ladders As long as the frogs keep at the bottom of the vessel sunny days will continue but if they climb up to the top of the ladder there is a storm coming

If it is raining and the owl screeches a change for the better will shortly ensue but should the peacock screech bad weather is to come on continue Snails are also valuable weather prophets As long as they are to be seen jogging along in the orthodox manner fine weather may be confidently looked forward to If there is rain in the atmosphere the snails may be seen to seek shelter up the stems of trees and shrubs under leaves and in fact anywhere where they can be safely out of the wet Only when all immediate langer of a recurrence of rain is over will they emerge again

Washed Eggs Do Not Keep.

In the Poultry department of the current issue of Farm and Fireside appears an interesting article about the production and sale of eggs Following is an extract

Eggs for a fire class trade must be gathered regularly each day from nests that are especially fitted If there is any doubt about the freshness of eggs give the customer not the eggs the benefit of the doubt Do not take any chances do not sell them One bad egg will ruin the reputation gained by selling a thousand good ones The bad egg unpleasantness will never be forgotten even if it should be forgiven by the customer As soon as the eggs are gathered they should be carried to a cool place and covered with a clean cloth, so that dust cannot settle on them

A damp cloth is required to rub off any slight discoloration If it is necessary to wet the eggs they should be wiped dry before being placed in the crate otherwise they will gather dust They should not be washed unless absolutely necessary because washing destroys the natural appearance of the shell by removing the secretion which covers the pores of the egg and which prevents rigid evaporation from the eggs Washed eggs do not keep as well as eggs in their natural condition

C W McClure tendered to his employees a picnic Wednesday at Silver lake The day was ideal for a picnic and all had the biggest frolic the company has ever known Boating bathing and foot racing were a few of the sports enjoyed

An old fashioned picnic dinner which had been personally superintended by Mrs McClure was one feature of the picnic which was enjoyed by everyone present Sandwiches fried chicken and ice cream—all the goodies one can imagine made up the bill of fare

In the afternoon about half of the force repaired to the ball diamond The members of the retail store team led by Bloody Cox engaged in mortal combat with Slim Calvert wholesale dealers in hits and runs The feature of the game was the hurling of funky steames and batty Bibler The game was very exciting while it lasted but the rain put a stop to the sport in the sixth inning as the retail team was threatening to tie the score The game ended with the score 15 to 1 in favor of the wholesale boys After the game the members of both teams donned their bathing suits and enjoyed about half an hour of aquatic sports The round up for the afternoon was a good old Georgia watermelon cutting

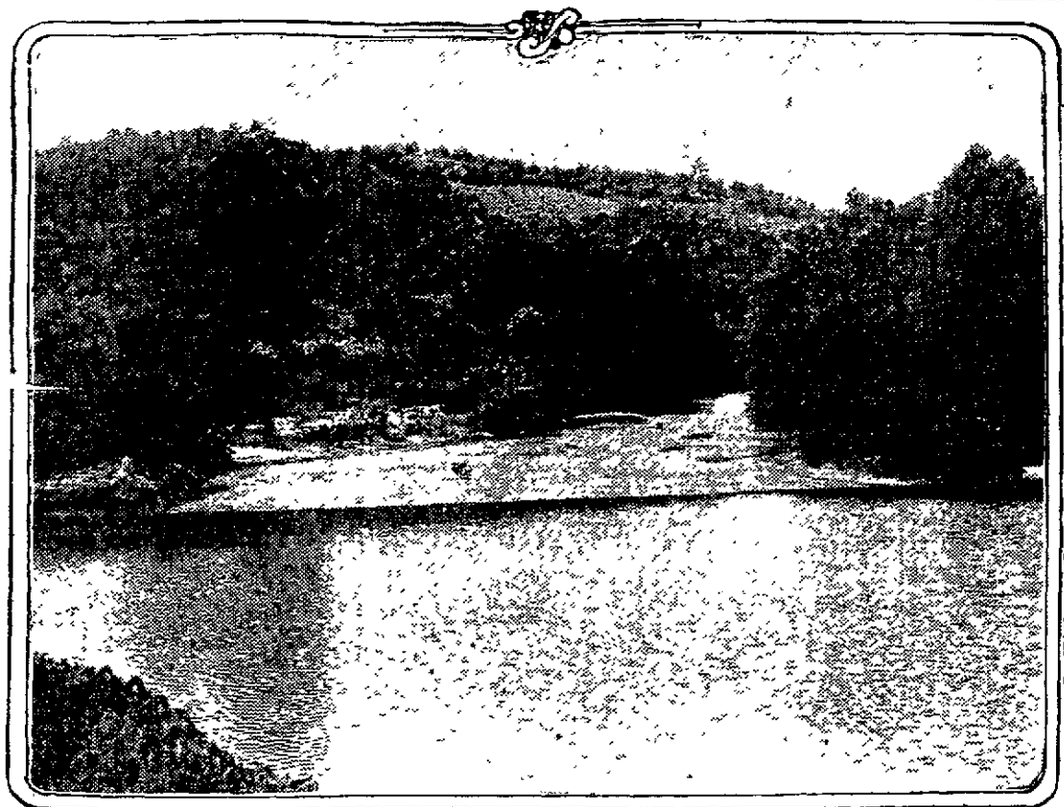
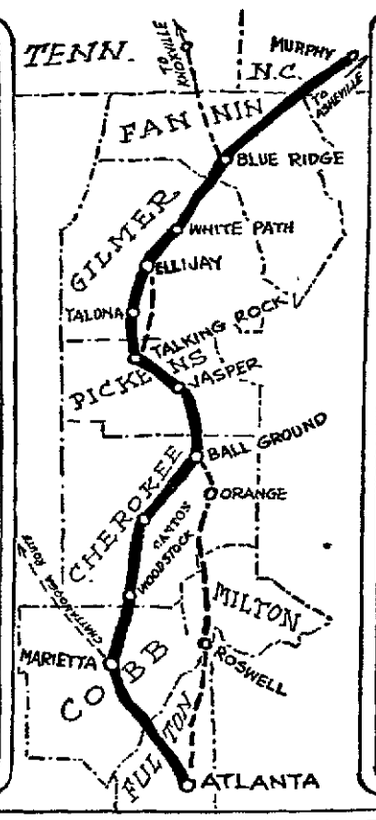
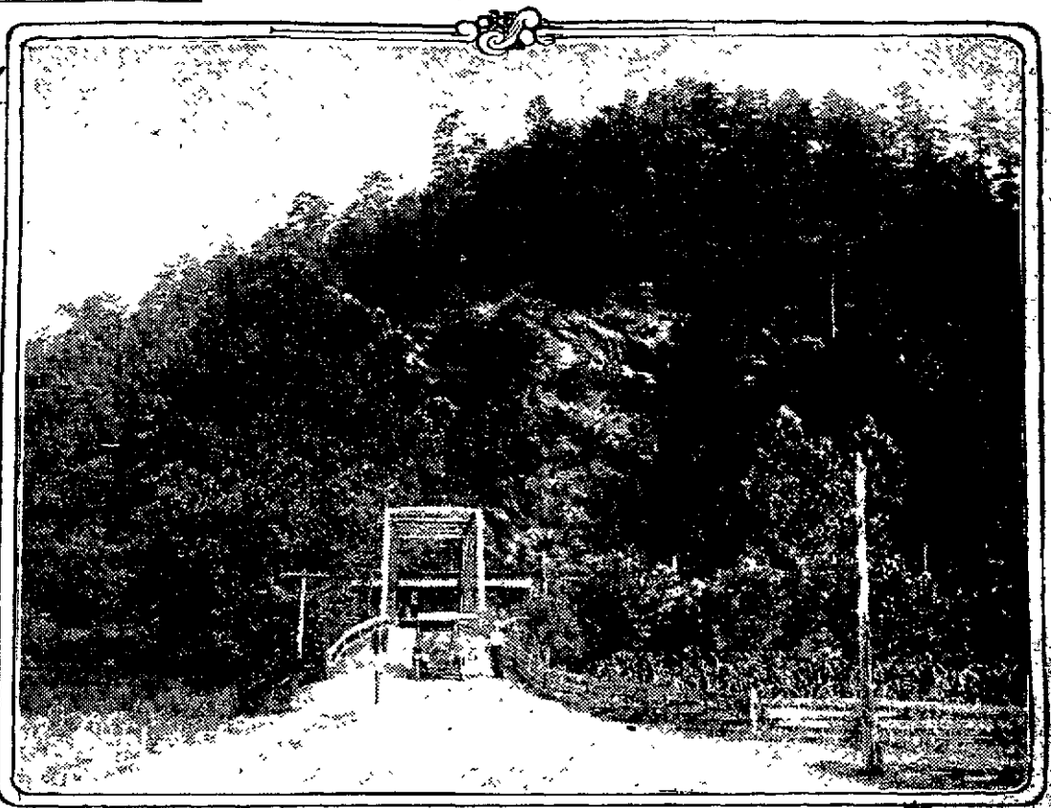
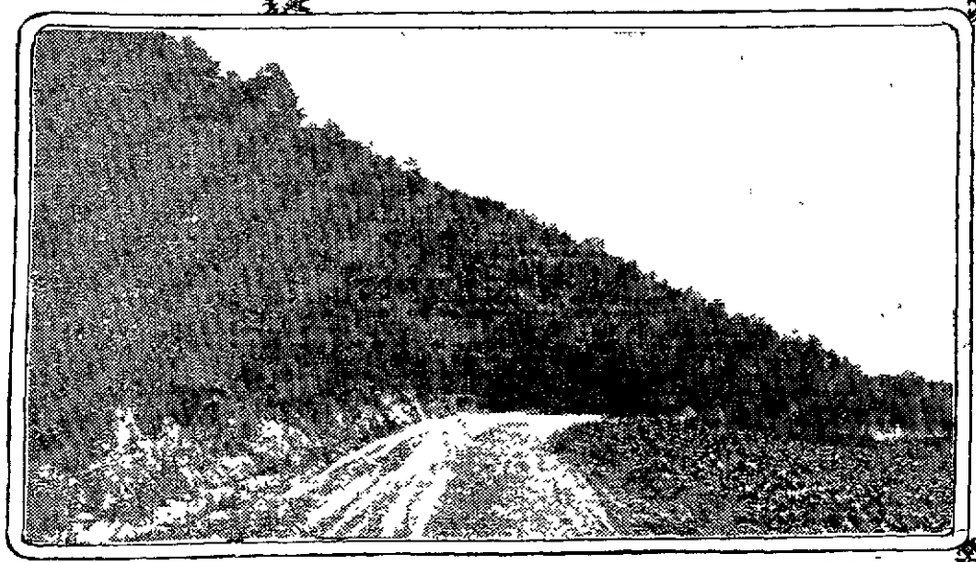
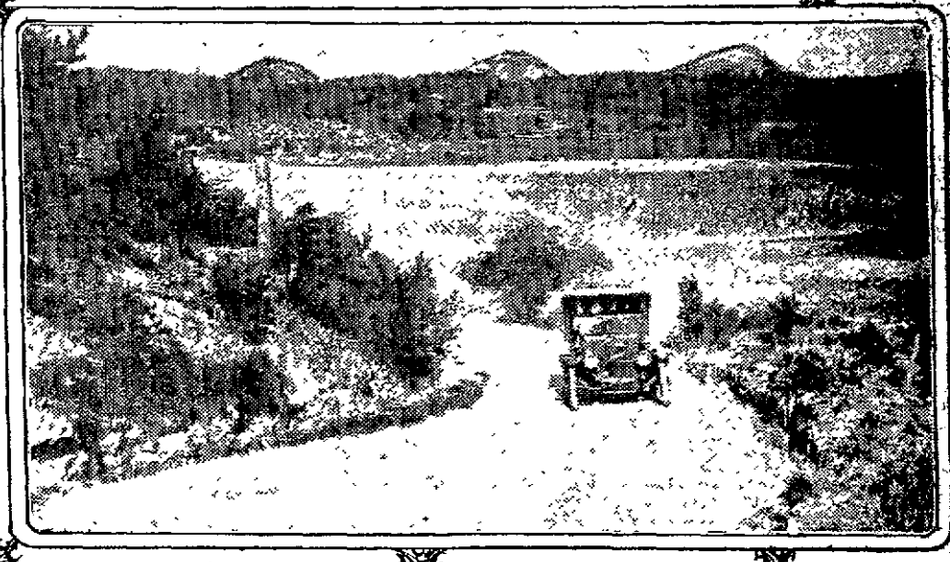
Beautiful "Blue Ridge Highway" to Pierce Mountain Section; Autos May Roll Thro' Scenic Land on Roads of White Marble

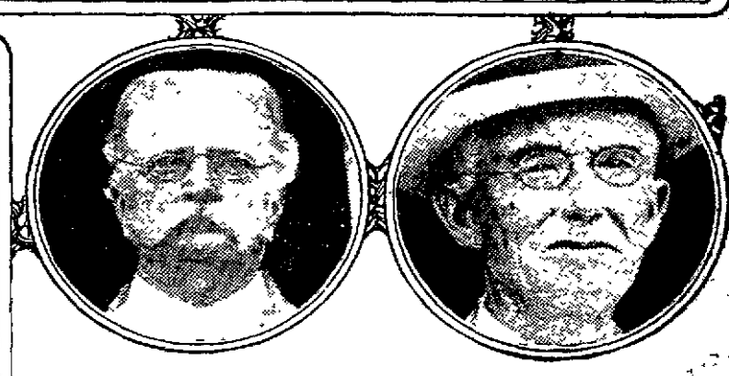












Dr E W. Watkins, of Ellijay, (on the left) who is one of the "big boosters' of the highway; and Judge William J. Webb, of Canton (on the right), who, as ordinary of Cherokee county, has done more than any other one man toward the accomplishment of the highway by the actual construction of good roads through his county. In the lower picture is shown a group of convicts at work on the highway near Canton

These are a group of interesting views taken on a recent automobile trip over the route of the proposed Blue Ridge highway. The heavy black line in the map shows the route followed, though a detour is proposed by way of Roswell and another between Ellijay and Talking Rock. At the top are two strikingly beautiful landscape scenes near Ellijay, in Gilmer county. On the left the lower picture shows a stretch of excellent road in Cherokee county, while on the right an auto is shown climbing a hill in Pickens county, near Talking Rock, with a wide valley stretching out beyond. The small center picture shows the ruins of an old copper mine situated just beside the road two miles south of Canton, which was operated by Governor Joseph E Brown before the war.

By J WALTER LECRAW.

In the Blue Ridge mountains of north Georgia is a land of wondrous scenic beauty—long hidden from travel, because there have been no good roads leading through it Soon, however, this country is to be opened to the tourists of the world by the construction of a great mountain highway through Cobb Cherokee, Pickens, Gilmer and Fannin counties, it—and its all in the IF—it Pickens and Gilmer and Fannin counties will but do their part'

Here is a section holding untold possibilities as a mecca for summer resort seekers Rolling hills stand out in grandeur against the cloud flecked sky The valleys are dotted with pretty, green farms Out of the hillsides flow mineral springs of rich medicinal value No finer sunsets are seen anywhere in the world' It is indeed a section that should become world famous for tourist travel

And yet because its hills are steep and its roads rough, and because no concerted effort has been made to overcome these obstacles and create good roads the section has to this day remained inaccessible to the autoist

Now at last in the project of the Blue Ridge highway the way is seen for opening up this land to travel Piercing the mountain section with a splendid road it will reveal to the tourists for the first time the virgin beauty of this hitherto untraveled country After reaching northward 103 miles from Atlanta to Blue Ridge, Ga, a branch of the route, will go through Tennessee to Knoxville, while the main route will pass to the north east into North Carolina

OVER THE HILLS TO ATLANTA

Over roads made of marble, from the many rich quarries of north Georgia, the highway will stretch onward to the mountains of western North Carolina Over them it will pass through the "Sapphire Country to Asheville, and there it will connect with the national highways to Washington and New York Thus will a splendid new route from the north be opened up—"over the hills to Atlanta There will be no highway entering the south to rival it for scenic grandeur

The choicest route from New York clear to Jacksonville will then be this beautiful Blue Ridge highway. Thousands of tourists will be drawn to this particular route every year. The result will be a wonderful stimulus to the growth of these six north Georgia counties, from Fulton to Fannin, as well as advertising the wonders of Georgia to the world

A splendid dream—is it not?

"Dream, it is," answers the weakening chorus of those who have attempted to travel in its present dishabille this route so flatteringly pictured. "And dream is all it ever shall be," adds the cynic! For it is a fact that when a group of "good roads hootsers" traversed a few days ago the route from Atlanta to Blue Ridge, Ga, they were given the "bouncing of their lives ' Suffice it to say that one of the party was thrown against the top of the car and suffered a nosebleed, and that more than once the machine went dead when a plunge through mountain streams brought water up to the engine. Everyone was bruised and sore from the trip There are no 'good roads' now in Pickens, Gilmer or Fannin counties

COBB AND CHEROKEE WORKING CONVICTS.

But proof that this Blue Ridge highway is not "merely a dream' lies in the fact that the work is now actually under way in Cobb and Cherokee counties and further that the movement to start the work in the three upper counties is rapidly gaining strength and will probably soon crystallize in action

Convicts are at work six days of the week upon the route of this highway through Cobb and Cherokee Marietta and Canton, the county seats from which the work is directed, are hotbeds of enthusiasm Many beautiful stretches of road and many fills and gradings testify to the splendid work already accomplished Cobb's pro rata number of the state's convicts is 46, while Cherokee's share is 37 Both are using the limit of their allotment and clamoring for more

Contrast with this the situation in Pickens Gilmer and Fannin Not one of these three counties, strange to say, has taken advantage of the state law which allows a division of the convicts among the counties in proportion to their population, for use in building roads Under this law Pickens would receive eight convicts, Gilmer nine and Fannin ten, the three together being almost as many as Cherokee's

Under the belief, however, that the cost of guarding and maintaining the small number of convicts allotted them would be too great, neither of these counties has yet put the convicts at work upon its roads.

COUNTIES MAY COMBINE FOR HIGHWAY WORK.

The movement has now been suggested that these three counties get together on the co-operative plan of uniting and letting one county take the entire force of 27 convicts for a certain period, after which they will go to the next county, and then to the third. This is a plan that has been adopted by other counties of Georgia with great success, and it is being warmly advocated as an immediate step toward the accomplishment of the highway.

Plans for the project go further, however, and include a proposed special tax in these counties to finance road construction work It is conceded to be a fact that if this great mountain highway is ever to be made a reality it is going to depend entirely upon the forty-second senatorial district, composed of these three counties of Pickens, Gilmer and Fannin, which stand in a perpendicular line upon the map of Georgia, in the center of the extreme northern part of the state

In fact, the success of the entire route depends upon what is done in the near future by these three counties The route from Jacksonville will soon be carried as far north as the Pickens county line, when the work in Cobb and Cherokee is rounded into shape North Carolina promises a splendid road to the state line to meet the highway when constructed in Fannin county. The people of Murphy, N C, are enthusiastic and are at work upon their plans already.

FEDERAL AID TALK RETARDS ROUTE.

Rumors have spread in north Georgia within the past few months that the federal government was going to appropriate funds for the proposed Blue Ridge highway This began through the purchase by the government of a large forest reserve in Fannin and surrounding counties, amounting to nearly 200,000 acres. It was argued that the government should build a good road to this country in order to open up its own forest preserve to the travel of the nation.

Analysis of the situation shows, however, that the government is planning only to improve the roads eventually through the forest reservation. The highway from Fulton to Fannin will have to be constructed practically entirely by the counties themselves At best the government will only extend its aid after the project is fully launched and all counties are at work on a co-operative plan for the construction of the highway. The policy of the government in aiding road construction has always been to "help only those who help themselves"

So the question of the highway's fate reverts squarely upon the three counties of Pickens, Gilmer and Fannin, and it is their efforts alone that will "make or unmake" the .Blue Ridge highway project.

ELLIJAY A BOOSTING MOUNTAIN TOWN.

No town along the whole route traversed by the highway in Georgia is probably so enthusiastic as Ellijay, the county seat of Gilmer. This pretty little mountain town is nestled in the very foothills of the Blue Ridge range. Eighty-seven miles from Atlanta, on the Louisville and Nashville route toward Knoxville, it is the first place of importance reached after the mountain section is entered.

It was here that a "booster barbecue" was held on July 4, in the interest of the Blue Ridge highway. Enthusiasm for the project was given great impetus, and folks from along the proposed route gathered by the hundreds.

Senator A. H. Burtz, of Ellijay, who represents the forty-second district in the Georgia state senate, is one of the prime movers in the highway project Dr Watkins, who is an extensive land owner of Ellijay, is also one of its ardent boosters, while another is H. M Ellington, editor of The Ellijay Courier But there are many other boosters for the highway, not only in Ellijay, but all along the route Jasper, Ga, the county seat of Pickens, has many enthusiasts, and so has Blue Ridge, Ga, the county seat of Fannin.

SPLENDID LAND FOR SUMMER RESORTS.

The wonderful little town of Blue Ridge, situated in a plateau on the very mountain tops in the lower Blue Ridge range, is typical of the many splendid summer resort spots along the route A cool mountain breeze sweeps up and down its streets practically all the time. A summer chautauqua located here has been the first step toward drawing visitors to the town, but with the opening up of the Blue Ridge highway the way will be paved for thousands of tourists and visitors who will linger at this beauty spot of nature at vacation time.

Just half-way between Blue Ridge and Ellijay is a little place that has already gained a reputation and drawn a limited number of summer visitors for many years. It is known as White Path, and three different kinds of mineral springs bubble forth from the ground at this place With a broad highway leading tourists through this section, White Path would become famous over the country for its medicinal waters and its splendid climate

But besides the scenery and the climate there are many other things to attract visitors to this interesting section of north Georgia. Among these are the many mines of various nature—principally gold, copper and marble—that are dotted through the section

A MILLION IN GOLD NUGGETS.

In Gilmer county alone are two gold mines that have yielded over a million dollars' worth of gold nuggets The famous White Path mine is the most noted of these, while the Cartecay gold mine, near Ellijay, has also turned out from $200,000 to $300,000 worth of gold The soil of Gilmer and surrounding counties is declared to contain many undeveloped stratas of gold, and the natives often pick up nuggets containing gold in the vicinity of these stratas

The greatest commercial asset of the tier of counties north of Fulton, however, is the abundance of marble deposited here by nature. Large and prosperous mining projects are going on at Nelson and Tate, in Pickens county; at Holly Springs, in Cherokee, and at White Stone and Tioga, in Gilmer.

Bridges, fences and roadbeds of marble are frequent sights in this country In fact, the waste marble that is thrown away would go a long way toward paving the entire route of the Blue Ridge highway. It may indeed be a reality some day that autos will roll over roads of marble through this scenic land.

No summary of the section's resources would be complete without a mention of the abundant farm products that are turned out by this prolific country. Corn grows over ten feet high in the rich bottoms. Chickens are raised in such abundance that at times two carloads of poultry have stood on the railroad tracks awaiting shipment. Its products are varied probably more than in any other part of the south, everything necessary for the life of the people being raised in some form in the section. It is a section capable of even greater development agriculturally than has yet been dreamed

ORDINARY WEBB AT WORK IN CHEROKEE.

As a final proof as to what can actually be accomplished, the work of Judge William J Webb, the ordinary of Cherokee county, is pointed to with pride by the people of the section.

Judge Webb has taken upon his shoulders the arduous work of superintending the road building, in addition to his regular duties as ordinary. A force of from forty to sixty convicts is kept busy upon the roads practically all the time, and this has been true ever since the abolishment of the convict lease system four years ago Cherokee county, in addition to using her allotment of 37 convicts, is, in fact, paying extra money out of her tax receipts to secure the convicts which Pickens, her next door neighbor, is turning down.

Hillsides are being cut and road bottoms filled all along the route in Cherokee, and Judge Webb himself superintends the work and maps out the improvements. The convicts are maintained at a cost of less than 50 cents a day per man. Cherokee county is so enthusiastic over the cause of good roads, however, that she is taxing herself for a fund of over $20,000 a year for the maintenance of convicts, salaries of officials and equipment for road building. This is an example of what enthusiasm will do for the development of a county, and it is already returning a hundred-fold to Cherokee. By just this constructive spirit of development the entire Blue Ridge highway will eventually be built, and when it is finally attained north Georgia will come into her just deserts as the favorite summer resort country of the south.

ATLANTA WHOLESALERS SEND OUT INVITATIONS

The Atlanta Wholesalers and Manufacturers are very busy sending out big batches of invitations to their merchant friends for the coming Southern Merchants convention. The time is now drawing near when these men will be in the city for the big doings and prospects point to a record-breaking crowd.

Many of the leading firms send out their own invitations in addition to those sent by the Merchants & Manufacturers association. The association has sent out about 30,000. Besides these there have been fully as many others sent out by the different firms. Among others who sent them out this week were the M. C. Kiser company, who mailed to a list of about 3,000. John Silvey & company sent out a similar number as did the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company, Ward-Tault company, J. K. Orr Shoe company, Regan-Mallons company, All-Star Manufacturing company, the Hirshberg company, Gramling-Spalding company, A. M. Robinson company, and many others.

The association set the figure of 4,000 as the number they expected to come to the convention. Indications now are that there will be many more than this number here. Acceptances are pouring in upon Secretary Harry T. Moore and the number who will doubtless come without advising the association in advance is bound to be large. Everything points to this being the biggest and best convention Atlanta has ever had. Everything is ready for the entertainment of the visitors and that they will have a royal good time is assured. Atlanta is always regal in her hospitality and when the occasion is one which directly involves the biggest business men of the city there is bound to be something record-breaking in the affair. The records which are going to be broken this time are the attendance figures and the good time for the guests, as well as the beneficial time to all concerned.

News of the U.C.T. Atlanta Council 18

We regret to state that Brother F. M. Jennings, of Carrollton, Ga., met with an accident recently. Fortunately he is rapidly recovering and will be out with his friends again very shortly.

At the meeting last night there were several candidates initiated and a good time generally. We were much pleased to have Brother Weir, a grand counselor, to preside.

Brother W. G. Addy was busy playing baseball in Turin, Ga., last week.

Brother H. M. Ashe covered himself with glory arranging the menu for last night's meeting. May he arrange many another for us.

We have received notice of an accident to Brother L. C. Green and trust that it is nothing very serious.

Brother E. T. Turnipseed has recently had the misfortune to suffer from a case of bloodpoisoning. We are glad to see him out again shaking hands with his friends.

AT PONCE DE LEON.

Convention Barbecue Will Be Held at Popular Poncey.

Jim Little, who has charge of the barbecue arrangements for the coming Southern Merchants' convention, reports this week that they have arranged to hold it at Ponce de Leon. This is good news, as there are splendid accommodations there, and with this location and Jim Little in charge, assisted by R. K. Rambo, one of the best possible times of the whole convention is positively assured.

C. A. Smith, with the A. M. Robinson company, came in Friday from his local territory with a nice bunch of orders.

News of the U.C.T. Fulton Council 505

Fulton 505 had a big time yesterday afternoon at the big booster meeting at 2 p. m. There were a large number of initiations and everyone left in the best possible humor. More of these kind of meetings will probably come in the near future.

Brother J. W. Curry, who is at present in Tennessee, writes that he will be back in Georgia by the first of the month and will be here to stay.

Brother J. L. Moore was last heard from in South Carolina. He tells of good business and good times and promises to return and see all the boys shortly.

Brother C. B. Pepper is now in Columbia, S. C. He writes that he is enjoying fine business in his new field.

Don't forget to send in that application for the U. C. T. which your neighboring traveling man is all ready to hand to you. All you have to do is ask for it, and the boys are expecting you to send it in.

The Gramling-Spalding company report that they are sending out 2,000 individual invitations to merchants to attend the convention.

"YEP, THEY'RE COMING!"

LEAVES FOR WEST.

J. K. Orr, Jr., Will Take Fine Trip to Rocky Mountains.

J. K. Orr, Jr., of the J. K. Orr Shoe company, leaves tomorrow for a four weeks' vacation. He will visit the Rocky mountains and go as far west as Salt Lake City.

Mr. Orr will visit many places of interest on his trip and anticipates a very enjoyable time. Of course he will not forget "Red Seal" shoes while away and it is likely that the firm's business will spread as a result of the trip.

OLD SALESMAN DIES.

Oldest Man With Lamar & Rankin Passed Away Wednesday.

"R. M. Sloan, who was the oldest salesman, both in point of age and service, with the Lamar & Rankin Drug company, died last Wednesday night at Austell, Ga.

Mr. Sloan was one of the best known and most liked drug salesmen on the road and his death leaves a gap in the ranks which it will be exceedingly hard to fill. In his loss the Lamar & Rankin company feel as if they had lost one of the main stays of the business and he will be mourned for many years to come.

Mr. Sloan died from pneumonia and had been sick for about two weeks. The funeral is to take place today.

ATTENDING FUNERAL.

W. B. Carlton Goes to North Carolina.

W. B. Carlton spent a few days in North Carolina last week. Mr. Carlton had the misfortune to lose a cousin, Roger Mott, who recently died in Atlanta. His home was in Statesville, N. C., and they took the body there for burial.

Permanent Exhibit Under Way—Location Settled

The Chamber of Commerce have now completed their plans for the permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods and the only thing left to do is for the manufacturers to come forward and subscribe for the space and the material arrangements of the building.

The exhibit will be housed in the four top floors of the new Chamber of Commerce building at the corner of Ashburn avenue and North Pryor street. This is one of the most prominent corners in the city and should make a dandy location. It is within easy reach of all the hotels, the depots and the center of the city and will doubtless attract many visitors who would not see the place if it were further out from the center of the city.

The space which will be used for the exhibit totals between 18,000 and 20,000 square feet. The probability is that this will prove to be too little rather than too much. Many manufacturers have already subscribed and a large proportion of the space is already taken up. This, of course, means a case of "first come first served" and manufacturers who desire space had better send in their applications as soon as possible so that they will not be disappointed. The different exhibits will be arranged with related lines together as much as possible and in this way good order will be assured. There will be no danger of an effect of general mixture and when a man is interested in one style of merchandise he will be able to see all the different lines in that form of business which are manufactured here without hunting all over the building for them.

This exhibit is the result of much hard work for several years and the fact that it is now definitely arranged is due to the hard work which has been done by many individuals. The committee of the Chamber of Commerce who have had charge of the selection of the site are to be congratulated on their happy choice. This committee was composed of Brooks Morgan, chairman; Bolling H. Jones, J. K. Orr, V. H. Kriegshaber, M. M. Davies, J. T. Rese and W. H. White, Jr.

AN APPRECIATION.

Georgia Retail Merchants Express Appreciation to Press.

The following resolution was passed at the recent meeting of the Retail Merchants' association of Georgia, held here during the past week.

"Whereas, the aims and objects of this organization are to be helpful and educational to the merchants of the state generally; and,

"Whereas, it is, and has always been, the policy of this association to advise and urge its members to refrain from patronizing any an dall manner of questionable or illegitimate advertising propositions or schemes that are constantly being urged upon them; and,

"Whereas, the local newspaper has always ben a large factor in the building up of the commercial interest, general growth and prosperity of its section; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we recommend a more general use of its advertising columns.

"Be it further resolved, that we thank the press of the state for the support they have given us in our work, and bespeak a continuation of the same for our mutual good.

"Be it further resolved, That we especially thank The Atlanta Constitution and The Atlanta Journal for their initiative, liberal and most cordial support of our cause, that of promoting the mercantile interests of Georgia."

Julius Fiebelman, manager of the B. F. Avery company, reports that they are enjoying a particularly good business for this time of the year. Mr. Fiebelman states that while this is usually a quiet time with them, yet the farmers are buying largely of implements this year on account of the splendid prospects for crops and business in the fall.

J. A. COOK GOES WITH NATIONAL CASKET CO.

J. A. Cook, one of the best known casket salesmen who have worked out of Atlanta has recently made a change in his connection and is now representing the National Casket company. His new connection went into effect the fifteenth of this month and he has just completed a good week's business for his new firm, as a starter.

Mr. Cook will cover the northeast Georgia, North Carolina and east Tennessee territory and ought to make a splendid record, as he is a first-class salesman and well known over a considerable portion of the territory.

A. C. McHan, of John Silvey & Co., is looking much better than he has for the past few weeks. Mr. McHan has been a little bit under the weather, but is now in fine condition once again and states that he is looking forward to meeting a lot of old friends who will be here for the convention.

A SILO ON EVERY FARM

The following article is taken from "The Furrow" a farm paper which is published by the John Deere Plow company. It takes up the question of a silo for every farmer and should receive the most careful attention from all farmer merchants who generally are the leaders in progressive agriculture in thir listricts.

The importance of the silo in general farming operations is just beginning to be understood. The housewife has known for years the economy and convenience of canning fruits and vegetables for winter use in household affairs. The men folks of the farm have not been so advanced in their efforts to preserve the green stuff of summer for feeding to stock during the winter months.

The silo to the farmer is what the tin can or the glass jar is to the housewife. A good silo means green feed all winter for your money making stock.

The University of Missouri offers some suggestions for filling the silo. They say corn is ready to be cut for silage when the grain is in the dent and glazed but can still be broken with the thumb nail. At this stage under normal conditions the two or three bottom leaves will be turning a little brown and the shuck slightly yellow at the end. There is greater danger of putting silage up to dry rather than to moist.

If you have a stave silo go over it carefully and see that all the joints are tightened up to exclude the air. The bands may have to be loosened later when the silage swells the staves.

The inside wall of a concrete silo should be washed with a mixture of cement every two or three years. They fills up the pores and small cracks. Air must be kept from the silage.

It usually takes six teams to keep the average silage cutter busy.

Corn should not be cut too far ahead or it will dry out too much. Two men can usually work to advantage in the silo distributing the silage with forks. Keep the silage higher at the walls than in the center. Tramp the silage next to the walls thus packing it down and keeping out the air.

After filling allow the cutter to stand for two or three days so you can refill the silo after the silage settles. Leave a space on top to put on a load of grass. This will rot and seal the top and prevent throwing out a lot of spoiled silage.

The silage should be wet after it is put in the silo. If the corn is too dry add some water. A small stream may be run into the blower from a barrel or tank. It is especially important that the silage be well packed. The blower should be run a few minutes every morning in order to clear the atmosphere before any one enters the silo. Gas frequently forms over night when the silo is only partially filled.

There is no question about the economic value of a good silo on the average farm. The maximum advantage however will come from a thorough understanding of how to fill the silo and how best to feed the silage."

SEE THE INSIDE

A good doctor must have absolute and accurate knowledge of every internal organ of the human body. He must know at first hand the facts and functions of every innermost detail of man's anatomy.

The law requires that he spend years of study where he can learn these things from actual observation and experiment before he is licensed to practice his profession.

Now, some merchants sell shoes from year to year without knowing anything about the construction of their goods except what they can see from the outside.

In merchandise, as well as medicine, it is the "inside knowledge" that is most valuable.

During the Southern Merchants' Convention in Atlanta, beginning August 5th, we'd like to have every visiting merchant take a trip through our Red Seal Shoe Factory.

Whether you sell Red Seal Shoes or not, a visit to this modern factory, where you can see every process and detail of construction, will make you a wiser buyer and a more convincing salesman.

Come by our offices, 30-32 Auburn avenue, where we will be glad to have someone take you through the factory.

In this day of great industries a thorough knowledge of the smallest details of a business could now be secured in the old way of knowing simply through the process of doing There are too many details The business man of today must have facilities by which knowledge of these details will [illegible] to him automatically This is where the second item in the list of [illegible] comes in Well directed effort means more than mere industry and hard work

Virginia and Texas—From a mem[illegible] standpoint the division of these two states presents an interest[illegible] At present they are Vir[illegible] [illegible] Texas 2 793—very evenly [illegible] One has just en[illegible] the national convention and who can forget the splendid hospital[illegible] the perfect arrangements and the royal fellowship? The other will entertain the next national convention and the mere contemplation of that [illegible] excites both pleasure and satisfaction

The relative strength and eligibl[illegible] of Virginia and Texas are [illegible] that no one can safely predict the final result The Old Dominion has [illegible] centuries of achievement behind [illegible] while the [illegible] of the Southwest [illegible] the future before her Virginia or [illegible] on or the other—in class A [illegible]

How is Georgia going to stand in [illegible] national convention with her [illegible] state Tennessee? Common sense business men as a rule have the ability to hustle—are willing to work and take care of themselves by the honest sweat of the [illegible] They are not looking for snaps and easy places nor do you find them in line seeking office or some place where they can be fed and clothed from the public treasury

God is the universal soul of thought love affection—everything in and through Him this light is reflected in others When we fail to see this soul in others it is a fair indication that we haven't it ourselves and know very little about human mercy and kindness We say We love God How can you hold your head high past a fellow sufferer and say that you love God?

In our daily lives if we could think see and feel for others and learn to deal honestly and justly with all to bear patiently what may come to us gently and quietly to speak cheerfully to all in the home on the streets in the stores at the stations these things within themselves would bring us the highest reward

Brother drummer what is your life's story? Do you mind telling us? Its ups and downs its lights and shades its tragedies and successes? We know not what the future reward is but we do know we have some heaven and hell here on this earth Friends to gather round you when all is calm and serene to court you and to wish you well when the sun is shining and you are in the mils of plenty is a part of heaven To have these friends [illegible] and absent themselves when clouds are lowering and the world looks blue when their presence could benefit you and do you so much good is a part of hell

We do not know where we will be this time next year but we do know where we are now and while we live and have our health minds and bodies free we should do something to let future generations know that we once lived on this earth and made someone happy

Georgia or any other state is a great state when life is considered more important than property and human labor more valuable than special privilege

We would love to live in a city where the daily wages of all working women and girls was sufficient to support life with a little surplus—that if one should lose a job it would mean something other than starvation prostitution theft or suicide

COTTON FUTURES AND COMMON SENSE

Marietta Ga July 26—When a man who has no cotton owns no cotton and wants no cotton sells a hundred bales of cotton and puts up a margin of $?00 to protect his bet that it will go down and pays $1? commission to the bucket shop man—that is cotton future trading so called by the men who get the commission They say that the life of the whole cotton business depends on this future trading That without it there would be no stable dependable market

Most every one nowadays calls this pure gambling with no frills Georgia passed an anti bucket shop bill and it is a known fact that it has saved the people of Georgia millions of dollars and has not in any manner effected the growing of cotton the sale of cotton or the spinning and weaving of cotton

President Wilson had before him this week a bunch of 'bucket shop men from the New York cotton exchange urging him not to tax cotton future trading You might travel all over the country but you would hardly find a cotton farmer who would say a word if cotton future trading was taxed $50 a contract The only men who are upset about cotton and futures are those who buy no actual cotton want no cotton and who sell no actual cotton If the cotton production and cotton spinnig industries are depending upon a lot of gamblers for their existence then the sooner there is a readjustment the sooner will the cotton business get on a healthier basis Supply and demand is the only true and health basis for a product to be bought and sold by When over 60 per cent of the cotton sold in exchanges and bucket shops is purely paper trades and when the losses to misguided investors is over 80 per cent of the money invested then there should be no question but that common sense should cause cotton future trading to go forever

These three words initiative referendum and recall mean simply that the people shall have the right to put incompetent politicians out of office It is the fundamental principle of our republican form of government It is the exact reverse of monarchy It is exactly what the ballot box is for and it is what the ballot or voting are for except that under this ruling an efficient and corrupt officerholder may be displaced before his term of office expires and before he has time to do a great deal of damage and before he can graft everything in sight

To continue this move means to step towards life time officeholding which means eventually absolute monarchy

Statesmen are alive to the fact that even that august body the supreme court of the United States is a menace to our popular form of government by virtue of their lifetime tenure which makes them absolute intolerable and almost insufferable when compared with all other departments of government of the republican form

The trend of the times the sentiment of the great mass of worker who comprise the very backbone of our country is that life time tenure of office is entirely too autocratic for fair and equitable administration of justice People are thinking Brain cells are very much more alive than politicians ever thought they could be statesmen are finding it out and are advancing along the right lines But many laggards still think and act as if the mass of humanity were asleep Quite a few old time mossback crooked grafting corrupt politicians found it out last November and went home wondering what it was that jolted them loose from the sugar that they'd been sucking so long

The day of the 3 for 5c—Old Glory politician is passing There never was a better demand for such enough men who can put the prefix 'states in front Initiative referendum and recall is a Trinity that is not dead yet It will rise up when least expected and smite some who think it is buried It is a more powerful weapon to smite with than Samson used and will leave a lot more broken jawbones on the landscape than he ever did

LOGIC

Three Fulton county politicians in the legislature struck out initiative referendum and recall from the new charter amendment The city council of Atlanta wanted it the people of Atlanta wanted it the whole of Georgia wants it

WHERE WOMAN HAS NO RIGHTS IN GEORGIA

"THE LAW SAYS YOU CAN TAKE MY BABIES — I DARE YOU TO COME AND GET THEM!"

Before the throne of justice in an Augusta courtroom stood an anxious mother, fighting for possession of her two children Her babe was in her arms Tenderly her eyes watched its innocent form—while the court room in suspense awaited the decision Sternly came the mandate of the judge

"The law says your children belong to your husband, and you must give them up!"

What? A mother give up the babes she has brought into the world, nursed at her breast and into whose souls she has breathed her very life's ambition? And for no other reason than that her husband, from whom she has separated, wants them? It is the law ' declared the judge

But Mrs Mary W Zachry the young and beautiful mother who faced the court in defense of her children—felt the summons of a higher law within her soul It was the law of motherhood Man might legislate and courts might decree to their heart's content ! one thing she knew Her childi were her own

"COME AND GET THEM!" A MOTHER'S DARE

'The law says you can take my babies' she cried, facing the judge The deputy sheriff advanced to enforce the judgment Take them if you dare she cried pointing direct to the officer of the law

And there was no man in that courtroom, no sheriff nor even her husband, who would meet that dare With her baby girl nestling in her arms she swept from the courtroom To this day, in spite of the court's decree she holds the child

She fled the state Rather than remain in Georgia with the enforcement of the court edict being imminent she gathered up her belongings took her two little children and crossed the state line into South Carolina

BLEASE WILL GRANT NO REQUISITION

Reaching Columbia S C Mrs Zachry at once appealed to Governor Cole Blease for protection in case Georgia should ask for requisition South Carolina's attitude toward the question of woman's rights in the possession of her children has already been shown to be far different from Georgia's in the famous case of the son of Senator Ben Tillman who sought to take his children from his wife The South Carolina courts held adversely and through all the hearings of the court the senator was unable to get the children from his son's wife though the circumstances were very similar to those of the Zachry case

Governor Blease assured Mrs Zachry that he would protect her from requisition and she accordingly will remain in South Carolina with her two children In this way has her defy to the Georgia courts been successful thus far

Little did Mrs Zachry dream however, that by her instinctive act of defiance she would start a great movement that would result eventually in overturning an archaic Georgia law Yet such was the significance of her act Since then a bill has been proposed in the Georgia legislature which would give to woman the right to her children unless some just cause is shown for her unfitness

At present she is not given even the secondary right to her children as long as the father is living while the husband is given absolute possession under the law unless it can be proven that he is unfit to rear them

ANCIENT LAW MAY BE OVERTURNED

By this very case in Augusta however of Mary W Zachry versus Julian J Zachry it now seems likely that this long cherished law may be overthrown Because of the prominence of the family in Augusta and the gripping human interest involved the case has received wide publicity Settiment has been strong in condemning the law which said to Mrs Zachry You must give up your children

The final decision of the superior court awarding both children to the father took place Tuesday in Augusta. This ruling upheld the decision of the ordinary's court which had laid the same construction on the Georgia law and from which Mrs Zachry had appealed to the higher court

JUDGE UNBARES LAW IN DECISION

In lengthy decision rich in satirical contrast between the rights of woman and the law of the land Judge Henry C Hammond of the superior court gave the verdict in the much discussed case in favor of the husband last Tuesday

"The court expressly refrains from discussing the natural rights of the mother—in law they do not exist," says the judge

Decision in Full

Nearly a hundred years ago Mr John Stuart Mill gave to the world his wonderful treatise The Subjection of Women Halting plodding civilization has not yet reached the end of the way which he pointed out so plainly, but we have progressed tremendously and there is reasonable hope that ere long we may arrive A man is taller and heavier and stronger than a woman Not to travel in savage and barbaric lands we have only to revert to the history of our Anglo Saxon forefathers to learn that women were once the mere slaves of men—they were their property—their chattels The right to beat and even kill the wife was vested in the husband The legal right to beat a wife with a stick not bigger than the thumb existed under the English law until comparatively recent times Lord Coke refers to it

One of the dearest moral and legal rights of a human being is the ownership of property but a wife was not permitted to own any property right here in Georgia until Mr Andrew Miller of Augusta fathered the married woman's act passed in 1866 by our legislature She is even now debarred by statute from making an honest livelihood in this temple of justice She is debarred of innumerable legal rights exercised by the most wretched and depraved of mankind But what is a matter of infinitely more concern to her is this She is not given as I understand the law after a careful thought and study even a secondary right to the custody of her own children except in cases where the father is dead or her children are bastards

Father Absolute Owner

It appears to the court that the present status of our law in Georgia is this The father is entitled to the custody of his children unless as the law says clear and strong proof can be given of his unfitness The right to take and hold them against the mother from the instant of their birth until they are 21 is his qualified only to this extent that the best interests and welfare of the child is to be considered Apparently the law of Georgia except as stated above gives no right of possession whatever to the mother of children in the ground alone that she is their mother First the law deals with the clearly defined right of the father to their possession Incidentally the welfare of the child may be considered but the mother as a matter of law is not taken into account at all Of course as a matter of fact not as a matter of law it may be held by the court that the child's best welfare will be secure by awarding to her its custody but such a decision is based not upon the rights of the mother as such but alone upon the rights of the child I make this statement of the law of Georgia as it exists for educational purposes only I will not venture to comment upon it Courts and judges are merely ministers of law Whether the law is right or wrong just or unjust they must enforce it and asks for a reversal of Judge Walton's decision It is a matter of idle conjecture as to what this court may have done had the case been presented to it first hand but can the court say under the rules of law above stated that the ordinary as the decisions of our court express it has grossly and flagrantly abused the discretion reposed in him? The court has endeavored to point out above that the mother as such in the first instance has no right whatever to the custody of her children We are then remitted to the only other two considerations Was the father in this case an unfit person for the enjoyment of his paramount legal right ? Was the best interests of the children duly regarded under the evidence in the judgment rendered by the ordinary

Asks for Reversal

Mrs Zachry brought habeas corpus proceedings against her husband before Judge Walton to recover possession of her two children On the hearing their custody was awarded to Mr Zachry Mrs Zachry brings this case before the superior court by certiorari

The moral character of the father his devotion to his children is not questioned A score or more of witnesses testified that the home of the father is with his mother and sisters in that healthful peaceable Christian town of Harlem The evidence shows these ladies to be of the most exalted character and truly devoted to these children The surroundings in the home of the fathers parents are as favorable to the rearing of the two children as they could be in any home in the state of Georgia The witnesses and parties appeared in person before Judge Walton whose opportunity for making a righ decision was infinitely greater than is this court's on a paper case The court expressly refrains from any reference to the natural rights of the mother who conceived and bore these children who nursed them at her breast and whose heart and soul is wrapped up in them The court refrains from discussing these natural rights Because they are not legal rights—in law they do not exist Certiorari dismissed

Judge Asks Repeal of Law.

Judge Hammond himself, who wrote the above decision giving the children's legal custody to the father, has since then made a frank appeal to the legislature for the repeal of the law In a letter addressed Friday to the Richmond delegation to the general assembly he urges that the law be immediately changed to give to mothers the ownership of their children

"There is nothing peculiar about our Georgia law as it stands," writes the judge in his letter "It is the old common law which we inherit from the English. Doubtless every state in the union has or has had this same law

"However, it is distinctly discordant with present day beliefs and sentiments on this subject and I am very earnest in believing that the old law should be brought into harmony with these beliefs and sentiments '

The new law, as suggested by Judge Hammond would provide that custody of all minor children shall remain with the mother of such children unless it be plainly shown that she is an unfit person to exercise the right

Final Hearing Kindergarten Bill On Next Tuesday Afternoon

The kindergarten bill was brought up in the senate last week and referred to committee on education, which reported favorably on the measure The same bill was read in the house Monday and referred to its educational committee which set Thursday July 24 as the date for its discussion

Because of the interest in this bill the committee room assigned was quite inadequate to accommodate those present so they adjourned to the senate chamber and listened to the convincing arguments from speakers throughout the state interested in this bill At 5 o clock the committee went into executive session that lasted until after 8 o clock the adjourned without reaching any decision to meet Tuesday

At this second session only twelve of the eighteen members were present and we understand in the vote taken there was not a dissenting voice

While this result seems encouraging it is not final and does not represent the sentiment of the entire committee The opposing faction has asked for this result to be withheld and no report made until Tuesday therefore we earnestly ask that all influence be brought to bear upon the representatives of the different counties and the districts throughout the state The fate of this bill will be decided in a few days and it is most important that every mother in sympathy with the kindergarten movement communicate with her representative at once and impress him with his responsibility to his district in regard to early education of its children and the importance at this age of a proper foundation

This bill is optional with each district and we are only asking that it be made possible for the districts desiring to adopt it

We beg that you act on this at once and let both the house and the senate know that motherhood stands united for the highest and best development of every child in our state

MRS J R LITTLE President

The Value of the Kindergarten

In this day of dissatisfaction of educational methods perhaps more correctly speaking a consciousness of something radically wrong in the system we evolve all kinds of theories, all equally useless unless tested each test an experiment and experiments are expensive hence we must from a composite of all ideas advanced select what seems to impress the greatest number to be for the greatest good

That which to the majority seems to stand for the greatest efficiency in the end is the proper occupation of the very young child Idleness never brings contentment or happiness We spend much time and energy in lamenting the violent temper shown by the child when left by himself and expected to serenly smile his young life away during the hours of daylight with absolutely nothing but his own resources to amuse him when he has never been allowed the opportunity of having resources for unless he is an embryo Plato to reason for himself or a Galileo full fledged to meditate upon the causes of things how is he with his own little mind to create occupation and amusement for himself with the articles available such as a gollywog dog which terrifies him or a hissing steam engine equally distressing to him supplied without rhyme or reason as to his particular needs attributing to him a mental capacity for adjustment not expected in proportion even to an adult

Therefore why not systematic occupation certainly not cramming from textbooks but amusing instructive occupation for the very young age being governed by the mentality of the individual

Giving Each Child a Chance

Is it not the least we can do in these days of keen competition to start each individual with a fighting chance by equipping him thus with a mind trained from earliest childhood to use to the best advantage those faculties given him and by cultivating a desire to be occupied rather than be one of the type we all know so well that must be amused and in case of a failure to produce such amusement becomes irritable and sometimes almost unmanageable this reacts on the individual in charge usually the poor tired well meaning mother who suggests to the child that it is very bad temper

This suggestion though thoughtlessly made by the mother, is absorbed by the child after a few repetitions of the scene he thinks it his prerogative to be bad tempered and thus this side of his nature gets to be the stronger There you are with the deep seated trait to combat in the child for the years to come that in the hands of a skilled tactful teacher would never have been allowed to develop, a trait that leads to discontented children in their teens and unhappiness later in life through lack of control in the trying conditions in their relation to their fellowmen that are the natural inheritance of all So if we want a hundred per cent efficiency in our children why lose a large per cent at the start by little or no discipline under the age of six?

There seems little doubt in the minds of physicians that much of the crime of the present day could be prevented by proper and earlier training What more disastrous to mind and body can we contemplate than the railroading of a child through grade after grade in our schools without the proper physical and mental foundation it is like a hastily constructed building on an imperfect base What sort of superstructure can we expect but one constantly needing support to keep its line of direction right

So it is with the elaborate course of study prescribed by the present-day schools A child needs a strong healthy body beside a thorough grounding mentally or the poor strained superstructure will represent the too heavy weight on the unstable foundation The slogan "Balance' is to be dealt with kindly for the development of all sides the mental the physical the aesthetic as well at the antithesis are equally necessary to the well balanced mind and these form the basis of the kindergarten training The crying need we think now is to stimulate interest or create a desire to know things

Not every child is born with an inquiring mind if one lacking it happens to live in an environment where its attention is directed to cause and effect it will develop it to some extent but on the other hand if it is surrounded by an atmosphere of indifference it simply drifts along in a half stagnant condition. the easiest habit to acquire and the most stubborn to overcome when allowed to continue until the child is 6 or 7 years of age

After that in one naturally a student the habit of studying by compulsion is formed instead of for the love of it—a sad beginning towards a hundred per cent efficiency end The kindergarten we would consider a power to correct this by creating in each child irrespective of mental caliber always presupposing average intelligence the desire to study for study's sake not alone for the sake of efficiency but for the love of study —an absolute hunger for the why and wherefore—and to learn to acquire this with a just regard for the rights and privileges of others this carried on and developed in proportion to the strength of character of the individual would leave no opportunity for the distanced citizen left behind the quarter mile post in the race for a livelihood

The Defective Children of Georgia

An Englishman writing of his travels in this country says that he at first found it difficult to discover a mutually interesting subject of conversation with his hosts But after a time he found that whenever conversation lagged he had only to bring up the subject of children or training and all were then vitally interested Views might differ but the fact remained that parents present and prospective were desirous of their duty to their children and anxious to fulfill them

The Englishman's opinion was that a little of Archbishop Whatley's advice would be a good thing for Americans Whatley advised a little wholesome neglect Undoubtedly this advice is good for the normal child who develops best in the freedom from restraint which a normal home gives No institutional child can compare with one reared in a home however humble where he is an individual and not a number God gave the child to the parents and however much they may fall below our standard they still do more for their child than any one else can do

Admitting that this is so for the normal child, it cannot be true for the defective, who needs special acaool and manual training It would be an ideal condition if these schools for defectives could be established in each county so that the child could have both special training and home nurture But as this is not possible at present let us base our first institution on such broad lines that we may so enlarge the scope of it that the ill between parent and child may not be weakened

We remove one potential criminal every time we so train a child that he or she is not only able, but willing to earn his living All cannot work without supervision but nearly all children can be trained to work happily and earnestly under kindly direction

This training and direction our proposed school will give to the defective children of whom there are more in than one not conversant with the subject would believe the state owes to these children care and training Care for the helpless ones, care and training for all those capable of receiving It Shall the legislature adjourn without doing something for these children who, have such a claim upon the state?

HE DERAILED TRAIN AND SAVED MANY LIVES

Chicago July 26—Scores of lives were saved today when a towerman in Burnham Ill threw the Ohio river special on the Pennsylvania railroad into a derail and averted collision with a through Wabash train from St Louis The train took the ditch at a high rate of speed The locomotive was overturned but aside from minor injuries suffered by the fireman no one was hurt

A moment after the Pennsylvania train hit the derailer the Wabash train clicked across the frogs at the track intersection less than 1,000 feet away

NEGRO BLOOD IN LEE EXPLAINS LIFE MYSTERY

Chicago July 26—That William Henry Lee a publisher who died intestate leaving property valued at $700 000 had negro blood in his veins was the opinion expressed today by Frederick C Laird of Spokane Lee's former business partner who believes this explains the mystery surrounding Lee's early life The public administrator has been unable to find any of Lee's kinsfolk although seventeen persons named Lee are trying to establish relationship

I am sure Lee was part negro said Laird I never talked with him about it but his features and manner of speech showed it. I was close to him in our fifteen years of partnership as any man that ever came into his life I believe, and he told me at one time that he had no living relatives

The ambition of his life was to complete the dictionary on which he was working when stricken with paralysis last June

On his deathbed Lee made frantic efforts to talk, but he was balked by paralysis that affected his tongue

State Pride

Missouri stands first in the United States in the production of plug tobacco, and aside from Arkansas and Kentucky has no rival in the accuracy of its use.

WILSON IS CLEMENT TO BANKER CARLISLE

Washington July 26—President Wilson has decided to permit Newton A Carlisle former president of the National bank, at Newberry S C convicted of misapplying its funds to serve his sentence of one year and a day in the Newberry jail instead of at the Atlanta penitentiary The prisoner is an aged man and in ill health The president will permit the transfer so that Carlisle may be close to his family and friends His five year sentence was recently commuted by the president to a year and a day

Perhaps one half the world is mighty glad the other half doesn't know how it lives.

LIGHTNING IS DRAWN BY LEGISLATOR'S HOUSE

Fort Smith Ark July 26—In an electrical storm today the home of J W Baxter of Fayetteville a member of the state legislature was struck by lightning five times within an hour

The first bolt knocked off a chimney The second entered through a telephone and knocked Baxter unconscious Scarcely had he recovered before the third knocked his wife senseless The fourth stunned his mother, and the fifth hurled the house from its foundation

The world is but a fleeting show and most of us have to be shown

To Overcome Sunburn, Tan, Freckles, Wrinkles

(From Outdoor Life)

If you are freckled tanned or sunburnt, dab a little almond mercolized wax on the face and allow it to remain over night When you wash off the wax in the morning fine flakes of almost invisible particles of cuticle come with it Repeating this daily the entire outer skin is absorbed but so gradually there is not the slightest pain or inconvenience Even the most stubbornest freckles yield to this treatment The underlying skin which is the new complexion is so fresh and youthful looking you'll marvel at the transformation It is the only thing known to actually discard an aged, sallow, muddy or blotchy complexion It is fine for a discolored neck One ounce of mercolized wax procurable at any drug store is sufficient in most cases

If sun and wind make you squint and frown, you're bound to cultivate wrinkles and crowsfeet To overcome these quickly bathe the face in a solution made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel—(adv.)

(From Outdoor Life.)

If you are freckled, tanned or sunburnt, dab a liberal amout of mercolized wax on the face and allow it to remain over night. When you wash off the wax in the morning, fine, flaky, almost invisible particles of cuticle come off with it. Repeating this daily, the entire outer skin is absorbed, but so gradually, there's not the slightest pain or inconvenience. Even the deepest freckles yield to this treatment. The underlying skin which follows is the new complexion is so fresh and youthful-looking you'll marvel at the transformation. It's the only thing known to actually discard an aged, sallow, muddy or blotchy complexion. It is fine for a discolored neck. One ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store, is sufficient in most cases.

If sun and wind make you squint and frown, you're bound to cultivate wrinkles and crow's-feet. To overcome these quickly, bathe the face in a solution made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel.—(adv.)

Superfluous Hair Truths

Stop Experimenting

If you use a simple toilet preparation and it proves to be worthless, you only lose money. When you use a questionable depilatory, however, it is a very serious matter because you not only lose money, but you take the grave risk of permanent disfigurement.

If You Value Your Face

use De Miracle, the one safe, perfected hair remover of proven merit. Remember, the injury caused by the use of doubtful hair removers will either result in permanent disfigurement or cost you many dollars because it will take months or possibly years to gain control of hair growths which have been stimulated by the use of such preparations.

De Miracle

Only Real Hair Remover on Earth

De Miracle contains certain ingredients which give it the power to rob hair of its vitality. Therefore, you must eventually use it to retard and gain control of growths which have been caused by the unwise use of questionable depilatories. Is it not safer and wiser to begin using De Miracle now, before the growth gets beyond control?

Leaves No Tell-Tale Smell

If you use De Miracle it will be impossible for any curious person to know that you have used a hair remover because De Miracle evaporates immediately after accomplishing its work, therefore leaves no odor whatever. On the other hand, if you use any depilatory with a distinctive odor, an offensive tell-tale smell will cling to your skin for hours. If your dealer will not supply you with De Miracle, send $1.00 direct.

Atlanta People Have Beautiful Homes in Toxaway Resort Region

By Louise Dooly

Lake Toxaway July 24—"To travel the world over and then to find the best with truth and beauty almost at one's own doorstep, and among one's best friends,' was the inspiration for our building our summer camp here in the Toxaway region and calling it Alloh wes tie," explains Mrs Hugh Richardson, who is at home now in her camp at Lake Toxaway, one night's ride from Atlanta

"Alloh wes tie is the Indian name for 'Happiness," and Mr and Mrs Richardson have already made good the name, not only as it stands for the sprit of their camp but it extends to the friends who visit them

The camp stands on the height of a four acre enclosure at the lower end of the lake with a frontage of three sides on the water All their trees they have preserved and through the leafy openings is the whole of the lake's beauty with Mount Toxaway beyond

Lovers of the Open

Lovers of the open they have proved themselves not only in the location but in the building of Alloh wes tie which is rich in porches one to be an open dining room another a sleeping porch for the children or on cold days a sun parlor a long one across the front of the house to be partly braced open to every breath of the fragrant balsam air and small ones placed wherever they are picturesque or useful All are done in native woods in the rough but the house itself is of red cedar shingles their color, like the rosy reflection of dawn upon them They are not to be stained but will deepen and mellow with time

The Beauty of the Native Pine

Native pine has been deep stained for an interior finish smart and cool against the white walls and in the big living room opening by French windows on the long porch a mantel of rustic strength and dignity is built of rock from the neighboring hills arching over a fireplace which will burn great logs Every inch of space has been utilized to greatest advantage both of beauty and convenience and back of the house is a cottage well placed and picturesque which holds the laundry and servants rooms while beyond is the barn

The Nectar of Life

The purest spring water is pumped into the house and a cow given possession of the grounds several weeks ago has been a dependance and a comfort to the babies of the family ever since they have been at Toxaway

Leisure Lodge, the Nunnally Camp

Mr and Mrs James H Nunnally are the first of the Atlanta people to gain possession of their camp which is far enough from the base of Mount Toxaway to permit a sweep of view in one direction of the long mountain and the wonderful lights when the sun sets behind it on water and surrounding hills and in the other is the whole sweep of the lakes length to the dam with glimpses among the trees of the other cottages

Leisure Lodge Frog Island Lake Toxaway is in itself an inviting description and one reaches it by the lake drive although the lines of the house are first suggested from the entrance gateway—or by boat The big motor boat which is a luxurious automobile on the water is The Frog and the soft little fellow that plies busily but with less power and pretense between the island and anywhere you would go is The Tadpole

The rustic landing at Frog Point is a little Japanese and the idea is to be continued in a Japanese tea house and a Japanese bridge leading from the mainland to the island

The Lodge

The lodge is all in one floor and a spacious porch with hardwood floor is as well adapted to summer as to its more frequent use of winter living Its pillars are chestnut trees in the rough and on the shingle walls are hanging already the stripped skins of mountain snakes as trophies and ornamentation as the deer head over the door

A long living room and the dining room across the front of the house are paneled high in native pine which has been given a fine stain and waxing and the stone fireplace which seems merely to have upheld there reaches the whole ceiling The only furniture which is from Atlanta is of willow designed especially to order at Toxaway from native woods and after patterns suggested by the artistic chatelaine while the rugs are Navajo Deep windows afford one view the distant mountain picture and the other the water expanse

The Interior

The bedrooms all in white with the delightful atmosphere of daintiness that lies in wicker furniture chintz hangings and rag rugs and the kitchen department has every convenience of the city home in miniature

The water supply comes from a spring within the Nunnally lands It is carried in pipes surrounded with laurel and fern and reaches a thickly wooded path back of the house Electric lights from the same power which supplies the hotel as a detail of the comfort of the place, and best of all is the gracious atmosphere of a happy hospitality

Mr Hal Hentz the architect planning the house was the guest of Mr and Mrs Nunnally last week and they have also been entertaining her parents Mr and Mrs Winship

Later their children Mr and Mrs Winship Nunnally and Mr and Mrs John Wheatley will be their guests

A Real Log Camp.

Mr and Mrs C A Wood have adopted the typical camp style of detached log houses and the first glimpse of the camp whether one approaches it by water or comes unexpectedly upon it by a woodland path always brings exclamations of delight

Distinctly unique to its surroundings although a closer inspection reveals that its rustic charm conceals all the comforts and conveniences of a little house in town

The great rough hewn logs composing the three houses in one have been left unbarked outside and in to turn the silver gray which is nature's unrivaled coloring for them

The main house includes the living room bedrooms and bath with a wide porch which extends also across an adjoining house which is composed of dining room pantry store rooms and kitchen and in the court between a pine tree has been left growing On the opposite side is the guest house each house under its own roof but all completing one another

Baskets and basketry are a fad with the lodge hostess and its most appropriate expression it will find in the fitting up of the house in the woods which has not yet been christened

The Camp Colony

Mr and Mrs Telfair Stockton of Jacksonville are at the inn until the completion of their attractive camp at the head of the lake Mr Milton Brown of New York and Salisbury N C who spends all his summers at Toxaway is building a very complete mountain house between Leisure Lodge and the Log house Mr and Mrs Lamb of Columbia S C have a cottage which is somewhat Japanese in suggestion with its pagoda like open porches and its rock summer houses and arbors Mr Richards who has charge of the Toxaway reservation has enlarged and improved the Home site which fronts the hotel and Mr George F Armstrong and family of Savannah are occupying a little city of tents in the forest near the head of the lake

Recent Arrivals

Mr and Mrs Milton Dargan and Miss Helen Dargan are considered former residents here although they have not built a home This motor boat is one of the most hospitable in the water and their row boats almost successful fishing smacks in the Toxaway colony while Frog and Tadpole harbor their favorite fishing resort has ever been made the theme of summer poets

Among the arrivals at Toxaway last week were Miss Ada Alexander Miss Lula Jackson Mrs H P Nelson and children Mrs A R Harrell who joined Mr and Mrs F I Wright and Mr and Mrs F I Wright Jr Mr and Mrs Milton Dargan Miss Dargan of Augusta

Mrs A W Hill is expected about the first and she will have under her chaperonage Misses Inez and Callie Hoke Scott who have been spending mid summer at Magnolia Beach

Misses Marion Goldsmith Ruth Stallings and Laura Ansley are among the Atlanta girls who are expected while their southern cities will be well represented and the number of men who have made reservations indicates that Toxaway until the end of the season will be anything but an Adamless Eden

Ghosts of great lovers in their loves despair

II

Painters have known your beauty and Raphael
Your deep Madonna ecstacy did view
And would not Dante dare the depths of hell
Sweet eyes a dream for you?

III

Love to Life s Eden on delightful wing
All earth a Paradise of bloom and beam
Heart o the Morning Spirit o the Spring

Mrs. Witham Writes of Great Sunday School Meet in Zurich

By Mrs. William S. Witham.

In the heart o Europe at the foot of the northern Alps where the great roads meet that bear the traffic from north to south east to west and the point where the Limmat leaves the lake lies Zurich

In the long ago The Man spoke three words Go, everywhere teach

Alexander had set up the vehicle of conveyance (Greek language) and Julius Caesar had broken down all the walls of partition and thus the twelve and their followers were enabled to keep going and keep teaching until now comes the news from the continent of Africa that a man is over there making a language to convey the message to a benighted tribe—being the only people in the world without a language

The message of the twelve friends has been made readable in four hundred and fifty three tongues The twelve friends and their ardent recruits have been so diligent that their number have increased to more than thirty millions people

The Globe.

Woodrow Wilson in his celebrated speech on The Significance of the Sunday School said this If you will only give these little people the pure bread itself you wont have to ask some inexpert chemical analyst to tell them how the bread is made up There is no man with insight enough to see how the bread of life is made and I wish sometimes that we could strip off these superficial explanations and get down to those things that sustain our spirits

It is very difficult indeed for a man or for a boy who knows the scripture ever to get away from it It haunts him like an old song It follows him like the memory of his mother It reminds him like the word of an old and reverend teacher It forms part of the warp and woof of his life

The Parable

From it correct for in the parable of The Sower the three kinds of soil short in production cannot be compared to the pliable nature and heart of the child which is always productive in every clime

Already more than 1600 delegates from America alone have been enrolled each blessed with the privilege of paying his own expenses proving this purely a work of love under the influence of the message

These world wide Sunday school gatherings have been held in Rome Italy Jerusalem Washington D C and now at Zurich

We have Sunday school workers from Korea China Japan India Brazil Bolivar Mexico Congo Egypt Turkey and from all other parts of the globe flying together more than one hundred and fifty flags

The Light

Directly above the platform in the Grand Saal of the Tonhalle is suspended a globe 9 feet in diameter the wires that give it shape are arranged in such a way as to represent the meridians and parallels and the semi transparent cover bears the outline of the various continents of the world Within is a cluster of electric lights and above a large electric cross in red shedding its light directly upon the globe The idea conveyed by this symbol is the central thought of the program of the convention The last night of the convention there was a congress of the nations where all of these flags were massed upon the platform and prayers offered in all languages represented in order that the last impression of the convention might be in keeping with its dominant note

Real Liberty

Bartholdis statue on Bedloes Island Liberty enlightening the world is indeed a misnomer for one would not dare travel very far on lifes journey by that Light of Liberty These people are convinced that the light of the world is the word and that all one has to say to his companion Look! There is Jesus—The Man who spoke to the twelve and the letter of introduction is the Bible for last night when the thousands were gathered in the great auditorium all of the lights were extinguished but the one in the suspended globe which lighted only The Cross

On Sunday Jul 13 the very same lesson songs and prayers were used in all Sunday schools around the world being a copy of the exercises here in Zurich

Some of the most prominent men in finance and in professions as well as the heads of governments in both Europe and America are here as duly appointed delegates

All Georgia Will Applaud When Corra Harris Writes A Play for Gladys Hanson

By Isma Dooly.

It will be a "first night" memorable in the history of Georgia women of genius when Corra Harris produces the play in which Gladys Hanson will star. The play is on the way, for these two gifted women spent several hours together the past week when the very atmosphere was vibrant with the enthusiasm of each in the project.

"Why, don't you write a southern play—the great southern play?" asked the gifted young actress, Miss Gladys Snook (Gladys Hanson), when she met Mrs. Harris at dinner here during the week.

FIRST ACT PLANNED AT A DINNER PARTY.

"I would like to do it," was the reply of Mrs. Harris, and in a few moments the black tulle hats framing their interesting faces had come so close together the chivalrous gentleman, their host, was almost hidden behind the nodding bows and the first act of a play was being worked out.

Miss Snook, mentioned a certain chapter in one of Mrs. Harris' books which she declared was a drama in itself and in low tones she quoted from the lines to give her interpretation of it. Mrs. Harris was delighted and assured Miss Snook that she was one of two people who had caught the complete meaning of that particular chapter.

An engagement was made and on Thursday Georgia's most gifted woman writer and Georgia's most gifted actress met and took the first step in the making of a play which Mrs. Harris will write and in which Miss Snook will star.

A Southern Play.

"The southern play has not yet been written," said Miss Snook in the course of the interview, "and there is so much in the life of the south from which a play could be built and for the first time express southern life and character as it is especially as it relates to our women. There are few of us who can sit patiently through the so-called southern plays which have been written where the hero drawls out his words perforce melodramatic little tricks at inopportune times, drops the last syllable of his words, and is exploited as an ideal provincial type utterly unlike the real southern girl of today and unlike the ante bellum girl who was the most cultured and charming of all southern products.

"There is too much of the so-called 'professional southern' type in the plays that have been written, too much pushing of the war in identical strad of that which led up to it and that which has grown out of it, and I have just impatiently longed for the man or woman who could dramatize the southern spirit, the southern life, as it is."

"I care not whether Mrs. Harris puts the play in the drawing room where the leisure world finds expression or whether she puts it in the valley of Barrow county. No matter where she puts it she will draw real life out of it and her people will be real people. She sees people as they are, sees their splendid elemental qualities and she will write of them bringing their souls and themselves with them and it will be the character in these people as she sees it that will make the play rather than some incident upon which it will hinge."

The Good to Be Dramatized.

"I scarcely know what you mean by the good play. If you mean do I want to see good dramatized yes—many times yes. The world wants it, too, and the world could get it through the most joyous of comedies as well as in the melodrama or the tragedy. The play blending humor and pathos and real life, just the life you put in your books is what the world would applaud, and Mrs. Harris was here directly addressed.

Those who know Mrs. Harris know that one of her powers is silence and that she has naturally that physicalogical reserve and poise of being that most people have to strive to acquire. It is easy to make people feel anything, but she can with that peculiar reserve of hers make one think and feel at the same time. She designs, I think, to put some of that power in the play she writes, for in discussing the drama generally she said that one scene she had always felt she would like to put in a play was one that would probably have scarcely a word spoken in it—one that would do the speaking into the hearts and minds of the people and draw response in that great silence that is more real and stirring than anything in life.

Such a play would give the actor his or her greatest opportunity, and the young actress pushing on the inspiration of the play in the writer's mind was delighted with every idea advanced by Mrs. Harris. A meeting was arranged in December when Belasco will take his first look into the collaborated plan of Mrs. Harris and Miss Snook.

Back to the Valley.

Mrs. Harris went back to the valley in Barrow county where she is now residing the nearest postoffice to the place being Pine Log Ga. She was accompanied by her architect and will push the plans for her permanent home there. She loves the country there and the people. She has never written anything about these particular people but she is making copy always out of all the people she meets. She gets her notes from life and from the expressions of it as it comes from types she meets rather than individuals.

In selecting epigramatic sayings from her books recently for some dinner cards the remark was made to her. "The trouble about your book is the real clever things you say reach so directly that a person is apt to think you mean them singly and directly. The reason so many people dislike 'Eyes Second Husband' is because reading it they every one take up a kind of egotistical sensitive idea that you have mysteriously known their innermost lives and written of them."

Well I am writing about them'—the ones who read my books here there and everywhere. When asked frequently if I mean this one or that one my impulse always is to say, Yes I mean you, and another you in the adjoining village and county and community, for "you" and the expression of you I used is everywhere life is.

The more I see of Mrs. Harris and know her the more I am convinced of the verity of the statement made by a literary man who, having read all her books and talked to her once, said, 'She is to me a woman come out of exile with startling wisdom and perilously worldly virginity.'

Week-End Parties Gave Pleasure to Many Guests

There were several delightful week-end parties beside the number given last night at the Piedmont Driving club. Mr. and Mrs. John Murphy entertained seventeen guests Friday evening the guests meeting on the terrace and gathered about a table circular in shape and exquisite in flowers.

The central piece was a high basket filled with pink gladioli and about it at intervals were smaller baskets filled with pink and white roses and lilies. Silver candlesticks had in them unshaded waxen tapers and the almonds were in pink baskets. The place cards for the ladies were held in the clasp of white satin handkerchief bags handpainted with miniatures of the saloon beauties each bag containing a tiny mirror and powder puff. The gentlemen had as place cards dainty cabaret figures. A guest who had kept the secret that it was Mrs. Murphy's birthday had brought in at the last of the dinner the prettiest birthday cakes, embossed in pink roses and ornate with seventeen waxen tapers. A poem accompanied the gift to which the hostess responded most graciously.

Dinner Dance and Pool Party.

Last night Mr. and Mrs. Morris Brandon entertained thirty guests at dinner at their beautiful home on Peachtree road. The party assembled at 8 o'clock, the long living room with plants and flowers continuing the beauty of the garden, which could be seen from the windows on all sides. The tables were artistically decorated in old-fashioned flowers, including phlox, lilies, zinnias, Japanese sunflowers, gladioli, all blended with the delicate foliage of fern, and filling vases and bowls. The candlesticks held unshaded tapers, and the place cards were dainty creations painted in flowers.

After dinner dancing was enjoyed, and later the evening's pleasure concluded with a swim in the pool. The guests drove down in machines to the bath house, and the water, as clean as crystal, was most inviting after the dance. The dancing gowns gave place to bathing suits, and the "cold plunge" brought forth the most exhilirating change, and made everybody happy. The guests who did not go in the pool envied those who did, and the desire to learn to swim is threatening the popularity of the popular dances.

Mrs. Brandon, Mrs. Robert Maddox, Mrs. James Dickey, Mrs. James D. Robinson, Mr. W. H. Kiser, Mrs. Frank Calloway are among those who are approaching the expert mark in swimming, while there are many others in training.

The dinner dances with pool parties following have become most popular everywhere, especially at the country clubs, north and south, those hosts and hostesses counting themselves indeed fortunate who have private swimming pools.

The entertainment was progressive conversation and the guests, about forty in all, showed themselves no laggards in this gentle art, and the evening passed all too quickly. The final treat came when the party was conducted to McRae's pharmacy, where they partook of ice cream.

Miss Mellichamp's Pictures on Exhibition

One of Atlanta's most talented artists, whose oil paintings are now on exhibition.

Miss Louise Mellichamp, a pupil of Miss Virginia Wooley, is exhibiting a group of water color pictures at the Cole Book company which reflect great credit upon her.

They were painted by Miss Mellichamp on the recent trip to the mountains of north Georgia when Miss Wooley had an open air class there for several weeks. The pictures portray with vigorous stroke the beauties of that scenery, as the young artist saw it, and each study is an expression of thought as well as an appreciation of the object inspiring the picture.

Miss Mellichamp has been studying five years. Her pictures indicate a careful study and training and she is recognized as one of the few industrious workers among Atlanta's many talented women who are choosing a vocation in life. A great deal has been said about creating an art life here, getting a museum and generally producing an interest in this direction. One of the surest ways to bring about any of these things is to encourage the artistic talent in the community and to help it on where it manifests itself.

Gossip of Georgians in the Metropolis

By H. S. Carraway, The Constitution's New York Bureau.

New York, July 26.—(Special.)—An interesting romance culminated recently in Lebanon, Pa., when Miss Miriam Bowman was married to Wallace A. Van Syckel, formerly of Macon, and a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The wedding was truly a vaccinated wedding and the honeymoon was one of quarantine. The bridegroom was ill in bed with typhoid fever, but this did not alter the bride's plans. She had herself and the minister vaccinated in order to complete the ceremony, before the Good Samaritan hospital, n which Mr Van Syckel was housed, was placed in quarantined on account of a smallpox case there.

With the mothers of the two young people peeping through the hospital windows as witnesses, but still at a safe distance in order to avoid the questionable charms of having themselves vaccinated, the wedding was solemnized.

Upon his graduation from the Massachusetts Technology as a mining engineer, Mr Van Syckel entered the employ of the Lebanon Furnace works as one of the superintendents. Within six months he had met Miss Bowman, the daughter of Mr and Mrs George S Bowman, of Lebanon. The meeting occurred at the wedding of Mr Van Syckel's roommate. He was best man and Miss Bowman was maid of honor. Six months later the couple were engaged, but guarding the matter as a secret. Six months more and the engagement was announced and the wedding date set.

Then the bridegroom-to-be was attacked with typhoid and taken to the hospital. Several weeks after he entered the institution a case of smallpox was discovered among its patients, causing the announcement that the hospital would be quarantined the same day. Then Miss Bowman got busy. She rushed to the license bureau and procured the necessary document. Then she and the officiating clergyman were vaccinated, for the physicians would not allow them in the hospital without it. The ceremony followed.

The new Mrs. Van Syckel stated that she could not stand the thought of staying away from her husband for the length of the quarantine and made up her mind to be with him during his illness. She is living in the Nurses' home in the hospital grounds and sees her bed-ridden lord and master every day. This she says, is honeymoon enough for both.

Welfare of Children of Georgia Demands Woman's Influence

Representing the educational legislative committee of the Federation of Women's Clubs Miss Isma Dooly has issued a strong message to the women of Georgia urging them to come forward and put their shoulder to the wheel to push on the state's prosperity

I would like to see the leader of every woman's organization in the state though patriotic though for philanthropy all of them call a halt just long enough to plan a course of study which would embrace first and foremost a knowledge of the laws of their own state and the conditions which have led up to the non payment of the teachers of Georgia Then they might reach out for the remedy and finding it make for its application.

If only one half of the members of women's organizations in Georgia would post themselves about the things going on around them sufficiently well to agitate the cause in their communities and extend their knowledge and their wishes to the men sent to the state house to make laws, there would be no teacher in Georgia unpaid and if tax reform was needed, tax reform would be

TIME FOR ACTION

It is timely for the women of Georgia individually and in organization to arise to the situation as they did once before when they put their influence back of the measure which made it lawful for counties to borrow money for the payment of teachers the movement to bring about such legislation first agitated by the Woman's Club of Bainbridge

Will the women not come forward again and urge upon the present legislative body the need for direct action?

Is the child of the state to extend its hands to outside aid for education?

Are the mothers of the state of Georgia going to remain silent when the men and women who have faithfully rendered service to their children are left unpaid for their services?

HELP FIND THE REMEDY

There must be a remedy and it is up to the women of Georgia who are anxious to see the child of Georgia take its place with the child of other commonwealths who are taught by well paid consequently well equipped teachers to help find the remedy What can be done? may be the question asked It is up to the women of the state to investigate what can be done They can look into the remedy suggested of tax reform and see how if that is the remedy it can be in the quickest way brought about

It would seem to me that for a moment everything should be made second to the investigation the women have a right to make into the affairs of state as they directly affect the child of the state and having posted themselves they would be in a position to co operate intelligently with the men of the state who now are perplexed with many questions which just as directly affect the women of the state as they do any other individuals

The women have worked with wonderful efficiency individually and through organizations for the advancement of education Their activity and practical form of work have taken the time they might have given to the study of the questions now pressing upon them and they are dazed almost by the story that comes to them that the teachers of their children are not paid and the very basis of that education for which they have worked is struck at in the most vital spot

THE HOME AND TAXES

There is not a home in Georgia which is not affected by any law which deals with taxes and there is not a home in Georgia which roofs a child which is not related directly to the school This brings the teacher and the mother logically very close together makes them through the child people of inseparable interests Upon the teacher the mother puts her most precious care when she consigns the child to the teacher to carry on the direction of the training she (the mother) has begun The teacher on the other hand has not only her obligation to the mother to fulfill but her obligation to the state and society when she becomes a factor in civilization second to none other

As the tax problem and teachers problem are settled or ignored the welfare of the child is advanced or neglected These issues are going to arbitrate the destinies of tomorrow's citizens

Women can prove not only the value of their organizations but their right to demand anything they want of the lawmakers of Georgia And what all the women of Georgia want they will get

Mrs Eugene Rielly of South Carolina and Mrs B W Williams will bring messages from the General Federation of Clubs

The theme of an address to be made by Mrs M A Lipscomb of Athens will be Danger Signals to Woman's Organizations

Two hundred and forty seven organizations will be represented in the [illegible] twenty seven of these received into the federation since the last meeting Household Economics will be the subject of informal addresses at a luncheon to be given during the meeting The presidents of the federated clubs will be presented at an evening session and a brilliant reception will be one of the social features of the convention

The Club of the Future

By Margaret Danigan Hurley

Last night I dreamed I saw them these women members in the club of the future They were holding their annual summer outing groups and groups of them scattered about a green field near a shady woodland whose banks sloped down to a broad blue river How think you they were celebrating this gay occasion? They were building a bonfire As the great flames waved and leaped skyward what think you these wise Minervas were flinging into the hot depths? The too snug fitting Paris gown and the underneath coat of mail that usually squeezes the torso of womankind Into the blaze went all the false hair that ever came from China or elsewhere hat pins pointed toe shoes those hooks and eyes that must have been invented by his satanic majesty and [illegible] as a source of gain by his earthly dep[illegible] Into the hot coals went hand [illegible] and embroidery [illegible] of which had impaired [illegible] work [illegible] eyes Then when the last still high heeled slipper and uncomfortable hat were consigned to the flames the women joined hands danced around the blaze and sang this song

Mrs. Graham Writes History Of D. A. R. Work in Georgia

Attention is called to the very interesting as well as authentic account of the work of The Daughters of the Revolution in Georgia, as compiled by Mrs John M Graham of Marietta

This story which is necessarily lengthy will be continued through several weeks and will prove valuable as a reference for facts pertaining to the early organization of the society formation of chapters, work engaged in by the state, as well as showing the wonderful uplifting influence of the Georgia Daughters of the Revolution —(Editor)

By Mrs John M Graham

The National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution was organized in Washington D C October 11 1890 In the ensuing winter Mrs Augustus Roman Salas of Waynesboro Ga who later became the first state regent of Georgia was in New York city when a meeting was called for the purpose of establishing a chapter in that city and she attended the meeting She applied for membership and her name was the second from Georgia placed on the roll of the National society the first being that of Mrs Mary Hammond Washington of Macon (No 81) who was admitted January 16 1891

This New York meeting seems to have been the first held for the purpose of establishing a chapter though two other chapters were organized before the New York city chapter had completed its organization The first of these was the Chicago chapter which was organized March 20 1891 the second was the Atlanta chapter organized April 15 1891 The date of organization of the New York chapter is given as April 19 1891

In a paper read at the Georgia state conference of 1899 Mrs Salas told of her attendance at the New York meeting and at the second meeting the regent general asked her to give the names of two prominent ladies in Georgia to be appointed honorary regents for the state One of the ladies suggested accepted the office This was Mrs Martha Berrien Duncan of Atlanta Mrs Salas said Not long after Mrs Duncan received her appointment the regent general requested me to write and find out if Mrs Duncan would be willing to organize a chapter in Atlanta Mrs Duncan consented The honorary regent was fortunate in getting Mrs Harry Jackson to accept the regency for the Atlanta Chapter and Miss Junia McKinley for secretary and treasurer Work in Atlanta progressed finely Soon after this the regent general offered me the office of state regent and I accepted The honorary regent turned the work over to me but continued to give me valuable assistance and I found Miss McKinley a most efficient worker The progress in the Atlanta chapter was so encouraging I began to canvass the entire state I wrote to every city and almost to every town and relatives all over the state aided me materially in sending me the names of prominent women I organized a chapter in Rome with Mrs M A Nevin regent I then had Mrs T S (Sarah Berrien Casey) Morgan appointed regent for Augusta

Three of the pioneer leaders who have been mentioned—Mrs Salas Mrs Duncan and Mrs Morgan—and Mrs P W Meldrim (regent of the Savannah chapter from 1894 to 1898) were descendants of Major John Berrien of the revolutionary army who was the first secretary for Georgia of the order of the Cincinnati

David an Undesirable.

(Chicago Dispatch to The New York Tribune)

David and Solomon and some other patriarchs were excellent men as judged by the standards of their own time but they would not be admitted to membership in the church of to day said the Rev John Thompson of Chicago at the Desplaines camp meeting illustrating his contention that the world was growing better

There seems to be more crime and evil than ever he continued but this is because through the world searching enterprise of the newspapers we hear more about it

The rise of golf baseball and other outdoor sports was a sign of improving moral standards, the clergyman said.

Brunswick Welcomes the Boys in Gray

Fanned by ocean's gentle breeze
Where the cool gray moss hangs thickly
From the great old shady trees
They are gathering—the soldiers
For the great reunion day
And all Brunswick sounds a welcome
To the boys who wore the gray

Where the clear blue waters murmur
And the soft green marsh grass bends
Where the reedy pools are smiling
To the waves the ocean sends
Where the mockingbirds are singing
At the dawning of the day
They are gathering here in Brunswick
Hail to those who wore the gray

In the quaint old southern city
With its grass trimmed streets of shell
With its oleander blossoms
And its jasmine loved so well
With its ivy vines and cypress
Mourning for a by gone day
They are gathering—the soldiers
Clad again in suits of gray

From each patriot's porch and door way
Stream the colors white and red
And the folds of Dixie's banner
Proudly float again o erhead
Float again o er hearts that love it
Just as well as on the day
When they swore to die or save it—
They—the boys who wore the gray

To the roll at break of day
Where are all whose hearts once bounded
At the sound of reveille?
In their low green tents some slumber
Off on furlough did you say?
No for them have taps been sounded
They are gone—those boys in gray

Gone we whisper gone forever
To that last vast camping ground
Where there comes no cruel warfare
And where taps shall never sound.
Gone alas But still their memories
Dearer grow as day by day
Others join the silent phalanx
Leaving few the boys in gray

Dixie's banner free from stain,
Purified by blood and heroes
Sanctified by heroes pain
They are gathering—the soldiers
For a hand clasp—here today
And all Brunswick kneels to honor
Dixie's boys who wore the gray

Once again they hear the bugle
Waking them at early dawn,
As they heard it in the sixties
On full many a darksome morn
But the strains which fall so gently
On their hearts this glorious day,
Tell of love and fame and honor
For the boys who wore the gray

Not long ago we read the following in one of the southeast papers Talk about ideal girls? How goes this one as a record breaker? The bride is a young lady of wondrous fascination and remarkable attractiveness for with manners as enchanting as the wand of a siren and a disposition as sweet as the odors of flowers and spirits as joyous as the caroling of birds and mind as brilliant as those glittering tresses that adorn the brow of winter and with heart as pure as dewdrops trembling in violets she will make the home of her husband a paradise of enchantment like the lovely home of her girlhood, where the heaven toned harp of marriage with its chords of love and devotion and fond endearments sent forth the sweetest strains that ever thrilled senses with the rhythmic pulsing of ecstatic rapture

Paying Prisoners Wages to Help Their Families

(From The New Orleans Picayune)

Kansas is now paying the prisoners of the Kansas penitentiary 10 cents a day and the money is to be used to help the dependent families of the prisoners Heretofore Kansas has been allowing 3¾ cents a day to each prisoner to be given him upon his release and on which he could start life anew The 1913 legislature passed a law increasing that amount to 10 cents a day and if there are dependent children of the prisoner or a wife dependent upon him the prison board is to pay the money to the dependents instead of to the prisoner on his release Efforts were made to make the amount 25 cents a day to prisoners with relatives but the legislature refused to make the allowance

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH WILL ASK $10,000 MORE

Wants Additional Funds to Manufacture Free Typhoid Vaccine.

Having failed in the house to secure an additional $10,000 in the general appropriation bill for the health department, to be used for the manufacture and free distribution of typhoid vaccine, the state board of health has not given up its fight, but will appear before the senate committee on appropriations and ask that this increase be recommended.

The present appropriation for the health department is $30,500. The board wishes to devote the extra $10,000 to the employment of an extra man in the department whose exclusive duty it shall be to manufacture typhoid vaccine and to employ at least four physicians to go to all parts of the state and administer the vaccine free of charge.

This, believes Dr. N. F. Harris, head of the department is one of the most important measures for the welfare of the state that has ever been introduced in the Georgia legislature. He states that the calls upon his department for typhoid vaccine average 500 per week, showing an enormous amount of typhoid in the state.

Vaccine Not Dangerous.

Dr. Harris states that the vaccine has been proven to be practically without any after effects which the popular mind has so long associated with vaccines, and that it is not dangerous.

For its effectiveness, Dr. Harris cites the following figures upon the results of its use in the armies of the world.

61,622 British soldiers immunized in India during 1911. Typhoid incidence in the immunized 1.7 per thousand, in those not immunized 6.7 per thousand—a case reduction of 75 per cent.

Death-rate in immunized 0.17 per thousand, not immunized 1.45 per thousand—a mortality reduction of 8? per cent.

24,705 Japanese soldiers immunized in 1909. Comparison of 12,915 immunized soldiers with 20,245 not immunized living under the same conditions shows 1 case per thousand among immunized, 14.52 cases per thousand in those not immunized. A reduction in the typhoid rate among the immunized of 93 per cent.

30,000 persons immunized in Memphis, Tennessee during the recent typhoid epidemic. 517 of these were children 1 to 5 years of age. The department of health report says: We believe from our experience that it saved our city from a most serious epidemic of typhoid fever."

2,044 persons immunized in Baltimore during 1911-12. Not a single case of typhoid fever occurred among these persons. In 109 hospital nurses and attendants immunized there were no cases of typhoid. Among 82 nurses and attendants not immunized there were 7 cases.

1,381 nurses and hospital attendants in Massachusetts hospitals were immunized. Only 2 cases of typhoid fever developed. Without immunization typhoid incidence was nine times greater.

Results of Army Use.

Dr. Harris cites the following telegram from the surgeon general of the United States army, as to the results of the use of the vaccine in our own army.

Washington, D. C., July 24.—Dr. H. F. Harris, state health officer, Atlanta, Ga.: Result typhoid vaccination in army excellent. No case typhoid enlisted men in army since October twenty-seven last. Strength, ninety thousand. Last year eighteen cases. Before vaccination, began about one hundred and sixty cases yearly. Same strength, only six cases in vaccinated soldiers in nineteen-twelve. Since work started in nineteen nine only one death from typhoid in about hundred and fifty thousand vaccinated soldiers.

GEO. H. TORNEY,
Surgeon General U. S. Army.

The Georgia health department is the first in the union to make such an application to a state legislature, and Dr. Harris believes that it has set a precedent which others must follow.

TWO FARMERS IN DUEL.

Rufus Clark and Bill Cox Shoot Out Differences.

Moultrie, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—Rufus Clark and Bill Cox, two prominent farmers, engaged in a pistol duel several miles west of here, and as a result both are possibly mortally wounded. Clark was shot four times, while Cox was wounded by three bullets.

The trouble was the culmination of bad feeling that has existed between the two men for some time. Both are alleged to have made threats against each other's life. The meeting occurred at Cox's store. Clark was in his buggy in the roadway. As soon as he approached the store the shooting began. Friends of each man cash the other fired first.

NOVEL OF UNDERWORLD WRITTEN BY CHARLTON

New York, July 26.—Porter Charlton, who was recently said to be seriously ill in the jail of Hudson county, New Jersey, where he is awaiting extradition to Ilinois for trial on a charge of wife murder, is in good health, Charlton today denied the report of his illness by mailing to his friends photographs which he has had taken of himself in the jail during the past week. He appears from them to be almost robust.

It is learned that during the three years confinement he has engaged in interviewing many other prisoners with whom he came in contact and has attempted a novel of underworld life.

DAVID LAMAR SILENT ABOUT HIS INDICTMENT

Washington, July 26.—David Lamar, the "wolf of Wall street," who is under indictment in New York on two counts for impersonating public officials, refused today to face the indictments seriously and intimated that he had no immediate intention of returning to New York.

Mr. Lamar said he was so extremely "busy" here that he could not afford to leave at the present time. With his counsel, Henry E. Davis, he is awaiting copies of the true bills found against him by the federal grand jury before making his plans.

Lamar admitted before the senate "lobby" investigating committee that he had impersonated Representative A. Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania, Speaker Clark and other well-known public men in telephone conversations with Wall street rivals in an effort to advance his own schemes.

Perry Court Adjourns.

Perry, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—The city court, which has been in session the entire week adjourned this afternoon. A good many civil cases were disposed of.

HARDWICK MAY PLACE CANDIDATE IN RACE

Friends Say Will Not Run Himself, But Will Undertake to Name Successor.

Although Congressman T. W. Hardwick, of the tenth, stated in a recent interview that he had authorized no statement to the effect that he would not be in the race to succeed himself, his friends here persist in the statement that he has decided not to run again, but that he will retire and devote himself to the practice of law, probably locating in Atlanta.

This report has been persistent here for some weeks and it is at least noteworthy that Congressman Hardwick neither asserted that he would or that he would not run, but merely that her had given no authority for the statement which his friends have circulated as political gossip.

Now comes the further report that in refusing he will not, for the present at least drop political activity in the tenth, but will use his influence in the naming of his successor. In fact political gossip has it that the real reason why Congressman Hardwick has not "authorized" the statement that he would retire at the end of his present term is his desire to be of the greatest assistance possible to the candidate in the tenth whom he decides to support and that his announcement of retirement will not come until that candidate is actively in the field.

It is not unnatural if he has decided to retire that Congressman Hardwick should desire to see the district represented by one of his personal and political friends, and it is understood that at least two of these, and possibly others, have already been approached with a view to ascertaining whether they are willing to make the race with Congressman Hardwick's backing. The fact that negotiations in this direction have been going on is current talk among the politicians from the tenth who have been here from time to time on account of the legislative session.

Though quietly the race in the tenth is developing about as rapidly as that in any district of the state, and all indications point to its startling early and developing considerable warmth.

Smith the young girl, ignoring flying bullets and shells, rushed from her home, crying to the retreating confederates to reform and fight. She escapes injury. The commission, at the same time, will investigate whether the consolidation of the roads which would be affected by the proposed bond issue would be unlawful.

Lyerly, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—A new road building outfit, consisting of a 30-horsepower gasoline traction engine, three graders and a scarifier, has been purchased by this county and arrived a few days ago and is being tested this week. Mr. O'Neill, of Atlanta, representing the sellers, and R. A. Several miles of fine road can be made in a day.

Children, Fathers and Mothers Clash in This Neighborhood Row

When Mrs. J. B. Smith, who lives in Battle Hill, was arraigned before Recorder Broyles with her husband and J. A. Butler, on charges of disorderly conduct which grew out of a neighborly feud, she argued her own case so well as to be exonerated.

The Smiths and Butlers live in adjoining homes in Battle Hill and trouble has existed between the two families for some time. Their grievances have been aired once before in police court, and, only Friday afternoon, the two 10 and 12-year-old sons of Mr. Butler were haled into juvenile court at the request of the Smith family.

The trouble aired Saturday arose when Irwin, a 5-year-old member of the Smith household, rode his velocipede along the sidewalk in front of the Butler home, and, according to testmony, made faces at the Butler children. A clash ensued in which the latter youngsters are said to have tried to block Irwin's tricycle.

Both families came upon the scene in a clash of words, which eventually attracted the mothers. Policemen Ryan and Head interfered and made cases against the parents of Irwin and against Mr. Butler. In court Mrs. Smith examined witnesses, pleaded her case and made a strong talk before the recorder.

In concluding the trial Judge Broyles said that family rows frequently resulted in tragedies, and, to this effect, cited an incident in which Mr. Butler was alleged to have drawn a knife on Mr. Smith when they clashed in a row over their children.

"Family grievances are too trivial," he said. "They should be overlooked—not agitated. Murder results too often in such cases."

"TAX-DODGITIS" AFFECTS TAX VALUES OF WILKES

Decrease of About $50,000 Over 1912 Shown by Receiver's Report.

Washington, Ga., July 26.—(Special.) When tax Receiver J. T. Harris of Washington, completed last week the compilation of interesting figures embodied in the 1913 tax digest of Wilkes county, it was announced that Wilkes county would show a decrease in taxable values of approximately $50,000 over the figures of 1912.

The announcement in itself, carried little surprise when first made for it was reasoned that a slump in Wilkes county values was due for the following good and sufficient causes: First, the past two years have been hard years with farmers of this section, a small yield of farm products coming coincident with low prices; second, tightness of money matters had so depressed the price of standard stocks and bonds that citizens having surplus cash reserve in the banks which had formerly been given in for taxes, had invested this idle money in non-assessible stocks and bonds; third, Wilkes county has, in the past twelve months, suffered from several large fires which would certainly have its effect upon the tax returns reported in Mr. Harris.

But it has developed that none of the above causes are sufficient to account for a decrease in Wilkes county's taxable values for 1913. The real cause lies in a subtle malady which has spread rapidly over the grand old county of Wilkes and is known as "tax-dogitis."

Figures show that in realty holdings white citizens return for taxation 264,294 acres of land with all buildings and improvements thereon at an average of $4.71 per acre, or a total aggregate value of $1,244,440. Negro tax payers return 22,568 acres of land with the improvements thereon at an average valuation of $4.88 per acre.

This indicates one or two things: Negroes are more honest than their white neighbors in reporting their property for taxation, or the property owned by negroes in Wilkes county is more valuable than the property owned by the white people.

A conservative estimate of the value of Wilkes county's 300,000 acres of land is $20 per acre, on an average, including the improvements on the farm lands of this section of the state, this price would be given on forced sale.

FATHER KILLS CHILD; MULE KILLS OTHERS

Birmingham, Ala., July 26.—While George Hogg, a farmer, was cutting wood at his home near Searl, Tuscaloosa county, Friday his ax head flew off the handle and struck his youngest child, an infant, in the head, killing it instantly. The father picked up the body of the child and ran to his home nearby. There a neighbor met hid and told him two of his young sons had been pawed to death in the field by an angry mule.

Mrs. A. E. Ingram, Perry.

Perry, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—Mrs. Anna E. Ingram died at her residence, about 3 miles north of town, on Thursday night, and was buried in Evergreen cemetery Friday afternoon. She is survived by her husband, J. T. Ingram, and two daughters.

SUMTER COUNTY TO BID FOR EXPERIMENT FARM

Americus Trade Board Approves Bill Providing for Removal of Station From Griffin.

Americus, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—The Americus board of trade, assembled in special session today, adopted resolutions warmly approving the several bills introduced in the legislature providing for the removal of the Georgia Experiment station to some favorable locality in south Georgia, to be finally determined by competitive bids.

In such event Sumter county will urge its claims for the experiment station as soil and climatic conditions of this agricultural section differ materially from those of Griffin and other sections.

CROSS KEYS MERCHANT IS STABBED BY NEGRO

Macon, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—J. F. Ham, a merchant at Cross Keys, was stabbed six times by a negro this afternoon when the latter resented being dunned for a debt of 20 cents. At the hospital, where Mr. Ham was taken, it was stated his injuries were not necessarily fatal.

The sheriff's deputies had a hard fight before they succeeded in placing the negro under arrest, and they found it necessary to beat him up considerably before he could be taken.

SHE DIES IN 7 HOURS FROM BITE OF INSECT

Miss Drew Nunn Had Premonition of Death and Gave Funeral Directions.

Athens, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—Miss Drew Nunn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Nunn, living between Athens and Commerce, was bitten Thursday evening by some unknown insect while in the garden. She died from the effects of the bite in seven hours.

In the garden she exclaimed: "Oh, something has bitten me." Search was made and there was no chance for the bite to have been made by a snake. She went into convulsions and died in great agony.

The strange feature of the case was that she seemed to have a premonition of her approaching death several days before the cause of her unusual demise occurred. Though robust and well, she declared several days before that she was afraid that she would soon die and she even went so far as to give minute directions as to the kind of coffin she wished to be buried in, the songs to sing at, ther funeral and the list of pallbearers.

This is the first political club organized to foster Colonel Carl Vinson in his campaign, and is unique in that those composing its membership are from the postoffice that Congressman Hardwick recently worked to create.

On The Beach

THE frock on the figure standing to the left is of a grayish blue silk, made with the two flounces of chiffon on the skirt, which are very fashionable this season. The kimona blouse has a vest of white tulle, while tulle frills finish the elbow sleeves and are used for the upstanding collar. The girdle is of a deep shade of blue silk. The hat is of white hemp, faced with grayish blue silk, and trimmed with white roses, while a bow of the same material as the girdle is very becomingly placed under the rather flared brim in back.

The dress on the girl reclining in the chair is of gray voile, on which large red dots are embroidered. It is made very simply, black silk being used for the sash and the band edging the neck, while white silk is used for the ruffles around the neck and sleeves. The one mark of originality on this gown is shown in the sleeves, which are of plain gray voile, in contrast to the dotted voile.

The Coat Is an Important Feature of Your Costume

By Marion Morris

A FEW years ago the shirtwaist woman who did not wear a coat was not the exception. To-day she is quite unheard of. And what is even more surprising now the well-dressed woman wears a coat or wrap with most every gown—even the lingerie frock is veiled with a filmy wrap of chiffon.

As there are so many kinds of coat modes this season I shall merely tell about them, as it is impossible to suggest which ones a woman needs without being acquainted with her wardrobe and the knowledge of where she is spending the late Summer and Autumn.

LIGHTWEIGHT chinchilla coats have been the craze, but now their popularity is diminishing because they have been worn in afternoon and night with all sorts of dresses and in most every place, from the mountain tops to the seashore, to say nothing of along Broadway. Nevertheless these coats are attractive when fashionable in knee length and with straight lines relieved by wide belts. In white they are most useful, for as they can be worn with all dresses, but if you should choose one just for sport wear, a Nattier [blue], rose, green or sulphur would be the most attractive.

Quite the best looking white chinchilla coat that I have seen was bound in black silk braid. This combination is always smart as well as distinctive.

WHITE fleece cloth and blanket cloth [coats are] in the same category. But I do not think them as satisfactory as those of chinchilla, for the reason that they soil more readily.

A few years ago the Fashion World was startled to hear that white serge coats had been worn at the Paris races. But when you consider that serge tailors so beautifully and that it always reflects refinement, it is not surprising that these coats are now the coming mode for utility and semi-dress wear. Yes, they are in the modish long [coat] length and are quite severe [in cut] and the smart models are [trimmed] with large nickel buttons.

As for navy blue and black [serge] coats I do not think that [there] is need when the woman [illegible] good style. This season the coats are best in three-quarter length with [modi]fied cutaway fronts.

Pepper and salt [illegible] the light weight [illegible]—are much seen in the [illegible] length trotting and sport coats. When they depend upon big white [illegible] ball button fastenings for adornment they are very smart.

SUMMER Coat [illegible] making the wearers look like [illegible] [illegible]

YOU [illegible]

[illegible] in spite of the fact that they were made quite common last Summer. The new styles are fashioned with various pointed and square collars, curved fronts, and with box pleats that make them similar to the Norfolk. In gray and pink, orange-and-tan, Royal blue and white they are very effective.

Cotton eponge coats are on fashion's list, but they have but few admirers [as they] are hot and are easily soiled.

Shantung coats are in greater favor than they have been in several seasons. [This is] because their rich natural color harmonizes with all the rich colors now in vogue. As many are fashioned in dressy draped styles as in several tailored coats.

Chiffon wraps are as much in vogue for afternoon wear as they are for evening. Those that are encrusted with crystal and iridescent heads are very effective. Then there are some that look like mere scarfs beautifully draped about the figure.

Crepe meteor, fine brocade and crepe de Chine are also used for evening wraps. These are generally in the bright colors of the season.

The Amateur Dressmaker

Garb for Unexpected Pleasures

F[illegible] tucker [illegible] outfit would scare [illegible]. While he was hunting up the girls to break the glad news to them I sat down and tried to plan the stretching out of the money. Mildred has often said that if she should [illegible] and marry a rich man she'd have a checked Oxford gray habit and so without telling her in advance I bought eight yards of that material and together we tailored it into an ankle length skirt with a drape-covered split back and a single breasted tight fitting three quarter coat. With this habit she wears a white Ascot tie, a black banded white straw sailor, black stitched white gloves and black leather boots.

As [Louise] insisted upon having a cross saddle habit made from [six] yards of heather brown worsted [it] consists of a tight-fitting [coat] extending two inches below the knees when she stands and breeches that are tucked into the high top tan leather boots. Her [tailored] tan linen shirt is stiffly starched, fastened with studs and finished at the neck with a high collar and brown satin bow stock. Her coarse tan straw sailor is brown ribbon banded and her tan gloves are brown stitched.

By the time that the two [habits] were [planned] for riding there was enough money left to buy black leather [gaiters] and leggings for Ruth so [I] rifled father's wardrobe of his last season's navy serge suit and of it made [illegible] a knee length half fitted coat and a pair of breeches. There were enough odd pieces remaining for a stitched hat with a brim that turns up like a rough rider's sombrero and a white crown which Louise trimmed with a white grosgrain belt taken from a silk waist. Ruth is too little to wear a shirt waist and a stiff collar so her coat is worn over one of her starched dickies. When father trots down the [road] with Ruth beside him on her Shetland and Mildred and Louise following him on their ponies he looks as proud as a drum major on general muster day. He privately assures me that he does not see anywhere three girls comparable with ours. Dear father! I suppose to every father his [ducklings look like] swans.

SOMETIMES I find myself wishing [illegible] were not quite so popular, and the next instant remember that [illegible] some of our friends. The [result] is that these [same] friends are invariably told about the girls and I and [illegible] we are always being invited [illegible] somewhere [illegible] the head of the house to look your prettiest. As [illegible] This time [illegible] is a garden party to [be] given by a railway magnate who's just moved here and is taking this way of entertaining the townspeople en masse. Father's to introduce them and the [rest] of us are to put shy persons at their ease. It's a fortunate thing that Ruth [hasn't] been invited for that child's prattle [illegible] conversation from [illegible]. The skirt of her garden party frock in sheer white batiste is laid in three broad tucks and is daintily pintucked on to an à-jour finished band of hand embroidered batiste joined to a long waist blouse having a front elaborated [with] embroidery and Valenciennes lace. [Its] fullness across the shoulders is [illegible] pintucked into [a] Valenciennes edged square neck and the three-quarter straight set in sleeves are bordered with an à-jour headed band of lace edged hand embroidery. Ruth is so strenuously opposed to hats that we're going to tie back her curls with a big bow of broad pink satin ribbon and let that answer for headwear.

IN [illegible] white costume Mildred looks more like a prim little debutante than a nearly of age young woman. Its pink taffeta skirt overlapping and a trifle caught up in front is partly veiled by a white net short tunic edged with a pink silk ruching which stiffens the upper garment and makes it stand out from the skirt instead of hanging to it. At the waist line [illegible] under a pink taffeta corselet that is upheld by wide shoulder straps of pink chiffon laid in soft folds over a [illegible] of white shadow lace and white chiffon. The elbow sleeves are finished with pink taffeta ruchings and Mildred has made for herself a [illegible] white chiffon covered wire hat wreathed with a [illegible] ruche of pink [illegible] having pink taffeta strings sewed to the under side of the brim. [illegible] This looks like an expensive costume but including the hat it [cost] less than ten dollars, for there are only five yards each of taffeta and chiffon and the lace was some that I had used before.

Those of our neighbors who accuse us of dressing extravagantly don't know that our allowance is only one hundred dollars a month. That's four hundred dollars annually for three of us, for at present Ruth don't count. We dress her chiefly with left over materials.

THERE wasn't a thing in my wardrobe suitable for the garden party and I was thinking of declining my invitation when I chanced upon a seven yard piece of dark blue brocade figured with white in jardiniere design and a three yard strip of five inch wide white Venetian lace. I was so sure that something pretty could be made with this combination of materials that I bought them—for twelve dollars. But it was Mildred who conceived the idea of putting all of the satin into a skirt with narrow drooping paniers that make me look positively bizarre. Then we made a bodice of flesh colored satin, veiled with white chiffon and trimmed it with lace shoulder bands. In front the lace runs below the waist line to a point that separates the panniers, but in the back stops under a dark blue satin girdle having sash ends that fall to the knees. Between the bands of lace at front and back is a corselet of plain blue satin, for we found by experiment [illegible] that brocade anywhere on the bodice would ruin its smart effect. My hat is a turban shape with a narrow dark blue velvet brim and a white chiffon crown trimmed with a white ostrich plume cluster that belonged to my wedding trousseau, has been cleaned with corn meal times innumerable and been worn by every member of our family excepting Father. He's perfectly delighted with our garden party costumes.

Some Advice on the Clothes Question

I WATCHED with interest the way Mabel took my advice in regard to getting her wardrobe in shape [for] her contemplated visit to Helen's seashore cottage. And when I went over to see my little friend one afternoon a few days before she intended starting off, I was delighted to find her so contented with the way all "your plans," as she called them, had worked out.

"Do you know, Ellen," she exclaimed as I admired one after the other the frocks before me, "that there seems to be some fairly good bargains floating around these days? Just look at these gloves," she cried as she held up a pair of long doeskin ones. "I paid only $1.50 for them and you know the regular price [illegible] good [illegible]

"Yes," I said, "and [illegible] one of our first little important subject[s] [illegible] is that [illegible] every year over [illegible] girls pay for their [illegible] any better [illegible] ent on as I shut and seated myself [illegible] is all the difference [illegible] in shopping and buying. I make it a point to follow closely all the styles each season and then I have a book in which I mark down just the amount that most articles can be bought for during special sales."

"WHAT an idea," Mabel exclaimed. "But don't you find it hard to get clothes up to date and in style if you buy them during sale times?" I laughed. "I thought Mabel, you always told me I was so well dressed and now that you happen to know my little secret, what impudence on your part to call me a 'back number'!" Mabel started to protest and looked rather ashamed of her speech, but I went on regardless of her troubled face.

"Of course you know you must learn to shop carefully and follow the fashions closely, so that you will have a fairly good idea of the advanced styles. Again, the business girl should never buy the latest French creations which are designed especially for her more wealthy sisters. These styles, beautiful as they may appear at the time, should not be secured by the woman who works, for she cannot afford to toss aside a coat suit or frock just at the very moment that fickle Fashion decrees that it is not 'the thing.' That is why I say one must buy carefully. Now at this season of the year, that is during the months of July and August, many odd lots of Spring suits are shown and one can [illegible] pick up at one third its original cost a good looking street costume that will do for early Fall wear. Shoes, gloves, hand bags and neck accessories are also marked down these months to make room for the new Fall things."

"But my dear Ellen, don't you think it is very foolish to buy now a suit designed for last Spring when the Fall and Winter fashions are sure to be so very different?" "But are they, Mabel?" I responded. "That is the question, for, from what I can learn, the Fall styles will follow closely on the lines of the Spring models. It seems to me that the exclusive styles of this past season, many of which could not be touched except by the wealthy woman, will make up into the standard suits for Winter, both in ready made and made to order costumes. For instance, every reason seems to promise that the cut-away coats which were so popular this Spring, as well as the Russian effects with their bloused waists and skirted undersections together with the high belts and the artistic Balkan sashes will be very fashionable for the coming Winter. Then the Mandarin sleeve, that with slight variations, is really our old friend the kimono which the unwise predicted the death knell of two Summers ago, promises to be one of the Fall features."

"How on earth do you find all these things out, Ellen?" Mabel remarked as she picked up a lace collar which had fallen to the floor. "Oh, that is my little secret, dear," I said, "but if you need a suit this Fall why not buy one of these left over Spring costumes, taking care to choose as high a neck closing as possible, as the high neck outline promises to be one of the new things this Fall—a vest with a high collar will, however, help you out here. The Russian blouse effect will, I believe, be the best choice. The cut-away style is a little too extreme, for if one can buy but one suit this style is a little too noticeable for general wear.

"Another splendid time to buy Winter suits," I went on, "is in early September when the first Fall styles are shown. I know most people think the prices very high then. So did I until last Fall when an experienced buyer of one of the large department stores told me that the first lot of Fall costumes were always marked lower in price than the second lot from the same manufacturer. She could not tell me the reason why, but said she knew from experience it was so. Perhaps it is because the makers try the first lot at lower figures to see what is going to take so here is a 'tip' [illegible]. January, too, is another good time to buy low priced suits."

"YOU are getting to be so [illegible] I think," Mabel responded, "that in the future I will have to come to you with all my clothes questions," [illegible] a satisfied little [illegible]. "Well," I said, "another point [illegible] these Summer sales is that you [illegible] the latest left over Spring suits on the bargain counter."

"But what about the colors," Mabel questioned, "are you not rather afraid they will be different this Autumn?"

"Well, I don't know," I replied. "Richness of tones will undoubtedly be the predominating characteristics of the Fall and Winter colors. That is, the rich blue purples, blues, bronze tan and red purples and the Russian greens will be very much to the front, as well as the soft purples ranging from a deep heliotrope to a purple [illegible]. All these colors, you know, with slight differences, have been the predominant [colors] this last season. So [illegible] I see it is a chance to buy [illegible] reduced rates and make yourself [illegible] inclined a Fall coat [illegible] Russian blouse effect and Mandarin sleeves, [these styles] should be easy to con[illegible]. A good point to remember in buying bargains is if an article is marked a third below the original cost it is a good buy, but if on the other hand it is marked a half below the real price, with a few exceptions there is some real reason why the manufacturer has marked it down, so that it is not a real bargain."

"Well, I have surely learned a few good points in buying, Ellen," Mabel said as she got up to show me her new hat.

DESIGN for CORSET COVER

IN EYELET & OUTLINE EMBROIDERY

(A) HOW TO CUT SCALLOPS FOR CURVES

I HAVE always considered this one of the neatest of all patterns to embroider upon underwear In the first place each design is so small that there need be no complex needlework Each leaf can be covered with the satin stitch which even a child can learn to make since it is an over and over stitch sometimes called a spool winding so smoothly are the threads wound over and over a figure from tip to base Or perhaps you prefer eyelet That work is for professionals I prefer eyelets in waists but solid embroidery is necessary in garments needing the weekly laundry work

Note in my diagram how to cut scallops for curves Do not trim your scallops close to the edge but between rows of scallops as you would cut insertion Sincerely yours

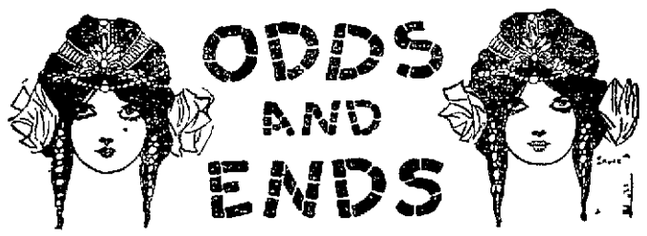
Winifred Worth

(B) HOW TO BASTE SCALLOPS IN A CURVE AFTER CUTTING

TO TRANSFER THIS DESIGN

Put some soap in a pint of hot water stir and remove soap Saturate Design with mixture then remove excess moisture by partially drying Design Place material on a hard flat surface and lay the Design face down upon the material Cover with two folds of newspaper and with a tablespoon rub pressing hard until the Design is entirely transferred

PATENT PENDING.



FOR cleaning throw dry flour applied with newspaper

TURNIPS are improved by adding one or two tablespoonfuls of sugar when cooking

TO keep the water fresh and sweet in vases of cut flowers add to it a small bit of sugar

A VEIL rolled when it is taken off will keep neat much longer than when folded gloves pulled out and smoothed will wear twice as long as if they were crushed and tossed into a drawer

IF a rug is placed on the dining room floor or the floor is just varnished the pushing back of chairs will wear out the carpet or scratch the floor It is best to purchase rubber tips and have them tacked to the chair legs It will cost about $1 to get enough tips for a half dozen chairs and the $1 will save many dollars in wear on the floor or rug

WHEN beating up the whites of eggs add a tiny pinch of salt You will be surprised to find how much better and faster they whip up

NOTHING is more useful as a fireside log basket than one made of willow These are especially attractive inasmuch as they can be stained to suit one's taste

WHEN rubber gloves as with others the right hand glove usually wears out first leaving the other practically whole To prolong their usefulness occasionally turn the glove inside out which transfers the right glove to the left hand and makes them wear evenly

WHEN it is necessary to make several cakes at once save yourself trouble beating the butter by putting the required ingredients in their usual order into a small ice cream freezer A few minutes of turning the crank results in a fine smooth batter necessary for a successful cake

"DRESSING" A DINING ROOM

BY MRS. MCCUNE

PLACING the first and most important medium to charm the world individually and collective I would say that the furnishings and furnishings of her house afford a woman her second opportunity The responsibility for the architecture of his home is solely accredited to the man but in the woman falls the onus of a successful or unsuccessful and effective or an ineffective interior

Her house we may say stands as a background against which she shows herself to the world to the best advantage If its coloring is soft and harmonious and if it is unvarnished by useless and superfluous decorations she is correspondingly attractive to her friends

Assuming that the woman is aware of the fact it often happens that she is uncertain what to do to attain this result though she may covet it It is my purpose in these articles on the ethics of house furnishing to practically demonstrate the simplest ways in which it may be accomplished The idea which obtains with many that money is the only necessary requisite to a beautiful house is a fallacy The woman who makes this excuse for an unattractive home is utterly in the wrong and I hope through the medium of these talks to be able to make it clear to her

One of the first things that she must realize is that there is as much beauty in certain simple schemes of furnishing and decorating as in the most elaborate French style of rococo art

The real satisfaction to a critical artistic sense is not so much in the quality of the thing used as its peculiar fitness for the place assigned it and its harmony in color and design with its surroundings In treating of dining rooms there are certain general rules to be observed in their decoration that it would be well to speak of before going into detailed schemes

In even the most unassuming house the dignity of the room should be preserved At the same time we should be careful in designing an elaborate and expensive one not to let overawing in the magnificence of its decorations or severe in its elegance for then psychologically the dining room is ruined It should be so designed as to promote to the uttermost the feeling of geniality and good cheer and the decoration can actually go far toward furthering this most desirable result

The colonial dining room is apt to be cold in its suggestion and I have often corrected this fault by a discreet use of potted plants inside window boxes etc The Dutch dining room sometimes degenerates into a bromidal use of steins and platters and I have seen a French room that was wearisome in its tapestries gildings and rococo effects The corrective for all these failings, it goes without saying, is good taste

Figured goods are seldom as effective for window draperies as plain material and a chintz dining room is an offense against good taste

BUSINESS GIRLS

BY ANNETTE ANGERT

PROFESSIONAL women and business men have clubs societies little groups of friends all tremendously interested in their work who come together to talk about it Women however will talk to talk to other interesting people A man smokes with another man and loses new deals or thinks up new ones

A business girl has little time at her own disposal She cannot hunt up a congenial soul on the first sunny afternoon take a walk on the bluffs by the lake in the clear crisp air have a good talk and come back refreshed She would love to but she cannot afford it

She has her personal friends but they are not often conversant with her conditions and work Nevertheless there are many times when she needs discussion of her work a general clearing up of her mind and inspiration

Aren't there a good many times when you are tired at night and no one knows just what is wrong? When you would like to talk about your troubles with some one who would understand? Perhaps then the next thing wouldn't be so hard

I think that the next step in the direction of some sort of cooperation and helpfulness among business women is in the printed word

Business is opening more and more widely to women It is a strenuous life for even the girl who takes it lightly Perhaps you come from the country where there was no chance to do the things you wanted to do or maybe you are a city girl with a pleasant home or a room in a boarding house Your business problems are practically the same but your background is different

Sometimes we are so busy in business that we forget to remember the warm sunlit hill that wound up the road between the trees or the smell of the bread as your mother took it out of the oven or the blaze of a cheerful wood fire on a winter night The dear homely things are what we forget and it is the memory of them that we need most when we work all day for our living

Perhaps if you will help we can remember together and work out some of the little problems that perplex us as business women

WILD FLOWERS

BY EDNA EGAN

NOW is the time for lovers of the shy wild flowers to invade the haunts of Nature and bear away the lovely blossoms to make a wild garden You can successfully transplant wild flowers if the proper soil awaits them They must also be properly shaded for the second children of the woodland depths do not thrive in the brilliant sunlight

The perfect location for a wild garden is a shady nook bordering a grove of trees so that the garden will accommodate the flowers that require sunshine as well as those which thrive in the shade

To prepare the soil for a wild garden dig out the earth to a depth of one foot and spread over the bottom a layer of broken shells bones or of clay to a depth of three inches Over this place good soil and leaves and fill up the remaining space with rich loam sold from the woods or florists

Should the soil be naturally heavy and rich add several inches of leaf mold and allow stones to abound

The flower garden should be raised two inches above the surrounding soil When the season for cleaning up arrives next remove the dead leaves

In the wild garden can be used such beautiful plants as bloodroot hepatica violet spring beauty jack in the pulpit false solomon's seal columbine honeysuckle laurel anemone flags rhododendron queen's lace and other varieties

Columbines belong to the wild garden rather than to the cultivated borders where they are sometimes used The yellowish red bells produce a beautiful effect when massed in one spot

One of the loveliest of the wild plants is the brilliant orange milkweed This will grow and flower magnificently in rather dry sterile soil exposed to the sun The large yellow primroses also thrive in almost any soil

Some nurserymen sell packages of wild flower seeds which can be scattered in the wild garden but afterward some of the seedlings will have to be transplanted

Jack in the pulpit will thrive in dry or damp soil where it is shady Visit the woods as soon as the weather permits and dig up the plants before they are very high above the soil In fact all the wild plants should be transferred to your garden while they are yet young If you follow this suggestion the plants will blossom in your garden the first year

The shrubs such as laurel, honeysuckle and rhododendron should be transplanted to the wild garden in the fall if you do not wish to retard their growth All summer long you can have a wealth of bloom in the wild garden if you arrange it properly.

THE STAY-AT-HOME

BY LUCILLE DAUDET

I do not make the smallest difference whether the woman who stays at home all summer does it as a matter of choice or from reasons of economy she is going to take it out on her sister who spent the season out of town if it bespeaks her last breath

It is therefore with a mocking and incredulous smile that she listens to the rhapsodies of her who has accumulated a sufficient coat of tan to prove to the warfarer that she has not languished in town all summer

Really I have never met such charming people in all my life cries the enthusiast So cultivated so literary! They didn't talk personalities as we do here at home They talked ideas and such ideas my dear! Really I am sorry you should have missed the opportunity of meeting them and getting outside of the narrow home set

The Whoopems were there I hear remarks her listener with a little indulgent smile curling the corners of her lips

Well yes admits the other reluctantly I am told she literally ran everything pursues her tormentor and that their party was large and so excessively jolly that they took possession of the whole place except the swept corners in which a few old tabbies gathered to pursue fancy work and discuss the latest novels I suppose of course you saw every little of the Whoopems as they are proverbially Philistine and you confess to having had a literary summer

It takes but a pin prick to collapse the gayest balloon

I've had the liveliest sort of season as a mother to the friend of her bosom one charming entertainment after another until I am quite exhausted

You must be I heard the girls had to tie handkerchiefs around their arms at the cotillons because there were not enough more to go round is the sweetly sympathetic reply followed by a vivid account of the attractions of one's own home as a summer resort

Stunned bewildered the poor creature who has made it her duty to bear with the discomforts of her outing and conscientiously enjoy every moment of it falls into the pit digged by the friend of her bosom Her gayety vanishes her feathers become limp and draggled her pallor asserts itself, even under the veneer of tan, and subserviently she sinks into second place beside the conqueror, who has not gone abroad to find new worlds, but has been content to stay at home and keep a keen eye on her own and others.

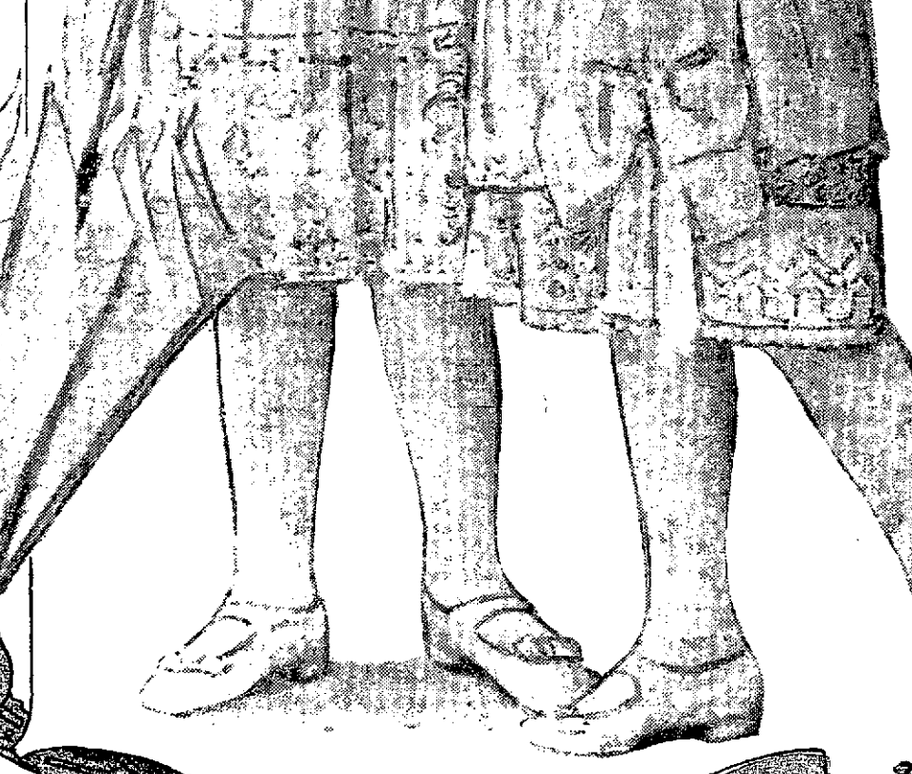
When the Kiddies are Dressed Up



EVERY normal little girl likes to "dress up" on gala occasions, even though she be a perfect tomboy at ordinary times; there are days when nothing is quite good enough or pretty enough for her attire. And every normal mother enjoys seeing her little daughter prettily and appropriately dressed.

On this page are a number of dainty and girlish fashions from which to select a party dress for the little maiden. All are developed in white fabrics. Softly flowing voile, India linen, Paris muslin, embroidered crepe and other materials of like nature are suited for these little frocks, while simple trimmings of fine embroidery, lace, or hand hemstitching and tucks are used for decoration.
