

BANKERS PRESENT VIEWS ON REFORM OF THE CURRENCY

Answers Are Made to Series of Questions Formulated by Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

CENTRAL BANK FAVORED UNDER U. S. CONTROL

Bankers Agree That Reform Is Necessary—Jos. A. McCord, of Atlanta, Assisted in Preparing Replies.

New York, June 21.—Methods which should be pursued in reforming the currency system of the country, according to the views of the American Bankers' association were outlined today in a detailed statement issued by the currency commission of that organization.

The statement, which answers thirty-three questions formulated by a subcommittee of the committee on banking and currency of the United States senate, was prepared by the committee which recently conferred at Atlantic City.

Jos. A. McCord, of the Third National bank, of Atlanta, is a member of the commission and assisted in answering the questions of the senate committee.

The commission endorsed the currency plan devised by a national monetary commission of which Senator Aldrich, of Rhode Island, was chairman. It made no reference to the bill recently prepared at Washington with the co-operation of President Wilson.

The commission made no attempt to formulate a complete currency system, its recommendations being guided by the question put to it by the subcommittee of the senate. It did state its belief, however, that a central banking institution should be established, under governmental control.

No reference was made as to methods of such an institution or the appointment or election of its managing heads.

In expressing its ideas as to the establishment of a central bank, the commission, while not declaring for the creation of an institution similar to the principal European countries, points out that the principles of commercial banks should be followed.

The commission does not favor the continuance of bond secured currency, the objection being that the volume of currency is thus arbitrarily limited.

"One unfavourable feature of this artificial condition," the statement says, "is that the nation's bonds, which should be widely held by citizens as their choicest investment, are held almost exclusively by banks for circulation or government deposits."

One of the most important recommendations is made in reply to the question: "Should an elastic currency be authorized by law?"

"We believe that such a currency should be authorized by law," the answer runs, "the amount to be controlled by the reserve requirements against it. Such reserves should be ample, not less than fifty per cent, as a recognized minimum."

The questions by the senate committee and the answers of the bankers follow:

NO DISASTER CAME AND GA. UNIVERSITY LOST $25,000 BEQUEST

New York, June 21.—(Special.)—The will of Horace Russell, formerly judge of the superior court, was filed for probate in the Surrogate's court this afternoon. Judge Russell died last Saturday at his home, 47 Park avenue. The value of the estate is not disclosed.

The bulk of the estate goes to the widow, Mrs. Russell, and is divided among his three daughters, excepting several minor bequests to friends and servants.

LIVELY INTEREST SHOWN IN RACES IN BOTH HOUSES

Speakership of the House and Presidency of the Senate Are in Great Doubt on Eve of Assembly Opening.

LEADING CANDIDATES DISCUSS SPEAKERSHIP

In Senate Victory Is Claimed by Both J. Randolph Anderson and John T. Allen on Votes Already Pledged.

With the legislature meeting here in annual session next Wednesday morning, the lobby of the Kimball house already presented an unusually lively appearance last night. The preliminary interest centers in the sharply contested battle for the speakership of the senate, and in the fight which may prove to be almost if not quite as exciting before it is over and done with, for the speakership of the house.

Politicians from all over the state were in evidence Saturday about the capitol and the hotel lobbies. Members of the legislature, other than candidates, have also begun to arrive, it being said that there will be many as twenty-five or thirty in town last night.

Live Speakership Race.

Since Representative R. N. Hardeman, of Jefferson, reached town on Thursday and began his active campaign for the speakership, the struggle has been up very much in the air. Before his arrival the politicians were very much inclined to give the victory to Representative W. H. Burwell, of Hancock, in a neck-and-neck race.

Attention was almost altogether centered on the very close and exciting race between Senators J. Randolph Anderson of the First district, and John T. Allen, of the Twentieth, for the presidency of their branch.

If the friends of Mr. Hardeman are to be credited, however, there will be a very considerable surprise in store for the other side between this time and the balloting Wednesday, and they expect a rapid advance in the race.

Certainly it is that neither of the two leading candidates in the race for speakership has yet been returned between this time and the final count to capture the plum for himself. What the third man in the race, Representative J. E. Sheppard, of Sumter, is doing or how much strength he will be able to develop in the wind-up is uncertain, he having not until a late hour Saturday night given his appearance on the field of action.

All are agreed, even the candidates themselves, that Mr. Burwell is so far in the lead that he will not be able to gather sufficient votes on the first ballot to elect him. Hardeman's friends maintain that Burwell's strength is not so great as he and his friends imagine, and that, on the second ballot, the Sheppard forces will rally to their man in sufficient numbers to elect him.

The Burwell following, on the other hand, pooh-pooh any such idea. They say that their man has the race sewed up in a sack and his friends imagine, and that all the trouble and work of Hardeman and his friends is simply time wasted.

Mr. Burwell opened his headquarters Saturday morning at 408 and 110, and he was kept busy the greater part of the day receiving advice and assurances of support from his friends. Mr. Hardeman is on the next floor, and is keeping open house for his friends in room 223. Both candidates issued brief statements Saturday night, giving their views as to the outlook.

"I see no reason to change the opinion that I have had for some time, gathered from the assurances of support that I have received, and that is that Mr. Burwell is the man to elect, not claiming the whole house as mine, nor have I said or done anything in derogation of the two gentlemen who are opposing me. The impression that seems to have gone out over the state that I have the race sewed up did not emanate from me, nor did I inspire it."

"Still, I have every confidence that I will be elected on the first ballot and that without much trouble. I derive this assurance from the number of friends of mine in the house who have promised me their support, many of them voluntarily. As to just what the size of my vote will be, I will not undertake to say, but it will be more than sufficient to elect me."

Mr. Hardeman gave out Saturday night the first public statement that he has made since he has taken the speakership race. It is very conservative, makes no sweeping claims of victory, but simply gives his reasons for remaining in the race, and tells why he thinks his chances for a majority are as good as anybody else's.

To date, I have made no public statement with reference to my campaign for speakership of the house of 1913-14. I have contented myself with making a quiet campaign among my friends, and have merely written letters to the members of the house, soliciting their support. I have replied from every member-elect and, unlike other candidates, I wish frankly and openly to state that I have a sufficient number of unqualified pledges to insure my election. At the same time, I wish to make it known to the public that I am a candidate for speaker and a sufficient number of unqualified pledges to elect. In fact, I doubt if the straight pledges of all three of the candidates.

ELECTRICAL STORM SWEEPS ATLANTA

Unheralded Thunder Storm Breaks Over City, Lowering Temperature 25 Degrees. Cooler Weather Today.

Atlanta experienced one of the most severe electrical storms in her history about 5:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and yet as severe as the storm was, practically no damage was reported.

Across the street flag pole on top of the building in which the McCandless laboratory is located was also struck, and the upper half of it broken off and splintered. Fortunately no one was struck by the pieces of wood which fell to the pavement.

The weather had been exceedingly warm during the greater part of Saturday, which was the longest day of the year, and at 3 o'clock the thermometer registered 93 degrees and apparently showed no signs of falling. This was the warmest weather since Tuesday and Wednesday, when 95 degrees proved the hottest weather in two years.

When the storm, which appeared to be one of the local thunder showers that arrive unheralded during an extremely hot spell in the summer, first came up, the mercury was close to 93 degrees, and within about ten minutes it had fallen to 68 degrees. By 7 o'clock it had risen again to 73 degrees, but the entire night was much cooler as a result of the storm, and the temperature for Sunday is expected to be much lower as a result.

During the storm the current supplying the street cars with power was cut off for over half an hour, and service was blocked completely. The rain which fell during the storm amounted to .55 inches, according to the official figures of the local weather bureau.

SENATE WILL ATTEND. GETTYSBURG REUNION

Washington, June 21.—The senate today voted to accept the invitation of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania to attend the centennial-centenary ceremonies of the battle of Gettysburg and the military affairs committee stated that a committee of nine to attend.

In reply to Senator Norris, of Nebraska, Chairman Johnston, of the military affairs committee, stated that at the request of the secretary of war today the committee would take prompt action on the question of more tents for use at Gettysburg.

MAN LEAPS TO DEATH FROM SPEEDING TRAIN

W. C. Berner Escapes Vigilance of Brother, Ending Life Near Cornelia.

Passengers on Southern train No. 11 which arrived in Atlanta at 8:15 o'clock last night told the story of the death of W. C. Berner, of Walhalla, S. C., who committed suicide at 6:35 o'clock in the afternoon by jumping through one of the car windows near Cornelia, Ga., while the train was going at the speed of 25 miles an hour.

According to the story which the passengers told a Constitution reporter, W. C. Berner, 28 years of age, was being brought to Atlanta by his brother, J. D. Berner, Jr., in company with a Dr. Sloan.

One of the passengers stated that the brother had said that young Berner's mind was slightly deranged, owing to long illness. All during the trip the young man had been carefully watched, as he was in a state of melancholia. Either the brother or the physician was at his side constantly, fearing that he would commit suicide.

When within a mile of Cornelia, young Berner began to grow very restless, and his brother took the seat at his side on the right of the train. Suddenly, without any word of warning or farewell, he jumped on the car seat, and leaped through the window, while the train was going at twenty-five miles an hour, according to the passengers.

The moment after the affair occurred many of the passengers became hysterical, it is said. Women screamed and fainted, and many men made a dash toward the window, but the train was not stopped until it had gone on a mile further into Cornelia.

The body was found at the bottom of a seven-foot embankment, unrecognizable. He was immediately put in the baggage car, and every effort made to revive him, which proved fruitless.

The body was taken on the train at Cornelia, Ga., placed in the hands of undertaker D. Stow, and prepared for burial. At 11:30 last night it was sent to Walhalla, S. C.

San Francisco June 21.—Owen D. Conn, "the hundred thousand dollar" burglar, was sentenced today to ten years in the penitentiary, this being his sixth and longest prison term. He confessed the burglary with which he was charged. Conn's specialty was to work for use at Gettysburg.

SHOOTING PROBED BY CHIEF BEAVERS

Action of Officer L. F. Carter in Firing at an Escaping Prisoner Is Being Carefully Investigated.

Chief Beavers has ordered an investigation into the action of a plain clothes policeman last Sunday morning in firing his revolver while pursuing a youth who was fleeing from arrest on a charge of being on the street with a woman of questionable character.

Capt. W. F. Terry has been put in charge of the investigation and his report will not be made until this afternoon. The chief, however, has already made preliminary inquiry following complaint Saturday morning, and yesterday afternoon summoned the policeman before him.

The incident under investigation occurred Sunday morning between 1 and 2 o'clock, when Plain Clothes Policemen L. F. Carter and J. W. Pittman attempted to arrest a quartet of young men and girls at Forsyth and Garnett streets. They were J. M. Green, a moving picture operator, living at 42 1/2 East Fair street; Paul Landrum, an actor, living at the Childs hotel and Sarah McDonald, of 205 South Forsyth street, and Miss Knight, of 18 Castleberry street.

The four were stopped at the corner and told that they would have to go to police headquarters. As the policeman summoned a patrol wagon Green broke and ran down Forsyth street toward Whitehall.

Carter gave chase, firing his revolver as he ran. Both Landrum and Green declare he shot five times. The fleeing youth was caught at the corner of Castleberry and Forsyth streets. Later, he said that he had halted because of fear of being hit by one of the policeman's bullets. The quartet were sent to the police station in the patrol and charged with violating section 1770, which pertains to questionable characters in public at night.

Each gave bond of $15.75 and was freed for appearance in recorder's court Monday afternoon. Green was the only one who came to court. He was fined $10.75. The others forfeited collateral. The fine was paid.

Chief Beavers stated to a Constitution reporter Saturday afternoon that for a policeman to discharge his revolver on a charge of being on the street with a woman of questionable character is one of the strictest of the department's rules. No report of the incident had been made to the captain of Carter's watch or to any other police official.

Carter Admits Shooting. The chief also stated that he was not aware of the shooting until Commissioner Marshall called him. He immediately began investigation. Carter admitted to him that he had fired his revolver, but only in an attempt to frighten the running youth. He said it had been discharged only once.

FRANK NOT GUILTY OF PHAGAN MURDER, DECLARES ARNOLD

Prominent Atlanta Lawyer Engaged to Aid in Defense of Pencil Factory Superintendent.

NO WHITE MAN KILLED GIRL, ASSERTS LAWYER

Formby and Conley Statements Should Not Be Given Credence So Far as They Tend to Incriminate Frank, He Says.

Reuben R. Arnold, perhaps the best-known attorney in Georgia, has been engaged to aid the defense of Leo M. Frank, the suspected pencil factory superintendent, in the Mary Phagan mystery. This announcement came from his office yesterday afternoon.

In a statement that was furnished each of the newspapers, Mr. Arnold attacks the detectives for their continued efforts to lay the Phagan murder at his client's door. He hoots at the credence which he says has been placed in Conley's story and in the sensational affidavit sworn by Mima Formby.

Asserting his anticipation of clarifying the situation in due time, Mr. Arnold says that in the evidence the prosecution holds against Frank there is no room whatever in which to believe him guilty, and that no white man committed the crime.

He declares alleged injustices done the suspected superintendent by reports circulated to the effect that Frank's friends had persuaded the Formby woman to leave town and by many other false rumors deliberately set before the public, he declares.

His statement follows: "It is true that I have accepted employment to assist in the defense of Mr. Leo M. Frank, but I wish to state that before I agreed to take the case, I made it a condition that I should have time to study critically all the evidence delivered at the coroner's inquest, and all the affidavits that have reached the public through the newspapers, so I could form an opinion for myself as to Frank's innocence. I regret to say that no man is guilty of such a murder as the one in this case."

"After studying the evidence as critically as I can, I am satisfied that I hazard not a thing in saying that there is no room to believe Mr. Frank guilty of this horrible murder. I do not believe that any white man committed the crime."

"Indeed, it is surprising to me that the detectives should continue to try to put this crime on Frank with the positively incriminating affidavits of Conley before them, when it is common sense, unless under great excitement, ought not to give a moment's credence to either the Formby or Conley statements in so far as they attempt to incriminate Mr. Frank."

"I see the detectives are gradually giving it out that Mrs. Formby will not be called as a witness, although her affidavit has been graded before the public, bearing the unqualified indorsement of the detective department as being perfectly reliable. Words to this effect, and which were published in the newspapers, that Frank's friends had persuaded her to leave town. In this and in many other ways our client has been done a very great injustice. The effort seems to have been not to find the criminal, but to try by all means to get the crime on Frank."

"However, I think we will be able to clarify the situation in due time. Trial Will Be in July. Indications at present are that the trial of Leo M. Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan will be held on either July 14 or 28."

So far as the trial of some time ago, it remains for him to see the date of the trial, and then there is a probability that the defense will ask for a new trial before clearing the jail as much as possible of short cases. The fact that Judge L. S. Roan, who by special appointment, presides over the original division of the Fulton superior court, will not have to hold court in the Stone Mountain circuit during either the week of July 14 or July 28, makes it possible that the trial will be set for this date.

BY EATING 61 EGGS HE WON A BET OF $25 AND BROKE RECORD

Chicago, Ill., June 21.—Frank Blake won a bet of $25 today by eating 61 eggs. The world's record is supposed to have been 60. The eggs were cooked as follows: Scrambled, 15; softboiled, 16; hard-boiled, 15; fried, 15.

He was informed of the occurrence, Carter voluntarily went before him and made an explanation. "The rule against discharge of freed men by petition," the chief said, "is one of the strictest of the department. The men have been made aware of it since the recent injury of Detective Lester, who was shot by a wild bullet in a gambling raid on East Alexander street."

"Unless he is defending life or property, a policeman has no right whatever to fire his revolver."

NEGRO IS LYNCHED, FOUR OTHERS SHOT BY AMERICUS MOB

Five Hundred Avengers Break Open Jail to Get Black Who Had Seriously Wounded Police Chief Barrow.

SHOTS DROWN VOICE OF PLEADING PASTOR

Crowd Riddles for Half Hour Body Hanging Under an Electric Light on Street Corner.

Americus, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—A mob of 500 persons attacked the jail at 8 o'clock tonight, broke down the cell door wherein a negro, William C. Redding, was confined and dragged him through the principal streets of the city to the Buchanan corner, where they lynched him. A thousand shots, it is estimated, were fired.

This was the climax of the shooting in the evening of William C. Barrow, who has been chief of police in this city for the past twenty-five years, and the wounding of four negroes.

The sheriff and his deputies found resistance useless. With steel crowbars and sledgehammers, the angry members of the mob attacked the steel doors wherein the negro was confined. Strangely, his voice was drowned.

The lock was finally ripped from its fastenings, and the door swung open. Then a rope was tied about the negro's neck and he was swung down the streets to the Buchanan corner, in Lamar street, near the scene of the shooting of Chief Barrow. There he was strung up to a cable, under the glare of an electric light.

The body had only been cleared from the ground when the rope broke; but the negro again was swung through the air with better success. Shooting began from every direction, and the body was riddled with bullets.

Ministers in the city resisted and before the shooting began, Rev. Robert Bivins, pastor of the Furlow Luth. Baptist church, pleaded in vain with the leaders to spare the life of the negro. His pleading lasted during the twenty minutes required to string the body up to the cable, and then yelling of the crowd and the shots from many pistols drowned his voice.

The shooting continued at intervals for half an hour, and the body was left to hang on the cable. The lynching was the most sickening tragedy ever witnessed in Americus.

Chief Barrow was shot entirely through the abdomen by Redding, and is now at the hospital. His condition is regarded as very critical. The bullet which went through Chief Barrow's abdomen emerged and struck Allen, colored, in the arm, producing a painful wound.

Chief Barrow had arrested Redding for drunkenness. Redding resisted and snatched the chief's pistol, shot him. Chased Through Streets. Instantly great excitement resulted, and a great mob ran down the street pursued by citizens firing upon him.

Redding was soon captured and jailed. Several pistol bullets from the pursuing posse having struck him, one in the back of the head. He would probably have died from these wounds. An innocent bystander, Daniel Stallings, colored, headed the mob, and before the public, bearing the unqualified indorsement of the detective department as being perfectly reliable. Words to this effect, and which were published in the newspapers, that Frank's friends had persuaded her to leave town. In this and in many other ways our client has been done a very great injustice. The effort seems to have been not to find the criminal, but to try by all means to get the crime on Frank."

NEWSOME IS FREED OF MURDER CHARGE

Released on Nominal Bond After Coroner's Jury Decides Mrs Newsome Met Death by Suicide

Valdosta Ga. June 21.—(Special)—Norris Newsome the Lowndes county farmer who was yesterday arrested charged with the murder of his wife was released from jail this afternoon on a nominal bond following the verdict of the coroner's jury to the effect that Mrs Newsome had committed suicide.

Accompanied by Drs Schnauss and Burchett Coroner Solomon and the members of the jury went out to the scene of the tragedy today and examined the body of Mrs Newsome for the purpose of an examination by the physicians. Dr Burchett conducted the autopsy and found powder burns the entire distance through the woman's head showing that the pistol with which she was killed was placed close to the head and bearing out the theory of suicide. The bullet was found embedded in the woman's brain.

The coroner's jury while satisfied from the evidence that Mrs Newsome killed herself stated in their verdict that the evidence also led to show that she was impelled to the act by cruel treatment of her husband.

STARVING YOUTH SEEKS SHELTER IN PRISON

Cordale Ga. June 21.—(Special)—Claiming that he walked every step of the way from Dothan Ala. to Cordale coming through Fort Valley and Manchester and that he had not had a mouthful to eat but one time since Monday. Walter Mensell, a youth 17 years old, approached Chief of Police Sumner today and begged him to lock him in the city jail so that he might get a place to sleep and something to eat. The young man's stomach was so empty that his statement and the officer accommodated him. Later he became critically ill and was removed to a sanitarium for treatment.

The youth claims that his father, G. B. Mensell, engaged in the bakery business at Dothan and that he is quite wealthy. He is rather reticent in discussing the subject of why he left home. A message reporting his condition has been sent to his father.

SUCCESSFUL REVIVALS HELD IN GAINESVILLE

Gainesville Ga. June 22.—(Special)—Three hundred and seventy six souls added to four churches in Gainesville in a series of revival services extending through fifty days or about 20 per cent increase in the membership of these churches. No less than wonderful progress in the religious and spiritual life of Gainesville. A three weeks meeting in the First Baptist church resulted in the addition of 134 members to this church. This was followed by a meeting of about the same length in the First Methodist church with an addition of 142 members and a meeting of about ten days at St. Paul's Methodist church with ten new members. The Presbyterian church of Gainesville has held no revival meetings this year but a number have been added to this church. The Central Baptist church which holds a revival meeting is yet to be heard from. The result of this meeting will swell the number of churches.

Negro Is Killed

Woodstock Ga. June 21.—(Special)—Jim McConnell shot and killed George Roberts at Toonigh Ga. late yesterday afternoon with a shot gun. McConnell claims the shooting an accident but at the same time says McConnell was bound over by the coroner's jury. Both are negroes.

VIEW OF BANKERS ON CURRENCY REFORM

national bank notes except when and as they wear out and are unfit to circulate. This condition is inherent in the system and is certainly unsound.

The system lacks cohesiveness there being no provision for an equal share among the banks in it. Under ordinary conditions this is not so much felt by the banks individually but under strained financial conditions the bank which is thrown on its own resources is left in a position to act independently of all the rest. The lack of a system under which all could operate through a common policy of action becomes keenly felt as it becomes evident that what is really a self-protective system.

(c) The requirements that the banks must individually control their own portion of the legal reserve money of the country without being provided with means for their legal reserves is unscientific and economical. (b) Wasteful.

(d) An unsound system of reserves in the present form of a national system to contend against every other bank the disposition and scattering of the country into a large number of small holdings, completely destroying a times of stringency the strength and power which might be gained by unification and massing of the banks and the common good of the public.

(e) The use of so much of the legal reserve money of the country in a regulation for ordinary business purposes is another economical waste. No provision is made for the use of any substitute for legal reserve money as a circulating medium other than the national bank notes secured by government bonds and which are inflexible in their volume and therefore as irresponsible to the fluctuating legal commercial needs for them as the legal reserve money itself. The gold certificates now in circulation amounting to $1,080,489,000, representing merely warehouse receipts for an equal amount of gold in the government treasury, form the most conspicuous example of this economic waste.

(f) Lack of Elasticity. (1) The lack of elasticity in the circulation of all forms of our present circulating medium being rigidly fixed in amount. The necessities of commerce and a circulating medium are arbitrary and not with a fixed amount of which to respond in volume to the fluctuating demands. Assuming that the aggregate amount may be just sufficient for an average volume of general business then there must be a surplus when the volume of business increases and a deficiency when the volume of business falls below the average. The actual condition however is that in each year there are seasons in which the needs for circulation are much heavier than in other seasons. The rigidly fixed volume of the legal reserve money is constantly in excess of the average volume of general business then there must be a surplus when the volume of business increases and a deficiency when the volume of business falls below the average. The actual condition however is that in each year there are seasons in which the needs for circulation are much heavier than in other seasons. The rigidly fixed volume of the legal reserve money is constantly in excess of the average volume of general business then there must be a surplus when the volume of business increases and a deficiency when the volume of business falls below the average.

(g) The restriction of the use by the banks of their legal reserves and the prohibition of their lending power in the present form of unusual demands upon them without means of protecting their reserves by the use of any satisfactory substitute therefor or of replenishing them through adequate legal means. (h) The conversion of their available assets into cash or legal reserve.

(i) The lack of provision for the organization of American banking in situations in foreign countries which are necessary for the development of our trade.

(j) The independent treasury system under which the government acts as partial custodian of its own funds resulting in irregular withdrawals of money from the bank reserves and from circulation and materially interfering with the even tenor of general business.

(k) No open market for commercial paper banks of sufficient capital should be allowed to accept drafts for a commission with a view to the sale of the acceptances in the open market thereby establishing a current market for commercial paper thus enabling banks to buy whenever they have an surplus of funds or sell in this market whenever they wish to strengthen their position or meet demands against them or accumulate funds for the use of their regular clientele.

Advantages of the System
2. Enumerate concisely its advantages and disadvantages.
Answer (a) One advantage of our banking system is that it enables each community to organize and control its own banking facilities. (b) It has for half a century provided the government with a market for its bonds. This was a great advantage to the government at the time the banking system was inaugurated and it has since been taken advantage of by the government in the issue of its bonds. On some issues of its two per cent bonds it has obtained a premium notwithstanding the fact that without this artificial market their investment value would be about thirty per cent below the face value. (c) The advantage of no small importance in view of the conditions of the bank note circulation of the state banks at the time the bank act was enacted is that it has provided a bank note circulation of uniform value. (d) The stability of the currency is of undoubted strength and stability. Its disadvantages are covered in the list of its defects. It might however be stated as an offset to the advantages referred to B and C that the artificial market maintained for government bonds has been so maintained at the expense of the banking development and commercial growth of the country both of which have been seriously retarded by the costly periodical panics for which the defects of the banking and currency system are principally responsible.

Purposes of Improved System
3. What are the chief purposes to be attained in an improved system?
Answer The chief purposes to be attained in an improved system are the removal of the defects of the present system so that it will be placed on a sound and scientific basis and made to respond adequately to the varying requirements of the public in conducting the trade and commerce of the country. (b) Should the banks continue to have a bond secured currency?
Answer No. In the use of government bonds as security for circulation of the volume of currency instead of fluctuating with the varying requirements of the public as permitted by the issue of bonds and fluctuates according to their market prices. These prices are determined not by the general investment value of the bonds, but by the profit possible to banks in using them as security for circulating notes resulting in artificial stimulation of government bond prices. One unfortunate consequence of this is that the condition of the national bonds which should be widely held by its citizens as their choicest investment, are held almost exclusively by banks to secure circulation of government bonds. (b) Should the present requirements of reserves for national banks be reduced increased or otherwise modified?

Answer Whether the present requirements of reserves for national banks should be reduced increased or otherwise modified depends upon how they are to be controlled and protected. If under a centralized system of control the reserves would be automatically protected by a satisfactory note issue based on an adequate gold reserve and liquid bank assets for use by the banks as circulation in place of reserves, so that the currency would be largely reduced and if under such control legal reserve money could be made available to the banks and as required through proper redemptive facilities. (c) Do you believe some modification of the present requirements might safely be made?
As to Elastic Currency.

4. Should an elastic currency be authorized and to what amount?
Answer—Regarding an elastic currency as a vital necessity in connection with the banking and currency system of this country we believe that such currency should be authorized by law. The amount of it should be controlled by the gold reserve requirements against it. Such gold reserve should be ample not less than 50 per cent of the amount of the currency. A special tax might be levied upon any deficiency of the reserve below the stipulated amount of it. This tax to be increased as the deficiency increased. (b) Should the present requirements of reserves for national banks be reduced increased or otherwise modified?

The amount of it should be controlled by the gold reserve requirements against it. Such gold reserve should be ample not less than 50 per cent of the amount of the currency. A special tax might be levied upon any deficiency of the reserve below the stipulated amount of it. This tax to be increased as the deficiency increased.

7. Should such currency be the notes of the individual banks or of a central bank or of a regional reserve association or of the United States treasury?
Answer—Preferably by a central reserve association. Good results may be secured by a government owned central bank or by a regional reserve association if the control of the reserves were properly placed under central joint control of the government and the banks. Doubtless a safe currency could be issued by a central bank if the law provided the same were properly drawn but it would seem difficult if not impossible to provide for its proper expansion and contraction in accordance with the demands of trade. The experience of the world is that it is better for a government to provide for such currency indirectly through some privately owned corporation under strict governmental supervision rather than put the credit of the government at issue with every note placed in circulation. Troublesome times come to every community and every nation and it is better to have the credit of the bank called in question than the credit of the government itself.

How Notes Should Be Issued
8. Should these notes be procured from the treasury on pledge of securities and so of gold or silver? Should they be issued by the government upon the assets of the association or bank to which they are issued?
Answer If the notes are to be issued by the demand reserve association or by regional reserve associations against an adequate gold reserve and liquid bank assets belonging to and in possession of these associations there seems no reason why they should be secured by the treasury. They should be made a first lien of the government but of the holders of the notes upon the assets of the association which issues them. They should be convertible into gold or silver when they are issued which will in all cases give value received for them.

9. Should all currency be based upon gold? If so how ought it to be issued and what amount of gold should be required?
Answer Reserve money should preferably be gold but the proportion of greenbacks and silver now included in our so-called lawful money is so small that its retention as an increased issue of legal importance and if continued as eligible for reserve will not cause embarrassment. The percentage of reserve money against deposits whether in the form of deposits subject to check or in the form of circulating notes should be left to the discretion of the management of the central or regional reserve associations but if a restriction is imposed it should be the bank of a tax upon the deficiency in reserves when below 50 per cent.

10. If notes are issued to or by an association what should be the limit in amount of this currency for each association and should this limit be based on its capital stock and surplus?
Answer As already stated notes should be issued preferably by one association or possibly several regional associations and the limit should be determined by the amount of gold reserve such association or associations can command and hold in readiness for their redemption. The business needs for circulation will thus be supplied within the limit of the association or associations responsible for their redemption and they will automatically respond in volume to the existing demand for them. The association or associations issuing them will be able to check any undue increase in the issue of their currency by raising the discount rate. As its reserve goes down its discount rate will go up.

11. What device should be provided to force the retirement of the currency in whole or in part when the legitimate demands of trade subsided?
Answer No device will be necessary to enforce the retirement of such a currency when the legitimate demands of trade subsided. The currency would automatically adjust itself to the demands of trade.

12. If a tax on this currency payable to the government is provided, should it be graduated so as to increase with the volume of the currency issued by the reserve association or graduated so as to increase with the length of time it is outstanding?
Answer A tax upon the deficiency in reserve graduated on a scale increasing as the deficiency increases removes all necessity of a graduated tax either in proportion to volume or to length of time outstanding. The tax might be regulated so as to be prohibitive before the reserve could fall to what might be regarded as a danger point.

13. Should there be a central reserve association with branches or a number of reserve associations with or without central control? If a number of reserve associations under central control should the control be wholly in the hands of the government or associations or wholly by the government or by giving both representation?
Answer In our opinion one central reserve association with branches would best serve our present needs. Falling that a small number of regional reserve associations, also with branches, might be organized to serve the same purpose. The smaller the number of regional reserve associations, however the more effective the central control. If there are a number of regional reserve associations they should be under some kind of central control in which both the government and the various associations should have representation.

14. Should the regional reserve associations occur to us. First, they will divide the cash reserves of the country into as many different ownerships as there are regional associations. No individual bank can now strengthen its cash reserves without at the same time and to the same extent depleting the reserve of some other bank so with the regional reserve associations one of them will be able to strengthen its cash reserves without any drain on the reserves of the same extent the reserve of one of the other associations.

Second In connection with the shipping of reserve money from one section of the country to another under the control of the regional reserve branches this could be accomplished without a change of ownership or the money shipped as it would belong to the one association irrespective of the branch had custody of it. In the case of a law of central control the associations no such transfer of reserve money could be made from one region to another without a change in ownership. It would increase the reserve of the association that received it and decrease the reserve of the association that ships it. In times of financial stress when each regional reserve association would be husbanding its resources for the benefit of its own constituents this might create an undesirable and awkward situation of the interests of the various sections of the country being at variance. Such effect will be intensified in direct ratio to the number of regional reserve associations.

And third Under one ownership and control of the reserve transfers of funds could under normal conditions be accomplished by bank entries rather than the shipment of money.

Geographical Reserve Body
14. Should such reserve associations have a geographical territory and exercise the functions of a reserve bank in such territory, exclusive of other member banks of any reserve association, or should they exercise a choice as to which of the nearby contiguous reserve associations they should join without regard to fixed territory?

Answer If in counting their legal reserve balances they are to be restricted to their balances in the regional reserve associations it must be remembered that no legal enactment can change the necessity which most banks feel for keeping deposit accounts for their different branches for purposes with banks in the principal business centers of the country. If they are to be compelled to maintain their reserve balances with the regional reserve associations and are to lose the privilege of keeping accounts including their balances with correspondents at the principal business centers as part of their legal reserves they must continue to carry such balances in some other form. If they cannot include their legal reserves which will materially encroach upon their lending power. This question is further discussed in question 15.

15. Should each reserve association have state bank and trust companies as stockholders and if so what requirements should be made of such state banks and trust companies?
Answer State banks and trust companies should be included as well as national banks. The requirements should be the same requirements as to capital surplus and examination.

Approximately how many regional reserve associations should there be if a central bank is adopted? What if any should be the regional capital stock and what amount of stock should each member bank hold?
Answer An already indicated it is our opinion that the smaller the number of regional reserve associations the better will they be able to protect the demand and hold gold and thus to protect the lawful reserves of the banks of the country. We would prefer to have one association with branches but if such an association is not acceptable then we are of the opinion that the number be limited as much as possible to each regional reserve association could have as many branches as it desired in any part of its region. If limited in number the capital supplied by the constituent banks connected with each regional reserve association by contributing 10 per cent of their present capital would be adequate for the use of the regional reserve associations. If on the other hand there should be a larger number of regional reserve associations then the capital stock required by each association should be considered and determined from the total aggregate amount of capital of the banks in each district. The participating banks would have to contribute their pro rata share of such amount of capital as might be deemed necessary. Which would differ in different localities.

Directors of Reserve Body

17. How should the directors of a reserve association be elected? What should be their number powers and term of office?
Answer The number of directors of the reserve associations might properly be fixed at nine. The directors should be elected by the member banks of whom three should be bankers, and three should fairly represent the agricultural, commercial and other interests of the region in which the regional reserve association is located and should not be officers nor while serving directors of banks trust companies or other financial institutions. The remaining six should be appointed by the president of the United States.

The powers of the directors should be practically those of national bank directors. They should have authority to make the by laws of the association, to elect officers and supervise and direct them in the conduct of its business. Directors should be elected for three years but the terms of those first chosen should be so arranged that the term of one member of each of the three classes will expire each year.

18. What should be the general nature of the business of such an association?
Answer Regional reserve associations should act as the principal fiscal agents of the United States for the region in which they are located buy and sell United States and other government and state bonds receive deposits from the government and member banks discount for its members and act as the fiscal agent for the abroad buy and sell gold coin and gold and silver bullion have similar dealings with other regional reserve associations and any other transactions with them which would insure the same to the government in serving the business interests of the country.

19. Should it accept any deposits other than those of banks and should it be allowed to pay interest on deposits?
Answer They should not accept any deposits other than those of the government and of the participating banks and they should not pay interest on deposits.

Endorsing Commercial Paper
20. Should a discount double-name commercial paper for its member banks on equal terms to all and should its discount rate be public subject to change weekly?
Answer They should discount for and with the endorsement of any bank having a deposit with them commercial paper of short maturity and bills of exchange arising out of commercial transactions. The discount rate which each regional reserve association should have power to fix for itself should be equal to all participating banks in the region should be made public and should be subject to change on the opinion of the directors a change in desirable.

21. Should it loan directly to member banks with or without collateral security and should the rate of interest be equal to all public and subject to change weekly?
Answer Regional reserve associations should be permitted to loan directly to member banks against satisfactory collateral security whenever on the representation of the directors of the regional reserve association the central board of control is satisfied that the public interests so require and gives its consent thereto.

22. Should reserve associations be permitted to deal with each other in the purchase and sale of commercial paper exchange securities and gold?
Answer Yes.

23. Should government deposits be withdrawn from banks and placed with regional reserve associations and should they be apportioned among the rate of interest if any should be paid? Within what time could this be safely done?
Answer Government deposits should be withdrawn from the banks gradually over a period of not less than two years and placed with the regional reserve associations except in such localities where it is necessary for the government to have bank accounts for the payment of its bills. The apportionment among the regional reserve associations should be largely a matter of convenience to the government but as much as possible they should be divided in proportion to the capital of the regional reserve associations. Deposits secured by 2 per cent bonds should not be withdrawn except as the bonds are taken over from the banks or refunded into bonds bearing such rate of interest as will make the same worth par without the circulation privilege.

Reserves of National Banks

24. Should every national bank be required to keep its reserve with the association to which it belongs except as it keeps in its own vaults or in the vaults of its correspondents? Should it be permitted to keep any certain per cent of its reserves in other reserve associations? If so how much?
Answer In connection with this question as to whether national banks should be required to keep their reserves with the regional reserve associations to which they belong or should be permitted to keep any certain percentage of them with other regional reserve associations the question arises as to whether they should be permitted to keep any certain per cent of their reserves in other reserve associations? If so how much?

28. Should national banks be permitted to loan their credit by accepting bills arising out of the ordinary course of commerce and should reserve associations be permitted to deal in these acceptances in transactions with banks or other reserve associations?
Answer—The accepting of bills arising out of the ordinary course of commerce by the banks should not be confined to national banks as such but to all banks having a capital of $100,000 or over and which are members of a regional reserve association. Regional reserve associations should be permitted to deal in such acceptances in their transactions with banks or with other regional reserve associations in the open market.

29. Should there be a limit within which banks should be permitted to give acceptances? If so what limit?
Answer—Banks having less than $100,000 capital should not be permitted to accept and issue acceptances should be limited in their acceptances outstanding at any one time to an amount equal to their paid up capital subject to the statutory limitations as to the amount of such acceptances. No limitation should be made to any one individual firm or corporation.

30. What dividends should reserve associations be permitted to pay their members?
Answer—Regional reserve associations should be permitted to pay their member banks out of earnings dividends of 8 per cent per annum.

31. Should any share of the profits of the regional reserve association be distributed to the member banks in proportion to the average deposit maintained by them during the year?
Answer—We do not deem it advisable that any share of the profits of the regional reserve association be distributed to the member banks in proportion to the average deposit maintained by them during the year. This would be equivalent to the payment of interest on balances by the regional reserve associations which we think should not be permitted.

32. Are you familiar with the recommendations of the National Monetary commission to congress in January 1912, as to what in your opinion of the plan and what modifications you suggest if any?
Answer—We are familiar with the recommendations of the National Monetary commission made to congress in January 1912 and are on record as having endorsed and recommended that measure.

To Mobilize Banking Reserves

33. On one of several plans suggested to mobilize the banking reserves and provide elastic currency it has been suggested that the treasury department establish a division to be called a Federal Reserve Division which should conduct reserve agencies in each reserve city to exercise the functions of the regional reserve banks receive capital from member banks to the extent of 10 per cent of their capital and surplus pay 5 per cent interest to the banks upon such capital. If without permitting the banks to manage the reserve agencies directly or indirectly that such reserve agencies should discount short term prime commercial papers and furnish treasury note currency where needed to member banks under reasonable safeguards to prevent inflation thereby mobilizing the reserves and furnishing elastic currency directly to the qualified banks. suggestion carries with it a more thorough examination of the national banks and makes the indebtedness of the government by such banks a first lien on the assets of the banks. What do you think of such a suggestion?
Answer—It is possible for the treasury department to furnish the country with a safe currency. It would be very difficult, if not impossible to make that currency elastic in the sense of contracting and expanding according to the needs of the public. The experience of commercial nations is that results can be better accomplished by the creation of a privately owned central organization dominated and controlled by the government as for instance the Imperial Bank of Germany or the Bank of France. It serves to take the matter out of politics.

Politics Favored
The great danger is that borrowers go direct to the treasury politics would become an all important and dominating influence. Our government experienced great difficulty in retiring the greenbacks in gold as presented at a recent period. It is their total amount to less than $350,000,000. Our bond issues during one administration became necessary to obtain gold for that purpose. If the amount of treasury notes outstanding were to be multiplied by seven or eight the responsibility resting upon the government would be still greater. With an overflowing treasury and ample gold no anxiety would be felt and little difficulty would be experienced to be made by the government as we know from the past that we are bound to have times in the future when the treasury will not be overflowing and the gold reserve will be encroached upon and the credit of the government would then be unnecessarily brought in issue. We cannot have any credit in the country better than that of the government under which we live and it is for the interest of all to provide that credit against the possible danger. Our own experience for the last fifty years in fact ever since the creation of our government as well as the experience of other nations militates against the general proposition. The policy of the government has been to protect itself against maturing liabilities by making its future obligations payable on or after a fixed date at its pleasure. The proposition that it should assume a liability for such obligations is a possible danger. WILL FIRE ARMOR FOR PLAYING BOY

Husband of Temperance Lecturer Will Be Summarily Dismissed as Head of Georgia Industrial Home.

Macon, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—Because he whipped a 10-year-old boy at the Georgia Industrial home until the blood weils could be seen through the rents of his clothing, simply because the boy had picked blackberries fifteen minutes longer than he had been told to, W. F. Armor, farm superintendent of the Georgia Industrial home, will be summarily dismissed from his position by J. A. Harris, superintendent of the home.

Armor is the husband of Mary Harris, the well-known temperance lecturer, and his action in beating the little fellow so unmercifully has aroused no little indignation in Macon. According to the story of the boy, who is Marvin Willford, former pupil of the industrial home, when Armor called for the lad he was refused. Superintendent Harris was not aware of what had occurred until informed by a newspaper man. He stated that he would at once investigate. From Armor he is said to have learned that the boy had been given a whipping, and then an examination of the boy himself convinced him that the whipping had indeed been an unmerciful one.

"The only explanation I can give," said Dr. Harris today, "is that Armor lost his head completely. The boys are rather trying sometimes, and he probably didn't realize that he was whipping him so hard. We are going to get a new farm superintendent, and there will be an order given that the boys are to be punished in some other way in the future."

In going his side of the case, Armor said:

"I did not use a plow line on the boy. I merely whipped him with a piece of rope in the field, and carried him to the house and used a switch. I did not mean to be brutal or mistreat him.

"The boy disobeyed me. Some time ago I told him not to go in swimming, and he went anyway. I whipped him for that, and yesterday, when he went blackberrying, I told him only to stay a certain length of time, and he stayed a major way longer. In the interest of discipline I thought he deserved another whipping, and I gave it to him."

50 Cars of Peaches.
Macon, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—Up to today fifty-nine cars of peaches have been shipped from Georgia to the northern and eastern markets. This is by no means as many as had gone forward up to this time last year, but considering the fact that there is less than half a crop, the showing is not so bad.

The peaches are ripening fast now and the big orchards around Byron, Fort Valley and Marietta are fairly seething with pickers and packers. It is stated that the growers are receiving $2 a crate in the car, and they are well satisfied with the price.

Holmes' Shortage $11,517.
Macon, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—Mayor Moore today received the official report of the auditors who checked up the office of former city marshal W. F. Holmes, who recently resigned when a shortage was found in his accounts. Since then he has been indicted by the grand jury.

The report shows a shortage of $11,517. As Holmes was only under $10,000 bond it will be up to him to make up the balance of the shortage, which he states he will do.

Cop Weighs 384 Pounds.
Macon, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—Lieutenant C. B. Drew, of the Macon police department, weighs 384 pounds, which is some weight, even for a policeman.

Recently Lieutenant Drew has been suffering with a leg, which has made it almost impossible to get around, and has caused him no end of suffering. Physicians who have examined him declare that the whole trouble is caused by the weight on the leg straining one of the nerves. Lieutenant Drew will leave tomorrow for Johns Hopkins hospital in Baltimore to see what solution the experts there advise.

WITH DOORS GUARDED LEGISLATORS WORK

"Regular" Democrats of Tennessee Pass Election Law Over Governor's Veto.

Nashville, Tenn., June 21.—In the Tennessee house of representatives today a number of extra sergeants at arms were appointed, the entrance guarded and the bill amending the election law and the governor's veto, passed over the governor's veto, 54 to 18. The effort to pass this bill over the veto was undertaken by the "regular" democrats during the absence of a quorum. The amendment in that shape is now pending before the supreme court.

The election law amendment transfers the control of the state election machinery from the fusionists to the "regular" democrats and to prevent its passage over the governor's veto, was one of the main causes of the recent fusion filibuster to Middleboro, Ky. The amendment was called up this morning just after the house had passed the bill providing for short term loans to care for the state debt. Fusionists were prevented from breaking a quorum by the extra sergeants-at-arms at the barred doors.

In the pending litigation over the election law amendment, "regular" democrats have heretofore relied upon the fact that the house journal had not been allowed to show the lack of a quorum when the effort was made to pass the measure over the governor's veto during the filibuster, certain of the filibusters than being counted as simply "not voting." The amendment has passed the senate in due form.

What bearing today's action will have on the pending litigation is not yet apparent. The action threatened to provoke a storm in the house, but resulted in only impassioned speeches.

Both houses of the legislature passed bills providing for short term notes to care for the $11,000,000 state debt due this year and amending the refunding act. The amendment provides that the state funding board shall not sell the new forty-year 4 percent bonds for less than par.

WOMEN ARE KNOCKED AS DRIVERS OF AUTOS

Bridgeport, Conn., June 21.—Mrs. Isabel H. Woodford today was exonerated by the coroner of criminal responsibility for the death of William Steinhauser, who was killed by an automobile driven by her on June 2. Mrs. Woodford is the widow of Stewart L. Woodford, former ambassador to Spain.

Coroner Phelan took occasion in the finding to make the measure about whether women in a large degree are temperamentally fitted or physically equipped for driving high powered machines in populous places.

He said that while in this case the driver acquitted herself with the necessary skill, he has "a conviction that situations and emergencies frequently arise when masculine, rather than feminine, skill and judgment in the management of a machine is required for the protection of life and limb in public places."

JUDGE HENRY C. JONES GOES INTO THE BEYOND

Last Surviving Member of Confederate Congress—Leader in Alabama Politics.

Montgomery, Ala., June 21.—Judge Henry C. Jones, 84 years old, died at his home at Florence, Ala., at 10 o'clock this morning. He was the last surviving member of the Confederate congress, although, prior to the breaking out of hostilities he was the leading anti-secessionist of the state. He was a prominent member of the state legislature prior to the war, and voted against secession in the Alabama legislature, carrying his opposition so far as to refuse to sign the ordinance after it had overwhelmingly passed.

While still opposing secession, he was elected a member of the Confederate congress when it was a one-chamber body in Montgomery. When the congress was removed to Richmond, the senate chamber was added. Judge Jones was a member of the congress that provided the form of government for "the storm cradled nation that fell."

Judge Jones was very intimate with Jefferson Davis, and accompanied him on his political speaking tours. When the war broke out he engaged in the manufacture of clothing for the soldiers, and for many years after the war he was the leading attorney of the state. He was a prominent figure in Alabama politics both before and after the war and held many positions of honor and trust. He was always a dominating figure in democratic conventions, but from the fields of activity, he removed himself from the public eye.

Judge Jones was born in Franklin county, this state, and lived all his life in what is known as the Tennessee Valley, the major portion of his life spent in Lauderdale county. For two-thirds of his life he was a conspicuous figure in public life in that valley, and was considered a fine exponent of the high minded, courageous and aggressive public men of the old south.

BLOODHOUNDS TRAIL WRECKERS OF TRAIN

Natchez, Miss., June 21.—Bloodhounds working with a large force of deputy sheriffs, railroad men and citizens were unable to pick up the trail of the men responsible for the derailment last night of a northbound passenger train of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad near McNair, Miss. None of the passengers or trainmen was injured when five coaches of the train left the rails as the result of striking an obstruction believed to have been placed on the track for the purpose of wrecking and robbing the train. An investigation showed that a number of cross ties securely bound together had been fastened to the rails.

HIS HANDS TIED, HE QUILTS OFFICE

U. S. Attorney McNab Resigns, Alleging Attorney General Is Interfering to Protect White Slavers.

San Francisco, June 21.—Charging that United States Attorney General McReynolds had ordered what he considered "fatal delays" in the prosecution of four men indicted by federal grand juries, United States District Attorney John L. McNab, of this city, today tendered his resignation to President Wilson last night with a request that it be accepted by the same quick method of communication. Mr. McNab made public today the text of his telegram to the president together with a message sent to the attorney general.

The message to Wilson, the president follows:

"Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, Washington, D. C.: I have the honor to tender my resignation as United States attorney for the northern district of California to take effect immediately. I am ordered by the attorney general, over my protest, to postpone until autumn the trials of Maury Diggs and Andrew Caminetti, indicted for a hideous crime, which has ruined the girls and shocked the moral sense of the people of California, and this after I have advised the department of justice that attempts had been made to corrupt the government witnesses and friends of the defendants are publicly boasting that the wealth and political prominence of the defendants' relatives will procure my hand to be stayed through influence at Washington.

"In these cases two girls were taken from cultured homes, bullied and frightened into going to a foreign state and were ruined and debauched by the defendants, who abandoned their wives and infants to commit the crime.

"On receipt of the attorney general's telegram I prepared my resignation to take effect at the conclusion of the trial of the Western Fuel directors and the J. C. Wilson stock brokers cases, both of which I had instituted and which I wished to bring to a successful conclusion. Before I could send my resignation I received another telegram from the department ordering me to postpone the case against certain defendants of the Western Fuel company and not to try them unless ordered by the department.

"In reumatism of spirit. In bitter humiliation of spirit I am compelled to acknowledge what I have heretofore indignantly refused to believe, namely, that the department of justice is yielding to influence by unblinded grand juries on overwhelming evidence determined in Washington on representations on behalf of the defendants without notice to me.

"It is an unbearable situation for me to be unable to convey to the department the understanding of the serious situation in which this action

PLAYING WITH SHOTGUN, HE SHOT GRANDPARENTS

Twelve-Year-Old Boy Killed His Grandfather and Fatally Wounded Grandmother.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 21.—Benjamin F. Hull, 65, prosperous farmer of Dover Center, near here, was instantly killed and his wife was probably fatally wounded by their 12-year-old grandson, Leroy F. Reisinger, of Elyria, late today.

The boy was playing with a shotgun which he did not know was loaded and pulled the triggers. The greater part of the charge of shot struck his grandfather in the head. Part of the charge took effect in Mrs. Hull's right side and face, destroying the sight of one eye.

Neither of the old people saw the boy playing with the gun, and as they fell wounded the boy ran screaming to the home of a neighbor, stating that his grandparents had been wounded by the explosion of some cartridges placed on the stove. Later Sheriff Smith closely questioned young Reisinger, who finally confessed the story of the shooting. The killing is held by the authorities to have been accidental.

FREE Medical Counsel and Advice

Persons who are sick will find it to their advantage to consult the well-known specialists, Dr. Hathaway & Co., who make no charge for examination and counsel.

COMPETENCY. There is no department of life in which experience counts for more or is more important than in the practice of medicine. Before placing your case in the hands of a specialist, investigate his fitness for the undertaking. Be sure you will get honest business methods, conscientious advice and the proper professional skill.

VAST EXPERIENCE. Dr. Hathaway & Co. have had upwards of a quarter of a century training in the practice of their specialty, and with this large and valuable experience they offer the very best possible to be had. They have successfully treated in that time all manner of chronic and private diseases. They have had private hospital and sanitarium experience, and their aim has been to give the best possible to be had for their patients. Not only that, but they have been in this community for many, many years, and are still young enough to appreciate and put in force new ideas.

HONEST METHODS. Dr. Hathaway & Co. do not make misstatements; they do not say one thing to a patient and do another. Their charges are moderate and medicines are furnished free of charge. They long since earned the reputation of always being frank and honest with their patients, and nothing has made them prouder than the fact that they are referred to by many who have consulted them as men who will give them honest, conscientious advice and opinions.

EXAMINATION FREE. In order that sick men and women may judge for themselves without expense, Dr. Hathaway & Co. make it an invariable rule to charge nothing for examination. Anyone can call on them to be examined. If you have any questions, they will be instructed who to do for their trouble, with every assurance that no charge will result. They have without question the best equipped medical offices for the examination as well as the treatment of invalids. X-Ray appliances, Violet Rays, Static, Faradic and Galvanic electricity, Vibratory apparatus and the use of all of these is free to all callers for examination and treatment. If they should take treatment, you or any of your friends can avail yourself of this privilege at any time.

DR. GAULT, who is now associated with us, was formerly with us about eight years ago. The doctor has won a reputation in the treating and curing of diseases of men that is excelled by no other physician in this line, and it is for this reason that he is in charge of this company today. Dr. Gault was one of the first physicians in the south to start advertising and begin the use of the "606" treatment. He has given over seven hundred treatments of the "606" and the "14." If you are suffering from specific blood poison, there is no better treatment than this. The doctor has thoroughly demonstrated this in numbers and numbers of cases, for he has been using the treatment for practically two years, and time has proven that the contra-indications and the dangers of the administration of the "606" have been built on the bogie-map. All sorts of dangers and bad effects have been attributed to the drug, but time has shown the mistake of accepting these reports without investigation, and competent specialists no longer mention such dangers as blindness or deafness and death, for they don't occur from the use of this drug. Such reports have been now recognized as false or else due to faulty observations by those not posted upon the subject. Dr. Gault considers that there are practically no contra-indications for this drug after two years' experience, and in only a small portion of cases is it necessary to administer any other treatment.

CHRONIC DISEASES. Dr. Hathaway & Co. will be glad to see at their office or have a letter from any man or woman who suffers from any disease that has baffled the skill of other physicians. We cordially invite you to call and fully investigate our methods, and after we have gone over the case carefully and explained to you just what your trouble is and what we can do for you, if you are not entirely satisfied that you will receive not only honest business methods, but conscientious professional service and a cure for your disease, you will not be expected to take treatment.

THE DISEASES WE TREAT. We cure all chronic and private diseases of both men and women. SUCH AS INDISTINCT DYSPEPSIA, PILES, FISTULA, FIGURE, VARICOSE VEINS, NERVOUS EXHAUSTION, LOST VITALITY, BLOOD POISON, KIDNEY AND BLADDER AFFECTIONS, CATARRH, OR ANY OTHER SPECIAL CHRONIC TROUBLE.

MOLE BURNED AND ITCHED

So Could Not Rest. Could Not Stand Anything to Touch It. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Route No. 1, Box 59, Muldoon, Tex.—"My situation has made me a nervous wreck. It got to be a large knot and was red and angry all around it. It burned and itched and hurt her so she could not rest day or night. It got so bad we had to cut out her clothes in the back. She could not stand anything to touch it. It grew to be as large as a bird's egg. She was in this fix a month, getting no better when she had used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. A friend said to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment. We washed the mole with the Cuticura Soap and ointment. It with the Cuticura Ointment three times a day. Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured the mole.

"My cousin had scald head. It was a yellow scab all over his head which itched all the time. All of his hair came out. It looked just like he had wet his head and rolled it in mud. It was a sight. He would keep his head tied up to keep anyone from seeing it. His whole scalp was a solid sore. He was ashamed to go anywhere. His head looked so badly. We recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment, so they gave them a trial. It was not long before his head was well and he had a fine head of hair. Our two babies' heads broke out in little yellow blisters and then made sores. We tried several remedies, then we got Cuticura Soap and Ointment and used them all the day and in two weeks they were sound and well." (Signed) Mrs. Lillie Parker, Oct. 7, 1912.

A Handy Varnish Applied With A Cloth

That Restores the Original Beauty to Any Painted, Varnished or Filled Surface

NOT a polish but applied like one with a piece of cheesecloth. It flows like water and leaves a smooth surface. The result of years of scientific research and experiment. Offered to the public only after repeated tests had proved it to be the very best varnish ever produced. Used in the home, the office, the store--wherever wood or metal is to be varnished or refinished. Economical--a bottle of TACCO goes three times as far as the same amount of any other varnish.

Requires No Rubbing

Unlike other varnishes, Tacco produces a uniformly smooth surface which requires no rubbing. A woman can refinish chairs, tables, wardrobes, etc., with no more exertion than if she were dusting. You just dust the article to be varnished and then apply Tacco with a piece of cheesecloth. At once the beautiful grain of the wood comes up bright and clear and remains that way.

Dries in 2 to 5 Hours

The woodwork and all the furniture of an office may be varnished with Tacco at night and be dry and ready for use in the morning. In the house, the dining room chairs, say, can be refinished after breakfast and be ready for use before noon. From the instant Tacco is applied it begins to dry and when thoroughly hardened it forms a protecting coat that will last as long as the material beneath it.

Dust, Heat and Water-Proof

The steady glare of the sun, the heat of the steam radiator have no effect on any article varnished with Tacco. A table refinished with this varnish may be washed and scrubbed as often as you please without any ill effect. Acting as a filler, it closes the pores of wood and presents a hard surface from which dust may be easily wiped. Furniture refinished with Tacco not only LOOKS better but WEARS better.

Saves Time and Money

Tacco, by giving a beautiful luster to woodwork, not only brightens the home and the office, but saves time and money. It eliminates the necessity for oiling and polishing of furniture and it lengthens the life of whatever wood it is applied to. And, the fact that it is so easily applied with a bit of cloth effects a positive saving in repair and painting bills.

NIGHT OWLS MUST TELL WHY THEY ARE OUT LATE

After Midnight the Police Will Question All Suspicious-Looking Characters.

Every suspicious looking man who walks the streets of Atlanta after midnight has to give a satisfactory explanation to the policemen he may meet, or else he is sent to the police station, Chief Beavers last night, addressing the morning watch just as they went on duty at midnight. Chief Beavers told his men that he wanted the loiterers and street loafers to be at home at this time of the night, unless they had a good excuse for being out.

The chief thinks that by rounding up all suspicious characters who have the habit of making night owls out of themselves that he may be able to stop the wave of crime that is sweeping over the city.

In a statement yesterday afternoon, Judge Broyles said that he would support Chief Beavers in his fight on the loiterers of the city, and with these two guardians and near by the fighting side by side, it is certain that there will be a decrease in crime in Atlanta.

Saturday was a record-breaking day with the police force. Over 100 arrests were made, and at least twenty-five copy cases made by the department. Everything from loitering on the street to totting guns were charged against the parties arrested.

One reason of the large number of arrests was the fact that the loiterers about the poolrooms and near by saloons are being rounded up by the dozen, and then, being Saturday, an unusually heavy day was experienced.

Record-Breaking Crowd Will Attend Big Merchants' Meeting

Plans for entertaining a record-breaking convention of the Southern Manufacturers' and Merchants' association were outlined at an enthusiastic meeting at the Piedmont convention hall last night.

Following a good old-fashioned Dutch lunch Bolling H. Jones, president of the Atlanta Manufacturers' and Merchants' association, sounded the keynote of the meeting when he predicted the attendance of more business men from all over the south than have ever attended a commercial gathering in Atlanta.

"Already $7,500 has been raised for the entertainment of the thousands of business men who are expected in Atlanta during the first two weeks in August," he said, calling attention to the 25,000 invitations which have already been issued.

"Last year was the first annual convention of this great southern commercial organization with headquarters in Atlanta, which attracts business men from all the territory between Virginia and Texas. At that first convention there were 2,000 delegates, and one year of aggressive work has witnessed the addition of many times that number to our lists."

Advertised Atlanta. "They returned home to all parts of the south with such glowing accounts of the barbecues, the banquet at the Piedmont Driving club and the cordial hospitality extended them that large numbers of manufacturers and merchants are looking forward to this year's convention in Atlanta, where they can enjoy first hand the hospitality of the Gate City of the south."

"Enlist the country merchant and the southern manufacturer in a discussion of the problems which effect their business, and you will give them something of lasting value to take away with them, in addition to pleasant recollections of Atlanta hospitality," said C. W. McClure, in an appeal which met with instant approval, and forthwith came many suggestions of subjects of live interest.

"How to turn dead stock into live capital" was urged by A. C. Wolbert as of vital interest to the small rural merchant, and announcement was made that all Atlanta merchants and traveling men will be urged to line up similar subjects for discussion at the convention.

Other subjects which met with favor and which will be discussed at the August gathering are credits, and discounts, credit men's associations, bad accounts, the cause of most failures, and buy home-made goods.

Buy Home-Made Goods. In fact, the keynote of the entire Southern Manufacturers' and Merchants' convention is the slogan, "Buy home-made goods." This, coupled with the suggestion, "Make good goods, and let the people know it," plus "It pays to advertise," are favorite themes for the convention program. The value of a diversified crop will be advocated by able speakers, and other subjects will be added to the program every day.

The convention, which is heartily endorsed by the chamber of commerce, will be in session the first two weeks in August, and the following committee will be in charge of the arrangements: Bolling H. Jones, chairman; R. O. Crouch, of Griffin, Ga., and Willis E. Ragan, vice chairman; Harry Moore, secretary; H. B. Vey, treasurer.

"Get them here" is the motto of the entertainment committee according to the chairman, Mr. Ragan, and the 3,000 traveling men out of Atlanta have pledged themselves to create enthusiasm over the country, which will attract a great crowd to the convention.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT WHILE DRIVING GIRL, BAMBERG MAY DIE

Valdosta, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—Frank Bamberg, 16-year-old son of S. F. Bamberg, a prominent citizen of Jasper, Fla., is lying at the point of death in a hospital here as the result of an accidental pistol wound. The young man was brought to this city by his uncle, Fred Bamberg, of Valdosta, last night, and was operated on this morning. Little hope is entertained for his recovery.

Young Bamberg and a young lady friend were on their way to a picnic at Swanee Springs when a pistol which the young man had hid in the seat of the buggy was accidentally fired, the ball passing through his body. The young lady drove with all haste with the wounded boy to Jasper, and he was hurried here for the operation. His death is expected at any time.

HE COMMITS SUICIDE BY VOMITING MEDICINE

Cordelia, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—Refusing to work and determined to end his life one way or another because he had been put on the Crisp county chain gang for stealing, Jesse Dendard, a negro, succeeded yesterday in killing himself. He had been seriously ill from fever several days and when the county physician gave him medicine he would thrust his finger down his throat and rid his stomach of it, the fever eventually causing his death. Dendard attempted to suicide recently by throwing himself beneath the wheels of a road machine, but was dragged out unharmed.

TARIFF REVISION BEFORE CAUCUS

Underwood-Simmons Measure Receiving Harmonious Support—Income Tax Section Is to Be Redrafted.

Washington, June 21.—The Underwood-Simmons tariff revision bill, as agreed upon by the democrats of the senate committee went through a further revision of the senate democratic caucus today with practically no change and with harmonious support for most of the alterations the finance committee members had made in the original Underwood bill.

Chemical Schedule Completed. The tariff duties on chemicals, oils and paints on earthenware and glassware, and on two-thirds of the articles comprised in the metal and machinery schedule, had been disposed of when the caucus adjourned late this afternoon.

Democratic members of the finance committee met tonight to finish redrafting the income tax section of the bill. The important changes to be made in this provision, reducing the exempted income from $4,000 to $3,000 and the amount of the tax, and the income tax and administrative features of the bill then will be turned over to the caucus for consideration.

Criticism of the tariff bill in the party conference was limited to a few specific rates and a half dozen of the items which were placed on the finance committee for further investigation and report. The committee's report putting cement on the free list was sustained after some debate. The proposed duties on flaring gas light cases, optical and surgical instruments and photographic lenses came in for criticism and were referred back to the democrats of the finance committee.

MUCH INTEREST SHOWN IN LEGISLATIVE RACES

Many are Unpledged. "I have written statements from nearly a majority of the members made within the past ten days, in which they state that they are now unpledged, and that they will remain unpledged until they reach the caucus and know over the situation. Were I to count as my supporters those members who have expressed themselves as follows: 'I would like to see you speaker,' or 'I see no reason why you should not be speaker,' or 'I think you would make a good speaker, and I see no reason why I should not support you,' this number would make me quite as many supporters as those claimed by my friend, the gentleman from Hancock."

"I was myself very much impressed by the numerous, repeated and extravagant claims made for one of the other candidates for the speakership—and I came to Atlanta on Wednesday last with the avowed intention to look over the situation and if the facts, upon investigation, justified the claims made by my distinguished friend, who opposed me, and I really believe that I would do them true. I intended to withdraw from the race. But I will state just as frankly and sincerely that after carefully investigating and going over the entire situation, I am convinced that the speaker's race is a close one, and will not be settled until the vote is taken on the 25th. My chances are equal to those of any other gentleman in the race."

Senate Race Exciting. In striking contrast to these moderate statements made by two of the candidates for speaker of the house are the very emphatic claims of victory that have been made for themselves by the two distinguished gentlemen who are pitted against each other for the presidency of the senate. At last accounts both Mr. Allen and Mr. Anderson were in possession of 28 votes pledged and as good as counted.

As both men are equal in the reputations they bear for telling the truth and are equally strong in their absolute convictions of victory, it need hardly be added that one of them is certain to suffer a pretty severe disappointment. Friends of Mr. Allen Saturday declared that his stock was going up and that he would get more votes than he claimed. But friends of Mr. Anderson were just as sure that the other side had everything was going his way. So the outcome remains as much in doubt as ever.

Only this much is certain: Some senators, who are now being claimed by both sides, who are justly or not cannot be said, will likely find themselves called upon to make explanations of why they voted as they did after the battle is over. One thing is evident to all close observers of the race and that is that the state senators who now have their names put down on both sides.

State Finance. As to what matters the legislature will take up after the contests for the presidency of the senate and the houses regularly organized for business it may be said that the first thing on the program will concern the state's finances and the question of tax revision.

The subject is such a large one and so many conflicting interests are involved in its solution that it is believed that there will be time for little else this summer. Nearly all bills of a general nature, excepting tax and appropriation bills, will probably go over to the next session for settlement.

It may be added that there is a fine prospect that the legislature will find some work to do for the state in the coming year, about which so much has been written and said for the last four or five years. Public sentiment is so rapidly crystallizing in favor of action on this question this year that the legislature will hardly dare evade or shuffle over it, even if it wished to.

Among the representatives besides the candidates who were seen here Saturday are Charles A. Hight and C. Shuptrine of Chatham; Charles A. Piquet, of Richmond; D. B. Bullard, of Campbell; Barry Wright, of Floyd, and W. G. Harrell, of Decatur.

ATLANTA MILK SUPPLY SUBJECT OF LUNCHEON

Meeting of Chamber Representatives Thursday Will Look to Dairy Improvement.

It is expected that there will be a full attendance of members of the chamber of commerce, who compose the house of representatives of the body, at the luncheon to be held at the Piedmont hotel next Thursday afternoon at 1 o'clock, for the purpose of hearing the report of the chamber's committee on milk supply. The luncheon was at first set for Tuesday, June 24, but has been postponed until Thursday, June 25.

In the absence of Dr. Samuel A. Viasnka, chairman of the committee, on account of illness, the report will be presented by the vice chairman, Oscar Elsas. Other members of the committee are Ivan E. Allen, Beaumont Dayson and Dr. Michael Hoke.

As a result of the committee's labors, it is expected that a system of certified milk may be adopted for Atlanta.

The committee has been in correspondence with Dr. Charles E. North of Philadelphia, the well-known sanitarian and expert on milk, with a view to having him come to Atlanta to make a survey of the dairies from which the milk supply is derived, and to give advice upon the subject. Whether or not Dr. North's services will be obtained depends largely on the action taken at the luncheon Thursday.

MRS. ARMOR TO SPEAK NEXT TUESDAY EVENING

Mrs. Mary Harris Armor will speak at the First Methodist church Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Armor was at the head of the W. C. T. U. in Georgia when the hot prohibition fight was in progress in this state and is well known for her work for prohibition.

Heat Is Quick to Affect the Bowels

Well-Known Fact That Extreme Heat Conduces to Chronic Constipation.

So many people are in the habit of eating cold food in hot weather that constipation is very common during summer. It is best to vary the food and have some hot things, as, for example, soups and hot fish and meats, if that is to be the diet. Iced water should be drunk sparingly.

In spite of all care people will become constipated if you find yourself in that condition you can get immediate relief by the use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. There is no time of the year when you should be more careful of constipation than in the summer, for many of the serious illnesses as well as the fatalities result from a clogging up of the bowels. You also need general good health to withstand the heat, and hence Syrup Pepsin is best to take because it contains tonic ingredients that help to build up the entire system.

Numerous users throughout the land will verify these facts, among them Mr. George C. Allen, 408 N. Main St., Reading, Mass., who recovered his health completely after using only two bottles; and Miss Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

ROPER GIVES AN ORDER TO HURRY NEWSPAPERS

Washington, June 21.—Instructions went forth today from First Assistant Postmaster General Daniel C. Roper to all postmasters directing them to handle the newspapers sent to subscribers through the mails with the utmost dispatch possible after disposition of first-class matter.

"Many of these publications contain market quotations and other commercial data which are used frequently as the basis of the subscribers' daily business operations, and the value of this information is lost if it is unduly delayed in transit," explained Mr. Roper to the postmasters.

He directed that on receipt of mail at a postoffice, all sacks labeled "daily papers" should be distributed promptly and every effort made to effect their delivery on the first carrier trip after the receipt of the mail of the office, provided the delivery of first-class mail was not delayed.

It Hardly Seems Our Business To Apologize For COFFEE

INSTANT POSTUM

This pure food-drink, sold by grocers everywhere, is warranted pure and absolutely free from the coffee drug, caffeine. It feeds and nourishes where coffee destroys the tissues.

Instant Postum is made of prime wheat and the juice of sugar-cane, roasted and blended to produce a flavour much resembling high-grade Java.

A level, teaspoonful of Instant Postum in an ordinary cup of hot water dissolves instantly, and makes it right for most persons.

A big cup requires more and some people who like strong things put in a heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream.

Experiment until you know the amount that pleases your palate and have it served that way in the future.

Postum comes in two forms.

Regular Postum (must be boiled).

Instant Postum doesn't require boiling, but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water.

CRACKERS ON ROAD FOR THIRTEEN GAMES

LOCALS WIN

Conzelman Baffles Hard Hitting Barons In Last of the Series

Welchonce's Homer Features. Barons' Field Erratically. Bailey Back in His Old Stride—Score 4 to 1.

By Dick Jemison.

The locals managed to capture the final game of the series from the Birmingham Barons the count showing 4 to 1 when the game was called at the end of the first half of the eighth inning to permit both teams to catch a train.

The Crackers go to New Orleans and the Barons to Mobile and they both left here on the same train.

Joe Conzelman the big right-hander of the Crackers secured from the Pittsburgh Pirates, scored his third straight win since joining the team. He had the Barons at his mercy until the eighth inning, when he sprang a little wild streak.

The Barons were only able to get to him for five hits in the eight sessions. In the first four innings they had a man to third base in each instance, but could not score a run the old pinch swat being lacking when it was needed the most.

Thompson Hurled Well.

Carl Thompson pitched for the Barons and the former University of Georgia boy did not hurl such a bad game despite the fact that the Crackers touched him up for nine hits. Two of the Crackers' four runs, however, were the result of clean hitting of it.

Elliam and Marcan had a grand day around the keystone, especially the latter. They handled every chance in approved fashion, some of their stops being brilliant and keeping the score down considerably.

Harry Welchonce poled a home run to deep center field that was one of the most peculiar home runs that has ever been hit on the local grounds. It was not a freak by any manner of means. It was a clean home run, but where it wound up made it peculiar.

The score board at Ponce de Leon park is on a line from the home plate, directly between first and second bases. Welchonce hit the ball on a line over Marcan's head and between Knisley and Messenger.

It struck about forty feet in front of the score board and on the first bounce went between the score board and a big sign right along side of it. Knisley up the center field bank Knisley was out of sight hunting the ball back of the score board and although Welchonce touched it the home plate before he came out with the ball, the umpire had already declared it a home run. This came in the third inning.

Bisland Stars.

The fielding of Bisland for Atlanta was the bright part of the Atlanta team's defensive work. He had a couple of hard plays that took bad hops, but he played them all well. His error was on an easy chance that came in the inning when the Barons counted their one run. Smith saved a run for the Crackers in the first inning when Knisley poled one to deep center field up against the score board for three bases. He could have made a home run easily, but Smith bluffed him into sliding into the bag by pretending he had the ball, when he had been running with his head up as would have made a home run easily.

Bailey opened and went to second on a wild pitch. He advanced to third on Smith's long fly to right and counted when Bisland cracked out a single.

Entries Begin Pouring in For Field Day on July 4; Monster Field Assured

The entry list for the big field day that will be held at Piedmont park the morning of July 4 promises to be a big one. To date, thirty-three individual entries have been secured, and Joe Bean, athletic director of the Atlanta Athletic club, in charge of the meet, expects this number to be doubled by the time the entry list closes July 1.

The Georgia Railway and Electric company have donated a handsome trophy which will be presented to the team that wins the largest number of points in the meet, the points to be based on five for first, three for second and one for third.

Prizes will also be awarded in the different events their nature not having been definitely decided upon just yet.

Bailey Stars Things.

In the fourth Bailey started it with a single, went to second on a passed ball and to third when Mayer threw badly after recovering. He scored on Smith's single. Bisland sacrificed Smith to second and Agler counted him with a single to left.

The Barons' lone tally came in the eighth. Marcan and Messenger walked and the bases were full when Bisland fumbled a grounder and then could not throw it anywhere, sensibly holding it. McBride flew to left, but Bailey's great throw made Marcan return to third. McGilvray sent the run home with a sacrifice fly and Mayer popped to short.

As there was only eight minutes left for play Umpire Rudderham called the game. If he had not it would have ended anyway as a terrific thunderstorm broke over the city.

DECISIONS AGAIN IN GOTHAM BOUTS

Boxing Commission Has at Last Seen the Futility and Unfairness of the "Popular" Verdict.

By JAMES J. CORBETT.
(Former Heavy-Weight Champion of the World, Written Exclusively For The Constitution.)

New York, June 21.—(Special.)—After serving two years as a member of the commission in charge of boxing under the Frawley law, Chairman Frank O'Neil has gone on record as in favor of referee's decisions for all matches to be decided in New York state.

Mr. O'Neil has realized for a long time that the "popular" verdict is a knock to the sport and hopes to revive interest in the grand old game by restoring to the arbiters the privilege of naming the winners in future events.

He has learned by experience that the so-called "popular" verdict is anything but what its name implies with the people who foot the bills—and in those days of commercialism in sport that is one big item the commissioners can hardly afford to overlook.

The arguments of the knockers that decisions promote gambling, and have been active in their opposition to a return to "regular" Queensbury methods to open up with their verbal broadsides, it will be only fair, however, to await the popular reception of the new deal.

Patronage Slack.

For several months past the boxing game has suffered from a big falling off in patronage. Few, if any, promoters have made money the past year. This is surprising in New York, especially during the cold months, and those interested in a financial way have been trying to trace the cause of the slump.

Evidently they have decided that popular interest can be revived by a return to methods which have in the past contributed a great deal to the success of the game from a promoter's viewpoint. Which, I imagine, has something to do with Mr. O'Neil's proposal to permit decisions—if he can bring his two associates on the commission to his way of thinking.

There is no doubt that the "decision-less" bout has injured the sport locally and that a rule giving referees authority to render verdicts will help boxing a great deal. At the same time those who are most anxious to stimulate public interest—the promoters—need look for little increase in box office receipts while they continue to deal out the same quality of bouts that they have programed the past season.

The best way and the quickest, they will find to revive interest will be to furnish a better class of entertainment. By bringing the best material to be obtained to New York and exercising judgment in the matchmaking, they will discover that New Yorkers have not only not lost interest in boxing, but that they will pay liberally for what appeals to their liking in that line.

Syracuse Varsity Eight Prevents Ithacans From Making Sweep of Races

Eight-Oared Freshmen Is Terrific Struggle, Cornell Winning—Ithacans Easy Winners in Four-Oared. Syracuse Won by Quarter of Length in Final Event of the Day.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 21.—The national character and caliber of college rowing in the United States were demonstrated here late this afternoon in the 4-mile feature race of the annual intercollegiate regatta. After winning the two preliminary events of the program, Cornell, usually conceded to be the leading university of the country in rowing, was forced to lower her colors to Syracuse and just escaped the added ignominy of being defeated by two western crews, the University of Wisconsin and Washington.

In a driving and spectacular finish such as has not been seen on the Hudson river course, the Orange varsity oarsmen rowed across the line a scant length ahead of Cornell, while pressing the exhausted Ithaca eight came Washington less than a length behind and Wisconsin's bow lapping the stern of the Seattle entrants for national varsity rowing honors. Columbia, the pacemakers for the first 2 miles, were fifth, while far in the rear Pennsylvania trailed in the wash of the five preceding crews.

It was a race and finish that drew the 60,000 spectators on observation trains, yachts and river banks almost frantic with enthusiasm and the usual organized cheering and singing lost all union and became a mere series of shrieks and yells under the strain of the pressure of college loyalty.

The victory of the Syracuse crew was a big surprise, but the wonderful showing of the middle and western crews was the feature and the topic of conversation among the veteran oarsmen after the regatta.

The official times of the varsity eight-oared race is perhaps the best indication of the closeness of the struggle down the 4-mile course and the courage and stamina with which five of the six eights fought until the very finish.

Syracuse finished in 19 minutes 23.3 seconds, Cornell 19 minutes 21 seconds, Washington 2 seconds later and Wisconsin 3 seconds behind. Washington Columbia crossed the line in 19 minutes 31.5 seconds and Pennsylvania trailed in last 20 minutes 11.5 seconds.

The time of the winning crew was the fastest since 1909 and but 35.5 seconds behind the record made by Cornell in 1901.

Ideal Weather.

Ideal weather conditions prevailed the entire afternoon and the Hudson was minus even a ripple. The predicted closeness of the races and the presence of the championship crew of the Pacific coast all helped to attract a gathering of rowing enthusiasts that probably broke all records for attendance. The long observance train was crowded until late comers hung like flies on the ends and sides.

The victory of the Orange oarsmen was a big surprise to the rowing sharps, for they had not been considered as particularly dangerous. What little wakening there was favored Cornell at 4 to 5 against the field. Syracuse was quoted as a 3 to 1 chance, while Washington went to even money to finish among the first three. Columbia backers found plenty of takers at even money that her crew would not finish, one, two, three, and the forecasts proved correct. Although short of the greater hon-

THIRTEEN GAMES

Crackers Traverse Southern Division; Back Again July 4

Open Series in New Orleans Today With a Double-Header—Dent Will Twirl the Opener.

Billy Smith and his pennant-chasing Crackers left yesterday afternoon on their second swing of the southern division of the Southern league. They will not return again until July 4.

Thirteen games in all will be played on this trip. New Orleans, Memphis, Montgomery and Mobile will be visited in that order, four games, one a tie play off being scheduled for the first named city, and three games being scheduled in each of the other three.

At the speed that the Crackers are now traveling, they ought to make a hundred per cent better showing against the southern teams this trip than they did on the last invasion.

On the last trip the Crackers made one, lost one and tied one in New Orleans. At Memphis they won one and dropped three. At Montgomery they won two and lost two, while at Mobile they dropped all four plays.

Crackers Stronger.

This trip they will find the teams that they tied with last time much more formidable, while the teams that beat them up so badly will be admittedly weaker, and with the Crackers going at a better clip the result of the trip should be encouraging.

When the Crackers made their first hike, it was the first time that some of the players had ever been in the cities mentioned. They could not get acclimated or used to the grounds in those cities. But they learned a lot, and their trip this time ought to show it.

The pitchers were not going as good, either, as they are now, though the rest of the team was probably playing as good a brand of ball as they are now. With improved pitching there will be a different story to tell.

Fellows Today.

The Crackers open up with the New Orleans Pelicans today, and it is possible that the double-header of the series will be played this afternoon. In fact, it seems certain. The double-header is made necessary by the 1 to 1 tie of the last trip. The Pelis and the Crackers have engaged in six games this season, the Crackers winning three, the Pelis two and one resulting in a tie.

The series there opening on Wednesday. The Crackers are out for revenge on this trip. The last visit to Red Elm was disastrous, the local pitchers kicking away the games after the Crackers had piled up four, five and seven-run leads. The count between the Turtles and the Crackers for the season stands, Memphis 4, Atlanta 3.

Starting Saturday, Montgomery will be played on that date and the following Monday. On their last visit to Billikentown the locals broke even in the four games played. The Billies and the Crackers have engaged in eight games this season, the Billies winning four, the Crackers three and one resulting in a tie.

Gulls Last.

The trip will be wound up at Mobile with games Monday and Tuesday, with a double-header on one of the two days, so as to permit the Crackers traveling back home Wednesday to get here in time for the morning and afternoon games July 4.

The last visit to Gulltown was disastrous, the league leaders taking all

GREEK RIFLEMEN CANNOT COMPETE

Washington, June 21.—Word was received here today from the president of the Pan-Hellenic Shooting society, of Athens, Greece, that the society would be unable to send a team to the international rifle shooting match at Camp Perry, Ohio, in September. This is because all Greek riflemen have been called to the colors. Similar declaration has been received from the crown prince of Serbia.

Johnson Loses.

London, June 2.—Wallace F. Johnson, of Philadelphia, was defeated in the final round of the London lawn tennis championship tourney this afternoon by F. G. Lowe, in one of the finest struggles ever seen at Queens club. The British crack won 7-5, 6-4, 4-5, 4-5, 6-4.

four of the games played and then coming to Atlanta and taking two out of the three played. But there is a different story to be told this time, or we miss our guess.

Elliott Dent will probably face the Pelicans in the first game of the double-header today, with the choice for the second game doubtful.

The probable batting order of the two teams in the opening tray will be:

SOUTHERN LEAGUE

Billies 2, Turtles 1.

Montgomery, Ala., June 21.—Montgomery made a clean sweep of the Memphis series and six out of seven games played here this week by winning today's game. The score was 2 to 1. Walker drove the pill to the centerfield fence in the third inning for the circuit. Abstein tried to stretch his hit to the same place into a home run and was thrown out several yards at the plate. Shanley hit the ball in the fifth inning. Both Bagby and Harrell pitched good ball and were given sensational support. This is Bagby's fifth straight win.

Pels 11, Gulls 1

Mobile, Ala., June 21.—Mobile played tonight ball this afternoon. Mobile made eight errors which mixed with twelve hits by New Orleans gave the visitors the last game of the series by a score of 11 to 1. Errors helped New Orleans to four runs in the fourth inning which the entire Mobile team blew up. Wilson pitched brilliant ball for New Orleans and would have scored a shut out but for an error by Kyle who allowed a single to get through him with a man on base.

BROOKLYN HANDICAP WON BY WHISK BROOM

Decisions Help

I have long been a booster for a return to decisions in boxing matches in New York. As my readers well know and for that matter have always been at a loss to flatter the objection to them. A referee's decision is no more likely to encourage gambling than an umpire's rulings at a ball game.

To the average fight enthusiast the question of winner and loser is quite as important as it is to a baseball fan. The question of the referee's decision of sports of any sort lies in the competition for super or tv and in any game where that important detail is left to the imagination the interest is naturally bound to slump.

So far as betting is concerned a majority of sport lovers believe money talks. Whether it refers to a question of superiority in boxing, baseball or any other game. Men who like contests of skill will wager when they feel a superior law or no law and under the popular or news paper decision plan there is always a chance for arguments and disputes over boxing matches which would be quite impossible under the referee system.

It has taken a long time for those in control to arrive at the sensible conclusion that reforms are needed in the manner of continuing the sport in this state. A big step has been made in the first place by boxing and Dix in placing men of to experience in professional boxing on the commission.

The law has many provisions which require the knickerbocker club to have been filled with 175 of 11 sports to determine and enforce how ever Mr. O'Neil's part in the matter that reforms are necessary should cause us to rejoice in the fact that at least one member of the commission has at last begun to sit up and take notice of the needs of the sport. A side authorizing decisions will help largely to renew popular interest in it up to the matchmakers to do the rest.

Gibbons Can Hit

Mike Gibbons can hit. Several local critics will insist that St. Paul man does not carry the wallop but from the manner in which he disposed of Young Ahern last week at Madison Square garden there is no question about his punch. It all depends with the clever Gibbons whether the fellow he is opposed to can hit hard or not.

If he can Mike does not take many chances and as a result does not put as much force into his wallop as when set for a slam. In the bout the other night Mike discovered early there was little sting to Ahern's blows and what he did to the local man after that was plenty and in no way.

It was Gibbons' refusal to mix it up with Edlie McGoorty that cost him the popular verdict last fall. In that battle McGoorty was not himself at all (and I rather fancy he has never fully recovered from the nervous strain of training to make weight on that occasion to judge from his mediocre performance of late). But to get back to my story Gibbons ought to have won that fight hands down. He had the speed, the cleverness and if think the strength. But Mike's bump of caution is not luck in development, and that's the answer.

I doubt if there is a middleweight in the game at present who could win a decision over Gibbons in a round. In a long bout but he would not put many blows on the St. Paul boxer in a short contest. Gibbons has been wasting his time lately boxing welters and second class middleweights. He is good enough to take on Klaus Dillon and the rest of them. A mat between Mike and Pittsburg Frank would draw big but I'm afraid there is little chance of its taking place before next winter at the earliest. If at all Gibbons is to return to the ring it will be during the hot weather and I understand Klaus contemplates a trip after the heavy weight championship of Europe. Georges Carpentier by virtue of an easy win from Bombardier Wells is now the holder of that title. Klaus has every reason to believe he can repeat his recent victory over Georges and there would be big money in it for him, if he gets the match with Carpentier he will lose no time sailing for the other side.

Dillon Looks Good

With Klaus absent abroad and Gibbons resting the best middleweight appears to be Jack Dillon of Indianapolis. Eddie McGoorty was my choice, but he has not been boxing in anything like championship form in the past, and has evidently been the old toboggan good and hard his work recently and it is through.

Dillon is to meet Jimmy Clabby on the 17th of July. Clabby's outbox is M. Goorty at Butte last week coming from the final and running away with the fight after having all the worst of it in the first round or two. The battle with Dillon should determine his standing as a championship candidate.

Little Jack claims to look the class, to lead to the top but has been a stumbling block to many aspirants. In the only bout he was seen in New York City he gave a miserable exhibition. Some of it however he has met a Frank Klus and at times has given the number of the best men among them a splendid account of himself. The recent ten round match with Klaus at Indianapolis resulted in a popular verdict for Dillon although Frank and his manager have protested the decision.

The most promising material of all in the middleweight division just now is young Tom Gibbons. Mike's brother. While I fought green in his engagement around here he gave plenty of promise of future greatness. A scanty amount of experience and coaching under his clever brother and Tom should develop into a worthy opponent for the best in the 158 pound division and possibly a successor to the late Stanley Ketchel as undisputed champion of that class.

Goodrich Tires

Best in the long run

When we tell you that Goodrich Tires are best in the long run we mean that for day-in-and-day-out service they are so made and molded as to give you long, consistent, uniform, satisfactory wear and continued, comfortable pleasant riding.

We mean that Goodrich Tires are an advantage to whatever car they are used upon.

We mean that, as the makers of practically half the 1914 output of 1913 cars signify by buying Goodrich Tires for equipment, they buoy up and benefit your automobile, thereby increasing its service value to you.

Whatever car you own or buy you can have it equipped with Goodrich Tires if you specify them.

Frequently our attention is called to instances where Goodrich Tires have given unusual mileage and shown unusually long life under the most severe strains and in the most trying conditions.

We do not feature these unsolicited testimonials in our advertising—although they are so remarkably numerous as to be most gratifying to us.

We ask you to buy and use Goodrich Tires upon our straightforward, conservative promise of their quality and durability.

Forty-three years of active, successful rubber manufacturing is, we believe you will agree, valuable experience. And it goes into every Goodrich Tire.

This knowledge of how to compound the purest rubber so that it not only retains every bit of its life and resiliency but is imbued with surprising resistance and toughness—wearing quality—is one reason for Goodrich Tires being best in the long run.

We believe Goodrich Tires on the average give longer wear than any other you can find. They must do this because our principle—unit molding—unchanged in all the time we have been making tires—gives the constructional perfection which insures against the greatest variety of road and weather conditions.

When the car driver is careful in giving proper attention to his tires keeps them properly inflated, sensibly avoids unnecessary shocks and strains, he gets astonishingly long mileage—but these records do not justify our making claims that would establish a wrong impression, and that is why they are not used in our advertising.

"There is nothing in Goodrich advertising that is not in Goodrich Tires."

Goodrich Unit Molding makes one integral piece of both thick, tough tread and strong, resilient body. The tread, being of the tire and not put on it, naturally does not strip or peel. The extra reinforcement of the sides with strips of pure rubber does away with the chance for rim troubles. Look at a cross section of any Goodrich Tire and at a glance you will see what unit molding means—there are no layers or separation lines.

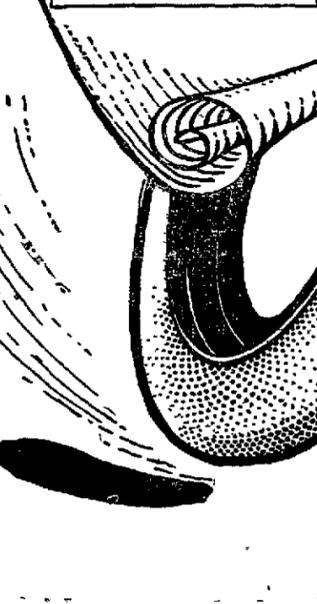

Write for our free folders telling you how to get the best service from your tires and how to avoid the common tire injuries.

Cordele, Ga., June 21.—(Special)—Fuehl held the Cordele batters at his mercy at all stages of the game today, and Americus easily won. Brunswick, Ga., June 21.—(Special)—Brunswick made a clean sweep of the series by taking this afternoon's game from Waycross by a score of 5 to 1. Hartner pitched great ball for Brunswick. With men on bases he was hitting twice striking out the side. He kept his nine hits scattered throughout the game. Clark pitched excellent ball until the eighth, when the locals secured a home run a double and two singles counting for three runs. Both teams played a snappy ball on the field and one of the largest crowds of the season was present.

GEORGIA-ALABAMA

Newnan 4, Gadsden 3.
Newnan, Ga., June 21.—(Special)—Newnan made it three straight by taking today's game from Gadsden by the score of 4 to 3. The game was a pitcher's battle between Lovett and Randall and though striking the most hits the former kept them well scattered lightening up in the pinches and fanning 9 men. Two timely doubles in succession followed by a single yielded the locals two runs in the fourth and the game was put on ice in the sixth when two more were scored on a base on balls two errors and a sacrifice fly. Randall of Gadsden carried off the hitting honors by securing two doubles and a single.

LaGrange 8, Opelika 0.
LaGrange, Ga., June 21.—(Special)—The game between Opelika and LaGrange today developed into a wrangling match and was forfeited to LaGrange in the sixth inning by a score of 8 to 0 after Manager Randall, of the Opelika team had called his men off and refused to play ball. The squabble arose over a wild throw from catcher to first base which allowed a runner to come from second to home thus tying the score. Two players were umpiring. Manager Randall claimed that the base runner was entitled to only one base on the wild throw and insisted that the man go back to third. Both umpires ruled against him and Manager Randall ordered his men off the diamond. The game was then forfeited to LaGrange.

ANOTHER PITCHER HIT BY LINE DRIVE

Columbus, Ohio, June 21.—George McQuillan, leading pitcher of the Columbus American association team for whose services several major league clubs have made bids was injured in the second inning of this afternoon's game with Minneapolis by a liner from Rossman's bat. The ball hit McQuillan's head about an inch above the right ear. The victim retained consciousness but was hurried to a hospital where it was said tonight he was not hurt as badly as he had been feared.

McQuillan in years past has pitched for the Philadelphia and Cincinnati National teams. He joined Columbus in July 1911. This season he has won ten of fourteen games, charged to his account.

Texas Auto Owner Writes Humorous Letter to Manager of Standard Auto Co., Atlanta.

The following is an exact copy of a letter sent by Walter F. Seay, of Texarkana, to his friend, Mr. C. L. DuPuy, who also is a Texan, southern distributor for the Paige-Detroit motor cars, and manager of the Standard Auto company here in Atlanta.

Atlanta, Ga.: Dear Friend—Through the Haig company, Dallas, Tex., I recently became the owner of a Paige car, and for that reason I take the liberty of addressing you upon a very vital question, in so far as this part of the country is concerned.

"In the days before in Texans became contaminated with vaudeville show, female stenographers and high-powered automobiles, if one fellow stole another one's horse he was shortly jerked hence via the rope route. This was about all a man was ever hung for in Texas—for other indiscretions they usually shot him. In the present day, instead of being a horse thief, when you steal a man's car you are just simply a "joy rider." It will hardly be necessary for me to tell you just how a man feels when he comes out of a summer theater as full of sentiment as a dog is full of fleas, expecting to enjoy a pleasant ride home with a kind of mild-mannered, through to find the car gone and all street cars crowded to an extent calculated to make a conservative citizen cuss, and other instances of similar nature not necessary to here mention. Hence, it is my present desire to ascertain if there is some way in which these cars can be easily and successfully locked. Mechanics here seem to think that it is more or less impractical, and I take the liberty of asking you to furnish any suggestions that you can make along this line.

"Friends of mine who have more interest in my general health than they have in whether I get back home at all or not at night have suggested that I should run the car myself, and this I am doing somewhat to the terror of the neighbors, especially those who have small children. To date I have learned that it will not run without gasoline. This about covers my knowledge of the car. I have a burning desire to learn something about the car. If you would be kind enough to send me your various catalogues concerning the operation and mechanism of the car, or any other literature that you publish that would be of benefit to an amateur I would appreciate it very much.

"It might be of interest to you to know that although three white boys and one negro have learned to operate this car, who had never operated a car prior thereto, the car is still intact, and I have never had the slightest trouble of any kind. Yours,

"WALTER F. SEAY."

COLE SALESMEN ARE AUTOMOBILE ENGINEERS

They Are Not Only Good Sellers, But Help in Designing of New Models.

Automobile engineers are generally found in automobile factories designing automobiles, but there are four of them who are not doing this but are and have been successfully selling motor cars for some little time. The Cole Motor Car company, of Indianapolis, have four automobile engineers in their selling organization who are members of the big International Society of Automobile Engineers. They are William L. Colt, of the Colt Stratton company, New York; E. W. Arbogast, of the Cole Motor company, Chicago; John B. Wallace, Wallace Motor Car company, Newark, N. J., and Fred J. Decker, of the Shafer Decker company, Rochester, N. Y. They all sell Cole automobiles exclusively.

"That is some tribute to the standardized Cole," Chief Engineer Charles Crawford, of the Cole Motor Car company, says when his brother engineers talk of his advisory staff on the selling end.

"Not only have the men made good on the selling end of the Cole, but Engineer Crawford claims that they have been of untold assistance to him in the designing of the Cole.

"These men," Mr. Crawford says, "as members of the Society of Automobile Engineers get the benefit of the numerous bulletins put out by the society. They are in touch with the pulse of automobile building. Then they get that all-important angle—the wishes of the automobile purchasing public. When an engineer knows what the public wants the rest is easy. I confess I get a great deal of assistance from these men. Every experiment that we make here at the Cole factory I give these four engineers a report on before anything definite is done. In this way we get maximum efficiency."

It is said at the Cole plant that the success these men have made in handling one line of automobiles exclusively is a good illustration of the success that an automobile dealer can have.

William L. Colt says that a man cannot properly handle his customers and give them the justice due if he handles more than one line of cars. In this his opinion is concurred in by Mr. Wallace, Mr. Decker and Mr. Arbogast.

LONG TOURS FOR HENDERSON CARS

One Machine Will Be Two Years on Road, Reaching Frisco in 1915.

Three Henderson cars will start for San Francisco on July 1 in two exactly opposite directions. Two of these will complete their drive to the Pacific coast in twenty-six days, while the third will be two years on the road, arriving in San Francisco July 1, 1915, during the Panama-Pacific exposition.

The two Hendersons will be touring models entered in the Indiana-to-Pacific tour of the Indiana Automobile Manufacturers' association by the Henderson Motor Car company and driven by R. P. Henderson, vice president of the Henderson company, and Ray Harroun, the famous cup-winner. These two cars will be equipped with the Harroun kerosene carburettor and will use this fuel during the entire tour.

The third car will be driven around the world by Edwin P. Kohl. This will be a roadster model and Mr. Kohl, who has just graduated from the University of Wisconsin, has spent several years in newspaper work and established a year ago the Wisconsin Daily News, the evening paper of the students of the university at Madison. In the capacity of general manager he has built up one of the strongest college sheets in the country in the past twelve months.

AUTOMOBILE BEST CREATOR OF JOY, DECLARES MAHONEY

The motor car is a creator of happiness and optimism. It has done more to make the American people a happy, cheerful crowd of contented workers than any other invention in the history of the world. Such is a statement made recently by W. N. Mahoney, general manager of the Cartecar company's factory branch, Atlanta, Ga.

The motor car affords a kind of pleasure and recreation combined that is entirely new to the world," said Mr. Mahoney. "The man who drives a motor car has a means of travel that is equal to both the railway and the horse-drawn vehicle. He can cover the great distances, yet is able to choose his own roadways and can go at his own free will.

"It is a new sensation, different from anything ever known to the world before, and that's why it has become so very popular in such a comparatively short time. Find a man who drives a motor car and you will invariably see a cheerful, happy fellow who enjoys living to the utmost.

"But perhaps the greatest thing that the motor car has accomplished is to make the life of the country people pleasant and worth while. With an automobile the farmer has pleasures at his command which are second to none that the city man enjoys. Time and again we get letters from owners of Cartecars in the country who say that they never before knew what real pleasure was. They are able to get around over their state and can keep in touch with agricultural development around them. And the motor car will do more than any other one thing to keep the boys and girls on the farms."

Active Power

In the new Model C-Six, there is abundant power, and more than that. It is active power—wheel-power, not merely engine-power. Loss through friction is reduced to the minimum by the Three-Point Support, and the maximum of active power is delivered to the rear wheels.

This means many more miles in a day, and with greater ease, than has ever before been possible in any other car of any power.

JACKSON'S MARGIN FOURTEEN POINTS

"Shoeless Joe" Tops "Terrible Tyrus"—"Texas Tris" in Third Place—Eddie Collins Best Run-Getter.

Joe Jackson leads Ty Cobb, in the race for the batting honors in the American league by 14 points, with Tris Speaker in third place now, the latter having climbed past Eddie Collins by great hitting during the past week.

Jackson has made the most number of hits this season having binged safely eighty-six times. Speaker with seventy-five and Collins with seventy-four are right behind him.

Collins is still the leading run-getter having crossed the plate fifty-one times to date. Jackson is next with forty-eight and Baker of the Athletics is third with forty-six.

Here are the players who have batted 250 or better and who have participated in fifteen or more games including those played Wednesday June 18.

These figures are compiled by George L. Moreland the famous Pittsburg statistician.

Showing 'Em Where He Hit His Home Run

The Constitution's staff photographer slipped up on these boys when they were sprawled out on the ground while the Atlanta team was at bat. Harry Welchone is showing Captain Alpermann where he hit the ball when he sailed it out for a home run in the game with Birmingham Saturday. Whitey claims that Welchone is wrong, and is showing him where he believes he hit it. Conzelman, on the extreme left, and Wallop Smith, on the extreme right, both are looking at them like they doubted the statements of both men.

The Old Time Fan Discusses the Southern League Race

By Charles A. Lamar
The race in the Southern league is a strenuous proposition at this stage of the conflict and Mr. B. Smith and his crack team are going strong in all departments of the game. The pitchers are rapidly coming around and when they get good and tight there'll be trouble a plenty for a lot of folks before September heaven in sight.

The team is a bear in attack and in defensive play it is no slouch. Conzelman's defeat of Nashville in thirteen innings was a notable pitching achievement because he stood to his guns and won out after he had been repeatedly put in a hole by the cutting in of the support behind him.

He has the smoke and what's more he's as game as a sparrow hawk. The gloomier the outlook the harder he works and that's the spirit required to win games. Any lobster can pitch when the bases are empty but when they are loaded, why that's something else already. Yes?

Locals in Fight
Don't get agitated about the chances of the Crawlers, they are in the fight from end to end—you can bet on that with a clinch you can't lose. Sir Milky Finn is a foxy Gazabo and you'll have to convey it to him. He's on the job all the way and as cool as the time honored cucumber.

He has signed Carl Lundgren who pitched for the Cubs a part of the season of 1928. At that time he was a powerful man young ambitious and speedy.

He had everything including speed to turn green hickory and an assortment of curves that would keep a cryptographer scratching figuring all night but he was as wild as a March hare in a cyclone and couldn't locate the plate with a field glass.

But oddly enough when on dress parade he would slick em over with the speed and accuracy of a rifle shot and then you are—

John Kling the great Cub catcher was strong for Carl but Chance had his doubts. But he told Kling to go the limit and get results if he could.

Lundgren's Wild
Well Kling worked with Lundgren like a truck horse. But no use. He was there with the tapicer in practice but when he faced the blokes from hostile shores he invariably got hooked up wrong and curled up like a pin feather on a hot stove.

He had a strange hold on the art of steering the ball away from the plate that would make Wild Willie Brown and Cy Seymour look like a brace of pikers who had been touched for their meal tickets.

The crisis came after Kling had gone through an arduous afternoon behind the plate jumping from spot to spot in bootless efforts to stab wild pitches like a wild cat striking for cat fish in the atmospheric gloom of the Ocmulgee swamp.

After the game—so called—Chance approached Kling on the bench and with considerable dignity not to say sangroid merriment. Say John what's the matter with Lundgren?

Well replied Kling there's a little too much the matter. I'm all in and dead on my feet. Kling for the ambulance and let it go at that.

So there was nothing to it but the seltzer bottle for Carl and a thorough ticket to the gall and upset to the grasshoppers make grass while the seeding was good.

Such are the exigencies of the base ball business for the twirlers or slab bays or pitchers or fingers as the case may be susceptible to the dizziness wabbles and the inability to throw where they aim.

It may be said in passing that if Lundgren has not gone back and can acquire control he ought to be a tower of strength to the Gulls.

Doyle's Trick

Some time ago Larry Doyle the Giants second baseman turned an un-fair trick on an opposing pitcher with the aid of a so called trainer and the inability of the umpire to see through a ladder. He claimed to have been struck on the ankle and got away with it without turning an eyelash.

He paraded to first and subsequently scored. McGraw asked him if his ankle was very much hurt and he said it didn't hit my ankle but the bat. Whereupon McGraw ejaculated. You are an actor not a ball player. Now gents, what do you know about that?

Well he may be an actor among ball players but he's a ball player among actors and you can lay to that. Taking an unfair advantage of an opponent is a sorry role for a sportsman to assume. Bum stuff to throw into people who love baseball as a sport and not as a system of trickery.

But people who like that sort of thing why that's the sort of thing they like. Mr. Lincoln was wont to observe in the misty past. My idea of the last word in four flushing is syn-dicate stuff by a ball player. What's yours?

The Hon. Kid Eberfeld is setting a fast clip with his Chattanooga team. He's a fine ball player and an aggressive manager. It will take some tall busting to stop the Kid when he gets started. He's nothing if not a fighter.

The Early Bird

(A beck yard lyric, by Billy Smith)
Yes dear pals I'm the early bird,
And now that peace controls
I'll not let other birds catch worms
And leave me watching holes.

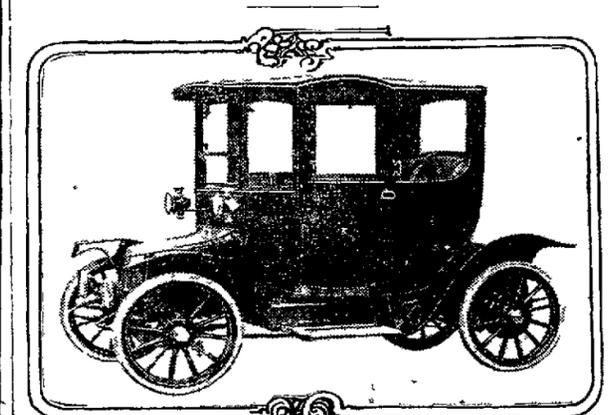

I did that once and got the hook,
I'll go for all that squirms
Because I know and that D—d well—
There are more birds than worms.

CHICAGO ELECTRIC AGENCY ESTABLISHED IN ATLANTA

Model 121 Chicago Electric.

That electric driven vehicles are becoming the vogue in Atlanta can be vouched for by R. Y. Sanders, who was made Atlanta distributor for the Chicago Electric—a new car to enter the local field, but which has been on the market for several years.

Mr. Sanders claims that Atlanta's women folk are demanding a car that can be driven by a woman herself, even when she is all dressed up—to go either shopping, to the theater, ball or house party—the electric is essentially a "lady's car." In its simplicity in operation and is always ready, and that is why Atlanta's women are demanding the electric-driven motor car in preference to the gasoline car.

JEROME TRAVERS MAINTAINS CLIP

Metropolitan and National Golf Champion Wins Invitation Tournament on Apawamis Course.

New York June 21—Jerome D. Travers, of Upper Montclair N. J. National Metropolitan and New Jersey state golf champion won the final match of the invitation tournament over the link of the Apawamis Golf club Rye N. Y. by 2 up and 1 from T. V. Bermingham of Wyckoff today. The bye hole was played out giving 70 to Travers against 73 for the runner up.

In the qualifying round last Thursday in which there were over 100 competitors Travers won the medal with a total of 148 for 36 holes.

In almost continual motion about the country visiting branches, dealers and automobile shows.

The car was the ninth in the long Studebaker 30 series and the first shipped south of the Dixie line this early work was done at Atlanta where work was then in general use. Many thousands of miles Bullet covered at high speeds on this course both in practice runs and in many a successful racing campaign. In the car's later work it has been as far west as Kansas City and as far south as Florida.

Bullet's record now exceeds 170,000 miles. While this total is probably surpassed by several other Studebaker cars the definite and unique record data on Bullet's performance make the car a unique figure in American motordom.

Authorities agree that 5,000 miles is a liberal estimate of the average distance a car will be asked to cover each year. Figured on such a basis this Studebaker car is already 34 years old. Up to the present not even a touch of fresh paint has been applied to Bullet's battle scarred exterior which still shows traces of the original red in which the earliest cars of this model were finished.

Inside the Studebaker organization this gallant veteran has come to own a veritable personality. That the car after a 11 its travels, been returned to the driver of its youth, to travel once more the red roads of Georgia, is considered a happy chapter in its eventful history.

CRIMSON'S NINE EMULATES CREWS

Brooklyn, N. Y. June 21—Harvard defeated Yale in the deciding game of their championship baseball series at Ebbets field by 6 to 5 today and thus retains supreme in both land and water competitions between the two universities.

Bad pitching and loose fielding swung the pendulum first one way and then the other. Five pitchers were sent into the fray Harvard using two and Yale three. The steadiness of Hitchcock was perhaps the most important single factor in the Crimson victory.

Felton and Gile began the box work the former being taken out in the fifth when with one out three Yale batsmen singled in a row. Hitchcock relieved him with a man on second and one out but retired the side. He hit the first batter up in the sixth and the runner eventually scored on a sacrifice and a single by Hunter. After that Yale was held safe.

Gile weathered the storm until the seventh when a single by Ayres and two passed filled the bases with one out. Brown then passed the next batter forcing Ayres home and Young's single to right brought in the other two. Brown opened the eighth with a pass and was relieved by Scott, who retired the next six men in order. Harvard's trio of runs in the second were scored on Tomes' scratch hit. Reilly's wild throw on Young's hard drive a pass to Alsop and Ayres timely double.

Felton in the third passed the first two batters. Blossom forced Hunter at third but Phillips' fumble of Schofield's grounder scored Middlebrook. Riddell's double sent Blossom home. Middlebrook, Blossom and Schofield singled in succession in the fifth two runs scoring.

No-Rim-Cut Tires 10% Oversize

Don't Pay a Higher Price

Since our 11 per cent reduction, numerous tires cost users more than Goodyears. That's a unique condition. No-Rim-Cut tires used to cost one-fifth more than others. Yet they never were made better than today.

The Utmost
Bear in mind that, for years and years, No Rim-Cut tires have been the high price tires. Nobody claimed to make tires that were better. But other standard tires cost less.

Yet No Rim Cut tires came to outsell all others, because of their proved economies. They saved their extra cost to users, two or three times over.

The demand for these tires doubled over and over, until last year's sales by far exceeded our previous 12 years put together. With this multiplied output the cost came down, and the saving was deducted from our price. Now no standard tire of any type costs less than No Rim Cut tires. And lesser tires, with a limited output, cost more than these famous tires.

You get, as always, in No-Rim-Cut the utmost in a tire. You get tires that can't rim-cut. You get 10 per cent overcapacity compared with clincher tires. You get the tires which, by sheer merit, have won the top-most place in Tiredom. It is folly to pay more.

Write for the Goodyear Tire Book—14th-year edition. It tells all known ways to economize on tires.

A Free Tire Repair Service

For All Users of Pullman Tires (Guaranteed for 3500 Miles)

We have gone to great expense to install this service. But it is only in keeping with the policy of the firm—take care of the customer. Motor cars manned by expert tire repair men are on the job from 6 a. m. to midnight every day, Sunday included.

A phone call explaining your predicament—puncture, blowout or other tire trouble—brings a machine with men and materials to your assistance. If the damaged tire cannot be mended quickly, they will put on a new one. All without one penny's charge to you, save for the new tire, when necessary.

This free service will not only bind present customers more closely to us, but it will prove to those who have never used Pullman tires that we are more interested in customers after the sale than we are before they buy.

Pullman Tires

All Sizes All Styles
Equal the Most Expensive Tires Made

They need no elaborate description. Those who use discernment in the purchase of their tires have found Pullmans equal to every test. We guarantee them for 3,500 miles—and they give more. They are made of standard materials by one of the largest manufacturers of automobile tires. Every step in their manufacture is slow and sure. They are examined, re-examined and tested for flaws. When they pass the hands of the final examiner they are as good as brains and skill, using the best materials, can make them.

Those who have ever given Pullman tires a trial stick to them ever afterward. This, in our opinion, is the very best endorsement they could possibly have. Made in all sizes and sold to you at prices that are attractive enough to ask for.

GRIFFIN BUTCHERS CLAIM PURE PENS

Asserted That Allegations of Insanitary Conditions Made by H. C. Hutchens Are Greatly Exaggerated.

Griffin, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—The report made by Assistant State Veterinarian H. C. Hutchens concerning the slaughter pens at this place is greatly resented by the meat dealers of Griffin. Each dealer has been interviewed, and with one accord they all say an injustice has been done them, and that the report is a great exaggeration of the true state of affairs.

T. E. Powell, one of the leading dealers, says his slaughter pen is located outside the city in a good situation, and that it is cleaned out thoroughly at least once a week. Captain J. A. Cator, who conducts another slaughtering pen a little further from the city, says conditions are not so bad at his place as Dr. Hutchens says. He says, furthermore, that a family of six persons living within 75 yards of his slaughter pen have never made any complaint of foul odors, and that during the eight years this large family has lived so near the pen there has been no case of sickness.

D. S. Johnson states that Dr. Hutchens visited his place and was so well pleased with it that he complimented him on its appearance and stated that he wanted a photograph of it to use in a book he would print. All the butchers admit that they cannot keep their places like the large city concerns, where machinery, steam and electric power and hot water are at command; but declare that their meat is handled in as cleanly a manner as is possibly done without city conveniences.

To show their confidence in the cleanliness of their slaughter pens, the meat dealers of Griffin, Messrs. Johnson, Oxford and Powell, will have in tomorrow's local daily papers quarter- and half-page advertisements stating the misapprehension of Dr. Hutchens' report to their places.

D. S. Johnson goes so far as to say that he will give $100 in a charitable institution if the report applies to his place. J. E. Powell says in his advertisement that on last Tuesday the state inspector told his slaughter pen manager that his place was all right. Indignation over the matter is growing more intense.

NEW PAVEMENT URGED FOR SOUTH PRYOR ST.

Mass Meeting in Interest of Re-paving Will Be Held on Next Thursday.

A big 10-foot sign stretched at the corner of Georgia avenue and Pryor street, in red letters, reads:

"Repave South Pryor Street or Bust! You are invited to attend a mass meeting on next Thursday night, at the Pryor street school building, to help us. South Side Improvement Club."

The sign and the call for the big mass meeting was the outcome of a largely attended meeting of citizens Friday night at the home of R. B. Deavors, 488 South Pryor street.

For many months meetings have been held from time to time, and the question of a new pavement for this thoroughfare has been agitated; but so far without any definite promises or results.

"We've simply reached the limit," said Chairman J. H. Bradford Friday night. "Here's South Pryor street, the most important thoroughfare on the whole south side, the only street that is the logical outlet for our section, the only street which parallels the Lakewood property, and yet it is so bad and rough, and the old Belgian blocks are so worn and sunken, that all kinds of vehicles give us the dodge—and I don't blame them. This street ought to be one of the main, smooth thoroughfares of the city—and we are going to make it that, too, or know the reason why."

The following committee was appointed from among those present Friday night, and directed to "get busy": J. H. Bradford, Joseph Franklin, J. L. Merrill, A. M. Moore, A. Abelson, C. L. Deavers, Lee F. Dreyfus, H. Weinberg, C. D. Knight, C. L. Dean, R. E. Deavors, C. H. Kelley, Press Hadden, J. L. McCord, J. J. L. Pool, H. Cronheim, Henry Alexander, G. D. Kitchens, Sol Cronheim and John W. Alexander.

All south side citizens are invited to the big mass meeting at the Pryor street school building next Thursday night, and it is hoped that enough pressure can be brought to bear on the county commissioners to have them put a new pavement on this street while their paving plant is located in that section at work on Georgia avenue.

THRESHING GRAIN CROP AT STATE SANITARIUM

Milledgeville, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—The farming force of the state sanitarium is now engaged in threshing the large crop of grain produced at the institution this season under the direction of G. W. Hollinshead, farm steward. The acreage planted was a large one, and the yield generous. Altogether the authorities expect to thresh out several thousand bushels. The force is now engaged in plowing in peas on the land upon which the oat crop was grown, and the thorough, systematic manner in which this is being done guarantees a splendid crop of peas as well.

PRICE WILL NOT NAME ASSISTANT UNTIL JULY

Athens, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—Commissioner-elect Jim Price, of the agricultural department of the state, was in Athens today and stated in reference to the generally expected report that he might appoint Dan G. Hughes, son of Congressman Dudley Hughes, as assistant commissioner, that he had not made an appointment nor promised an appointment to anybody or for anybody.

He stated further that the assistant's place is taking on the appearance of a hoodoo, as there are now just thirteen candidates for the position. He declares that he will give every applicant a fair and square consideration, but will not make an announcement till he is sworn into office on the first of July.

DILLON IS OVERCOME BY WASHINGTON HEAT

NEGRO CHAUFFEUR WHO KILLED GIRL HELD BLAMELESS.

Savannah, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—At a police court hearing today Frank Rivers, the negro chauffeur who ran over and killed Miss Mary Moore on Thursday, was held blameless by Recorder Schwarz.

The occupants of the car, Miss Ruth Ely and her visiting guests, Miss Katherine Crampton, of Mobile; Miss Virginia Wright, of New York; Miss Mary Bellamy, of Wilmington, N. C., and Miss Perkins, of Savannah, appeared in court to testify for the negro, who was driving them.

It was not established to the satisfaction of the recorder that Rivers was exceeding the speed limit. One witness declared he was going twenty-five miles an hour on the narrow street, but the young society woman was all certain he was going at a slow rate. Rivers claimed he was driving twelve miles an hour.

It was shown that Miss Moore became frightened and backed into the car. The negro then lost his head and ran over the prostrate form two or three times. There may be a further investigation of the tragedy by the grand jury. Miss Moore's remains were taken to her home in Alabama today for interment.

NEARLY 200 NEW LAWS FOR MISSOURI PEOPLE

Kansas City, June 21.—Nearly 200 laws passed by the last legislature will become effective in Missouri on Monday. Probably the one of greatest interest in the Or. anti-trust law regulating fire insurance companies. It is this bill that caused more than 150 insurance companies to suspend writing business throughout the state. It is expected that lawyers next week will attack the Or. bill in the supreme court in an effort to have it declared unconstitutional.

VICE UNDER CONTROL, SAYS CHIEF BEAVERS

Quotes Statistics to Show That Closing of Tenderloin Has Benefited Atlanta.

Comparing statistics of the present with those of four years ago, when the first crusade was launched against the restricted zone, Chief James L. Beavers declared yesterday that vice conditions in Atlanta are now better than ever before in the city's history.

He said there had been no noticeable spread of questionable resorts into residential sections and that the fear of this evil was spread by a coterie of calamity howlers who were affected by the closing of the tenderloin. Figures show, he says, that this reform methods have been highly successful.

During the first six months of 1909, when the grand jury and police commission ordered the vice resorts to remove from Collins street, there came fifty-seven complaints to police headquarters from citizens who signed petitions requesting the removal of questionable houses from residential districts.

The city, at that time, he said, was flooded with resorts of all character. Complaints came to police station in a steady stream and it was found all most necessary to segregate the disorderly houses in the recently dismantled Manhattan avenue section. The chief showed, however, that during the ten months that have elapsed since his campaign against vice there have been only forty-one complaints against resorts in any section of the city, and that they came intermittently—sometimes as few as only three a month. The women and girls who ply their trade on the streets, he declared, have decreased wonderfully. The chief expressed the belief that the situation is under control and that the police are capable of suppressing vice as effectively as the department wields its power in the city.

NEARLY SUFFOCATED HIDING IN CLOSET FROM DETECTIVES

Savannah, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—In an effort to escape a detective, Morris Kramer, a young Austrian, was nearly suffocated in a closet in a West Broad street store today. Kramer is wanted in New York for the abandonment of his wife and several children. He has been in Savannah several weeks as a clerk in a clothing store, and according to police was planning to marry a Savannah woman. This is denied by Kramer.

When the abandonment warrant arrived from New York and a detective went to serve it, Kramer locked himself in a closet of the store. He was prostrated when pulled out by the officer. He is held for the New York authorities.

Y. M. C. A. CAMPAIGN FOR NEGROES NEAR END

The teams that set out on the first of the month to raise a sum of money for the new Y. M. C. A. building for negroes, have only one more week in which to get the contributors. This campaign, known as the "Dollar a Man for the Y. M. C. A." campaign, will come to a close June 29. The captains of the various teams have been meeting twice a week during the present month, discussing plans, reporting the money collected and making final preparations for the wind-up.

Among the subscribers that have paid in full during the past week are M. J. Lee, $25; Felix Lytes, $25; T. K. Gibson, $20; W. G. Cleveland, $25; Professor B. G. Brawley, $10; R. L. Morrison, $5; J. B. Sullivan, $5; Isaiah Grandberry, $5; William Burton, $5; and F. L. Brown, $5. Quite a number have paid a part of their pledges, and this list grows from day to day.

"SACRED HARP" SONGS FOR VETERANS TODAY

If you love old-fashioned music, sung in the olden way, then hear the sacred harp singers, under E. L. Stanley, of this city, sing at the Soldiers' home at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Besides a number of classical and sacred airs which the singers will render, the "old boys" themselves will sing ante-bellum songs in their own fashion.

One hundred and fifteen strong, they plan to make the rafters of their assembly room ring with the notes of "Annie Laurie," "Old Black Joe," "The Bonnie Blue Flag" and other airs.

The public has been cordially invited, and a warm reception is promised all visitors.

GUARANTEE TRUST OFFICERS ATTACKED

Samuel E. Smith, W. A. Sims and Henry S. Miles Are Accused of Fraud.

In an amended bill filed yesterday morning by the stock and bond holders of the Guarantee Trust & Banking Co., Samuel E. Smith, W. A. Sims and Henry S. Miles, all of whom are officers of the concern, were named personally and were accused of attempting to divert the company's funds to their private uses.

The company was ordered placed in the hands of Receiver J. D. Robinson by Judge J. T. Pendleton during the past week and then the judge granted a 20-day supersedeas in order that the defendant company might appeal to the supreme court. At present the affairs are in statu quo until the action of the higher court.

The bill submitted before the court Saturday accuses the officers of fraud, years after the transfer, and thus had nothing to do with the latter.

Napier, Wright and Wood, attorneys for the defendants, issued the following statement Saturday afternoon:

"In the matter of the suit of Delaney and others against the Guarantee Trust & Banking company, there seems to be an impression on the part of some of the public that a receiver is in charge of the affairs of the company. Such impression is erroneous. Judge Pendleton appointed a receiver as has been stated in the last day or two, but at the same time superseded the order making such appointment in order that the matter might be passed on by a higher court.

"The affairs of the company are still in its hands under certain limitations imposed by Judge Pendleton's order, and the case is in course of preparation for being taken to the supreme court."

BARACCA-PHILATHEA MEETS IN NASHVILLE

Nashville, Tenn., June 21.—The seventeenth annual convention of the World Wide Baracca-Philathea Union was opened here tonight at the state capitol. Twelve hundred young people, representing many states, Canada and Mexico are in attendance.

Mason, Ga., and Waco, Texas, are seeking the 1924 meeting and especially large delegations are here from these places.

The visitors were welcomed by representatives of the churches and civic organizations, the state and local Baracca and Philathea unions in the hall that has heard the messages of all Tennessee's governors since Andrew Johnson. Responses were made by President Marshall A. Hudson, Syracuse, N. Y., and others.

The convention continues through Wednesday with pleasure trips to the Hermitage and Mammoth Cave for diversions.

The Baracca-Philathea movement embraces 500,000 Baraccas (youths) and 300,000 Philatheas (girls) enrolled in 5,000 Sunday school classes. The junior work will be especially emphasized here.

STRIKE AT BIRMINGHAM NOT VERY EFFECTIVE

Birmingham, Ala., June 21.—The strike order issued by the local association of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employees zoning into effect last night, has not been very effective as yet, normal service being given during this morning on every line of the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power company. With the exception of half a dozen motor cars, a few trailers and an express car or two the usual service was reported officially at 9 o'clock this morning.

A large majority of the men on strike are men who were discharged during the last three weeks for manifesting interest in the union. At union headquarters it was announced that many employees of the street railway company were joining the ranks.

William F. Welch, of Wheeling, W. Va., vice president and organizer of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employees is in charge of the strike of car men here. The strike was ordered for the alleged reason that the company rejected demands of the local union to the effect that the union be recognized, discharged men be reinstated and all questions in the future be arbitrated.

SEWANEE WAS BLOCKED BY CARNEGIE'S GIFT

Nashville, Tenn., June 21.—News that the Carnegie gift to Vanderbilt university's medical department, vetoed yesterday by the College of Methodist Bishops, operated to prevent the establishment of a medical college here by the University of the South, as had been planned, has reached here from Sewanee in the form of resolutions adopted by the board of regents, declaring that the Carnegie gift gave the Vanderbilt school supreme control of medical education in Nashville, and made it impossible for the Sewanee institution to conduct such a school here as contemplated. The board of regents declines connection with adverse criticisms of the Vanderbilt board of trust in connection with Carnegie's gift.

Diamonds Anywhere by Express Forwarding and Return Charges Paid

We have arranged to show our diamonds to our customers wherever they may be.

Our mail order department is most complete and our customers at a distance (and we make sales hundreds of miles away) receive every advantage that they might in the secluded privacy of our diamond room.

Write us as nearly as you can what is desired, suggest a range of price, and we will at once give our best effort to selection, mount the diamonds and express you a package for your examination either through your bank or express office.

If you have had no business with us and would prefer to select in the privacy of your home, make yourself known to us through reference to several business men or your banker, and we will send the diamonds directly to you.

When you have made your selection you can pay all cash at our fixed plain-figure prices, or take advantage of our deferred payment plan, wherein you can pay one-fifth down and divide balance into notes bearing 4 1/2 per cent average interest and distributed over as much as ten months.

References are not only a business caution, but a business courtesy, and we do not have to add a profit to cover bad accounts; and your references, if used at all, are used only through commercial agencies, and no one is ever aware that you even contemplate a purchase.

For obvious reasons every sale is a matter of confidence, and our customer's business is sacredly received.

We prepay express charges not to create an obligation, but appreciating the privilege of showing our diamonds and because our selection packages result in sales, and the express charges will be less than the time we might otherwise consume in showing goods.

Our Diamond Books, Set No. 7, fully sets forth our plan, cash return guarantee and exchange values. We would like to send it to you.

YOUNG PEOPLE ENLIST IN VACATION SCHOOLS

Interdenominational Movement Opens Second Year on June 30 With Eight Schools.

With eight daily vacation schools scattered over Atlanta, in which over 3,000 children will be engaged in manual training, athletic, music and Bible study, the second year of this interdenominational movement will open on Monday, June 30.

Beginning with four schools last year, the work has been doubled to eight schools, five of them being for white children and three for negroes. It is in charge of a committee of ministers from different denominations, composed of Drs. John E. White, W. C. Schaeffer, C. E. Wilmer, Dubbar H. Ogden, W. P. Lovejoy, L. O. Bricker, Richard O. Plinn and C. O. Jones. The work is under the direct supervision of Rev. G. R. Buford, superintendent of the vacation schools.

A number of young people of Atlanta with college training have been secured to assist in teaching in the schools, the facilities as announced for the five white schools being as follows:

Second Baptist: G. R. Buford, leader; Miss Florence Smith, Miss Beulah Kendrick, Miss Belle Cooper, Miss Eva Bridwell and Miss Fannie Henley.

Episcopal: Miss Margaret E. Gorman, leader; Miss Georgia Crand, Miss Julia Hendon, Miss Margara Waldron, Miss Maggie Bivins.

Fulton Mills (Wesley House): Miss Mary Moore, leader; Miss Lillian Johnson, Miss Gladys Sande, Miss Marion Moore, Miss Mary Burruss.

Home of the Friendless: Miss Little, leader; Miss Frances Smith, Miss Annie Lynn, Miss Guasie Fraiser and Mrs. S. H. Blair.

Episcopal Mission: Robert Woodson, leader; Mrs. Woodson, Miss Wilkinson, Miss Grace Coffin.

The three colored schools are located at the West Side Oliver church, St. Luke's Parish, Springwood and the Fraser Street mission. The daily program to be followed in all the schools is as follows:

9:30-9:40—Opening exercises; hymn; prayer; scripture reading; hymn.
9:40-10:30—Music; catechisms; Bible lesson.
10:30-11:30—Manual section: Basketry; sewing; hammock making; closing exercises; salute to the flag; child's benediction.

PRESIDENT POINCARE TO VISIT ENGLAND

Paris, June 21.—President Poincare will leave Cherbourg for England on Tuesday on his way to London to visit King George. The president will travel on the battleship Courbet, escorted by three cruisers. M. Poincare and the members of his suite each go prepared for many state occasions—that is to say they carry a liberal supply of black and pink silk stockings.

Now, doubtless, many Americans will say: "Pink silk stockings! Surely the French president is no longer to appear in masculine garb." No, he is just going to court—the English court.

As is customary on the occasion of such visits, the British embassy provided with a list of the St. James' palace regulations. And these specified double silk stockings. It seems that English calves are rather too florid for the thin black silk and thoughtful Queen Mary decries that her courtiers shall all don plain, simple, beauteous black silk ones. The first thing Ambassador Page was probably told by his intelligent secretary was, no doubt, "be sure and don't forget your pink silk stockings."

"They are a curious people, the English," says M. Henri, the president's valet. "Ah, it must be that ros-biff! Possibly—or the unlively English climate."

UNIFORM GRADING FOR COTTON SEED OIL

Chicago, June 21.—A uniform system of grading cotton seed oil is being sought by the government bureau of standards, according to J. G. Priest, of the bureau, who addressed the convention of the Society of Cotton Products Analysts here today.

At present cotton seed oil is graded according to its color by matching it with pieces of yellow glass. This method is regarded as unsatisfactory because the coloring of the glass varies.

About seventy-five members of the society from all parts of the south attended the meeting.

SOUTH AMERICA BUYS FROM UNITED STATES

Washington, June 21.—South America has been increasing its machinery purchases from the United States more rapidly during the last few years than any other part of the world, as shown by figures prepared by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. This increase has amounted during the last decade to 440 per cent, whereas the entire world growth of machinery exports has been only 172 per cent. The machinery shipped from America in 1902 amounted to only $5,000,000. Last year it had jumped to $27,000,000.

STUDENTS IN INDIA ARRESTED FOR PLOT

London, June 21.—Charged with complicity in a plot aimed at King George, thirty leading Babu students are on trial at Barisal, India, and the case is attracting widespread attention throughout the British empire. The situation in and around Bengal seems to be growing desperate.

It is alleged that an association of Babu students is seeking to foment another Seoy mutiny, and that as a part of these rebellious plans an attempt was to be made upon the life of the king. If the men now on trial are found guilty, the Indian government proposes to make their punishment such as to strike terror into the hearts of other conspirators. Some go so far as to say that the penalty of blowing from the mouth of the cannon should be revived as the only way of teaching the Hindu to be loyal to England.

Petitions in Bankruptcy.

Chattanooga, Tenn., June 21.—Two petitions in involuntary bankruptcy were filed in the federal court in this city against the Dayton Coal and Iron company, of Dayton, Tenn. Three creditors are signers of the first petition, with claims aggregating over $4,000. There are four signers to the second, which involves only a small sum.

ATLANTA TROOPS REACH ST. SIMON'S
 Marshall Todd Falls Into Sea, But Is Rescued—Tents Are Pitched and Camp Life Inaugurated.

By Agie Grice, Private, Governor's Horse Guard.
 Brunswick Ga June 21—(Special) The special train bearing the Governor's Horse Guard the Cavalier Horse Guard Major J. O. Seamans and staff and a party of ladies from Atlanta, reached Brunswick at 4:30 Saturday morning. The transferring of the baggage was begun immediately and was all on board a lighter by 7 o'clock. The five troops composing the squadron arrived at St. Simons at 8 o'clock and boarded at St. Simons an hour later.

The squadron at once proceeded to the camp site. The lighter bearing the baggage was delayed and did not arrive until nearly noon but the troops were kept busy engaged in cleaning up the camp and getting ready for the erection of the tents upon arrival. The camp site is very pleasing indeed and every soldier seems very enthusiastic and all anticipate an enjoyable week.

All Saturday afternoon the men were busy engaged in making camp and no one had the privilege of bathing Sunday however the men will be at complete liberty.

Private Marshall Todd of Atlanta who is a member of the hospital corps was the first to suffer a misfortune. He was helping to load supplies when he fell into the sea but was immediately rescued. No ill effects resulted other than a thorough drenching.

The entire Tenth Battalion under command of Major Hunt reached St. Simons at 11 o'clock Saturday and immediately went into camp. The band of the First Georgia Infantry arrived shortly before 11 o'clock. The battery of artillery took position late in the afternoon and the camp is nearly established. The camp life was inaugurated Saturday evening and the 1913 encampment was on.

SERGEANT IS PROMOTED TO GOVERNOR'S STAFF

It was a great compliment which Governor Brown put in William Henry Smith of St. Simons. Smith, of the Georgia National Guard, was promoted to sergeant in the 10th Battalion of the Georgia National Guard. Smith has served in the Georgia National Guard for four years in the ranks as a private and with various commissions. GOVERNOR FINDS MERIT IN AUGUSTA BOY'S CASE

As is well known by all is the Governor Brown is not making a business of handing out pardons to convicts in these closing days of his administration but there was one case put up to him yesterday which he decided did merit clemency and he signed a commutation of sentence.

W. J. Collier, a white boy, was convicted in Augusta in 1912 on a charge of burglary and sentenced to a term of one year and a year in the penitentiary on each count. Shortly after he entered the Georgia State Penitentiary he was badly beaten by one of the guards and took the first opportunity after that to make his escape. Some time ago however he returned and gave himself up. He has now served about fifteen months of his two year term.

It appeared to the Governor that a parole could be the best form that executive clemency could take and it was this case that caused him to inquire of the attorney general whether paroles were allowable to felony convicts who had received misdemeanor sentences. The attorney general gave a negative answer and Governor Brown finding that the boy had made a good record working while an escaped convict determined to give him another chance and commuted the sentence to present service.

POISONED BY CHALK, YOUNG SCHOOL GIRL IS AT DEATH'S DOOR

A victim of an ailment which has baffled medical skill 7 year old Mary Tribble daughter of Policeman W. C. Tribble lies at death's door in her home on Porter street as the result of poisoning by chalk bits of which the child had eaten during the last day of school when she worked at the blackboard in her class room.

For the past two weeks the girl has lain helpless and paralyzed unable to speak but a single word mama. Most of the time she is unconscious.

Her illness has extended from the moment she returned home from the last day of school. She staggered into the hallway and crumpled in a heap at the mother's feet.

A box of colored crayon one of which she had bitten was found on her desk in the first grade class room of the school which she attended. Pieces of the bitten crayon were "chipped off" and the imprints of teeth are plainly discernible.

Dr. F. E. Ochs of 224 South Boulevard one of the physicians administering to the stricken child says that although no definite analysis has been made he attributes her illness to probable poisoning from the crayon which she had bitten.

The change by which the Bell will run on Sundays as well as daily will become effective June 29.

In the announcement made Saturday by J. I. Meek assistant general passenger agent the schedule of the train is as follows: Westbound No. 1 leaves Toxoca at 5:40 a. m. W & A EARNS FIVE PER CENT ON $20,000,000

According to returns made to Comptroller General William A. Wright yesterday the net income of the Western and Atlantic railroad over and above the rental paid the state and operating expenses was $673,812.61.

Under the lease contract a monthly rental of $30,001 is paid to the state. Besides this the state receives one half of 1 per cent of the road's net income as tax. This year the income tax amounted to $2,848,774. A little less than last year. If to the yearly income of the road is added the yearly rental of $420,012 $993,826.61 will be the total net revenue which is approximately 5 per cent on a capital valuation of $20,000,000.

Melton Replies to Dr. Dickey's Charge of "Stupidity or Malice"

Editor Constitution The students of Emory college and a few other people, know that I am the local correspondent of The Constitution. When I first heard of Dr. Dickey's charge of either stupidity or malice I thought perhaps he was striking in the dark. Later I remembered having telephoned him during commencement for information for The Constitution.

What I did do was to phone The Constitution the result of the vote of the trustees on the subject of intercollegiate athletics. The reference to the attendance not the enrollment was supplied by someone familiar with the letter sent out some weeks before by the students committee. Extracts from that letter concerning the number of students in the college at the time were published in both The Constitution and The Journal, unchanged.

If I am stupid it probably grows out of the fact that I believe a limited amount of intercollegiate athletics would help Emory college. As for malice if I am acquainted with my own heart I haven't a bit of it not even toward those whose views differ from mine.

As for Emory college there is no greater school in southern Methodism. It is my deliberate opinion that no college in Georgia is doing better work. I am not alarmed over the attendance or the enrollment for with our present teaching force in some departments we have as many students as we can handle to the best advantage.

FOUR ANNIVERSARY BANQUETS IN WEEK, MINISTER'S RECORD

Four anniversaries in one week every one of them as high as the fiftieth year make the unique record of an Atlanta minister Rev. Dr. G. A. Beattie who returned to the city a few days ago from his trip to the north. Every one of the anniversaries was celebrated with an elaborate banquet or reception.

On June 9 at Union college Schenectady N. Y. the class of 63 of which Dr. Beattie was a member celebrated its fiftieth anniversary with a banquet. The next day his fraternity Delta Upsilon celebrated its seventy-fifth anniversary at a banquet gathering at which 100 men sat down to supper.

On one hundred and seventeenth anniversary of the founding of Union college was celebrated on the day following June 11 and here a banquet of 800 men took place. At the graduation exercises on this day Dr. Beattie was awarded the degree of doctor of divinity by his alma mater.

He then caught the first train for Muncie Ind. where the seventy-fifth anniversary was celebrated by the First Presbyterian church of which Dr. Beattie was pastor for seven years leaving the pastorate however thirty-four years ago. For four days from June 11 to 14 the celebration continued finishing up with a big reception on the night of the 14th with this unique record of good times. It was a smiling face indeed that Dr. Beattie presented on his return to Atlanta.

Atlantic Beach
 The New City By The Sea

The wave of real summer that has spread over the country during the past week, has brought lively longings for the seaside. It has crowded Atlantic Beach and its splendid hotel with visitors, who have been revelling in refreshing breezes straight off the ocean. And by actual readings, the temperature there has been from eight to twelve degrees lower than has been recorded by the United States Weather Bureau in any southern city from which reports are published.

This splendid development of home-building is progressing rapidly. Inquiries for information and prices are being received daily from southern, northern and eastern cities, and the interest in the great undertaking is increasing and spreading.

Even the quiet of summer has failed to lessen this interest. The sales of property have long passed the hundred thousand dollar mark. Water mains, sewers, sidewalks and electric wires are spreading over the property and many of the houses, begun in March and April, are occupied by satisfied owners.

It is a good place to see. It is a good place to live the year around or for the months of vacation time. Come or write us for full information.

Great preparations are being made for the midsummer holidays at the Atlantic Beach Hotel, and the Fourth will last a week there. A great many reservations have been made for that week already. Don't delay to make yours.

"STAY-AT-HOMES" FEAST OLD GUARD

Recent Trip to East and Reception in Northern Cities Described at Banquet on Saturday Evening.

Those members of the Old Guard Battalion of Atlanta who went on the recent patriotic journey to the large cities of the east to visit many of the most notable military commands on this continent, were highly delighted during the past week to receive invitations from the "Stay-at-Homes" of the Old Guard, to attend a reception to be given in the honor of those who went away, at the Cafe Durand last evening at 7 o'clock.

In addition to the guests of the command a number of prominent men were invited to the reception and supper. Among these were Governor Joseph M. Brown, Governor-elect John M. Slaton, Supreme Court Judge Joseph H. Lumpkin, a former member of the Old Gate City Guard, General R. K. Evans, U. S. A., commanding the Department of the Gulf, and his aide, Colonel C. H. Barth, Colonel J. T. Van Orsdale, commanding Seventeenth Regiment, General J. Van Holt Nash, adjutant general of Georgia; Colonel E. B. Pomeroy, commanding Fifth Infantry National Guard; Clark Howell, editor Constitution; J. R. Gray, editor Journal and Post; Coates, editor Georgian.

Banquet Is Enjoyed.
At 7 o'clock the members of the Old Guard and their guests sat down to a sumptuous spread at the Cafe Durand, and began an evening of rare jollification and pleasure.

Colonel George M. Napier, who was selected by the committee as toastmaster, presided.

Colonel F. J. Paxon, being called upon, delivered a delightful welcome to the assembled guests, and stated that the evening had been planned to show the hearty appreciation of those of the command who could not go on the recent tour for their comrades who had been able to go, and who had illustrated the reputation of Atlanta and of the south in making a visit to the Independent military organizations of the east.

A number of short speeches were made and all who did not go on the recent peaceful tour to the east enjoyed interesting bits of report of the hospitality and entertainment accorded the members of the command which represented the city of Atlanta on this tour.

Among those who spoke were Colonel J. F. Burke, commander of the Old Guard; J. R. Smith, one of Georgia's most famous business men and political managers, who, on the trip to Boston, won the sobriquet of "Reverend"; Colonel J. T. Van Orsdale, U. S. A., and Colonel Pomeroy, of the Fifth Regiment.

Practical For Hospitality.
In discussing the many delightful and long-to-be-remembered incidents of their recent trip, the members of the Old Guard went on to their happy journey were told in their presence on the sea the hospitality of the commands which entertained them, indeed, they fairly toasted their military friends of the east who rendered their tour such a complete success in point of entertainment and enjoyment.

Among the commands mentioned, whose officers and men entertained the company of the Old Guard and showered so many courtesies upon them, were the military of Washington, D. C., in the vicinity of the city; the Feniches of Philadelphia and their veterans, on the occasion of the centennial celebration of the organization of that command; the Seventh Regiment of New York; the Old Guard of New York; the New Haven Greys; the Foot Guard of Hartford, Conn.; the Putnam Phalanx, also of Hartford; the Boston Light Infantry; C. A. C., and their veterans; the E. W. G. of the Old Guard; the Ancient and Honorable Artillery of Boston, and the Georgia Hussars, of Savannah, which accorded unstinted hospitality to the members of the Old Guard on their arrival by ship from Boston on their return from the tour.

A letter of regret was read from Judge Joseph H. Lumpkin, at one time a lieutenant in the Gate City Guard, who "proposed" the health of the Old Guard, and who drank it in a glass of cold water—cold enough and pure enough to satisfy the Honorable W. J. Bryan.

Occasion a Happy One.
It was an informal evening, the members of the Old Guard appearing in fatigue uniform and without side arms, and the reception and spread were marked by entire unconventionality. Every one was made to feel at ease, and the whole evening was spent in the fullest enjoyment by all present.

All the guests, including the favored members of the Old Guard, voted the occasion a most happy one, and the idea of having the members of the command meet in good fellowship, in order to talk over the recent visit of the Old Guard to the military of the east, was praised by all as a fitting conclusion to the recent journey, which was so highly enjoyed.

COL. PAXON NOTIFIED OF STAFF APPOINTMENT.
Colonel F. J. Paxon, of Atlanta, received official notification yesterday from Governor-elect Slaton, that he had been selected to serve as chief of staff for the next two years. The reappointment of Colonel Paxon will give satisfaction to both his own and the governor's friends throughout the state.

Colonel Paxon has served as Governor Brown's chief of staff throughout his two terms of office. He is one of Atlanta's best-known merchants and business men and is a former president of the local chamber of commerce.

Collector of Internal Revenue Again Sends Resignation to the President.

Henry S. Jackson, collector of Internal Revenue for the state of Georgia since September, 1910, when he was confirmed by the United States senate following his nomination by President Taft, and who sent his resignation to the new administration March 28, has just advised the department for a second time that he is anxious to surrender his position June 30.

Before President Taft, from whom Mr. Jackson received his appointment, went out of office the collector sent to that administration his resignation and within a few days was advised that President Taft declined to accept it. Then within the month the administration changed Collector Jackson tendered his resignation, but hearing nothing from Washington, he duplicated the paper under date of June 6 urging its acceptance, as he was completing business arrangements for the future and that he contemplated a trip abroad.

"I have had no response from my last letter," said Collector Jackson yesterday, "and am anxious to turn my place over to President Wilson's appointee, whoever he may be. I have already booked passage for myself and family for a trip abroad and will prove decidedly inconvenient for me to remain in office after the end of the present fiscal year. My official work is now in excellent shape for a transfer at the end of the current year. On that date I can surrender a completed term. And I sincerely hope the powers that be will permit me to do so."

HOTEL ANSLEY

The Hotel Ansley, Atlanta's new $1,000,000 hotel, will open for business on Monday, June 30. The guests register will be open at 6 a. m., and the hotel will be open for public inspection and for public use at 6 p. m. The first meal will be served in the hotel from 6 to 10 p. m., being an opening Table d'Hote dinner at $3.50 per plate. The dinner will be served in the main cafe, Rathskeiler, and private dining rooms. Two orchestras will furnish music during the evening, and the management will distribute to the guests beautiful souvenirs of the occasion.

Those who have seen the Hotel Ansley pronounce it to be one of the most attractive and most modern hotels in America. It will compare very favorably with any hotel in Chicago, New York, or elsewhere.

The Hotel Ansley is very highly and tastefully decorated. The lobby contains several very beautiful paintings on tapestry, which were executed in this country and abroad. The scenes represent the most important epochs in the history of Georgia, and in the history of Atlanta.

Many beautiful scenes taken from Atlanta's parks are also reproduced on the walls of the lobby.

The writing room contains two magnificent paintings on tapestry of Atlanta before the war. The scenes represent the burning of Sherman, and a composite painting on tapestry of Atlanta after it was burned.

The main dining room is pronounced to be one of the most beautiful rooms in the United States. The architecture is purely Italian renaissance. In the upper panels of the dining room are the most beautiful paintings on tapestry of famous Italian scenes and castles.

The buffet and private dining rooms, and also the parlors, are all highly decorated.

The combination convention hall, ballroom and banquet hall on the eleventh floor is two and one-half stories high. It has been pronounced by those who have seen it to be a superb room, being symmetrical in its proportions and very pleasing to the eye.

The Rathskeiler, Beauty Parlor and Billiard Room and other public departments are situated in the basement of the building. The Rathskeiler is especially unique. The walls and ceilings are lined with three-color tapestry brick. On top of each column is an oval sitting between two steins, with their eyes blinking alternately. There are sixteen panels in this room. Each panel contains the coat-of-arms of well-known Georgia colleges.

All public parts of the Hotel Ansley are fitted with mechanical arrangements whereby the air is purified and cooled in summer and purified and warmed in winter, being forced through running water by powerful fans. An immense fan is situated on top of the building 180 feet high, which empties each room of its air every two minutes.

The Hotel Ansley is beautifully furnished in solid mahogany. All carpets, draperies, burlaps and papers are made in color, and the chairs and sofas for the main lobby and mezzanine floor, and also the dining room, are of the most luxurious character. Beautiful pictures adorn the walls, and every effort has been made to give the hotel a homelike and inviting appearance.

The Hotel Ansley is owned by the Ansley Hotel Investment Company, who will operate the hotel. E. Pound is President; M. A. Irwin, Secretary and Treasurer; J. F. Letton, Manager, and Charles G. Day, Assistant Manager. The management states that the Hotel Ansley will be conducted on the highest standard of service at a minimum charge.

On the second or mezzanine floor are located three well arranged committee rooms, which are for the exclusive use of the public and the management extends a cordial invitation to the public to use the same without charge.

All the machinery, consisting of boilers, pumps, motors, etc., used in the Hotel Ansley building to operate the plant are in duplicate, and the boilers in triplicate.

The Hotel Ansley has its own ice and refrigerating plant, with a capacity of 14 tons of ice every day.

The kitchen equipment is the very best and most modern that money can buy, and was selected by experts. Every bit of garbage collected in the kitchen is immediately put in tin cans and placed in the garbage refrigerator, where it is frozen into solid cakes of ice and hauled away at night. Among the special and up-to-date machines in the kitchen is a potato peeler, which will peel a bushel of potatoes in half a minute—very much better and with greater saving than a person could do in half a day. The machine accomplishes this by friction.

SPECIAL INVITATION TO GEORGIANS.

It is the aim of the management of the Hotel Ansley to make it the home of all Georgians visiting Atlanta, and to insure the enjoyment of the most delicious treatment. They are invited to have their mail addressed to the Hotel Ansley, even though they do not register at the hotel.

OPENING DINNER.

Reservations for the opening dinner should be made in advance. Dinner served from 6 to 10 p. m., at $2.50 per plate. Telephone Ivy 1100.

HOTEL ANSLEY TO BE CONDUCTED ON EUROPEAN PLAN.

The Hotel Ansley will be conducted on the European plan, but breakfasts will be served in the morning from 25 cents up; noonday lunch 50 cents, and Table d'Hote Dinner for $1.50 from 6 to 3 p. m. The Hotel Ansley will make a specialty of, and has better facilities for serving banquets, dinners, teas, etc., than any other hotel in Atlanta. MAJOR GRASTY DIES SUDDENLY Prominent Confederate Veteran Entered the Civil War With His Classmates of Virginia Military Institute.

Major William C. Grasty, a distinguished confederate veteran died suddenly at his residence, 59 East Ellis street, Saturday evening. He was a native of Danville, Va., and was a member of the V. M. I. cadet corps at the battle of New Market in Shenandoah Valley.

When the war between the states broke out he was a student at the Virginia Military Institute, and with his classmates, he enlisted in Lee's army, when but a boy.

Though an unassuming, quiet man, he always took pride in the personnel of that cadet regiment, which turned out several men who achieved considerable distinction in later years. He fought side by side with Governor John S. Wise, of Virginia, who was a classmate at the V. M. I.

Classmate of Sculptor.
Another member of his cadet corps was E. Ezekiel, the famous sculptor who has made many notable statues, including the marble statue of Lee, which is now in Richmond, and a statue of the V. M. I. cadets which adorns the school campus in Lexington.

After seeing valiant service throughout the entire war, he was present at the surrender of Appomattox. He had earned the commission of a captain, but to his many friends in Atlanta he is more familiarly known as major.

Popular With Veterans.
He was one of the most popular of the war veterans, a member of the Capital City Club, and many other prominent organizations.

Though without surviving relatives in Atlanta, he is survived by brothers, N. G. Grasty, of The Baltimore Sun, and president of the Associated Charities of that place, and Fred Grasty, of Baltimore. The body will be held at the funeral parlors of Greenberg & Bond company, pending the arrival of one of his brothers from Baltimore.

Major Grasty, who never married, has for years roomed in the house of Mrs. Mary C. Scott, a kinsman of a confederate friend.

He was the president of the Virginia Military Institute alumni in Atlanta, and one of its organizers, and he was also prominent in the organization of the Virginia society.

DIES SUDDENLY

WILSON LOST HIS WAY ON TRIP TO WEDDING

President and Party Piloted to Baltimore Through Mud and Water.

Baltimore, June 21.—President Wilson and members of his family arrived at Brookland Wood, country home of Captain Isaac E. Emerson, at 4:15 this afternoon for the wedding of Frank H. McAdoo, son of the secretary of the treasury, and Ethel Preston McCormick.

The marriage took place indoors, the plans to have an outdoor ceremony having to be abandoned because of an electrical storm.

Wilson Lost Way.
Washington, D. C., June 21.—President Wilson and his party returned to the white house at 8:45 o'clock to-night after a difficult motor ride through muddy roads and a downpour of rain.

The president and his party lost their way a few miles north of Baltimore. "I'll tow you in," volunteered Frank Primrose, of Catonsville, who was motoring along with his family. He warned the chauffeur not to attempt the route they had chosen, as the hills were muddy and dangerous. Primrose did not know that he was piloting the president of the United States, but discovered it later. As he sped the American coat-of-arms on the president's car.

"I helped former Governor Warfield get to town only yesterday," said Primrose proudly, as he got the president's party on the right road and directed them to Baltimore.

The three big machines carrying the president, his family and secret service men plowed through water and mud at a good clip. Once, however, the rain was so heavy the party stopped under a covered bridge. The 120-mile ride was the longest the president had taken in an automobile since he came to Washington.

Some of the members of the cabinet came back by motor, but most of them returned on a special train.

COYLE IS ACQUITTED IN GIN "TRUST" CASE

Guthrie, Okla., June 21.—W. H. Coyle, millionaire cotton man; F. E. Houghton and Jacob Douglas, of Guthrie, and R. C. Yone, of Oklahoma City, were found not guilty by a jury in the state court here tonight on an indictment charging them with violation of the Oklahoma anti-trust law by forming a pool to raise the price of cotton.

The defendants, who are prominent figures in the cotton industry of the state, were charged with seeking to control the cotton ginning situation through an organization known as the Yone State Trust. The case has been on trial for several days and went to the jury today.

A number of other Oklahoma men interested in the cotton ginning industry have been indicted on similar charges.

The prosecution concedes the outcome in the Coyle case will govern in the other indictments.

ADOLPHUS BUSCH III. WEDS DIVORCED WOMAN

St. Louis, Mo., June 21.—Adolphus Busch III, grandson of Adolphus Busch, the millionaire brewer, and Mrs. Florence Parker Lambert, a divorcee, were married tonight at the summer home of the bridegroom's father, Augustus Busch, Stafford Parker, of Richmond, Va., a brother of the bride, and a sister.

In application for the marriage license the bride's age was given as 21. Busch is 23. Mrs. Adolph Busch III was divorced from Marion L. J. Lambert and has three children.

CHILD'S DEATH RECALLS FATHER'S TRAGIC END

Besse Morris, the 4-year-old daughter of Mrs. Aaron Morris, for whom The Constitution raised between $3,000 and $4,000 following the stabbing of her husband over one year ago, died of diphtheria Saturday night, and the body was removed to the funeral parlors of Greenberg & Bond company. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

The death of the daughter recalls the tragic death with her father met on year ago, when aroused by the screams of a woman, he remonstrated with the negro who had grabbed her and was then stabbed to death.

Bull and Washburn Win.

New York, June 21.—Charles M. Bull, Jr., and W. M. Washburn won the Metropolitan lawn tennis championship in doubles here today at the West Side Tennis club. In the final round they defeated R. D. Little and W. M. Hall, 7-9, 6-2, 6-4, 6-2. The result was an upset, as Little is a national champion and member of the Davis cup team, while Hall has been rated at No. 10 on the national list for the country.

Travis Is Winner.

Wilmington, Del., June 21.—Walter J. Travis, of Garden City, defeated B. Warren Cockran, of Wilmington, 6-1 and 1-6 to win the final round of the annual golf tournament at Wilmington.

The Marriage Fee.

The marriage fee has been announced as graft, not by smarting under the necessity of paying it, but by one accustomed to receiving it. The Rev. A. Pennewell, rector of the Euclid Avenue Episcopal church of Oak Park III, has decided not to take any more fees for such service, holding that since the church insists that marriage is a church rite it should make it free to all. The minister who does not need a fee, he thinks, should be ashamed to take it, while if he really needs help it is the turn of the church to be ashamed and promptly to raise his salary. But he is altogether just in his fellow clergymen, when he says they stand at wedding with an open hand behind them? There is no compulsion in the matter of wedding fees. If a high, fixed price were established which discouraged marriage and encouraged immortality, it would be another question altogether. Such is not the case. Everyone pays what he wishes, and sometimes nothing at all. It may well be asked, Are clergymen competent to pass upon a matter of this sort? As every one knows marriage fees in many churches go to the minister's wife. Has the dominie a right to give up what doesn't belong to him? Provided he is a single man, the Rev. Mr. Pennewell is quite competent to say that he will no longer take wedding fees, but let him not encroach upon the time-honored privilege of the mistress of the manse.

LIBRARIANS GATHER FOR BIG CONVENTION

HENRY E. LEGLER

DR. HERBERT PUTNAM

HOTEL KAATERSKILL

When 1,200 members of the American Librarian association meet at the Hotel Kaaterskill, in New York state, on June 23 for their thirty-fifth annual convention, William Sulzer, governor of New York state, will be one of the principal speakers. He will discuss the relation of the public libraries to the Wisconsin legislature for one term and is the author of a history of Wisconsin. Dr. Herbert Putnam, the librarian of the library of congress at Washington since 1899, will attend the convention and discuss the future of the library system with the other delegates. Dr. Putnam has had a long experience in library work. He was formerly at the Minneapolis public library, from which post he advanced to the position he now holds. Under his administration the library of congress has taken its place as the national library of the country in a fuller sense than that institution previously had. Dr. Putnam has been twice the president of the association and is prominent in its councils. Other prominent delegates who will attend are Edward F. Stevens, director and librarian of the Pratt institute, free library of Brooklyn; Arthur E. Eastwick, librarian of the St. Louis public library; Miss Mary Frances Leom, librarian of the Oregon Library association, and Matthew S. Dudgeon, secretary of the Wisconsin Library association.

the most important factor of the gown. It is made to accent all good points and to conceal all the ones. The task of the woman who does her own sewing, to choose a model suited to her style.
At the present moment Bulgarian and Futurist trimmings are thought to produce just the right touch of piquancy and picturesqueness, but whatever country, from Japan to Turkey, serves as tone inspiration, women should use it with a judicious eye. Keep his eye peeled on himself, and his "think-tank" pretty clear.
"I hear your court sat very late last night."
"Yes," he said, "we have a good many cases last night."
"How many sessions do you hold a week?"
"One usually, and sometimes two."
"How much are you paid for service on the bench?"
"Fifty cents from the city every night we serve."
"Who decides the number of nights you shall sit?"
"We do the judges."
"If you wanted to, could you hold a session every evening?"
"I think probably we could," he answered.
"Then why don't you hold more sessions instead of continuing them so late?"
"Because," he said, "we don't want to hear it look as if we was grantin' to the city."

MODERN PSYCHOLOGY APPLIED TO CLOTHES

New York, June 14.—Carlyle made familiar to us the philosophy of clothes, proving beyond the possibility of effective contradiction that man's garb is a sure in dex of his life, but the psychology of clothes is quite another question. That is a modern discovery which is slowly and surely gaining the attention of the lay mind. Perhaps the majority of us are too busy in our endeavor to get clothes of any quality, color or construction to waste our much-needed energy on solving the question of whether this or that color scheme harmonizes with our temperament or, when adopted by us, typifies the best and peculiarity of our personality. The woman who dresses well makes us conscious of her beauty, charm, softness and grace, and the nearer she approaches perfection in the art the more does she give us a happy impression of harmony and loveliness, unmarred by an obtrusion of detail. This is dress technique at its highest. To accomplish this woman must know herself. Her clothes must be the crown and culmination of her personality.

The frock seen in the first figure not only conforms to the dictates of fashion, but it may impersonate also the indolyness of the wearer. If the hair be brown, the complexion clear and the eyes brown or blue, shades either blue or brown will develop it advantageously. As represented the dress was made of checked brown-and-tan silk. Collar, cuffs and girdle of Bulgarian silk effectively brighten the costume. The "russ and feathers" employed may also tell a tale of personality. Usually women of most discriminating taste prefer little elaboration; with them line is

A recent novelty is a petticoat, all of net, under, with crease waist to make a crease in the skirt. Every particle of superfluous stuff, every garment worn with the present-day costumes, must be carefully cut away. It is only in the frock for practical wear that woman can afford to be extravagant in underwear. For wear with a costume such as that of the second illustration, the cut of the petticoat must be carefully considered, but the material and finish may be less fragile and dainty. The charming skirt waist in this figure was developed in white voile. Low collar and yoke proclaim the prevailing mode. A grade of silk is in pleasing harmony with the green stripe of the skirt. The skirt was developed in green and tan summer silk, with a few folds of drapery at the feet.

The moral and business standards of the Japanese are difficult for the white man to comprehend. It is a common observation that the Chinese man's virtues are business virtues, whereas the chief faults of the Japanese are business faults. Therefore the American business man, understanding no standards but business standards, judges the Chinese by his virtues and the Japanese by his faults.

American and Chinese civilizations are built on contrary Japanese civilization is built on personal honor and loyalty. So when the American business man sees the Chinese keeping his contract, he discovers in him the virtue of the Chinese. But when a Japanese finds himself in a contract which changed conditions have now made burdensome, he wonders uncomprehendingly at the American business man's desire to impose on him terms which are now unjust and the honorable gentleman understands only that the Japanese wants to sneak out of an honest bargain. The moral standard of the Japanese is incomprehensible. The Japanese who may evade a business obligation but who will sacrifice his life to a punctilio of honor or patriotism—he is a mystery. But the Chinese who will rob his government or perjure the member of a rival tong to the gallows, but whose business standard—World's Work.

MARRY AT POLICE STATION EARLY ON SUNDAY MORNING

Call officers at police station are accustomed to thrills, but there was a new one in store for them this morning at 2:30 o'clock when they were called upon to act as witnesses at the wedding of Miss A. C. Whaley and Mr. Edward Ewart, both of 355 Whitehall street.
The young couple were scheduled to get married on Saturday afternoon, and had secured a marriage license, but had been unable to find a minister.

So they appealed to Plain Clothes Officers Lloyd and Kilpatrick, and the officers sent them to police station and gave their ready assistance to Dan Whaley.
The owner of an automobile who was at the station was impressed into service and sent after Justice of the Peace Girardeau, and at 2:30 o'clock this morning, with newspaper reporters and a throng of witnesses, and with the police station fire alarm and patrol bells ringing loudly, the ceremony was performed.

BRYAN BACKING WILSON ON CURRENCY MEASURE

Secretary Announces That He Will Work for the Glass Bill.

Washington, June 21.—Secretary Bryan tonight announced that he was strongly in favor of the Glass currency bill, and let it be known that he would use what influence he could in bringing about its early enactment by congress.

Mr. Bryan had intended issuing a statement tonight, giving his view on the measure in full and giving his reason for supporting. The statement, however, will not be issued until tomorrow, his decision to withhold it being the result of a conference with President Wilson and members of the cabinet. Secretary Bryan, it is understood, has given the subject of currency reform the closest attention, and has come to the conclusion that the measure of reform measures is urgent.

For many weeks rumor has been in circulation that Mr. Bryan was not in entire accord with those in charge of the currency reform plans, and that he might use his influence to prevent present action upon the legislation.

President Wilson has taken a firm stand behind the Glass currency bill and has told democratic members of the house banking and currency committee that, as under the constitution he had the right to recommend specific legislation to congress, he feels justified in recommending the measure now before them.

It was said at the white house today that he would not compromise on the essential features of the measure, particularly those which concern control of the currency in New York city and control of the money market. The fight over retirement of $700,000,000 two per cent bonds promises to be a spirited one.

Real Boy Judges.

The boys' court of Boston, managed and presided over by boys, is a legal part of the modern government and its decisions are of as much binding force as those of any other court.

It tries the cases against boys—especially newsboys—for the infraction of city ordinances, such as those against jumping on moving cars and against gumming. It has greatly reduced the police problem, and it has raised the ideals of the boys, as appears from the following conversation with a boy judge of the court.

How do you like your job?
A serious expression came into his face as he replied. In a way I like it, but a fellow has got to keep his eye peeled on himself, and his "think-tank" pretty clear.

"I hear your court sat very late last night."
"Yes," he said, "we have a good many cases last night."
"How many sessions do you hold a week?"
"One usually, and sometimes two."
"How much are you paid for service on the bench?"
"Fifty cents from the city every night we serve."
"Who decides the number of nights you shall sit?"
"We do the judges."
"If you wanted to, could you hold a session every evening?"
"I think probably we could," he answered.
"Then why don't you hold more sessions instead of continuing them so late?"
"Because," he said, "we don't want to hear it look as if we was grantin' to the city."

Japanese Moral Standards.

The moral and business standards of the Japanese are difficult for the white man to comprehend. It is a common observation that the Chinese man's virtues are business virtues, whereas the chief faults of the Japanese are business faults. Therefore the American business man, understanding no standards but business standards, judges the Chinese by his virtues and the Japanese by his faults.

ISLE OF PALMS NOW OPEN

Exceptionally Large Crowd at Isle of Palms This Week.

The principal attraction at Isle of Palms today will be the motorcycle races on the beach. Similar races will be run on Sunday during the week. The expert riders from Atlanta, Augusta, Greenville and other cities being invited to offer the prizes. The summer season is now in progress and the motor races presented an unusually pleasant face to the picture machine. It was only a "passing" expression, however, for the withholding of the meat soon aroused the feeling of indignation. The picture grew in intensity, providing the operator with an excellent series of facial motion pictures. A picture of the lion "posing" for the view appeared in the July Popular Mechanics Magazine.

As a convention center, the Isle of Palms is fast gaining recognition. The hotel is being improved for guests, including a military band with frequent concerts during the week and dancing every night. There is an entirely free from undertow. There has not been a death by accident in the Isle of Palms since the hotel was opened. The services of expert life guards are maintained, however.

Each hourly trolley schedule has been provided from Charleston. Reservations are being made rapidly.

COL. FELDER RETURNS FROM TRIP TO OHIO

Journey Had No Relation to the Phagan Mystery or Dictagraph Incident, He Says.

Colonel T. B. Felder returned Saturday from a six-day trip to Cincinnati. Much speculation was created by his departure for Ohio last Sunday and it was hinted that he had made the journey in interest of his recent connection with the famous dictagraph plot.

It was also reported that he had gone in behalf of the Mary Phagan investigation, in which he has been an active figure. His departure within less than twenty-four hours after Solicitor General Hugh Dorsay had left the city gave rise to this suspicion.

He declared to a Constitution reporter last night, however, that the Cincinnati trip had been made solely on personal business and that it had no connection at all with either the Phagan mystery or the dictagraph episode.

Colonel Felder stated that he had received no information from the grand jury regarding his demand that Gentry's charges be investigated and that he did not know what body would take up the proposed probe.

A. S. Colyar, a leading actor in the dictagraph case and investigator of the alleged Phagan dictagraph plot, who visited Chief Lanford for a long conference and also had a few words with Chief Beavers.

Colyar says that he will remain in Atlanta for some time.

Bible's Noble Style and Diction.

(From the Springfield Republican.)
Professor Quiller-Couch recently delivered at Cambridge university a lecture on the authorized version of the Bible. He said that he did not admire Elizabethan prose, and gave credit for the beauty of the seventeenth century version to the efforts of the translators of the Bible. Professor Quiller-Couch's admiration of the St. James' version is shared by all, but critics are pointing out that the beauties of the St. James version are the beauties of the earlier sixteenth century versions. "If he will turn to the versions of Wicliffe and Tyndal," writes one man to the Westminster Gazette, "or to that of the Rheims revision, he will find some of the noblest English prose of the sixteenth century." Another correspondent asserts that the "noble style and diction" were certainly the work of the translators of the seventeenth century.

Who is the new professor, who, it will be remembered, is a novelist, and who holds a chiefly ornamental position at Cambridge, has been convicted of an unguarded—or to put it harshly, an unscholarly—statement.

Posing a Hungry Lion for Motion Pictures.

At the moment that "Brutus," one of the big lions of the Cincinnati zoo, was scheduled to keep an appointment with a motion picture operator, one of the guards appeared with a large piece of meat, which was held up enticingly. Brutus, however, presented an unusually pleasant face to the picture machine. It was only a "passing" expression, however, for the withholding of the meat soon aroused the feeling of indignation. The picture grew in intensity, providing the operator with an excellent series of facial motion pictures. A picture of the lion "posing" for the view appeared in the July Popular Mechanics Magazine.

W. E. WORLEY REAL ESTATE

WE ARE ANXIOUS

TO BUILD up Virginia avenue into one of the best streets in Atlanta. We want all houses built of brick, stone or stucco. We sold two bricks the past 10 days for $21,500, and we expect to start three more the coming week, one of which will be stone.

THREE VIRGINIA AVENUE LOTS

ACROSS THE street from where we start three houses the coming week, we have three lots that we will sell at a close price, and to people who will build along with us. We will give them free of charge all their rock for the foundation, also rock for the entire house. If brick is preferred, we will give them absolutely free all the brick that goes in the house, be it 5 room or 14-room.

VIRGINIA AVENUE LOTS

ONE OF the lots above referred to is 50x190 feet, and is perfect, about 4 feet elevation, opposite a brick that sold for $10,500. The price is as low as you can find in the whole section.

VIRGINIA AVENUE LOT

THE OTHER lot is 120x252 feet and narrows down in the rear. Just across the street from the Adair home. It's a perfect corner lot, go out and see it, corner of Highland avenue, Virginia avenue and the Todd Road. The stone and brick cost you nothing—not a penny, but you must build at once.

THE PROPOSITION IS GOOD

WE CAN best explain why we are willing to give the brick and stone free of charge when you call in to see us. You will readily understand why we can afford to do it and what it is done for. We, of course, will have to pass on your plans and you will have to start building with us. It means the building up of a most beautiful resident section, with houses that will be a credit to any part of the city.

THIS PROPOSITION GOOD

FOR THREE LOTS ONLY, as we already control most every other lot on this big 60-foot street. We have water, sewer, sidewalks and lights, and will have gas by the time your house is finished, also have the street in perfect order.

WE HAVE THREE LOTS

ON VIRGINIA AVENUE, each 100x200 feet. We will be glad to figure on building you a home on one of these beautiful elevated lots. See sale cards.

The steel work of the new Healey building is fast pushing skyward, the fourth story of the framework already having been completed. While Atlanta has had many buildings of this character erected in the past, yet this one is attracting probably more attention than any of the former, owing to its extreme size. And the rapidity with which the work is being pushed.

LABOR PICTURE DECLARED OVERDRAWN

Commissioner Stanley Makes Interesting Report on the Cotton Mills.

Child labor conditions in the textile industries of the state are not nearly so bad as some writers for the press, particularly the northern press, have caused their readers to believe. The report of the Commissioner of Labor, Henry M. Stanley, the advance sheets of which were made public yesterday, shows that out of a total of 30,339 employees in the cotton mills of Georgia there are but 6,632, or 21.86 per cent, who are under the age of 18 years.

The idea is widely prevalent that the cotton mill employees of the state are largely made up of women and children. This is erroneous, according to Mr. Stanley's figures, there are almost as many adult males employed in the cotton factories, the number being 15,054, as there are women and children of both sexes, the number of these being 15,345. The number of males under the age of 18 years is 3,881; of females, 3,211.

As to the wages paid to mill operatives, the figures show a wide divergence between the best wages which some of the mills pay and the low wages paid in others. The results of a general survey of the mills in the highest weekly wages, males and females, 10 to 12 years, $3.40 to $3.12; 12 to 14, $6 to $9; 14 to 18, $7 to $12; 18 years, males, $14 to $30; females, 10 to 12, $15; 12 to 14, $15 to $18; 14 to 18 years, $20 to $25; 18 to 19, $3 to $9.

There are now 140 cotton mills in the state, with a total capital invested of $55,283,600. The amount of raw material received at the mills is 254,329,000 pounds of cotton, valued at $27,950,307. The manufactured product is nearly double this in value, being $11,200,480, which is divided into 458,621,894 yards of cloth.

Statistics as to knitting mills are as follows: Number of mills in state, 30; capital invested, $

SOCIAL LIFE IN MACON

Macon, Ga., June 21.—(Special Correspondence.)—Characterized by the beauty of a wedding in June, the month of brides, was the marriage on Wednesday afternoon of Miss Jennie Riley and Mr. James D. Crump. The ceremony was performed by the bride's uncle, Mr. J. R. Solomon, of Atlanta, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Riley. An altar of snowy lilies in a setting of feathery ferns had been arranged in the drawing room, and in front of this stood the young couple, Mr. Riley giving his daughter in marriage. The only attendants were the maid of honor, Miss Julia Riley, and the groom's best man, Mr. E. D. Taylor, Jr. The rest of the house was artistically decorated with potted plants and flowers; orchids and pink gladioli in the dining room, with baskets of lilies of the valley and daisies pendant from the chandelier by bows of pink tulle. The bride's handsome gown of white crepe meteor was elaborately embroidered in crystal and pearls. The tulle veil, held in place by orange blossoms, reached to the end of the long court train. Her bouquet was bride's roses showered with lilies of the valley. The maid of honor wore pink chamois draped in white embroidered chiffon flowers, pink gladioli. Just before the bridal party entered Miss Louise Jahan sang, delightfully, "Because," and during the ceremony an orchestra played, softly, "Sweet Evening Star." A buffet luncheon was served after the marriage. Misses Addie Small and Elizabeth Riley serving punch. After a wedding journey of two weeks Mr. and Mrs. Crump will be at home to their friends at 615 Vineville avenue. Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding were Miss Margaret Solomon, of Atlanta; Mr. Ormond Crump, of Baltimore; Miss Maude Benton, of Monticello, and Mr. Joe Riley, of New York.

Miss Alice Munson leaves today for her home in Richmond, Va., after a two weeks' visit to her father, Mr. J. B. Munson. Every day of her stay was filled with some delightful attention, those of last week being Miss Nona Shaw's sewing party Thursday morning, when Miss Jane McBrier's guest, Miss Helen Fisher, of Pensacola, Fla., shared honors with Miss Munson. Tuesday afternoon, Miss Sarah Tinsley entertained Miss Munson and a dozen girls of the younger set at a most enjoyable tea at the Dempsey for Miss Munson on Wednesday afternoon was a most delightful affair combining a little touch of Parisian gaiety with the provincial Schofield hospitality. Mrs. Schofield was assisted in receiving her guests by her two charming daughters, Misses Lizzie and Gladys Schofield. The tables on which Le Tige was served were gay with huge wicker baskets of golden corsage. Favors for the young men were rolls of paper ribbon with which they would lasso their partners; and in a short while the dancers were whirling through a giddy maze of rainbow-hued ribbons. Miss Weisz's orchestra furnished splendid dance music, and the occasion will long be remembered by the members of the younger set. Wednesday evening Mrs. R. Jaques was hostess at a theater party for Miss Munson, followed by a supper and dance at her home on College street. Thursday evening Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Hilyer gave a dance at the Country club complimentary to Miss Munson.

Among some pleasant entertaining done for Miss Gladys Payne, of Atlanta, who spent last week with Miss Lelia Rogers, was Mrs. Marshall Ellis' o'clock tea at the Country club Thursday afternoon. About twenty-five young girls were invited to meet the fair honoree, whose blonde beauty was enhanced by a dainty dress of sheer white marquisette trimmed in shadow lace, with sash of white satin. Mrs. Ellis' becoming gown was of white tulle trimmed in Irish lace. Others in the receiving line were Mrs. Polton Hatcher, Miss Lelia Rogers and Mrs. Robert H. Plant, Jr. The others present were: Misses Anne Shaw, Ruth Obery, Sarah Tinsley, Louise Callaway, Mary Willingham, Mary Horne, Mamie Adams, Nona Shaw, Lella Artope, Marie Adams, Josephine Jones, Helen Barnes, Julia Goodwyn, Daisy Wimberly, Elizabeth Tolomeo, Elinor Solomon, May Burke, Martina Harper, Viola Johnston, Winnie May Hill and Adelle Snowdon.

J. Massee; Messrs. Horace Wright, Tom Marcy, Hal Williams; and Lon Schofield. Thursday night a number of young men gave a bandwagon ride to Lakeside park in honor of Miss Fisher. Superfluous Hair Truths

Stop Experimenting

If you use a simple toilet preparation and it proves to be worthless, you only lose money. When you use a questionable depilatory, however, it is a very serious matter, because you not only lose money, but you take the grave risk of permanent disfigurement.

If You Value Your Face
Use De Miracle, the one and perfect hair remover of proven merit. Remember, the injury caused by the use of doubtful hair removers will either result in permanent disfigurement or cost you many dollars because it will take months or possibly years to gain control of hair growths which have been stimulated by the use of such preparations.

De Miracle

Only Real Hair Remover on Earth
De Miracle contains certain ingredients which give it the power to rob hair of its vitality. Therefore, you must eventually use it to retard and gain control of growths which have been caused by the use of questionable depilatories. Is it not safer and wiser to begin using De Miracle now, before the growth goes beyond control?

Leaves No Tell-Tale Smell
If you use De Miracle it will be impossible for any curious person to know that you have used a hair remover because De Miracle erases it immediately after accomplishing its work, therefore leaves no odor whatever. On the other hand, if you use any depilatory with a distinctive odor, an offensive tell-tale smell will cling to your skin for hours. If your dealer will not supply you with De Miracle, send $1.00 direct.

20% REDUCTION 20%

Perhaps not so great a reduction has ever been made in the price of diamond goods, and certainly not during our day, as we are making now. In addition to the 20% discount which we are giving, our prices are at least 10% below what they would have to be were we to go into the market today to replenish our stock. We advise you, therefore, to make your purchases during this sale, as you will never again have the opportunity of buying diamonds at the prices we are offering them.

Unusually Attractive Shoes at Reduced Prices This Week

Several special purchases of white shoes have just been received and these, added to the lines which we have already decided to discontinue, make the size range complete. The details are, in a word, simply this: We have 16 smart, new, up-to-date styles of white canvas and white buckskin colonials, pumps, button and lace Oxfords at $1.95 a pair. They were formerly sold at $3.00, $3.50, $4.00, and two styles at $5.00.

At $2.45, we have picked out 12 of our newest and best selling white low shoes; these were also sold as high as $5.00 a pair. Some of them are genuine white buckskin and you know you cannot buy them for less than $5.00 a pair anywhere. At $1.95 and $2.45 the sizes are a little broken and some of the shoes are a little soiled from being handled, but you can clean white shoes now easier than black ones and we will send them out in first-class condition.

All of our former $6.00 white shoes are now $5.00 a pair, the $4.50 styles now $4.00, the $4.00 styles $3.50, and the $3.50 styles $3.00, and so on; so if you cannot get fitted in the $1.95 or $2.45 lot you can depend on getting something at a sharp reduction.

We have also added several lots to the gun metal, patent leather, tan Russia calf and black satin pumps which we had on sale last week at $3.50. These were formerly $5.00 values, so you need not wait longer to buy shoes at a reduced price. We also have several new styles at $2.45, gun metal, patent, tan and black satin. Let us urge you to shop early on account of the clerks going to dinner around 11:30 and 12 o'clock. It naturally makes it hard to give each one the individual attention we would like to, if you wait until 11:30 or 12 o'clock.

The DOCTOR'S ADVICE by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character (the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply to any case of similar nature). Those wishing further advice free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg. College-Bldg. Wood St., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler. cured by using the following tonic restorative treatment (Get from your druggist 1 or 1 1/2 large codliver (not codliver) and 5 one 1/2 ounce of hypophosphite comp. mix, and take a teaspoonful before each meal. Always shake well before taking.
Miss T. R. asks "Do you think a weight of 120 pounds is too much for a girl of medium height and what can I safely take to reduce about 30 pounds?"
Answer: Your weight is excessive, and if it increases it may cause much suffering and embarrassment. I advise the regular use of 2 grain tablets of cathartics which are sold by most pharmacies in sealed tubes with full directions for self administration.
"Carpetman" writes "My liver and kidneys are in a bad condition. I have dizzy spells and dark spots before my eyes. Also have a feeling of rheumatism. Can I be helped?"
Answer: To cure kidney and liver trouble use three Grain cathartics tablets (see package). These are packed in sealed tubes with full directions for taking. They act pleasantly and cleanse the bowels and liver and purify the blood. They are convenient, effective and highly curative.
Phoebe—"The following will cure your children of bedwetting. Get 2 drams of tincture of castoreum, 1 dram tincture cubeba and 1 oz comp fluid extract. Mix, and give the child from 10 to 15 drops in water about one hour before each meal."
Maui writes "I have suffered a great deal with catarrh. It gives me headaches, affects my eyes and my breath is awful. Can you prescribe something to relieve it? Only my nostrils and throat are affected."
Answer: I have prescribed antiseptic white powder and advise you to use it. It must be used occasionally to prevent a recurrence. Get a two ounce original package of white powder use a half teaspoonful to a pint of warm water from the palm of the hand pour the water through the nostrils until thoroughly cleaned, two or three times daily. Mix a level teaspoonful of white powder with an ounce or half of vinegar and apply well up into the nostrils twice a day and your catarrh should soon be cured.
"Onda" writes "I am troubled with itching scalp dandruff and my hair is falling out. It is harsh and brittle."
Answer: Plain Yellow Mercol is the best remedy for itching scalp falling hair and dandruff that I know of. It can be bought in 4 oz jars and used according to directions. It will cure all diseases of the hair and scalp. If the hair is harsh and brittle and falls out, it is due to those straggling locks, which are bound with those straggling locks, the use of Mercol will restore that soft, fluffy appearance and bring back the intense natural color.

To Keep Skin White, Velvety, Wrinkle-Free

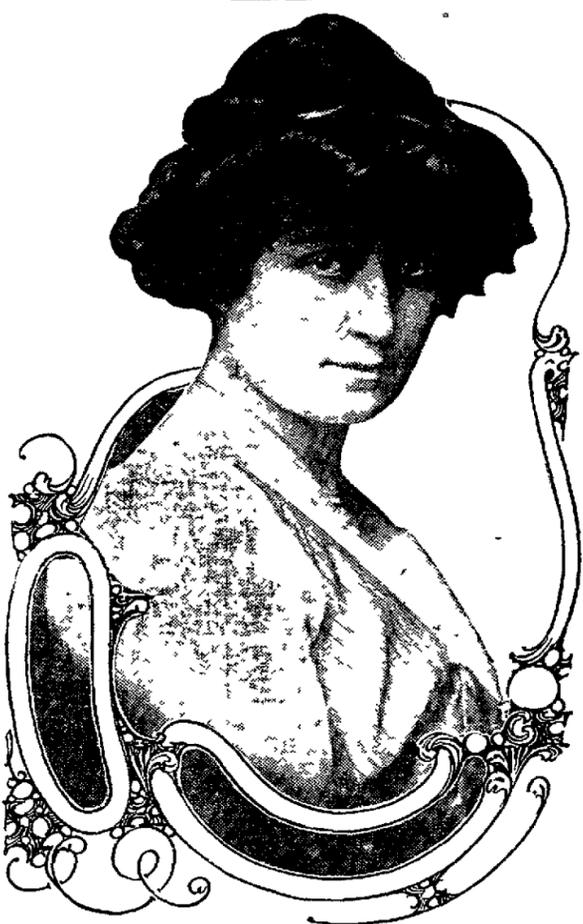

(Aunt Sally in Woman's Realm) "M. W. says: My neck is so discolored from wearing high collars I cannot dress décolleté. What do you advise? The treatment recommended to me will doubtless overcome this condition." A F G asks: What should I do for crumpled feet and for wrinkles at the mouth corners? A wash lotion made by dissolving 1 oz powdered salicylic acid in 2 pint witch hazel this is immediately effective in any wrinkled condition of the face. A skin and results will astonish you. Advice: A simply way to keep your skin smooth and white is to apply ordinary mercerized wax before retiring washing it off in the morning. This keeps the face free from the particles of lifeless cuticle which constantly appear. The wax absorbs these without particles to the young, fresher healthier skin as nature says in view. An ounce of mercerized wax may be had at small cost at any drug store. Use like cold cream.

Business Women Urge the Need Of a Building for the Y. W. C. A.

While the members of the board of management in Atlanta of the Young Women's Christian association are planning to renew the association work in broader scope in the fall and the membership is awaiting with interest the program for the work, it is interesting to note the demand of the business women of Atlanta for the various departments of this institution. It would seem that the business women saw in the Young Women's Christian association plant not only the home atmosphere which many a business woman cannot command but the conveniences and pleasures which the business man finds in his athletic and social clubs, and his membership in the chamber of commerce.

The Young Women's Christian association is a positive necessity to the business woman of Atlanta, said Miss Hattie Post one of Atlanta's leading business women. "If I were without a home or family in this city, the boarding home of the Y. W. C. A. would be the first place I would seek," she continued. "Nothing could do more to supply what business women need, recreation, home surroundings, and the social life membership in what the Y. W. C. A. work is."

Another Viewpoint. Miss Carrie Elizabeth Thomas, in discussing the helpfulness of the Y. W. C. A. to the business woman said yesterday. "The Y. W. C. A. stands for the spiritual, physical, intellectual and social welfare of all womankind for our sisters coping with the problem of the business world for our girls in schools and colleges and for the strangers within our gates. The work of the association is peculiarly beneficial to the business girl and it is she who accepts its many phases of the work that give, as many also receive, the greatest good from the association."

The business women of Atlanta who have long been members of the association and who are interested in its activities heartily endorse the plan which the association made when it gave up its inadequate quarters in the Steiner Emery building and moved to our temporary office and rest room in the Wesley Memorial building.

"Our clubs are conducted in the following manner: We meet Monday evenings at 5 o'clock, blue Monday if you please and get the busy week started off right. Open up with a fifteen minute vesper service after which supper is served. We sit at a long table where a simple wholesome repast is served at a nominal cost. Laughter and good cheer fill a large place on the menu. After supper we retire to the reading rooms and take up for forty five minutes something in the nature of a study, often it is current events, the reading and discussion of some book, the study of the short story and various other things of interest. Sometimes we invite an outsider to come and give a talk in this way it helps us keep in touch with other busy people of our day."

Last and no means least the department of the Y. W. C. A. which appeals to all girls is the hour spent in the gymnasium. Here is where you get rid of that tired feeling, freshen up and forgetting all your aches in having a genuine good time. At different intervals we give parties and frolics in the gymnasium hall. These are with good wholesome amusement. Halloween, Washington's birthday, Thanksgiving parties, etc. but best of all are our children's parties. At these we dress up as little girls, put away grown-up airs and resort to childish things, enjoying games of tag, stick candy and red lemonade. Fifty years ago there were but few if any, business women in our city today more than half of the employed are women. There is a great need for a large and strong association to cope with the problems that confront us, as many of the girls employed in our city come from our surrounding towns and villages to start in a small way a business career. They often have no home life within the city. The association can give just the social life they need, a refined and spiritual atmosphere, and put them in touch with business girls of experience who can often help them to something better.

Atlanta does not seem to recognize all the changes which have come about in the last half century. Some day she will wake up to the fact that no better investment can be made than that of erecting a building well equipped to fit all the demands of the Young Women's Christian association. Women in our city today are filling places of trust they are fast becoming indispensable in the business world and others are in training to fill their places as they leave it.

Beautiful View at Brenau College

Brenau College, Gainesville, Ga., is noted for its beautiful environment as well as for the perfection of its educational equipment. The college estate comprises 100 acres of land, part of which is the big campus with its many wide-branched oaks. The view shown above was taken from the archway of Yonah Hall, the main building in a group of thirty-two. It shows the charming architectural simplicity characteristic of the college buildings, and gives a pretty vista through the campus trees. There are hundreds of such lovely spots to be found about the college. The sunken gardens, with its Italian fountain and steps of marble, the pretty lake in the natural park, unexpected archways and old world corners, all delight the eye of the visitor to the college. The summer session will open June 30, and the regular session opens September 11.

Shall It Be Flannels or Cutaways Or Formal Dress Suits These Days?

BY ISMA DOOLY.

Mr. Blank came wearing his cutaway coat—his best suit it was, he said. His friend wore white flannels and white shoes, and another friend wore an evening suit. They had been invited to the same dinner at the Driving club, the dinner to be served al fresco, and the ladies of the party wore the prettiest of summer evening gowns with picturesque hats. The man in the evening suit apologized, but stated he always wore his evening suit to an evening dinner, unless asked not to. The man in the cutaway suit said he never wore his evening suit to a dinner al fresco at the Driving club; that he did not want to wear his business suit; that he had no white flannels or any of the "ice cream effects." The only man who looked conscious of being all right was the one who wore the flannels, for, reasoned he, to the lady on his left: "It is hot summer weather; I take it an al fresco dinner never is of a formal nature, and I think in our climate we must have a regulation evening costume for evening entertainments."

RETICENT ON THE SUBJECT.

Nobody cared to assert himself very directly on the subject. All knew the gentleman in the evening suit was very warm when he danced. They also knew he had paid his hostess a compliment when he came in his evening suit, which was perfectly proper for the dinner party any time where ladies are. The man in the cutaway coat suit was more at fault than any of the trio, and from the standpoint of common sense and comfort for the man in the white flannels had worn what was most appropriate.

Now, it is easy enough to determine what one is to wear at the dinner in the home, for the hostess, if asked, will generally designate what she wishes the gentlemen to wear, but at the suburban club, at the al fresco entertainment in summer weather, there is often the question about what it is right to wear.

When the effort was made, however, yesterday, to get a number of Atlanta's best-known men to speak on the subject, they were unwilling to be quoted unwillingly to say for publication what the regulation costume should be. It did not care about society or what they wore or anything of the kind.

The ladies who attend the evening club functions, however, unhesitatingly spoke out their minds, and with one accord they believe the man should be in white flannels or light material of any kind out of which the regulation summer suit is made, should be acceptable.

"Men look so comfortable when they are dressed like that. We make ourselves comfortable, and they should have the same privilege," said one generous-minded woman.

The Regulation Attire. "I think the regulation costume for the evening entertainment at the Driving club in summer should be the flannel suit and the accessories which men prefer with these suits. The white flannels are extremely pretty, and I notice at other country clubs that is nearly always the regulation summer costume."

"What habits at the Driving club, however, does not always hold elsewhere, and the nature of the occasion, the guests entertained, etc., should govern the costume. I believe that a formal regulation should be laid with such, and no matter how hot it is, if the case demands, I think men should suffer themselves to wear their dress suits."

Another well-known woman believed that in the summer men in the south should be privileged to make themselves comfortable, but she thought they should have some regulation evening attire, which they should decide for themselves—then all follow it.

"How about the dinner coat as a compromise for the summer dinner?" was here asked.

"Where men are only entertained that would be all right," was the reply, "but it has always been conceded that the dinner coat was a safe liberty which men took dining with each other, but never when dining with ladies. The truth is, however, different places have different customs, and the point I think to be stressed is that the men themselves decide what they want to do, about these matters, and then do it."

"I don't care much about the clothes they wear," here spoke a debutante, "but I do wish men would be more careful about their shoes that they wear to dances. They should have shoes to dance in which will not ruin our white slippers, and they should learn that they are not to lift their feet off the floor in the way some of them do."

"Why, the other night I wore a perfectly clean pair of white slippers to the club; the first man I danced with had evidently come in the shoes he had worn on the street, for they simply ruined my slippers, and he stepped on my toes dreadfully, too."

About whether or not the women are to wear their hats to an al fresco entertainment—that is to be decided by the nature of the picnic, but the light colored, becoming one is always a pretty finish to the summer toilet, and frame women's faces effectively—still about this, as about other things—each a son goes.

Georgia Will Send 500 Veterans in Gray To Join the Tented Hosts at Gettysburg

Many Leave Next Saturday to Be Present at First Gathering—Program Lasts From 1st to 4th of July.

One week from today will see the gathering of the hosts of Civil war veterans on the battlefield of Gettysburg. To that grand demonstration of peace and reconciliation between the blue and the gray, Georgia is preparing to send 500 veterans of the Confederate ranks. As early as next Saturday they will begin to leave for Pennsylvania, the first gathering being on Sunday night, when the first meal is served to the veterans by Uncle Sam. From then on through the entire week, Gettysburg will be the scene of a reunion and celebration that will be unique in the annals of all history.

Fifty thousand veterans from every state in the Union, are expected to join the grand camp that will be upon the battlefield—on the very spot where the conflicting forces fought desperately fifty years ago, with the fate of a nation hanging in the balance. Ten thousand tents have been pitched upon this field, covering an area of 400 acres, and this is believed to be adequate to hold barely the 50,000 expected. For the entertainment of the veterans, Pennsylvania has appropriated $50,000, while the United States government has added $150,000 with an extra $25,000 now pending.

Receia Leaving Saturday.

General A. J. West, commissioner for Georgia, who has been actively associated with the plans for the gathering, will leave with a number of other delegates next Saturday. Others will leave on Sunday and Monday, in time to be present for the formal opening of the program on the morning of Tuesday, July 1.

Among the well known Atlantans who are planning to go are Judge George Hillier, of the state railroad commission; ex-Governor Henry D. Daniel, Captain J. W. English, president of the Fourth National Bank; John W. Lindsey, pension commissioner of Georgia; Green B. Adair, Robert S. Osborne, J. C. Huff, Judge J. J. Martin, E. T. Bowie, J. W. Crews, Colonel W. A. Johnson, J. D. Bingham and John W. Woodruff.

Colonel A. J. McBride, who commanded the Tenth Georgia regiment at the battle of Gettysburg, is one of the most enthusiastic of those going, and declares he will take his two sons and his grandson along with him and lead them to the top of Round Top Hill and there give them orders to defend it forever under "the stars and stripes."

Longstreet's Son Has Party.

From many different parts of the state letters have been coming into the office of General A. J. West telling of parties that are being gotten together to make the Gettysburg trip. J. Garland Longstreet, a son of General Longstreet, has written that he has a party of about twenty who will go from Gainesville. T. A. Little, com-

Ten thousand of these tents have been pitched upon the battlefield of Gettysburg to accommodate the veterans during the reunion. A group of commissioners, who have been working on the plans for over a year, stand in front of the main tent. At the right of the tent doorway is Major James E. Normoyle, who was formerly stationed at Fort McPherson, and is well known in Atlanta. At his right is Colonel E. A. Skelton, of Boston, and at the extreme right is T. H. Humphreys, assistant chief of construction at Gettysburg.

From Decatur a number of well known men are going, including W. J. Williams, R. M. Thompson and Colonel J. L. C. Kerr. Other men from Atlanta who have already signed the delegates' book in General West's office are T. W. Ezzard, E. F. Culpepper, R. L. Hudgens, E. M. Allen, W. J. Maddox, George W. Howard and A. A. Nolan. A number will go from Camp Walker, however, who have not yet registered, the party being in charge of J. B. Smith.

Scores of others will be going, who have not communicated with General West, although it has been requested that every veteran who can go will register his name. Free entertainment, including tent space and meals, is promised to every veteran, and hence the only cost to them will be the railroad fare, which is about $18, all roads having special rates. Indications are that Georgia will be well represented and that the reunion will indeed be the most notable event of its kind in history.

SPANISH PRISONER FAKE TRIED ON DUBLIN MAN

Brandon, a well known wholesale grocer here, received a few days ago a letter from one Soloviet, who states that he is imprisoned in Madrid, Spain, and beseeches Mr. Brandon to aid in getting him out, as he has a large fortune which he can secure control of as soon as he put and promises Mr. Brandon $300,000 for the assistance rendered. The letter is dated at Madrid, Spain, March 28.

WORK OF FESTIVAL CHORUS IS PRAISED BY DR. STARNES

How Atlanta has accomplished in one year what it took Toronto, Detroit and other American musical centers a decade to bring about, is told by Dr. Percy J. Starnes in an interview relating the progress made by the Atlanta Music Festival chorus, which has just disbanded for the summer. Dr. Starnes, who is an Englishman and whose musical career carried him all over Europe before he became Atlanta's city organist and twenty-five, and with funds far beyond my expectations. I find the material of a much higher grade than I anticipated from a community where choral singing has been at a minimum and "Upon the main church, generally speaking, the choir is satisfied with the efforts of the quartet or small choir. So far as I can judge this in past years has left the finest choral productions of the great masters sealed book to the rank and file of Georgia people. "I believe that the years will prove that the southern people, with their generous warm-hearted nature, are the counterpart of this country to the music loving sons and daughters of Italy. I believe the southern people, given the opportunity for cultivation, will shine as the greatest music loving portion of our great country. "The enthusiasm displayed by that immense audience of last Sunday, who listened with evident enjoyment to a program that contained no less than eight numbers from the pen of Grieg was a revelation in itself. "This was a mighty monument to the educational work accomplished by our Music Festival association, and Atlanta has cause to be proud of those noble players in her ranks, and proud of the city that can show such genuine musical appreciation."

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE PERFECTED IN GRIFFIN

Griffin, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—Through the continued efforts of A. W. McKnight, secretary of the southern commercial secretaries' association, there has been perfected in Griffin a board of trade, which begins its career with a membership of one hundred and twenty-five, and with funds in hand amounting to over $4,000.

The officials selected for the management of the board's affairs are as follows: J. W. Gresham, president; J. P. Persons, treasurer; W. B. Royster, secretary. Upon the motion of the nominating committee, appointed to make the nominations, Messrs. J. W. Gresham, R. O. Crouch, J. P. Persons, A. P. Patterson and C. A. Jones were elected commissioners.

There are several projects which the board of trade will take up with a view to promoting a more rapid growth of the resources and advantages around Griffin. The first of these will be the judicious advertising of the business facilities of the town. It is proposed not only to continue newspaper publicity, but also to scatter in distant states attractive reading matter concerning this immediate section of Georgia.

W. B. Royster, the newly chosen secretary of the board, for some time has been connected with the board of trade of Palatka, Fla. He has given his attention to such matters for several years, and the Griffin board considers they have secured the services of an expert in his line.

CORDELE BUSINESS MEN ARE SEEKING E. M. BAIRD

Cordale, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—Several business men of Cordale would like to know the whereabouts of E. M. Baird, who came to Cordale several weeks ago from Pitts posing as an insurance agent. A number here are lamenting the loss of various amounts, for which they hold worthless checks. None of them, however, are over $100. Baird was arrested and put in jail here several days ago for like offenses at other places and was released on bond.

GEORGIANS IN THE METROPOLIS

By H. S. CARRAWAY.

The Constitution's New York Bureau. New York, June 21.—(Special.)—Costume recitals being eagerly relished by American music lovers as something out of the ordinary, a place in New York's musical life has been won by Miss Betty Lee, a young Georgia girl, who is to be heard in folk-song programs next season with Paul DuFault, the French-Canadian tenor. Early in the fall Mr. DuFault is to give a costume recital in New York with Miss Lee, the program to be similar to that which the two singers presented recently in Syracuse, N. Y. In private life Miss Lee is Mrs. Proctor C. Welch, and she has been living in Syracuse for the past two years.

Part of her time during last season was spent in New York, where she sang her quaint songs in drawing rooms and before various clubs, particularly the southern organizations, which welcomed her presentation of the traditional negro melodies sung by her with first-hand knowledge of the music. Another delightful specialty of the young artist is her repertoire of French "Tigerettes," which she has been coached by Mr. DuFault. Miss Lee studied voice with Adelaide Lander, and she possesses a fresh and limpid soprano, which is exactly suited to the intimate type of song chosen as her own particular field.

Commencement festivities at Smith college concluded last week with the graduation exercises on Tuesday. Among the graduates was Miss Inez Tiedeman, of Savannah, who received the degree of A. B. Miss Tiedeman is a member of the Phi Kappa Fraternity, and has been captain of the 1913 basketball team for four years, and a member of the all-Smith basketball team. She has also been prominent in social and dramatic affairs at Smith.

Atlanta Suffragists Thank Constitution for Department

At the last meeting of the Atlanta Equal Suffrage association resolutions of appreciation for the department in the Constitution to be devoted to the suffrage cause were passed as follows:

"The Atlanta Equal Suffrage association, which is a component part of the state organism, is fully cognizant of the tremendous force for the furtherance of the equal franchise propaganda which has been injected into the crusade in Georgia by the unqualified indorsement of the Atlanta Constitution.

"The stand taken by this great southern daily is at one and the same time a further exposition of the breadth and firm constructive policy of the Constitution and an honest and frank admission that the granting of the elective franchise for women will be an early legislative achievement.

"The Atlanta Constitution has ever been a most potent factor in the upbuilding of the state of Georgia and of the entire south. Its policy has been mapped out by men who are broad, intelligent, conservative, and who pledge to them and their associates not only our heartfelt appreciation, but our co-operation and assistance in any good fight, not only for the franchise for women, but for all crusades whose motives shall be the general good of our country and our fellow man.

"MRS. MARGARET M'WHORTER. "MRS. AMELIA WOODALL. "MRS. ALBERT GROSSMAN. "MRS. HARRY DEWEER. "MRS. KATHERINE KOCH."

therein a prophecy and a promise of a new civic life for the nation and the world.

"For a paper of the Constitution's caliber to enlist under the banner of equal civic and economic justice to all citizens is but in keeping with its former standards of right and truth and decency.

"Realizing the vital portent of such an indorsement, we, the members of the Atlanta Equal Suffrage association, wish to express our gratitude to the management of The Atlanta Constitution; therefore "Be it resolved, That this body unanimously extends our great appreciation of the broad advocacy of the cause of equal suffrage, and be it further

"Resolved, That we particularly thank Mr. Clark Howell and his associates for throwing open to us the columns of The Atlanta Constitution, and we pledge to them and their associates not only our heartfelt appreciation, but our co-operation and assistance in any good fight, not only for the franchise for women, but for all crusades whose motives shall be the general good of our country and our fellow man.

GIRL MYSTIFIES DOCTORS WITH HER SECOND SIGHT DURING PSYCHIC SPELLS

By D. G. Bickers.

Athens, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—The region of the state round about Farmington and Wraywood, on the line of Oconee and Greene counties is in a fever of excitement over mysterious psychic manifestations which have been occurring for the past few weeks and scientific discoveries based on these strange phenomena—the interest centering with an intensity that is unusual about a young girl, Sue May Burgess the 14 year old daughter of Mr and Mrs J T Burgess who have lived for seven years on the farm of Messrs W G and F E Griffith, of this place, but who now live on the Wray plantation.

In cataleptic attacks the girl's physical condition is that of one in the advanced stages of hypnosis—unconscious so far as recollecting her actions after becoming normal her body rigid and lacking in sensation her eyes fixed and glassy her limbs organs useless except for the slight use of her tongue and lips in this pered speech.

Remarkable Mental Phenomena
The mental phenomena which attend these attacks are more remarkable—second sight and mind reading being developed to an uncanny and startling degree.

The case is puzzling the professors of the state institutions here who have heard of the strange, dainty and delicate nature of the girl and the physical claims of that section—especially Dr. H. M. Harrell who lives within a mile of the Burgess home and has been attending the girl for several weeks. It is said that becoming ill a young woman and the use of the remedy produced worse results than the affection from which the child—for she is scarcely more than a child—was suffering. Her father states also that her condition gradually grew worse by a slight fall she had three or four weeks ago—while jumping across a narrow ditch she fell and complained of feeling something inside her in the region of her heart her loose palpating her actively. That she has had attacks so frequently that doctors who have not seen her declare she cannot survive many more. An account has been kept by the family for a little more than three weeks and she has had 121 attacks—some times several in a day.

Predicts Time of Spells.

After the first few attacks she began to be able to predict the time of future spells. Tuesday last the 15th she had two attacks and during the last one she told her mother that on Thursday following between the hours of 2 and 3 she would have another attack and that it would be of minutes duration and that she would be quite faint and sick after it. She prophesied further that she would have another slighter attack Thursday night. The two attacks came upon her just as she had foretold and at the times specified definitely.

While she is in the spell she is rigid in body and her family stated that they believed that her arm or finger would be broken before it would bend while in that state. More than once in the past ten days she has fallen on the floor of the home and her father and brother have lifted her like a log one with a hand under her head and the other with a hand under her feet.

She can whisper however while in this trance and has been able to tell her family how the spell might be broken. Once she asked her mother to mark a cross over her heart and upon compliance she became as relaxed and limber as a person only asleep. Again she gave strange ludicrous instructions. She had her brother to press one toe—and immediately was relieved except for a dizziness and nausea. An other time she sent her father 2 miles to the home of Mathew Bonds and woke up his 17 year old son. She had him accompany the brother to the Burgess home and it was only after the neighboring boy pressed his thumb to her right temple that she came out of the rigid condition of catalepsy.

She does not recall in the intervals what she has said or what she had caused to be done when in a spell. But she recollects in another attack things which occurred in former attacks. She wrote two or three lines of writing Tuesday last in a perfectly legible and sensible manner. At the direction of her brother with her eyes fixed on a spot in an entirely different direction from the paper and pencil she was employing—and went back over the lines to dot every i and cross every t in exact position. When she was over the attack she had forgotten that she wrote a line at all. Sends to Graveyard.

But the most wonderful thing yet was Saturday of last week when in a trance she made her brother promise that he would follow her instructions in a stranger request—one more unreasonable than any she had ever made. She asked him to go to the grave on the Griffith plantation, near the home of the superintendent Mathew Bonds and she told him that there he would find the rock wall in closing the graveyard broken open in one place that he should stand and in the northeast corner he would find a stone underneath the stone he would find a locust tree root which possessed the strange quality of shining like gold day or night. He was to bring the root to the doctor who would make a decoction from it to cure her ailments of mind and body.

Could Not Be Deceived.
The brother obeyed partially. The grave is that of former governor of the state of Georgia—Peter Early whose father owned that great estate in Greene county and lived upon it like a lord of the old country. Governor Early's body—with one other person—is buried in sight of the old city. Major of the headstone is a simple one the walls are left surrounding the little plot except on one side. The lad found all as the sister had predicted—only not seeing any rock but one which he pulled out of the top of the ground nearby a piece of the root of a young locust and carried it back to the house. In her next spell she up-bid her brother for not following instructions and told him that the root had brought back was not the one with the mysterious power to shine like gold. The physician Dr. Harrell noted the strange request and though he had no superstitions and no faith in the uncanny goings on his city was busy and the doctor went to the doctor to satisfy his own doubts and to do what might quiet and put by this strange patient. He was embarrassed about the quest in the graveyard and asked Mr. Bonds the superintendent an accompanying him—but Bonds was busy and the doctor went at the task with only a young lad with him. In the northeast corner of the 70 foot stone inclosure under the tash of decades he found a stone which was a part of the foundation of the wall—a stone which had not been touched or disturbed in about eighty five years. Six inches under the stone he hit a great locust tree root as big as a man's arm piercing down into the earth for probably ten or twelve feet judging from the size of the root near the surface.

The physician put the piece of root he had dug out—2 feet long and as thick as his wrist—into the body of the buggy and made his rounds of patients Thursday, Friday, which Mathew Bonds—the superintendent on the plantation upon which the Peter Early grave is located—drove over to the doctor's to see indeed if the locust root dug up possessed any unusual qualities. The doctor went to the buggy house and was about to observe when he lifted the back of the buggy that there was a soft light filling the dark body. Suspicious that his imagination or eyes were playing the trick, he took out the piece of wood and as he advanced toward Bonds the latter exclaimed:

"What's that shining in your hand?"

The root is of light weight white wood the texture seemingly coarse. It is not like the ordinary punk or foxglove which is common and which shines from a superficial amount of phosphorus upon it while the wood or punk is damp—like the glow of a wet match in the dark. This wood when perfectly dry retains the glowing quality. Friday night the writer saw a piece of the root—a chip 4 inches square and an inch or more thick—which held in the dark glowed with such light that one could read a large print by it if the paper were held in a few inches of the chip. The luminous chip seemed also transparent in the dark. Professors in the institution here declare that they have seen phosphorus woods but never quite the kind this chip exemplifies.

How Did She Know?
But while the glow of the mysterious wood can be more rationally and plausibly explained by this simple if very unusual manner there is no explanation from the physician the-

NEGRO IS ARRESTED AS THE ASSAILANT OF SYLVESTER GIRL

Waycross, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—Arthur Williams, colored, believed to be the negro wanted at Sylvester for an attempted assault on a prominent young woman Thursday night, was placed in jail here today and will be held pending the arrival of officers from Sylvester. He denies that he has been to Sylvester, claiming to have worked in Ware county. He was caught at Hoboken, south-east of the city, by J. W. Larkin. He tallies closely to the description given of the negro wanted at Sylvester. It is reported that feeling is high against him and in the event he is taken to Sylvester officers anticipate trouble.

When a fellow asks for a girl's hand he seems to forget that she may develop cold feet.
It takes two to make a quarrel. Where there's a will there's a way.

Panoramic View of Cox College and Conservatory Grounds, College Park, Ga.

For beauty and variety of interest, the campus of Cox College cannot be excelled. Rare imported shrubs and blossoms from every clime and of every season are represented in this miniature reproduction of the flora of the globe. Arctic pines and spruces are but a short distance from tropical vines and brilliant beds of color. Quaint and artistic effects are found in this wonderful bit of landscape gardening, where terraces, fountains, pavilion, and rose arbors vie with each other in charm and attraction.

Beautiful, to the eye, Cox College campus is of even greater interest to the botanist, for in this small compass may be found specimens that must heretofore be gathered with difficulty from the four quarters of the earth. A complete herbarium may be provided from the campus alone.

Too much stress cannot be placed on the importance of beautiful environment in the formative years of a young woman's education. To the art student there is never failing inspiration; to every one who enters its bounds, there is an uplift, a refinement, and a powerful, though silent appeal for the best and beautiful things of life.

Cox College offers literary work on the highest plane. The Academy affords ample preparation for the college courses which require 15 units for entrance. With its laboratories, mounted telescope, museum, library and other accessories, Cox College offers superior advantages in College as well as in Conservatory, where many pianos, pipe organs, orchestral instruments and a commodious and elegant concert hall greatly facilitate the work.

At Cox College Conservatory every branch of music is in charge of a specialist and for years the institution has stood forth as the leading school of music in the South.

VACATION

Recreation under guiding supervision is the vacation planned for the boys who attend Riverside Naval Academy.

Riverside is located on the bank of the Chattahoochee River, as it winds its way "out of the hills of Habersham, down thru the valleys of Hall," and is in the foothills of the Appalachian Mountains. Just outside of Gainesville, but connected by trolley, it has a combination of advantages to offer which has won for the title of the "Culver of the South."

RIVERSIDE NAVAL ACADEMY

Water and mountains afford opportunity for aquatic and woodland sports, the cleanest, healthiest exercise possible, and that which instills in each boy that courage, agility, strength and determination which mould the character of after years.

Out-of-door sanitary camp life furnishes one of the chief claims of Riverside Naval Academy. Out in the open, they are drilled, and slept, but there are also ample accommodations in the magnificently equipped military dormitories for those preferring barrack life.

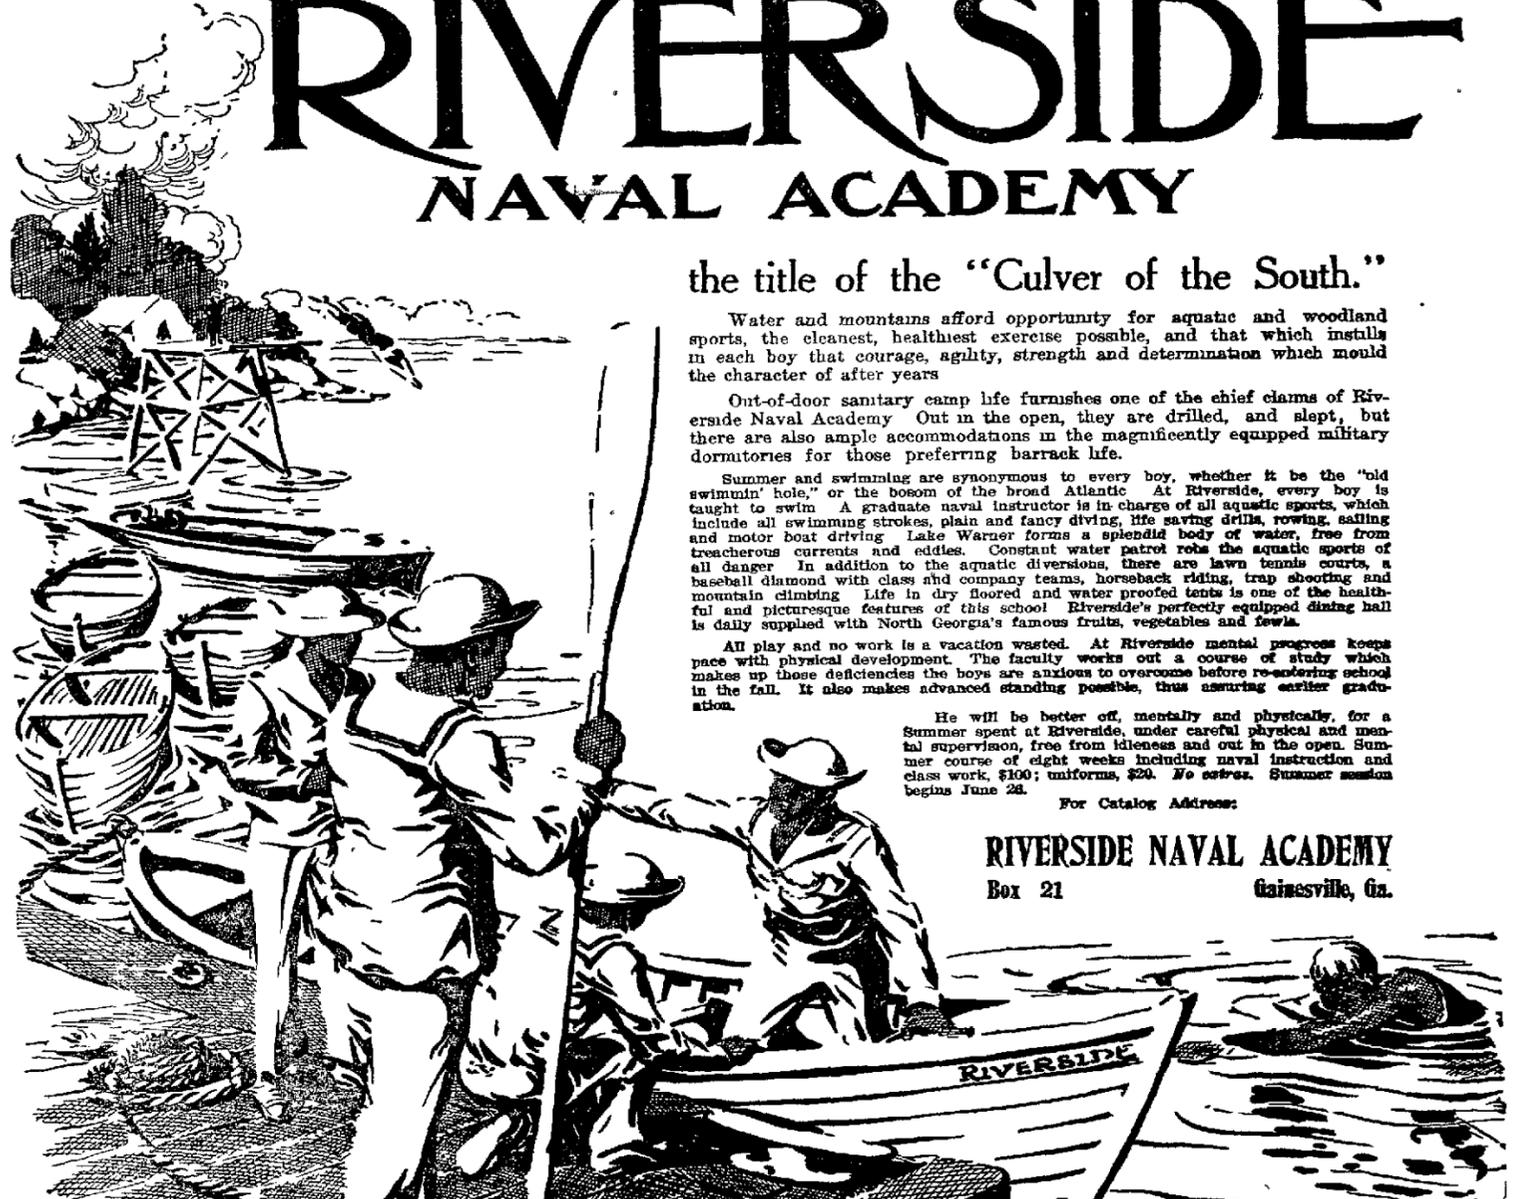

Summer and swimming are synonymous to every boy, whether it be the "old swimmin' hole," or the bosom of the broad Atlantic. At Riverside, every boy is taught to swim. A graduate naval instructor is in charge of all aquatic sports, which include all swimming strokes, plain and fancy diving, life saving drills, rowing, sailing and motor boat driving. Lake Warner forms a splendid body of water, free from treacherous currents and eddies. Constant water patrol robs the aquatic sports of all danger. In addition to the aquatic diversions, there are lawn tennis courts, a baseball diamond with class and company teams, horseback riding, trap shooting and mountain climbing. Life in dry floored and water proofed tents is one of the healthful and picturesque features of this school. Riverside's perfectly equipped dining hall is daily supplied with North Georgia's famous fruits, vegetables and fowl.

All play and no work is a vacation wasted. At Riverside mental progress keeps pace with physical development. The faculty works out a course of study which makes up these deficiencies the boys are anxious to overcome before re-entering school in the fall. It also makes advanced standing possible, thus assuring earlier graduation.

He will be better off, mentally and physically, for a Summer spent at Riverside, under careful physical and mental supervision, free from idleness and out in the open. Summer course of eight weeks including naval instruction and class work, $100; uniforms, $20. No extras. Summer session begins June 22.

NATIONAL CONGRESS OF MOTHERS AND PARENT-TEACHER ASSOCIATIONS GEORGIA BRANCH

COULD SAVE MANY OF 300,000 BABIES WHO DIE ANNUALLY

It is estimated that 300,000 babies die yearly before they reach the age of 12 months. If it were impossible to prevent these deaths we would have no incentive to try to reduce these numbers. But we are assured by the highest authorities the numbers of these deaths can be greatly reduced by proper care, feeding and sanitation. Within natural limitations a community can determine its own death rate. These facts having been proved to be true it is time that each individual contribute his share in interest and work in order to make a great reduction in this appalling mortality and to save many of these helpless ones. Billions of dollars have been given for research work on tuberculosis, malaria and other diseases that are far less destructive to our population than the preventable diseases of infancy, which are due mainly to lack of training of mothers. While these deaths are due to ignorance and superstition improper feeding is acknowledged as the chief cause. It was formerly believed that early deaths of weak children was to be desired, that it saved the community the expense of caring for them through a few more years of suffering with no hope of reaching maturity. We no longer believe in the "survival of the fittest," but we know that the child is our greatest natural asset and that conservation should begin at home. The country which first recognizes its responsibilities to the child and tries to fulfill these obligations will receive the recognition of the world as being the greatest civilized nation. An accurate registration of births and deaths is the essential basis of intelligent effort to conserve infant life—to secure education of all children and to protect their working life and legal rights.

Would Establish an Institute For State's Defective Children

The awakening of men from centuries of neglect to an acknowledgment of even the most elemental of child's rights has been a slow process. A few years ago we protected the dog and the horse from cruelty but not the child. It has been only in the last ten years that we have ceased to arraign children victims of bad environment in company with the city criminals. The glaring fault of the state is that it thrusts children of tender years who are mentally irresponsible, into the ordinary reformatory. Not all children who commit crimes are feeble-minded. There are sentimentalists who would have us believe that all child criminals are defectives. These people are going around the land trying to find criminal bumps on criminal children. If a child stole an apple, they armed with imagination and a pair of callipers will try to find an apple bump on his head. If he threw a rock at another boy they find a bump of cruelty. They would promptly open up the head of every accused child, straighten out the convolutions in his brain, and return him to his parents with the character of a Washington. But, approaching the subject from a standpoint of common sense, there are certain well-defined cases of mental deficiency that anyone can recognize. In an examination of the inmates of Bedford reformatory for women it was found that 39 per cent were mentally defective, and at the Elmira reformatory 39 per cent were found in the same condition.

If while the defectives were still children the causes of their mental defects had been discovered and remedied many might have been saved for useful citizenship. There are excellent school systems in most reformatories, but the abnormal child is unable to make progress in the most rudimentary branches. It would require the constant attention of experts to enable him to learn anything. Expert Treatment Needed. What is needed is medical and mental treatment by experts in special institutions. These institutions the Mothers Congress of Georgia is advocating and working to establish. The bill to be introduced into the legislature this year seeks to establish an institution which will so train these children that they will be enabled to earn their living in some useful occupation. A great many people are driven into a life of crime by their inability to support themselves by honest efforts. Let us move this inability by special education and one cause of crime will be overcome. We therefore appeal to all the mothers of Georgia to aid us in this our fight, to bring comfort and sustenance to those without our aid are unable to do anything for themselves. Every mother can assist us in this work by making a special appeal to her representative in behalf of this bill. MRS. EUGENE M. MITCHELL, Chairman Defective, Dependent and Delinquent Children

The Need for Vital Statistics

Georgia has no way of gathering vital statistics. It is impossible to compute the infant death rate because we cannot know the total number of babies born. The children's bureau of Washington is sending out a map showing the states that have adequate laws for vital statistics. Some states have adequate laws, others fairly adequate, but only four shown in black on this map—indicating no laws what ever. These are Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Arkansas. There is hardly a relation in life from the cradle to the grave in which such a record map has not proven to be of the greatest value to the individual and to the state. Especially is this so in the enforcement of laws relating to education, to child labor, as well as to the child in matters in criminal laws. Irresponsibility of children under ten for crime and misdemeanor, and the determination of the age of consent. The children's bureau, recognizing the value and importance of a universal birth registration, has devoted the first paragraph of its one vital subject, which is necessary for the study of child welfare. Uniformity in the birth registration law is one of the essentials, and is absolutely necessary, otherwise it would be impossible to secure statistics to compare results from other states. Under the auspices of the bureau of the census a bill for a model law has been provided by a committee of representative men and includes, as prime essentials, the date of birth, name, sex, race, birthplace, occupation and color of both parents and the legitimacy or illegitimacy of the child. Also provides that reports of local registrars are to be finally received and preserved in the archives of the state health department of each state. (a) Reporting cannot be over emphasized. The notification of births act of England provides for notification within thirty six hours and it has been said that no other one expedient has done so much to ward lessening infant mortality in England. A Model Law. The following is a copy of the proposed model law for Georgia: "A bill to provide for the registration of all birth and deaths. "Section 1.—That the state board of health shall have in charge of the registration of births and deaths. It shall prepare the necessary instructions, forms and blanks for obtaining and preserving such records and shall procure the faithful registration in each primary registration district as certified in section 3 of this act and in the central bureau of vital statistics at the capitol of the state. The said board shall be charged with uniform and thorough enforcement of the law throughout the state and shall, from time to time, recommend any additional registration that may be necessary for this purpose. "Section 2.—That the secretary of state board of health shall have general supervision over the central bureau of vital statistics which is hereby authorized to be established by said board and shall be under the immediate direction of the state registrar of vital statistics, whom the state board of health shall appoint within thirty days after the taking effect of this law, and who shall be a medical practitioner of not less than five years' practice in his profession and a competent vital statistician. This method of appointing of local registrars by the state board of health or perhaps by the state registrar with a reasonably long term of service and subject to removal by neglected duty is preferable to this inefficient service. "CHILDREN'S BUREAU OF THE DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE AND LABOR.

PREVENTING BLINDNESS EDUCATIONAL PROBLEM

It is a known fact that one fourth of all the blind children in the institutions for the blind, are there from ignorance suffering unnecessarily from this affliction known as opthalmia of the newborn. It is preventable. If precautions are taken at once curable if skilled medical treatment can be secured quickly. The official census of the blind for the state of New York in 1906 gives a total of 2300 blind persons in the state. Of these the cases of preventable blindness number 1934 or 82 per cent of the whole. We must realize that this is one of the most important problems in public health. In the board of health, requires that every birth must be recorded by attending physicians only a strong appreciation on the part of the public can make such effective. Public opinion must be strong enough to assist in the enforcement of this law before effective registration can be secured. When our parents are educated on lines of general sanitation and right living we are assisting the present generation but when our boys and girls are taught that utmost care and judgment must be used in building the temple that it may be a fit place for the soul to dwell we are saving the lives yet to be born from the misery of blindness and the ill that would come through ignorance. Unquestionably it is the duty of parents to instruct their boys and girls concerning the highest and holiest functions of life or to see that from some source the information is given which will protect them from the dangers which they encounter. This problem is purely an educational one and must be met through quiet, sane, well-balanced methods by parents, teachers and physicians.

Loyalty to Old Friends Is a Characteristic Of Mrs. John M. Slaton, Wife of Next Governor

By Isma Dooly.

When Mrs. John Marshall Slaton comes down to breakfast every morning, and herself drops the lump of sugar in her husband's coffee, they tell each other their plans for the day. She has had time to glance over the morning mail; to see the invitations which include her and her liege lord, and they decide which they can accept, which they must decline—but I hear more than one feminine voice arise in protest. "Does Mrs. Slaton come down to breakfast, and has she had time even before that to look over her mail?"

To these ladies of the toast crust and lemon water who never come to breakfast and who are fond of telling it—yes, Mrs. Slaton does come down to breakfast and start the day with her husband.

The Practice of Years.

She has made this a practice to be at the family breakfast table ever since she was big enough to be brought to the table and occupy a high chair placed very near that of her father the late Colonel William D. Grant. As she grew up, the breakfast with her father was the way she began the day. Through her school life this was her pleasure, and when she came home, after attending school north, entered society, and was one of the belles of the south, she continued to meet her father at breakfast, no hour too early that suited him. She might have been up very late the night before, but not too late to get up to please her father, for was there not the rest of the day to nap in?

So often she was out for lunch, drove in the afternoon, dined out in the evening, and maybe whole days would pass when she might have been seen or talked with her father had she not had the conferences at breakfast. It was then, I have heard her recall, that she heard him talk over the things which interested him. His glance over the daily paper would suggest to them their topics frequently for conversation, and the young society belle continued in these conferences with her father, her study and interest in literature, art and the drama, of which she is still a student. He was one of the most scholarly men of his day. His library—one of the finest in the south—was where he chose to spend most of his time and there he drew to him the men who, like himself, found in the library their topics for dinner nocks and for the long winter afternoon conferences.

Her Father's Influence.

With her father's example before her she grew to read Shakespeare's plays read before she went to sea parts, and heard the most interesting parts of the opera stressed before she heard them sung.

She heard conversations which she can recall now between her father and her kinsman the late Samuel Barnett, of Washington, Wilkes county, who was a favorite cousin of Mr. Grant. He had visited China and Japan—it was an unusual trip in those days. He told stories to his little cousin, "Little Pippin," as she was called then, and she repeated them to her friends at dancing school. They had a great desire to hear all about the ladies of the far east. With great pride it was, therefore, she asked some of them to supper to hear her "Uncle Sam" talk. He told of the ladies of the east, who were not talking about voting as they are now, and later the little girls went to the kitchen and made candy, a part of which they sent to some of the Atlanta boys who were then at the University of Georgia, among them, no doubt, winning his first laurels then, Georgia's next governor. The nicest pieces, however, were selected and put in the little box labeled "brother," for then, as now, there was that beautiful devotion existing between the petted daughter of the household and her brother (John W. Grant).

Her Thought of Others.

Her thoughtfulness and consideration of others even then was her marked characteristic, and one felt always so happy when bidden there because her hospitality was that sweet and genuine that the welcome was felt from the moment her pretty blonde face appeared at the door, and she ushered her guests to the library to present them. She liked to exploit the talents of her friends, and though she always had the gifts that made her recitations better than those of the other girls who studied with her, she insisted that they, too, should play or sing or whatever they could do when she then, as now, would contribute so generously of her talents on her birthday. She always had lovely parties, frequently at the home of her grandfather Grant, who lived in the home which is now the winter residence of Mrs. William D. Grant. It was here that her debut party was given. It is interesting to note that the same guests are bidden to Mrs. Slaton today, for she never forgets the childhood friends. Many of them are married—may be quiet people who may not have kept up the taste for dancing and the gay world, but they are still on the list which was used for the birthday parties, and there is the same beautiful spirit of love and heart-prompted hospitality in the hostess of the executive mansion today that there was in the face of the little hostess of childhood days, when she greets them.

There may be those who will wonder if these little things about the life of Georgia's family of the executive mansion are generally interesting, and there may be those even who will question the right one has to exploit their reminiscence of them. These I would remind of the happy fairy tales of when they loved the fairy tales; when they loved to read of and hear of the kings and queens in the story books; of King Arthur and his knights. It was the great folk we liked to read of—and human nature is the same now as it was then.

Our "Royal Folk."

We may not confess it, but we, every man and woman of us, read of royalty every time the head-lines note them, and we read, too, about the president's garden parties, and we are interested to know everything about the women of their families. Our people of authority are our royal folk. Georgia is the empire state of the south. Since the days of settlement Georgia has done more than her part in furnishing men of achievement to the nation, and women noted for their beauty and worth and charm.

Georgia's governor and his family represent our "royal folk," and it is natural and praiseworthy that the people who have honored Governor Slaton with the highest office within their giving should be interested in what may be the very simple fact as to whether or not Mrs. Slaton comes down to breakfast with him.

Her days have been very busy ones for a long time, for she has taken an active part in her husband's political activities. She frankly states that she has liked the experience, that she has done what she could toward electing him. She has wanted him to be governor, is proud that he is and expects to enjoy every moment of her part of the experience in the executive mansion.

Wants to Know Everybody in Georgia. "I never appreciated how beautiful my native state was, and how lovely my own people until I began to take the little trips with Mr. Slaton," she said last year, after returning from several short trips. "Why, one misses so much by not traveling more around home. When I was in New York the other day I bought such a nice big valise, which will hold all I need for these trips, and I can pack it on a moment's notice and go with Mr. Slaton. I want to know all his friends in Georgia and I hope to accomplish it. We will move into the executive manson, so that those in the general assembly can reach us conveniently. The inaugural reception will be there, and with the porches and lawn we can convert it into a place ample for the comfortable reception of our guests.

What She Does for Others. While the last few years have taken much of her time in complementing interests of Mr. Slaton, she has in no way relinquished the work which is common with other good women of the community, she has been doing. She is an officer in the woman's society of her church. She is a member of the Atlanta Art association. She is president of the Atlanta Musical association; a member of the executive board of the Players' club; a member of the Drama league; a member of the Atlanta chapter D. A. R.

Her Ideas of Woman's Work.

"The responsibilities of women become greater every day, and more is expected of us in public work than our grandmothers would have believed becoming in us," said Mrs. Slaton, when asked what she thought of the present-day activities of women. "These responsibilities, however, come with the century's life. More is expected of men as well as women. The duties and responsibilities of the home, therefore, are broadening, and women have had to keep pace with the obligations which come. There is the old demand, 'We must be ready when the call comes to help build the church, the school, or the hospital. Busy as we are, we have more time than have our busy husbands, and before we realize it we are working in public life, but always in the way that women should.'"

Asked about her dominant outside interests, Mrs. Slaton mentioned first the interest she felt in a broader appreciation of music in the community. "It was because I felt this that I accepted the office of president of the Atlanta Musical association. For a long time—indeed, since the war, I may say—we have not had the time and opportunity to accomplish our selves as did our parents and grandparents. In the days of my mother it was a part of a woman's education to know music and the arts. They read scrupulously and cultured themselves. Her Love of Music and the Drama. "Now there does not seem the time for that, and even those people who have the advantages of education and travel have neglected often to cultivate their talents or their taste for music and the arts. I believe that through an organization like the Atlanta Musical association we can give music to all; those who cannot acquire it themselves through study or culture, those who love it and desire it as their entertainment, and the many in our midst who, hearing good music, will realize a talent they did not know they possessed. The south has achieved in every branch of knowledge making for higher civ-lization, and there is no reason why we cannot do our part toward contributing to the life of art.

"The drama, I believe, is a great medium of development," continued Mrs. Slaton, in reference to her interest in the Players' club and the Drama league. "I think the study of it should be encouraged in our schools, especially the high schools, and I believe the right kind of plays have a wonderful influence over the public mind.

"Through dramatic clubs there can be accomplished not only the development of native talent, but from the proceeds of entertainments which delight the public there can be realized the funds which our Players' clubs always contribute to some charity."

Her Practical Work.

Mrs. Slaton is the ideal, organized woman, in that she lives "to the spirit of organization, and her success as a leader is directly due to her individual work. When the Atlanta Musical association reorganized and she was elected president, the association determined on a campaign for a guarantee fund of one hundred members, each to be assessed a certain amount. Mrs. Slaton undertook the task of securing the members, and the association will present a series of brilliant programs during the winter months.

Several weeks ago, when the Players' club had planned to present the "Importance of Being Earnest," one of the leading members of the cast, several weeks before the performance, found it impossible to take part. "There is no one to do it but you," Mrs. Slaton was told, and busy as she was planning to move; to make her plans for inauguration and assist Mr. Slaton in many ways, she consented to take the part, and most beautiful was the interpretation.

The Governor's Mother-in-Law.

In writing the happy chapter of a man's life it is rare that to complete it something has to be said about his mother-in-law, and yet no story of Governor Slaton's ideally happy home would be complete without a tribute being paid to his mother-in-law, who is one of the most brilliant and beloved women in Georgia, and one deeply interested in his success. Since Colonel Grant's death she has resided with her daughter, and the sunshine of her wonderful personality has been felt by the many who know her. She was Miss Sarah Frances Reed, of West Point, Ga., and one of the distinguished belles of the old south. She is most talented and accomplished, and in her scintillating and fluent conversation she can "win" a tribute gathering of today with that same grace and naivete which made her the center of Georgia's social life in her girlhood days.

Mrs. Slaton's immediate relatives include her brother, Mr. John W. Grant, and his lovely wife, and their children, Margaret, the debutante daughter, William D. Grant, John Grant and Anne Grant.

one which I firmly believe will live as long as men remember the civil war. I am amazed at the thoroughness and care with which you have carried on your investigations. The Truth about Chickamauga has been as far as it seems to me, as is humanly possible, and I believe you have placed your self beyond criticism in your very evident intention of giving the whole truth.

Gen. Charles King said: "The book is the first I ever heard of the covered Chickamauga's closing hours." Henry J. Aten, of the Eighty-fifth Illinois Infantry, now librarian at his alma mater, Northwestern University, wrote a long letter about the book. It is impossible to give all of it, but the following shows his appreciation: "Your book is remarkable for the enormous amount of work you have put into your researches. You have treated my old brigade handsomely, and as I think, justly."

Woman's Suffrage Movement. (By Rose A. Bird-Maley in National Geographic, Monthly for June.) There are those who still freely believe that the present movement for the ballot is a wholly unfounded demand of a few vocally gifted women, and that the only just solution of the problem is the submission of the question to the women themselves. In a speech which was intended to be humorous, Hon. Stanley Bowler, an opponent for Hamilton county, at the Ohio constitutional convention, compared this "apparently" great clamor for the ballot to "a great noise in the barnyard, but on looking it was found to be only a few progressive movements there. In all progressive movements there is a necessity, those who take the initiative, but it has seemed to me a number of times that the question today is not so much whether the majority of women desire the ballot, but whether equal suffrage will result in the greatest good to the greatest number.

Although the desire for the ballot should not be considered an argument for or against suffrage, it must be conceded that it is a necessary requisite as a means to the end, for whenever the majority of women request it, the men of the nation will grant it. At the present time, however, the submission of the question to the women themselves would neither be a fair nor final solution of the problem, because the majority of women are not in a position to vote intelligently upon the question. This state of affairs is not due to woman's intellectual inferiority, but largely to the position she has occupied in the past. For centuries her circle of activities has been confined to her home, and her training in matters of government has been totally neglected. Like Rip Van Winkle, she has today just awakened from a long slumber, and the world about her is unfamiliar, the rights of citizenship is a problem which she considers far removed from her in life.

Ram Sprouts New Growth.

(Gallon O. Dispatch from New York World.) In addition to a fine coat of wool a ram owned by David French, a farmer has a covering of rambling cats. The ram wallowed around in a straw stack and got into his wool. Then it was rained on. Next to the sun shone brightly. The continued several days with the result that the cats aggregated. French calculates that in case of drought, he can save the value of one sheep if the ram's wool comes to the crop, he can save the sheep in the year.

BOOK REVIEWS . . . IN TABLOID

Here is a thrilling narrative from the pen of the world's greatest detective and it is about the masked warriors. Who were they and how did Burns manage to pick them out from the ninety million people of the United States? Now, for the first time, William J. Burns lays all his cards on the table and, in his own terse language, tells how he arrived at his astonishing results. He chooses a type case the greatest case he ever had to tackle, that of "The Masked War," (the title of the book) and how he brought the conspirators to justice. It is a story more exciting than ever penned from an author's imagination. (George H. Doran company New York.)

Pippin. A story of London streets by Evelyn Van Buren Pippin—black-haired, dark-eyed, ruddy-cheeked child of the London streets, who has been beside the tool of clever pickpockets, but she proved cleverer than her teachers, and then something comes into her life which makes her give up her old way of living for the sake of Dandy, a very worthy chap, and the frail little brother whom she has to mother. A very interesting feature in the story of a petty and ambitious American girl in London, her rescue by Pippin, and the joy and happiness which comes to both. But from the first chapter to the very end there is something to interest more exciting than ever penned from an author's imagination. (The Century company New York.)

Sunja. A Himalayan Idyll by Maud Dyer. Miss Dyer's charming story of India derives its dramatic power from the national prejudice, the bar of race, that keeps the east and west apart. The wisdom of the east and the enterprise of the west are placed in impressive juxtaposition. (G. P. Putnam's Sons New York.)

The Ambition of Mark Twain. By Henry Russell Miller. Author of "The Man Higher Up His Rise to Power." "This is a man's book in its account of a battle royal of steel kings. It is a woman's book in its story of romance, marriage," etc. The story tells of the life of a big man, his big foes, big friends, the strife, the hopes and the aspiration of modern America. (Bobbs-Merrill company Indianapolis.)

The Strange Cases of Dr. Stanchon. By Josephine Daskam Bacon. This book reveals some of the secret dramas of life in which the physician is the only witness, and which puzzles famous scientists and physicians. (D Appleton & Co New York.)

BOOKS RECEIVED FROM GEORGE H. DORAN COMPANY. (Holder & Stoughton.)

The Ambassador. By William Wrothlesley. The fascinating life of the inner court circles of the embassies at European capitals mirrored in an animated novel in which an American woman plays the leading part.

The Old Adam. An adventure. The story of a Five Towns man whose wife endangered his audacity. She took his successes for granted and refused to be surprised at him. A very interesting story.

Mixed Grill. By W. Pett Ridge. We are introduced to a queer little circle of entirely London characters. William Dean Howells has summed up the achievement of Mr. Ridge, this English O. Henry, as "that sort of truth which fact precipitates after passing through the alembic of a friendly imagination." Another writer says "what O. Henry did for New York's four million, Pett Ridge has done for the five million of London."

The Jumping Off Place. By Ethel Shackelford. A typically American story of the invigorating influence that the new west has on an eastern woman, who, before she left cities, had told herself that life had ceased to be interesting.

Dying Fires. By Allan Monkhouse. A novel of married life written from an entirely new viewpoint.

Debit Account. By Oliver Onions. Was it a debt and ought it to have been settled? An interesting book, remarkably contrived which asks society an extraordinary question.

The Blindness of Virtue. A play in four acts. By Cosmo Hamilton. The author teaches with laughter—his lesson is no less grave because he smiles.

A Plea For the Younger Generation. Author of the Blindness of Virtue.

The Private Life of Henry Matland. By Morley Roberts. "The book has roused a furor of controversy in England because of its relentless frankness," says the press.

The Adventures of Dr. Whitley. By G. A. Birmingham. The adventures of this wrong-headed reformer are absurd and fiery, yet all the while we are convinced of the likelihood of their happening—in Ireland. The Boston Transcript says "Mr. Birmingham is a master humorist and a master story teller. His career of Ireland, so perfectly in his atmosphere reproduced in his stories, is nothing more or less than an epitome of the whole world."

Courtin' Christian. By J. J. Bell. The author's theme is a call-love—call-love, which has been the inspiration of nearly all ballad-poetry. Independence and elegance and two characters of sixteen and eighteen form the lead characters of a drab romance—simply the story of the courting days of Wee MacGregor and Christina.

Calling the Tune. By Justin Huntly McCarthy. Author of "If I Were King," which is considered a standard novel of the day. Mr. McCarthy has given us a story of the cavaliers of the twentieth century and it is just as entertaining as the novels which have made him famous.

The Waste Cause. By George Playdell. A rousing story which involves a curious point of English law. The opportunities for dramatic developments are numerous for a young man is found drowned in the lake of a country house. He was rich, and the man who would profit most by his death is an amateur criminologist—a sportsman—on the verge of bankruptcy, and it places him in a serious position, but all the heads of the machinery of English justice are either his personal friends or acquaintances.

BOOKS RECEIVED FROM THE MACMILLAN COMPANY.

The Influence of Monarchs. Steps in a new science of history, by Frederick Woods. "Only very rarely has a nation progressed in its political and economic aspects save under the leadership of a strong sovereign. This is a plain and simple fact," affirms Dr. Woods.

Religion as Life. By Henry Churchill King. "Life—large and rich and free, increasing inexhaustible life, be cause sharing in God's own life."

The Country Church. By C. O. Gill and Gifford Pinchot. Is the country church growing in size and power, or declining? Is it doing the work which belongs to it? Is it as influential an agent for the improvement of country life as it should be, and if it is not how can it get back into the position it once held? These are the questions underlying this book. The church-going habits of all the individuals in a population of fifty thousand were ascertained at the beginning and again at the end of a period of twenty years. It is on these facts that the conclusions and reforms are based.

Animal Husbandry for Schools. By Morrill W. Harper, assistant professor of animal husbandry at Cornell University. A book not only useful in schools, but to the farmer who desires a book on farm animals.

The Church and the Labor Conflict. By Pauline Peck, Homer, Dr. Women says in this book he deals with facts, instead of theories.

Economics in Business. By Norris A. Nelson. The author has endeavored to produce a book which will assist men in their efforts to obtain a greater efficiency, and in which business principles are presented in clear, non-technical language.

Roman Farm Management. Cattedraro Done into English, with notes of modern instances. By a Virginia farmer.

Travers' Golf Book. By Jerome D. Travers. Amateur champions of the United States, 1907, 1908 and 1912, with forty-eight illustrations.

LITERARY NOTES.

Out of the Ashes. A new novel by Ethel Watts Mumford, was published recently by Moffat, Yard & Co. The story is an interesting study of certain phases of New York life.

The Mystery of the Pink Pieces. By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, is a snappy detective story in July Anislee's. The characters of the story are imbued with the delightful personality of Mrs. Woodrow's work.

Florence Barkley, author of "The Rosary," writes to Mrs. O'Connor. "I have just today had time at last to sit down, quietly, and read 'Little Thank You.' Not an hour can I write to say, 'Thank you, indeed, for 'Little Thank You!'"

Leading advocates of universal peace endorse Lucia Ames Mead's "Swords and Ploughshares."

Amos Mead, which the Putnam's recently published, is securing the enthusiastic endorsement of eminent leaders in the cause of universal peace. "It seems to me a book," writes Dr. Anderson D. White, "which will make its mark decidedly among those most effective for the cause of peace on earth. It seems to me sure to help strongly in just that part of our work which I have always believed, is most effective, namely, the which give the right basis of thinking and materials for its best processes to men and women who give calm thought to the whole subject concerned." Prof. William J. Hull, of Swarthmore college, writes to the author, "You have certainly succeeded in being a number and variety of awards into ploughshares and I hope and believe that your book will be of material aid in 'Supplanting the System of War by the System of Law.'"

A practical illustration of "truth crushed to earth" is seen in the continued interest in the late Col. Archibald Graeie's able exposition "The Truth About Chickamauga." With our interest in the civil war freshened by the observances of this anniversary year, it may not come amies to quote again from a few of the many expressions of congratulation and admiration received by Col. Graeie when the book appeared two years ago. Col. Roosevelt, with characteristic emphasis declared the book "a fine one, extremely interesting." Col. Edward L. Anderson, adjutant in Gen. McCook's brigade, wrote: "Your book is the best I have ever read on the subject."

"Slaton's Proverbial Luck" Analyzed, Means: Eternally Sticking to It Day and Night

Governor-Elect Slaton in characteristic poses, his mother, his father and scene of his birth.

By T. B. Conner.

It was the first of the Roman emperors who one day had all of his court flatterers ransacking the Latin dictionaries of their time for a new title to annex to his name—he already had a hat full of the most high sounding name prefixes he could find—and who finally selected Felix as the adjective that to him most satisfactorily described the glories he had achieved.

If we render the little Latin word by the good Anglo-Saxon term, lucky, and that is as accurate a translation as any other, it would probably convey the best idea of the impression made upon the casual observer by the life of the man who is to be inaugurated governor of Georgia next Saturday. Lucky in business, lucky in politics, lucky in love, John M. Slaton has not only never known the bitterness of defeat, but has not even had to feel the twinge of a single temporary setback in the onward march of a uniformly brilliant and successful career.

Has Good Will Of Whole People.

It would be hard to find in the story of any other of the remarkable public men whose achievements have illumined the history of the state, one who has swept all obstacles in the pathway to eminence before him with such apparent ease as our next chief executive. Coming to the gubernatorial office early in middle life from one of the largest and most lucrative law practices in the metropolis of the state, after an election so triumphant as to have been almost unanimous, he will carry with him the good will of the whole people regardless of former animosities and factional attachments.

But whatever fairy godmother may have presided over Mr. Slaton's birth, and however generous she may have been in the gifts of fortune and fame, it would be absurd to insinuate that such a career as he has shaped for himself could have been built on so insubstantial a basis as that of mere luck. That will never explain it. The ambitious youth who seeks an example for emulation in the life of John M. Slaton will find no will-o'-the-wisp, haphazard luck or chance as the open sesame to the mystery of his success, but rather plain work, work prolonged, work of the hardest kind, and pertinacity in aim.

At 20 young Slaton had accomplished more of real hard work than the average man of double his years.

True, he was fortunate in having a father who was one of the best educators in the state, and who, recognizing the genius and capacity for work of his son, set him forward in his studies at an earlier age than most boys. But what other lad of 13 could have graduated at the high school in Atlanta at the head of his class?

And this was only the beginning. After leaving the high school the boy went to work and in three years' time had accumulated sufficient money to pay all of his expenses at the state university, where the next three years were spent. So valuable had he made his services to his employer that he was offered an increase in pay of $50 per month, if he would continue at work rather than go to college.

But it was part of the lad's early matured purpose to secure a good academic education and then to study for the bar. He entered the sophomore class at Athens in the fall of 1883, and from the beginning took a lead in all the activities of the university, social and otherwise. He was a member of the Chi Phi fraternity and of the Phi Kappa literary society. So easily did he assume the head of his class, notwithstanding the extra studies he took on in his pursuit of the master of arts degree, that his classmates said that Jack had the faculty working overtime to keep up with him. His class was the largest that had been at the university up to his time.

Admitted to Bar in 1888.

Immediately after his graduation he entered the law office of Hopkins & Glenn in Atlanta to prepare himself for his chosen profession, and was admitted to the bar in 1888. For a year or two longer he continued to work in the firm, and, in 1890, so capable had he already proved himself in handling difficult litigation that he was taken into partnership by his mentor in the law, the late J. T. Glenn, the firm name being Glenn & Slaton. Subsequently the firm became Glenn, Slaton & Phillips and on the senior partner's death some years ago it was made Slaton & Phillips, the firm of the present day.

With his appearance in the legislature as a member of the house of representatives from Fulton county in 1896, the political career of the future governor may be said to have begun. For seventeen consecutive years he served as a member of the general assembly, thirteen in the house and four in the senate.

The governor-elect's course as a member of the general assembly is so well known to the people of Georgia that it need not be dwelt upon here. For seven years of his service in the house he acted as chairman of the general judiciary committee, the most important committee of that body. During the last four years he was speaker.

So satisfactory was his conduct as the presiding officer of the house that, when he was transferred to the senate in 1909 he was, by general acclamation, chosen president of that branch, and continued in the chair during the four years of his service, with the exception of the brief interim during which he acted as governor.

As a presiding officer it seems to be the consensus of those who sat under him that Mr. Slaton has rarely had an equal and probably never a superior in the history of the state. His decisions were hardly ever brought into question and never once overruled for the entire eight years that he sat in the chair of the two houses.

Decides Sharply Disputed Points.

Often he was called upon to determine sharply disputed points. Factional rancor was at its height and partisan argument had reached the degree of personal animosity. Particularly was this true in the bitterly contested parliamentary battles that arose in the house over the passage of the prohibition law in 1907, and in the senate over the suspension from office of Railroad Commissioner Guyton McLendon by Governor Hoke Smith in 1909. It was generally known on which side of the conflict Mr. Slaton's sympathies lay, but no one ever once thought of impugning the perfect fairness of his rulings from the chair.

How he was elected governor last year, easily distancing both of his competitors without ever leaving his office, while they were exercising themselves strenuously on the stump in various parts of the state, is, of course, fresh in the memory of every body.

Secret Of Slaton's Popularity.

If one were to inquire into the secret of the new governor's popularity he would find it in his rare gifts of social intercourse, the outward expression of a heart that beats warm within him in love for its fellow-man. This warmth of feeling impresses all who meet him, even casual acquaintances; but the impression grows with better knowledge, and his most ardent friends are those who have known him best and longest. That is why his most vociferous rosters last year were found in the ranks of his classmates and college friends. They will always be united for the Jack Slaton of their student days, no matter what the office he may aspire to. That is why fully 90 per cent of those who had served with him in the legislature were also his supporters at the polls. They knew him best. That was all.

If it is the secret of Mr. Slaton's success that is sought, that will be found, after allowing, of course, for his extraordinary gifts of mind and heart, in persistent, hard work. He knows what he wants and he goes right down after it with all his force of mind and body, no matter what the cost in time or labor may be. His power of concentration and directness of aim frequently furnish surprises to his most intimate associates. When he is unraveling the intricacies of a difficult case in his private office he frequently works for hours at a stretch running down authorities, and the shriek of the neighboring dinner whistles altogether fails to reach his ear. Then he will be reminded some time about the middle of the afternoon by his partner or office employes that he has not dined. He takes time to snatch a chicken sandwich and a glass of milk from a nearby lunch counter, and is back at his study again.

Slaton a Man Without Angles.

John M. Slaton is a man without angles. He is, about as nearly as it is possible for a human being to be, exactly what he seems. With friendly feelings towards all, if he has any tricks and devious devices, his intimates have never been able to find them. His modesty is well known. Never for an instant has his head been turned by the honors that have come to him in such rapid succession. If evidence were wanting to show his freedom from vanity and conceit, it might be found in the fact that, when the responsibilities of the governorship were thrust upon him by accident for a brief period about two years ago, he would not think of allowing himself to be called governor, but only acting governor.

If he were himself asked to give an account of his advancement in life he would probably put himself down as the smallest factor in it. He attributes much of his political success to his wife, a woman whose social gifts are as widely recognized as his own, and who is herself a politician of no mean order. Her early start in life he lays at the door of his parents, who took the greatest pains with his early training, and of whom he is very proud. In his political creed Mr. Slaton is a firm believer in individual opportunity, and holds that, generally speaking, that people is best governed which is least governed. He is above all an optimist, having a deeply planted faith in the future of Georgia, and the ability of her children to work out their own destiny along lines of real progress and high civic improvement.

Law Is Hobby Of New Governor.

If he may be said to have a hobby it is for the law. Passionately devoted to his profession, he has never allowed anything to interfere with the business of his life. Politics has so far been his diversion rather than the serious occupation of his mind. He has been trying cases in court almost every day since he was elected. Right up to the moment when he will be compelled to drop his law practice to assume the functions of governor, his time will be occupied with the litigation in which he is interested as counsel. As a result he has built up one of the most lucrative law practices in the state, and it is at great personal sacrifice that he is going into the state's service.

No sketch of the new governor would seem complete, or indeed be satisfactory to him without some mention of his parents, although they, too, stand in no need of introduction to the people of Atlanta. His father, Major W. F. Slaton, was for thirty years superintendent of the public school system of this city and a main factor in its development, having been succeeded in office by his son, the present superintendent, William M. Slaton. Major Slaton is still living in retirement here, one of Atlanta's most highly honored and respected citizens. The mother of the incoming governor, before her marriage Miss Nancy Martin, was a true woman of the old southern school with all the significance which that carries in grace and refinement. She passed out of life some years ago, and her memory is the most deeply cherished possession of her children and friends. The new governor's ancestry on both sides is of the best southern stock.

The attention of Mr. Slaton's admirers has been often called to the part which the figure six seems to play in the revolving cycle of his life. Born in the country in Meriwether county on Christmas day, 1866, he was graduated from the state university in 1886, and he began his political career in the legislature in 1896. In 1916 they are asking, what—

Well, it is too early to forecast what will be in store for the new governor in 1916. That he will make good as governor, his friends have every confidence. That his fortune's star has not deserted him, and will not, they are equally sure. They are also equally positive in the assertion that he has not yet reached the acme of his political course, and that higher honors yet are awaiting him. We shall see.

Wheels Within Wheels.

THE MOTHERS OF MEN.

The keen-eyed twentieth century has rediscovered the mother. In so doing, it has banished the hair given her by the mawkish ballad-monger and the sentimentality of the cheap playwright. For these, it has substituted a more lasting glory. It has trailed and fixed with a mathematical exactness most of the natural laws of motherhood. It has shown the mother that by following them she may become the absolute arbiter of tomorrow. In her hands is the will to decide whether they who are to face the dawn shall be pygmies or builders of pyramids. Surely, these be thoughts more urgent than the tariff or the dictagraph or the cost of living. Considering them, we may forget for a while these lesser issues.

We are led to the subject by a very remarkable essay. It is the work of Miss Ida Lou Barron, of Clinton, Ga. She is a student of the Georgia Normal and Industrial college, at Milledgeville. Her theme is "Trained Motherhood." In accordance with custom, which singles out the best thesis from each branch of the University of Georgia to be read there in commencement week, she read this essay at Athens recently. It is so clear and striking, and it so unusually combines common sense and vision that we reproduce it elsewhere in full. It is a plea for the training of motherhood, not merely in the physical sense, but in the symmetrical, well-rounded meaning that pertains to a glorious, matured womanhood. An indication of how the importance of trained motherhood rests upon the consciences of the men of Georgia is that this young girl's essay received perhaps the greatest ovation of any of those delivered during the week. The men of Georgia recognize the value to the race of mothers who are prepared. That is why many of the most distinguished of them listened to this essay with solemn concentration.

Miss Barron's central argument is quickly grasped. It is that women should be educated as home-makers, that they may make efficient the hearthstone of society; that they should be educated in pedagogy, that they may rightly train children; that they should be educated from the cultural sense, that they may bear sons who can "dream dreams and see visions." She believes the school at Milledgeville is discharging all three of these functions. Certainly, no institution could address its program to a more practical end.

We hear today much talk of eugenics. People who marry, we are told, must be beautiful, that they may produce healthy children. Ancient taints must be detected and eliminated even though it be by blood and tears. The generations who wait at the gates of life must be given a clean bill, a launching free of blot or barnacle.

These ends are important. We believe they can be promoted not alone by preaching the chill and sometimes cruel creed of eugenics, but by training the mother. The girl who knows that in her frail body lurk potential criminals or geniuses or statesmen or degenerates, and who is taught her duty to her children and to society—is likely to evolve into the type of woman who will not, need the teachings of eugenics. The girl whose body is made strong and whose mind is made active and whose outlook is wholesome is not going to choose a profligate mate. That is what is meant by the training of motherhood, or to use a more satisfying term, a training for life.

We have learned finally that men are not what their fathers make them, but what their mothers make them. The old saying was, "The hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world."

That is true, but also not all the truth and more mental than effectual. The truth is that the mother is the prophecy of tomorrow—the creator of tomorrow. Whether we are to have good or poor citizens depends upon—the mother. Whether we are to have a dull or an alert people depends upon—the mother. Let's be frank. We train animals with exquisite care for motherhood. How much care have we been giving the mothers of our race who bring to the sunlight of heaven immortal souls?

The theme Miss Barron chose is more important, after all, than the tariff, than currency reform, than peace or war, than poverty or riches. The right kind of children will rightly solve all these problems. Trained motherhood can produce within a very few generations a race of demigods. That is how important the subject appears to the thoughtful man.

HE'S A MASTER-BUILDER.

The University of Pennsylvania has honored itself by conferring upon George Washington Goethals the degree of doctor of laws. He was one of a batch of nine distinguished men thus singled out at the recent commencement ceremonies.

It is a fine thing to be a doctor of laws. It is a finer thing to be a master-builder. There are so few of them. And Goethals is a master-builder with a thirty-three degree station.

Folk in this country have a vague knowledge of and interest in the Panama canal. Every month, they read with more or less understanding the records of excavations. They shrug their shoulders, every now and then, and make ignorant remarks about the slides at Culebra. When they talk to fore-igners, they inflate their chests and speak proudly of the money we are spending on the isthmus. A good many cities are perfecting their terminal facilities and taking other steps to reap the fruits when finally the Atlantic and the Pacific climb the big locks and mingle their waters.

And possibly one-half of one per cent of all these talkers realize the silent, unassuming genius that has made and is making the canal possible. America is big enough, of course, to have developed another engineer capable of this herculean job. We tried out several, though, and discarded them before pitching on the uncommunicative army officer.

It is to be doubted, too, if any other living engineer could have shown the rare combination of Goethals's technical skill and his almost uncanny executive ability. He is a born ruler of men—ruler, mind you, not slave driver or tyrant. He rules by suggestion and persuasion. The harsh word is unknown to him. But he gets results, for the reason that the men under him know that underlying the courteous demeanor is a steel-ribbed will, and a magical ability to scent out the shirker and the "four-flusher."

So the University of Pennsylvania does well when it makes Goethals a doctor of laws. All in all, the distinction is rather a paltry one, compared to what the man has done. But it is well for the university to let the world know that it appreciates the canal builder. And perhaps when his task is done, an intelligent government can devise some plan for more indelibly identifying him with one of the greatest achievements any nation has ever wrought in history.

CLASS DISTINCTIONS.

Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, gave the students at the University of Georgia and, incidentally, the people of the whole country, some wholesome advice in the baccalaureate address he recently delivered at Athens. Senator Lewis spoke to the theme of the personal equation in government—and the necessity of each man taking an interest in politics, if affairs are to be administered honestly and efficiently. He is well qualified to speak with authority on this subject. Essentially a self-made man, he has come in personal contact with all the rough-and-tumble phases of politics and life. If anyone knows the American people, he should.

One of the most striking of his sentiments was the one in which he deprecated the frequent attempts to inflame class prejudice in this country. He spoke as follows:

Let us be just, and declare as truth that our society is not divided into two parts, each arrayed against the other. It is not true that one class is captained by rich rogues and manned by titans to liberty and enemies to justice. Nor is it true that the poor and the toilers are an army of incendiaries, captained by demagogues, inspired by lawlessness, and directing malicious violence against the prosperous. There are offenders in all classes of citizens but the offenders are the exceptions. It is not true, as some prominent men and publications assert, that all is corruption in public life and defilement in private homes.

The political trouble-maker would have us believe that a certain element in America preys upon the rest of the public. Just how many votes have been won and positions attained by this demagogic appeal, it would be difficult to estimate. As Mr. Lewis says, no such sharp cleavages exist. Essentially, we are all in one boat. There are as many abuses and as much dishonesty in one class as in another. No factor in our national life has a monopoly either of virtue or evil.

A message of this significance needs to be sent throughout America. There is too much nonsensical talk of "class distinctions," of the "upper and bottom rail," of the "rich getting richer and the poor poorer." There are, of course, certain distinctions in America as in every country. It would be futile and profitless to deny them. But they do not carry inherent antagonism with them, and the man who belongs today to one class is apt tomorrow to go into others. Senator Lewis was especially pertinent in his denunciation of the calamity-howler. There was never a time in the history of the country when the chanting of the dirge was less justified.

RECREATION AND CRIME.

Dan Carey, general manager of Atlanta's park system, has prepared an impressive study of the relation of crime and disease to recreation and recreational facilities. His analysis and statistics, comparing Atlanta with other cities of her class, is published elsewhere. Mr. Carey shows that Atlanta is spending less, proportionately, on parks and playgrounds, than many of the more important American municipalities with which she is classified. His arguments and conclusions are well worth the study of the Atlantian who believes in human conservation, and in building the race with tomorrow well in view.

It is needless to indorse the connection Mr. Carey sets up between physical well-being and morality. Physicians and students long ago demonstrated these theories exhaustively. The man and woman who has ample recreational facilities is apt to be a good citizen. They are apt to cultivate a sound point of view which combats the criminal instinct. They are provided with an outlet for surplus energy, and that is one of the recognized needs of civilization. They also make better workers, so that from the standpoint of dollars and cents alone, it pays for cities to give opportunities for play to men and women.

Atlanta has gradually evolved a fine park and playground system and for this much credit is due to the vision and executive ability of Mr. Carey. But it is essential that our policy be liberalized. More money spent intelligently on parks and playgrounds would be among the best investments in the power of the municipality.

CORN CLUB FIRING LINE.

We ought to have 100,000 boys engaged in corn club work in Georgia. That is the belief of Walter G. Cooper, secretary of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. Secretary Cooper credits the boys of the corn clubs with much of the influence of increasing the yield of Georgia to the acre. He is convinced that since 10,000 boys have accomplished so great a transformation, 100,000 boys could do ten times as much. In other words, his gospel is that in the hands of the boys of Georgia rests in a way the agricultural destiny of the state.

That is true, to a great extent. United States farm demonstration agents believe that the activity of the corn club boys is largely responsible for the increased production of corn on part of the adult Georgia farmers, and also for the general tendency toward scientific agriculture. They say that the boys are marvelously quick in absorbing enthusiasm for the business methods of farming and that the owners of nearby farms, seeing before their very eyes the effect of selective methods, themselves are converts to the cause.

Taking advantage of these tendencies, the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce is planning in the early part of December an enlargement of its annual corn show. The list of prizes is to be extended and it is believed the number of entries will be doubled. Business men of Atlanta, impressed by the meaning of diversification and corn culture to every industry in the state, are subscribing liberally. Every penny expended in this direction is sure of tremendous dividends in the future.

There is every reason why the boys should take a leading part in the agricultural redemption of Georgia. It is axiomatic that education makes its greatest conquests among the younger generation. It is then that the individual is more receptive and least subject to the influences of tradition. This fact suggests that it would be an excellent idea if the common schools of Georgia maintained an agricultural instruction adjunct. It would probably be impractical to include a regular agricultural course in the county school curriculum. But the course could be broadened to include enough tuition in the essentials of agriculture to encourage the boy students to pursue inquiries where they could obtain exhaustive information. In this connection, it might not be amiss if the country school curriculum included also an elementary course in domestic science for the benefit of the girls.

Incidentally, the farm demonstration work of the federal department of agriculture is to be thanked for the tremendous impulse it has given to scientific agriculture in Georgia and all the other southern states. It would be difficult to estimate the benefit in dollars and cents, not to mention the higher standard of living, that has accrued to all portions of the south by reason of this feature of government work.

From a body of Arkansas students comes the word that "there is no hell." Yet that state has been known to raise something very like it, at times.

AMERICAN COMMISSION VISITS GREAT STATE FARM IN HUNGARY

By Harvie Jordan. Budapest, May 21. (Special.)—From Italy the joint members of the American and federal commissions, about 100 strong, assembled at Budapest, the splendid old capital of the Huns and Magyars. Here we remained for headquarters during a period of seven days studying the various phases of agricultural, finance and other departments of farm life.

The high officials of the Hungarian government had made every possible preparation for our reception and placed every facility for gathering the information sought at our command. They were thoughtful enough to have the pamphlets on Hungarian agriculture prepared in English, which was especially appreciated, as the Hungarian language is one of the most difficult to speak and translate in the world. It is said to be more difficult than Chinese. There are about twenty different dialects spoken in the nation.

Hungary is one great plain with ranges of the Alps traversing the country in various sections. We crossed over one section of the Alps in our journey from Plume on the Mediterranean to Budapest and passed through a driving snowstorm, which was the first experience of a heavy snowstorm I had ever witnessed in the middle of May.

From a scenic standpoint, the great plains, valleys and mountains form a most picturesque landscape, and to a Georgia farmer is most interesting.

Visit to State Farm. Perhaps the most interesting description of Hungarian agriculture which I can present to the readers of The Constitution will be a short write-up of a visit the members of the commission made to one of the large Hungarian state farms under the patronage and auspices of the officials of the Hungarian government. We were taken by special train from Budapest to Mezohelyes, the name of the big estate we were to inspect. We spent the night at the big hotel headquarters and were ready early the next morning to begin our drive of forty miles over the big farm. Forty beautiful open carriages, with a span of thoroughbred horses to each vehicle, and a coachman in gorgeous livery, received the members of our party at 7:30 and the journey began along wide level roadways, with rows of large shade trees on both sides.

The farm is said to contain 55,000 acres of land, with about 10,000 acres in open pastures, as there are no fences in Hungary, and all the stock grazing has to be under the management of herders and shepherds. The character of the soil on this big estate is a black alluvial, very much the same as that of the best Mississippi delta lands, and is from 12 to 15 feet deep. Hence, the richness of the soil produces magnificent crops of all kinds, which we found growing in the highest state of perfection. We saw thousands of acres planted in wheat, barley, oats, rye, alfalfa, clover, hemp, corn, etc. I have never seen more beautiful fields of wheat, barley and alfalfa anywhere.

The yields per acre of these cereal crops, from 30 to 40 bushels, are much greater than the average yields on our best lands in the great grain belt of the United States. A perfect system of crop valuation is practiced, and in the handling of the business of the farm the latest and most approved scientific economic methods are pursued. These great plains, being practically level, a system of drainage is effected by ditches and in many sections dykes have been built so as to secure irrigation of the fields during any extended period of drought.

As many thousands of head of cattle and horses are bred on the big estate, barnyard manure is the principal fertilizer used. Straw is the bedding used in the great barns, and cattle are kept standing knee deep in this all the time. I saw many great stacks of this manure piled in great heaps 100 by 200 feet long and 8 to 10 feet high, rolling and getting in prime condition to be spread on the fields. In addition to this large quantities of phosphates and potash are also used.

There are 7,000 regular wage employees kept in the fields of this enormous farm, and during harvesting periods the number of employees is increased to 13,000 to 14,000 people.

The surplus grain and other products from the farm are sold in the markets and the reports on the business end of the big plantation indicated a profit of several hundred thousand dollars annually. The operation of every department of the big estate is under the direct supervision of the Hungarian government, and this was only one of a number of large farms operated by the government.

Personality—Napoleon. (From The Indianapolis News.) In a recent, and very interesting, article in the London Nation, discussing the question of personality as presented by Francis Galton in his "Memories," is the following: "The mere sound of Napoleon's title, 'The Emperor,' as he was ushered by his marshal on a scene of state, seems to have set half the audience trembling—some with fear, and some with a sense akin to adoration. Countess Potoka, the first time she saw him in Warsaw, said: 'It seemed to me that he wore an aureole; and immediately afterward she had the feeling that such a being could not possibly die.'" Balzac conveys much the same impression in one of his most charming stories. And it is known that there were thousands of people in France who refused to credit the news of Napoleon's death, or else insisted that, even if he were dead, he would return and reassume the government of France. Even today, one hundred years—almost—after his death, people eagerly read every scrap that is written about the man. His appeal plainly was not simply that of genius, for there have been other geniuses who served the world more greatly, and without a taint of selfishness, in whom men have little interest. The drawing force is that strange one that men have agreed to call personality. Napoleon underestimated his power, for he said that his presence was necessary to stir enthusiasm or rouse fear. That is, no doubt, true to some extent. For his physical presence on the battlefield was worth much—may, in some cases, have been the deciding factor. But thousands who never saw him felt his spell, and even yet he sways the imagination of many people—even of some sober-minded and thoughtful people. Undoubtedly there is a Napoleonic myth, but there is nothing mythical about the stories that tell of his marvelous influence over men, individually and in the mass. The fact is attested by his enemies as well as by his friends. A counterforce of the old regime speaks of it in her memoirs. This, then, is one truth about Napoleon that might be accepted as proved beyond the possibility of dispute. He may not have had character, but he certainly did have personality.

Lawyers' Big Fees. (From The Indianapolis News.) Charles Reade, in his novel, "Hard Cash," has one of the characters therein, Joshua Fulllove, a Yankee, observe that British justice is a prime article, but it comes high. Cecil Chatterton, a newspaper writer is held to be the responsible person for articles published in two British papers, wherein he charges conspiracy and corruption of two high officers of the state for the purpose of benefiting Godfrey Isaacs, who is related to one of them. This is the noted Marconi financial case. And here is a list of the counsel and their fees. For the prosecution: Sir Edward Carson, 1,000 guineas—a guinea is a little more than five dollars—and 100 guineas a day; F. E. Smith, 670 guineas and 65 guineas a day; R. D. Muir, 420 guineas and 45 guineas a day. For the defense: E. Wilda, 350 guineas and 60 guineas a day; Rigby Swift, 250 guineas and 50 guineas a day; E. Purcell, 200 guineas and 40 guineas a day. This means $3,034 in retainer fees for counsel and $378 a day in addition as long as the case continues. Following which, for this is but the beginning, there will be "pips, pins and cheese to come."

Faded Pictures. Only two patient eyes to stare Out of the canvas. All the rest— The warm green gown, the small hands pressed Light in the lap, the braided hair That must have made the sweet, low brow So earnest, centuries ago. When some one saw it change and glow— All faded: Just the eyes burn now.

I dare say people pass and pass Before the blistered little frame, And dingy work without a name Stuck in behind its square of glass. But I, well, I left Raphael Just to come drink these eyes of hers, To think away the stains and blurs As well as by his friends. A counterforce of the old regime speaks of it in her memoirs. This, then, is one truth about Napoleon that might be accepted as proved beyond the possibility of dispute. He may not have had character, but he certainly did have personality.

The whole scheme and purpose of the operation of these big estates, aside from the general benefits to Hungarian agriculture and the annual profits which accrue to the government, is to have a large and ready supply of grain, cattle and horses for the use of the military in times of war. The clouds of war are always hanging on the horizon of these European countries, and Hungary has for centuries been a fighting nation, although the people there now hope for continuous peace, such as they have enjoyed for the past half century.

The Stock Breeding Department. The live stock department of this great estate is fully as interesting as that of the field. The breeding of thoroughbred horses is conducted on an extended scale. Nothing but registered horses of the best English and Arabian types of thoroughbreds, which can perform the best service in the cavalry and artillery departments of the army are bred. This department is under the direct supervision of the military and 700 soldiers are constantly on duty to look after the horse-breeding department. There are 1,200 thoroughbred brood mares on this estate, principally dark bay and chestnut color, the average weight, from 1,100 to 1,200 pounds each. A large number of magnificent thoroughbred stallions are also on this estate, which are kept in large, airy box-stalls, in long, well-built stables, with splendid exercising ground on the outside and a trained soldier as a groom for each animal.

The large barracks for the hundreds of soldiers who attend to these animals are built near the royal stables. The young stallions at the age of 4 years are sent out in various portions of the kingdom for use of the farmers who raise colts. There are now in service for Hungarian farmers horses in different points in the kingdom of 2,400 of these thoroughbred stallions, and last year's service was given to 150,000 mares, the stud fee being nominal, only from 50 cents to $2, according to the means of the farmers. None of these government stallions or mares can be bought for love or money.

The whole system is carried on under the strictest military discipline and the purpose appears to be to improve the breed of horses in the kingdom during times of peace, and also for use of the military.

In the same manner thoroughbred bulls, hogs and sheep are raised and distributed over the kingdom for the use of the farmers at but little expense to them. Great barns containing from 100 to 200 head of fine cows of the dual purpose type, milk and beef, were inspected by our party at several points on our journey through the estate. The average weight of the bulls we saw were from 2,200 to 2,600 pounds each, and were principally of the Swiss type. The cows would weigh from 1,200 to 1,400 pounds each and had the appearance of being good milk cows. There is an average of three gallons per day. There were also many head of cows on the estate, and the young bulls are distributed over the kingdom the same as the stallions.

Plowing Done With Oars. The principal plowing animal in Hungary is the ox, and for this purpose young bulls are raised from the wild Hungarian cows and crossed on the farmers' cows, which gives a large animal that is quick and fast to the plow or wagon—as fast as the average walk of a good horse. I saw one bunch of these semi-wild Hungarian cows and bulls herded on the pastures, and they were all white animals, with enormous horns. I got within 50 yards of one especially fine cow whose horns were said to measure across from tip to tip 7 feet. A work-ox from this breed whose horns we measured with a tape line across from tip to tip was .7 feet 8 inches, which gives some idea of the width a gate or door would have to be for this animal to pass through.

The hogs are large, white, and the 300 brood sows I saw would average in weight from 200 to 400 pounds each. The sheep were also large and presented a fine appearance. There were 700 or more heads of cattle, sheep and hogs on the estate.

The big white Hungarian ox has been in use on the farm as a draft animal for the past 1,500 years, and the type is still being kept pure. Altogether the bigness of this great estate and the perfect system with which every department of the work is done was highly creditable to the Hungarian government.

The plan of aiding the farmers through the use of thoroughbred horses and cattle to improve the live stock industry of the kingdom is matter of great interest. American states might study and utilize with great profit in the same way. We go next into Austria.

Personality—Napoleon. (From The Indianapolis News.) Charles Reade, in his novel, "Hard Cash," has one of the characters therein, Joshua Fulllove, a Yankee, observe that British justice is a prime article, but it comes high. Cecil Chatterton, a newspaper writer is held to be the responsible person for articles published in two British papers, wherein he charges conspiracy and corruption of two high officers of the state for the purpose of benefiting Godfrey Isaacs, who is related to one of them. This is the noted Marconi financial case. And here is a list of the counsel and their fees. For the prosecution: Sir Edward Carson, 1,000 guineas—a guinea is a little more than five dollars—and 100 guineas a day; F. E. Smith, 670 guineas and 65 guineas a day; R. D. Muir, 420 guineas and 45 guineas a day. For the defense: E. Wilda, 350 guineas and 60 guineas a day; Rigby Swift, 250 guineas and 50 guineas a day; E. Purcell, 200 guineas and 40 guineas a day. This means $3,034 in retainer fees for counsel and $378 a day in addition as long as the case continues. Following which, for this is but the beginning, there will be "pips, pins and cheese to come."

Faded Pictures. Only two patient eyes to stare Out of the canvas. All the rest— The warm green gown, the small hands pressed Light in the lap, the braided hair That must have made the sweet, low brow So earnest, centuries ago. When some one saw it change and glow— All faded: Just the eyes burn now.

I dare say people pass and pass Before the blistered little frame, And dingy work without a name Stuck in behind its square of glass. But I, well, I left Raphael Just to come drink these eyes of hers, To think away the stains and blurs As well as by his friends. A counterforce of the old regime speaks of it in her memoirs. This, then, is one truth about Napoleon that might be accepted as proved beyond the possibility of dispute. He may not have had character, but he certainly did have personality.

Atlanta's Wave of Crime Is Easy to Explain: It Is Merely a Case of "The Devil Finding Plenty of Work for Idle Hands to Do"

(By Dan Carey, General Manager of The Atlanta Journal)

In your issue of June 18 there is an article on the front page headed "Crime Increases With Hot Weather" which states that nine homicides, twenty hold-ups and sixty-five burglaries tell the story of Atlanta's police records since May 1. Sweeping over the city a crime wave is establishing a new record for Atlanta. Never before in police annals have conditions been so disorderly during the summer season. Police officials are unable to account for it.

The reason for this condition in Atlanta is so apparent to me that I seize this opportunity to again direct attention to the fact that Atlanta is not doing her duty in the matter of providing wholesome recreation during the leisure hours of her people. Writers who have been discussing the relation of crime to leisure students of criminology and thinkers on sociological questions agree with a fallacy. If the tax rate is so low that it does not permit Atlanta to exist as a modern city, are we to blame then? Surely the tax rate should be made to conform to the expansion in the government. There was once a time when taxes were levied solely for the support of armies and to maintain the officials of state but in those days every man who was a citizen of Atlanta or hired a watchman he carried a lantern instead of having his path well lighted by a White Way and his neighbor formed a bucket brigade and extinguished any fire that might occur. There was no system of public utility and governments generally did not assume the responsibilities which are now so firmly rooted that it would be impossible to do away with them. Now come along public recreation with its demand that it be added to the list of recognized functions of government.

In discussing recreation one must speak necessarily of Chicago which has set the standard. Chicago has these halls been closed. They had been closed because the young people had discovered that the field house was furnishing a better place to dance and because it had set up in the minds of these young people new standards of prospects.

Drink the Cause of Crime

Drink is the cause more or less directly of at least half of the crime of very many industrial accidents of the generation and of the industrial inefficiency that leads to unemployment and low standards of living. It was supposed that an adequate playground system would save only 10 per cent of the cost of drink conservatively estimated to be $7,000,000,000 a year (I believe it would save 25 per cent) this would still be $5,250,000,000 annually enough to maintain our present system of playgrounds for forty years or the adequate system that we have been considering for two years.

Your article on crime states that these homicides in Atlanta were com-

Atlanta is striving for a half million population in 1920. Business and commercial interests are rapidly pushing forward and there is every indication that Atlanta will be the big city of the south that she has always been every indication but one. Mark my words and remember that the time is coming and it is going to come in just a few years when it will be as difficult to sell a piece of real estate in a city that has failed to provide for public education as it would be now to sell a home in a city that has failed to provide for public education.

We need not wait for the future however to show us what the results of our inactivity. Retribution is already upon us and we find it in nine homicides, twenty hold-ups and sixty-five burglaries reported since May 1.

Recently Winder endeavored to issue sewer bonds and after having spent several hundred dollars in the three counties for advertising and the usual legal formalities an irregularity was found and the whole issue of bonds was lost.

By common consent the light hours of each day are divided into eight hours of sleep, eight hours of work and eight hours of leisure. It is a mistake to think that the leisure time is the only time when the individual is free from the pressure of the day. THE NEGRO QUESTION

No matter what phase of sociological work we study our research leads inevitably to the negro in criminology. In the frankness in crime, in delinquency in mental defectiveness in the matter of hereditary disease and in degeneracy the work of the investigator inevitably leads directly into the homes of the negroes. This is plain talk and it is true.

We have tried change camps, we have tried jails, we are maintaining hospitals for him we are operating asylums for him we are employing skilled policemen and detectives to watch after him and yet we create him when he has committed crime we are spending millions of dollars to punish the negro after he has committed big crimes and after his mind is gone but we spend not one cent to prevent him from committing crime nor one penny in corrective or reformative measures.

We have failed in our previous attempts with the negro I say the time has come to try something new and that something new ought to be a thing that has proved of benefit in dealing with similar classes of people in other sections of the country.

No one can be good until his body is clean. There is not a single public bath in the city of Atlanta, no more than 20,000,000 enough to maintain our existing playgrounds for ten years. When we consider also the indirect expense of crime this estimate is certainly moderate.

Stone Castle Chapter Gives Loving Cup to Retiring Regent

The largest and perhaps the best of the many interesting meetings enjoyed by the members of Stone Castle chapter, D. A. R. of Dawson, was the observance of "flag day" at the home of the regent, Mrs. J. S. Lowrey, the occasion marking the close of the two years of her administration.

An artistic arrangement of the national colors in the reception hall and parlor gave a festive air to the interior of the home, cut flowers in the bright hues of red, white and blue enhancing the charming effect. Miss Estia Baldwin welcomed the guests at the door, and punch was served from a flower-laden table by Misses Louise McNulty and Mamie Dean. After singing "America" and repeating the Lord's Prayer in concert the members responded to roll call by relating an incident in their lives of an ancestor.

A star business meeting closed up all unfinished matters and brought about some changes in the bylaws looking to the best interests of the chapter. For the convenience of some of the members the time of meeting was changed from Saturday to the third Thursday of each month. An instrumental duet by Misses Alice Melton and Mamie Dean opened the splendid program arranged by Mrs. F. M. McNulty. Mrs. E. T. Jordan in an entertaining paper told "What Woman Has Done for America." Misses Never and Become Barks was the subject of reading by Miss Alice Melton, and a poem by Mrs. T. D. Lee, "The American Flag," was the closing number.

Officers Elected.
 This being the time to elect officers, the business meeting reported the following names, the secretary casting the vote: Regent, Mrs. J. G. Dean; Vice regent, Mrs. F. M. McNulty; recording secretary, Mrs. R. E. Bell; treasurer, Mrs. M. W. Dozier; historian, Mrs. C. W. Dozier; registrar, Mrs. L. C. Hoyl, Jr., chaplain, Mrs. J. R. Mercer.

In well chosen words and with deep feeling the retiring regent expressed her appreciation of the loyalty and devotion of the chapter which she made her work a pleasure, and presented a beautifully carved gavel of historical interest, it being a part of the mahogany wood from the ill-fated battleship Maine, the silver band bearing an appropriate inscription. Miss Mary Hornady, in behalf of the chapter, voiced the sentiment of each member in loving gratitude for Mrs. Lowrey's splendid service in building up the work of the organization, and in turn presented to her in behalf of the chapter a handsome silver loving cup, which was brought in by Mrs. J. D. Weaver on a tray banked with white and blue flowers. The selection of the gift and the engraving reflected the good taste of Mrs. Weaver. This feature of the meeting was a complete surprise to the regent and her voice was filled with emotion as she made an effort to convey the feelings that welled up out of a full heart.

Cream and cake were served in the social hour that followed, each plate being ornamented with a United States flag to carry out the patriotic color scheme.

In addition to the large number of members present the chapter was pleased to welcome as visitors Mrs. J. N. Watts and Miss Inez Coxwell, of Shellman; Mrs. B. B. Adams, of Sabine Pass, Texas; Mrs. Walter Taylor, of Taylor, Texas; Miss Louise Jordan, of New Orleans; Mrs. Jordan and Miss Elmira Green, of Atlanta; Mrs. T. W. Glaze, of Augusta, and Miss Lucile Norman, of Rocky Ford. The presence of the eight young girl members of the chapter added life and beauty, and the gray-haired mothers, who were added dignity to the organization by having their names enrolled, were the center of loving interest, each younger daughter of the large crowd counting their very presence a benediction.

AUGUSTA VETERANS HEAR OF NEW GETTYSBURG FIELD

The confederate veterans of Augusta are receiving printed information concerning the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg on July 1 to 4 inclusive. No official action has so far been taken by camp 435. It is expected that at least a few of the veterans of that city will attend the celebration but whether or not there will be any old soldiers to attend in a body has not been decided.

From the circular being sent out by Gen. C. Irvine Walker, of Charleston, chairman of the United Confederate Veterans' committee and southern representative, the following facts are of interest and will give some idea of the magnitude of the undertaking. The government and the state of Pennsylvania assume the role of host to over 50,000 veterans of the Union and confederate armies, and from June 28 until Monday morning, July 7, this great army will be hospitably entertained without charge to the veterans. Every care will be taken for his comfort and health, for it is realized that the veterans, with fifty years added to those of his youthful days, are not in such a physical condition as to enable him to withstand the discomforts of rough camp life. So the government will be most careful in the establishment of the great camp and the perfecting of its details.

The arrangements are in charge of two of the most experienced men in the quartermaster's department of the United States army.

Great avenues in the camp will be lined upon each side with wall tents, each of which will be placed eight feet apart and supplied with blankets. The avenues will be lighted by 500 seventy-five-candlepower tungsten lamps. The mind becomes bewildered when endeavoring to absorb the details of this wonderful city of a week as they will be when completed. There will be 6,000 tents, 48,000 cots and blankets, 12,000 tin wash basins, 13,000 candle-burning lanterns, 75,000 wax candles, 7,000 galvanized iron buckets for drinking water, and at least 5,000 more plates.

This means 50,000 enameled plates, 10,000 cups, 50,000 spoons, 50,000 knives and 50,000 forks. These kits alone cost the government $12,000; and the veterans will be permitted to retain them as souvenirs of the celebration. In all probability they will also be given the blankets which will be furnished to each cot.

There will be 400 great army cooking ranges and 400 one-chief cook-houses, four assistant commissaries, ten commissary sergeants, four commissary clerks, 800 cooks, 800 assistant cooks and 130 bakers. There will be used nearly one and a half million pounds of food of various kinds, consisting of meats, cereals, vegetables and bread, coffee and tea. The estimated cost is 30 cents for each ration.

There will be established one great general hospital outside of the camp. Within will be located eighty-seven field hospital and infirmary tents, with 150 army surgeons and nurses. A full ambulance corps will be on duty and every attention paid to those who may require aid.

Three artesian wells are now being driven to supply 800,000 gallons of pure water to the camp daily. The water is pumped to the camp on their train directly into the camp and detrain upon the platform which will be erected.

Within the camp limits will be a temporary railroad station, an express office, telegraph and telephone station, newspaper and stationery store, post office and a store where supplies of tobacco, pipes, etc., may be obtained. In fact, it will be a model city of conveniences for one week.

The camp, town and surroundings will be policed by the state of Pennsylvania constabulary.

There will not be admitted during the time of the celebration to the government reservation any automobiles or vehicles of any description except the army auto ambulances, quartermaster trucks and a few horse-drawn carriages to transport such veterans as are physically incapacitated from walking over the battleground. These carriages will be under the severest restrictions as regards their use.

EVERY WOMAN'S DUTY

The chamber of commerce has opened the path for a cleaner city by inaugurating a social survey of Atlanta.

This survey will touch on sanitation, and it behooves the housekeepers to note carefully the conditions which affect the home.

The outline of the work projected by the health department of the General Federation is given elsewhere. This outline gives an idea of the work which we could do to follow up the social survey.

One most striking need is that of better sanitation in negro quarters. We of the south must realize the necessity of making negro servants keep clean.

As Dr. Weatherford says: "Whether we sit down to dinner in our homes or in a hotel it is a vital question which cannot be lightly passed over, under what sanitary conditions does the negro who cooked and served this meal live?" It is indeed a vital question, the disease and immorality which is bred in filthy quarters of a town cannot be kept there. The contact of servant and mistress is most intimate.

Can meals be sanitary when cooks live under insanitary conditions? Can children be well reared when the morals and tongues of nurses are uncontrolled?

We owe this much to ourselves! Namely, that our servants be better trained. If the altruistic motive which leads a strong woman to help a weaker in times of trouble would not lead us to exercise a maternal care over the health of our servants, the danger of disease to ourselves certainly ought to prompt us to do so.

Do you know where and how your cook lives? Do you know with that filth your wash is contaminated weekly? If not, find out. Maybe your servants clean. It is not only your civic duty, but your duty to your family and yourself to follow the work of the social survey and prevent the spread of disease in the fly months.

CLUB IS ORGANIZED BY WOMEN OF QUITMAN

Enthusiasm is roused in South Georgia Town as Result of Page in Woman's Edition.

That our men were aroused and helped by the great Woman's Edition as well as our women is evidenced by the many letters of co-operation.

Mrs. J. R. Davis is quoted as Mrs. J. R. Davis as saying that the splendid page, devoted to Quitman's club, quickened activities along club lines and hastened the organization and federation of the Woman's club. The men were so pleased, too, and they will organize a board of trade.

Quitman has been almost the only city of its size which had no woman's club, and Mrs. Peterson, Mrs. Fitzpatrick and the whole federation welcome this new asset most heartily.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick spent her girlhood in this famous Hickory Head community, and it has been one of her ambitions to see a big club organized here during her term of office.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick, Mrs. Peterson and Mrs. Brantley, president of the eleventh district, were present on June 16, at a mass meeting of the women of Quitman, and assisted in perfecting the organization of the Woman's club.

Officers are named.

The new club has named Mrs. Jeff Davis, president; Mrs. L. C. Chapman, vice president; Mrs. W. T. Thompson, second vice president; Mrs. J. B. Tillman, secretary; Miss Willis Albritton, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. L. Davidson, treasurer.

There will be departments of civics, home economics, literature, music, the arts, and the club will devote itself mainly to civic work, including garden clubs, street and home improvements.

While There Is Yet Time.

(From The Chicago Record-Herald.)

Young man, if you are beginning to think her nose may turn up just a little too much, or if you sometimes fear she is inclined to be silly, call it off, even at the risk of being consigned a coward.

Slighting Southern Literature

Under this caption a recent number of the Literary Digest discusses a proposal made by Mrs. Toward Randolph Leigh, state historian of the Alabama division, U. D. C., against the use of Professor Branden Matthews' "Introduction to the Study of American Literature" as a text book in the high schools of the south.

The lamentable fact that even Lanier is shown scant justice by northern critics, and our lesser literary lights almost ignored, with the exception of our own Joel Chandler Harris. Perhaps the judgment of the future will reverse much of the partisan criticism of the present. However, that may be, the south itself is much to blame for non-recognition of its own writers.

In how many libraries are Hayne and Timrod and Lanier to be found? How much do our young people know of southern literature?

The Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs have offered a prize for the best essay on "The Soul and Mind of the Southern People as Expressed in Their Literature," the ages of contestants to be between 18 and 25 years.

This was done with the altruistic motive of stimulating interest in and increased knowledge of the poetry, fiction, oratory, essays and history written by southern authors.

The federation district presidents will furnish all detailed information and receive the essays when sent in.

The committee are very anxious to meet some response to their appeal to the young men and women of the state in this contest.

PRIZE GIVEN AT DALTON FOR GEORGIA HISTORY

The Governor John Milledge chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution of Dalton, enjoyed an interesting meeting with Mrs. W. R. Cannon, of Dalton, on the 15th of the month, summer and attracting an excellent attendance.

Those present were highly entertained by one of the O. Henry stories, excellently told by Mrs. T. S. Lucas. It is a telling thing that the last of the benefit entertainment to be given at the Crescent theater Friday, June 13, were discussed. The chapter will have charge of the program on that day, both at the afternoon and evening shows, and a special program, in addition to the motion pictures, will be given by local talent.

The award of the prize of $5 offered by the chapter to the public school pupil making the best grade in Georgia history during the month of June, a consequence of Mrs. Crane's investigations Congressman Nelson, of Wisconsin, introduced a resolution into congress which will be acted upon next December. He is very optimistic as to the attitude of the present administration, but the time is now ripe for housekeepers to show an intelligent interest in this important subject.

Resolution two urges the carrying forward of plans which shall relieve physical defects and shall develop bodies in the young and lead to more wholesome living through medical inspection of schools, employment of school nurses, outdoor schools for the physically weak, and such other means as have proven useful in lessening truancy, decreasing absence on account of illness, and alleviating suffering.

Child Welfare.

The child welfare section, in addition to the work for medical inspection (resolution 2), is specializing on two lines, i. e., birth registration laws and "baby health centers." The former line of work is taken up at the request of the children's bureau, Miss Julia Lathrop preparing her first monograph for distribution by club women; the second, the so-called Iowa plan, originated and the secretary, copyrighted by one of our committee members, Dr. Margaret V. Clark, of Waterloo, Iowa, and she has prepared special circulars for our guidance. Miss Lathrop and Dr. Clark are now in communication with each other, the result of which discussions will be a mammoth baby health center at the conservation exposition to be held in Knoxville in the autumn.

The department is now co-operating with the international congress on school hygiene meeting in Buffalo, N. Y., August 25-31, and I would respectfully call the attention of clubs to the advantages of attending this convention.

Resolution three stands for the union and strengthening of the various governmental agencies relating to pure food, quarantine, vital statistics and human health—a health service devoted exclusively to the conservation of human life and efficiency. Efforts for the passage of this bill have been mentioned and misinterpreted by its detractors, but it is only necessary to ask for it an intelligent reading. A prominent plank in the democratic platform called for such a service, and it is believed that President Wilson is personally interested in securing its summation during his administration.

Resolution four asks for education toward the time when all states will have laws requiring a certificate of freedom from general disease of every applicant for a marriage license. The club women of Vermont have succeeded in passing such a law almost entirely on their own initiative. Iowa has also succeeded; Oklahoma club women failed after a valiant fight, but have only paused for breathing space. California is in the midst of a well-planned campaign.

Much more could be added by way of elaboration and explanation of each of the subjects mentioned herein, but by way of emphasis, I shall recapitulate our outline for the coming year's work: honest enforcement of meat inspection laws; physically sound women failed after a valiant fight, but have only paused for breathing space. California is in the midst of a well-planned campaign.

MEETING OF GOVERNOR PETER EARLY CHAPTER

The Governor Peter Early chapter of Blakely, D. A. R. was most graciously entertained by its regent, Mrs. Walter Thomas, at her hospitable home on Thursday afternoon.

The guests were served a delicious lunch and sandwiches. The program was very informal. Misses Ella Powell and Evelyn DuBose opened with a lovely duet. They also gave several instrumental solos during the afternoon.

The meeting was called to order by its regent, who presided with her usual ease and grace. After the official report, to the pleasure of her entire chapter, the regent gave an able and most beautifully written report of her trip to Washington, to the twenty-second national congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The election of officers was then gone into. Though appointed regent by the state regent for two years, Mrs. Thomas had not been elected as regent before the voting body. With one vote the entire chapter unanimously re-elected her. All other officers were re-elected. Miss Mattie Kelley's vacancy being the only change.

Then Charles Baggs a vote of thanks for her splendid program work during the year.

After the business session, Mrs. Baggs held a historical contest on the romantic figure of naval fame—John Paul Jones. Mesdames Walter Thomas, S. G. Howell, H. H. Hand and Joe Hammett for the prize. Mrs. Howell winning a lovely souvenir of the regent's Washington trip. Many souvenirs, programs and badges of the twenty-second congress were presented to the daughters.

Miss Snow, was given, which proved quite a success. To express appreciation of Mrs. Snow's faithful and efficient service, a gold bracelet was presented to her.

At the April meeting, the chapter's fifth birthday was celebrated at the home of the regent. The entire affair being much enjoyed by all present, each feeling deeply indebted to the gracious hostess for her kind treatment.

The delegates to the state convention held at Augusta, were the regent, Mrs. J. R. Davis, and Mrs. Z. W. Oglesby.

Our chapter was represented at the national congress at Washington by Mrs. Z. W. Oglesby.

On request a page of the Woman's Edition of The Atlanta Constitution was gotten up on short notice.

In January the following officers were elected: Regent, Mrs. J. G. Dean; first vice, Miss Lulu C. Chapman; second vice, Mrs. Agnes Long; recording secretary, Mrs. Albert Tidwell; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Blanche Chapman; treasurer, Mrs. J. M. Christie; historian, Mrs. G. D. Deane.

Board of Management: Mesdames Townsend, Joyd, Williams, Davis, Thompson, Rountree and Gaudin.

The work undertaken by the historical research committee is as follows: Biographies of pioneer settlers, sketches of dead towns, inscriptions on tombstones, natural curiosities of Brooks county, etc.

The Civic League was active during the year. Prizes were awarded for the most pictures of flower yard for both white and colored. Decided improvement was noticed, especially among the colored.

A tree-planting campaign was begun in the early fall in which the city authorities heartily co-operated, and a large number of live oaks were planted throughout the town.

In March the annual spring cleaning took place. The entire street-cleaning force of the city was placed at the disposal of the league until the work was completed.

With the assistance of Mr. Courtright, a park near the depot was beautified with flowers, which otherwise would have remained an objectionable spot.

Additional prizes of $5 each for white and colored were again been offered for the most picturesque yard. Several contestants have already entered.

The financial statement is as follows: Amount on hand at beginning of year, $100.00. Expended during year, $163.89. On hand at present, $163.25.

NEW OFFICERS NAMED BY DOROTHY WALTON CHAP.

The Dorothy Walton chapter, D. A. R. of Dawson, had an interesting meeting on Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Julia Nasworthy. The largest number of members in the history of the chapter were present, and five home made quantities of cut flowers, nasturtiums and sweet peas being used. The meeting was entirely one of business. A number of important questions were discussed.

Following the business meeting a delightful social hour was spent with Mrs. Cannon, refreshments being served.

Mrs. Howard Mobley, of Oakland, Cal., and Mrs. T. S. Lucas were special guests of the chapter, and Mrs. R. M. Herron, one of the chapter members who lives in Chattahoochee, was present at the meeting.

FOR THE ALL-ROUND LIFE, NACOOCHIE SCHOOL STANDS

Nestling in the heart of the Nacoochie valley you will find this institution in which a large number of Georgia women are taking an ever-deepening interest.

Work consists in a central school, conducted on the usual term of nine months, and a system of supplementary school carried on during the summer and early fall.

At Nacoochie Institute there are about 150 pupils who are being trained by five Christian teachers for service to God and their neighbors.

In the five extension schools are gathered from 125 to 150 others un-reached by the central school. Five Sunday schools are conducted, through which 250 pupils, outside the central work, are being reached in a most helpful way.

The Work of the School.

Nacoochie Institute stands for the all-round life. Our effort is to train the hand as well as the head and heart. Every body is required to do actual manual labor.

The boys cut wood, draw water, care for stock, make fires, build roads, dig ditches, or anything a boy may be expected to do in his own home.

All the housework is done by the girls, and they do their own laundry work in a building erected largely through funds contributed by a club of young girls in Augusta.

Athens has equipped a domestic science department, in which where the girls are given an opportunity to learn the essentials of plain cooking. While thus training the hand and heart we believe "As a man thinketh in his heart, so he is." Each day both in dormitory and school room God's Word is given specific time and place.

From the primary grades to the seniors Bible is becoming a familiar textbook.

The Cry of the Mothers.

Nacoochie Institute is trying to answer the cry of the mothers of the hills, who tell us they never had an opportunity to give their children the very best that is to be had. One mother having an offer made to her of a term at school for two of her daughters, turned with the light of self-sacrifice shining in her eyes, said: "And who would have thought that the likes of this would come to the likes of us."

Here are people of the best ancestry; people of magnificent possibilities; people of whose fathers fought for our religious liberty! Shall we now deny them the very privileges they helped in days gone by give to us?

The work of the year gone by ending May 30, has been harmonious and fruitful: Six splendid women of training and culture has this year given themselves to this work. No one can doubt they are here for love of it.

Each one is making a definite sacrifice as the salaries are uniform. Each one receives $25 per month and board.

One of the workers, a woman of wide experience in mountain schools, says after nearly a year at Nacoochie: "I feel that the work here appeals to me as one of large scope. Its strength and dignity have impressed me from the first. I am happier here than I have ever been."

When Mr. Coit was leaving to attend the laymen's convention in Memphis, one called out: "Mr. Coit, tell the people that you left behind a very happy set of workers at Nacoochie!"

HISTORIAN'S REPORT OF HANNAH CLARK CHAPTER

The Hannah Clark chapter of the D. A. R. began the year with a membership of thirty-seven. Early in the year a letter was read by Mrs. Oglesby from Mrs. Brooks, urging the chapter to use "The Song of the Sea," a play written by two Atlantans. The suggestion was favorably received and the music was at once ordered. A very helpful and instructive article of "Sanitation in the Home," by Dr. McMichael, was read by Mrs. McMichael, and was extremely well appreciated by extending a rising vote of thanks.

Mrs. Foster, state regent, made our chapter a visit in January and a reception at the Sembole club rooms was tendered her. Her visit was greatly enjoyed by all, and Mrs. Foster was profuse in her expressions of gratitude for the courtesies extended her.

Our chapter is pleased to be able to keep Artie Blanks, a deserving and grateful boy, in Miss Blanks' school and hope to give him continued assistance until he is graduated.

For the purpose of swelling our treasury, a play composed by Mrs. Susan

STATE PRESIDENT RETURNS HOME

The state president is at home again after an enforced absence of several months spent in Johns Hopkins hospital.

It will give the Georgia division great pleasure to know that she has been restored to health, and to know that she is with us again in person, as well as in heart, which has never been absent from our U. D. C. work.

We would extend the glad hand of helpful greeting, we would rally to her support, and keep the Georgia division in the front ranks of the organization.

EDITOR.

GEORGIA ELECTORS—1789

This patriotic gentleman was the son of Thomas Handley and was born near Sheffield, in Yorkshire, England, February 9, 1752. At the time of his arrival at Savannah, May, 1775, measures were being adopted to resist the oppression of the British government. George Handley promptly enlisted about a year after his arrival, when the assembly of Georgia passed a resolution to raise a battalion of continental troops. He entered the army as captain and rose to the rank of lieutenant colonel.

During the whole struggle for liberty he was actively engaged in South Carolina and Georgia. In several engagements he distinguished himself. After the reduction of Augusta he was sent to Charleston as a prisoner of war.

At the close of the war he married Miss Sarah Howe, a niece of General Elbert, and removed to Augusta. Here he was highly esteemed. Besides being elected sheriff of Richmond county he was repeatedly chosen a member of the legislature. In 1783 he was elected governor of Georgia.

In 1787 he held the office of inspector general of Georgia. He was also commissioner of the state of Franklin; in August, 1789, he was appointed collector of the port of Brunswick by President Washington. He died at Raleigh's hall, then the residence of Hammond, Esq., on September 14, 1789.

Work of Health Department of The General Federation

When one reflects upon the surprising political events of 1912, wherein a man of letters, a seer, a statesman, albeit a college president, has been made president of the United States; and wherein a country school teacher, a prohibitionist, a man of vast intelligence, but without public experience in wire-pulling, has been sent to the United States senate from Tennessee (storm-tossed and disrupted as we are supposed to be politically) the very pessimist must admit that a brighter day has dawned for altruistic work.

This evolution of the altruistic spirit is exemplified in the women's club movement where we still study to improve our minds, but where we are coming more and more to believe that we must translate our mental improvement into deeds of human helpfulness if we would have our organizations keep step with our country's economic and sociological progress.

The health department of the General Federation of Women's clubs seeks to take its place in this progressive march by furnishing leadership, for club women, in national health movements and as far as possible, serving as a clearing house for ideas, along the most health activities, which may be adapted to the needs of local situations.

The San Francisco Resolutions.

During the present term the general federation health department is issuing a series of cumulative reports in club health work by endeavoring to lead the states to link their work with the health resolutions adopted at the San Francisco biennial. In the past few years Mrs. Moore and now Mrs. Pennsylvania, as president, have been awakening our consciousness concerning the subsequent treatment of the resolutions which we adopt, and (as Miss Julia Lawlor expresses it) "so often merrily flutter off to something else."

I therefore beg to briefly summarize these San Francisco resolutions, with some explanations, which I hope will serve to earn for them favorable consideration of club women:

Resolution one begs an intelligent interest in the honest enforcement of food and drug act, in which connection I would call special attention to the articles on meat inspection which

State Normal School Obtaining Wonderful Results From Small Investment

From left to right, top row: The faculty grouped in front of one of the buildings; the "Old Rock College" building, known later as Gilmer Hall, the first building of the school, having been in use for over sixty years; Class of 1913. Middle Row: The class in carpentry, wand drill by students, domestic science and cooking class. Bottom row: Country school pupils eating noon lunch prepared by themselves, children of Muscogee Practice school at work in garden, dairy barns.

By D. G. Bickers.
Athens, Ga., June 21—(Special).—
The largest return for the smallest investment any state ever made, is one way a friend of the State Normal school at Athens expresses his opinion of the institution.
With more students enrolled than are enrolled in any other institution of the state, with one exception, the State Normal has had less invested in permanent plant by the state than any other institution.
There are seven buildings—principal structures on the campus. Only one of them was built by the state. Gilmer Hall was a gift from the University of Georgia. Winnie Davis Memorial hall was given by the Daughters of the Confederacy of the state. The Smith building was given by Colonel James M. Smith, of Oglethorpe, and when it was burned down was replaced by him, the Muscogee Practice school was a gift from Mr. Peabody; the library building was given by Andrew Carnegie.

the "country school" building was put up by Clarke county.
The plant is by experts variously estimated worth from $300,000 to $500,000. Just $47,500 is all that has ever been appropriated by the state to put in permanent additions to this place. The dining hall and the dairy are about all that have been made possible by state aid. The state has, of course, appropriated annually to the maintenance of the institution, but has done next to nothing to investing in the plant or meeting the needs of the school in equipment.
And the State Normal school at Athens is the only school in the state which is exclusively training teachers for the common schools and high schools.
Nearly 1,000 Students.
There are eight hundred enrolled at the State Normal this year. There are 140 in the practice school; there are 40 in the "country school".
There have been in the nineteen years of the school's history just 10, 555 teacher-students enrolled. Ninety-eight per cent of the students who follow a course, go out to teach in the common schools and public schools, and about seventy-five per cent teach in the rural schools.

The first of this year there were 138 calls for teachers on file in President Pound's office; this month there are 272 requests from communities, boards and agencies for teachers. In one or two instances there are requests for a principal and an entire corps of teachers. The state loses each year 2,500 teachers. The state's only exclusive, especial teacher-training institution with its present equipment cannot turn out more than 250 graduated teachers a year.
Unique Features of Work.
There are a number of unique features of the work of the State Normal school. It is the pioneer in the United States in systematic work along lines of rural economics. Conditions in general have been much studied; the Georgia club at the State Normal School of Georgia, however, is the first organization to go into the particular section, the special county of the state, which is to be supplied with teachers and study the needs and conditions in that county.

Practically every state in the union has begun or will soon begin work along the lines initiated by Dr. Branson in the Georgia clubs, and pursued in the newly established chair of rural economics now occupied by Dr. Branson—and Georgia has led them all, through her State Normal school.
This is the only school for teacher training which has in connection with it a practice school which is a model of the graded system and also a country school. The Muscogee practice school is a seven-grade school in which the demonstration of the teacher-training is made. Every student of this school has his garden plot, and actual work is done through the year in the open; the shops and drawing class rooms and gymnasium are as regularly employed as the recitations.

The country school is unique: It is the distinct school for Clarke county, located on the State Normal school grounds; the county employs the teachers; there is absolutely nothing furnished that any country school could not have—and with this condition it is made a model.
Thus like the pupils of old Squeers in Dickens' story only in the ideal sense the teacher-students of the State Normal learn the methods of teaching, learn the methods of manual training, of agriculture, and their theoretical psychology and go home directly into the practice school and apply the principles.
Course in Family Nursing.
The State Normal is the first institution to put on a course in nursing—the trained nurse making daily examinations and caring for the young women who need her care and training them in actual family nursing.

The "round table" is one of the features of the school—instigated by Professor D. L. Earnest. Each Saturday evening a student reads a complete classic and three or four hundred members of the society discuss it informally.
The library has only 6,000 volumes. Where in other school libraries in the state there are five times as many volumes. There were last month twenty-one volumes a day taken out; there were in April 2,221 books taken out by students of the State Normal school. The entire library—the number of volumes being considered—is read over more than four times each year.
High Standard Maintained.
Academic work, finishing and perfecting in the branches teachers are expected to teach, is kept at a high standard, and the manual training, agricultural work, domestic science, and kindred lines are being brought out to meet the needs of the present-day school system. More than two hundred teachers each year go into every county of Georgia from the State Normal school and begin the agricultural training of the boys and girls—reaching thousands of these young people where considerably fewer than a hundred young men can take advantage of the agricultural college courses.

The girls of the State Normal school are taught the things to teach. They are taught the methods of teaching; they are trained in the principles of the profession. They are no less competently and thoroughly trained in handicrafts, in carpentry and drawing, pottery and basketry, sewing and cooking, dairy work and house-keeping, in actual and comprehensive agriculture and gardening.
It is believed by the leaders in the school that these vocational lines are not to be neglected in the schools of the state into which the graduates

The Keynote of Modern Business Is "Service"

ANNUAL EXCURSION OF THE CITY SALESMEN ASSOCIATION

Popular Event Will Be Pulled Off Next Friday—Large Crowds Going to Isle of Palms and Big Time Is Sure—Wholesalers Make Their Arrangements.

The big event of the year amongst the men who do their traveling in the city of Atlanta will be pulled off next Friday. This is the annual excursion of the City Salesmen's association. For the past twenty years the association has conducted an excursion of this nature and the results have been such that now it is an outing that is looked forward to by large numbers of the best people in the city as an opportunity for one of the very best of holidays with a bunch of the very best of fellows along to see that everybody has a good time and the best of attention.

This year the association has selected the Isle of Palms, at Charleston, S. C., as the point to which they will turn their faces during the week of the excursion. The week of the excursion will be a week of rest and invigorating sea waves for a week or so. To anybody that knows Charleston the wisdom of their choice is at once apparent and to those who don't, the best advice is to go with the association and see. It will be the best opportunity for a real vacation under ideal circumstances that the season will offer.

But if every city salesman is to go it is necessary to make arrangements for the conduct of business in the city while they are away. So the wholesale houses who employ them agree not to go after business for that one week. Of course it is necessary to supply a few staples which will be done in response to phone calls, but not except in cases where it is absolutely necessary.

The following is the agreement which the wholesale and manufacturing houses signed, together with the names of those who signed:

"The week of June 27 to July 4 being the time selected for operating the annual excursion of the City Salesmen's association, we, the undersigned jobbers and manufacturers agree that our city salesmen shall have this week for their vacation and that none will be allowed to solicit the city trade during the time mentioned.

"E. L. Adams company, Walker Brothers company, Piedmont Distinctive company, Southern Paint and Varnish works, Parlan Paint company, A. F. Campbell & Co., H. J. Sinker company, Sherwin & Morphe, Kelley Brothers company, Southern Coffee and Spice mills, A. P. Morgan Grain company, Franklin Grocery company, A. McD. Wilson, Chomsky Grocery company, Marrett Grocery company, Browder-Mangor company, Fain & Stamps, W. S. Duncan company, Union Produce company, M. Abelman, L. & I. Tonenbaum, Brewer Candy company, Conley & Ennis, Harry L. Schweitzer, Giesby Grocery company, D. Frasier company, Braan Brothers, Emmet, Toney & Co., G. A. & F. Grocery company, W. L. & W. M. Fain, T. H. Brooke & Co., Balser Goldberg company, McCord-Stewart company, Frank E. Block company, Wight-Davis company, Galliard & Kendrick, the A. Fuzazzi company, Inc., Fidelity Fruit and Produce company, J. J. Barnes-Pain company, Lowry Fruit and Produce company, T. J. Gaudin & Co., Porter Brothers, Nell Brothers, McCullough Brothers, Williams-Thompson company, Ballard & Holloway, Blanton & Co., E. Lichtenstein, Dixie Pickle and Preserving company, Jones Brothers & Co., National Biscuit company and the Loose Wiles Biscuit company."

In addition to this list of names of jobbers and manufacturers the following letter has been sent out by the Retail Grocers and Butchers' association. It is addressed to all retail grocers and butchers in Atlanta and vicinity and reads as follows:

"The city salesmen will be off on their annual excursion soon. They desire your co-operation to make this a success; we know you will lend them the same help and co-operation they, the salesmen, have at all times shown the retailer.

"This you can do by placing your orders before they go, and by telephoning any orders you may have during their absence.

"We do not suppose any firm will be so selfish as to send out salesmen during the absence from the city of the other salesmen. But, if such firm should do so, co-operate with your friends by giving only telephone orders.

"Trusting you will do all in your power to demonstrate the appreciation we know you feel for the City Salesmen's association, we beg to remain very truly yours.

"O. T. CAMP, President, J. P. EVE, Secretary."

Here's a good time for the boys of the C. S. A. We know they deserve it and wish that they may get it in good measure!

Some Workers FOR THE

Southern Merchants' Covention ATLANTA--TWO WEEKS--AUGUST 4-16

No. 2. Col. Willis E. Ragan

One of the secrets of the success of the Southern Merchants' convention, which will be held here the first two weeks in August, will undoubtedly be found in the men who have been selected to bear the brunt of the work on the committees and in the different places to which they have been assigned.

Colonel Willis E. Ragan, of the firm of Ragan-Malone company, wholesale dry goods and notions, is a vice chairman of the convention and also chairman of the finance and entertainment committees.

Colonel Ragan is one of the men whose solid business ideals have helped to make the backbone on which Atlanta has depended for her mainstay in the time of her earlier struggles as well as in her prosperity. He is of that type of business man who recognizes the value of rapid growth, while at the same time he keeps a careful finger on the ebullient pulse of the country and realizes at all times that the man with a level head acts accordingly to conditions as he finds them.

Speaking of the convention, Colonel Ragan said recently:

"Of course there are many features which will be incorporated in the convention which will prove exceedingly attractive to the visiting merchants. But one of the most attractive features to my mind is the date which we have chosen to hold it on. First of all, it was a good idea to hold it for two weeks instead of one, as we did last year. I know of many merchants who have already intimated to me that they are going to take advantage of the second week and come, whereas they would not have been able to leave their business the first week in the month. This fact alone ought to bring a considerable number here who could not possibly come otherwise. Then the time of the year at which we will hold the convention is particularly suitable. You see it is just before the busy fall season for the merchants commences. They will have a nice time to come here, enjoy the convention and get back to their business in time for the sales and collections of the fall season.

"You know, of course, that we are going to have a large number of merchants here to speak. It is our intention to get the majority of the speakers from among the merchants themselves. We anticipate having a hundred merchants here who will give five or ten-minute talks. These men will be better able to voice the results of practical experience and to start profitable discussions than outside speakers.

"It will be a splendid educational occasion to the merchant who will come here, take part in the convention and the discussions and go home with the memory of them going in his mind. He will have the benefit of a magnificent business course, without any of its inconveniences, will enjoy a good time while here, and probably benefit or all, will go home with the benefits strong in his mind at exactly the right time of the year for him to put them into execution."

CONSOLIDATION OF NECKWEAR HOUSES

Two Big Atlanta Manufacturing Houses Are Now Consolidated Under "All Star" Brand.

Atlanta has been known for some years as the home of some of the best and most progressive neckwear and suspender factories in the country. The name "Atlanta" on neckwear, suspenders, garters and belts has been carried over many states by the firms of the Warren Manufacturing company and the Robinson Neckwear company. These two houses have both won splendid reputations for the goods they make and have done splendid work to advertise Atlanta as a manufacturing city. But in the future there will be one house instead of two and it will be known as the "All Star" Manufacturing company. This consolidation was finally consummated last week and the new order goes into effect at once. The officers of the new company will be W. O. Steele, president and manager, and M. Minor, vice president and secretary-treasurer. The offices and plant will be those formerly occupied by the Robinson company, they being the more commodious of the two.

Both officers of the company are men who are perfectly adapted to their respective positions. They have formerly occupied the same offices with the Warren Manufacturing company and it is undoubted that the new company will continue to grow and add much new trade and new territory to their lists.

This consolidation marks an important step in the growth of Atlanta as a manufacturing center and under the new arrangements the "All Star Manufacturing company" will do much to add still further fame to the name "Atlanta" on high-class manufactured goods.

WARD IS PROSPEROUS. As Checks Roll In Dry Goods Man Tells of Collections.

When the Firing Line man called on President W. A. Ward, of the Ward-Truitt company, last week, he found the general dry goods man busy opening a batch of mail. As it happened to be a rainy day he had to do up collections, and Mr. Ward didn't answer until he had opened five letters. Then he smiled and said:

"Out of these five letters I got four checks. That doesn't look like bad collections, does it?"

Later Mr. Ward said:

"Collections are certainly improving a lot. We have had some pretty slow collecting at one time this year, but their dry goods account, I guess it is funny thing, but I think the merchants pay every other bill before their dry goods account. I guess it is a matter of habit, as we have been accustomed to granting long-time credit. But it will have to stop, as business is done on such a narrow margin nowadays that we simply cannot allow extension after extension. Nowadays, when a man comes to open an account with us, I let him understand at once that when his bill comes due we will expect and demand a settlement of some sort, and if he hasn't the cash right at hand, he must at least make note arrangements or something of the kind. It is only right, too, and the wise merchant sees our point that we can give him better service and better goods at lower prices by doing this than we could otherwise."

In Memoriam.

The many friends of O. W. Stamps, of Fain & Stamps, are offering their heartfelt sympathies on the death of his mother, Mrs. J. R. Stamp.

Mrs. Stamps passed away at her home five miles from Newnan, Ga., last Friday morning. She was a fine woman of the type which has made Georgia the magnificently respected state that it is.

The funeral took place on Saturday at 10:30 a. m., and besides Mr. Stamps the following members of the force at Fain & Stamps were present: J. C. Owens, Cliff Edwards, W. S. Gaston, W. A. Quarles, W. Y. Bailey and W. T. Cuipepper.

Marietta, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—Ye who listen with credulity to the whispers of fancy, lend a sympathetic ear to the tale of woe that comes from a nearby town in Georgia. This tale is but one, each town and each village has one or more who can tell the same tale. Not long ago a nicely dressed stranger came into the town, and went to the largest banker there and told him that he was desirous of interesting him in some life insurance stock, that it was a great investment and would yield large returns. The banker said he did not want to buy at all. The man then said: "Will you kindly give me a few names of some prominent men in your town that are looking for good investments?" The banker said, "Yes, and wrote out a list of six names. These names happened to be men who carried good balances in his bank, so he might as well have shown him the personal ledger and let the stranger pick them. The man selling the stock then said: "To ease I got up a select list of stockholders here would you accept a place on the directorate of the company and take some stock as we want to have the stock widely distributed and want some very select and prominent bankers on the board?"

The banker then said: "Well, in order to get this going here and to allow these citizens to get some of the good things of life, will you accept five shares as a gift and head the list?" The banker said, "Yes."

Then the stranger began to call on the other men. He sold them stock in varying amounts, at the price of $40 per share, stating that on the first of the next month the stock would be advanced $5 per share. They bit, they got money, for at that date this same stock was selling in the home market of the company by brokers at $45.00 per share.

Now this is really a crime, for by false statements, this man took from the community over one thousand dollars and the men who bought got nothing.

Whenever a certain criminal system is perfected then the lawmakers of a state in session enact a law covering that class of crime. In other words, crime must necessarily come first, and law is simply the written and expressed decision of the masses of people stating that such a thing shall not be done. It is a commandment, and those that have been guilty of practicing such specified evil, or wrongful acts must stop, or pay the penalty. The law is thus to protect those who, by their weakness, show their inability to protect themselves and have become victims of certain wrongs and predatory acts of those who are evil doers, thieves, and liars.

One hundred years ago there was no need whatever for a blue sky law, for the class of crime that this law aims directly at was almost unknown, and was not practiced. Today this crime is practiced to such a gigantic extent that the United States government, by that great power, "fraudulent use of the mails," saves the public millions each year, and still the postoffice department states that $120,000,000 was lost to the people of the United States by fraudulent schemes last year. The federal government is limited in power by states rights, and in its limited capacity is unable to get track of many of these kind of crooks.

The crime of selling fake stocks, bonds and securities under the assumed name of investments, that are really nothing in the world but skin games, has become a menace to all legitimate business and there is now a demand for a law to stop it.

One of the most carefully drawn laws to punish this class of criminals and stop this crime will be presented in the form of a bill at this coming session of the legislature. Aimed directly at this crime, the blue sky law will in no manner affect any kind of honest legitimate business. No honest legitimate business fears the law for he who is conducting such a business is of the great mass of the people that stand for right and honesty and make laws. This law will prevent

S. CAROLINA FIRM GOES TO NEW STORE

Leading Department Store of Sharon, S. C., Goes Into New and Larger Quarters.

The Hill Banking and Mercantile company of Sharon, S. C., will move into their new store on September 1. When this building is completed it will be one of the handsomest and best equipped stores in the south. It is three stories and a basement in size, with a floor space of 65x124.5. This modern department store will be a great thing for Mr. Hill's many customers and friends. Everything from a needle to an automobile can be found on display there, with the right kind of prices. Mr. Hill is yet a young man, being only 37 years of age, and his success as a merchant has been phenomenal. Starting in business in 1893, his first year's sales totaled $25,000. Today he is doing over $200,000.

Mr. Hill has a glad hand and a happy smile for all the traveling people. This story of his expansion comes to The Constitution Firing Line through Percy W. Harris, who sells the famous "Aragon" shirts for the A. M. Robinson company. Mr. Harris has also promised to send in a photo of the new building when it is complete.

NOTES OF THE CITY SALESMEN

The C. S. A. has a membership of 16,000. It is a membership of nearly all lines of wholesale and manufacturing business in Atlanta.

B. C. Fowler of the Capital City Tobacco company, was out yesterday morning. Bryan says his increased family has put him to work in earnest, and between nursing the baby and selling cigars he is a very busy man.

Paul E. Pause is one of the most faithful members connected with the C. S. A. Paul is a very handsome bachelor, a fine fellow, and we wonder why he has not been caught in some fair maiden's net long before this.

Prospects for the excursion grow brighter every day, and if the weather is favorable we will have a large crowd of jolly merry-makers. The people who go on this trip are composed of our best citizens, who go for a week's pleasure, and everybody is anxious to see everybody else have a good time. The railroad people take particular care of us, and we have been so fortunate as to never have had an accident on one of these trips, for which we are duly thankful.

The Grawling-Spaulding company report an unusually nice batch of orders received this week from O. E. Reddy. Mr. Reddy is on the southeast Georgia territory and makes his home in Griffin. He is sending in the kind of business that is most appreciated of all—all the old business and plenty of new accounts.

They're coming. No doubt about that. They're a-writing letters about it. They're saying they'll be here and they're looking for a glorious good time.

We're on the job to fix things so they'll have it, too.

Speaking, you understand, of the SOUTHERN MERCHANTS CONVENTION, first two weeks of August.

The merchant who misses this stunt is going to be sorry all year. How come? Because it's the opportunity of his life to get next to a great bunch of New Ideas. If you don't hustle out and find out how the other fellows are doing things you'll get rusty and sore and out-of-date. And that's the ONE thing you can't afford.

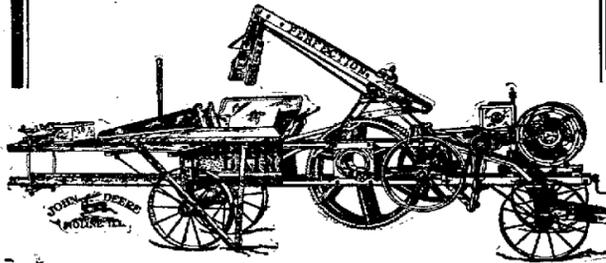

Come on, it's going to be a Great Big Thing for every Southern merchant.

TRUITT TELLS OF S. GEORGIA CROPS

Alt Truitt, of the Ward-Truitt company, has just returned from an automobile trip through southwest Georgia and he is anxious to let everybody know what splendid crop prospects there are in that part of the state. He phoned into this office as soon as he got to the city, and said: "Say, I want you to tell through your columns tomorrow that Alt Truitt is just back from a week's trip through southwest Georgia by automobile, and that the best thing I did on the trip was to look at the crops. I tell you, they are just grand, and I never saw anything like it. They are shipping cantaloupes, melons and peaches now, and then the grain! It is the prettiest you ever saw. Oats are magnificent, wheat looks like the golden west, and corn—why, it will be the record crop of the country in the last twenty years. The country is going to raise the biggest crop ever, in my firm belief, and I want everybody to know it. The people there are enthusiastic and optimistic, and they are going to get the most out of the Constitution Firing Line man what you see here, and let him tell everybody that we are expecting to make the biggest and best crop we ever did. So you see, I am telling you what I saw and what they said, and you can do what you like with it."

CHILE CON CARNE

GET IT WHILE IT'S HOT

C. E. Harley, the South Carolina salesman for the Consolidated Paper company, was in the house this week. He reports conditions good in the Palmetto State and that he will be back there Monday to continue his big business.

W. H. Haley, the Alabama man for Brown, Ferryman & Greene company, was in for a day or two this week. He reports excellent prospects all through his territory and promises big business there this fall.

The M. C. Kiser company report that they are lining up in the expectation of some extra big business this fall and that the crop prospects are such as to justify them in making preparations for a huge trade.

Russell E. Richards, of the S. P. Richards company, has been on his vacation all this week. He is expected back the latter part of the week.

Ward-Truitt company had the pleasure of receiving a nice order from Texas the past week. Not only were they pleased to see that their goods were spreading so far, but the order also carried check with it, and so was particularly welcome.

E. L. Adams, of the E. L. Adams company, spent the week in Cincinnati, Ohio, attending the National Credit Men's association convention. He returns home today.

Peroy W. Harris, traveling in South Carolina for the A. M. Robinson company, has had excellent business on his trip. He has been gone about five weeks and while the first one was good, each succeeding week has shown a substantial improvement.

Sales Manager L. B. Robinson, of the A. M. Robinson company, sold a nice bill of 100 dozen shirts in the house yesterday. The buyer was an Atlanta merchant.

The Ins this week with the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company are D. L. Lassiter and J. S. Cheek. The company report good conditions and prospects for fall business improving every week. They state that their business is quite good, but that is nothing unusual because they have both the right merchandise and the right prices.

Manager T. N. Blinder, of the Blinder Frame Manufacturing company, wants everybody to understand that he is still very much in business. He states that since their fire of a few months ago some people seem to think they have gone out of business. But this is far from the truth, and as a matter of fact they are now doing more business than ever before.

GEISER MACHINERY GAINS POPULARITY

Line of Good Machinery Grows More Popular Every Week, Says Malsby.

The Malsby Machinery company, in speaking of machinery, remarked last week that this line was certainly one that grew more popular every week. This line includes gasoline engines, steam engines, saw mills, threshers, etc., and the Malsby company have handled them ever since 1901. In all that time they have never had a complaint, they say, and this is certainly some record.

The Malsby company keeps a heavy stock of these machines on hand and state that they ship them out with a regularity that is astonishing and at the same time the trade shows a steady growth that is the right kind for good business.

A SILK HAT STORY.

C. D. Dickinson Tells a Story of an Early Experience.

C. D. Dickinson, the ever popular and versatile salesman with the Brown, Ferryman & Greene company was in a reminiscent mood last Friday. He was found on the third floor of the big hat house on N. Pryor street working over some gloves which he was getting ready for shipment while resting his feet on a stool.

"I remember," said he, "when I first started out on the road. Believe me, I was proud of myself. Some day I'll tell you what I did on my first trip of all. But I'm thinking now of an experience I had after I had been on the job about six months. The head of the concern I was working for then, was a mighty fine gentleman and he believed in having his salesmen looking just as classy as he knew how. Well, he went up to New York on a trip and came back with some new ideas. One was, that to get the proper appearance of dignity amongst us boys on the road, we should wear silk hats and frock coats. So he went ahead and fitted us all out in this regalia. I started out bright and early one Monday morning in all the glory of this wonderful apparel. I stepped up to board my train and—wow—my hat! The entrances to the cars in those days were much lower than they are now, and we generally had to stoop. I forgot to. When I picked up my hat from under the wheels of the car and with all the accumulated soot and dust and muddy water of the tracks on it, the only thing I wanted was the hat box to put it in. After that I always wore an ordinary workday hat and never got into more trouble."

Al N. Greene interrupted here and said: "Never got into more trouble? O, no, of course not. Tell about that time you had on that New Waterbury watch—"

"That's about enough from you," broke in Mr. Dickinson. "One story is enough at a time and, anyway, it wasn't a Waterbury. It was a solid gold, twenty-seven jewel chest cover—"

But a customer came in just then, and, of course, the story telling had to stop.

TURKEYS LESS THAN HENS

McMillan Tells Some Facts About Produce Situation.

W. V. McMillan, proprietor of the McMillan Produce company, told some interesting facts about the present situation in the country produce business the other day.

"There are some of the most peculiar conditions at present existing that I have ever seen in this business," said Mr. McMillan.

"For instance, turkeys are cheaper than hens. They are actually bringing considerably less per pound than hens, and this is one thing I have never before seen or heard of in the business."

"Then look at the potato situation. Why up in Milwaukee the other day five carloads of potatoes were simply dumped. They just had no value at all because there have been so many raised that they have been unable to do anything with them."

"I tell you the situation of the produce business in this country is mighty queer, and it is one thing I can tell you that is going to happen next is a clever fellow."

ATLANTA GETS NEW WHOLESALE FISH CO.

Terry Packing Co. Establishing Plant on Peters Street With Railroad Trackage.

The Terry Packing company, a corporation of South Carolina, doing a wholesale fish and oyster business, with branches at Charleston, Columbia, Augusta, Savannah and connections with fisheries on the coast of New Jersey, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida, has opened a wholesale branch in Atlanta.

In order to get trackage and adequate railroad facilities for the prompt dispatch of their perishables, they have leased a two-story structure comprising 12,000 square feet, at 348-356 Peters street. Contractors are already at work fitting soles, concrete floors and installing refrigerators capable of storing five carloads of fish and two carloads of oysters. This firm will get their fish in their own refrigerator cars from their fisheries on the coast, by the quickest possible means, hence retailers who heretofore got fish in barrel lots from coast-wise points, will be in position to get fresh supplies from solid refrigerator cars unloaded here. This firm will also distribute a large amount of their receipts by express all through Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee and larger western cities, as far as Chicago.

It is stated that dealers in towns like Birmingham, Chattanooga, Montgomery and other cities heretofore paying $3 to $4 per barrel transportation charges for fish in single barrel lots will now be able to get them from Atlanta free, from refrigerator cars not only twenty to thirty hours sooner but at a saving of from $1 to $3 per barrel.

The manager of this enterprise invites all dealers and others interested to inspect their modern and sanitary plant as soon as it is completed. It is said that this will be the most up-to-date and sanitary plant of its kind in the southern states.

Captain Frank S. Terry, the president of the Terry Packing company, has his headquarters in Columbia, S. C., where he has always taken an active interest in civic affairs, being at one time president of the Columbia Chamber of Commerce. The Charleston branch, however, is the original house, and was established by Captain Terry's grandfather in 1837, and is the oldest enterprise of its kind in the south, and probably the oldest in this country, having remained exclusively under the management of the Terry family for nearly a century.

W. M. Lesley, the manager of the Georgia Fish company, the name of the Atlanta branch, Mr. Lesley has been for seven years manager of the Columbia branch, and he is also secretary of the mother company. Mr. Lesley is a man of unusual ability, and has had wide experience in the fish-packing industry.

Captain Terry made two visits to Atlanta recently, during which visits he was convinced that Atlanta was a good field for his business, not only locally, but afforded great advantages as a distributing point.

Mr. Lesley expects in a very few years to make this the largest of the Terry Packing company's branches. The moving of this enterprise to Atlanta is due directly to the efforts of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

A VISITING U. C. T. TELLS OF BUSINESS

S. G. King, who is at present in Atlanta representing his firm, the Wells & Richardson company, of Burlington, Vt., writes the following note to The Constitution Firing Line, telling of his business experiences of the past week while in Atlanta.

Atlanta, Ga., June 31, 1913.

Dear Sir:—If any there be who are disposed to listen to the "calamity song" that we sometimes hear from the pessimist, I would be glad to furnish herewith a little food for reflection, for it seems to me to be a sufficient sign to cure the malady.

I have spent the past week working the retail drug trade in Atlanta, and my business has been a record-breaking—the largest in volume I have ever had with my house, and I am more than glad to be able to report this fact as showing that the business is here—in Atlanta, in Georgia and in the south. Let's smile and dig for business and it will come. Yours with the smile, S. G. KING.

SALESMAN ADDY GETS GOOD OPENING BILL

Salesman J. Geta Addy, with the M. C. Kiser shoe company, had the pleasure of placing a handy opening bill last week. It totaled $1,500 and checked both his house and his office. "J. Ragan-Malone Co. Break Their Record for the Year.

Walter C. Barnwell, of the Ragan-Malone company, was feeling exceptionally good this week on account of a bill of goods they had sold in the house during the week.

This order was from a firm which is located many hundreds of miles from Atlanta, and there are at least six wholesale markets much nearer. The fact that Atlanta is getting more and more business from the further territories is a big factor of encouragement for the future.

Another fact about this bill which made Mr. Barnwell smile was the fact that it is the largest single bill his firm has sold this year, totalling over $1,500. It was about evenly divided between the dry goods and a notion departments, but, which is a little unusual, was a little in favor of the notion part of the house. Another point which tickled Mr. Barnwell is, he is buyer of notions for the house.

Sam Saltzman, with the Hirschberg company, is in for a few days from his North Carolina territory. He will go back Monday.

He reports that prospects for fall business are excellent, and that the crops are in very favorable condition. The merchants, says Mr. Johnston, are in a more buoyant condition of mind than they have been for the past sixty days.

Snakes in His Pockets.
Concerning Louis Agassiz, naturalist, when a professor at Harvard, this story is told by James Kendall Hosmer in his "The Last Leaf." "As he strode homeward from his walks in the outer fields or marshes, we eyed him gingerly, for who could tell what he might have in his pockets? Turtles, tadpoles, snakes, any old monster might be there. He as on the friendliest terms with things ill reputed, even adhorrent, and could not understand the quams of the delicate. He was said to have held up once in all innocence before a class of schoolgirls a wriggling snake. The shrieks and confusion brought him to a sense of what he had done. He apologized elaborately, the foreign peculiarity he never lost running through his confusion. "Poor girls, I will not do it again. Next time I will bring in a nice, clean little feeb." Agassiz took no pleasure in shocking his class; on the contrary he was most anxious to engage and hold them."

WHAT THE WILD WAVES ARE SAYING

PERSONALITY.
The man who would succeed in the business world must retain his personality.

A machine is useful, but he who loses his personality becomes a machine only, and men are supposed to be better than any machine.

The man who would forge ahead in the game must develop his personality with knowledge. He will then become known as a personality with an associated value.

The reason that the biggest men are born as such is because their personalities stand out and are known to represent the best knowledge of a particular line of work.

If you are selling pianos, you should study pianos and make people associate your name with a perfect knowledge of pianos, as far as lies within your power.

Knowledge is the developer of personality and only in so far as your knowledge is of use to the world will your personality stand out above the crowd as that of a man who is worth while and who is remembered in the minds of the people who count as one of them.

Change of subject. When a man opens an account with a wholesale house, he should understand that they expect him to pay his accounts as they fall due. Every time an account comes dues they should demand some form of settlement. If it is impossible in cash then let it be by note, but every time, see that there is some settlement.

See the story of N. K. Smith under the head of Rifle Shots, today. It is timely and important and every business man in Georgia should take note of the warning and heed the advice so push for the desired legislation.

It is a marvelous age in which we live. The audiences at the Grand Theatre this past week have seen a spectacle such as no others since the days of Nero have witnessed. The reproduction of "Quo Vadis" in pictures was so marvelous and true to life, that the spectator forgot that he lived in 1912 and was carried back to the earliest period in Christian Era. A better understanding of the strength of Christianity and a fuller sympathy with all ranking results. Also a stronger conviction that this old world is growing better.

Thoroughness.
Momentum properly directed will drive a tallow candle through an inch plank.
Thoroughness in a man's work will do even greater wonders than this, and is doing them every day.
The man in demand in every line of business is the man who is "all there."
Employers pay too dearly for half a man, even at half price.
For it isn't a man's time at his work that counts so much as his enthusiasm in it. The enthusiasm is the best half of the man. Enthusiasm is to a man what steam is to an engine. Neither will go without it.
Education, training, talents, are all good to have. But there is one thing better, because it embraces all that is

T. P. A. JOTTINGS

By W. M. JENKINS,
State Press Chairman, Georgia T. P. A.

The Travelers' Protective association in National convention at Richmond, Va., June 3-14, was well cared for and all the delegates had a good time.

The writer appreciates this telegram: "Georgia delegation deeply deplores your absence. Best wishes for speedy recovery. Jesse W. Bates, president."

What a big day and a fine day for this country when the Panama canal is opened for the traffic of the world and the protection of our country.

The Suez canal was capitalized in 1856 at $40,000,000, at $100 per share. The khedive of Egypt owned 176,000 shares worth $17,600,000. These shares were sold in 1875 to the British government for $20,000,000. In 1913 these same shares were worth $220,000,000—a gain of more than 1,000 per cent in 57 years.

Our faces may not be as fresh and rosy as they once were. What's the difference, since all T. P. A.'s are in love with nature? Also our fellow-men, sunshine, the blossoms and the sweet girl graduates who now adorn the spring park and all other places of amusement. Sweet memories of other days float down the aisles of long forgotten days when we lingered with hopeful, happy spirits under the shade of the old oak tree with the one we loved best and caught the fragrance on the breeze. "The world was beautiful, and is yet—always sweet and fair and good to those who are daily accustomed to using life well.

For recuperation and rest, go to White Springs, Fla., and stop at the Edgewood hotel. Everything is modern and up-to-date. My friend, J. T. Roberts, owner and proprietor, with his estimable wife, never fail to win the hearts of every guest. Hotel near the springs, with ample grounds and large oaks. Squirrels come and play right around the door.

Remember that Hon. J. H. Andrews, our secretary, will be pleased to answer all questions about that good policy we write for $11 a year. His address is fifth floor, Austell building, Atlanta, Ga.

We are with Brother Shackelford in all he says for the hotel inspector. We trust the legislature will listen to our most earnest appeal and Mr. Shackelford or Mr. Shirley be appointed for the place.

Edison says his life motto has been "This one thing I know—electricity." Confining himself to this one thing, he has taken out a thousand patents, while millions of men, knowing a little of everything and not much of anything, accomplish next to nothing. Success in any line is the mastery of the single thing in hand.
The history of nearly every successful man may be summed up in the one phrase—he did one thing thoroughly.
The secret of mechanical, commercial, financial or any other pre-eminence is disclosed in one word—thoroughness.
The thorough man need never fear to lose his job. His work is his own, a part of himself. His employer is far more afraid of losing him than he is of losing his job.
Education may shine now and then, but thoroughness glows steadily always. Special training may make fine spurs ahead, but thoroughness is the winning trotting in the faded race. Talent may dazzle at times, but thoroughness may be depended upon all the time.
The thorough men are the solid foundation stones of any big business. The "flashes" and "shining" clock-watching ones are poor material even for the lightest superstructure.
Thoroughness can't be attained by sticking a ramrod through the vertebrae. The right kind of backbone stiffening comes of stretching from above.
Love of one's work can be developed by earnest application to it and mastery of it.
He who loves his work will be thorough in it. He loves it not for what he can get out of it, but for what he can put into it. His incentive to work is not the mere animal need of subsistence, but the human impulse to excel, to develop himself and to be of real service to mankind.
There is one of the lines that divide the human from the animal—Charles Grant Miller, in "The Business Philosopher."

This Attractive And Useful Design For Needleworkers Can Be Transferred Without Recourse To The Old And Obsolete Tracing Paper Method Which Is Unreliable At Best.

Design for Waist

The need of something in embroidery to enrich the colored fabric dress for this summer is supplied in such patterns as the above. Suppose the dress is of pink or blue cambric. Then use white floss two threads to each needleful on all heavy parts. This makes the work more rapid, gives a slightly raised effect which will be very pretty on a goods as heavy as cambric. In making the punch work portions shown in the dotted interiors select a short blunt needle rather thick at the eye or use a three-cornered carpet needle. Thread it with a single thread of floss. In the process of work it carries two threads over each portion and to use a double thread would give a heavy appearance to the finished pattern. Aim to make the holes quite large as this will impart a lace like appearance which will be very effective in wash dress embroidery. Should you wish this pattern to be all white lay the design on fragile material outline the leaves and tendrils or finish them in cross-stitch shadow work. This, you know is done on the back of the goods. Or if the pattern is laid on white linen, it can be made solid with satin stitch, the punch work design worked as above mentioned. It is a pattern suggesting numerous arrangements.

TO TRANSFER THIS DESIGN

Put a cake of soap (laundry will do) in a pint of hot water stir vigorously and remove the soap. Saturate this design with the soap and water mixture then remove the excess moisture by partially drying the saturated design or by applying a sheet of blotting paper. Place the material or fabric to which the design is to be transferred on a hard flat surface and lay the design face down upon the material. Cover with a dry sheet of thick paper or two folds of newspaper and with the bowl of a tablespoon rub pressing hard until the design is entirely transferred being careful to rub from rather than toward you. When rubbing you can see if enough pressure is being applied by lifting a corner of the design to note how well it is taking. Do not wet the material nor rub the face of the design with damp fingers. To remove the design lines after the article is completed, wash in warm water, with soap. The entire process is very simple and with a little care you can easily make perfect transfers to any kind of goods.

PATENT PENDING

THE NEW COATS

BY MRS KINGSLEY
ONE of the noticeable features of the spring styles is the leniency which has been shown in cut decoration and length. To all types of wearers there is promised becomingness which factor every woman prizes beyond expensive fabrics, unique line or the very latest madam from Paris.

The silhouette of the majority of coats is straight. There is no nipping in at the waist and a short line from shoulder to waist is reminiscent of empire modes. This is emphasized in various waists. The back of one imported model has a narrow belt of suede, which passes through button holed slots at each side and is held down by huge buttons.

The belt by the way will be a notable feature of many of the spring suits. It need not be continuous, many models having belts at the back, which hold down the fulness which is creeping back into the cut.

Bulgarian blouse suits are a very important chapter in the coat story. These have fulness at the upper portion and a gathered peplum. Broad and narrow girdles and sashes define the waist line, which in these models is appearing several inches below the normal position.

Russian lines with becoming, fastening hint of smart military styles, which will ever be in favor with women who can wear jaunty lines.

Chinese coats are exploited in many of the brocaded jackets that are worn with plain skirts. These are made on the line of the old fashioned box coat. Some have vestee effects on the order of a man's tuxedo. Frequently these Chinese coats are made sleeveless when they accompany a three-piece suit. Pleated skirts and draperies of all descriptions are worn with these oriental jackets.

Combinations of blouses and cutaway parts are strong notes. The upper part of the jacket is blouse, with long revers or a vest, and the lower part shows a decided cutaway line, the coat tails being straight at the back—a new line.

HOT WEATHER DISHES

BY LUCILLE DAUDET
THE housewife with any respect for her nerves and temper will so arrange her cooking in summer as to let the fire go out within a few hours after breakfast. She need not imagine that the man coming home from his office at the end of a hot day will demand the typical hot dinner. If she could follow him to his restaurant or lunch counter downtown she would hear him asking for the cold dish menu. With tea ready to ice in a glass or china pitcher a crisp salad with a dressing made from olive oil a cold meat fish or egg dish and a nourishing dessert, all of which can be prepared before 10 o'clock in the morning, she will find her husband well satisfied and she will save her own strength for a more worthy cause.

Jellied Chicken—Draw pick and wipe very clean a small chicken cover with warm water and simmer until the meat slips from the bones and there remains of the water about a coffee cup full. Lift out the meat and cut or shred into good sized pieces, throwing out all fat bone and gristle. Skim the fat from the liquor add pepper and salt to season very highly, then bring to a boil with half an ounce of gelatin which has been dissolved in just enough cold water to cover it. Pour this over the shredded chicken stir thoroughly and pack into a mold to form. Serve on a bed of lettuce and pass apple or crab apple jelly with it.

Rice Cream with Peaches—A nourishing dessert. In a double boiler cook half a cup of rice in a quart of milk, add half teaspoon of salt. If you soak the rice over night it will save time in the cooking. Have ready a tablespoon of gelatine dissolved in cold water. Then beat it until clear strain and beat in the hot rice. Add a teaspoon of sugar. Allow the mixture to cool and add a teaspoon of cream whipped stiff. Pour the whole into a mold. When ready to serve, turn out of the mold and encircle the creamed rice with peaches sliced and sugared, or you can stew the peaches with just enough water to make a rich syrup and serve them as a garnish.

CARE OF THE SKIN

BY MRS MCGUINE
THE woman who has a skin sensitive to wind and dust is positively as mad as the proverbial March hare to go out without a touch of cream under her powder and a chiffon veil big enough to envelop her entire head and secured tightly under the chin. To several correspondents who mentioned the matter of economy being a very important thing to consider in the care of their beauty, I have suggested the buying of chiffon by the yard for this big veil and neatly hemming the edges.

This method of purchase gives a big square, the center of which may be put over the hat crown, and after the curtain is thus posed, the ends of the veil are caught snugly at the back and drawn taut under the chin, so that no frolicsome zephyr may creep underneath with its germ-laden dust and stinging chill. One good way to insure the closeness of this beauty veil is to cut the chin point off and loosely gather the rounded edge, which will drop the chin in a cozy and secure pocket. A pale gray is the best color for this chiffon mask, for a deeply dyed veil may be harmful over a skin already, out of order, or that is inclined to cut up tantrums at the least excuse.

For the wind-harassed skin, the one with pimples and the one with blackheads the night face wash is indispensable, for each one must be cleansed of dust and oil before further treatment can be taken properly. All skins, whatever, their trouble, respond to a good soap and water scrub if they are first massaged with cold cream. Try and get a cream which sinks readily into the pores, and if this cannot be had use almond oil instead for the rub.

If there are eruptions, however, the skin must be manipulated with the most delicate touch, for otherwise the sore spots will be bruised and so made worse. After the cream rub, wipe off the skin with a clean old cloth, when much dust and exuded matter will come readily from the pores the oil and rubbing promptly.

TO MAKE MONEY

BY EDNA EGAN
EVERYONE knows that even a moderately good dressmaker scorns the making of children's clothes as unworthy of her talents and we are all familiar with her argument that while it takes almost as long to make them as it does women's dresses, no one is willing to pay in proportion.

The poor little mother, therefore, was often in a tight fix in bygone years as to a way in which to provide her children with dresses that possessed some individuality and yet were within average means.

It was not a girl but a grandmother to whom the mothers of at least one city are indebted for a solution of the problem. Practically without income and with her children all married off she found herself getting into a habit of living between houses. About the time she got Jane's children dressed for the winter she was reminded that she had promised to visit Gladys and there she soon found herself repeating the programme of the earlier fall by making more children's dresses.

Finally she made up her mind that she would be happier in a home of her own, and as she was an independent little old lady she decided that she could certainly do now for a living the work that she had done for years past for sheer pleasure. Naturally there was tremendous opposition on the part of her children, but she stuck to her scheme and finally won their half-hearted co-operation.

With the courage of her convictions she made a round of calls on the best dressmakers in town, and told them that she would like to be recommended for work of this character. In addition she put a "children's dressmaker" card in her window and advertised in the newspapers on a somewhat modest scale. Of the three methods, however, she claims that the best and most satisfactory results came through the assistance of dressmakers.

Her first work was to make up a few small dresses, as models and also some attractive aprons. Of course fashions changed in children's clothes rompers have largely taken the place formerly occupied by aprons for play time, but as a grandmother she believes firmly in the particular place of the apron in the child's wardrobe and refuses to give them up for her own grandchildren at any rate.

Apparently there are others possessing the same idea, for her aprons have sold like the hackneyed "hot cakes," and whenever there is a full in business nowadays, quantities of them are made up in various styles and sizes. In fact the pieces left from wash dresses are always kept with the idea in view, of their ultimate use as apron trimmings.

For instance, when plain blue chambray aprons are being made, there is usually found among the leftovers, pieces of blue and white, or blue and red checked or plaid material, which will make unusual or effective trimmings.

Dainty bonnets for babies are also made of fine bits of material left over from the expensive hand-made party dresses of older girls, and attractive wash hats for toddlers utilize otherwise useless scraps of linen and pique. In all this she does the old Ben Franklin motto of "a penny saved is a penny earned," several better, for pieces thus worked up sell for many times their original value.

Her price for children's clothes is gauged almost entirely by the amount of work on them. Dresses that are quickly made on a sewing machine are more than reasonable if handwork is desired, naturally prices are much higher, although an attempt is made to keep well below the standard set by the exclusive shops.

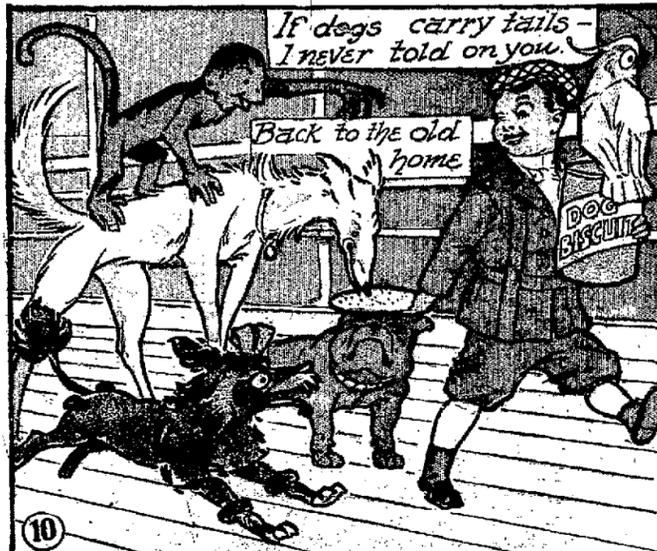

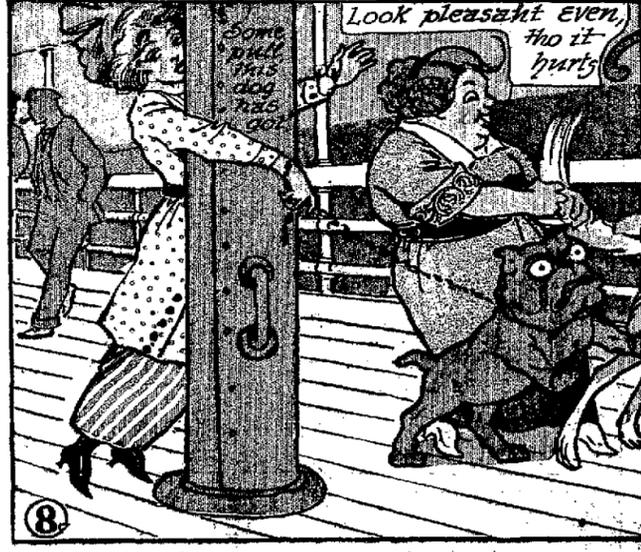

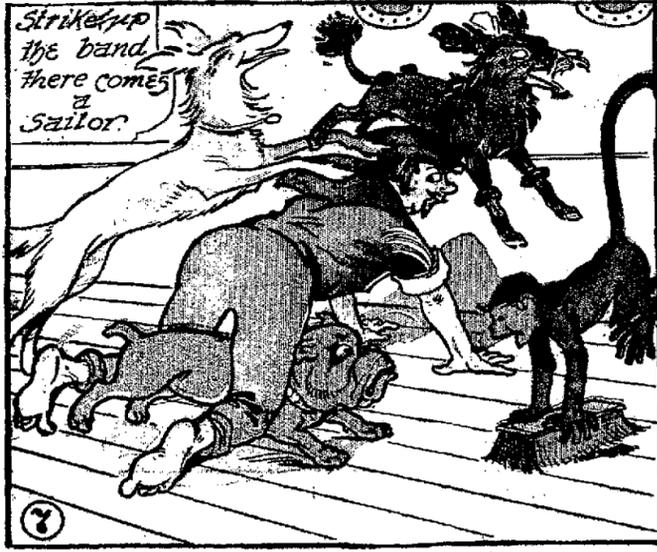

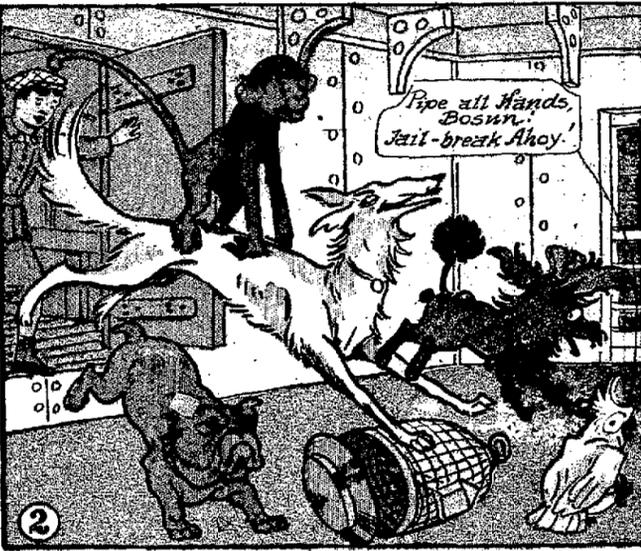

A splendid business machine, and evidently been lying fallow for years, for her work soon outgrew the possibilities of her home and she opened a "Children's Shop" on a downtown street. Her window displays are usually attractive and she carries everything imaginable for children's wear and amusement, from the layette for the infant the stork is about to leave in some fortunate home, up to dresses for girls well on in their "teens."

"If this fails to impress, stop and think for a moment of the requirements of the new baby and then of the possibilities in the way of wonderful baskets and bassinets, to say nothing of the different kinds of per-

SAMMY WISE OF USA

Cousin Sue -
Pets travel first-class at home, but aboard ship they all go in the steerage. From a soft pillow and first place in the family to being herded together below decks was a dog's life, to be sure. They wanted to take in the fun in the saloon, I gave them a chance and they did. Pets are so because they have "Skall". Like some people, they are not to be driven as the Captain thought - but they can be coaxed.
By tempting them with what they liked best I got them back in their lock-up.
Wishing you the same

How We Made the Bargain Counter Help

BARGAIN counters have the same fascination for me that they have for most women. But bitter experiences in times past have taught me not to let that fascination become a fatal one. Nowadays I never buy a yard of any fabric, no matter how small may be its price, in comparison with its worth, unless I know definitely what can be done with it. Nor do I allow the girls to do so. Consequently when the Summer sales were advertised, we first of all made lists of the things we needed, and then expressed hopes that the materials for them would be within our means.

Mildred took the greater portion of our dress money because she is to be maid of honor and Ruth's to be flower girl at a Midsummer wedding following a week-end house party given for the bride's attendants, and I must say that she did wonders with less than forty dollars. At the first shop visited, she found a seven-yard length of pale gray crepe de chine she made into a single-piece skirt and two bodices. One of them, a blouse, opens over a white satin vest and is trimmed about its V neck and its elbow sleeves with white net ruching, centered with narrow black velvet ribbon. The other blouse, a long-sleeved affair, is gracefully draped over a light-fitting bodice and its low-cut square neck is outlined by two narrow rills of white chiffon and the square filled in with a white chiffon guilpote. It's very French and a few years ago I should have considered it not proper for a luncheon and afternoon house gown, but it's undeniably smart, and, of course, I realize that a mother should not be too much influenced by the prejudices of her own girlhood. "Other times, other manners"—in dress. With both bodices Mildred wears a sash made of five yards of white and black pleated-edge rose ribbon. It goes closely about her waist once, but the second time round it is drawn over to the right hip, crossed there and the ends arranged to fall unevenly at that side. So that she may wear this gray frock on the street, Mildred bought a three-yard remnant of Japanese rose-flowered black silk and of it we made a coat with a collarless neck, a postillion back and hip length fronts. Its sleeves are set into low-dropped shoulders, there are seams at center of back and under the arms and at the normal waistline. It blouses slightly over a narrow belt of rose patent kid.

I WAS really discouraged when Mildred announced that her maid of honor gown had to be in dull blue and pale yellow, but by buying five yards of yellow charmeuse at one counter, three yards of all-over white lace at another and two yards of blue chiffon at a third, she was able to plan a costume that would be a credit to a French dressmaker. We made the charmeuse into a trained skirt which opens in front over a simulated petticoat of the lace dyed to match the satin and crossing in front to glimpse yellow slippers and hosiery. At the waist line, the edges of the upper skirt are slightly crossed and run under the huge flat bow joining the blue velvet girde belt—the blue chiffon decollete jacket-bodice. Mildred's chiffon remnant was so short that she hadn't enough for sleeves of any sort, and so she worked an edge on two strips of the lace and draped them about the arm-eyes. And because it's to be an evening wedding, she made a colifuro fillet of the blue velvet, edged it with pearl beads and fastened it with a yellow rose.

RUTH'S flower girl frock has a straight little skirt literally pinched out of a three-quarter yard strip of white lace flouncing, and a hip-length tunic made of a remnant of accordion plaited white chiffon, but its rounded neck and elbow sleeves had to be finished with tiny pink silk rosebuds because we couldn't find any narrow lace to match the wide remnant. We made her a second frock from two yards of twenty-inch wide cotton voile embroidered flouncing. Half the length forms sleeves and a very deep yoke of all-over needlework, and to this is attached an empire skirt which shows considerable of the plain material. For the bridesmaids' luncheon on the Saturday before the wedding, Ruth has a one-piece frock of forget-me-not patterned white cotton crepe. Across the shoulders, it is grown-tucked into a square yoke of white muslin embroidery beading through which is run blue ribbon, and about the elongated waist line, the skirt's fullness is drawn in by the same method. The sleeves, ending just below the elbow, are finished with ribbon-trim beading.

LOUISE splied a six-yard remnant of white crepe and I helped her to make it into a straight, unlined skirt trimmed on its left of center lappling from the knees down, with a row of five black velvet ball buttons, and into a forty-inch blouse on a line with the skirt, with velvet buttons, and edged from the left shoulder to the black velvet belt with a plaited net frill. Three-cornered self material cuffs with a single black velvet button holding down the longest point, turn back the three-quarter straight sleeves, and an embroidered white net shoulder collar finishes the round neck. For the evening of the wedding—we couldn't miss seeing our Ruth precede the bride to the altar—Louise has made a one-piece frock from five yards of white silk voile. Two-inch wide bands of Irish lace, crossing the shoulders, run down the back and front to the top of a six-inch band of lace encircling the skirt between the knees and the hem. Two quarter yard squares of the same lace, coming half above and half below the waistline at centre of both back and front, are divided by a girde of pale green soft silk and a piping of the same silk edges the lace cuffs on the elbow puff sleeves. With the one dollar remaining from her share of the dress money, Louise bought—she hasn't an idea of ever bringing home a penny of her allowance—two and a half yards of striped Japanese wash silk and this she made into a short-sleeved blouse, having a cunning little flap-pocket on the left breast, and one of those new Byron collars that fasten under a self-material tie. Louise was so short of silk that she hadn't enough for a tie that could be knotted, so she runs the ends through a mother-of-pearl ring that she took off of a worn out bride bag.

ALl my life I've wanted a white satin gown and when I saw a ten-yard remnant for that many dollars I picked it up and pretended to examine it critically in order to get time to reason with myself. First I said mentally, "You silly old thing to think of wearing white! What you want is a lavender or a stone gray, something subdued and suitable for the mother of a marriageable daughter." And all the time I knew that I didn't want anything but just that piece of satin, but I was putting it down on the counter when I noticed another woman looking rather eagerly at it (as if she meant to buy it if I didn't) and then some one seemed to whisper in my ear. "You're not growing younger. If you're ever to wear white satin—without looking and feeling ridiculous—it will have to be soon." So I took it home and the girls were delighted.

IT was so narrow that there was only enough for a perfectly plain circular skirt, a little bit draped at the back, and a rounded half-yard train. The waist is scarcely more than an extremely high-cut draped and boned bodice-girde fastening under the left arm and built up beyond the bust with folds of chiffon outlined with pearl beads. The shoulder straps, under-arm forms, short, close-fitting sleeves and the standing collar finishing the almost invisible flesh-colored malines yoke are of pearl-embroidered chiffon. After all, there's nothing more elegant than a white satin gown. And there's comfort in thinking that at any time this one can be dyed black, lavender or whatever color our neighbors considered proper for the mother of a family of girls.

THE SUMMER FAN

Butterfly fans are the newest thing in their line. Apparently the designer of them has been to South America and brought back specimens of the exquisitely marked butterflies of that region, for some of the fans shows butterflies in shades of green, cerise, brown and mauve, painted on a silk spread edged with gold braid and mounted upon sticks representing highly polished ivory. Some of the spreads are of gauze so fine that the butterflies, at a distance, seem to be floating in the air and momentarily one expects them to vanish. The beauty of these fans is that they will harmonize with a frock of any color.

Another charming type of the hand-painted fan is of gauze mounted upon white ivory, every other stick of which is painted in water colors with a floral pattern while the alternate one is in a gold scrolling pattern. And as the upper edge of the spread is finished with white ostrich feathers, the effect of the gold, the water colors and the fluff is very fetching.

Particularly fascinating is a fan of white marabou backed with white ostrich feathers whose tips, running above the body of the spread, make a fringe of fluff at the top. Trailing over the marabou are tiny pink satin flowers and small green leaves which run down upon a mounting of silver-inlaid pearl sticks.

SMART HANDKERCHIEFS

If you would have the credit of possessing small chic belongings, have your given name embroidered on one corner of your handkerchief. If the bordering is colored, the name must be in a matching tone, and if the handkerchief is in all-white, the lettering must match it. If you don't want all the world to know what is your given name, have merely your initials, done in the faintest possible manner in the popular long style, in the corner of a handkerchief that is either finished with scalloping or hemstitching. But if you would furnish no trace of your identity, have only one corner of the linen embroidered in coronet design.

WHITE TAILORED SUITS

It may be of rattle this season. Or if she prefers, there is Bedford cord for a change. Diagonal cloths of rather rough weave have much character and distinction. Granite cloths too are used for the tailored-suit purpose. Whipcords in white and cream tints are also in evidence. But many women will stick to serge—close fine twills, heavy twills and Herkington serges—and they are all fashionable.

Attractive Summer Millinery

New Modes for Midsummer

By Marion Morris

IT has frequently been acknowledged that Midsummer modes are much better than those of Spring, because they are really the early styles more fully developed. And these later modes might be called the "chosen number," for there are many introduced in the Spring that do not survive the criticism of modish women. For instance, the long-waisted Russian coat that was introduced in cloth suits about four months ago soon became commonplace, and then was discarded in suits to make way for the cutaway style that has been made more chic and charming for Summer. As the Russian blouse was more delightful in dresses, it is now much in evidence. In other words, all the early modes that were not successful were "weeded out" and those that were favored have been made more beautiful for Summer.

MILLINERY—

Large and medium-size hats are always revived at this season, because women simply must wear them as protectors from the sun. Besides the dainty Summer frocks would look absurd if worn with the small stiff hats of Spring.

The hats with brims turning high at the side that were made famous by Gainsborough have again been reproduced. However, they are not burdened with huge plumes, but instead are simply trimmed with garlands and bouquets of lovely flowers and wheat. These hats should be worn very low over the right ear, and at a decided angle at the other side.

Although Paris was enthusiastic about the bright colors of Spring, she now says that black hats are most ultra. As all black is a bit heavy for Summer, the modistes very ingeniously combined black tulle with milan or tagal in some hats, while for others they used only Chantilly lace, or lace and tulle. All of these hats with their flairs and butterfly bows are quite airy and summery. If you get one you should make sure that the tulle is show-proof.

As Panama hats are more modishly checked this season, they are very pretty when trimmed with lovely flowers and touches of lace. Of course, some Panama hats are most attractive when draped with rich silk scarfs—these hats for outing and utility.

DRESSES—

The stereotyped lingerie dresses of lawn and much lace have at last been ruled out of the fashion world. Fine cotton crepe and voile frocks that are effectively embroidered and combined with pretty printed cottons are the favorite modes for afternoon. What joys these frocks will be after those that were over-trimmed instead of artistically designed to make them dressy.

Russian blouse dresses of cotton ratine, linen and crepe are among the smartest for morning wear. The most effective have white skirts and colored blouses. Those of crepe with cluster-pleated poplins are quite chic, for they give sunburst effects over straight-cut skirts.

MIDSUMMER MILLINERY

The medium-sized hat of hemp, leghorn or milan is the most popular head covering at the present time. The lingerie hats are lovely, and the poke shapes are particularly stylish and chic. The most popular colors for these hats are citron and fraise (strawberry). In the way of novelty colors, white shades bordering on sand, gold and champagne are also seen. The little hats covered with English crepe are particularly charming, especially when trimmed with wheat, roses and ribbon trimmings. The dressy leghorn models, trimmed with shadow lace or chiffon, are beautiful. The foremost trimming seems to be the rose, the huge pink ones seeming to be most prominent. A flat cluster of roses, posed on the front of the crown at the top and a single tall rose were noted on two of the most recent importations from famous Paris makers.

The Smart Shapeless Coat

IF the pretty maids at the shore this Summer, or on the steamer if you are going abroad, wear loose straight coats with "no shape or make" to them, do not look surprised—even if you are. For they will simply be wearing the newest thing in wraps—the very last word in topcoats.

They are particularly adapted for younger girls and women, these new coats, and very jaunty they are, with a certain boyish style that is most fetching. Made of the thick, closely curled chincheilla cloth they are suitable for much hard wear and on many occasions when the "wind blows cold."

As to cut, they are quite straight with masculine-like shoulders and sleeves. They come just below the hips in that length that is best liked this season, and at the waist line there is an outside belt of the material, about two inches wide, which is slipped through loops of the material.

Another peculiarity is the fastening, for they button through, with buttons and button holes on the edge of the coat, and extending from the throat to the edge of the coat. The buttons are quite close together, and shining pearl affairs about the size of a quarter.

White coats, of course, are very fashionable—very summery and very becoming, but the new blue shades (becoming lighter, dull tones) and the soft pretty rose tones are also very smart. And maidens whose complexions will stand the test will like the bright yellow coats, for this hue is also included in the list.

The silk dress situation is rather peculiar. Silk crepes have become so popular that they are really commonplace. Nevertheless, they make the most charming of afternoon and evening gowns. But there is a joyous surprise—foulard dresses are highly endorsed by the dressmakers who make distinctive modes. These dresses in polka dotted patterns are the most modish.

Suits.

Generally speaking, linen suits head Fashion's list. However, the severely tailored modes of cotton muller are considered the most ultra, and the heavy cotton crepe suits that are quite a startlingly embroidered make as charming afternoon costumes as you can desire.

Cotton sponge suits will be worn by smart women in the mornings. When these suits have plain white skirts and either plain color or striped coats they are wonderfully attractive.

Coats.

Unless you have an extensive wardrobe, it is advisable to limit the number of coats in Summer to two or three. If you are going to the seashore or mountains, a white polo cloth coat should be your one choice, because it is just as appropriate in the evening (informally) as in the morning. Such a coat in the new five-eighths length, bound with white silk braid, and fashioned with beited back is most satisfactory.

Short coats of light-weight chincheilla are also correct for seashore and athletic wear, in white, green, rose and blue.

Black and white checked woolen coats are very good looking, but can only be in the sporting category.

Draped wraps of chiffon, head-encrusted net, crepe de chine, moire and brocaded charmeuse are the most effective in the short lengths that simply swathe the body.

Blouses.

The fichu blouse is undoubtedly the most unique mode and the daintiest creation of the season. Before getting one be sure that you can wear a fichu, and know how it should be draped, for if you do not you are apt to look far from modish. The fichu of fine Brussels net, edged with pleatings of the net or fine lace may be mounted on a simple blouse of Dolly Varden voile, crepe de chine or fine shadow lace.

The blouses with the various interpretations of the Mme. Lebrun ruche are dainty, too. These all have rather low pointed necks, with single or double pleatings of net or lace, just where the coat fastens.

The new trottleur blouses of tub silk or crepe de chine are the Parisienne's idea of what a tailored waist should be. You will be very apt to agree with many other women that these blouses are the smartest women have yet been privileged to wear. One of the most attractive models has a pointed neck, with medium-size flat collar and tiny revers, finished with corded edges.

As there are so many blouses with pretty collars, the regulation lingerie types are considered a trifle passe.

MOTOP HEADGEAR

WHAPS for motoring are usually made on plain, mannish lines, but when it comes to the choice of motor headgear, a woman may give her vanity a little rein and choose some of the little hoods and bonnets that are bewitchingly feminine.

There's the little straw poke of fine milan that comes in all the new and vivid colors. It fits in closely at the back and is very simply trimmed with a band of two-toned ribbon. Then there's a new auto bonnet having a brim of straw and a reversible crown of soft silk. When midday wishes to appear quiet and sedate she wears her hood with the dark side out; when she is in festive mood she may show the pretty lining of rose or blue.

There's a little flexible turban of tagal that is sure to be popular since it can readily be folded up and carried in a handbag if desired. A very fetching little bonnet is the one of soft yellow neapolitan with a tiny visor. The visor is outlined with narrow pipings of brown velvet and a tailored bow of the same material is placed right across the front of the crown.

There are some charming creations of chiffon which serve both as scarf and hood. They are made of a double thickness of chiffon and the middle third of the scarf is shirred across at either end to form the large full hood. These scarfs are edged with a tiny ruffle of soft lace and a double row of delicately tinted satin buds trim the front of the cap.

OUTING HATS

Among the smartest outing hats are sailors and slouch hats of eponge. The latter have stitched brims and crowns in sections. Panamas, white, felts, rough straws and cretonnes with straw facings, either rolling or mushroom in effect, are also quite popular.

Great variety obtains in the locations of the smart flat bows, and the newest note is sounded in the front placing.

PRACTICAL PETTICOAT

A new fancy is to have white wash petticoats of pique or poplin, closely fitted to the figure and finished around the bottom edge with embroidered scallops. Such a skirt is daintier, less expensive, and more durable than those made of silk, and are worn with tailored suits and closely fitting light-weight wool dresses.

Good Clothes

WITH all this talk of the present day woman's extravagance in dress it takes some courage to come out very strong as an advocate of the good clothes doctrine. Yet I do believe that good clothes—not necessarily extravagant ones—mean a whole lot more than we are accustomed to think.

Even though he may groan when he pays the bills, there is no man alive who prefers a dowdy wife to a stylish one. No young matron should allow her wardrobe to lapse so that it does not contain at least one good tailored suit, one up-to-date evening gown and several pretty trim morning dresses. Her good clothes and her good appearance will have a mighty influence in her husband's thoughts of her.

And if this is true for the young matron it is likewise for the older woman who has a family of children who are at the observant and critical age. The college girl is apt to feel a thrill of pride if she welcomes a smartly dressed, correctly veiled and hatted mother before her mates, than if mother appears in a last year's suit and a home-trimmed bonnet. Don't spend all the money on Daughter—you are some one in the world, too. Your sons will like to take you out if you dress your hair in the modern style and have a becoming evening gown. They'll like it if one of the fellows say "Gee, your mother looks young enough to be your sister."

Good clothes play a great part in most transactions of life. Don't go to apply for a business position without knowing that your shoes and gloves are trig and clean, that you are dressed as well and as neatly as you can possibly afford. Jewelry and "fancy fixings" you may forego, but not a well cut skirt and coat, a good style blouse and a becoming plain hat. First impressions are often very strong and the girl who applies for a position and who is neatly, becomingly and appropriately dressed stands a better show than Miss Dowdy.

And don't good clothes give you a lot of courage? I once knew a woman who never went out to "reason with" any offending tradesman unless she wore her best suit, a white veil and white gloves. She said she could have reprimanded a major-general when thus attired. And I don't doubt it—though she wouldn't have had the courage even to reason with the leaman if she wasn't dressed up.

It's more than just clothes, dear friends. The fact that you know you look your best gives you confidence in yourself and rises your standards of behavior. You may not realize it, but it's true. It's just a sort of continuation of the days when you "played lady" in mother's or Auntie's shawl and felt the sweep of it behind you was a regular Lady Guinevere De Vere train. Didn't your manners take on a statelyness and dignity that were never present when you were in your own short gingham skirts. Absurd? No—very human.

Personally I believe in wearing the best clothes you can afford in keeping them looking their very best, and in wearing them all the time. It will make you hold your head higher, both literally and figuratively. "Costly the habit as thy purse can buy" said old Foliohis to his son—and though it's a far cry from Shakespeare's day to ours, the advice is still sound.

A NIGHT ROBE NEGLIGEE

Alluring robes in delicately colored crepe de chine and white lace are listed as nightgowns but may quite as properly be worn as negligees, and most women buy them for that purpose. The back and front, each cut from a single breadth of double-width crepe de chine, are so gradually sloped from the lower edge—finished with an a-jour-headed hem—to the bust, that nowhere is there an atom too much fullness. At the top the crepe de chine widths at back and front are opened at the right side and drawn in a point to that shoulder, while the other side is caught under the left arm. The entire lower section is swung from a deep yoke of white lace whose neck is drawn taut by a ribbon run beading after the robe is on, for there is no other opening and no fastening to bother with. The elbow-sleeves are simply wide puffs of lace ending in narrow ruffles gathered with ribbon and beading.

WHAT IS HESSONITE

Hessonite might be a new disease of a new fad, but it's simply a new shade and it's named for the Grand Duke of Hesse. The shade, which is neither distinctly rose nor amethyst, but a blending of the two, is found chiefly in the semi-precious stones of translucent composition and brilliant lustre such as are used for necklaces, chains and forget-me holders, as well as for huplin tops and toilet pins of a minor character. Hessonite, considered as a color, somewhat partakes of the futurists' idea of shade blending, for the rose and the amethyst tones so melt into each other that it is impossible to say which one has the stronger characteristic.

TRAVELER'S HAT BOX

Make your own hatbox of pasteboard and cover it with wall paper or cretonne. Hinge the sides to the bottom of the box with baby ribbon run through eyelets. Make the top to hinge to one of the sides. This can be folded and carried in a trunk, and is more convenient than a regular hatbox.

HOUSE AND SENATE MEMBERS ARRIVE ON EVERY TRAIN

Owing to Sharp Contests the General Assembly Appears on the Scene Earlier Than Usual.

BURWELL STOCK SEEMS TO BE IN ASCENDANT

Anderson, of Chatham, Declares He Will Have 23 Pledged Senators in Caucus Tomorrow.

Owing to the interest felt in the contests for the presidency of the senate and speakership of the house, members of both branches of the general assembly are arriving in Atlanta unusually early for the season this year.

It is estimated that there were as many as forty of the membership of the new house in the city Sunday night, and this number will probably be increased to nearly a hundred during the day.

Sheppard, of Sumter, Arrives. The third and last to arrive of the speakership candidates, J. B. Sheppard, of Sumter, presented himself Sunday night, and was very busily engaged meeting his friends in the lobby of the Kimball and making up for lost time.

Mr. Sheppard declared that he would not secure headquarters as the other candidates had, but his friends would know where to find him just the same. Burwell the Favorite. The general impression as to the outcome of the speakership race remains unchanged, and that is that W. H. Burwell, of Hancock, will be elected.

Both of these men are now making an active canvass, and they declare that they will be in the fight to the end. Both have friends who declare that the result is by no means a foregone conclusion.

After the speakership fight is settled, there will be a lively contest in the house for the speakership pro tem. There are four announced candidates in the field for this position. They are E. H. McMichael, of Marion, Dr. A. S. J. Stovall, of Elbert, John C. Foster, of Floyd, and John P. Cheney, of Cobb. The first three candidates to appear at the scene are Mr. McMichael, who was registered at the Piedmont Sunday. He declared that he was quite confident of his election, as he had already received more than

Keep the Babies Cool and Cosy.

Babies require particular care during the hot weather, not only in the matter of clothing, but in food as well, as every intelligent mother knows.

It frequently happens, however, that mothers are at a loss where to buy babies' clothing, because picking out anything for baby is always a momentous choice.

The best thing for a young mother to do when in doubt is to follow the advertisements in The Constitution.

These announcements usually tell her all about clothes for the little ones, from the tot in the cradle to the little sun-browned scamp on the highways.

Very often an advertisement contains the news of the sale of precisely what you require at a price that is a pleasant surprise.

Some mothers make a habit of cutting out all advertisements relating to baby clothes and then visiting certain stores when they are ready to purchase.

When you see something you need advertised by a reputable house at an attractive price you are safe in buying at once.

Aged Man Drops Dead In Church as Pastor Begins Sunday Sermon

William B. Maner Succumbs to Attack of Heart Failure in Collins Springs Baptist Church.

While attending the Collins Springs Baptist church, William B. Maner, aged 65, dropped dead of heart failure Sunday morning shortly after Rev. H. G. Mitchell opened his sermon on "Think Ye of the Lord While Yet Ye May Be Found." Mr. Maner was a watchman of the Western and Atlantic road.

50 PERSONS ARE HURT IN A RAILROAD WRECK

Some in Serious Condition—Excursion Train Rolls Down Embankment.

Rochester, N. Y., June 22.—Fifty persons were injured, some of them seriously, when a Pennsylvania railroad excursion train was derailed near Sterling station at 9:30 o'clock this morning.

The train was filled with excursionists bound for Olean, Rock City and Bradford Pa. While the train was running at about 40 miles an hour three of the five coaches left the track, rolling down an embankment. As it rounded a curve the smoking car left the track, followed by the two rear coaches. The locomotive also remained on the track, breaking away from the train after dragging the coaches about 200 feet.

Physicians and nurses were rushed to the scene from Rochester and other nearby towns, and the most seriously injured were hurried to hospitals at Sonyea and in this city.

Practically all the injured were residents of this city. It is not believed any of them are fatally hurt.

It was said that District Attorney Frank K. Cook was refused permission to examine the wreck when he arrived at the scene. Railroad officials had thrown a cordon of employees about it, and Mr. Cook did not get within 20 feet of the nearest car. Mr. Cook said he had every reason to believe that had ties were directly responsible for the wreck. The track construction was very faulty, he declared.

After the district attorney had returned home a message brought him word that the railroad men were going to burn the ties for a hundred yards on both sides of the wreck. Mr. Cook, accompanied by Sheriff Acord, rushed back to the spot in an automobile. They found that the ties had been thrown together in an adjoining field, but a railroad man said this was done to get them out of the way. Sheriff Acord demanded that the officials refrain from burning any ties or cars.

Mr. Cook had requested the public service commission to conduct an immediate investigation.

BARBER OF MACON PENS WIFE LETTER AND DRINKS ACID

Macon, Ga., June 22.—(Special.)—John D. Lester, a well-known barber, committed suicide here this morning by swallowing carbolic acid while alone in a shop on Melberry street, where he had been working.

Just before taking the poison Lester scrawled a note to his wife, but did not finish it.

The note said: "My Darling, I could not endure it any longer. I regret what I am doing and I hope you will not do—"

"J. D. L."

What Lester intended his wife should not do, no one knows. The man is said to have been drinking heavily recently and had gotten in debt. About six years ago he married Miss Mary B. Stevens, of Macon. He came here eight years ago from Alabama. No children survive.

CLASPING HANDS, BOYS MEET DEATH AT NIAGARA FALLS

Donald Roscoe, Aged 10, and Hubert Moore, Aged 9, Are Caught in the Roaring Whirlpool Rapids.

HELPLESS MEN WATCH TRAGEDY FROM SHORE

When the Chums Realized Their Fate They Stood Up in the Boat and Clapsed Hands in Farewell.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., June 22.—Donald Roscoe, 10 years old, and Hubert Moore, 9 years old, both of Niagara Falls, went to their death in a small boat this afternoon in the whirlpool rapids, while hundreds of men watched, helpless, from the shore.

The boys were playing in a flat bottom scow half a mile above the rapids when the rope holding the boat broke and they were carried out into the stream and down the river.

Until the boat reached midstream it made little progress. After it passed the bridges the current carried it swiftly toward the rapids. The bridgemen did not see the boat until it was close at hand. Then they called fire headquarters and two companies of firemen were sent to save the lads if possible.

Hundreds swarmed to the river banks in a vain effort at rescue. The boys, realizing their fate, stood up on the track, raised the edges of the rowing whirlpool and shook hands in farewell. A second later they were engulfed by a great wave in the rapids. The boat shot out of sight. One of the boys was seen for a moment as he bobbed in the rushing waters. Neither body has been recovered.

Never a Chance to Save Boys. Scores of passengers in the cars along the gorge were watching the hapless struggle of the boys, as did hundreds who had gathered at the water's edge. Men became hysterical and women passengers on the cars wept and prayed in distress at the plight of the lads, who were standing in the boat calling for help.

As the boat neared Swift Drift, the first breaking of the water from the calm upper reaches to the rapids, it began to rock. The boys sat down to keep from tumbling into the stream. Then, caught in Swift Drift, the boat went racing under the cantilever bridge. Whatever hope the boys had of rescue was lost. They ceased their cries for help, turned toward each other and calmly shook hands, then, with the boat in the tumbling waters, threw themselves on the seats of the scow and clung with all their strength.

The craft held to its course until it encountered a huge wave, which crested at a height of forty feet. It seemed to dive into the very middle of the wave, and when it again came to view it was bottom up.

Little Heads Appear. A second or two later a little head appeared bobbing on a wave below for a moment and then was seen no more.

The bodies of the boys are in the whirlpool, and may never be recovered. There was a quantity of driftwood whirling about this afternoon and the bodies may be beaten to pieces as were those of Mr. and Mrs. Eldridge Stanton, of Toronto, and Burrell Peacock, of Cleveland, the victims of the ice bridge tragedy of February 4, 1912. They were battered to cakes of ice at the point where the boat broke loose is about a half mile from the beginning of the rapids. It drifted down in about 12 minutes.

The Roscoe boy's mother is very ill and was not told of the tragedy. The boys were members of well-known

SHE FINDS SONS DEAD WITH A RATTLESNAKE LYING BETWEEN THEM

Beach, N. D., June 22.—When Mrs. Dave Grant, residing fourteen miles southwest of Beach, went to call her two sons, aged 5 and 7, this morning she found them dead in bed, with a rattlesnake lying between them. It is believed that the reptile crawled into the bed clothes during the day while they were being aired out of doois. During the previous evening, just after the youths had retired, each had complained that the other was pinching him.

Income Tax Encourages Babies; Hits Bachelors and Old Maids

By John Corrigan, Jr. Washington, June 22.—(Special.)—In the income tax section of the tariff bill, as perfected by the finance committee last night, bachelors and old maids are discriminated against and babies are encouraged.

Senator John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, chairman of the subcommittee which considered the income tax, favors taxing bachelors and bachelor maids. Whether the other members of the committee shared his views, the effect of the work is the income in excess of $3,000. Married persons are taxed on incomes over $4,000. In other words, an extra exemption of $1,000 is allowed for the wife, and an exemption of $500 is allowed for each of two children. The family income is combined for the purpose of levying the tax.

Thus, if a man has an income of $5,000 and his wife has a separate income of $2,000, they will pay on an excess of $3,000. If they have two or more children they will pay on only $2,000 a year. Whether it is cheaper to get married and avoid the tax or stay single and pay the tax-gatherer

WILSON TO MAKE CURRENCY SPEECH BEFORE CONGRESS

President Will Appear in Person Today and Urge the Necessity of Immediate Reform of Banking System.

WILSON IS SUPPORTED BY SECRETARY BRYAN

Bryan Gives His Unreserved Indorsement to Measure. He Says It Is Good for the Banks and Also the People.

Washington, June 22.—The president of the United States will go to congress tomorrow to deliver the second message of his administration. Also when President Wilson submitted his ideas on tariff reform, congress will meet in joint session in the chamber of the house to hear his message on currency legislation.

For the second time in more than a hundred years upon such an occasion the senate will march in a body to the house chamber at 12:30 o'clock in the afternoon. The front rows will be reserved for the senators, members of the house crowding into the rear seats.

President Wilson will arrive at 1 o'clock and, after being presented by Speaker Clark, will deliver his message urging currency legislation before the close of the special session.

Bryan Indorses Currency Bill. On the eve of this extraordinary occasion, Secretary Bryan tonight issued a statement on the currency bill prepared by Chairman Glass and Owen, of the congressional banking and currency committee, Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and the president. Secretary Bryan gave his "unreserved" indorsement to the proposed measure and removed all doubt as to his position with reference to currency reform.

"I am glad to indorse most earnestly and unreservedly the currency bill which has been prepared by the chairmen of the two congressional committees in conjunction with the president and Secretary McAdoo," said the secretary. "It is a much better bill than I supposed it possible to secure at this time. It is a bill which is honestly entertained and strongly adhered to, and has been reconciled with a success hardly to be expected. I have doubted until recently the wisdom of attempting currency legislation at this session, but my doubts were largely due to the fact that I feared the difficulties in the way would prevent an agreement upon a plan."

POLICE STATION PRISONERS GO ON MUSICAL JAG SUNDAY; RAG SONGS ARE FAVORITES

Police headquarters rang with melody Sunday from dawn until midnight, awaiting with song, spending a day in singing and going to sleep with a good-night ballad.

Usually the prison inmates spend their Sundays in sad and dejected spirits. But not so yesterday. A vaudeville program seemed in progress in every ward.

Someone started vocal festivities in the "plain drunk" ward shortly after the sun had begun to creep over the skyscrapers and filter through the bars. Later the situation ripened into a singing contest. Each ward had its contestants.

Drunkard's Favor Rantime. Ward 1, "drunkard's dungeon," so-called for its class of inhabitants, the plain drunks, evidently remained on its jags all during the day. Ragtime was their specialty.

Its favorite was a certain aged song which pertained to a lover's criticism of his Salome's raiment, running thusly: "Don't you do that dance, I tell you, Sadie."

That is no business for a lady. Most everybody knows That I'm your lovin' Mose, O. Y. O. Y. where is your clothes? Hebe Hassen Batters Content.

Ward 2, "hobo's haven," wherein reside the idlers and loafers, vagrants and other like enemies to labor, threw its hat into the ring with this ode: "I'd be nice, twice as nice, As any guy you ever knew, You can open up my letters any time at all, And I'd like to wear your picture in my dollar Ingersoll."

On it's nice to be nice To a nice little girl like you." Ward 3, "nigger hollow," the negro section, chimed in with a once-popular selection exploiting a famous ragtime character.

QUARREL OVER CAT ENDS IN SHOOTING OF NEGRESS SUNDAY

In the presence of his wife, R. L. Griffin, a carpenter, stood on the back porch of his home at 21 Markham street Sunday morning and pumped a load of buckshot into Mamie Rice, a negress, who had cursed both the white man and woman in a neighborhood row over cats and chickens.

The shot penetrated the woman's abdomen, and she was carried to Grady hospital in a serious condition. It is believed, however, that she will survive. Griffin was arrested and brought to police headquarters, where he was charged with assault with intent to murder.

The shooting was the culmination of the slaying of the negro woman's cat several days ago by a young son of Griffin, who, upon catching the animal killing his father's chickens, shot it with the shotgun which Griffin used Sunday. Sunday afternoon, the police say, the Rice woman, who lives in an alley adjoining the Griffin home, began cursing Mrs. Griffin, who stood on her back porch.

The husband came on the porch. She continued her abuse, it is said, and Griffin ordered the woman to leave the Oscar Dewberry, a negro sentenced to hang on July 1, is singing away the days with singing from the prison. He was sentenced for the murder of a white youth who was killed by a stab wound several months ago on Decatur street, near Pratt.

Two cells in the Fulton tower near the city hall are occupied by two other negro singers. Daily the trio join in song that fills the tower and draws crowds of privileged inmates to the vicinity of their cells. Their selections of songs are mostly religious.

Dewberry's execution will be the first held this year in Fulton county. Only two were hanged in 1912, Sam Swanson, the Columbus rapist, and R. L. Clay, the wife murderer.

SHERIFF THWARTS ATTEMPT TO LYNCH BLACKS AT DUBLIN

BLACKS PUT ON TRAIN AND TAKEN TO MACON

Several Hundred, Bent Upon Lynching, Move on Jail and Demand Surrender of Three Prisoners.

Dublin, Ga., June 22.—(Special.)—Bludgeoning the vigilance of a mob of several hundred bent on lynching three negroes suspected of having murdered J. T. Hewell and his wife this morning, Sheriff J. J. Flanders tonight spirited his three prisoners on board a train held for the purpose and took them to Macon, by way of Eastman.

Excitement following the news of the shocking murder culminated late this afternoon in an attack on the Laurens county jail and the demand for the surrender of the three blacks. The demand was refused and many members of the mob left for their supper, leaving guards to watch the jail and determined to carry out their purpose during the night.

When those who remained relaxed their watchfulness somewhat and moved off from the jail toward the courthouse, Sheriff Flanders, City Court sheriff C. M. Greer, Superior Court Judge K. J. Hawkins and the deputy sheriff moved the prisoners to the railroad and on board the train.

Called From Beds. Mr. Hewell, a country merchant at Long Branch, near Dublin, and his wife were murdered early Sunday morning, after being called from their beds. Bloodhounds placed on the trail led the posse to the cabin of three negroes, Smith Harris, Joe May and Henry Kitchens. These negroes were hurried to the jail.

Hewell was called from his slumbers and when he went into the yard the assassin opened fire upon him with a shotgun. The right side of his face was riddled with No. 4 shot, the right eye was blown out, the left eye fell, the lighted lamp in his hand set his shirt on fire, making a solid mass of blisters on his body.

Woman Also Slain. Mrs. Hewell ran to her husband's assistance and was probably ordered back in the house by the negro. As she turned to enter the house she was shot through the left thigh with a bullet, presumably from a revolver, and a load of the bird shot was sent flying face down in the doorway with one foot on the top step.

The sheriff and coroner were notified by a neighbor who, on hearing shots, put out for the city. When the officers and a quickly-summoned fire company reached the woman was dead, while her husband was suffering agonies from his wounds and burns.

Hewell muttered something about a negro having done a shooting, but nothing tangible could be obtained from him. He died while being brought to the city.

The county's dogs were placed on the tracks found at the scene, and tracked the assassin to Smith Harris, alias Frank Harris, a negro, who was placed under arrest, as was also Joe May, who was at Harris' home. Harris' shoes are alleged to fit the tracks perfectly. Later the dogs were put on the tracks near where the crime was committed, and they led the officers to Henry Kitchens. A single-barrel shotgun was found at his house that had been recently fired. He was also arrested.

Robbery the Motive. The theory of the crime is that Harris borrowed Kitchens' gun to commit the deed with, and that they met in the woods to divide the money that Harris had stolen and to return the gun. Mrs. Hewell's trunk was ransacked, the suitcases and grips were thrown down in the yard after their contents had been searched, while the small grip that Hewell kept his money in was found in the woods near where the shot and barefoot tracks were made. Hewell, after being shot, pulled his trousers off, probably in an effort to put his clothes out after they had caught fire. They were found outside his yard fence, while his body was found in the yard. Blood stains were all over the bushes, and the wire fence where he had gone after regaining consciousness. He went to the creek, whether to bathe his wounds or in search of the assassin is not known. Returning to the house, he fell in the yard only a short distance from where he was shot down.

Both of Hewell's revolvers were found in the yard near his body. It is not known whether his wife carried them out to give to her husband or if the negroes dropped them there where they finished ransacking the house. Hewell's watch and his wife's rings and jewelry were not molested. His money bag that he was known to have kept in the grip, found in the woods,
