Georgian Hotly Replies to the Charge That Administration Is Guilty of Extravagance.

Washington, April 11.—(Special.)—Charges that the democratic administration was getting reckless in passing appropriations, made yesterday by Representative Fitzgerald, of New York, chairman of the appropriations committee, were answered today by Representative W. S. Howard, of Georgia.

Mr. Fitzgerald declared that the rank and file of the democrats in the house were recklessly increasing the committee estimates.

"I have noticed in the war state and navy building that they are in the way of one another," said Mr. Howard.

"This is not a conscience offering," retorted Mr. Howard, "but I am glad to make a conscience offering for anything ever did."

"The gentleman claiming the wisdom of the democratic party and all the economy of the democratic party for himself," said Mr. Howard.

Fitzgerald Wrathful. The ire of Representative Fitzgerald was aroused. Speaking with emphasis, he declared that the republican party could have killed the appropriation with a point of order.

Representative Payne, of New York, greatly enjoying the row between Howard and Fitzgerald, said that the economy plank of the platform had been split to pieces and only a few shavings left behind.

But the republicans and the progressives in this house and elsewhere," said Mr. Mann, "think together, work together and vote together."

Everything Ready for Baseball Opening

Merchants Behind Movement to Land Attendance Prize

Mayor Declares Half Holiday Tuesday—Ad Men to Have Big Parade—Chamber Sends Out Postals.

By Dick Jemison. "What it takes to win the opening day attendance trophy Atlanta has got."

Concerted effort on the part of the officials of the baseball club, city officials, merchants, chamber of commerce, ad men, other civic organizations and last, but not least, the press, is needed to make that slogan a reality.

Atlanta's superiority is being assailed on all sides. To be exact, from seven cities to the south that challenge Atlanta's right to the title of the best baseball town in the south.

Everyone Aroused. When such a condition arises, there can only be one result. The Atlanta Always Ahead is one of the best slogans the city has ever boasted of and the slogan is being used to show the faces of the show me towns that doubt.

Don't take all this self-flattery for granted. It is not to be taken for granted. It is to be taken for granted. It is to be taken for granted.

There is a condition that must be met this season that did not arise in 1913. The teams that open the season away from home will go down on their own opening day be favored with a Saturday opening.

Can she do it? Certainly she can. But every one must put their shoulder to the wheel and pushing and pulling and with all their might.

The cities that open on the same day as Atlanta are Chattanooga, Birmingham and Montgomery. Of these three Birmingham is the city that the Crackers detest.

The Barons are stung over the defeat handed them by the Gate City of the South last season and they have hurled the gauntlet right in the face of the Atlanta Always Ahead. The result was so whole-hearted that the local association could not afford to overlook it.

The result of telling a few friends of Birmingham's challenge has been evidenced by the work that has been done during the past few days and the interest that is being manifested on all sides.

Chamber of Commerce. The first organization to take cognizance of it was the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. They are their own organization behind the move to keep the trophy in Atlanta again this season.

Saturday. The 1,500 members of the chamber of commerce received the following postal card, signed by the president and industrial secretary of the local chamber of commerce.

Keep Atlanta Always Ahead. Last year we won the Southern league baseball pennant and the record for attendance. The first game of the coming season will be played Tuesday, April 14, at 1:15 o'clock.

Next to get in line was the Ad Men's club, those hustlers who never know when their business is being organized. They are planning a monster parade on the afternoon of Monday, Thursday afternoon at the Ansley following committee as a point to assume charge of their plans for the day.

The committee is interviewing all men throughout the city and making lists of them. They are asking one to close to the afternoon and the results of their efforts will be ready to be sent to the business houses that are on Tuesday afternoon will be in the minority.

Ad Men's Parade. The parade is being planned a monster parade Tuesday afternoon. They have instructed every member of the parade to get in line at 10 o'clock and to be on hand at 10 o'clock. GEORGIA NINE IN GOOD SHAPE

Coach Joe Bean Pleased With Showing Made in Recent Games—Club Goes North on April 24.

By Clark Howell, Jr.
After playing nine games this season the work of the Red and Black nine appears gratifying to Coach Bean and to the adherents of the team. Of the nine games played the Georgians have won seven and lost two to Michigan and one to the Clemson Tigers. The tenth game of the season will be played Monday afternoon with the Illinois team and should afford a good comparison among several of the A. A. teams, since Illinois has played both Alabama and Tech.

Pitching Strong

The pitching staff has rounded into great shape and the local nine have a trio of formidable twirlers in spite of the fact that a great many of them are new to the department earlier in the season. One Curley has pitched out very strong but on game out of four starts Hitchcock has dropped out and out of three and Fox has pitched out twice to two starts and finished without a defeat checked up against him.

Every berth on the field seems to be secured in advance with the exception of right field where Owens and Brown are worked alternately. Whichever one of these is named for the position he will in all probability be taken along with the team on all trips to utility men so the personnel of the team is virtually complete.

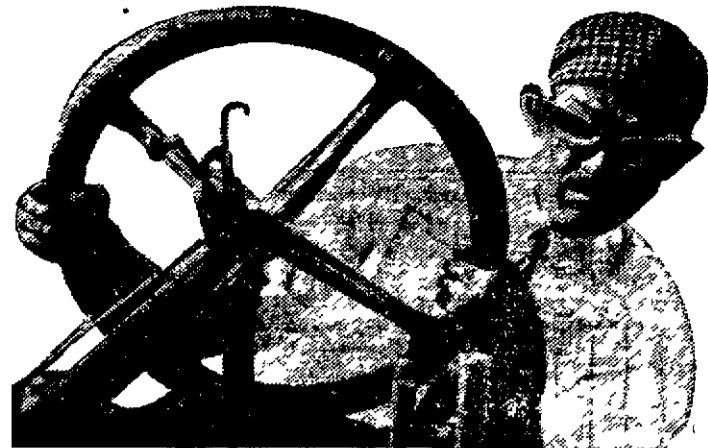

Battling

Several series of games will be played on Sanford field before the team will start its northern trip on the 24th of April. On this trip games will be played with the University of North Carolina and the University of North Carolina and Washington and Lee.

stores that will close on Tuesday is out of the question at this time but if every one that intends to close will signify his intention by advising the sporting editor either in writing or by telephone the firm name will be printed in subsequent stories.

A partial list of those who have already signified their intention of closing for the afternoon is as follows:

The Georgia Railway and Edward company, the Lowry National bank, M. Kutz & Co. Nunnally-McCrea company, W. A. Chapin & Co. Otley, Knowles & Miller, Parks Chambers-Hardwick company, George Muse Clothing company, Daniel Bros. Southern railway passenger department, Cloud-Stanford company, V. H. Kriegshafer & Co., C. P. Glover Realty company, Atlanta and West Point railway, Massena Bulletin system, Massena Advertising agency, B. M. Grant & Co. Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph company, A. G. Spalding & Bros., and others.

Mr. Stanford, of Cloud-Stanford company, has addressed a communication to all the other stores in the same line of business in Atlanta asking them to close for the afternoon and he believes that every one of them will.

Spalding's Pleaded.

A. G. Spalding & Bros. have the following placard in their show windows which has been commented upon by many:

"NOTICE" Store will be closed

Tuesday April 14 opening game Southern League Are the clerks going? They are the manager going? He is.

Similar cards are rapidly appearing on other stores and some of the enterprising printers of the city are sending to the business houses of the city cards with the following inscription:

"CLOSED" Gone to hall game" The enterprising printers have put their advertisement on these cards.

The ticket sale at the Fumlin Bros. stores, which is the downtown ticket office has been immense. Twice they have had to send back for a new supply of tickets, the ducks are going so fast.

To aid in the speedy handling of the crowd at Ponce de Leon the baseball association has erected a box office just across the street from the park. Tickets of all classes can be purchased at this box office which will be even handier to the street cars than the regular box offices.

In closing let's remember once and for all Atlanta must win that opening day attendance trophy. No half-hearted effort will do it.

So close up your shop go to the game yourself and let your employees go as well.

Tuesday April 14 is the big day in the baseball world of Atlanta and let's hope that September 17 will be an even bigger one and another pennant will fly from the unannounced pole at Poncey.

Chalmers—1915 "Light Six"

A Quality "Six" at a Quantity Price—$1800

No longer need those who want six-cylinder luxury hold back on account of the price.

Here's a copy of the Master "Six" (our $2175 car) built on a lighter scale; with the same motor but a smaller and lighter model; yet it develops up to 50 horsepower and has more speed than you'll ever need.

Light enough for economy in tires and fuel; yet heavy enough for safety and comfort. Graceful in outline, distinguished in appearance; and sold at a price which makes the "Six" more economical than any comparable "four."

A Lighter Master "Six"

This 1915 Chalmers 'Light Six' at $1800 has all the features which make the larger Master 'Six' at $2175 illustrious.

Its small bore and long stroke motor gives it the same flexible power—from a snail's pace to express train speed without shutting gears.

The steady pull of its six cylinders gives a quality of motion that is nerve soothing, not irritating. It means a smoothness that reduces wear and tear on car and passengers to the vanishing point. Its light weight means an added economy in fuel and tires, while its price has made it easy for the many to own "Sixes."

Chalmers Master "Light Six" Touring Car $1800
Larger Master "Six" 2, 4 or 5 passenger $2175 (Fully equipped, L. O. B. Detroit.)

"SOROSIS SHOES"

A great writer says "When you change your shoes you change your mind," and further says, "Americans are the best shod people on earth. Most of us, even common folk, have different shoes for different occasions. It's better for our feet, and better for our heads, as it lifts our self respect when you change your shoes you change your mind."

That people are wearing different shoes for different occasions is certainly a trend in the right direction. Some day practically every man and woman will buy shoes that way as a matter of economy. Shoes worn only for the purpose intended and changed often, wear more than twice as long, aside from the improved appearance by wearing the right shoe at the right time. IN every advertisement on this page is part of a magnificent Easter Lily, photographed from nature, and upheld by an Easter Rabbit.

Prizes will be awarded Constitution readers who send by noon on Monday the neatest and most complete pictures of the lily and rabbit, assembled from the pieces in the ads.

The prizes for this contest will be a box and fifty orchestra seats at the performances of "The Lily" by the Lucille LaVerne company, which opens a spring and summer engagement in stock at the Lyric Monday evening.

"The Lily" is one of David Belasco's best and strongest plays. It never has been seen before in Atlanta, and never before has been offered to the public at less than two dollars admission. The LaVerne company is of the highest character, and Jake Wells sends this company here out of compliment to Atlanta, while entertaining the Shriners and other big conventions this summer. It is a stock company of rare talent, having spent last summer playing for sixteen weeks in Richmond, playing to crowded houses at every performance.

Margurite Chaffee, who is at the head of this company as leading lady, is an Atlanta girl and a graduate of the Girls' High school. Scores of her old friends already have signified their intentions to enter the contest out of compliment to her. Miss Chaffee has been in the Belasco and Frohman schools and companies for twelve or fourteen years, and has gained distinction in New York. There are fifteen first-class artists in her company. Every man in the ensemble is a college man, Oxford, Harvard and Yale being the leaders represented.

The Lyric has been placed in the very acme of perfect condition for the engagement of this company. It is equipped with a cool air ventilating system that pumps fresh, clean, cool air in every second and takes out the old air. The side doors opening on streets over which little or no traffic goes at night may be left open during every performance. It is the ideal summer house, and with a company of this high rank and ability will undoubtedly prove popular this summer.

As the season progresses it is intended to introduce the visiting star system and among those already booked are Edr. Goodrich, Laurette Taylor, Robert Edeson and others. During Shriners' week it is the plan to have Tom Wise re-enact his original hit, "Are You a Mason?"

Three Attractive New Residences in Atlanta

Top left. This is the handsome new home of James H. Whitten, which has just been completed and into which he has just moved, on Peachtree road near Lakewood drive.

Miss Letta Whitten is the architect of this artistic residence and Mr. Whitten himself is the builder. The residence is of gray pressed brick veneer construction, the interior being finished with hardwood throughout.

Mr. Whitten in building his new home, declared that he was striving to build something just a little different from the general run of residences so well has he succeeded that he himself does not know how he built one very striking and puzzling architectural feature of his new home. This feature consists of a 27-foot by 6-inch arch along his front porch without a girder. This arch is built of ordinary size brick and the secret of how it holds together has puzzled more than one of the leading architects of the city.

Mr. Whitten simply conceived of the beauty of such an arch and asked his brickmason if he could build it. His brickmason said he would try. He did try, with remarkable success and now he refuses to tell even Mr. Whitten how he accomplished the remarkable architectural feat.

Top, right. The residence of Charles H. Black, on Peachtree road which was damaged by fire some weeks since, is now being rebuilt. The reconstruction of it is of gray granite veneer which contrasted against the dark foliage of the grounds, will present a very striking and impressive appearance.

Bottom picture. The beautiful residence of J. J. Haverty, on Peachtree road, just toward of the creek, is now practically complete but for landscape gardening, which is now being done.

The house is built of tapestry brick. E. E. Dougherty is the architect and the Pittman Construction company are the builders.

The landscape gardener, who is doing Mr. Haverty's grounds is Franz Schwalbe, and he is doing wonders in the gorge that runs back of Mr. Haverty's house.

Mr. E. Brown & Co. are the interior decorators of the house.

It is expected to have the house complete by May 1.

The big feature of his house, upon which Mr. Haverty prides himself, is the fact that this house is what he calls an "all Atlanta house." Every contract, from the architect who made the first line of preliminary drawing to the drayman who hauls the last load of debris from the site after the house is completed, was let to Atlanta people.

Every stick of material that could possibly be bought in Atlanta, even to the shrubs for his flower garden, Mr. Haverty purchased right here in Atlanta.

Plan of Big Industrial Building for Atlanta Is Meeting With Great Deal of Encouragement; Chamber of Commerce Committee to Present Plans

The industrial and statistical bureau of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce is receiving considerable encouragement in its scheme for the erection of a sort of community industrial building in Atlanta. That there is a field for just such a building in Atlanta is evidenced by the manner in which manufacturing concerns have been driven to seek left space in buildings which are not always best suited to manufacturing purposes. The success of such buildings has been demonstrated in other cities. Most certainly such a building would induce foreign manufacturing concerns to come to Atlanta.

Already something has been said about the plans of the industrial and statistical bureau for this building. Here is exactly what the bureau has in mind.

Secretary W. H. Leahy has been investigating particularly with reference to the construction and operation of Baltimore's big industrial building. The city of Atlanta has a more varied line of manufacturing industries than any city in the south. A large number of them are houses in different parts of the city in buildings holding five or six. A number of other concerns are prospective, or, in other words, negotiating for location of their business in Atlanta.

It is with a view of economically housing the smaller manufacturing concerns in a building built especially for the purpose that the proposition is being considered. Modern buildings designed to house a number of industries are an economic development. One of the great obstacles between the small manufacturer and success has been the difficulty in obtaining space at a reasonable rental where modern and economic manufacturing conditions were present.

Economy a Feature.
A building of this kind offers cheap power, abundant light, absolute fire protection, low insurance rates, efficient elevator service and healthful surroundings for operatives. It would provide every facility required for low cost production and the small manufacturer enjoys every advantage in this regard that may be obtained by the larger manufacturer, placing him on a basis on which he can successfully compete without the necessity of large capital expenditure.

The rates for electric power in Atlanta are the lowest of any of the larger cities in the south and the industrial building by contracting for electric power could obtain wholesale rates by which every tenant would benefit as each would have his individual meter and would be billed for the consumption of current as shown by it at the wholesale rates earned by the building. In the case of Baltimore, it is less than one-third of the rate paid by the small manufacturers scattered throughout the city. This would represent a considerable saving to tenants.

Abundant light and air would be provided, insuring illumination and ventilation to all parts of the building. It would be planned to use no wood in the construction of the building. The entire building would be equipped with sprinklers and water damage resulting from fire or otherwise would be obvented. Tenants would pay only for the space needed. Every facility for all kinds of manufacture would be provided which should be installed in a building of this character.

The plan has been worked out very successfully in the city of Baltimore. The soundness of the project, its many advantages and the facilities offered resulted in attracting immediately manufacturers to the building. In a year's time the entire space of Baltimore's building, 17,705 square feet of space was rented. The directors having met with this favorable result in the working out of a project new to Baltimore, the tenants having expressed themselves as satisfied with their locations and the facilities offered by the industrial building, several have been made known their desire to increase the space leased, the attention of the board was directed to the erection of an adjoining unit upon a lot adjoining the ground owned by the company. It was decided to build the additional unit, and it is now in course of construction.

The great advantage of such an installation as outlined to the business of Atlanta is obvious. The proposition is receiving careful consideration at the hands of the industrial and statistical committee and Secretary Leahy states that a plan will be worked out and presented at an early date.

NEW REALTY COMPANY IN HEALY BUILDING

The Reeves-Cline Realty company, a new real estate firm, has just opened offices at Nos. 322-3 Healy building.

This firm is composed of J. G. Reeves and W. L. Cline, who have separately been in the real estate business in Atlanta for several years, and are thoroughly familiar with values in all parts of the city and suburbs.

The Reeves-Cline Realty company will do a general real estate and loan business.

Their real estate business will be divided into city, suburban, acreage and farm departments, with an expert at the head of each department.

The sales managers of the new firm are F. M. Tessler and S. A. Givens, both experienced real estate agents.

The present sales force of the company consists of eight experienced salesmen. This number will soon be increased to twelve or fifteen men.

The Reeves-Cline Realty company will pay particular attention to the sale of lots in Clermont Park, a high-class residence subdivision in the edge of Decatur. Already there has been considerable demand for these lots.

OGLETHORPE PARK LOTS WILL BE AUCTIONED OFF

Edwin P. Ansley Will Conduct Sale Monday Afternoon at 3 O'Clock.

The auction of Oglethorpe Park residence lots will be held by the Edwin P. Ansley firm next Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Oglethorpe Park is being promoted by Edwin P. Ansley, who planned and projected Ansley Park, one of the most extensive residential colonies of the metropolitan north side. Wide areas of beautiful country home sites will be put on the market at the highest bid in the Oglethorpe Park sale.

Oglethorpe Park is situated on Peachtree Road and near the site for the proposed Oglethorpe university. It adjoins Brookhaven club, which has been taken over by the Capital City Country club, and is being constructed into the most beautiful country club site in the south.

Oglethorpe Park was planned along the line of the back-to-nature idea which is fast becoming popular with the wealthy business man of the big cities. It is situated in one of the most picturesque country territories within the section of the state, and is within only a short distance from the heart of the city—only a few minutes by trolley car.

In announcing the auction sale, the Ansley firm proclaims the advantages of the proposed university, and of the Brookhaven territory, which has risen phenomenally in value within the past few years—values since its home opportunities, became realized.

Oglethorpe Park is considered by real estate experts to be one of the most promising realty developments in the north side of recent years. Regarding the efforts made in the successful development of the land, the announcement of tomorrow's sale quotes the following excerpt from an editorial of "The Constitution":

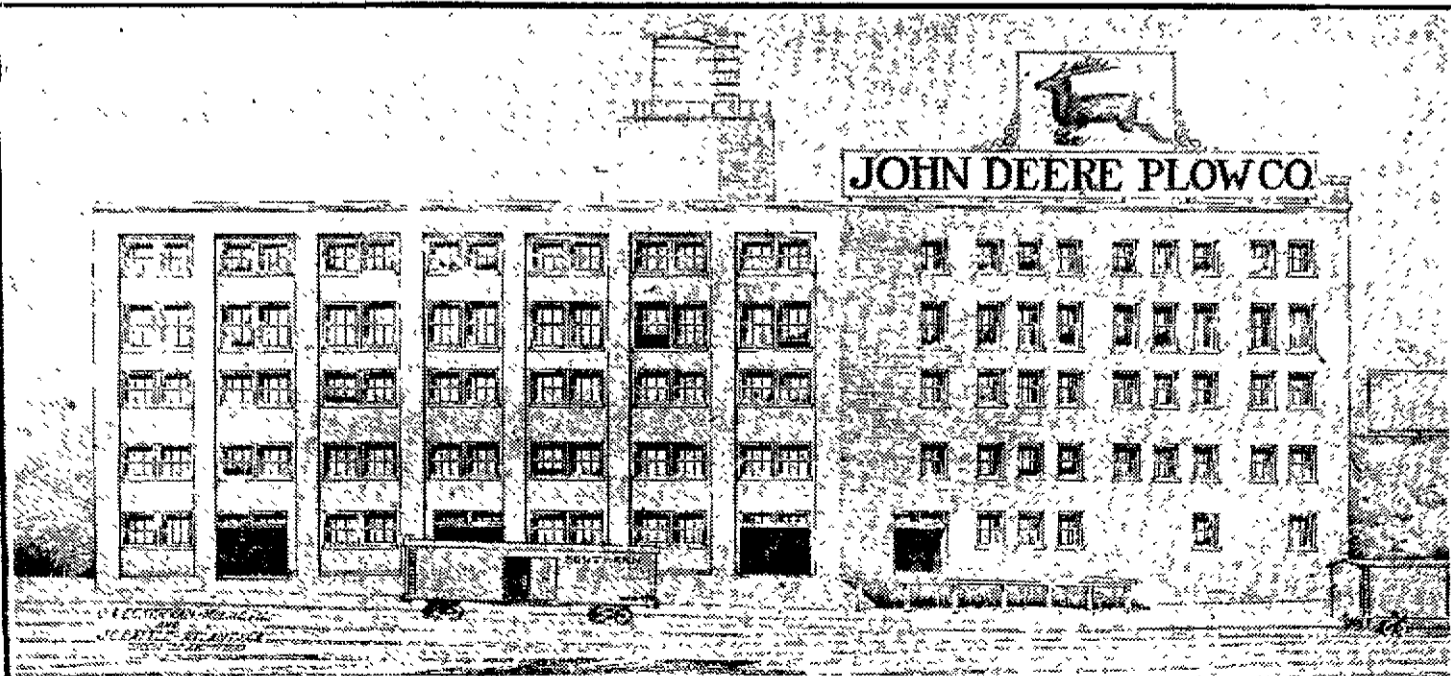

"Mr. Ansley is a man who does not go off half-cocked. He has only to point to what he has done in the former Ansley Park and Forest Hill street projects, to submit convincing testimony of his qualifications as a practical promoter. In every enterprise he has attempted he has proved to be an advance agent of expansion and progress. His name is synonymous with success."

Oglethorpe Park Lots At A

REASONS FOR ATLANTA'S GROWTH:

Fourteen railroad systems---reaching every city and town in every direction, promoting commercialism throughout the entire United States.

The rapid emigration of the northern and western farmer to our vast area of farm lands.

This state can hold two million more people on our farms alone.

There are nine different climates in the United States and Georgia has eight of them.

Within a radius of 300 miles of Atlanta, the bank deposits are over four hundred million.

Within the radius of 300 miles of Atlanta there are now ten millions of people.

Within a radius of 300 miles of Atlanta the resources are tremendous in minerals, farming, stock raising, lumbering---in fact, all of the pursuits of man, and these resources are not yet half developed.

Within 300 miles of Atlanta there are tremendous water powers. Some few have been developed, but there are many more to be developed, which means cheap power, and also means that this section will get many millions of investments in industries and manufacturing plants.

Atlanta is a Regional Bank City. A regional bank means that our farm lands are good collateral for loans. The REGIONAL BANK means the building up of many of the above mentioned resources.

Atlanta's bankers are bankers of the highest type, able to go into any financial centers and bringing to Atlanta any kind of financial aid when the occasion requires it.

Atlanta's men and women and their energy are really our greatest asset.

The consistent, careful saver, and the cautious investor, can always believe in Atlanta investments.

ATLANTA WILL STAY PUT.

The Panama Canal has caused every great railroad system to build or acquire a right-of-way through our section to the Gulf.

Commercialism of every type is swirling SOUTHWARD, until Atlanta is the headquarters of nearly every industry of the entire United States and of many foreign countries.

All of the above facts are fairly squeezing values into Atlanta property, and there is a greater percentage of high-salaried and profit-sharing men in Atlanta today than any other city in the United States of the same population.

The back-to-nature idea is the principle of country homes---out and away from the smoke and dust.

O GLETHORPE UNIVERSITY will be built.

There will be 1,500 students and 100 structures.

This will make a City.

A College.Center is a refined, cultured body.

This means a small City where now only forest and bramble thickets exist.

The Capital City Country Club have taken over Brookhaven and are spending thousands of dollars adding to the beauty and making an 18-hole course.

The Capital City Club represents all the wealth, brains and hustle of our business life in Atlanta.

This crowd of men are doers of deeds and drawers of water.

They mean to have the best Country Club possible.

The north side is where our best values lie.

A lot sold three years ago to H. S. Harper in Ansley Park, when the lot was in the rough, for $3,000. Harper has since sold half of this lot for $19,000.

North side property makes many such advances.

Fifty acres of land 6 years ago, near Oglethorpe Park, sold for $1,900. Today the same tract is worth $150,000.

In 6 years more what will land between Oglethorpe University and Capital City Country Club be worth?

In this section is where Atlanta's best citizens will make their country homes.

Mr. Rich Man, this is your look---

Mr. Saver, here is where you can play with the rich man.

To buy Oglethorpe Park is to back the biggest most successful city builder anywhere in the South.

Never-quit Ansley says that there will be more development in the next five years in this section than all the rest of Atlanta put together.

Peachtree Road is a marvel of beauty and culture paved to Oglethorpe Park.

The entrance to the Park from Peachtree will be through Oglethorpe University Drive and 200 feet wide. The main road from the opening will be 66 feet wide.

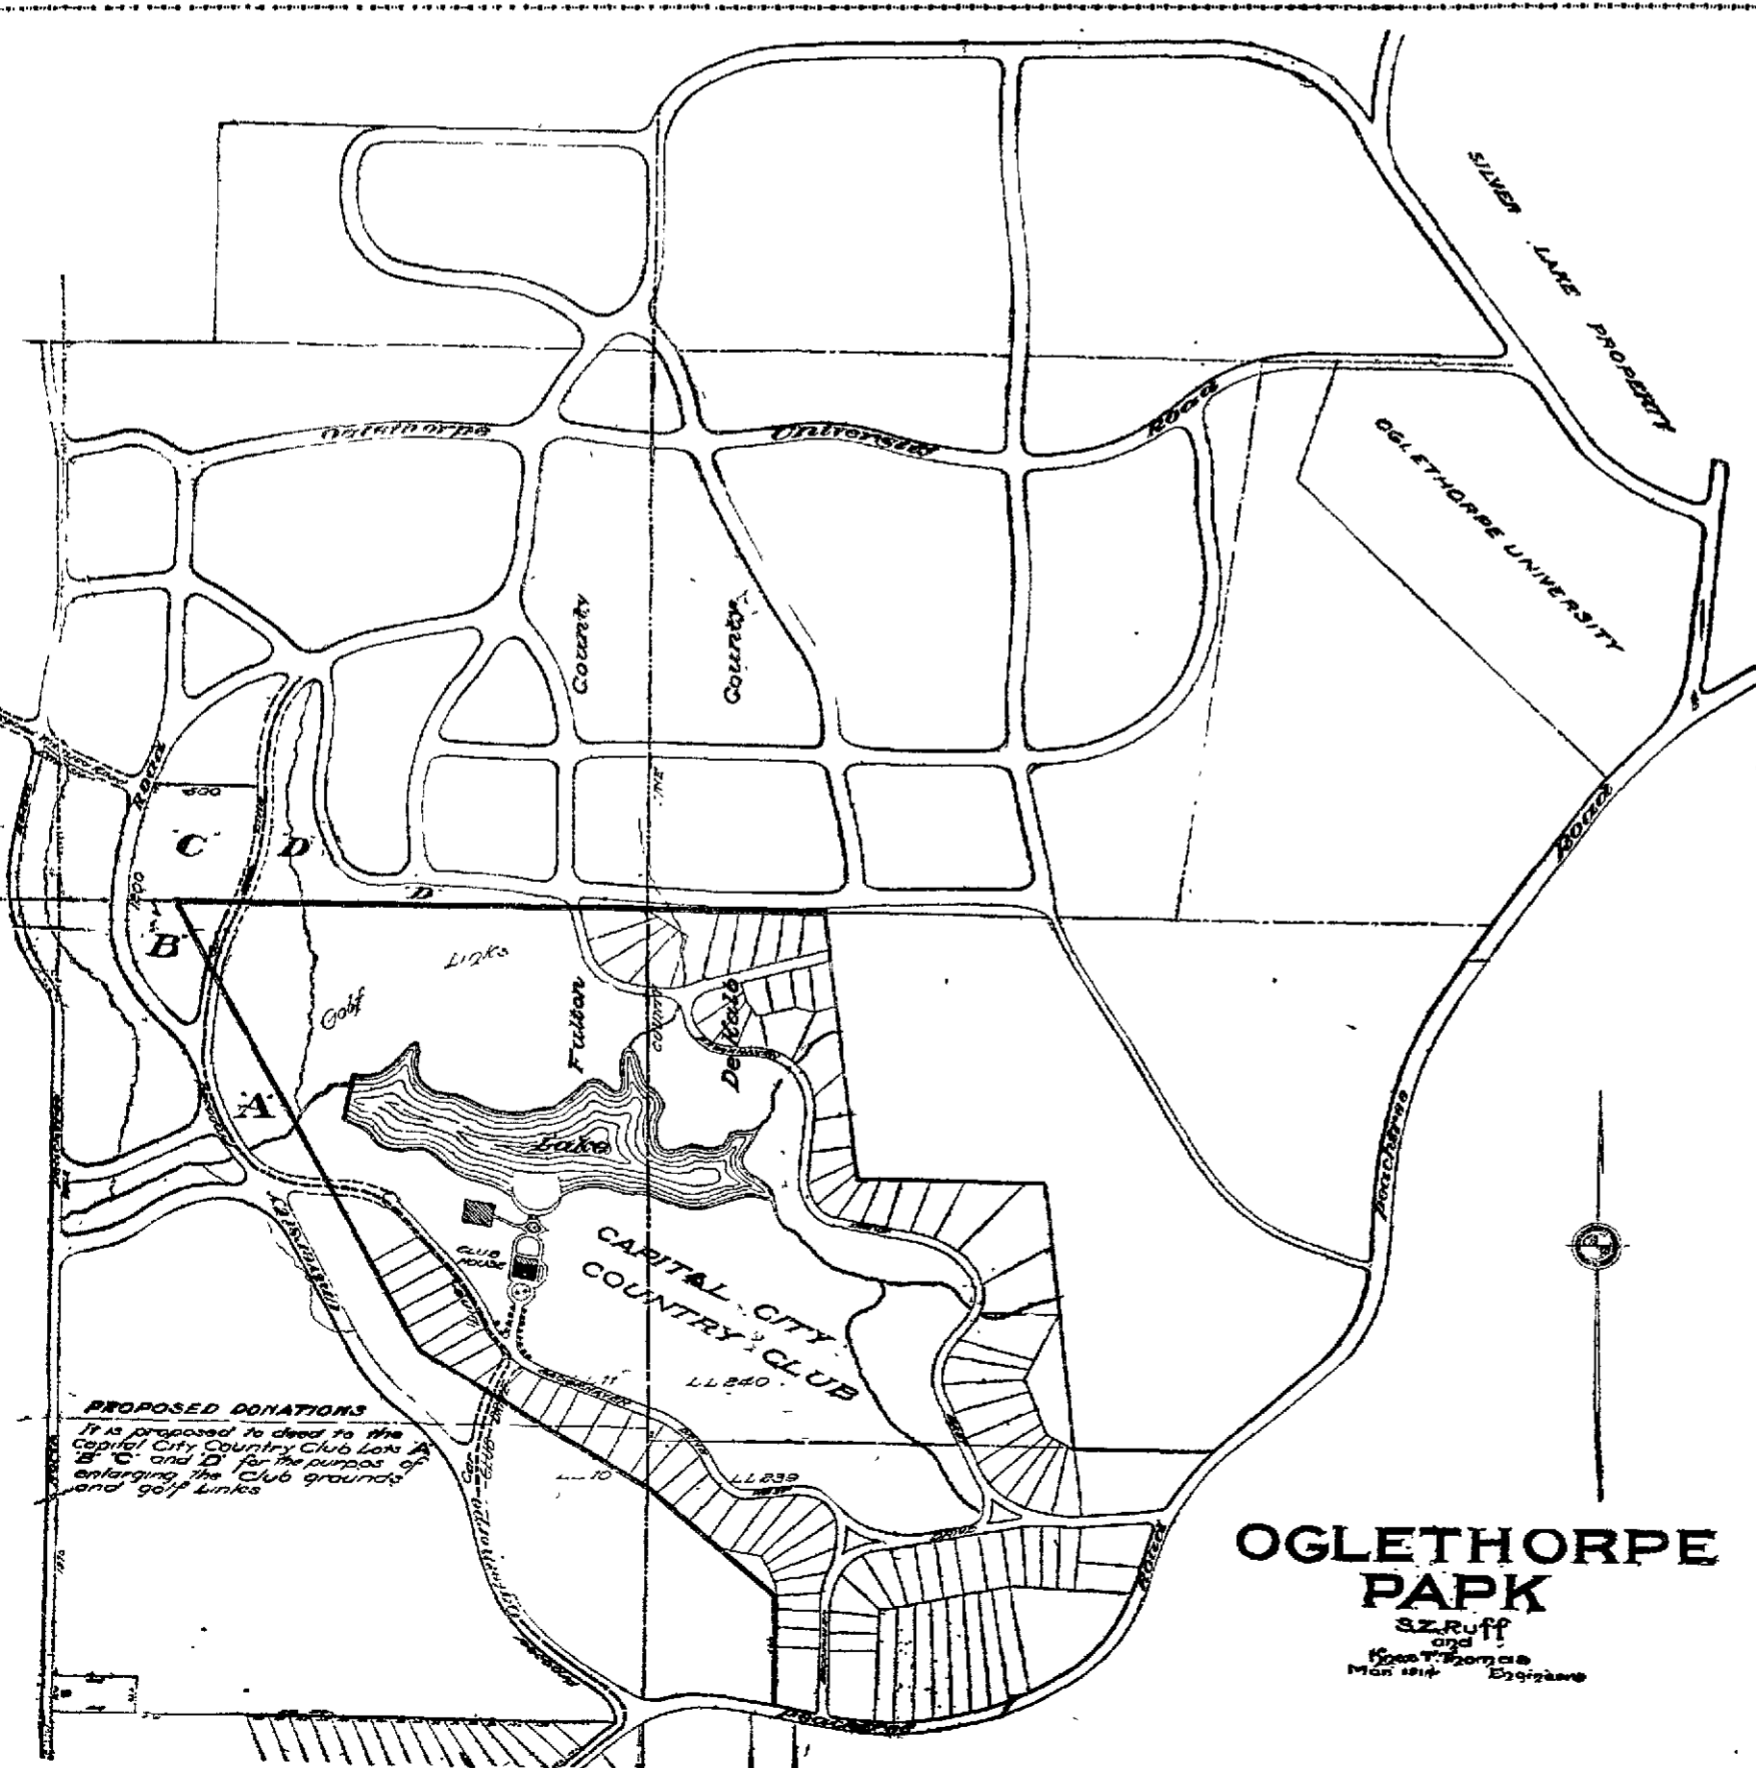

An 20-foot private right of way will be provided for the car line.

All roads will be brought to proper grades.

On the top of a high rolling slope, a tract of land has been offered the Capital City Club for the permanent club site, which tract will be of great value to the Club in years to come.

Who does not believe in the Regional Bank City---Atlanta?

If we had a good town before, we now have the greatest strength possible to be added to us.

Remarks About Oglethorpe Park and Mr. Ansley By Some of Our Citizens and Publications:

"Nature has done everything possible in contributing to the beauty of this section. The transformation of that whole section into an aggregation of beautiful country estates is assured."—CLARK HOWELL.

"I unhesitatingly say this property offers the surest and quickest profits to the speculator that I have ever seen. It only needs to be seen to be appreciated."—W. A. VERNON.

"I have investigated your proposition. A splendid opportunity to investors who are seeking locations for country estates ideally located."—W. M. HUTCHINSON.

"The projected development of this plateau, with its beautiful forests, and the system of drives, will enhance every foot of property in this section."—DR. WILLIAM OWENS.

"I believe the Club and University will certainly co-operate with you to the fullest extent in carrying out the development plans."—T. JULIAN M'GILL.

"I should think the merits of this proposition would fully warrant the County Commissioners of Fulton and DeKalb Counties in co-operating fully with you."—R. F. MADDOX.

"I am further willing to co-operate with you in grading the driveway marked 'Club Drive' its entire length and deeding to the Club lots or tracts marked on the Oglethorpe Park plat as lots A and D."—S. C. STOVALL.

"The wonderful pine forests rival those of Lakewood and the altitude gives the air a rarity which I think equals that of Asheville."—KEAT'S SPEED.

"Twentieth century activities, and the natural inclination of normal man to possess his own principality, are influences carrying to the summits of Atlanta's outlying property substantial, permanent homes and making of Fulton County the land of 'heart's desire.'"—ISMA DOOLY.

An Editorial from The Atlanta Constitution:

"Mr. Ansley is a man who does not go off half-cocked. He has only to point to what he has done in the phenomenal Ansley Park and Forsyth street projects to submit convincing testimony of his qualifications as a practical prophet. In every enterprise he has attempted he has proven to be an advance agent of expansion and of progress. His name is synonymous with success."

A Clipping from Atlanta Georgian About Oglethorpe University

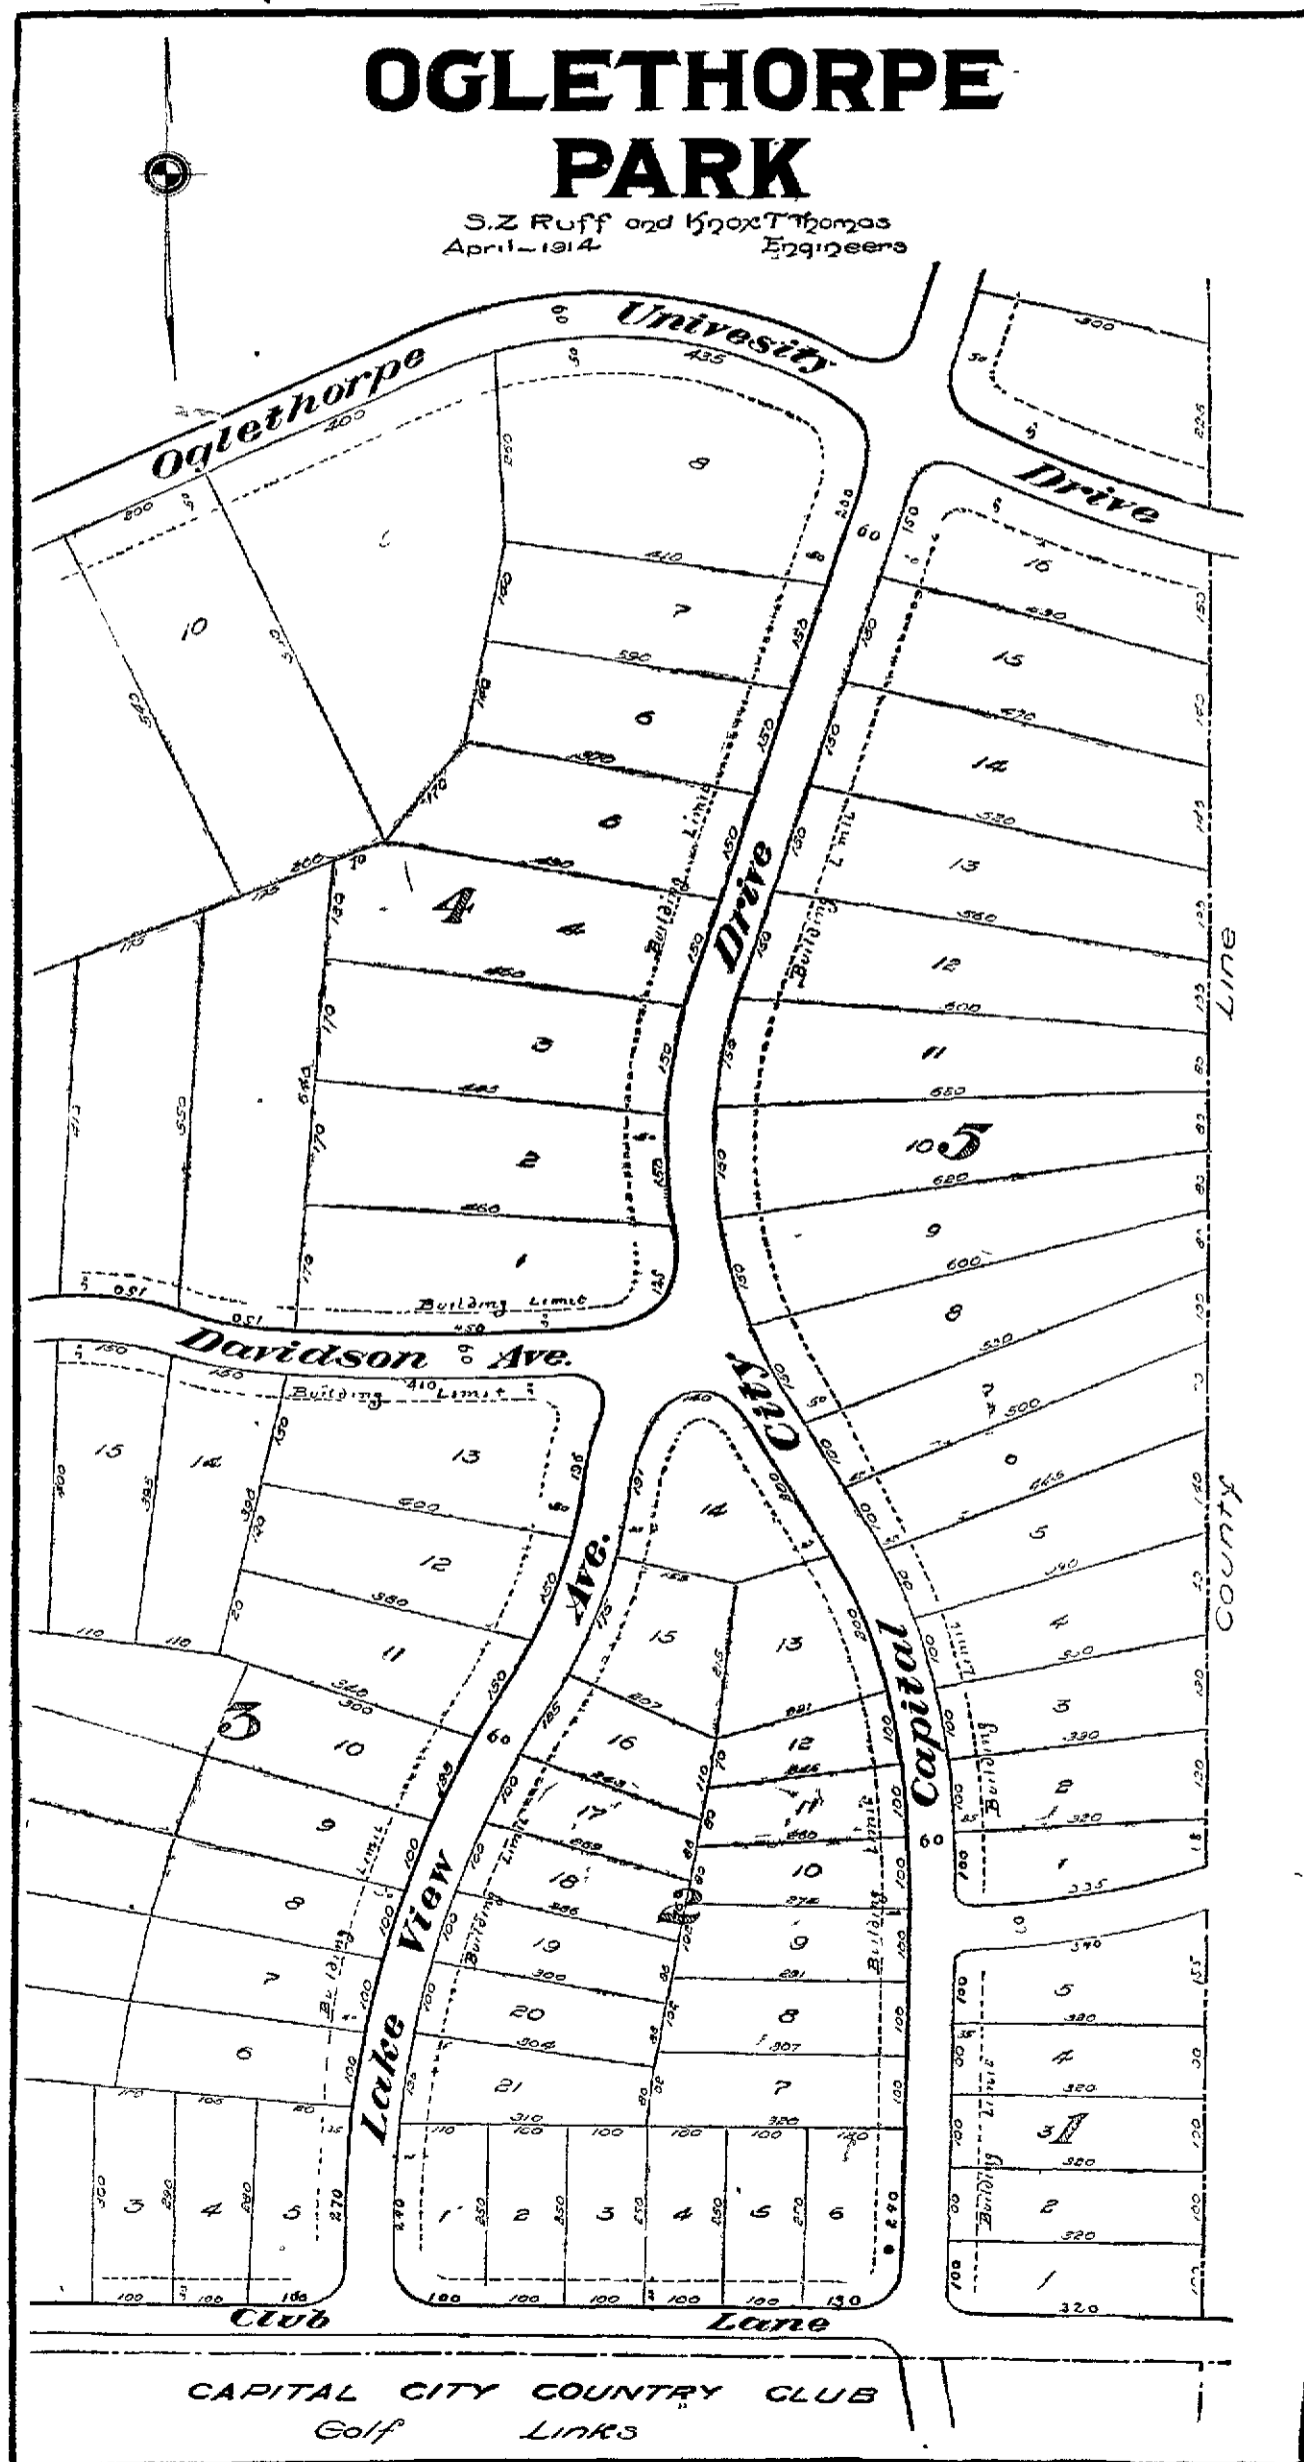

"An expert survey has been made of the grounds with a view of breaking dirt for the proposed building. The topographical survey is now under progress and will soon be submitted to the landscape artists who are to construct the most beautiful grounds possessed by any southern educational institution.

"The University now possesses a half-million in cash and real estate. Contributions are still coming in at an average of $10,000 monthly."

Editorial from Atlanta Georgian:

"Edwin P. Ansley has begun another great real estate development near Atlanta. This time he has chosen a plat of ground adjoining the golf course of the Capital City Club and is devoting all his wonderful energy to it. Mr. Ansley is the kind of a man who should be encouraged. The brains and capital of the Ansley type are constantly working in Atlanta and for Atlanta. They have made Atlanta."

Young man or young woman, you should start the safest, surest way known to humanity to lay by for your old age. Just as surely as big developers can reason out the wisdom of developing this land in wholesale, just that surely are you right when you invest your savings in OGLETHORPE PARK. It is the product of wisdom of many of our best citizens that has caused this development to be offered to you. Getting in on the ground floor, buying early, is a system that makes the biggest profits. AUCTION—MONDAY—3 P. M., April 13th.

HOW VOTES ARE SECURED

4. Candidates are not restricted to getting votes or subscriptions in their own particular district, but may secure subscriptions in any part of the United States; and if cash accompanies the order, voting certificates will be issued, but voting certificates will be issued only on cash-in-advance subscriptions.
5. Candidates in one district are not competing with candidates in other districts, except in the instance of the grand prizes. The division of districts, as shown elsewhere in this paper, so equalizes competition that every candidate has an equal chance to win.

9. On payments other than those scheduled, votes will be issued according to the scheduled amount next below the amount so paid.
10. Ballots cannot be bought. They can be obtained only by subscribing and preparing a subscription to The Constitution or by cutting daily ballots from the paper.
11. To insure being counted all daily ballots must be neatly trimmed, uniform size, fastened together and sent in flat. Do not fold the ballots.

FILL OUT THE TOP

12. In sending in daily ballots it is unnecessary to fill out more than the top ballot in each package. Then write on this ballot the number of votes the package contains. Contestants who fail to comply with this rule may accept the count of the contest department of The Constitution as final. Do not acknowledge the receipt of daily ballots unless an error is discovered in your count.
- Only one nomination ballot good for 5,000 votes is placed to the credit of each candidate in the published score. Daily ballots are also credited to the published score. Voting certificates are issued on subscriptions only.
13. Each publication of daily ballots will be final, except in case of typographical error or mistake of the contest department. It is impossible to give all daily ballots and they will be destroyed three days after date of publication.
14. By the filing of votes all contestants must accept and agree to the conditions.
15. Votes once issued to one contestant cannot be transferred to the credit of another.
16. No voting certificates can be cast for publication and the subscriptions upon which they were issued used in making up clubs then forming.
17. Votes issued in error will be declared void by the campaign department of The Constitution and thrown out if cast.
18. Neither salaried employees of The Constitution nor their immediate families can enter the contest.
19. In case of a tie, prizes of equal value will be given to those trying.

In the Social Whirl

By Isma Dooly

IN connection with the beautiful portrait of Mrs. Richard Johnston there are several incidents of unique interest. The artist of the portrait is Madame Vallet-Bisson, who last month was decorated by the government of France with the Red Cross of the Legion of Honor, in honor to her following the recent exhibition of a group of portraits by her which critics declare to be masterpieces in the records of French art. She is the third eminent woman decorated by the French government this year, the other two being that great exponent of dramatic art, Sara Bernhardt, and Madame Adolph Brisson, distinguished as one of the most powerful of French journalists.

Lake Madame Brisson, Madame Vallet-Bisson is co-head of one of the most famous of French studios, her husband an artist of international note, and a chevalier of the Legion of Honor. While Mr. Vallet-Bisson paints almost exclusively in oils, Madame Bisson is famed as a pastelist, as well as an artist in oils. She is as well known among the art lovers of Britain as among those of the United States, her work here several years ago bringing to her several subjects which have added to the fame of her studio.

Though she will not acknowledge it herself, Mrs. Johnston was invited by the French artist to sit for the portrait, and another one of Mrs. Johnston similar to the one which hangs in her drawing room here hangs in the studio of the famous French artist, and was one of those which brought to the latter the decoration of the Legion of Honor.

ATTRACTED BY HER TYPE OF BEAUTY.

Madame Vallet-Bisson was in New York several years ago, and there saw Mrs. Johnston. She was struck by her patrician type of beauty: the classic outline of her features and a certain individuality, which the French artist declared was one rare in any country.

She invited Mrs. Johnston to sit with her, and the result was not one, but two beautiful portraits, the one photographed and published today selected by Mrs. Johnston's family.

She was a Miss Isabel Thomas, of Athens, and resided in Macon until two years ago, when her mother, Mrs. W. W. Thomas, became an admired and popular hostess in Atlanta's social world.

Mrs. Johnston will have with her during opera week her mother-in-law, Mrs. J. Marshall Johnston, of Macon, and she will be among Atlanta's charming hostesses entertaining friends from a distance during opera week.

RECOGNITION OF TALENTED WOMEN.

France has taken the lead in recognizing the feminist movement, and by willingly recognizing the merit of women wherever it manifests itself. In the last quarter of a century, one hundred women have been decorated by the government for their achievements, and several have been made members of the Academie. It was suggested by one to whom I made this comment that, though France had been more ready than any other country to recognize the ability of woman whenever expressed to a marked degree, French women were never militant in expressing themselves or demanding their rights; that they preserved the traditional ideal of waiting to be discovered. Even those who have borne triumphantly in trailing robes and crowned heads into the very sanctum of sanctums of French intellect, French science, French art and French literature have been sought that the honors might be conferred upon them. They have held to feminine reserve, even in achieving in lines where masculine strength of thought had almost exclusively prevailed, and have preferred to make their conquests through the circle in the salon, or through the library or studio, rather than from the platform or rostrum.

They have, with but few exceptions, always preserved what may be termed the very ethics of femininity, even that majestic little figure of Joan d'Arc in soldiers' armor, which history hands down sculptured in marble and bronze, bearing with it so eloquently the spirit of the woman heroically manifest.

WHEN SHE LOVES NOT WISELY.

And another impression even the superficial reader must get of the French woman is that when she has been too easily won—when she has loved not wisely, but too well—it has ever been genius in man that has won her, not always the atmosphere of courts and courtiers which dazzled the duBarry.

A ready example of this was Victor Hugo's adoring Juliet Drouot, who wrote him a billet doux every day for nearly thirty years, and received the same from him. Her home was so simple "it was almost cold," biographers tell us. She was not so beautiful, but she had that charm which attracted men of genius and art to her, and men, too, who could lavish upon her all the luxury men do upon the women who adore them. The Russian prince of most marked estate in Paris of her day not only offered her the surroundings his wealth could give, but the honor of his name in marriage. She preferred to live and love Hugo, to whom she would so often write when she had told the same story over again, "Dear Victor—I kiss your hand" "Poor Juliet!"

It is the woman in France who now and then arises to raise her hand against some institution which does her or the child a wrong, something which strikes home. She is thus portrayed by Brieux in his drama "La Robe Rouge," when she raises her hand against the quality of justice meted out in the French court. It was for the man she loved a French woman committed murder, the other day. Her personal rights in her relation to that man had been infringed upon, she thought—and you have theme for the French drama for years to come.

Indeed, the more one thinks of this French woman, in her century after centuries of wit, and witchery, and sometimes wisdom, she presents almost the descriptive of the little girl in the little story who "when she is good she is very good, indeed, and when bad, she is horrid."

When they are good and clever in France, they decorate them, put them on pedestals, and proclaim them great. And France reaches out in this desire to recognize feminine merit.

A CHARMING WOMAN DECORATED BY FRANCE.

A charming woman from Worcester, Mass., visited Atlanta this past winter, who had been decorated by the French government—the department of education. She was Mrs. Homer Gage, the guest of Mrs. Otley, at Joyeuse. This decoration came to her through her efficient work in the American branch of the Alliance Francaise, of which she is the first vice president. At the time of the visit that Madame Gage spoke fluently the French language, and has studied carefully the literature, philosophy and art of France.

She expressed so much in her presence, French esprit, so much of it in her conversation, that one realized how well French piquancy can impart itself to those who respond to its teachings. This piquancy proceeds so directly from the French mind which leads to art and beauty and separates them from the everlasting commonplaceness of things.

Atlanta's Alliance Francaise is under the leadership of a native French woman, Mme. Siffer, while Mrs. John Marshall Slaton is honorary chairman. Mrs. Slaton and Governor Slaton have been students of French literature since their marriage. The governor reads it fluently and Mrs. Slaton both reads and speaks it fluently. She was one of the number of eighty or a hundred Atlantians who entertained M. Andre Bellesort when he was here last Monday and lectured in French on the truth about the French home in its relation to French life. M. Bellesort is a member of the lecture board of the Alliance Francaise and is one of a group of distinguished Frenchmen who will lecture in America this year, Atlanta to have her part of this department of the alliance.

Though one bears a great deal ever and anon about the popularity of French as the universal language being on the wane and how Russian supremacy threatened in time the popularity of French as the great world language and how even the English language would come to be "more spoke" than any other, it is la belle langue which still holds as the language people speak at court when the language of that court is not generally known. It is French artists speak when they meet in the cosmopolitan center and the man or woman of the day who makes any pretensions to study or travel or to enter into the atmosphere of world affairs wherever they meet. It is French literature, the first wrote short stories for the American magazines, then finished literary critics. Her first husband was a professor in the Chicago university. She was a part of the intellectual life there until her residence in Paris and her marriage to Dr. Gage, a French scientist of marked attainment. She was studying with him, and attending a course of lectures in his academy, when one of the speakers touched upon certain social problems of the southern states of the United States.

GEORGIA WOMAN WHO DIED IN PARIS.

in Paris a little over a year ago, and who, if she had lived, would have, in time, been recognized there for her intellectual and literary talents, was Laura McAdoo Gage, sister of the secretary of the treasury. Beautiful and brilliant in her youth, and a student of French literature, she first wrote short stories for the American magazines, then finished literary critics. Her first husband was a professor in the Chicago university. She was a part of the intellectual life there until her residence in Paris and her marriage to Dr. Gage, a French scientist of marked attainment. She was studying with him, and attending a course of lectures in his academy, when one of the speakers touched upon certain social problems of the southern states of the United States.

He misrepresented facts in statements he made pertaining to the negro race problem when the young American woman arose and in the most fluent French corrected the speaker, and instructed her learned listeners in the question about which she knew so much and they knew so little.

She was at once sought for by the intellectual element of that great city. She became a regular speaker at their conferences, and a contributor to French magazines, one of her last articles being a very brilliant one pertaining to the feminist movement as she saw it in France. Madame Gage, in her thought and attitude, her fearless and directness of utterance, had very much the spirit of her distinguished brother, now one of the most widely read in the world of affairs. With her knowledge and seriousness of viewpoint, her sense of personal conviction in her activities, she had that social gift and that love of life in its pleasures that made her home a most delightful one.

Miss Emily Harrison, of Atlanta, visited Madame Gage but a few moments previous to the latter's death and described as one of the interesting incidents of the visit that Madame Gage's little boy knew all the Uncle Remus stories and could repeat them in French.

AMERICA HAS WOMEN AS DESERVING.

These decorations which go to women in foreign countries for their abilities and their contributions to life, civic, artistic or literary, might well fall upon many women of our own nation, our own state, our own city, for as fast as I can think I can enumerate great women. Though she is a native of England, Jane Addams might well be decorated by the United States government for her knowledge and grasp of our industrial and social conditions, and the work she has done in working out certain problems.

No woman in Georgia is more worthy of a decoration from her state for literary achievement than Cora Harris, who, at this time, contributes to a wider scope of literary publications than any man or woman writer of the moment. Her books, published by Doubleday, Page & Co., are among the most widely read in this country and England. In the last six months she has had articles and short stories in The Saturday Evening Post, in Harper's Magazine (monthly), in Harper's Weekly, in Good Housekeeping, while a series of articles published in The Independent, running five weeks, have attracted the attentions of the most thoughtful of the critics.

The New York Sun gave a three-column review recently to this last achievement of hers. She has completed the matter for another book, which will be published serially in the early fall, and is at present writing the second story of the year, returning to her home in "The Valley" to put on the finishing touches. Mrs. Harr in three years' time has had four books published—an unusual achievement, especially in the fact that the books may be said to have struck a new note in literature—but another time can Mrs. Harr's eligibility to a "decoration" be discussed.

AN ATLANTA WOMAN WORTHY OF DECORATION.

Atlanta's lady, worthy of a decoration, is Anne Wallace Howland (Mrs. Max Ryland Howland, of Boston), who is in Atlanta on a visit now. As a school girl she became librarian of the Young Men's library, Atlanta's first literary institution, and she never ceased in her determination to give Atlanta a worthy library until she saw built, established, equipped and marked as a great one, Atlanta's Carnegie library.

Atlanta's civic life has no greater asset that the Carnegie library. How it has made men and women would make a brilliant illuminating story, and the most telling and inspiring chapter in it would be the part taken by this one individual woman. She it was who brought the meeting of the American Library association to Georgia, when organized library work was almost unknown in this section. She inspired the idea of a library commission in Georgia, she was one of the organizers of the Georgia Library association. She formulated the plans and secured the appropriation from the outside and the appropriation from the city which made possible the establishment of the Carnegie library school of Atlanta, the first library school in the south, and the light of her constructive spirit has stayed with the work here even after she several years ago married Mr. Howland, of Boston. When she comes home, the city gates open wide, and the other afternoon at the library when she was given a reception by the school she founded, the assemblage was one of the most distinguished in personnel Atlanta could produce.

Many entertainments have been given her, and her presence brings joy always. Among her hostesses this week have been Mrs. Robert L. Foreman, Mrs. Percival Sneed, Mrs. Preston Arrington, Mrs. George Howard, Mrs. Harrison Blackley.

WINNER OF THE NOBEL PRIZE.

Can anyone pronounce the name of the genius who has won the Nobel prize? Atlanta has entertained two of the winners, the Baroness Von Suttner, who addressed the club women of Georgia eighteen months ago, and Theodore Roosevelt. The third winner was Selma Lagerloeff, the Norwegian genius, and now comes the last member of the distinguished group, whose name is Rabindranath Tagore, "first person of any race other than the Caucasian to receive a Nobel prize," so I heard Mrs. Sneed tell Mrs. Albert Howell at luncheon the other day.

W. B. Yates, in speaking of this new man on the horizon of fame, says of his poetry, "it has an innocence, a simplicity, that one does not find elsewhere in literature," and that "when he is speaking of children, one is not certain that he has not also speaking of saints." Mr. Yates thinks that one of the most beautiful of Tagore's works is that entitled "The Crescent Moon." Extracts from that poem are:

I paced alone on the road across the field while the sunset was hiding its last gold like a miser. The daylight sank deeper and deeper into the darkness, and the widowed land, whose harvest had been respect lay silent. Suddenly a boy's shrill voice rose into the sky. He traversed the dark unseem, leaving the track of his ing across the hush of the even-

His village home lay there at the end of the waste land, beyond the sugar-cane field, hidden among the shadows of the bar of the slender areca palm, the coconut and the dark green jackfruit trees. I stopped for a moment in my lonely way under the starlight, and saw spread before me the darkened earth surrounding with her arms countless homes furnished with cradles and beds, mothers' hearts and evening lamps, and young lives glad with a gladness that knows nothing of its value for the world.

BENEDICTION.

Bless this little heart, this white soul that has won the kiss of heaven for our earth. I stopped for a moment in my lonely way under the starlight, and saw spread before me the darkened earth surrounding with her arms countless homes furnished with cradles and beds, mothers' hearts and evening lamps, and young lives glad with a gladness that knows nothing of its value for the world.

He has not learned to despise the dust, and to hanker after gold. Clasp him to your heart and bless him.

He has come into this land of an hundred crossroads. I know not how he chose you from the crowd, came to your door, and grasped your hand to ask his blessing. He will follow you, laughing and talking, and not a doubt in his heart. Keep his trust, lead him straight and bless him. Lay your hand on his head, and pray that though the waves undimmed grow threatening yet the breath from above may come and fill his soul and waft him to the haven of peace. Forget him not in your hurry, let him come to your heart and bless him.

ROME, GA.

Mrs. Harry Patton entertained a dozen at luncheon Thursday in honor of the bride-elect, Mrs. W. A. Blair was hostess to her sewing club on Friday afternoon to honor Miss Howell, while Mrs. Charles H. Smith entertained a number to dine at 6 o'clock with the betrothed. Miss Gertrude Johnson was the hostess of Tuesday next and of that pretty tea party Miss Howell will be an associate honoree. Following the marriage, in which so many are interested, a number of delightful affairs will be tendered the popular couple.

The piano recital at Shorter college given by Miss Edith Hall, pianist, a gifted member of the faculty, attracted a number to Shorter Monday evening.

Misses Aida Printrup and Ann Hamilton were the narrators of "Paklucchi" and "Rosenkavalier" and "Lohengrin".

Merchants Pleased With Federal Recognition of Atlanta as Trade Center of Southeast.

Merchants of Atlanta are enthusiastic over the broadcast publicity given this city's facilities as a trade center, among the first to express appreciation is F. D. Yates, vice president of Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, wholesalers of dry goods, who says: "The natural trend of business in the southeast is to Atlanta, so recognized by leading financiers of the country, and the federal government. 'Isn't it time to express appreciation to the possibilities of our section and the far-reaching effect of a national reserve bank located in our midst. 'Congress passed an act making it compulsory for all national banks to keep their reserves at home for developing business in their districts and to safeguard their interests in times of trouble. 'Previously banks kept their reserves in New York for call loans, giving high financiers at a stupendous scale, but conditions will change under the new banking act. 'There never will come a time when we can get all the money, but a legitimate business under the management of an efficient and capable person should be able to secure his needs. 'Money is in the commodity class and if you can buy it at home for sixty days or six weeks at a low rate as elsewhere, it would be unbusinesslike to spend time and money going to some other reserve center for that same article. 'Thousands are sending money to mail order houses for articles that could be bought at home for less money, supporting and adding to the incomes of mail order houses whose receipts exceeded one million dollars last year. 'If every person would give his home merchant co-operation and that merchant would likewise co-operate with manufacturers and jobbers of his section, business could be done on a more conservative basis at less expense and a smaller margin of profit. 'I congratulate the merchant who makes a success; it is the hardest game to play. 'My first years of business experience were spent with one of Georgia's most successful retail merchants whose policy I have found to be wise. 'Buy at home.'"

Atlanta Has Become An Important Coffee Distributing Center

Atlanta as a coffee market has been rapidly coming to the front in commerce during the last six years. George B. Morgan, general manager of the Atlanta Coffee Mills company, an expert coffee roaster, has made a study of the growing market, and announces that Atlanta has become one of the most important inland distributing centers for coffee in the United States. New York and New Orleans are the principal coffee markets, followed by Boston and Baltimore, but Atlanta takes a high rank among inland cities. Coffee, imported in the United States comes mostly from Brazil. It is cured there, the best of it remaining in the curing sheds for two years before shipment to American markets. Reaching these shores, cargo is broken and the huge bags distributed to the various markets, where the different grades are blended by experts, carefully weighed and placed in packages, the public, in the last few years, having become more and more addicted to the use of packaged coffee put up under the private brands of firms they know to be sound and most likely to use honest, sanitary methods in their plants. 'There are a number of important roasters in Atlanta, the most prominent being the Atlanta Coffee Mills company, McCord-Stewart, Merchants' Coffee association, Kamper and each of these takes large shares of the coffee importations, roast it for home use and distribute throughout a large territory.

MANUFACTURERS' OPINION OF JOBBERS

Philadelphia Man Invites Views of Manufacturers on Possibility of Eliminating the Middleman.

While there is a never-ending theory abroad in the land—especially among reformers who would solve the problem of the high cost of living—that the jobber is an entirely unnecessary factor in the distribution of food products, and there are constantly being evolved plans for eliminating "middlemen"—which have succeeded beyond the experimental stage—it is not often that tangible facts are marshaled to prove one or the other side of the controversy.

In a recent investigation of Philadelphia, some interesting testimony backed by real experience and tending to show that the jobber is a real economy. Mr. Landell's conclusions are contained briefly in the following report of what the manufacturer thinks of the jobber—expressed in his own words: "We are all too prone to accept hereinafter evidence, and we cannot criticize the average person who does not accept the theory of direct distribution," said Mr. Landell.

Business Judgment.

"It is a plausible theory. Would not any one of us on snap judgment believe that a farmer, coming to our local commission merchant store, could sell us eggs and butter for less money than could a retail grocer, who has to pay a commission man's profit, who receives the butter or eggs via express and packages must make a profit?"

"I say snap judgment for on giving a little sober thought and investigation to the matter I arrive at two conclusions: first, that many of the farmer replenishes his stock at the retailer's store, and secondly, that while we may sometimes get slightly fresher products, we will almost always pay more for them than we would if purchasing the same article at the corner grocery store. It is simply a matter of economics, the farmer's time is worth something, the up-keep of his horse and cart, and the fact that he has only one line of merchandise—probably a very limited quantity of that—and must therefore make a greater profit on the individual sale to assure a living wage.

"The same process of reasoning obtains in the distribution of any line of merchandise. There must be some immediate agents, be they jobbers, branch houses, commission men, brokers or what not. A producer cannot sell his product directly to the consumer advantageously.

Direct Trading Unprofitable.

"After consulting with persons I consider sufficiently advised on the subject to be capable authorities, my belief has been confirmed that shoes, confectionery and other commodities cannot be purchased to economic advantage in stores operated by manufacturers. It is their products exclusively to the consumer.

"The makers of one of the most extensively advertised brands of flour set their product in this market direct to the retailer. They have been doing this for a couple of years, and during that time jobbing grocers handling popular brands of flour have had the option of either being satisfied with the margin of profit they formerly made on flour sales and thereby avoiding the flour sold direct to the retailer, or by getting under the 'umbrella' held over their heads by this independent firm of millers, enjoy larger profits on flour than ever before.

"That milling firm finds that their sales organization, their clerk hire, their delivery equipment and their credit department are such an expense that they find their head above water requires a much greater margin of profit than the jobbing grocer formerly secured from the consumer.

"Yes, and another flour milling corporation tried the same method of distribution and in about one year's time threw up their hands and pleaded with the jobber to take their goods out again and market their flour for them. 'Do you suppose the sugar refiners could set aside the services rendered them by the jobber and distribute their products direct to the retailer so advantageously that the consumer could buy his sugar for less money than he does now?' No, emphatically not.

Testing the Issue.

"I have written to over twenty representative manufacturers of food or kindred products asking their opinion as to the economic value of the jobber. I picked out those whose well-known policy is to consider the jobber an unnecessary distributor medium, for I felt that their opinions would be important and interesting even though necessary to the manufacturers in the world and the consensus of opinion was that the jobber is an economic factor in the rapid distribution of food products."

Lowry Produce Co. Nicely Located in Their New Quarters

The Lowry Fruit and Produce company has been in their new quarters two weeks, during which time they have been pretty busy keeping pace with the demand for their goods. Straightened the many things that invariably come with moving. 'I have a special mail department for the out-of-town trade and in discussing this matter we had a most interesting conversation. 'That it enabled the merchant to buy his requirements as intelligently as his own was the main reason. 'Through this department he can get posted on the market, dealing in safe, reliable and profitable commodities. 'In this business there is no quantity so limited and the range of territory so large that it is not possible to materially deal with the past several months through our market bulletin which we mail to our customers. 'I have an item in which he is interested, we communicate with us by phone. 'Understand, in inaugurating this department, we don't want to convey the impression that we consider it better to buy by phone, rather than from our salesmen, instead, it is intended as a sales outlet, and a means by which our salesman is absent from his territory, also for the trade in territory not covered by our salesforce."

TEACH YOUR MEN HOW TO OBSERVE

Employee's Ability May Depend Upon the Boss. How One Lad Fell Down.

Once upon a time there was a man in the lumber business. He employed many people, among the rest a junior and a senior clerk. His business grew apace, and there came a time when it was necessary to open a branch office in another city. The senior clerk, who had many moons, and he wanted to get the job of managing the new branch. But he didn't get it.

Whereupon the senior, whose name was George, went to the yard and made bold to ask the lumber merchant: "Why the injustice? Why this lack of recognition of my life-long service?"

Mr. Merchant said: "All right, George, I will tell you why. But there is something I want you to do for me first. Please go and see if any logs were cut here about last night." George ambled forth, and in due course returned, and said unto the merchant: "No, sir. Some logs arrived last night."

"How many?" asked the merchant. "George said, 'I don't know. I didn't notice.'"

"Please go and see," said George. "I don't know, I didn't notice." "What kind were they?" "I don't know," said George. "I didn't notice."

The merchant asked him to go and get that information. When George finally returned, he informed the merchant that there were seven carloads of oak and five of maple. Whereupon the merchant said to the junior: "What do you think of that?"

"Please go and see if any logs came from the yard about last night," said John. "I don't know, I didn't notice." "What do you think of that?"

John departed, came back in a much briefer time than had George on any one of the several occasions, and said: "Yes, sir, twelve carloads of oak, seven of oak and five of maple. I don't know, I didn't notice."

That's the reason, George. The junior had the mental fact of his understanding placed right on the principle of observation. George hadn't. But George might have been taught that principle.

Don't laugh at George. The employer was as much to blame as the employee was of the "There's your job, sink or swim, live or die, survive or perish" sort of man. Men can be taught the principles of success as certainly as they can be taught arithmetic. The true function of the employer is that of teacher and employees are fast learners and that the duty of the employer does not end with the handing out of the pay envelope once a week.

building the move from their old location on the Forsyth street side of the above building, was made the first of last week. The company, under the guidance of Miss Jacqueline Van Haden, has been operating in Atlanta for the past six years, during which time the business has steadily increased. Several weeks ago Miss Van Haden decided that more adequate quarters were necessary to progress.

HIGH IMPORTANCE OF THE RETAILER

Why the World of Commerce and Trade Is Dependent Upon Services of Retailer.

By William T. Gates. Too little consideration of the importance of the retail division of trade in commerce is given by us all. Too much disposition to class those engaged in the retail distribution of merchandise as being of an inferior and indulged in by us all. That's all wrong. Those who make up that class are engaged in the most important and supremely important element of the life of every description, produced by the manufacturer and the output of simple machinery elements. The products of manufacturers are simply primary articles of the consumer. Through the hands of the retailer, the products of the manufacturer reach the consumer. Let us get it right. The overgrown opinion—one cannot call it "idea"—that the smoke belching factory or mine worker, or the soil and forest worker, supplies those who put into the hands of the user the results of their work, is out of date. The former took in factory and mine, on the farm and in the forest, with the sole hope that the great world of consumers will be prevailed upon to use their output, and the retailer is their only hope that this may be accomplished. Let us look the matter straight in the face, then, all other branches of industry lean upon, and depend upon, those who labor—oh, so earnestly, the ready to use more present stocks so that others may take their place.

ness, and so it is coming to be recognized by the retailer in the same manner, though to a greater degree, I believe. Men and women in the retail division of business are wonderfully interested in the virtue of effort; effort to improve in personal power; to lead others to think as they think; to persuade others to purchase goods of right quality, in just quantities; to lead others to think as they think; to believe as they believe, and to do as they desire them to do, in the interest and to the satisfaction and profit of both buyer and seller.

We find men and women in business, among all classes, who do not appear to realize that they are but cogs in the great wheel of trade, and who act as though they were specially privileged. These all too often may be found in the errand class—the primary class; producing and making—shaping—that those at the top, nearest the king—the consumers—may distribute to him and her. The retailer is nearest the sovereign in this trade world. And he's coming to realize the fact.

EASTER

THE best street suits and frocks for Spring are extremely simple, gaining their distinction from exquisite color harmonies and the beauty of the silhouette. The three models in the sketch demonstrate this.

The central figure shows a gown in tango yellow duvetyne with a black velvet girdle. The bodice is cut to simulate a bolero worn over a net waist with a calla Lily collar. The little toque is somewhat on the lines of a Turkish fez, with two snipped ostrich pompons.

THE extremely modish saint on the prie dieu bought her halo in a millinery shop. It is of gold colored ribbon, wired to a skull cap of black velvet. The suit is of sap green French taffeta. The far-away coat ends in a faring flounce, which harmonizes with the circular tunics on the skirt. The rest is of gold colored moire.

THE one on the left is of purple silt poplin, with soft draped revers of black and white stripes and a girdle of one of the new French ribbons that have raised figures in velvet on a satin ground. The skirt is draped en bouffant at the top. The guimpe is of white chiffon, fastened with jet buttons and finished with a new edition of the upstanding lace collar. With this is worn an aeroplane hat in vivid green.

LUCILLE LOVE. The Girl of Mystery

A Soul Thrilling Story of Love, Devotion, Danger and Intrigue

By the "MASTER PEN"

Copyright, 1914, All moving picture rights reserved by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company. Interchangeable will be vigorously prosecuted. This installment of the story will be shown in moving pictures tomorrow at the Savoy and the Alhambra No. 1, and later at the Bonita and the American.

AINTLY sweet (the tantalizing perfume lingered in the room, and the rustle of Lucille Love's skirts seemed still to sound against the walls of the tiny room which General Sumpter Love used as his private office; the echo of Lieutenant Gibson's pleading tones had not departed when the door leading to the servants' quarters moved.

A cautious fraction of an inch at a time, a sound so faint that nothing lived between it and silence succeeded the departure of the General's aide and the girl he loves, the girl he means to marry. As the butler's face framed itself on the threshold, the door was opened that led to the ball room, a burst of music vibrated there, then all was silence. The butler closed the door swiftly behind him and slipped across the floor, stooping before the safe, his dexterous fingers manipulating the knobs with a careless certainty that spoke of the master cracksmanship, his face against the cold steel, his ears fairly peaked with the tenseness of his listening for the click of falling tumblers. His expression betrayed no anxiety. He knew his worth, knew the preponderance of the safe in which his master placed so great confidence and so which he had consigned the papers and orders he had just received from Washington until the ball was over and he had time to study the instructions at his leisure.

The cracksmanship heaved a sigh of relief as his sensitive finger tips told him the last tumbler had fallen. The great iron door swung open to his tug. For a second he waited, listened to the scuffle of feet, the melody of the orchestra. Then his hand disappeared, exploring the contents of the safe.

He was swift: he was certain: he was sure. Not a paper was disarranged. His fingers fluttered like little white birds, drifting among the General's papers with a certainty that bespoke great familiarity. With a sigh of relief he stared at the sealed packet he had just seen the army officer receive and place here. The butler thrust it in his pocket, drawing out a package of bank notes and putting it in the tiny vault where the papers had been. The door closed softly, the knobs whirring under the man's touch.

Again he waited, listening. Listening. The vibrations of the dancers' feet continued for a second, the strains of music died. With the noiseless glide of a panther the butler slipped across the floor and closed the door behind him.

Not one motion had been wasted. For months he had served in his mental capacity for this one opportunity. For months to come he would continue to serve in order that no suspicion might rest upon him. Quietly, as though nothing had happened, he stepped to the great kitchen where the little brown servants of the household were scurrying heedlessly about, frightened at even the momentary absence of their master when the elaborate collection for the guests was still to be served.

A word here, a hint there and the Filipinos were on their way to the General's dining room with their burdens. All capability, all deft certainty, without a wag a word, a move, the butler brought his unending back to the state of perfection into which he had trained them. As unconscious of the stolen envelope in his breast pocket as though such a thing as a burglarized safe had never been, Thompson alias Tommy the Dude, alias "Chi" Tom and wanted for just such jobs in many police departments of the world went about his work, only heaving a huge sigh of relief when General Love nodded curtly in token that the room where the buffet had been served might be cleared.

Ten minutes later the furtive expression came back to his face, the stealthy crease to his frame. Noiselessly he glided out the rear of the house, scurrying across the moon-splashed parade ground and losing himself in devious windings among the officers' homes upon the military reservation. Manila slept noisily, the droning hum of the myriad insects rising and falling with the ever-recurring waves of heat that flooded in from the ocean. Only the General's mansion glowed with light, a gangling structure transformed by the eerie witchery of night into a fair palace of gold, the windows huge diamonds with each facet catching in its heart a score of moon-beams. Thompson nodded to himself as though very well satisfied, then slipped down a narrow side street, lined with disreputable houses that leaned at drunken angles toward one another, the filthy windows winking heartily to their neighbors. Before the largest of these places the butler paused a second. His hand reached toward the bell-pull. From some distant part of the house came back an echo. Slowly, very slowly the door swung open, swallowing up the figure of the thief-butler.

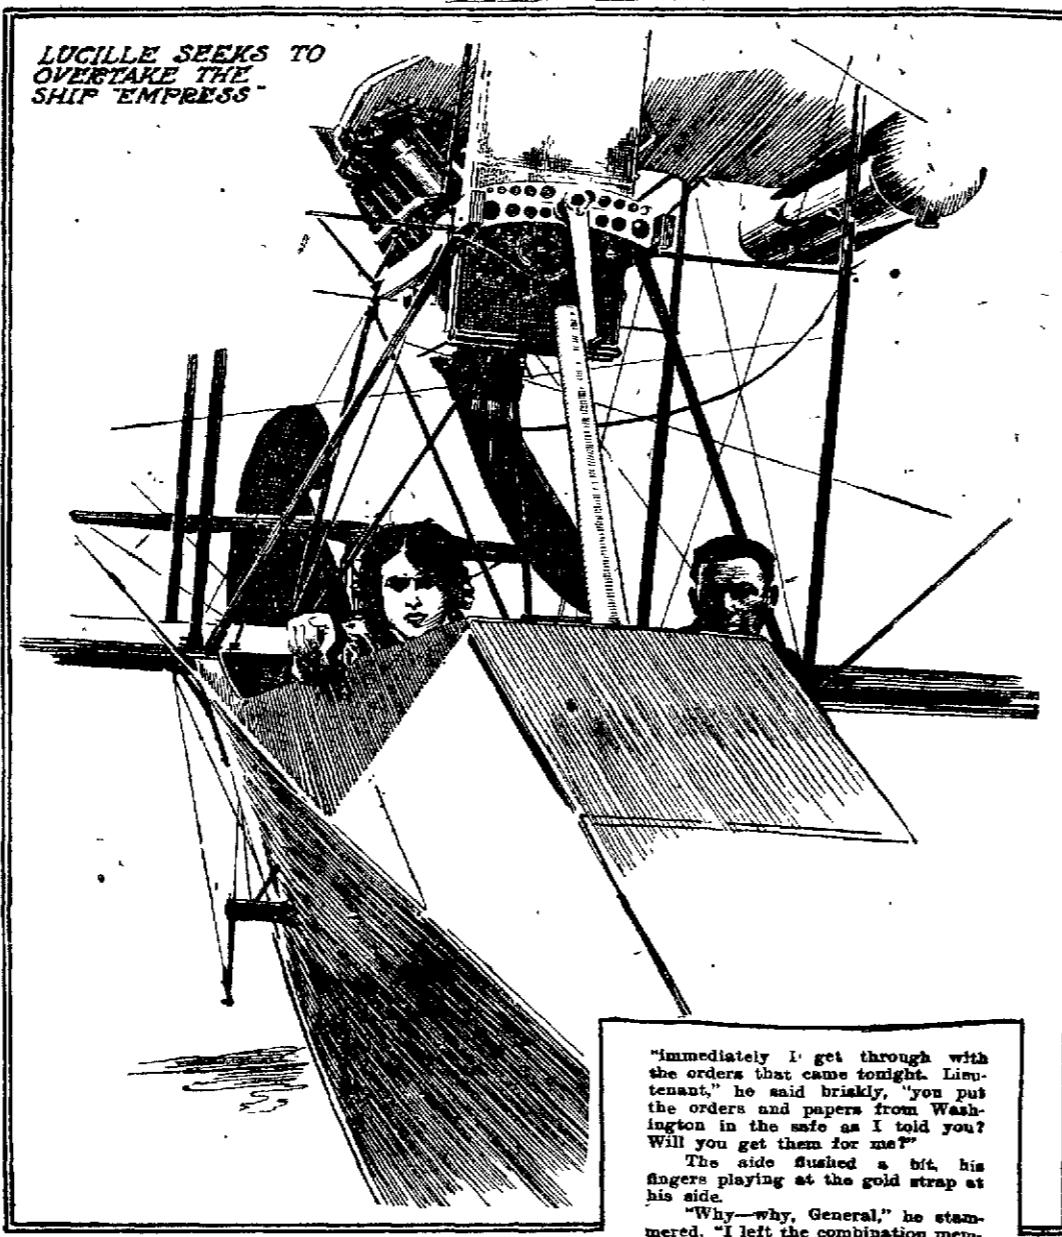

CHAPTER II. The Finger of Suspicion.

GENERAL SUMPTER LOVE, U. S. A., smiled tolerantly to himself as he overheard the low voices of his aide and Lucille coming from the little cozy corner in which the young lieutenant had hidden his sweetheart away from the avid dancers who would have taken her away from him. The old man closed his eyes a moment, the harsh lines which absolute dictatorship and war had sculptured upon his face slowly disappearing before the softened expression retrospection placed there, an expression summoned up by memories of the days at the Point before every thought of oak leaves upon his shoulders dared intrude itself within his eager mind, before Lucille was born, before Lucille's mother had made her choice.

The General shook his bulky shoulders and rose, moving toward his private office. It was seldom such memories came to him and when they did it was with the effect of realizing to him that there was more than memories provided pitiful compensation. He sighed heavily as he realized he stood on the threshold of another change, that the courtship of his aide had finally been successful and another household would soon be occupied in Officers' Row, leaving him alone in this great house.

He wondered if all fathers felt this way, wondered if he could gladly give his daughter to another man and be happy watching that other remould her world. And the time was so short. That very boat in the harbor now might bear the Senate's confirmation of young Gibson's promotion to the rank and pay of Captain. The two men had agreed that the marriage should wait on that and the General had to admit that the aide had stood up to his word. But then Gibson always did that.

Again to his private office, his shoulders striding briskly to his private office. Only in work could he get relief from these fits of depression. And there was always work to be done, for the little brown people loved their fighting, were never satisfied with peace and quiet. For a second he stood at the window, staring at the great boat in the harbor, at the dappling waters, restful now save for the faintest movement when the soft tropical breeze moved caressingly across it. And that boat might bring word of his aide's promotion. He turned and pressed the annunciator on his desk, curtly commanding the soldier who responded to send Lieutenant Gibson to him.

General Love permitted a smile to play about the corners of his stern mouth as the rustle of a woman's skirt reached his ears simultaneously with the click of his aide's boots. Game a brief whispered conversation outside the door, then the aide stood upon the threshold at attention, Lucille hiding behind him in an attitude of mock timidity. The old man bit his moustache viciously, then smiled broadly.

"Well?" he demanded, fumbling among the papers that littered his desk. "What have you got to say for yourself, young woman?"

Lucille slipped across the floor, twining a pair of white arms about her father's neck, the soft velvet of her cheek smoothing his brown, leathery one. It was the way she had coaxed him when a child, the way she had never outgrown or known to fall.

"It's about Dick's promotion, Dad," she whispered. "It hasn't come on the Empress and that means wait at least another month. If there was any chance of the Senate's failing to confirm it, we wouldn't bother you, but a month is such a long time and—and Dick has some money now—"

"Yes—yes—yes," the General retorted gruffly, a twinkle in his eye that belied the tone. "But from what I've seen tonight and the last week since Harley started his aeroplane maneuvers, I thought there might be some change in your plans."

Lucille flushed prettily, her eyes flashing a mocking smile at the stalwart young officer in the doorway.

"Mr. Harley's a very nice man," she defended, "even if Dick does get jealous. Besides a girl has to be amused somehow when busy old generals keep their officers working all day and night."

The General straightened in his chair, brought back to the work he had planned for the evening by her words. Lucille sighed as she caught the difference, knew there would be no one teasing longer when his mind turned to the arduous duties which never ceased to pile upon him.

"I'll think it over, dear," he said kindly.

"Immediately I get through with the orders that came tonight, Lieutenant," he said brusquely, "you put the orders and papers from Washington in the safe as I told you. Will you get them for me?"

The aide studied a bit, his fingers playing at the gold strap at his side.

"Why—why, General," he murmured, "I left the combination memorandum in my room. Lucille was waiting and—"

"Get it," snapped the old man. The slightest infraction of military systems touched his heart on the raw.

He studied his aide curiously when he returned and began fumbling with the knobs of the safe. Gibson was still embarrassed at his blunder, realized his superior was thinking that since Lucille entered into his life these blunders had shown a decided tendency to pile up. The door opened and the Lieutenant's hand automatically reached inside toward the place where he had put the packet. An expression of incredulous dismay was upon his face as he drew out a bundle of bank notes.

"Why, I don't remember these," he cried, then, with an expression of relief, "you have already been here, sir?"

"No," General Love's tone was peremptory, crackling. He did not relish delay of any sort. "Come, come! The papers I gave you, Lieutenant."

The aide fumbled through the papers in the safe, the expression of confidence on his face changing to one of blank incredulity, then utter dismay, as a second thorough ransacking failed to reveal the big envelope. He drew a long breath as he straightened to attention, his face very white and drawn, his voice no more than a whisper.

"General, they are—not—there."

"Not there?" Like the crackling of fire in dry twigs was the old man's voice. "Not there, sir! They perhaps they too may be in your room."

"No, sir, I distinctly recall placing them in the order box. There was no money there at the time."

The human body surcharges a room with electricity at times of greatest stress. Rigidly the two men stared into each other's eyes, doubt, changing to suspicion, suspicion to accusation on their faces. But two men had access to that orders and papers. General Love suddenly rose, his chair scraping raspingly upon the tense silence.

"Lieutenant Gibson," he began, his voice rivaling the sound of the scraping chair. "Lucille mentioned a moment ago that you had suddenly acquired sufficient money to justify an immediate marriage."

"Yes, sir, A legacy—"

General Love snorted his disbelief.

"Leaving the combination of this safe, with secrets which are invaluable to the United States; with secrets that would be of untold value to the enemies of the United States; with secrets that might mean the sacrifice of not territory alone but countless lives—does that not strike you as strange, not to say suspicious that such a precious thing should be left in your room, Lieutenant?" The tones of the General's voice had risen in a never-silencing through every syllable.

His aide did not answer. His lips opened to speak then, with one look at the startled, frightened face of his sweetheart, they snapped shut again. His grey eyes were hard and cold as steel, his mouth but a thin line, a seved-up gash across his face under the dilating nostrils. His silence seemed to anger the commanding officer.

His heavy fist slammed down upon the desk.

"The papers, Lieutenant Gibson—immediately. This is your last chance."

"I placed them in the safe and they are not there now, sir." The tones were quiet, cold, determined.

The General stepped swiftly forward, his fists clenched as for a blow. With an effort he commanded himself, then turned and pressed the annunciator.

"You will go to your quarters, sir, and consider yourself under arrest. The humiliation of an escort will be spared you. However, there will be a guard about the place."

A faint, little cry of protest sounded clear and distinct against the dead silence. The young man's hand fell from salute as he stepped swiftly toward his sweetheart. General Love's arm reached out and drew the sobbing girl to him, his left hand outstretched as though the mere touch of his side would be defying. Gibson halted in his tracks. Again his arm rose stiffly in salute then, without a word, he turned, his steps falling fainter upon the ears of the pair who listened with leaden hearts.

LOUBEQUE, THE INTERNATIONAL SPY FOLLOWED BY LUCILLE

CHAPTER III. A Man With But One Thought.

HUGO LOUBEQUE turned the packet of papers and orders over and over in his hand, a brooding expression in his eyes that told his thoughts were very far away from the butler-cracksmanship who had just brought them to him. A massive figure of a man, he seemed to fill the room with his presence, the chair in which he sat seemed to have been built about him, the room itself with its magnificent furnishings was dwarfed by its occupant. Greatest of international spys, the rise and fall of many nations might have been placed at his door, rivers of blood had burst their barriers at the touch of those powerful fingers. As the musician plays from the organ loft upon the sweet-toned chords in the church steeple far above, so did Hugo Loubeque play upon human emotions, buying, selling, defying, commanding nations to do his will through his superhuman insight into the dominating characteristics which mastered the rulers of those nations. A thousand wires there were throughout the world—that responded to the master touch of this dark musician whose instrument was humanity, a thousand wires and yet again a thousand, and all—were directed towards revenge against one man, toward the destruction of General Love. What hideous memories that name of Love evoked! It went his thoughts back to the horrible extent of his life, to the military college, the scene of his disgrace where he had been exposed to the scorn of his fellow classmates. The proofs of his dishonorable plotting and treason work had been furnished by Cadet Sumpter Love his successful rival for the love of a beautiful girl. The conclusive and uncontrovertible proofs of his guilt had resulted in his dismissal from the service and disenfranchisement as a citizen of his native country.

Bitter and still more malignant grew his feeling of hatred against this fellow cadet of his early manhood days, this man now General Sumpter Love, as his mind swept back to the days of a never to be forgotten past, the days of his downfall and disgrace.

Over and over he turned the stolen papers. Only another link it was in the chain he was drawing about the old army officer. Many more there would be before his work was finished and, already, his brooding eyes were sighted along the future—planning—plotting. The butler coughed nervously and his master looked up, waving him away without a word of praise. The man had but done his duty. Hugo Loubeque expected that. The telephone rang and the spy stiffened in his chair, no more the dreamer. Loubeque was at work, finishing this detail in his scheme of revenge.

CHAPTER IV. "For the Honor of a Man."

IN a world of mental and physical inequalities such as this there would be but scant chance for the weakling were it not for a kind Destiny taking the cards in his own hands and stacking them to make the game more equal. With the ruins of every hope smashing about her, without a thought save the need for a confidant and friend in league with her, she took up the telephone to speak with her chum, the wife of a young officer who had only just reached the post a month before.

On such slight things do hinge great consequences: on such trifles may be decided the wrecking of the most cunning plot of the master mind that dominates nations. For a second, sensitized by suffering though her mind was she did not catch the significance of the orders being given by the man whose name had crossed her own. Then a feeling of fairness caused her to reel at the power and strength she caught in the tones. She listened, conquering her fear in one triumphant throb of love for the imprisoned officer. Harley snatches could she get:

"General Love's orders and papers are in my possession now. For Shanghai on the Empress tonight. Have the launch ready."

And then the buzzing of the instrument told her that she could hear no more. It seemed too cruel, too impossible that her hopes should be raised so high only to be shattered. The General's orders and papers—The Empress for Shanghai immediately. She rushed to the window, her heart sinking at sight of the smoke curls spewing from the big liner's funnels. The Empress was ready—ready and her sweetheart was arrested. Resolution so vague as to be indefinable urged her across the floor and out the door. She did not stop to analyze the impulse which urged her feet across the parade ground, down the streets of Manila toward the dock. Her bosom was rising and falling tempestuously with the effort and a mad despair possessed her as she caught the signs of readiness from the Empress and saw there was no boat to take her out to the ship which carried the precious orders.

She beat her tiny fists fiercely together. There must be a way. There must be. Faintly to her ears came a humming sound from the boat. It reminded her of another sound she had heard recently, a sound she identified with the solution of her problem—Harley and his aeroplane.

It was five miles, but her horse could do the distance in short time. Faster even than she had reached the dock did she get to the stables. In amazement the groom looked at her as she followed her orders, she leaped into the saddle and through the moonlight she dashed, the little mare accepting this new freak of his mistress with delight.

The aviator had only just returned from the dance when she flung herself from the mare and grasped him fiercely by the shoulders, shaking him in the rohescence of her command. He stared at her unbelievably as he made out what she desired, but there was something in the entreating eyes, the drawn face, that told her deadly earnestness. His lips opened for a protest when she commanded herself and, placing her hands upon his shoulders, looked deep in the man's eyes.

"It means the honor of the man I love."

Harley turned away, turned toward the giant plane.

Lucille was pleading for the honor of the man she loved—pleading as only a woman can plead. There at the water's edge a soul stirring tragedy was enacted. The aviator—a man among men, was being asked by the girl he loved to risk her life, and his own to save the name of his strongest rival. Turn between conflicting emotions, he stared at her half unbelievably, as with appalling intensity she pointed wildly out across the bright blue water to where the majestic liner was steaming rapidly towards the horizon. Lucille hung breathlessly on the aviator's every action. His lips opened for protest, but there was something in the entreating eyes he could not resist. Breathlessly she watched him awaiting his decision. There was a curiously twisted smile upon his lips when he faced her again.

"Get in," he motioned. She had won her appeal.

Hugo Loubeque leaned against the liner's rail, pencil poised over the open page of the diary which was headed—Loubeque's Account with Love. Items upon that page had been cancelled, more remained clear. The hand started to draw through one of these. The hand started to draw through down a drumming sound from the heavens.

As his eyes wandered up the great bird in mid heaven grew more and more distinct, the figures of a man and woman emerging. A grim smile crossed the spy's face as he put the diary and pencil back in his pocket. For Hugo Loubeque was thorough, and the item might not be cancelled yet.

SHRINERS of North America To Gather in ATLANTA

FORREST ADAIR
POTENTATE YAARAB TEMPLE

SOUTHERN SUNSHINE AND SMILES

AUDITORIUM
WHERE CONVENTION WILL BE HELD

"A WAY down south in an land of cotton" will soon be a tune familiar to all Shriners' ears—for they are Dixie-bound. Atlanta, the Gate City of the South, will be the scene of the annual convention of the Shriners of North America, May 13-14.

Every state in the union and many sections of Canada will be represented. Over 20,000 Nobles are coming, and they will be entertained with old-fashioned southern hospitality, famous since ante-bellum days.

"Dar's buckwheat cakes an' injun butter. To make you fat, an' a little fatter."

There will be southern sunshine and smiles of welcome from the southern girl—the Peachtree girl—with raven tresses and flashing eyes. Her brother's a Shriner, you bet, and she'll be wearing a white fez in May.

There, there's that fragrant mint bed!

It is being kept under "intensive cultivation" for the Shrine.

In fact, everything that Atlanta can do, she is doing to make the gathering a magnificent success. And it's as a "doer" that Atlanta shines.

The city will be literally transformed for the convention. By permission of the mayor and city council the local Shriners' entertainment committee, headed by Potentate Forrest Adair, of Yaarab Temple, will take full control for the time of the whole street lighting system of Atlanta.

Great white globes with the Shriners' emblems thereon will be substituted for the top globes of the White Way clusters throughout the whole heart of the city. Arches and other fancy schemes of illumination will be erected over the down-town street crossings.

Turn Night Into Day.

The great dome of the capitol will be silhouetted in light, and special electrical decorations on hotels and business houses will make the whole central section a blaze of lights.

All this illumination will burn night-long until dawn, and the city will be awake every hour of the twenty-four while the Shrine is in session. There will also be flags and bunting in profusion.

Elaborate social functions and entertainments are in preparation, including a grand ball in the Auditorium-Armory on both evenings of the convention, at which two orchestras will be provided so that there will be no cessation of dancing. This auditorium, the largest in the south, with a seating capacity of nearly 8,000 people, has been reserved by the Shriners for the entire week. In this auditorium the annual southern seasons of Metropolitan grand opera are held and here "tunes" are sung to the largest audience in his career.

To Open All Clubs.

In addition to the special social functions, Atlanta's five golf courses, country clubs, lakes with bathing and boating, parks, theaters and other joy facilities, will all be devoted to the entertainment of the Shrine.

Recognizing the utter impossibility of issuing many thousands of courtesy cards, every social club in Atlanta has decided to recognize the Shriners' visiting card and will open their doors to all Shriners.

Certain sections of the country are noted for particular forms of hospital-ty; some for clam bakes; others for fish fries, and the like; but one's epicurean education is not complete until he has enjoyed the form of hospitality arranged especially for the purpose. The old-fashioned Georgia barbecue, the old-fashioned barbecue.

The barbecues are usually held in a pine grove near some sparkling spring. Pigs and sheep are roasted whole in pits dug especially for the purpose. The tables spread beneath the trees for the Shrine barbecues will accommodate from 2,000 to 5,000 persons.

Preparations have already been completed for adequately housing the immense gathering. Atlanta's hotel facilities are splendid, and in addition, the committee is erecting a large and comfortable building at Ponce de Leon park, where between 6,000 and 7,000 members of the patrols and bands will be cared for.

The Southern railway has set aside a part of its central yards where 400 Pullman cars may be parked. The Seaboard and other railroads have jointly arranged additional parking space, and it is estimated that there will be between 500 and 700 Pullmans parked during the meeting.

Whole Hotels Reserved.

Usually only one hotel is reserved for the representatives of the Imperial Council meetings, but the Piedmont and Ansley hotels have both been set aside in their entirety for the Atlanta convention, so that representatives will not only be amply cared for, but will be enabled, if they desire, to bring members of their families with them.

California, which desires to capture the 1915 meeting, has engaged four entire floors of the Kimball House, and has obtained the consent of the owners to change the name for that week to "Hotel California." They will come in four special trains with a brass band of 150 pieces and with 150 members of their uniform patrol. Their electricians will be here three weeks in advance to decorate the building inside and out. The Californians will keep open house, using the spacious ball room as a reception hall, and will dispense California fruits and wines.

The events of the convention will be gorgeous and spectacular. They will rival New Orleans' Mardi Gras.

Georgian Pageant.

There will be two immense parades one Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock, forming a vast official escort for the imperial potentate and members of the imperial council from the hotel to the place of meeting.

The second parade is to be at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening. In this parade not only members of the patrols and bands, but all the Shriners, as well as the patrol, wearing full evening dress with red fezes, Noble Burton Smith, of Atlanta, member of Yaarab Temple, has been designated by Potentate Adair as commander-in-chief of the parades. The Tuesday parade will be three or four miles long. The Wednesday night parade will be seven or eight miles long. There will be between sixty and seventy-five bands playing at one time in these pageants.

Seventy-odd bands playing at one time!

Can't you hear 'em?

More bands than have ever played for the inauguration of a president of the United States!

More bands than were ever attuned for the coronation of the greatest king or emperor in Europe!

Among these bands will be the famous "millionaire band" from the middle northwest, noted because every member of it is a coupon clipping pictorial.

Half a dozen kiltie bands are coming with kilts, bare knees and bagpipes.

Then there will even be an Indian band with tom-toms, to do the snake dance at Five Points and the sun dance along Whitehall. This band of Algonia temple, of Helena, Mont., as mascots for the temple on its pilgrimage to Atlanta. The band is composed of Blackfoot Indians from Glacier National park. Among them will be hunters, medicine men, singers, dancers, squaws and papooses. They will come with all their gorgeous feathers, blankets and Indian ornaments and during the week their camp will be pitched on a Peachtree street lawn. In this party will be the beautiful Indian girl, Dawn Mist, who is considered the most graceful and accomplished member of her race in the northwest.

These Shrine parades will, outshine and outglitter anything this side of the Orient. There will be real camels. There will be men dressed in real Oriental robes with real Oriental jewelry and carrying gleaming scimitars. There will be costumes as gorgeous as those described in the fairy pageants of the "Arabian Nights."

There will be a cowboy band.

Just imagine the English Durbar, the inauguration parade at Washington and Buffalo Bill's Wild West show, all marching at the same time in the same street, and you will have some faint idea of what Atlanta will look like when these big pageants begin to move.

The Arab Patrol.

The Arab patrols in Oriental uniform are always wonderfully attractive features of every national convention. The competitive patrol drills this year will be judged by First States army officers, selected from Fort Meade and the department of the Gulf, which has headquarters here.

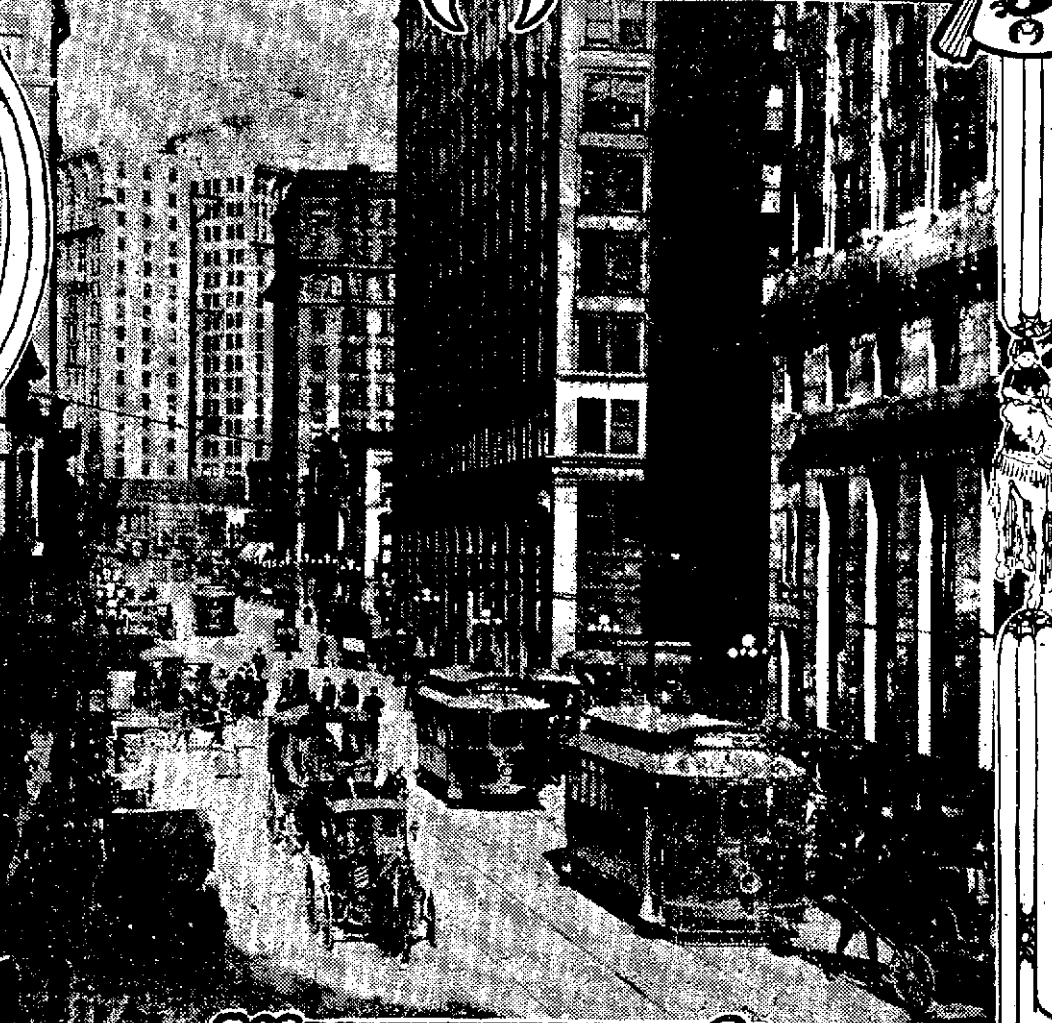

"The Convention City."

And now a word about the city that is going to entertain this tremendous gathering.

Beautiful, bustling, sunny Atlanta has been a charming hostess on many occasions, and already many great conventions have been held here by na-

The Easter Bonnet

FOR the woman with only a fair amount of cleverness the little bonnet of raspberry colored straw is certainly one that may be easily copied. One piece of straw will make this little bonnet and a wire frame to fit the little girl's head can be purchased for a small sum at any millinery shop. Lace, either cream or white, is gathered and put on the hat about an inch and a half from the face. The bunch of grapes on the left side forms the only ornament. This little hat can be carried out in any color combination desired.

The hat in the center can be made entirely of taffeta, pongee or linen. A little shape cut out of muslin can be made to fit the head of the little girl for whom it is intended and used as a model for the material decided on. The little turned up portion can be stitched on separately. The hat may be also made of a straw with the crown of blue taffeta and the embroidered band may be a beaded one or one of straw.

The third bonnet is a dainty little one in black and white. This, too, may be fashioned of straw or any material desired. The crown would be dainty of crisp white taffeta or of flowered chiffon over silk or may be composed of white straw of a different weave from that used for the brim of the bonnet. A little ruche of net on the inside will form a charming finish and one very becoming to the little girl.
