ROOSEVELT IS TRYING TO KEEP OUT OF POLITICS

At Least the Colonel Says He Is, and He Ought to Know.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., May 23.—"I'm trying to keep out of politics as much as possible," said Colonel Roosevelt today, despite the fact that since his return from South America he has been seeing political associates at the rate of half a dozen a day.

The colonel made this statement in response to a question about the organization work of the progressive party, and his opinion regarding proposals for its amalgamation with the republican party. He declined to express any views upon these subjects.

Preparing New Book.

Just at present the colonel said he was busy with the preparation of a new book, that would take up his spare time until after his return from Spain on July 4. After that he said he would give more time to politics.

"I'd like to get acquainted with my family," he explained, but he shook his head doubtfully as he said it.

James R. Garfield, of Cleveland, one of the closest political advisers of Colonel Roosevelt, brought to the colonel at Oyster Bay today that there was no thought among leading progressives of amalgamating with the republicans. Mr. Garfield, who was secretary of the interior during the Roosevelt administration, returned from Ohio to talk politics in his state with the colonel.

"The situation in Ohio," said Mr. Garfield, "is very promising. There is no thought of amalgamation with the republican party."

Former Senator Beveridge, of Indiana, who was expected at Sagamore Hill today, said that he would be unable to reach here.

The New York Fight.

Much of Colonel Roosevelt's time and energies are to be directed to the fight in New York state which is expected to give one of the severest tests of the strength of the new party. Theodore Roosevelt, chairman of the state committee, and Regis H. Post, former governor of Porto Rico, spent several hours at Sagamore Hill with them.

Colonel Roosevelt would say nothing to indicate that the state ticket had been discussed today. It is understood, however, that Oscar S. Straus has been brought forward as a possible candidate this year for United States senator.

For the candidate for governor, several names already have been mentioned. They include Frederick M. Davenport, former state senator and candidate in 1912 for lieutenant governor; William H. Hotchkiss, former superintendent of insurance, and Bainbridge Colby, New York lawyer.

New Imported Woolens For Summer Suits---

The Importance of Their Make

Someone recently said that the tailoring business had outgrown the old merchandising traditions and assumed the dignity of a banking house.

Perhaps that is overstating the case—but we will all concede the present standard in the tailoring field is distinctly to its benefit. The successful making of men's clothes today requires an acumen, daring and progressiveness that would quickly submerge our forefathers and vie with any banking business.

And no element contributes so potently to the successful tailoring establishment than the selection of materials.

Therefore you will be much interested in reviewing the De Luxe importations just received here for midsummer suits. They include every attractive feature that artist-designers of repute and skilled weavers can contribute.

These fine imported summer woolens include the famous Fresco suitings.

things of life, which, after all, go to make the big things of life. Governor Slaton was heard at his very best. Detached excerpts from the speech would give but little idea of its beauty and tenderness.

Colonel Paxton paid a high tribute to Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, president of the Uncle Remus Memorial association, to whose untiring efforts the preservation of the home was made possible.

Colonel Paxton said that the men of Atlanta had fallen in a task which the women had carried forward to success.

Mrs. Wilson spoke briefly of the work of the association and told how, through tireless effort, the association had at last been able to purchase the home and throw it open to the public.

Following Mrs. Wilson's speech, the bas-relief of Joel Chandler Harris—the splendid likeness of the dead author—was unveiled.

TO SELECT NEW HEAD OF MERCER UNIVERSITY

Either Sellers or Brittain May Be Made President.

Macon, Ga., May 23.—(Special).—The board of trustees of Mercer university will meet in Macon June 3 for the purpose of choosing a new president for the institution, and the indications are that either Acting President J. F. Sellers or State School Superintendent M. L. Brittain will be chosen. Both are known to be under consideration.

Since the resignation of Dr. S. T. Jameson, a year ago, Professor Sellers has been in charge of the university, and he has handled the affairs satisfactorily to everybody concerned. The success of his administration has caused several of the trustees to take the position that he should be made the permanent president.

Mr. Brittain is a graduate of Mercer and has been connected with educational affairs of the state ever since his graduation. His ability is unquestioned, and if the trustees decide on him his friends feel sure he will resign his state position and take up the work here.

Judge Harris at Bainbridge. Macon, Ga., May 23.—(Special).—Judge Nat E. Harris, candidate for governor, has announced that he will make Bainbridge Monday and that from now on he will stay in the field constantly, meeting the voters and discussing the issues of the campaign.

Railway Picnic. Macon, Ga., May 23.—(Special).—The eighteenth annual picnic of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen of building one of the largest railroad yards in the south will be completed, this being the new yards of the Central of Georgia railway. The plan is to build in anticipation of the building of the new $1,500,000 terminal station at Cherry and Fifth streets. The plan of for the new station called for a complete revision of the local yards. The yards are modern in every respect, being known as "hump" or "gravity" yards, and are so arranged that when a train is pulled onto them the cars can be cut loose and sent by gravity upon any track desired. When they pass over the "hump" they will be weighed automatically.

Included in the yards will be thirty-two miles of new track, and this will go a long way toward relieving the congestion in the downtown yards.

Kuehn saved up his life belt from a woman passenger of the ship in the collision with the steamship Nantuxet on January 30, and so lost his life.

Most Backache Suffering Due to Bordered Kidneys

In the removal of waste material from the body, the kidneys are called upon to perform a very important duty. The failure of these marvelous and delicately constructed tubules to properly do their work means retention in the system of poisonous matter. This pollutes the body, and if permitted to remain results in severe backache, dizziness, headache, torpid liver, constipation, indigestion, sleeplessness, rheumatism, and eventually Bright's disease.

About 37 years ago Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy was discovered by a remarkable power to cure diseases of the kidneys and liver and to assist in restoring these vital organs to health was at once appreciated. And today it stands as one of the standard remedies in the treatment of diseases of the kidneys and liver. It contains no harmful ingredients. Many persons suffer from diseases of the kidneys needlessly. The use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy will improve your health, and make you feel that life is really worth the living.

It is sold by all druggists in 50c and $1.00 sizes. A free sample and other valuable information if you write, Warner's Safe Remedies Co., Dept. 214, Rochester, N. Y.

ATKINSON WILL STAND FOR THE LEGISLATURE

Leading Atlantan and Former Supreme Court Justice Accepts Citizens' Invitation.

Judge Spencer R. Atkinson will be a candidate for the general assembly from Fulton county. His decision was made known yesterday in a remarkable letter to the distinguished committee of representative citizens that requested the use of his name.

Judge Atkinson bases his acceptance upon a high interpretation of public service. His reply follows: Judge Atkinson's Reply. Messrs. Samuel M. Laman, James C. Woodward, Colonel Robert J. Lowry, Wilmer L. Moore, Robert E. Macburn, Hollins Randolph, James W. English, Fred J. Faxon, John E. Murphy and others.—Gentlemen: I wish to acknowledge the receipt of the address which you on behalf of yourselves and a large number of others of my fellow citizens were kind enough to present to me some days ago, requesting that I should permit you to use my name as a candidate to be one of the representatives of Fulton county in the next general assembly of Georgia. This address appeared in several of the daily papers published in the city and of its contents I doubt not the public is advised. I need not say to you that I greatly appreciate the sentiments contained in this address, expressing as it does your confidence in my capacity to discharge the duties and meet the responsibilities of the office, but I greatly more appreciate the personal compliment implied in the endorsement of me for that position by so large and representative a number of my fellow citizens.

I beg to say in reply to your suggestion, I have long since put behind me any personal desire to hold public office. For many years the people of the state honored me in that respect in a manner doubtless far beyond my deserts and now for a number of years I have been quietly engaged in private pursuits, taking such incidental interest only in the administration of public affairs as enabled me to meet the personal responsibilities of citizenship. With this I have been hitherto content. You now say to me that in your judgment it is the desire of the people of Fulton county that I should be one among their representatives in the general assembly.

Whatever the inclination of my mind might otherwise be, I hold it the duty of every man to contribute as much as he can to the promotion of the welfare of the community in which he lives. This in my judgment is one of the non-delegable duties of citizenship. It is one thing which no good citizen should desire to escape. The state of Georgia, the county of Fulton, the city of Atlanta each have the right to summon from its citizenry any one of their number and charge upon him the duty of rendering whatever public service may be needed in the just administration of the public affairs and the person so summoned should feel in duty bound to respond and to consecrate himself with a whole-hearted allegiance of purpose and with an undivided attention to the public whom he assumes to serve. He should hold no conflicting obligations to any private interest whatsoever, and should be absolutely free of all alliances which might tend to incline him to lean to other than the duties of his public engagement. If approaching the subject of my again entering the public service in this spirit, the people of Fulton county believe that I can and will serve them efficiently, and that by my service I may be able within the broader state-wide obligations to assist in promoting the welfare of the people of Fulton county and at the same time in safe-guarding the interests of the city of Atlanta. I shall hold myself subject to their call. My only promise in the event of my election is that I shall represent them certainly with fidelity and I trust with intelligence and efficiency. It is with this understanding you shall still be of the opinion that the people desire me to serve them as one of their representatives, you are authorized so to announce. Assuring you and every one of you and the great number of my fellow citizens who have asked me to become a candidate of my very great appreciation of the honor they have done me, I am with great respect, Very sincerely your fellow citizen, SPENCER R. ATKINSON. Atlanta, Ga., May 23, 1914.

Rome, May 23.—A life-size statue of Venus has been found by excavators near Cyrene, North Africa, which in the early centuries was the seat of the Greek culture. The statue, which dates back to the sixth century—the time of Praxiteles, the celebrated Greek sculptor—is of Parian marble and once stood in the temple of Apollo. The head and arms are missing and the excavators are continuing their search in the hope that they will be found. The Venus, which is considered a masterpiece of Greek sculpture, will be brought to Rome in June and placed in the National museum.

Are You Suffering From? Auto-Intoxication?

The dictionary says that Auto-Intoxication is "poisoning, or poisoning of the body by its own products." This is a condition due to the stomach, bowels, kidneys, liver, or pores of the body failing to throw off the poisons. More than 50% of adults are suffering from this trouble. This is probably why you are suffering from nervousness, headaches, loss of appetite, lack of ambition, and many other symptoms produced by Auto-Intoxication. Your whole system needs stirring up.

How the South's Largest and Most Modern Laundry Cares For Your Wearing Apparel

An Interesting Interview With Mr. R. C. Thompson, General Manager Excelsior Laundry Company

From out of the mass of the world's industry the cry EFFICIENCY! is raised.

It is heard even above the demand for "safety first," and in almost every line of endeavor the problem is occupying the thought and study of the greatest industrial experts in the world.

Right here in Atlanta, at the Excelsior Laundry Company plant, corner Piedmont Avenue and Ellis Street, efficiency, as applied to modern laundries, has been studied, and it is doubtful if there is another plant in the United States, whether it be a laundry plant or a steel mill, where a greater degree of efficiency has been attained than by R. C. Thompson, general manager, and the small army of employees working under his directions.

When the Knights and Nobles of the Shrine were marching on Atlanta, for instance, one of the gravest questions which confronted the guests to the city, the hotels, and the various committees of Yaarab Temple appointed to look after the comforts of the visitors, was: "Can Atlanta efficiently launder the garments and linens of all her visitors?"

Out at the Excelsior Laundry, Manager Thompson was figuring on that very problem. He knew that Atlanta's facilities were adequate, and he felt certain that the Excelsior Laundry Company's new plant was adequate to launder the soiled clothes of nearly every person visiting the city, and at the same time not interfere with the routine work of the laundry. Manager Thompson decided to make the test. He went out to get all the work he possibly could. When the last train of Pullmans had pulled into the city, the wagons of the Excelsior were busy collecting linen.

On the morning of May 13 every machine in the laundry was working at full speed. Manager Thompson jumped into the work and supervised the handling of every piece. On the afternoon of May 16, the checkers at the laundry reported that exactly 168,974 pieces of linen had been gathered from the Pullman cars alone, every piece was carefully laundered, counted and delivered back to the cars to which they belonged.

In this stupendous undertaking, the Excelsior Laundry Company prepared, within four days, the linen of 480 Pullman sleepers.

The service given by the Excelsior, unprecedented in the history of the laundry business in the South, caused W. M. Camp, district superintendent of the Pullman company, to send the following laudatory communication to Manager Thompson:

The Pullman Company, Atlanta, Ga., May 22, 1914. Subject: Linen, washing of. Mr. R. C. Thompson, General Manager, Excelsior Laundry Co., City.

Dear Sir: Acknowledging your favor of even date. Have to advise that our records show that the Excelsior Laundry Company washed for us, 168,974 pieces of linen for 480 sleepers from the 13th to the 16th inclusive. This amount of linen was removed from the cars to the laundry, counted, washed, re-counted and returned to the cars between the above dates. To enable the Pullman Company to keep on our cars without exception a full and complete supply of clean linen, cars being occupied by Shriners.

This service we consider perfect and for which we are very grateful to your company, the result being most satisfactory and handled in a most satisfactory manner, more especially so by reason of the laundry having such a capacity as to take care of a movement of this magnitude with absolute perfection.

Yours truly, W. M. CAMP. Dist. Superintendent, the Pullman Company.

"I fully appreciated that we had undertaken a task which would tax our force to the utmost," said Manager Thompson commenting on the achievement, "but we figured that the plant was capable of doing all we claimed for it, and we entered into the enterprise with a feeling of certainty that the result would earn us the reward of joy of achievement."

Manager Thompson is an efficiency fiend. He has been in the laundry business since boyhood, and when he assumed managership of the Excelsior Laundry Company plant, he determined to put all his knowledge, gained during a period of nearly twenty-five years, into the business. When the Company decided to erect a new plant, Manager Thompson applied the ideas he collected years ago, and the result is Atlanta has today a plant which compares with any laundry in the United States.

There are 169 people employed in the plant in various capacities. The heads of the departments are all trained men and women—employees who have had years of experience in the business. And one of the secrets of the growing success of the Excelsior Laundry Company is the fact that all the employees are happy and contented at their work. The building is almost entirely glass, and is considered by experts in building trades to be one of the best ventilated plants in the South. The machines, scattered about the building on the three floors, are so arranged that the men and women working behind them get every ray of God's blessed sunlight.

"Where there are numbers of men and women at work in one plant, the greatest incentive to efficient work is contentment," is one of Manager Thompson's mottoes. "When persons are forced to work in hovels, and death traps, they cannot be efficient, and in the long run the owners of the plants, and the public, suffers. Light and cleanliness give protection to our employees, and at the same time safeguards the public against disease."

A Constitution reporter was conducted over the entire plant of the Excelsior Laundry Company one day last week. Manager Thompson acted as guide. The building is a model. The structure is built of iron, steel, brick and cement, with just enough woodwork to relieve the rough finish of concrete and brick. On the lower floor, as one enters the building, is the office, where a number of young men and women operate one of the most up-to-date systems the writer ever examined. Every device is a "time-saver."

The washroom, through which fine wearing apparel undergoes a modern system of cleaning, is also on the lower floor. On this floor are rows of monster revolving machines in which clothes are washed. Through each machine 170 gallons of hot sterile water, mixed with fine soap, passes every minute. On the same floor are the machines through which clothes are passed to wring the water from them. The machines are all modern; in fact, one of the machines used to iron collars is the only one of its kind in use in Atlanta, and one of the very few in use in the South. From the time clothes leave the washroom to the time they reach the room where they are assorted and made into bundles, they are forced through a systematic and thorough process of cleaning.

Manager Thompson went to a great deal of time and trouble to explain the modern method of washing and ironing collars, emphasizing the fact that the Excelsior system is one of the few systems which, not only do not wear out the collars, but preserve their shapes and wearing qualities.

Another feature which Manager Thompson took a keen delight in showing was the modern method employed by the Excelsior in cleaning and pressing ladies' and gent's clothing. The clothes are pressed by machines which are charged with steam heat. Through the method of pressing by steam heat, every sanitary precaution is taken, and, according to sanitary experts, who indorsed the method, germs in clothing, even if they survive after steam is forced through every thread of the garment.

The lower floor—the washrooms—are equipped with concrete floors. Through the other parts of the building the floors are highly polished maple wood. The exterior front of the building is covered with heavy plate copper, giving the structure a handsome and inviting appearance.

The machinery of the plant is driven by electric power. The auxiliary power is steam. With the double system always ready for instant use, there is not the slightest danger of the plant being closed down for a minute. The electric engines are of the latest type alternating current dynamo, the most modern in use. In addition to making its own motive power, the Excelsior Laundry manufactures its own gas.

In general tone and operation, the Excelsior Laundry is modern and first-class, combining all the best methods in use today, from the checking system to the delivery method, which is made perfect by a system of routes traversed three times a day by twenty-one wagons. These routes include the suburban sections.

The Excelsior Laundry Company is a stock organization of which Mr. Thompson is manager. He has been in charge of the business since 1910, and has done wonders in building up the business, and setting an example for others to follow.

A visit to the plant is worth while. An hour spent among the machines is interesting. If nothing else, a visit will assure one that clothes, after passing through the Excelsior system, are thoroughly cleaned and in an absolutely sanitary condition when ready for delivery.

in the last ten years the church had gained 200 ministers but had gained 355 new churches. At the beginning of 1914 he said there were 735 churches without pastors and there are now 275 places where there are opportunities to organize new churches. In all 1010 new preachers are needed.

That the Presbyterian church remains faithful to its old tenets was asserted by Dr. Thomas H. Law of Spartanburg, S. C., stated clerk and treasurer of the assembly. What I have seen in these assemblies Dr. Law said has emphasized in my mind more than anything else how squarely the Presbyterian church stands on the Westminster articles of faith. I have seen new ideas come but back of them the church remains the same. We may emphasize different things at different times just as now the church is emphasizing education and social service. But the reason for this remains the same. All social service in the world will not regenerate a man unless he regenerate his spirit.

More Chaplains Urged

Rev. Charles F. MacFarland, general secretary of the Federated Churches of Christ in America, today in an address asserted that despite their growth the army and navy have no more chaplains now than forty years ago. He asked the assembly to take steps to provide one chaplain ordained by some Christian church for every 1000 men. There are but twenty-two chaplains in the navy, he said, while there should be at least forty-two.

APPEAL WILL DELAY EXECUTION OF BECKER

Friday He Will Be Returned to the Death House at Sing Sing.

New York, May 23.—For the second time Charles E. Becker, former police lieutenant, today occupies a cell in Tombs prison, the convicted murderer of Herman Rosenthal, gambler for the actual killing of whom the four gunmen paid the penalty in the electric chair a little more than a month ago.

Today as on October 25, 1912, the day after his first conviction for the murder of Rosenthal, Becker's only hope to escape the fate of the guillotine lay in the success of an appeal from the verdict. On Friday of next week Becker will be sentenced and soon thereafter he will be returned to the death house at Sing Sing prison which he left last February on the order of the court of appeals that he be given a new trial.

Appeal to Stay Execution. An appeal by Becker's counsel which is certain to be made will act as a stay of execution, giving Becker more than a year to live and with it the hope of another reversal of the judgment of the trial court.

Becker won't talk. Becker refused to discuss the verdict. In a newspaper reporter the condemned man replied to an expression of sorrow that "I feel sorry for myself. Then he was led away to his cell."

has gone back to the Tombs. She did not have to be told that the verdict was guilty that he had gone back to the Tombs. She was able to leave the criminal court building with the assistance of friends, for her home.

Mrs. Herman Rosenthal, widow of the man for whose murder four men were hanged, today stands convicted, said the verdict was a just one, and that she had expected it. She expressed sorrow for Mrs. Becker whose loyalty to her husband, she said, had won her admiration.

I have just heard of the outcome of the Becker case. The whole community is under obligation to you for your work has been splendid.

FINAL GAME--CRACKERS HOME MONDAY

Perryman Twirls Second Victory On Present Trip

Crackers Back Him Up Errorlessly—Captain Harry Welchone Recovers His Batting Eye Again.

By Sam L. Gilbert. New Orleans, La., May 23.—(Special)—Insurgency against the top-notch pitcher of the Atlanta Crackers today pastime to 3. His proving the time-honored adage about the worm's flip-flopping ability all to the mustard. Perryman was the designated twirler that oozed goose eggs to Johnny Dobbs' people in every round save one, while Wilson and McIntyre attempted to pitch against the Crackers.

The real tossing for New Orleans was by Red Styles, who hails from Villa Rica, Georgia. Red relieved Henderson, Harry, the Crackers had scored their fourth hit in the third. One was out and two were on base, but Red went after the Smithies like the late Sam Jones of Cantonville, used to go after sinners.

The Georgia boy turned back the Atlanta attack with a fast and no runs, try as they did to increase their microscopic margin.

Three in First. The visitors took a three-run lead right off the reel in the first inning. McConnell walked, Kircher bunted and when Sylvester threw to the pitchers, went to second, McConnell reaching third. Welchone drove in two runs with a clean knock to center and after Lovell had placed the Holland rolled out Lindsay to Sylvester. Jennings came through with another single and Harry called Jennings being tossed out trying to swindle just a moment after Welchone crossed the plate.

Kircher touched for a single by Ebel at the beginning of the second and Dunn sacrificed, but Ebel died on second.

Kircher kissed the ball to left for two sacks in the third and Welchone beat out a bunt because nobody covered first. After Long had skied to Northern, Holland hammered in the comedian with what proved to be the winning run. Curtains for McIntyre.

Enter the upstanding sorrel-top just from Georgia. Jennings sacrificed and was out. Ebel walked, filling the bases. Kellum wasn't giving the Pelicans a break, but after Dunn had three balls and no strikes against him, Styles forced him to ground to Starr for the final out, Ebel being the runner.

McConnell got on through Lindsay's miff of a high fly in the fourth and Kircher beat out bunt they longed for. Holland and Ebel improved their batting record with singles in the fifth and sixth. Kircher, Long, Bright Eyes in the sixth, seventh and eighth. In the ninth with two on, Welchone pitched a fast ball, but Burns consumed Holland's skier.

Perryman Right. Barring the second frame, Perryman was a pippin. Starr and Sylvester were in the first with one down, but Perryman twirled with a Northern opened the second with a triple, but the sixth and seventh were slow ones to McConnell. Adams singled to center, Northern scoring, and when Perryman tossed a ball the two other runners advanced. McIntyre then pushed the path across with a safety. Northern sacrificed and was out. With Mac on first and no one out, Dobbs' people saw victory in their grasp, but when they were out, after Hendryx had sacrificed, he fanned Starr and Jennings threw out Sylvester, manning the bases.

It was a case of too much Perryman thereafter. Adams singled in the fourth with one down and Starr scored. Holland, Starr, was piked in the seventh and Perryman pitched in the eighth with one down, but Lindsay nor Northern were equal to the occasion. Northern struck first base in the third, fifth, sixth and ninth. Bob Higgins batted for Styles after out in the ninth and made a dismal three-striker.

Flanagan was out in uniform but was not used tomorrow if he continues improving. Browning, or Dochow, is getting a better chance to play Sunday, and Bill Smith hopes to even up the series.

Bill says the Atlanta rooters are not to receive the needed brace in a day or two, the deals not yet having been completed.

The Box Score. ATLANTA: McConnell, 2b., 3; Long, 1b., 4; Hendryx, 3b., 2; Jennings, ss., 3; Ebel, 1b., 3; Dunn, c., 4; Perryman, p., 4. Totals, 4 11 27 13 0.

NEW ORLEANS: Sylvester, cf., 3; Kircher, 1b., 4; Long, 1b., 4; Bright Eyes, 2b., 3; Northern, rf., 4; Barbare, 3b., 4; Wilson, p., 4; McIntyre, p., 1. Totals, 3 8 27 17 0.

2 New Catchers Join the Locals Here Tomorrow

Tyree and Enzenroth Purchased—Jap Efird Leaves for Roanoke Today—Price Still on Roster.

When the Crackers return home Monday they will find two new catchers awaiting them, as the result of a large expenditure of telegraph tolls by President Callaway at this end of the line and Billy Smith at the other. H. C. (Jack) Enzenroth, who starred for four years behind the bat for the University of Michigan, was purchased yesterday morning by President Callaway from the St. Louis Browns.

Manager Branch Rickey, of the Browns, wired in here Saturday morning: "Will sell Enzenroth to you at nominal figure, provided I am given nothing. Will sell Enzenroth to you at end of the Southern league season. Will pay highest price offered. He is a good catcher and a corking good man."

President Callaway rushed the following reply: "Accept your proposition. Have Enzenroth report here Monday. Enzenroth was a member of the Michigan team when the present manager of the Browns was coach there, and I impressed was Rickey with the youngster's ability that he persuaded him to enter professional ranks this spring.

Enzenroth has caught three games for the Browns. He made one single in six times up, batted eight put-outs and two assists without an error. Last night President Callaway received the following wire from Manager Smith: "Have purchased Catcher Tyree from the Chicago Cubs, and have wired Hank O'Day to order him to report to us in Atlanta Monday."

Free Baseball Detail At Caller King's Today

Caller King and Dick Jemison will run their baseball detail of the final doorway and those fans feeling a disappointment can drop their mite in there.

Two Sunday details have been run the season and with the perfection that prevails, a cool, comfortable hall to sit down and while away an afternoon, there is no reason why the details should not be continued.

TECH HIGH LOSES TWO GAMES TO G. M. C.

Milledgeville, Ga., May 23.—(Special)—Georgia Military college took a double-header from Tech high here this afternoon.

Score by innings: R H E. Tech high . . . 000 100 0-2 5 2 G. M. C. . . . 010 010 238-4 8 2 Batteries—Parks, Myers and Hooper; Campbell and Ellison.

These games end G. M. C.'s schedule. David, G. M. C.'s star center fielder, wins the trophy offered by Milledgeville fans for the best batting average during the season. It is a silver bat and ball, and will be presented Monday.

Elison, G. M. C.'s famous catcher, was a close second, only 19 points behind. Having the Georgia state prep championship flag on the athletic field here Tuesday afternoon will be a feature that will attract a large crowd.

Crackers Return To Poncey Park For Three Games

Play Mobile Gulls Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Then Hit Road for Eight Games Again.

Only Smith and his Crackers will be welcomed home from their road trip of eight games tomorrow and after a brief sojourn of three days they will hit the trail for eight more games.

Bill and his bunch play the Mobile Gulls at Poncey Park Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the first appearance of the Gulls in Atlanta this season.

The series in Mobile, the Gulls walked away with three of the four contests, principally through a slump in hitting on the part of the Crackers or extraordinarily good twirling on the part of the Gull hurlers.

Many Changes. There are many changes in the ranks of the Gulls over the team that battled the Crackers for the pennant in 1913.

First and foremost is Manager Brooks, Lord, formerly of the Atlanta Red Sox and known to Atlanta fans as a member of the New Orleans Pelicans team this season. Brooks, who is now with Memphis.

Who played right field for the Gulls last season, is playing center this season in place of Dave Robertson. Manager Ford is occupying left field, and Clark, the left fielder of last year's team, is on the bench.

Wednesday night the Crackers hit the road again. They open up a four-game series with the Birmingham Barons in Birmingham on Thursday and Friday and double-header on Saturday.

Sunday the Crackers open up with the Montgomery Brilliens in Montgomery, the first game of the series on Tuesday and Wednesday also.

Returning home Thursday, they play New Orleans three games, then come to Nashville and Memphis for four game series in those cities before returning home Saturday. They will play games at home, then jump back and forth until they hit the road for their long mid-summer trip.

"ON-TO-TORONTO" GAME TICKETS GOING FAST

Two tickets for the baseball game Wednesday between the Crackers and the Gulls are going fast.

This game is for the benefit of the Ad Men's Club of Atlanta, and is known as the "On-to-Toronto" game, named such a title because it will help the club to help defray their expenses to the Ad Men's convention which will be in Toronto.

In addition to the regular places for selling tickets, a committee of Ad Men will be out in clubs and selling tickets right and left.

Coach Van Tassell of Gordon Picks All-Prep Baseball Team For The Constitution Readers

BY COACH VAN TASSELL, Of Gordon.

The picking of an all-prep team from the G. I. A. A. is really not a difficult one this season as there are only three teams in the association. The team that I have selected for this year have won the honor by their actual work on the field, and not by former reputation. There are certain qualities in a player that appeal stronger to one critic than another, therefore I feel sure my selections will not meet with the approval of all.

There was no high-class catcher in the prep league this year none to my exact liking. The two men who represented the most class were Ellison, of Georgia Military college, and Monahan, of Gordon. These were catchers with an absolutely different style to their work. The former was a large fellow who weighed over 200 pounds. His great value as a catcher was in his throwing arm he was an accurate thrower a fair hitter but as far as working his pitchers and outguessing batters I believe Monahan had him beat. Monahan was in poor physical condition most of the time. The position goes to Ellison.

First Base.
There was only one player in the association who looked anything like a finished first baseman. This was Thrasher, of Georgia Military college. He was not an ideal built player for the position as he was not particularly tall but he played the bag better than any other player in the league. He was a good batter had a good arm and played ground ball in good style.

Second Base.
This position goes to Kingery of Gordon, one of the best ball players that I have ever seen in a prep school, and by far the best player in the league. He represented all the qualities of a high class player—a finished fielder, a most dangerous batter and a wonder on the bases with a perfect hook side that made him the class of the prep league.

Third Base.
At third base Mizre of Gordon easily outclassed his rivals. He handles the ball in a clever style, has a good whip and a fast bat. Smith of R. M. A. is a nice ball player, playing the bag in good style but cannot be classed with Mizre.

Shortstop.
The season furnished two fast and sure fielding shortstops in Rhodes, of G. M. C. and Teasdale, of Gordon. I do not believe the work of the former was up to that of Teasdale on ground balls but Rhodes outclassed him man in every other department of the game. The G. M. C. boy was a good hitter, fast on the bases and a clever fielder. The position goes to Rhodes of G. M. C.

The Outfield.
Dumas of Gordon, was the best outfielder of the season. This boy was a hard hitter, fast on bases with good sliding ability and was a finished out-fielder. He was in the game every minute.

I like the whole G. M. C. outfit and pick out of the three David and Swann I believe were better fielders and better of the bases than long and therefore get the call. These were two exceptionally good men with all the earmarks of real ball players and that is to really play for the different hitters. I feel they would be hard to beat with Dumas, of Gordon, David and Swann, of G. M. C. protecting the outer work.

The Pitcher.
Every team in the league had at least one high-class pitcher. Morris, of R. M. A., Camp, of G. M. C. (these boys went this season have been very valuable to any college team.) Dozier and Miller were both good men. Dozier was better during the early games of the season. For a youngster, I liked Miller, of R. M. A., very much, and feel sure that under the training of Anderson he will be the goods.

None of R. M. A. was the best pitcher in the league. He had a drop ball that was a wonder, and used good judgment in the games that I saw him work. With a fair team back of him he would be almost unbeatable much, and feel sure that under the training of Anderson he will be one of the games against Gordon.

Camp of G. M. C. gets second call here is one of those cool, collected sort of fellows that the players and fans call lucky. But this was not so. He has a good baseball head and a good assortment of stuff. He did not believe in doing all the work himself. Therefore, because everybody hit the ball and few runs were scored, the players called him lucky.

Guesling, of G. M. C. won a place on this team by his consistent work. I picked him over Maxey, of Gordon, because he seems just as good away from home as he does at home. Maxey was of little use to our team away from home.

Utility Man.
Smith of R. M. A. answers best as a utility man. He is a good fielder with a good whip hats well and could fill in in the infield in good shape. If these men that I have picked were together a couple weeks under a competent coach, they would give any amateur team trouble.

DECLINE IS ANNOUNCED IN BLOCK TIRE PRICES

Reduction of Approximately Five Per Cent by the Goodyear Company.

The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company has just announced a reduction of approximately 5 per cent in the price of Goodyear individual block motor truck tires.

According to advice received from the factory at Akron this was made possible by the constantly increasing demand for this type of tire by the motor truck operators. Raising the production volume lowered the cost to an extent sufficient to warrant a 5 per cent decrease in selling price which puts the block tire on the same basis as the endless tire in other words a truck owner now may buy a block tire at the same price he would have to pay for a demountable or pressed-on tire.

This should be welcome news to many truck operators who have heretofore hesitated to equip with block tires because of their higher price, and also to those who have so equipped in spite of the cost.

The immense success that has attended this Goodyear block tire since its introduction on the market, about

LIGHT STUDEBAKER CAR SAVES OWNER MONEY

Increased Mileage Per Gallon of Fuel, and Tires Are Cheaper.

That sales conditions in the automobile field have been widely affected by the recent cuts in the price of gasoline, oil, tires and other supplies is the declaration of Southern District Manager Mr. Eason, of the Studebaker corporation, Atlanta branch.

Two years ago, is explained by the fact that it is the only block tire that can truly be called "individual." Each block is a unit and is held to the wheel by individual plates and bolts making it a simple job to remove or replace any block on the wheel without molesting any of the others. A block can be changed in a very few minutes with practically no loss of running time to the truck.

In addition to the above features, the block tire, of course, has positive traction and non-skid qualities that are not found in any other type of tire who says that many recent Studebaker buyers are persons who have heretofore remained out of the market due to their former belief that winter tire expense was greater than they could afford.

I have increased efficiency brought home to me quite forcibly by a personal friend, said Mr. Eason. "This man owned a heavy, costly car last year. He decided that the cost of maintenance was too high and changed last winter to a Studebaker light Six."

"Of course the change resulted in a greatly increased mileage for each gallon of fuel. This saving was regarded all the more emphatic by the fact that he is now paying 12 cents per gallon for gasoline instead of 20—this due to the general lowering of price which has featured the gasoline business all over the country.

"Though he has not yet bought any new tires and expects to get much more than the guaranteed mileage out of his present set he knows that when the occasion arises he can secure tires for his Studebaker Six at less than half the cost of those he bought for his last year's car."

A satisfactory grade of lubricating oil can be bought for 35 per cent less than he paid a year ago and goes in freely further in supplying the needs of his car.

And a feature of which he is not yet aware is the lowered cost of winter overhauling adjustment and possible installation of repairs.

His Studebaker Six is so designed that the owner himself if he chooses can take down any unit needing adjustment if he has the work done at a garage, this merit is just as strong, as the amount of labor involved is comparatively small delivery is prompt and the bill is accordingly reasonable.

The prospective motorist who has had acquaintance with a Studebaker man a delight will be amazed at the efficiency and economical record of a car of the Studebaker light Six class. We hear examples of this sort every day.

Baker Tells How He Smashed The Coast-to-Coast Record

By Edwin G. Baker. While I arrived in New York city at midnight May 14, clipping approximately nine days from the previous trans continental record according to my way of thinking, I really achieved the feat four months before.

What I mean by this is—thorough preparation and endless calculation preceding the trip is what brought me through.

First I laid out my route—a matter of no small importance in selecting roads and towns through which to pass. Then having done this I enlisted the co-operation of a weather expert and together we examined weather conditions over my chosen territory for ten years past.

Another matter of foresight which helped me was the planting of tanks of gasoline ahead of me at remote spots where I knew that gas would have been obtainable.

Still another factor of course was my machine. I rode a 1914 Indian with power twin two speed Indian with electric equipment and coil spring frame in all the distance of 3,497 miles I had no mechanical difficulties whatever and I encountered all the different road conditions known to travel.

hard riding. But I arrived in New York with the original bulb still in its socket and burning brightly. My batteries were still in fine condition and needed no recharging or attention during the ride.

In my estimation it was the eradic spring frame above all that contributed to my success. It absorbed all road shocks and vibrations and this of course saved all my strength and enabled me to make speed over the roughest roads.

Joe Bean Picks All-Southern For The Sunday Constitution

By Coach Bean, of Georgia. In making my selections for the players that I have arranged on the above team I have confined myself to those only that I have seen play during the past season and if there is anyone that I have left off that should be on it is not that I discount his ability as a ball player, but that it has not been my good fortune to see him in action. The game of baseball is a mere mechanical game, it is a game of brains and it is brains that win every time. It is not a game of brawn, for the equal and brains win out over strength, even when pitted against greater mechanical ability.

with proper care should prove one of the best and most dangerous men in college baseball. He is young and fast, a good fielder, fine bunter and an all-round baseball player. As to the second basemen, George Harrison outshone them all and was in a class all by himself. A good fielder, a good batter, plenty of power and a good base runner, though not fast. He is the best basemen I have seen in long time in handling thrown balls and tagging the runner. He is an ideal second basemen for any team.

Clements at Shortstop. The shortstop position has more good men than any other position in the infield, and since I have played this position myself I believe that I should be capable of making a fair selection. We have Clements, of Georgia; Curston, of Clemson; Mouton, of Auburn; Joplin, of Alabama; and Wooten, of Tech.

Cargyle on Third. For third base I pick Cargyle, of Alabama. A good fielder, a good batter and a fast man he has been the game. He looked far better than any other I saw all season on the third base. He is a real star in bringing in the games I saw him play, and is evidently close to the heels of the Alabama team. Hill, of Tech, and Joplin, of Georgia are both good fielders, but weak batters.

Outfielders Should Be Hitters. I regard the outfield position something like this: If a man is playing in the outfield he must be able to hit better and is not fast on the paths, he should be made to pay his way to the game. These are qualifications that are sometimes hard to meet in college ball, but a fielder should be able to do something other than catch a fly ball.

The Pitches. Hitchcock, of Georgia, is so far ahead of the rest of the pitchers that there isn't any comparison. He is an ideal college pitcher, having everything that goes to make him such, speed, curves, spizball and control and standing out above all these, qualifications, nerve and brains. He is a good batter and runs bases well, also fielding his position fearlessly. Corley, of Georgia, and Davis, of Auburn, are my other selections.

BYRNE IS FIRST IN TENER RANKS

Bobby Byrne, infielder of the Philadelphia Nationals is the leading batsman of the National League today, with an average of .386. Ted Cather of St. Louis, is second, with .381, and Ed Hahn of the Phillies, third, with .356. Here are the players who are hitting .300 or better, or who have participated in ten or more games, up to and including those played Wednesday, May 20.

JENKINS VICTOR IN ENGLISH GOLF

Sandwich, England, May 23.—J. L. C. Jenkins, of Troon, Scotland, won the British amateur golf championship today by beating C. L. Hazlet, of Portrush, Ireland, by three up and two to play in the final round of 18 holes. The original field of players was composed of 225 competitors, including leading golfers from the United States, Australia, India, the Philippines, France, Sweden and the various divisions of the British Isles.

The teams in the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic association that I have seen play are Clemson, Auburn, Tech, Vanderbilt, Alabama and Georgia, and from these I will make my choice, selecting three pitchers, two catchers, four infielders, three outfielders and one utility man.

The catcher, recognized by all as the most important position on the team will no doubt meet with more discussion than any other place on the team for the very reason that there were really no real catchers among the colleges that I saw. They were all fairly good and so evenly matched that it is hard to pick one from the list that should grace a selection of stars.

We will now go to the infield and start at first base. For this position I am not going to beat around the bush, but will give it to the man whom I think outclasses so far all the others I have seen play—John Henderson, of Georgia. He is a 400 hitter, is a cracking good first basemen and not as slow as many people think he is. He is a real star in bringing in the more natural baseball ability than any player I have seen this season.

EWING BOND BREAKS RECORD FOR 220 YARDS

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 23.—With a slight wind at his back, Ewing Bond, University of Michigan sprinter, today beat the world's record in the 200-yard dash, according to Michigan authorities, by covering the distance in 29 4/5 seconds. The figures are not official, inasmuch as the timers had not been sanctioned by the A. A. U., and the race was run in a light breeze without outside competition. The record for the 220-yard dash was set by Bernie Wefers at 21 1-5 seconds in 1898.

CORNELL CREWS WIN OVER TWO OLD RIVALS

Ithaca, N. Y., May 22.—Cornell varsity and freshman crews clearly demonstrated their superiority over the Princeton and Yale crews here today by capturing both two-mile events. The varsity race, which was started first, was delayed until almost midnight by the choppy condition of the Cayuga lake course. In this event Cornell got the jump, but at one hundred feet Princeton pressed into the lead. At three one-mile posts, Cornell drew ahead of the Tigers, leaving Princeton and Yale to fight it out for second place. Princeton hung on to Cornell's heels gamely for the last mile, but the sturdy Red and White crewmen secured and maintained a lead of a half length over the finish line.

Yale, seemingly exhausted, finished four lengths behind Princeton. The freshman race was a close fight only for the first mile. Cornell finished a good four lengths in the lead. The time of the varsity race was: Cornell, 19:28 3-5, Princeton, 19:41 3-5, Yale 19:55 4-5. The time of the freshman race was: Cornell, 19:51 2-5, Princeton, 11:07 1-5.

Bob Burman made good by entering the Keaton racing car at the last minute in the 500-mile race of May 22, at Indianapolis, but named no driver. It would be interesting to see Burman drive this car against Goux in the race, owing to the squabble of last year when Goux won, but Burman claiming the Keaton the fastest car, challenged the Frenchman for a race with a wager on the side, which was the largest ever known. The Keaton is the same car as it was last year, while Goux will drive practically the same Peugeot, with a few minor changes to fit it more for speedway driving.

JEALOUSY CAUSED FIGHT IN WHICH MAN IS SHOT

Claude Ireland Injured Following Alleged Attack on W. M. Hill With Knife.

W. M. Hill, of Ormeadow park, shot in the neck Claude Ireland, of Chestnut street, Saturday morning, at the corner of Kennedy and Chestnut streets as the result, according to eye-witnesses, of an attack by Ireland on Hill with a knife, because Hill had been visiting his sweetheart, Miss Mammie Akridge, 16 years old, of 275 Bellwood avenue.

Hill then called up the police station from the Owl drug store and asked the police to send an officer out to arrest him, saying that he had shot a man in self-defense.

Officer James L. Palmer answered the call, and took Hill into custody, sending Ireland to the Grady hospital.

Will Not Prove Serious.

The physicians at the hospital late Saturday afternoon stated that the wound would not prove serious.

Hill stated that for the first time he visited Miss Akridge on last Monday night and that on Tuesday morning Ireland met him in the neighborhood while he was engaged in delivering some laundry for the Excelsior laundry and threatened to kill him if he ever did so again, and ordered him never to be seen in that neighborhood again.

He states that several times during the week he was forced to go into the same neighborhood, and that upon each occasion he had been attacked by Ireland, who threatened his life with a knife, on account of the young lady.

He claims that he told Ireland that he did not wish to have any trouble about the young lady. Ireland told him Friday that if he ever came over on that side of town again he would kill him.

Asks for Protection.

Saturday morning when he reported for business he found that he had some laundry to deliver in the neighborhood of Miss Akridge's home. He first called up police station and requested that Policeman Roberts a personal friend of his, be sent to the Owl Drug store to meet him, and accompany him for protection as he did not wish any trouble with Ireland.

When he arrived at the drug store Roberts had not appeared. Hill states that Ireland appeared, and that he had a knife in his hand and tried to get on his wagon to cut him. He then reached under the seat of his wagon for his pistol and shot Ireland who fell backwards.

Ireland stated at the hospital that he did not wish to prosecute Hill, and wanted to let the whole affair drop.

Hill stated that he was not a sweetheart of Miss Akridge and was not in love with her. He declares that he had only gone to her home as a friend and that she ever came over on him, which caused his attack upon him.

The police are preparing to allow Hill to be released under a small bond of $100.

Miss Akridge when seen at her home knew nothing of the shooting scrape. She declared that she would stand by her husband and that she would go to the hospital to see him.

MARY HELEN HOWE APPEARS AS SOLOIST AT ORGAN CONCERT

The Sunday recitals during the summer months will all begin at 4 o'clock instead of 3 p. m. At the recital next Sunday afternoon May 31 the Atlanta Music Festival chorus will sing.

WITHDRAWS HIS SUIT AGAINST BOND ISSUE

The suit to declare void the $57,000,000 stock and bond issue by which was formed the merger of the Georgia Railway and Power company, started by Lance M. Parsons, was dismissed by his attorney, Robert C. Atkinson and Judge Arthur Fowell Saturday afternoon.

The order dismissing the suit was accompanied by a statement from Parsons asserting that he had been misinformed and that numerous vital allegations contained in the suit were untrue. This action severs the entire case from court procedure—excluding the recent request for an injunction against the $30,000,000 bonds authorized by the railroad commission.

Parsons' action follows the filing of an answer to his suit by H. M. Atkinson and Preston Arkwright. Individual defendants, who branded as false the charges of fraud conspiracy and misrepresentation which had been made by the plaintiff. Denial of other accusations was also made in the answer.

Going Deaf? Good News!

An engineer who had ear trouble for years finally became so deaf he could not hear the sound of a starting engine bell or voices. After vainly seeking relief he was compelled to give up his profession as a steam engineer. His deafness was aggravated by head disturbance, nervousness, and dependency.

To the surprise of all he began to hear and continue improving until he could listen to conversations could hear a train at a distance, and even sing in the choir in the church. His head and nerves became tranquil. He got his position back again. This was no miracle, no surgery, no artificial hearing devices, no electric apparatus, no loss of time.

Whoever is becoming deaf can obtain particulars free by writing to Edward Gregory, 55-K, Forben St., Jamaica Plain, Mass. including a stamped addressed envelope. He will tell you how he and many others have been wonderfully benefited.

REAL ESTATE THE SUNDAY CONSTITUTION'S SPECIAL PAGE DEVOTED TO REALTY AND BUILDING

BUILDING FIGURES RAPIDLY GROWING

Year 1914 Now Only $70,000 Behind 1913—Ford Permit of $275,000 Will Wipe Out the Deficit.

It looks very much now as if, in spite of the tremendous start that May of 1913 had over May of 1914 in building figures, the month of this year will run last May close race.

That the first of June will show a substantial increase in building figures over the year of 1913 up to June is assumed, and unless the figures for the rest of 1914 dwindle to absolutely microscopic proportions, the year will beat last year by a good healthy margin.

This year is now behind last year by about $70,000. The Ford permit of $275,000 will be issued before the end of May and this will much more than wipe out this deficit.

The figures of May of last year showed a total of slightly over $500,000. The figures of this May to date are approximately $325,000. The Ford permit and the general run of business may be reasonably expected to make up this deficit for the month.

THIS AGENCY DEALS IN PROPERTY EXCHANGES

E. J. Witt Opens Offices of Witt's Dixie Land Exchange at 710-711 Peters Bldg.

E. J. Witt, who is well known in real estate circles in Atlanta, has established a new agency under the name of Witt's Dixie Land Exchange, and has opened offices at Nos. 710-711 Peters building.

In this office, in the name of the agency indicates, Mr. Witt will devote his attention especially to the exchange of properties. While there are many agents who do a large property exchange business, the agency of Mr. Witt is specializing in this is unique.

In addition to this feature, Mr. Witt will place on the market a new residence subdivision, known as Brookwood park, lying in the Spring, Williams and Sixteenth streets neighborhood.

Of this subdivision Mr. Witt says: "Brookwood park is the only close-in subdivision that has been offered to Atlanta in years since Analey park was placed on the market some ten years ago. And it is the only such development that has been offered on the monthly installment plan."

Mr. Witt has a sales staff of ten people on this property who will open the sales of it Monday morning. He will increase his staff to twelve.

In the office with Mr. Witt is Joseph N. Walker, contractor and builder, who will head a construction department in connection with the agency.

Mr. Witt has been in the real estate business in Atlanta for twelve years, and has been connected with some of the largest and most successful agencies. He was for a number of years with Charles P. Glover Realty company to enter into a business of his own.

ATLANTA WANTS REALTY MEN HERE IN 1915

Two Committees Working to Send Big Delegation to Pittsburg Convention in July.

The Atlanta Real Estate board has made up its mind to land the 1915 convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges for Atlanta, and to that end two committees are working hard to get up a large delegation to go to the Pittsburg meeting in July.

Besides the real estate board, the Atlanta convention bureau, the Atlanta chamber of commerce and the Georgia chamber of commerce will be asked to send representatives. The support of the convention bureau has been assured, and it is anticipated that the support of other bodies will be forthcoming. Prominent members of the Rotary club have promised to write to the real estate men who are members of the Rotary club in other cities and ask them to boost for Atlanta at Pittsburg. It is believed that Atlanta can depend upon Pittsburg to throw her support to Atlanta.

The Atlanta delegation will take along an attractive assortment of souvenirs and boosting material.

Scenes of Grading and Building Activity in Eastman Park

At the left is shown the splendid elevation of Eastman Park subdivision, fronting on the River car line. At the right is one of the pretty bungalows recently built and sold in Eastman Park.

Eastman Park, a beautifully wooded subdivision owned and operated by F. C. Eastman, is making splendid progress. Within the past three months four bungalows have been built with all modern conveniences, and were sold before completion.

The park is situated less than three miles from the center of the city, being just outside of the city limits. The purchasers of this property are relieved from the city assessments, yet they have all the city improvements and its advantages combined with a semi-country life, affording a most ideal place in which to live, free from the cramped quarters, noise and dust of the city streets.

Mr. Eastman has been developing this park for several months and now offers it to the public for inspection and sale. Several thousand feet of tile sidewalks have been laid together with residence park, about fifteen minutes' extension of the city water main runs from the heart of the business throughout the property. Numerous centers, on double track car service, avenues, fifty feet in width and seven which pass directly through this well shaded and tree-lined park, affording a five minute schedule, with the addition of sewers taking either the English avenue or River car lines at Forsyth and Marietta and electricity.

This property is a strictly high-class streets.

Chelsea Heights--An Ideal Residence Development Near Decatur

SCENES OF STREET-BUILDING IN THE CHELSEA HEIGHTS PROPERTY.

"Seeing is believing," says E. C. Ruple, sales manager of the Chelsea Land company.

When he talks that way he is speaking of Chelsea Heights, the beautiful residence subdivision which his company is developing and placing on the market, and he has something worth seeing and believing in, too.

Chelsea Heights lies between Druid Hills and Decatur, a section which in recent years has become very popular as a residence section and which seems destined to remain increasingly in favor. "In the pathway of Atlanta's grandest and greatest growth," is the way Mr. Ruple characterizes the property.

The Chelsea Land company is cutting and grading fine streets and winding drives through the property and converting it into a modern place of tennis courts and swimming pools and facilities for all sorts of out-of-door residence life. Chelsea Heights is two blocks from Ponce de Leon avenue and 4 1/2 blocks from the heart of Atlanta. A park and a splendid natural spring ultimately the Chelsea Land company intends to develop these into ideal parks and playgrounds, with paved streets are within two blocks.

REALTY MEN INVITED TO CHAMBER OPENING

The Atlanta Real Estate board has received a formal invitation from the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce to be present at the official house warming of the new chamber of commerce building, May 30.

Many of the chamber's staunchest supporters are found in the membership of the real estate board, and the board may be expected to be well represented.

Looking Back.

"I wonder if the convent bell still sounds as sweet in Luttwel, as when I passed those low gray towers. You never can tell. The weather a man is, the stronger his habits grow on him.

ATLANTA'S STRIDES FROM DAY TO DAY

M. C. Kiser has sold for A. L. Dunn to F. M. Lawson, of Plover, a parcel at the corner of Georgia avenue and Crew street for a consideration of $25,500.

Mr. Dunn, in the deed, took in part payment No. 223 Edgewood avenue. This property lies 79 feet east of Euler street and is 80x121. The improvements on it are nominal. It was valued at $24,120 in the exchange.

ATTRACTIVE LOTS BRING GOOD PRICES

Large Crowd Attends the Auction Held on Saturday Afternoon at the Peachtree Heights Park.

Eight attractive lots were sold at auction in Peachtree Heights park yesterday afternoon, and brought a total of $3,583.35.

Forty or fifty automobiles carried out a large part of the crowd of several hundred persons who attended the auction, and widespread interest was shown in the property, particularly in the addition to it of flaming arc street lights dismounting it from other home subdivisions.

The auction was conducted by Steve E. Johnston, well-known auctioneer, and began at 10-11, block 11—a high, well-shaded lot, with 101 1/2 feet frontage and more than 500 feet deep, facing Rivers road near the junction of Habersham and Butler avenues.

This lot was sold at $25 per front foot and finally knocked down to George R. Argard for $20 per foot, or a total of $2,048. It was considered one of the best purchases of the day.

The other lots sold and the prices they brought were as follows: Lot 10, block 11, 111 1/2 feet front and 570 feet deep, sold to George H. Boynton for $11.20 per foot, total $2,137.50.

Lot 18, block 11, 101 feet front, sold to George S. Lowndes at $30 per foot, total $2,940.

Lot 12, block 10, 100 feet front, sold to Duncan McDougald for $29 per foot, total $2,900.

Lot 10, block 9, 25 1/2 feet front, sold to J. R. Hawkins for $21 per foot, total $532.50.

Lot 10-A, block 9, 212 1/2 feet front, sold to John Woodside for $27 per foot, total $5,737.50.

Lot 27, block 12, at the corner of Muscogee avenue and Rivers road, one block from Peachtree, 11 1/2 feet front, sold to George H. Boynton at $47.50 per foot, total $5,587.50.

Mr. Rivers' Statement.

E. Rivers, who controls the Peachtree Heights park subdivision, made a statement at the opening of the auction, calling attention to the quality of the property offered.

Mr. Rivers pointed out that this property is right on the great highway through North Atlanta, and it is impossible to reach any section to the north without traversing Peachtree Heights park. He said it was not the best residential property which must be built up, but that it is superior to itself in that there is no more property like Peachtree Heights park when it is sold out, Atlanta can get no more of it.

Atlanta, he asserted, has got to take it and build there, and Mr. Rivers predicted that even though Atlanta's population did not increase, many more living in Atlanta would soon change their residences and move into Peachtree Heights park. He pointed out that the property now has every city convenience except gas, and said there was no question that it would have this within less than two years.

No More at Auction.

Just before the conclusion of the auction, Mr. Rivers made the statement that this was the last auction that will be held in lots 10 and 12, which are rapidly developing portions of Peachtree Heights park, throughout which the arc lights have recently been placed.

"If anyone wants to take advantage of this opportunity, they had better do it now," Mr. Rivers said, for "I declare to you this is the last auction that will be held in lot 12, as long as I am in control of Peachtree Heights park. The prices at which this property has sold here today are ridiculously low, and we cannot afford to let this property go at such figures as these."

REALTY BOARD'S CUE IS SET FOR JUNE 20 AT LAKEWOOD PARK

President Harris G. White of the Atlanta Real Estate board, announced on Saturday that the committee appointed Friday to arrange the details of the annual barbecue of the board has selected Saturday, June 20, as the date for the event.

The place has not yet been selected, but the committee has Lakewood in view for the purpose. They will call upon the mayor and ask his permission to hold the barbecue there, and also to dig a barbecue pit.

Many of the realty men will have their ladies along at the barbecue, and dancing, which the Lakewood pavilion would afford, would furnish a very enjoyable feature of the afternoon's pleasure.

Inasmuch as most of the members of the board will probably go to the barbecue in automobiles it has been suggested that they meet at a given place, Peachtree and Cham streets, and go through the center of the city in a procession on their way to the place of the barbecue.

This is a drawing made by A. N. Canton, the architect, of the Babbage apartment, which are now nearing completion on Lafayette drive in Ansley Park. This handsome structure, facing on the sweeping curve of the drive, presents an imposing appearance, and is a distinct addition to the many beautiful buildings of Ansley Park. The cost of the building will be in the neighborhood of $50,000.

The leasing of the apartments has been placed in the hands of the rent department of the M. L. Throver agency.

Nassau Street's First Building

Here is the building which has just been completed on Nassau street by J. J. Bruce. The development of Nassau street and the property facing on it was one of the most daring feats of promotion that Atlanta real estate has had in several years. This is the first building to be erected on the new street. It consists of three stories on the ground floor, with apartments above.

WEST END PARK

IT OCCUPIES AN IMPORTANT POSITION IN THE CITY'S RESIDENTIAL STRUCTURE

YEAR BY YEAR West End Park grows in importance. There were skeptical ones at first who said it would not amount to much. They had seen before many a half-baked subdivision put on the market; and they thought West End Park might be similar. They had seen additions laid off, lots staked out, streets hastily scratched on the surface, paved principally with good intentions and broken promises, like a certain famous highway we read about in history.

The skeptical ones now admit that West End Park is on the map. It is an integral part of the city's residential structure. You should take a look at it now.

We claim that W. J. Davis was distinctly a public benefactor when he took charge of the hundred or more acres that lay wild out on the edge of town and converted it into a residential park. The system of streets as laid out in West End Park constitutes a model that might well be followed in laying out similar subdivisions.

On Saturday, May 30, at 3.30 o'clock, we want you to be our guest at a public reception to be held at West End Park. At this time we will put up at auction twenty-one choice lots, and will let them go for whatever they bring.

We want you to come out to this reception whether you have in mind buying a lot or not. You will see and learn much that will be of advantage. One thing you will learn by coming out to this auction is the surprising rate at which Atlanta grows. There used to be a long skip place between old West End and the new addition; but now this is all built up and West End Park is closely knitted up to the city.

Another thing that you will observe with pleasure and possible surprise is the beauty and variety of the dwellings in West End Park. Hundreds of dwellings of the advanced bungalow type can be seen. Anyone who is interested in house construction, should visit West End Park in order to obtain advanced ideas. The word has been freely passed along that in West End Park you can learn something about the right kind of house to build so as to tempt someone to live in it.

So in all good faith we are getting ready for a sure enough auction on next Saturday. It may not be exactly the best time to hold a public sale, as viewed from the seller's standpoint, but it is decidedly a good time from the buyer's standpoint.

We have urged Will Davis to wait until later on, but he says let the lots go.

STONE cost you nothing.
BRICK cost you nothing.
HAULING cost you nothing.
BUILD your home on beautiful Virginia Ave., at the end of Highland Ave. car line.

WE HAVE 5 PERFECT LOTS ON VIRGINIA AVE. AND HERE IS OUR PROPOSITION BELOW

TO EVERY PARTY buying one of these beautiful elevated shady lots on Virginia Ave., and will agree to build at once, we will give you all the stone you need and place it on your lot. We have hundreds of tons of stone already out and on the ground. We will also furnish free of charge all the fine press brick you can use in your house free of charge, and place it on your lot.

WE FURNISH ALL OF THE OUT-
SIDE DRESS EXCEPT THE HAT
OR COVER, FREE OF CHARGE

WE HAVE on hand several car loads of fine brick and tons of rock. We are anxious to build up one of the nicest streets in the city in order to make our other 50 lots valuable. We can afford to give this material for five of our choicest lots, as we have it on hand. We have plans that we would like to submit to you, or you can get your own builder.

TAKE A LOOK AT

THE CORNER of Virginia Ave., Highland Ave. and Todd Road. Here you will find a lot two feet above the sidewalk and as level as a floor, facing north; has a frontage of 120 feet on Virginia Ave., 252 feet on the Todd Road; also faces Highland Ave. Price is now and has been all along, $3,500. We put on this lot all the stone you can use, makes no difference, one ton or fifty tons; all the fine press brick you need. No charge at all.

LOOK AT 4 LOTS

OPPOSITE the fine brick home just purchased by Mr. W. C. Reese, which he will move into in a few days. These four lots are decidedly the finest and most beautiful shady lots in the city, facing south. We are anxious for four picture houses here and would like to have them all built of brick. And why not? The brick cost you nothing. You can afford to take them as a gift. We place them on your lot for you.

VIRGINIA AVE. CORNER

WE HAVE another Virginia Ave. corner lot, all outside material furnished free, and all stone for foundation cost nothing. It might pay you to investigate.

WE ARE GOING TO BUILD

UP A MOST beautiful street at any cost to us, and our loss on the 4 or 5 houses will be your gain. The street is 60 feet wide and is passed up for new chert this year from Highland Ave. to Boulevard and Piedmont Park. Will you join us on this proposition? We will not make this offer but for 5 lots. Call Ivy 8311.

GREAT OPPORTUNITY

WE HAVE 287 acres beautiful land located one mile east of Brookhaven and Peachtree Road, for sale at $200 per acre. The tract has 9,500 feet frontage on a graded road, which has just been opened from Peachtree at Brookhaven to the Williams Mill Road; also about 5,000 feet frontage on Williams Mill Road, which is now being graded from Decatur to Chamblee. This frontage is all desirable and suitable for subdivision into smaller tracts. The land is all elevated and within full view of Oglethorpe University Site. We believe it a very conservative estimate to say this property will be worth $400 per acre, or 100 per cent profit, within two years.

WE CAN SELL this property on any reasonable cash payment, with release privilege, allowing the resale of any portion of same, in small acreage tracts.

CALL and let us show you this. It is worth investigating.

RESTAURANT MEN SPENDING BIG SUMS TO REMODEL CAFES

There is considerable building competition in Atlanta now and this inevitably may be taken in some degree to reflect the growth of Atlanta by the increasing demand for places to eat. Work of remodeling and rebuilding No. 37 Peachtree street for the new Thompson restaurant is now progressing to the extent of about 50 per cent of $10,000. George L. Minnie, designer of the Chandler building, is the architect. The building is a 10-story structure, 100 feet high, with a restaurant on the 10th floor. Charles Sherer is now spending $10,000 to remodel No. 79 Whitehall street, which he has leased for a term of ten years.

There are now at least four new apartment houses under construction on the north side of the city and two or three on the south side. The abandonment of plans for two more apartment houses were made last week.

Hair Made Beautiful

Beautiful hair, thick, fluffy, lustrous and absolutely free from dandruff is not so much a gift of nature as a matter of care and proper nourishment. Hair is like a plant—it will not grow healthy and beautiful unless it has attention and proper nutrition.

Parisian Sage daintily perfumed and easily applied, tones up and invigorates the roots of the hair and furnishes the necessary nourishment to not only soothe and beautify the hair, but also stimulates it to grow long, heavy, soft, wavy and radiant with life.

When used frequently and rubbed into the scalp, it will simply work wonders. Just one application stops itching head, removes dandruff and cleanses the hair of all dust and excessive oil.

Since Parisian Sage which can be obtained from Lavoisier, you stores or at any drug or toilet counter, never disappoints, it is no longer necessary for any woman to be humiliated because of thin streaks, faded, lifeless or unattractive hair, and as you know just how hair more than anything else helps you to retain a youthful appearance.

In the Social Whirl

By Isma Dooly

THE annual reception of the Piedmont Driving club not only inaugurated the season for summer raiment for the fair sex, but it is the first event of the season upon which the "Beau Brummels" of the community appeared in their "white flannels."

"White flannels," I am told by one in authority, are not obligatory in the masculine summer wardrobe, but they are very desirable. They look well, and are in harmony with the diaphanous and light colored toilets worn by women.

"I do not think the matter of men's clothes is all important in the matter of whether they are light colored or not, but I do think men ought to be more careful about their shoes," said the wife of one of the club officers the other night, as she displayed a black grease spot on the toe of her pretty white satin shoe.

"Now, that spot can never be quite cleaned off, there will always be a faint mark there, and these shippers are new, and cost $5. When the men have their shoes polished they can not control the kind of polish put on, it seems, and the women's shoes are the sufferers. Style demands we wear light shoes in summer time, and we do it, only to be made unhappy when things like this happen," and she looked sadly at the little black marked slipper.

"Men need not necessarily wear white shoes with their white flannels, but I do think they ought to have a regulation dancing shoe, and use them for that only. Can't the Driving club have some lockers for shoes up stairs in the dressing rooms, so that men coming here before going home, can find their dancing shoes ready for them?"

UNGRATEFUL PUPILS.

"Men are very ungrateful dancing pupils," said another woman at the opening reception. "Now, there are two or three men dancing here tonight, whom I taught their first steps, the beginning of the season, and do you know they never ask me to dance unless they desire to earn another step?"

And on this subject of woman's suffrage and many others, there is ever the recurring question—what is being done to better equip all women for the responsibilities for which the many are reaching out and which in the evolution of things are coming?

THE SATURDAY TEA DANCE.

Yesterday afternoon the management of the Druid Hills Golf club inaugurated the first of a series of Saturday afternoon tea dances, which assembled at the club a ballroom full of Atlanta's prettiest women and their partners.

From 5 until 7 o'clock one automobile after another deposited at the club precious parcels of white voile and chiffon, taffeta silk done up in bouffante draperies and perishable hats containing a small amount of music which sounded the note of the favorite dances—and what a good time everybody had!

They rested on the terrace, where tables were spread with tea and dainties. The golf enthusiasts joined the parties later and the scene at the club repeated. The tables were set with the "Barring the Sleepy Hollow club," New York visitor, "this Druid Hills Golf club is the prettiest country club I ever saw."

There were many who remained after the tea dance for supper served on the terraces.

Miss Lawton Entertains.

Miss Ruby Lawton entertained on Wednesday afternoon at her home, 1114 Blackman, whose marriage to Mr. J. C. Dabney will be an event of June 2.

The rooms were prettily decorated and placed were lovely with growing plants and vases of red poppies. The punch bowl was embedded in the same glowing flowers.

The colors of red and white were beautifully carried out in every detail of decoration and in the refreshments. Miss Lawton received her guests wearing a rose chiffon, trimmed with lace. Miss Blackman was gowned in rose silk crepe with bouffant of flowered chiffon and lace, and wore a leghorn hat.

The prize for top score was a box of stationery and was won by Mrs. Wright and Miss John Sage cut the consolation a dainty handkerchief.

A surprise shower of many lovely things was given Miss Elackman.

Legg-Underwood.

Mrs. J. H. Legg announces the marriage of her daughter Gladys to Mr. Edwin Hendon Underwood on Wednesday afternoon, May 20.

The wedding was quietly celebrated at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. S. Toole at Blakeley, Ga. Rev. O. L. Jones performing the ceremony in the presence of a few members of the immediate families.

Mr. and Mrs. Underwood left immediately for New Orleans, and will sail from there June 21 for Barbours, where they will make their home.

Needlework Guild.

The officers section presidents directors and members of the Atlanta branch of the Needlework Guild are invited to attend the reception to be given by the chamber of commerce on Saturday, May 30, from 4 to 6 o'clock, to the federated clubs of the city.

Club Entertained.

The members of the 1914 Embroidery club were entertained Thursday by Miss Clyde Whalley, at her home on Highland avenue.

A salad and an ice course were served, and punch was served from the living room.

THE ANTI-SUFFRAGE MOVEMENT.

A number of prominent women in Macon, it has been stated, are planning an organized movement against woman's suffrage, which is interesting and should prove useful in this all-absorbing woman movement.

Though in the debates for woman's suffrage the invariable result is in favor of the affirmative there is no doubting that there is a very large and far-reaching opposition to woman's suffrage especially in Georgia. The women who desire to acquire it have organized to acquire it have formulated their case and stated it.

Now when there is an organized opposition with their case formulated and stated, both sides will be in a position to work better for both will know what the real points of debate are.

It is to be hoped the opposition will bring out their side clearly and strongly, not only in a general and more sentimental way but in a rational way. It would be interesting to know the arguments not only against the dangers to the "home" people seem to think suffrage will bring, but the danger to our industrial institutions. For instance, nearly two thirds of the employees in the countless industrial institutions of Georgia are women and children pre-eminently of the age that the state permits children to work under the law. It would be interesting to consider what the effect of the women voting would have on industrial life. This is one point both sides might consider remembering that women are stockholders in these institutions as well as men.

Another advantage there will be in the organization of the women opponents to woman's suffrage is that with both sides organized they can start to get the interest of the "average woman." The "average woman" is so often the forgotten quantity in the reckonings of women in their advancement, yet she is the woman who represents the great majority.

The average woman is the woman who has not considered the question of suffrage in any way, who has never read a line about it in the paper and who believes exactly what "Bill" her husband tells her about it, and she is going on for a long time yet believing exactly what "Bill" tells her.

If suffrage for women were granted this average woman would go to the polls and vote the way "Bill" tells her just as she cooks his breakfast at a certain hour in the morning and waits for him at the gate in the evening.

Yes, there are still women who wait at home in the evening, and inside the gate, too.

The third organization which will have to be worked out the suffrage problem, therefore, is the "average

In the Social Whirl

By Isma Dooly

The annual election of the Piedmont Driving club Tuesday evening and the reception following was the significant social event of the week, and one to initiate a gay summer for the stay-at-homes. Besides the regular dinner-dances every Saturday night, with dinner served à fresco, there will be informal dancing every evening, the orchestra to play from 8 until 11 o'clock. The management announces that dinners can be served each evening to those giving the club due notice, the same provision for luncheons or afternoon teas.

The unanimous re-election of Mr. James H. Nunnally was a fitting tribute to his efficient management of the club, and his acceptance was an expression of his unselfish interest in one of Atlanta's institutions which stands for more than the pleasure of the few, but serves as a "home," where the city-at-large may entertain distinguished visitors.

THE QUALITIES OF LEADERSHIP.

It is rare that executive ability and the social talents are so combined that the man possessing them can express the one without a loss to the other. In Mr. Nunnally's case he is the ideal host, generous in his mode of entertaining, thoughtful of every individual, and yet looking after the business side of the club management as he would his own personal affairs. He has an able assistant in Mr. Brooks Morgan, who brings to the office of vice president the same qualities of executive ability and hospitality that make him the good citizen and the ideal host.

The governing board, including Messrs. Jack Spalding, Preston Arkwright, John S. Cohen, John E. Murphy and Harold Heintz, complete a board of management which assures the club a continuance of the dignity and usefulness for which it stands, as one of the city's most necessary institutions.

BEAUTIFUL RECEPTION.

Mrs. Nunnally, who assisted Mr. Nunnally receive, was beautifully gowned in a white silk gown, which showed a flower design in blue and lilac flowers. The draped skirt was trimmed in flounces of lace, and finish was given in blue velvet ribbon, daintily applied. Her smart hat was of black. Mrs. Forrest Adair wore a beautiful toilet in white embroidered chiffon and lace, her hat trimmed in French roses. Mrs. Frank Adair was a picture in a blue taffeta gown quaintly fashioned, her hat of black trimmed in apricot colored silk. Mrs. LeRoy Childs wore blue taffeta, the toilet completed by a little French flower trimmed bonnet, tied with black velvet ribbon. A bonnet of the same fashion finished the toilet of Mrs. Doughty Manley, her gown in apricot colored silk.

Aged, Wrinkled Faces Easily Rejuvenated

An aged face is often only a mask to a comparatively youthful person. Beneath is a countenance young and fair to look upon. It is a simple matter to remove the mask. Ordinary mercurized wax, to be had at any drug store, gradually absorbs the worn-out surface skin; in a week or two the user has the loveliest pinky white complexion imaginable. An ounce of the wax usually is sufficient to complete the transformation. It is put on at night, the cold cream and taken off in the morning with warm water.

This remarkable treatment is invariably effective, no matter how muddy, sallow or discolored the complexion. Freckles, moles, patches, liver spots, pimples, blackheads and other cutaneous blemishes, naturally vanish with the discarded skin.

To remove wrinkles, here is a recipe that cannot be too highly recommended. It is called "Maxille." 1 oz., dissolved in 1/2 pint witch hazel. Use as wash lotion. It softens continuously and is wonderfully effective.

The young men of the Nine O'Clock Dancing club entertained on Thursday evening with a very delightful outing dance given at the Country club. The grounds of the Country club are among the most beautiful in this section, and with the attractive clubhouse, formed an ideal place for such an entertainment. The guests went out in cars in the late afternoon and refreshments were served on the broad porches of the clubhouse. Dancing was then begun and kept until a late hour.

Mr. and Mrs. Story left soon after the ceremony for Savannah to take a steamer for New York. After an absence of several weeks on their bridal tour, Mr. and Mrs. Story will make their home at the Knox hotel, Thomson, Ga. Many Operations Avoided WHILE of course there are serious cases of feminine ills that nothing but a surgical operation will remedy, the indisputable fact remains that hundreds of operations have been avoided by the wonderful medicinal virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the very best proof of this is the unsolicited and grateful letters of the recovered ones themselves. By special permission we publish here four of them out of hundreds we have:—

Logansport, Ind.—'My baby was over a year old and I bloated till I was a burden to myself. I suffered from female trouble so I could not stand on my feet and I felt like millions of needles were pricking me all over. At last my doctor told me that all that would save me was an operation, but this I refused. I told my husband to get me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I would try it before I would submit to any operation. He did so and I improved right along. I am now doing all my work and feeling fine. I hope other suffering women will try your Compound. I will recommend it to all I know.'—Mrs. DANIEL D. B. DAVIS, 110 Franklin Street, Logansport, Ind.
Cleveland, Ohio.—'My left side pained me so for several years that I expected to have to undergo an operation, but the first bottle I took of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound relieved me of the pains in my side and I continued its use until I became regular and free from pains. I had asked several doctors if there was anything I could take to help me and they said there was nothing that they knew of. I am thankful for such a good medicine and will always give it the highest praise.'—Mrs. C. H. GRIFFITH, 7305 Madison Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.
Charlotte, N.C.—'I was in bad health for two years, with pains in both sides and was very nervous. I had a growth which the doctor said was a tumor, and I never would get well unless I had an operation. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I gladly say that I am now enjoying fine health.'—Mrs. ROSA SIMS, 16 Winona St., Charlotte, N.C.
Decatur, Ill.—'I was sick in bed and three of the best physicians said I would have to be taken to the hospital for an operation as I had something growing in my left side. I refused to submit to the operation and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and it worked a miracle in my case, and I tell other women what it has done for me.'—Mrs. LAURA A. GRISWOLD, 2300 Elk East William Street, Decatur, Ill.
It would seem wise before undergoing an operation to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. RELIABLE TESTIMONY.—All our testimonials are guaranteed to be genuine and truthful. They came to us entirely unsolicited and are sincere expressions of gratitude for actual benefits received from the medicine.—THE LYDIA E. PINKHAM MED. CO., LYNN, MASS.

SCANDINAVIANS CRYING FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE

Norway and Sweden May Join to Stop Encroachment by the Great Powers.

Christiania, May 23.—The western half of the Scandinavian peninsula, like the eastern half, has become agitated by the problem of national defense. The campaign for a strengthened armament appears almost daily to assume some new phase of popular interest, and it is believed that the common demand for protection against encroachment by any of the European powers may bring Norway and Sweden together again to the extent of a defensive alliance.

The Norwegian parliament has recently been popularly criticized for its ardent faith in peace treaties. It has been conspicuous in the peace movement ever since it was entrusted by the late Alfred Nobel with the distribution of the Nobel peace prizes each year, and, further, it has during the last seven years relied faithfully upon an integrity treaty signed by Russia, Germany, France and England, by which the neutrality of Norway and Sweden is strictly observed in case of European war.

The people of the Scandinavian peninsula—whether they be Norwegians or Swedes—have no thoughts of revolution, but want to be kept out of the political turmoil which during the last few years has agitated Europe. Fears that integrity treaties are worthless have become popular among Scandinavians since the Balkan war, when it was seen that Turkey profited little by its treaties, as guaranteed by the powers. In a war between the triple entente and the triple alliance the Scandinavian peninsula, with its safe and excellent ports, might be of such value to any of the belligerents as to make it a matter of course that no paper treaties would stand in the way of seizure if such were the case. It is feared that Norway and Sweden might, against their will, be drawn into warfare.

Recognition of this is the moving factor in the talk of a military alliance between Norway and Sweden for mutual defense and preservation of neutrality. Both nations are exercised over possible dangers from the east. It is believed, however, that no European power at war with another would be able to detach enough of its military forces to operate against a well fortified Scandinavia without exposing its own ports and frontier to the enemy.

It is evident that the people of Norway are inclining more and more to this view, and it is doubtful if the Norwegian parliament and the radical cabinet, which is not yet formed, will be able to resist the general call from the people for strengthening of the defenses. Larger appropriations for the army and navy, better fortification of the forts and longer military service.

Parliament recently has lengthened the service in the navy from half a year to a full year, and a bill for longer service in the army, which now is 144 days, is in preparation. There is a general demand for one year's service in the army, and all the parties except the socialists have declared their willingness to bear heavier military burdens.

The centennial of Norway's constitution, which will be celebrated this year, will give an impetus to patriotic sentiments, reaching back one hundred years ago Norway treated only in its own resources and looked at Europe in refusing to admit the demand from the allied powers. The general interest which has been inspired for increased armament is such that civic organizations of many kinds and private individuals are subscribing toward funds. Ladies societies particularly are busy everywhere collecting money and numerous local organizations are planning to buy military aeroplanes for their special districts, and banks and business houses are giving of their last year's profits to the defenses.

A patriotic seal something like the stamps used in tuberculosis campaigns to be placed on mail is proving a success toward fund raising. The stamps bear the words "I defend my land," and it is sold by hundreds of thousands. The money to go for defenses. The churches also have been taking up collections for the same purpose. Everybody appears willing to effect something for the security of the country, except the socialists who are against any kind of military preparations. The other parties however are confident that in case of war even the majority of socialists would join the ranks of citizens in defense of Scandinavia.

TO VACCINATION LAW GERMANS ARE OPPOSED

Widespread Objection to Being Compelled to Submit to Treatment.

Berlin, May 23.—A discussion in the Reichstag has just shown that there is widespread opposition in Germany to compulsory vaccination. On a motion a commission composed equally of friends and opponents of vaccination for the purpose of studying the whole question party lines were completely obliterated and the motion failed only by a tie vote. It was brought forward in answer to numerous petitions for a change in the present law, which has been in force for forty years.

The anti-vaccinationists claimed that hundreds of cases of cerebral palsy is injured by the practice and it was pointed out that the official statistics show that thirty-two deaths were thus caused in Prussia in 1912. They further asserted that managers of stations for obtaining lymph from cases themselves admitted the impossibility of getting a pure lymph in all cases. The German law does not provide for compulsory vaccination, but the police authorities have everywhere construed it as giving them the right to require vaccination and when it becomes necessary they use compulsion. The representative of the imperial health office however, said that there were only eight or nine cases yearly where compulsion was necessary.

A socialist speaker claimed that some parents have even punished five or six times for refusing to have their children vaccinated, and some of them were sent to prison. He added that thousands of people in Germany, he added, have to act contrary to their conscience in having their children vaccinated, and the example of Italy where a conscience clause was adopted some years ago was held up for imitation by Germany. The case of Italy was also pointed out as worthy of study, it was asserted that vaccination is nowhere practiced so extensively as in that country and yet nowhere is smallpox so frequent. Dr. Karcher, of the imperial health office answered all this by displaying a statistical table showing a reduction in smallpox cases since the present law was passed.

Even the man who is liberal to a fault is usually stingy with his wife. As a general thing if our appetite is good the cooking isn't bad. When the other side does it, it is unanimous. When our side does it, it is a peccadillo.

HOME PARK SCHOOL Pupils Enjoy Play Given by the High School.

After our holiday it was very hard for us to concentrate our minds on our lessons but finally we were able to do so now we are much better for our short vacation.

Nearly every school in the city had a picnic on the grounds of the Auditorium and we were very glad to see our eighth and ninth grades there.

We enjoyed the play, "The Story of the Boy Who Was Born on Monday," very much and wish to congratulate the school on its fine performance. We hope that the boys and girls will do as well when they become high school students of our school and their deepest sympathy go to our second graders who lost their dear friend, Florence Pilgrim, in the recent loss of her grandmother.

First grade was very proud of having defeated first grade B in a spelling match and are hoping to win again in another spelling match to be held next Friday. Although first grade B is working hard to keep their lead from the second grade.

The children in the third grade who are on the honor roll this month are: Claude Nelson, George Lewis, Lillian Little, Bill House and Marie Warren.

Those of the fourth grade who are on the honor roll this month are: Carolyn Hyatt, Roy Bennett, Essie Blackstock, Jimmie Bradley, Bernice Williamson, made the high average in the spelling contest.

STATE SCHOOL.

Many Pupils Have a Perfect Record in Department.

The following are the leaders of the various classes: 1. C. Walter Hubback, 2. A. Ollie May, Buckerson, 3. B. Christine Thompson, 4. Amelia Lucille Bell, 5. Mary Griffin, 6. Amanda Manner, 7. Bernice Waller, 8. Clara Bennett, 9. Bernice Waller.

Many more children have done excellent work and will be able to publish the names of all those who have performed their duties so faithfully during the past month.

We are all delighted with the prospect of a seven year term. Now if we could just get away from the convention and have a vacation that three months vacation is necessary, we should, indeed, have accomplished something.

We are very grateful to the board of education for giving us two holidays during the past month. We were very much to see the magnificent parades and superb drills. We are still wearing our hats and tickling and noise making after the manner of the Shriners who taught the grown-up boys to play.

The following children have received 100 in deportment: Lillian Longino, Christine Webb, Ruby Taylor, Annie Ann Lyons, Tom Ray, Alton Rogers, Mary Lou McKinnon, Fannie Mae Peacock, Louvenia Cousins, Nellie Turner, Jessie Mae, Morgan Ollie Mae Richardson.

We especially congratulate these little people who have thus early learned the most important of all lessons—how to be a good student.

The fifty-four children in our first grades received 100 in deportment.

Doubleday Page & Co have issued an interesting pamphlet about authors. One tells about the eternal youthfulness of Mark Twain's nature. Another tells about the life of a man who will believe as visions appear of a fun-loving boyhood and here he tells us when he began to learn to write and of his many disappointments and the great reward amounted to $2500. FATHER TO A HEMISPHERE.
Justly or unjustly, Champ Clark has been sharply derided for the impulsive phrase that sooner or later the stars and stripes would float "from the Arctic to the Antarctic circles on this hemisphere."

In a geographical and political sense, the flag does not and probably never will float over this stupendous stretch of zones and peoples.

In a moral sense, the influence of the United States, the "echoes of the shot fired at Bunker Hill," today are dominant from tip to tip of the continent.

If George Washington is father to his country, James Monroe, or the doctrine that bears his name, is father to the entire hemisphere.

That is the one underlying significance to the spread of really democratic government from Canada to the Argentine.

It is in conformity with America's moral dominion over the hemisphere that we are shepherding Mexico and that it is proposed to remove all complaint from Colombia by paying her for the sequestration of the Isthmus of Panama.

It is difficult to conceive what would have been going on under the sun on this side of the world had not this country become committed to the Monroe doctrine.

It is one of those mighty "ifs" of history that challenge and baffle the imagination.

Certain it is that the Monroe doctrine is about the one cardinal issue upon which all parties in the United States have, from time immemorial, agreed. They might differ to the point of blows upon questions of domestic policy. But when it came to guaranteeing that this continent should be kept inviolate as the shrine and asylum of the truly democratic principle, there has been no dissension.

An easy speculation is that had we not turned European aggression back from these shores, all of South America, probably Mexico and Central America, would today be listed not as independent countries, but as mere dependencies of the old world.

Time after time, France, Germany, England, even Spain, have made tentative attempts to plant sovereignty on this side of the water. Whether cleverly or clumsily masked, there have always been at Washington eyes keen enough to see through the effort, and courage staunch enough to checkmate it. It should be said, too, to the lasting credit of American diplomacy, that the task has been done with a minimum of bloodshed.

We have saved a hemisphere for democracy. It has cost us some tension and a few lives. But the gain, in the moral and even the material sense, far outweighs the cost.

The curious feature of the whole big drama is that often we have pursued it through menacing intricacies against the violent or surreptitious protest of its chief beneficiaries—the Central and South American states.

From the outset, the Latin-American pride has resented the implication that it needed help to stand alone. The suspicion has been uppermost that we were saving the hemisphere that we might absorb and digest it at our leisure. Our spread of territory was seized as conclusive evidence, overlooking the fact that seldom, save in the case of the Philippines, has the flag gone where it was not invited, or flown over land not ours by right of purchase. These clouds to America's title of perfect and unselfish stoniness are, however, gradually clearing. Today, our Latin-American neighbors, with the notable and inevitable exception of Mexico, believe our motives have no ulterior tinge. The diplomatic representatives of three Latin-American countries have offered their services in adjusting our differences with Mexico.

The Monroe doctrine today stands vindicated. The dream of a Pan-American empire is more or less vainglorious. The dream, fulfilled, of a hemisphere saved to democracy, is a more worthy one.

"THE PLAZA" A CENTRAL PARK.
A practical argument recently advanced for the plaza plan, to bisect the business heart of Atlanta, is contained in the recent story by Miss Isma Dooly, in The Constitution, in which she pleaded for a central, open-air park, which should afford rest and recreation for the hordes of Atlanta. Frank Neely, a well-known business man and social worker, and many representative Atlantans have endorsed Miss Dooly's idea.

Atlanta does unquestionably need a centrally located breathing space, where people of all classes may gather at odd moments during the day, in the hot summer evenings and on Sunday, to hear good music and to revivify their energies in fresh air.

The plaza plan will meet these requirements. In the geographical heart of the city it will be easy of access to all sections. Doing away with the unsightly gulch that now marks the passage of railroads will solve that ancient problem. Increasing property values and making an inestimable health and aesthetic contribution to the community's welfare, the entire investment will be worth millions of dollars to the city.

It was not altogether the "spirit of the crowd" that brought into the streets during the evenings of Shrine week hundreds and thousands of young, middle-aged and old Atlantans. It was a natural and legitimate yearning for recreation, the hunger for out-of-door amusements not satisfied by simply walking in the streets, after nightfall, or patronizing indoor amusements. The light, the color and, above all, the music and the out-of-door features of Shrine week, appealed to this element.

Not only for this class, but equally for every citizen, Atlanta ought to provide some open space near the strategic heart of the city, easily and universally accessible, where children might play, and young people learn to know each other, and "grown-ups" breathe fresh air, to the accompaniment of music and of innocent amusements.

The Atlanta Federation of Women's clubs, the Atlanta Federation of Labor, the Atlanta Ad Men's club, the Rotary club and similar organizations can have a powerful influence in materializing a movement of this nature. Such a campaign would not be philanthropic in nature. It would be simply in the line of municipal investment, with the certainty that money spent in establishing and maintaining an institution answering this description would return dividends in the shape of better citizenship many times over.

The plaza plan offers the simplest groundwork upon which these various organizations can begin their work. They have an opportunity to do a great service for Atlanta of the present and future.

BETTER THAN POLITICIANS.

Here is a little old American hen that bids fair to do more for the race than a battalion of politicians, in that she has brought us nearer than ever before to the hen that will lay one egg a day, as regular as the calendar. "Tid-Bits" is our authority for the statement, and the gentleman who induced the hen to set a new egg record of 291 eggs a year is Professor James Dryden, well known in the scientific world.

Our contemporary briefly summarizes the accomplishment of the hen as follows:

The hen in question was hatched on April 29, 1912, and began to lay when only 5 1/2 months old. Not only is she a cross-bred bird herself, but the parent birds also were cross-bred. There was nothing extraordinary in either of these, excepting the fact that the mother hen was a prolific layer of eggs, a trait that has emphasized itself to an extraordinary degree in her offspring. No special care or attention was bestowed upon this abnormal egg-producer. She was reared and fed with fifty others, with whom she took pot-luck. The only special care or attention was bestowed upon the water dish, there was nothing to distinguish her from other hens, in her feeding and upbringing.

The eggs were all said to be uniform in size and color and palatable.

Considering that the egg record has been raised from year to year by careful selection and study, it is reasonable to hope that in due course we shall develop the longed-for hen that will produce an egg to the day, irrespective of wind and weather.

When that comes to pass, the cold storage trust may machinate in vain and the cost of living will shrink, in one direction at least. It is also probable as news of this hen's achievements gets abroad, her kind will multiply and every farm home in the nation will have one or more of her kind. The aggregate in money and health will be hard to estimate.

As it is, we are importing eggs from China, Australia and New Zealand, in an effort to keep pace with demand, and to protect our pocketbooks. The egg-day hen may solve the problem and do away with the necessity for bringing in portions of this highly important food supply from abroad.

TAINED CIRCULATION.
Padded, "tainted" and "doped up" newspaper circulation is hereafter to have hard sledding if the purposes of an organization recently effected in Chicago are materialized. Newspapers to the number of 350, nine of them in Canada, 75 advertisers, 50 advertising agents, 29 magazines, 13 weekly newspapers, 55 agricultural publications, 61 trade journals and 5 advertising journals have formed the Advertising Audit Association and Bureau of Verified Circulation. The object of the association is to investigate circulation claims, and brand those that are based upon distortion, fakes or questionable devices.

The only surprising thing is that such an agency was not established long ago. It is true that advertisers and the public have been partially protected by various sources, but up to this time the best guarantee the advertiser and reader have had against tainted circulation was the known reputation of the editor and publisher.

There is no more reason, as a matter of fact, why there should not be as rigid a "pure circulation" law as a "pure food and drugs law." Getting advertising by twisted claims of circulation is equivalent to getting money under false pretenses. The term is an ugly one, but there is none other that accurately describes the practice. Papers that observe honesty in their circulation statements are at an unfair disadvantage with the small percentage of outlaw journalism that does not scruple to employ the shady methods that once discredited the entire profession.

Circulation may be padded by a number of devices. A favorite one is the "fake extra" carrying a misleading and hysterical news headline, justified only by a lot of either stale or palpably "doped" news. Such a paper, once the buyer has been "stung," goes into the gutter, of course, just as would a circular thrust into the unwilling hands of a pedestrian. But that discarded extra is returned as regular circulation, and advertising tariffs are based upon it. Other dodges are available, but this is an easy and plausible one.

No honest newspaper will have any fear of the new association for the detection of devious circulation methods, but rather will welcome it. It will still farther advance the tendency toward more rigid ethics, visible with the class of newspapers who work on the theory that honesty is the best policy in news presentation or circulation claims.

GEORGIA PRODUCTS DAY.

Georgia Products day, made notable throughout the state last November, is to be repeated on an even more lavish scale in November of 1914. The news comes from Macon, where the executive committee of the Georgia Chamber of Commerce has been meeting, and where they authorized President Haden to proceed forthwith with the necessary plans.

It is an excellent idea to launch work on the second Georgia Products day at this stage of the year. If the event last year, with only a few weeks' agitation, was so spectacular a success, it may justly be expected that longer preparations will insure a celebration that will attract nationwide attention.

The year of which we are about to enter the six-month promises to give Georgia Products day the greatest significance in the history of the state. The doctrine of diversification has gone forward by magic strides. Brooks and other counties have given the whole state object lessons in the pork and beef industries, and it is likely the effect will be witnessed this fall in a vast increase in the gross production of home-grown beef and pork, with the corn and other crops upon which they were fattened.

The propaganda of the State Chamber of Commerce, and of The Constitution, agitated for years, is gradually bearing fruit in the inculcation and observance of the doctrine of "living at home." The fact, reiterated with sledgehammer emphasis, that we needlessly send large treasure out of the state each year for the products we should raise on our own acres, is bearing fruit.

The all-cotton tyranny is gradually loosening its hold. There is no danger that the farmers of the state will fail to supply their share of the world's cotton crop. But they are also minded not to place a mortgage annually on that cotton for the food supplies with which to bring it forth. This means that as each year's summing up recurs, Georgia will be nearer and nearer the splendid goal of self-support.

These reasons, and others that might be named indefinitely, will clothe the Georgia Products day this year with especial significance. And it is a safe assertion that the proselyting effect of the first dinner is still visible in a greater consumption of home products and a cessation of the one-time universal obedience to the foreign label.

There are about as many "rivers of doubt" in Georgia as there are politicians.

The house has agreed upon the trade commission bill. It's a great pity the house couldn't let it rest at that and go home.

SELF-MADE MEN.
A self-made man is a man who has made his success by hand.
Some men inherit success from their fathers and some are made successful by absorbing knowledge through a college and instead of grabbing off jobs. But the self-made man has to begin with the raw material and build himself into a leading citizen without consulting any high priced architect. He usually works upon hours while going so—eight hours each day and eight hours each night.

Some self-made men are usually very substantial. You can tell how solid they are by taking a look at their bank accounts. The self-made man arrives at the age of discretion without any taxicab bills, touring car tastes, champagne appetites or other things that tend to distract his attention from the job of doing things better than his rival who frequently has to stop work at a critical point in his business and take part in a long, exhausting golf tournament.

Some self-made men become millionaires and some become presidents. Statistics prove that it is much easier for a man to make himself president than it is to let the job go to one's ancestors. Most millionaires are made by the self-made man. However, none of the men who spend millions are self-made. They are usually made by self-made men. The self-made man does a magnificent job on himself, but at designing and erecting successful descendants he is usually a failure.

Sometimes a self-made man has been so busy completing his business sagacity that he hasn't had any time to waste in mapping out his education or manners. This is like building a house without paint and designing it with a barn for a model. Other self-made men are so used to doing things themselves that they insist on doing all the talking about themselves. Usually these men are lonely. When self-made men begin to take the 1400th time how he began life with one suspender and a dog bite for capital his auditors usually step around the corner to get a match and do not stop running for ten minutes.

Self-made men are not as handsome as the other men that they wear better and are much more useful. The greatest achievement of self-made men has been the United States. In Europe king-made men have worked for centuries upon centuries which haven't attained half our size or prosperity.

VENEZUELA.
Venezuela, an outpost of the nether regions located just above the equator in South America, has 600,000 square miles, these being the only square things which have been discovered in the country up to date. It was discovered by Columbus in 1492 and at the time of his discovery the civilized world in maintaining a quarantine almost three million people are now living within its borders—a feat which is regarded with awe by those who have visited the country and have studied its politics from a safe place.

Venezuela consists of mountains, tropical forests, great grassy plains and the Orinoco river, which has more tributaries than an American trust. It has 500 miles of railroad and 200 miles of telegraph lines. The lines are not due until day after tomorrow. It is bounded on the north by the Caribbean sea, on the east by British Guiana, on the south by Brazil and on the west by Colombia. It is one of the most interesting countries in the world and there is never a line at the ticket window.

Venezuela produces cattle, beans, coffee, tobacco and dictators, of which the latter are by far the most interesting. The country is one of the most interesting countries in the world and there is never a line at the ticket window.

Venezuela is governed by presidents who are elected by the simple process of holding a pistol to the heads of the congressmen. The term of a Venezuelan president is indefinite. He rules as long as the country can stand him. General Crespo, who ejected his predecessor in 1858, made the remarkable record of having the chair without a general request. President Castro killed off the opposition in 1909 and ruled for eight years. The country is now slowly recovering from his administration, but it may never recover its public treasury which eloped to Paris with him.

For all its faults Venezuela produced the greatest man in South American history—Simon Bolivar, who freed South America early in the last century.

FRESH AIR.
Fresh air is air which is not contaminated with carbon dioxide, sewer gas, curs words, gossip or tobacco smoke. The contents of the nostrils are fresh air, and it is not fresh air, but a little ozone thrown in to give it tone and is the very finest article used for breathing purposes.

Out in the mountains, far from the haints of man, the air is fresher than country butter. After a man has breathed in a few million cubic feet of it he can eat an ox, hoofs and all, and thinks nothing of taking a small sized bear across his knees and spanking him severely. But the air in a large city is of a much inferior quality. It has been used so much and has been mixed with so many kinds of odors and gases and has had to mingle with many sick plays in the air that it is no much good. It is not so much better for breathing purposes than so much tar. After a baby has spent a few months in a one-room tenement breathing the air that is in it, the baby is born with a cough and a cold. But the air in a sleeping porch is now used as a specific for a large number of diseases and if its popularity grows, the carpenters will soon be riding in automobiles and the doctors will be working for fifty cents an hour.

Fresh air strengthens the lungs, purifies the blood, steadies the temper, untangles the nerves, and braces up the morals. The air in the home should be changed at least once an hour and the air in the theater should be changed immediately after each doubtful joke and suggestive song. If the audience could be changed too, it would have a great influence in uplifting the stage.

The Fan.
(From The Marion Chronicle.)
The baseball fan is a product of America. As a native of the soil, he is a success. It may safely be said that the national game has furthered in developing and maintaining American good nature than any other agency operating among us.

Looking at it as an all round sport, baseball is a great boon to all Americans, young and old, male and female. While women do not play, they enjoy it. As a tranquilizer, it is a great asset, let us encourage the fan habit. It is one of our great national assets.

MAY BE NO VACANCY IN OFFICE DIRECTOR OF CENSUS
By John Corrigan, Jr.
Washington, May 23.—(Special.)—The announcement that Hon. William J. Harris, director of the census, had tendered his resignation to Secretary of Commerce Redfield, has had the effect of bringing in applicants to the place from all parts of the country. Members of congress are being flooded with suggestions of willing democrats who are prepared to serve their country in this connection and who are already engaged in bringing all sorts of pressure to bear in behalf of their appointment.

May Be No Vacancy.
But after all it appears that there may be no new appointment for Secretary Redfield, while the directly saying so, has left the intimation upon congressmen who have talked with him concerning the matter that there may be no vacancy and that the matter will certainly not be up for consideration for at least some time.

Before Director of the Census Harris left Washington to open his Georgia speech-making campaign, he called upon Secretary Redfield and whatever took place between them as to resignation was verbal and not in writing. Mr. Harris has not formally resigned, but has simply notified the secretary of commerce that if he wishes to fill his place he may consider his resignation as being available at any time.

In No Hurry to Act.
The secretary is not as yet ready to fill the place, and in all probability will not even take the matter up for consideration for some weeks and perhaps some months. As is generally known, the summer months are very dull in all of the central matters in Washington and little or nothing is happening out of the usual routine between now and the fall. It is generally understood that Secretary Redfield considers that action in the matter is not emergent. He has at least indicated this to those who have talked with him about the succession.

It can, therefore, all but authoritatively be stated that if the director of the census is to resign no formal action as regards the matter will be taken for the present. If it appears that his candidacy for governor is successful, his successor would be at once named from among the great variety of candidates already applying. If it should appear that Mr. Harris is not successful, then the incident would close, and he would be retained in his present position.

There certainly will be no definite action taken in the matter for the present.

SLATON'S FRIENDS ARE GRATIFIED OVER RESULTS OF CAMPAIGN
Governor John M. Slaton and his friends are greatly gratified over the progress of his campaign.

Alfred C. Newell, chairman of the John M. Slaton campaign committee, gave out the following report yesterday:
"We have since last Sunday received from more than one-half of the 3,500 members with which the John M. Slaton campaign committee began. Virtually every one of those here has suggested from 10 to 50 names of friends of Mr. Slaton in their counties and communities for membership in the committee. During the first two days, last Monday and Tuesday, we received more than 100 names. Altogether to date, in only one week's time, we have received the names of more than 10,000 of the governor's active friends.

"Already a great many of those suggested have agreed to serve on the committee. We have been able to communicate with only 5,000 names to date. The remainder will be communicated with next week.

"Starting with 3,500, the committee has grown already to more than 5,500, not including those in Atlanta who have volunteered their names. The aggregate latter already in a month's time were over 10,000. On Friday, more than 500 of the governor's supporters in Fulton advised me they would serve on the committee.

"The above figures merely to show the live interest in Mr. Slaton's race for the United States senate. His organization covers every community in the state. It has been formed entirely by the voluntary action of his friends.

"His campaign is in splendid shape, and if the election were to occur tomorrow he would carry more than 125 counties.

"It will be in better shape on election day. Instead of getting 10,000 on our committee in a month's time, as originally intended, we expect to have that many before the end of next week."

STRONG PETITION FROM POLK COUNTY URGES HUGH DORSEY FOR GOVERNOR
Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey is in receipt of a petition from Rockmart, Polk county, signed by 176 citizens, urging him to run for governor. Attached to the petition is a State of Georgia, County of Polk—Before me, the undersigned justice of the peace and notary public, appears _____, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says: "The undersigned has signed and delivered to the State of Polk county requesting their attitude in the gubernatorial race, should Hugh Dorsey run."

"Second—That 176 of them pledged themselves to vote for him should he run, and they went so far as to request that he run for higher offices, saying they would support him for anything. That out of the 176 names, five were avowed W. J. Harris men, one was an Anderson man, three were undecided and the balance Dorsey men, who had scruples about pledging themselves to any candidate in political campaigns.

"Third—That no man was singled out but all approached as they appeared on the streets of the town from surrounding country.

"Fourth—That all are white men and honest, clean, reputable citizens."
JUDGE NAT E. HARRIS SPENDS DAY IN ATLANTA VISITING FRIENDS
Judge Nat E. Harris, of Macon, candidate for governor, spent Saturday in Atlanta. He called on Governor Slaton and other statehouse officials to whom he expressed himself as gratified over the progress of his campaign. He makes his first address tomorrow, at Bainbridge, at noon.

SAYS STATE DEMANDS CANDIDACY OF HUGH DORSEY FOR GOVERNOR
Editor Constitution: I have noticed that two or three Georgia newspapers have published editorials to the effect that it would be unfortunate if Hugh Dorsey to make a race for governor in the event that it would be bringing the Mary Phagan case into politics.

the man of the office. I believe there is a more genuine and more general desire to see Hugh Dorsey governor than any other man has been mentioned. There is much genuine enthusiasm behind the suggestion that he make the race, and should he announce there would be a great rallying to his standard in all parts of the state.

He is man of gubernatorial timber. He has a magnetic personality and is a natural leader of men. Above all, he is clean, honest, fair and dependable.

He is essentially modest, as men of true greatness generally are. I do not look for him to seek the governorship. It is very probable, though, that the demand for him will require his entry into the race.

He has what might well be termed a master mind. No lawyer in Georgia is more thorough and methodical. In his last great case he was opposed by two of Georgia's most successful, forceful and, I might say, without meaning disrespect, most dominating lawyers. Some might think that since the forensic battle with these great lawyers was at times keen and bitter that all of his characteristics were those of a fierce fighter. He fights fiercely when necessary, but an intimate acquaintance of twenty-four years warrants me to speak with real knowledge, and I can say that I do not know a man of more gentle and tender sympathies.

If Hugh Dorsey consents to run for governor the people would have cause for genuine satisfaction. We could not have a better workaday candidate.

NINTH DISTRICT EAST BECOMING STAMPING GROUND FOR CANDIDATES
Commerce, Ga., May 23.—(Special.)—Judge W. W. Stark, of this place, has announced for representative. Judge Stark is the present senator from this district. Jackson was not entitled to the nomination, and as yet there are only two announced candidates—Dr. L. C. Allen, of Hoschton, who is a candidate to succeed himself, and Judge Stark.

Hon. T. W. Hardwick will speak at Jefferson Friday, the 5th day of June. The date is being extensively advertised, and it is likely that Mr. Hardwick will be greeted with a good audience, since this is his first appearance in this immediate section. Those in local circles are anxious to see him, but Edward Jackson as a Slaton county.

Hon. Thomas M. Bell, the representative of the ninth congressional district, has been spending some time in this section, and has been keeping up with his correspondence, and at intervals touching various points, mixing with the people. It is said that no man ever honored with the speaker'ship of the lower house of the general assembly was more popular than was Mr. Bell during his two terms here. He served in this capacity, and his popularity then can be taken as an index to his popularity at home.

Dr. J. G. Hardman is devoting all his time to the interests of his candidacy for governor during the week he has visited a number of south Georgia towns. Dr. Hardman wound up the week's work in Ben Hill, meeting with old friends and making new ones in Fitzgerald Saturday. He has been visiting with the trustees of the Agricultural college at Athens. He is chairman of the executive committee of that institution.

In the meantime, his home headquarters presents a scene of activity and interest. Letters by the thousands are being distributed and a corps of stenographers are kept busy day and night receiving and answering letters and telegrams. As a business man his proposed business administration seems to have the approval of very many voters of the state.

SLATON SEVERELY CRITICIZED BY HUGH DORSEY
Dublin, Ga., May 23.—(Special.)—Those who heard the address of Congressman Hardwick here are still discussing the appeal he made to the voters in favor of his candidacy for the unexpired term of Senator Bacon.

Hardwick paid especial attention to Governor Slaton and T. S. Felder. Governor Slaton he criticized rather severely, both as to his record in the governor's office and his refusal to resign during the race. He is much less complimentary toward Felder, and less mention than Governor Slaton, while the other candidates were not mentioned.

R. Earl Camp has announced that he will not be in the race for the legislature this year. He has announced that he cannot do this time leave his law practice long enough to make a satisfactory campaign.

HARDMAN ON HANDSHAKING TOUR THROUGH SOUTH GEORGIA COUNTIES
Cordele, Ga., May 23.—(Special.)—Dr. L. G. Hardman, of Commerce, candidate for governor, was in Cordele yesterday in the midst of a campaign. He has a large number of the voters of the county, and apparently making a very favorable impression. In a statement made to newspaper men, Dr. Hardman said that he was meeting with much success in his campaign over the most prominent men of the state where he has been pledged their support to him. He left Cordele last night on his way to Eastman to meet the voters of Dodge county.

His local supporters of Dr. Hardman are arranging for a date for him to return to Cordele to deliver an address.

From Baseball to Public Life.
(Ed A. Goewey, in Leslie's.)
Erstwhile noted baseball players have been the recipients of so many official honors during the last few months that today it has become a habit with the fans, whenever a man is nominated for or elected to some public office, to inquire whether he has returned to see when and where he did his share to promote the national pastime. Recently John L. De Saules was nominated by President Wilson to be minister to Uruguay, and President Erwin was elected to the governorship of North Carolina, on the democratic ticket, defeating a candidate supported by all the opposing political parties.

In these men the loyal rooters at once recognized the old-fashioned who, not so long ago, made splendid records while "wearing the spangles" and gamboling about the green diamonds. De Saules was one of the most famous quarterbacks that ever represented Yale on the gridiron, and he was once a star on the baseball team as a college ball player. He received more than one tempting offer to join the professional ranks, but after his graduation left for Chili, where he married and engaged in business for some time. Brown was a member of the famous old Boston National League team, and after putting aside his bat and glove for a time, entered the political arena. He has held the office of city solicitor and was a Wilson president elector. The names of De Saules and Brown are but two more to add to the long list of those who have been successful as baseball players, and filled even such high posts as governor and United States senator with distinction and honor.

PROMINENT MAN HERE LAST WEEK

President of American Cigar Company Spends Day at Capital City Tobacco Company.

A prominent visitor in Atlanta last week was A. I. Silvester, president of the American Cigar Company of New York city. Mr. Silvester stopped off on his way from Cuba to New York last Monday, especially to spend the day with Messrs. Fain & Stamps, Moline of the Capital City Tobacco company. Mr. Silvester had been down in Cuba for some time, where he has in part of his interests. He is a trader of the Havana American Tobacco company, makers of the La Preferencia cigar, of which 600,000 were distributed in 1913. The distribution was confined to the United States. La Preferencia is doubtless the largest selling cigar in the world. In Capital City, tobacco companies are in the hands of the men in Georgia and South Carolina, and Mr. Silvester expressed himself as being very interested in the distribution in those two states.

German States Make Slaves of Inveterate Idlers

More Than 40,000 Men Who Refuse to Work Are Held in the Labor Homes of Seven Different States—Police Have Autocratic Powers, and the Public Wish to Bring Them Under the Jurisdiction of the Courts.

(Copyright, 1914, by Curtis Brown.)
Berlin, May 22.—Prussia's system of state slavery for idlers has brought her into conflict with mild Bavaria. Prussia compels her idlers to work; but mild Bavaria does not. If a Prussian citizen refuses to work, he is fined, or spends his earnings on drink and neglects his family he may be turned into a state-owned slave, quite as in ancient Athens. He may be seized by the local police, and without any trial sent to a compulsory labor home where he must slave for years for the benefit of the state. This is under a law which passed only two years ago.

The law violates Prussia's constitution, and it violates also the conscience of mild Bavaria. So when last Christmas two Prussian idler-slaves escaped from a labor home at Fulda across the Prussian-Bavarian frontier, the Bavarian government refused to extradite them. Bavaria's premier, Baron von Hertling, stood firm. Prussia's severe minister of the interior, Herr von Dollwitz, stood equally firm. The quarrel ended comically. The fugitive slaves, rejected to find themselves in a free country with excellent beer, got gloriously drunk. When sober, they applied to the local Bavarian authorities for support and relief and Bavaria is a Christian land—they got both. The good news spread. Within a month five other escaped Prussian idler-slaves crossed the border into Bavaria. Like Berserkers, and applied for relief and support. That was too much. Freedom-loving Bavaria kept to her resolution not to extradite them, but she resolved to expel them. They were put across Prussia's frontier, where they were promptly seized by Prussian police, and brought back to their slave plantations.

Slavery for Idlers.
State slavery for idlers flourishes not only in Prussia. It is an old institution in Saxony, Wurttemberg, Oldenburg, Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Anhalt and the free republic of Hamburg. All these countries have constitutional provisions which proclaim that no man may be imprisoned without trial, but they all have laws which enact the contrary. They do not, however, regard these laws as unconstitutional. The laws proclaim that idlers may be turned into state compulsory workers without any trial, on the mere command of the police or some other local authority. Though this is pure slavery, no effective protest is raised, and the system would be established tomorrow as law for the whole of Germany, were it not for certain technical obstacles which arise from the confusion of the administrative systems in the different states. Saxony and the other states maintain numerous labor homes or colonies, which, in effect, are nothing but slave plantations. These are most situated in remote districts, often on barren land which demands reclamation. The men work under guard in the open country, but the houses in which they sleep are surrounded by high fences, and are guarded by police. The idlers wear no prison uniform, but that does not make escape easy. The police demand identification papers from all unknown men, and in case of doubt they hold suspects without leaving the consequences. Under this system about 40,000 idlers who have never been tried for any offense are held under almost any name, and in case of doubt they hold suspects without leaving the consequences. Under this system about 40,000 idlers who have never been tried for any offense are held under almost any name, and in case of doubt they hold suspects without leaving the consequences.

Bavarian premier, Baron von Hertling; M. H. Laurentz, and German conservative leader, Herr von Heydebrand

Prussia's excuse for such severe laws is that she is more plagued with idlers than any other state in Germany. This is true, though foreigners do not suspect it. Dr. Hans Ostwald, of Berlin, an expert on this problem, estimates that Prussia has 100,000 tramps, and the minister of the interior says that since 1902 the number of families deserted by husband and father has increased 34 per cent.

To Make Idlers Work.
For this reason Prussian legislators decided that it was necessary to lock up habitual idlers and compel them to work. The trouble was to find a satisfactory definition of an habitual idler. Therefore, when Prussia set about drafting her law, she turned to the smaller states which already had a state slavery system. It was resolved that only men who are bodily and mentally fit for work should be classed as idlers; but that in this category come men who by drink or other excesses culpably unfit themselves for work. The idleness must be of a kind which burdens the public. The definition of a habitual idler is a man who refuses to support himself, his wife, children and other dependents. The law lays down that the urban and rural "auschüsse" or committees test each case. The poor law authority which supports the idler's family reports the case, and the committee takes action, and orders the offender's arrest. The offender is committed to a labor home, there, to be kept until reformation or for an indefinite period, spending his time in working for the benefit of his country.

Prussia and the other states which punish idleness with slavery boldly transgress the principles of personal freedom. The accused idler has practically no protection. In some cases the police themselves do the imprisoning, in other cases the police evidence as to the man's character decides the result. Only in Hamburg must one member of the committee which investigates an idler's case have magistrate qualifications. Also a Hamburg citizen may not be turned into a state slave until he has first had a chance to repent, and until other resources have been exhausted.

They Sue Him First.
The authorities must first sue him for neglecting his family, next they must send him to a labor exchange which will offer him work, and if this fails they must give him several days' warning of his fate if he remains obstinate. Should he ignore the warning he is requested to enter a labor home voluntarily; and only if he fails to do that do the police arrest him. In Anhalt the idler must be warned twice before he can be sent to a home. Saxony's law is severest. The administrative authorities or the police can seize an idler, and imprison him at a slave for an indefinite period. He can appeal to the so-called "control authorities," which are a branch of the administration, but no court will hear his case or release him. The Saxon law allows the dogging of men, who continue to idle after they have been put in the home. In Saxony labor homes some have been for twenty years, and more. Everywhere the idlers get long periods. In Oldenburg the minimum term for which an idler may be committed is two years. A man who is brought back after release gets a minimum three years. The Prussian law requires that each idler's case shall be periodically reconsidered at least once a year.

State slaves are well fed, well clothed, and as a rule, well treated. The value of their work is allowed them. This value is low, because they are put to do work which could not remuneratively be done by free labor. They earn from 40 cents to 75 cents a day, not very much below the earnings of the average German unskilled worker, and they have no days of unemployment. From their earnings the labor home deducts the bare cost of their food and clothes, and pays the balance to their families or to the poor law authority, which supports the families.

They Leave Reformed.
When they leave the home, reformed, they get a lump sum, a job, and other help. Most of them come back. That is Saxony's experience. Prussia's experiment has been too short for judgment.

Experts, who otherwise quarrel as to the merits of the state slavery system, agree about this. The system is worthless from the standpoint of the reformation of idlers and drunkards, but it is successful because it compels idlers to support their families as long as they are in the homes, and it relieves the state of a burden and gives it valuable consideration in the shape of reclaimed land and other useful works. Only about 15 per cent of the habitual idlers have been reformed by a term of slavery to the state. Many are temporarily reformed. After a couple of years' hard labor under a stern overseer's eye, they get into the servitude. They make sincere attempts to lead an industrious life. On this they are released. Freedom and drink make them soon forget their good resolutions, and within a few weeks or months they are again state slaves. Of fifty men released from an Anhalt labor home thirty-two were sent back within six months. All of them had worked well while in the home. Experts say that such men by weakness of will are incapable of voluntary work. They make good workers, as horses do, while under control. In Prussia is the only state where temporary slavery has reformed many idlers. This is put down to the mildness of the Hamburg system, and to the efforts made to bring moral pressure on the men.

It Brings Profits.
The state slavery system is in the interests of the nation as a whole. It brings profits in Saxony 700 families were lately settled on once barren land, which a gang of idlers reclaimed. Oldenburg's bogs are being drained, and made cultivable by idlers. In Prussia a similar project is on foot to build in the center of the big country a vast "Anhaltstal," so the homes are called, for 3,000 idlers. Near the building will be an electrical generating station. The dried bog turf will be used to generate electricity, the electricity will further be used for cutting and drying the turf. For clearing the country of the six-foot turf, which they get in transporting the lime, sand, and manure ne-necessary for turning the barren plains into arable fields.

Prussia More Plagued With Idlers and Tramps Than Any Other Country—Expert Says the State Has 100,000 Tramps—The States Make a Profit From the Work of Their Slaves.

The Prussian plan has many such bogs which altogether cover about 17,000 square miles. The conservative leader Herr von Heydebrand and the socialist member Count Westphalen, however, were setting Prussia's 100,000 tramps on their heads. The former estimates that by compelling the idlers to do the work at a cost of $30,000,000 all the bog country could be turned fertile and the Minister of the Interior Dollwitz sympathizes with this scheme. He told an East Prussian audience that "as long as there is land which cannot be ploughed there could be no idle hands." When Herr Dollwitz was prime minister of Anhalt, he increased the severity of the law against idler-slaves, but he said he has no sentiment should stand in the way of the obligation to work.

Opposed by Progressives.
Progressive Germans oppose the system. They admit that idlers should be forced to slave in order to repay the state for what it does in education and protecting them, but they demand judicial guarantees before any such thing is done. They say that idling should be held by a court and the police should be deprived of their too great power to put away unrepentant persons at will. Prussia's progressive policy, in this standpoint, it fosters the existing system because the police find in it a useful lever over the poorer class population. The less severe laws used for political ends. A sound conservative local knows he will be treated with more consideration than a social-democratic idler. As the law now stands, the police could intern compulsorily in a labor home a large proportion of the working-class population. The less severe laws used in this is because Prussia is not liberal. The citizen must provide not only for wife and children, but also for both parents. The less severe laws used in this is because Prussia is not liberal. They happen to be alive when for all eight great-grand parents. An industrious Prussian who supports both parents and a wife and children, can be arrested by the police and sent to a labor home for a long term. This is the letter of the Prussian law. Progressive Germans hold that police men, and even administrators, who are allowed to be so arbitrary in their power, and they want to reform the slavery for idlers law. The chief demand is that judges shall try cases, and that the state slavery law shall be repealed. It is part of the universal system of state compulsion and state tutelage.

LITTLE CROWN PRINCE SEEKING SKI HONORS

Christiania, May 22.—The little Crown Prince Olaf, like every Norwegian boy, is striving to become the champion ski jumper of the world. He was given his first lesson at the age of 12 years and during the past winter, at the age of 11, he has been jumping from 40 to 50 feet. He is as clever as any boy of his age at the sport, and so enthusiastic about it that he attends all the big contests.
When King and Queen Maud came to Norway in 1905 they knew nothing about winter sports, but before their first winter visit to the royal pair became fascinated with skiing and, under the tutelage of Captain Holt, the king and queen became the most expert ski runners in Norway. They became so proficient that they could outstep the local natives, both of their ages.
In the royal family live for several weeks in a small house near the scene of the world's greatest ski derby, and the king and queen give from the people, is built in the Norwegian peasant style and is furnished in a simple, comfortable fashion. Neither the king or queen care much for royal pomp and ceremony, so their vacation in the mountains constitute the most enjoyable season of their year.
They found particular pleasure recently in entertaining the Prince of Wales, who spent the winter of 1913 for the first time. The prince took to the Norwegian sports so readily that he made a trip to the high mountains and glaciers, a feat that few non-Norwegian climbers, even experienced mountain climbers. When he left for home he expressed the hope of coming back next winter, if possible.

RADIUM IN THE BODY MAY CAUSE CANCER

London, May 22.—Dr. Walter S. Lazarus Earlow, who has recently had success in the treatment of cancer by radium, says radium in the human body may also be the cause of cancer.
At a recent meeting of physicians and surgeons he told of experiments he performed upon animal cells. He explained that while cancer might be divided into various classes it was nothing more or less than a localized cell growth. "It is reasonable to suppose," he said, "that there is one cause and it would be wise to look that in the radium and radiation we have the probable cause."
Radium, he continued, was widely distributed in nature in quantities which had been shown to produce the stimulant effect upon the cells of the body, and to develop some deleterious effects which culminated in death.
"Cancer was most closely associated with inflammation to such an extent," he said, "that chronic inflammation was the cause of cancer universally accepted, but chronic inflammation was so closely associated with cancer that it was necessary to raise the question whether radium stimulated an animal cell."
Dr. Earlow said experiments of his had demonstrated that bacteria actually pulled radium out of a solution and attracted it to themselves. If radium, therefore, were circulating in the blood while bacteria were present, the latter would concentrate it, and deposit the radium, forming a focus of that substance, producing stimulation of the cells in the neighborhood. He said radium was present at times in normal human tissues, and it was found in greater quantities in cancerous tissues.
Disposing of the theory that cancer was caused by irritation, the doctor pointed out that it would naturally be assumed that cancer of the gall bladder was the most widely common, whereas it was rare.

France's Development in World of Sport

In Boxing, Lawn Tennis, Rugby Football, Golf and Jumping She Now Has Champions Fit to Pit Against Any the Rest of the World Can Produce.

Paris, May 22.—Preparations for the Olympic games of 1916 at Berlin have drawn attention to the amazingly rapid growth of France in the world of sport, one of the most interesting and significant developments of modern times. Although only a matter of comparatively recent date, yet France has had of champions in many lines of sport. In lawn tennis she possesses in Decugis, Gobert, Laurentz, Germet and Canez a quintet of players the equal of any other nation in the world. In golf she has enough to win the English open championship one year and Jean Gassiat and two or three others among his fellow countrymen are almost if not quite Massey's equal. Both the Frenchman, is undoubtedly the finest runner at his distance in the world. Finally, in Rugby football, the French national team, which has won the championship in the past few years and are now good enough to give a representative English side a keen fight.

French athletes excel for the moment in many fields of endeavor, because they correspond to or are the result of a great national awakening and interest in these particular sports or games. In sports like rowing, cricket and football the Englishman is as good if not better than he has ever been, but in boxing and lawn tennis and what are known as field sports he has been suffering from a slump because of a corresponding decline in public interest. Champions are born of great public enthusiasms, like the American national interest in field sports and the French interest in boxing, and despite all the hard things that have been said against those who never boxes who do not play the games, they are the best guarantee of the health of these particular games and the best insurance against a dearth of first-class players. Without this wide public interest the standard of a sport steadily declines.
That is exactly what is the matter with boxing in England and France, has become too much centralized. Real first-class boxing has become a sport, not for an enthusiastic public, but for a few moneyed men who gather in the National Sporting Club and monopolize the game. And because of the limitations of this private club the purses that can be offered to the world's best boxers in London are comparatively speaking, ridiculously small. Really good and promising native boxers who, if born in the United States or Aus-

Bouin, great French runner, and Prussia's minister of interior, Herr von Dollwitz.

Laurentz, the Boy Wonder of the Lawn Tennis World, Who, at 18, Claimed a Victory Over the Great Wilding—Carpentier and Ledoux Fine Boxers.

lia or France, could, even if they never reached the topmost rung, earn comfortable livings by boxing, are, in this country, compelled to work in other lines. Especially is this true of the newer boxers who, although they may have championship possibilities in them, have not yet made a name. The evil in this state of affairs, of course, is that the profession of boxing does not attract intelligence, nor does it encourage even those with courage who do enter it.
In Search of Big Purses.
Contrast this with conditions in the United States and France. In the former country one can name a score of clever young boxers who have made from $20,000 to $50,000 each in a few years in the boxing ring. Good Englishmen like Driscoll, Freddie Welsh, Owen Moran, Matt Wells and others are driven abroad in search of big purses.
Unfortunately, France's crack tennis players have been out of form for the past year. Last summer they had a disagreement with the English players and did not make their appearance at Wimbledon, for the championship. Their best year was undoubtedly 1911, when Gobert and Decugis carried off the doubles trophy at Wimbledon and the 19-year-old Laurentz defeated the great Wilding on the continent. The latter last year suffered from an accident to one of his eyes and went right off form, but it is hoped that he will strike his pace this summer and again show the brilliancy that made such a sensation three years ago.

But rapid as is France's development in the lawn tennis world, it is even more sensational in the realm of boxing, largely due to the work of Georges Carpentier, the youthful heavyweight champion of Europe. Just how good Carpentier really is it is impossible to say, pending his appearance in the ring with some of the American light heavyweights. Victory over a man like Langford, who is just about his weight, would put him in the very front rank of the world's boxers.

While one is free to express some doubts as to the exact position of Carpentier on the pugilistic ladder, no one can deny that he has had an amazing career. From a mere strapping he has excelled in every weight division, but it was not until he went to England to fight Syd Burns and Young Joseph and secured a decision over the first and a knock-out against the latter that he was generally recognized as being of championship caliber. His two subsequent defeats of Bombardier Wells are too well known to need repetition in telling.
Carpentier's Defeats.
Although Carpentier has not fared particularly well against the American boxers, having been defeated by the Dixey Kid, Frank Klaus and Billy Papke, there is a certain amount of legitimate excuse for his poor showing in these matches. Dying at the time he has been fighting Carpentier has been growing at a tremendous rate and it has been constant problem to keep him in any one class. In the Dixey Kid match it is claimed that the Frenchman was ill, while in the other two matches Carpentier's stamina was weakened by injudicious reducing. Of course, the boy and his backers are anxious to make as much money as possible while the tide is flowing their way, but the fighter's recovery is almost sure to suffer in the process.

An instance of this occurred when Carpentier was in England training for his match with Syd Burns and Young Joseph Bombardier Wells was then training for his proposed fight with Jack Johnson, which, of course, never came off. Carpentier, who is now remembered, was then only a welter-weight, boxed several exhibition bouts with Wells at Earl's court, and became convinced that he could beat the English champion, even though the latter had about 40 pounds advantage in weight, 5 inches in height, about 8 inches in reach, and moreover, was still too good for anyone on this day. Jack Johnson, heavyweight champion of the world.
He Wanted $10,000.
Wells was approached by Deschamps, Carpentier's manager, who declared he would bet $5,000 on his protest, and a syndicate was formed which offered Wells $3,000 for his end of the purse, win, lose, or draw. Wells held out for $10,000, and the negotiations fell through. It is mentioned here to show not only Carpentier's wonderful confidence in himself, but also the enormous chances he and his manager are willing to take in their chase after a fortune.
Although France has raised a whole brood of clever fighters, there is one name which has become famous in the front rank on this side of the Atlantic at least, Charles Ledoux, by defeating Digger Staniel, who has proved himself as good as the best American boys at his weight, became a real champion with his much cleaner style. His two recent defeats in comparison with Bill Benyon, the hard-hitting little Welsh boy, shows that he is still too good for anyone on this side.

Nose Tip Vaccination.
The young Japanese diplomat pointed to his father, the marquis.
"That's father," he said, "the old fellow with the saucer-shaped scar on the end of his nose. All Japs of the older generation have that scar."
"Yes," said the debutante.
"That's the vaccination mark. In the old days, when compulsory vaccination first began, we Japs vaccinated everybody on the tip of the nose. Well, because it was a good place where there's no movement to rub off the scar, and also because the vaccination scar on the nose was easily identified by the medical officers of the government. A man didn't have to take off his clothes in order to prove that he'd been vaccinated."
"Yes," the nose tip vaccination had its good points, but before the modern hankering after beauty it had to go."

ENGLISH LABOR UNIONS FORM GREAT COMBINE

London, May 22.—A great trades union combine has been organized in England, and its members, including transport workers totaling 1,250,000 men, will hereafter support each other in their disputes with employers. The combine, the National Amalgamated Union of Workers, is a result of an agreement between the three organizations and the executives have appointed a committee to advise the workers. It was found in some of the more recent strikes that without a working agreement, by which all would join together in case of a dispute, the workers refuse to accept coal, as in many cases the colliers have large stocks on hand at other mines non-union labor can be obtained. With the three unions united, the workers believe they can enforce better conditions from the employers.
John P. P., president of the miners' federation, which with 1,000,000 members, is the largest of the three, said in a statement that by co-operation between the three classes of workers will do away with strikes. He said the combine will make a million and a half pounds of money, which will be considered while others consider that the combination will do a great deal of good. The combine will also be supported by all these workers will be united, and will receive the attention of Parliament.

SURGEON SEWS HAIRS TO THE HUMAN SCALP

Budapest, May 22.—A method of sewing hairs to the human scalp in cases of baldness has been successfully used by Dr. Szeleky at the hospital of St. Stephens in Pest. The number of hairs planted in the head of one patient has been as high as 6,000. One hundred hairs are drawn through punctures in the scalp in every square inch, and as both ends are left free, this makes over 1,000 hairs to each square inch.
In the operation very fine gold wires, each one-fifth of an inch in diameter, and fine long hairs from a woman's head are attached to these. The gold loop, which is an anchor, while after operation, which are introduced into the subcutaneous tissue, where it is slightly twisted, thus holding the hair in permanent position. The hair, which is perfectly natural, is thus planted in three-quarters of an inch. A special instrument has been designed by Dr. Szeleky for planting the hair, which are introduced into the work is completed for planting 60,000 hairs there is only one gramme of gold left in the scalp. The hair, which is perfectly natural after a capsule of tissue forming around the gold knot. The inflammation and the hair, which are perfectly natural after the operation and no evil results have ensued from any of the patients. The hair can be treated in the ordinary way after the operation and the doctor's earliest patient, who underwent the operation seven years ago, has a beautiful head of natural glossy hair.

SYNOPSIS OF THE FOREGOING CHAPTERS.

While students together at West Point, and in love with the same girl, Sumpter Love proves Hugo Loubeque a thief, and Loubeque is dishonorably discharged. Love wins the girl, and his family than began to find out in later years at Manila, when a butler thief in the employ of Loubeque, now an international spy, steals valuable papers from the Government safe of General Love. Loubeque sails with them on the steamship Empress, and General Love accuses Lieutenant Gibson, his aide and the sweetheart of his daughter, Lucille, of the crime. Loubeque sends a wireless message cleverly insinuating that General Love had sold the papers to a foreign power to erase the stigma from her father's name. Lucille prevails upon her father, a Government aviator, to take her out to the Empress. To foil Lucille, Loubeque destroys the wireless apparatus on the Empress, and is hurt in the resulting explosion. In her search for the papers, Lucille becomes the nurse, and when the ship takes fire, secures them. The vessel is burned to the water's edge and Lucille falls into a lifeboat. She is rescued by friendly savages. She is given an amulet for curing the Chief's daughter, and is proved innocent of the machine-gun murder of Loubeque, who likewise cast on the island, plans to get the papers. He burns Lucille's hut, but she escapes with the precious papers. He sends a decree making her a chief, whose wife is ill and in need of nursing. In the way there she falls into a trap laid out by Loubeque across her path. Her guide, an old crane, takes the papers from Lucille, and gives them to Loubeque, who goes with her to the jungle, the jungle and a giant steals them, but is killed by a lion, and Lucille, who had trailed them three days, recovers them from the body. Lucille meets a party of traveling people, is attacked by monkeys, escapes in a canoe, and is carried into an underground whirlpool. She is rescued by Captain Wetherell and taken aboard his yacht. There she meets Loubeque, who is also picked up by the yacht, which is carrying contraband arms to Chinese rebels. Warships pursue the yacht, and Lucille and Loubeque go to sea in an open boat, because they know too much of his plans.

CHAPTER XXII.

In an Open Boat.

HE great copper ball of sun squatted comfortably upon the horizon's rim, flattening into itself and surveying with tolerant contempt the tiny, bobbing craft in which were Hugo Loubeque and Lucille. The tiny yacht was showing its heels in grand shape to the horizon, and the crew were roaring in real earnest, now, as it was evident that the filibuster had no intention of obeying the signal to haul in.

The pair who had fought one another so cordially stared at the scene until both boats melted into the sun, below the sun, then dropped beyond the horizon. The ocean which seemed so restless from the deck now became the creature of a thousand giant heads, waves as that lifted them high then slumped back into the trough, and in ever-recurring succession the orderly army of the sea marched upon them, toyed derisively a second with them, then passed by, leaving them to the next rank. The air was growing colder, colder, spray slashing them and searching their clothes, with file-like tips.

Hugo Loubeque was watching Lucille narrowly. Their predicament seemed not to worry him, the fact that he was having her placed in the open boat! Instinctively her hands flew to her bosom, the harsh feel of the ruby necklace which she had taken from the underground cavern with her, meeting her clutch. Rubies of untold, of fabulous value she had and the thought of power, of money—should she ever come safely out of this—gave her a sweeping sensation of elation. Surely, the rubies had been left to her for some object. Fate, she had said, and she had been always eventually proved so kindly, would not gibe at her now by giving her that which would mean great power among human beings only to allow her to drown without the opportunity of using it.

"Captain Wetherell took the papers," she answered quietly, studying the spy's face to see what effect the announcement made. Again unwilling admiration for the man's imperturbability, his acceptance of circumstances came to her as she met his level, unflinching scrutiny. Slowly he nodded.

"Indeed," he murmured, then, after a long period spent in profound thought, "well, perhaps it is better so. Perhaps it is better."

For a full hour he did not speak, an hour wherein the stars sprayed themselves over the heavens, as though the great celestial gardener drew a protecting blanket from off his precious flowers and exposed them to the North, from which they drew their sustenance. Lucille fancied she caught a glimpse of the long-winded friendly star that beckoned to her when she hid from the leopards in the tree-top, and the thought reassured her. Hugo was speaking, softly, as though to himself.

"Yes, child, perhaps it is better so. It is so much simpler to fight against a Wetherell than against you."

There was a note of pathos, of longing, in his tones that made her lips tremble in sympathy for the man who had so splendidly misjudged the life that had been given him, had so misused the marvelous brain. Again came that feminine instinct to proselyte and again did a glance at his determined face make her desist. She would fight and fight and die fighting to prevent him accomplishing his aim, but, to save her, she could feel no hatred against this one who would wreck those she held most dear.

"You still have hope?" she murmured, anxious to hear him answer in the affirmative.

"Hope!" he laughed aloud. "Child, it is written in the stars that I shall not fail, cannot fail. You have read my diary—No," he lifted his hand in protest as she would have interrupted, "I do not blame you, admire you the more for doing anything to work out your mission. You know from that diary what I have done to accomplish my ends. I have overthrown nations, have thousands at my feet. And all for what? That when I struck at the man I hated there should be no chance for failure. And now the last chance has been overthrown. I faltered, Lucille, I faltered when I should have put you out of my path forever; when I should have made as good as your interference. And I had reached the pass when I chose between your life and the papers, and your life was to pay. And now you know that choice has been spared me and the face of the woman I loved shall never look into my eyes with that reproach in her own. No, Destiny has intervened, Lucille. I know it, feel it—in my heart."

She watched him, fascinated, as he coolly rose and examined the provisions apportioned them, counting each biscuit, testing the water keg. For just a second she fancied a shadow crossed his face, then he turned and smiled reassuringly at her.

"By standing there is enough for three days," he said quietly. "I think it would be better to wait till morning." He drew his coat off and passed it to her, frowning down her remonstrances at the deprivation. The warmth of it made her realize for the first time that she had been chilled through by the cold night air and she flashed him a look of gratitude, watching him as he bent over a slip of paper and compass, making strange marks now and then upon the paper after a long scrutiny of the stars. Never moving his splendid body, absolutely absorbed in making his crude reckoning, Hugo Loubeque worked, while the eyes of Lucille closed drowsily, opening and shutting as though she would fight away the slumber that would come, and finally closing softly in profound sleep.

She woke to a sensation of pain in her head, as though some giant weight rested there, pressing down as though to crush the forehead. For a moment she did not realize where she was, started about her perplexedly, tried to identify the gentle undulating motion of the boat, the soft sweeping sound of the waters. Then her eyes met the melancholy ones of Hugo Loubeque, fastened upon her as though he had not stirred from the position she had marked him in when she went to sleep. There was something in their depths which alarmed her now, something of foreboding which made her rise hastily. The spy smiled.

The sun was beating down upon them furiously, as though it would consume those hardy intruders. Heat rays danced blindingly in every direction, mirroring the waves tantalizingly. Her head ached, when she would have spoken, she found her tongue swollen, her voice thick, her lips parched.

"Water—please," she stammered, then glared in horror at the international spy's down-cast face. She half rose, then sank back to her elbow again. Loubeque moved carefully to her side, placing his hand upon her arm.

"There is no water," he said gently. "In their hurry they put an empty keg in the boat."

"No water?" she repeated, her words slowly, as does a child interpreting a lesson, meaningfully to him. "No water?"

"There—there," he murmured soothingly. "It is the test of Fate, my dear. Try not to think of it—try."

He did not finish for the pity within him at her brave struggle not to show her fear, her pain. Her lips trembled as she tried bravely to smile, then, with a determined effort, she sat upright. When she would have spoken he shook his head negatively and she knew he wished to conserve even the strength that words would expend. Her head ached maddeningly and the sun seemed to fairly sizzle down upon her. Times, when she allowed their dreadful predicament to burst upon her fully she would shake as one with the ague.

"Last night, when I discovered the keg was empty," Loubeque said reassuringly, "I started working out our means. We are well within the fishing zone of the coast. There is always a chance of being picked up. Don't fear, Lucille."

She smiled bravely, the effort only making her realize that the heat was paralyzing her facial muscles. After that, she sat quite still, enduring in silence the maddening heat, the worse thirst. Times, she thought she would be unable to stand it longer, that she must reach into this endless expanse of ocean and drink—drink; that she must plunge over the boat's side and allow the salt water to be absorbed by her body. From watching the heat waves and enduring the sun her head was spinning like a top, mirages of dazzling beauty were dancing before her only to recede and intensify her agony by their illusion. Sauty toppled, reeled, but always would she fight it back, inspired by the silent figure of her enemy.

Night and the stars, but night and stars from which all kindness had fled. Night, that should have ruled the endless reach of water that passed them about, stars that coldly stared upon the pair and brutally revealed their dire catastrophe. Lucille felt something suddenly snap within her throbbing forehead, a little accident that seemed to instantly stop the agony and suffuse her with a delicious coolness that changed slowly to more intense heat than even the sun had brought. She knew now it would be impossible to endure the strain longer. Her brain seemed whirling in another direction, like a clock whose springs had suddenly gone mad. She could feel a strange desire to laugh aloud as she looked over the boat's side and dabbled her fingers into the cooling water. Loubeque's silent figure was motionless. In one long, gliding motion she half rose then dropped swiftly from the boat, the water encircling her, cooling her, lapping at her ears in soothing refrain that lulled her senses to a glorious sleep, a slumber profound. A sleep in which there were no voices save a shrill male voice that banged at her ear drums; in which there was no force save the tender grip of the ocean and a minute, alien tightening upon her arm; such a sleep as she had never dreamed of having; a sleep from which all incentive for wakefulness had departed and into which only the panic-stricken, agonized face of her enemy, Hugo Loubeque, intruded the thought to open her eyes as the spy pinched her arm, tried to shake her head reprovingly at him. And then she succeeded and in a flash of sanity shuddered at the horrified face of the man who was dragging her back into the boat, a face wherein the features were distorted, the teeth bared from the strain of her weight upon his shoulders. Darkness, blank, impenetrable—lumber, goblin-haunted—sun and desert with mirages of water that receded before her lips—

CHAPTER XXIII.

The Mystery of a Voice.

TIME is a meaningless word when divided into its decimals. It may have been seconds, minutes, months or years, the time that Lucille subdivided into her delirium by two measured nightmares—haunted fever and blank, icy chill. Dimly, through it all, ran one element, one face, one touch of humanity that would not fade, that always seemed so different from the phantasies fostering within her stricken brain, ranking her toy. Hugo Loubeque was constantly ministering unto her slightest want, soothing her with tender words, a veritable Goliath in fighting back the useless insipid words that would have tormented her. Times his voice would grow thicker, weaker, times there were when his legs would crumple up from under him, the hands that smoothed her burning forehead would tremble and the eyes that glowed in the emaciated face appeared more sunken than usual, but always was he by her side—always until the mantle of blackness completely reached out and swathed her, soothing her to untroubled slumber, a slumber disturbed but once and that when Loubeque stood before her, looking down at her with a light of mingled happiness and triumph in his eyes; a look that brought dimly back to her the memory of certain things yet to be accomplished, but which she had not the strength to completely recall; a look so transitory that when she fought her eyes wide-open, he was gone and she was conscious of being in a strange place, a black figure rising from the corner, then slumber once again.

Instinct forced her finally from the lethargic slumber, the instinct common to all higher forms of animals of protecting one's treasure. Her hands groped at her neck where a slight tug had wakened her. Something brushed across her hand when she forced her eyes open, the figure she remembered to have seen in the corner was still squatting there, a figure that might have been inanimate save for the burning eyes fastened upon her. Nervously she fumbled at her neck, the feel of the ruby necklace meeting her fingers and puzzling her for a moment before it started a chaotic chain of recollections that finally marshaled themselves in semblance of order.

Out of the delirium of fever she fought remembrance of all that had happened since Hugo Loubeque dragged her back in the boat, recalled vividly from the subconscious brain that had attained ascendancy during that harrowing period, his tender nursing of her, his denial, his stern self-mastery when the blazing sun, the thirst, the hopeless would otherwise have compelled him to give up the fight. And then the fishing boat, the blessed relief of water, the breaking of the fever and consequent repairing of burned out nerve tissues, the arrival in this house and the spy's leave taking.

A cat and mouse game she played for two days with the silent Chinese woman nursing her, two days wherein she could feel the thrill of quickened blood strengthening her. The woman had discovered the necklace and Lucille knew she was constantly after it. Short periods of time there were when the nurse would sleep lustily and then Lucille walked warily up and down the floor, gradually regaining perfect power of locomotion. She was able to sleep with one eye open, as the saying has it. That necklace meant everything to her in this strange country. It meant the ability to travel, to do anything she pleased in her fight to regain the precious papers that meant honor and liberty to her falsely accused sweetheart.

And with the return of strength came a terrible uneasiness, a great fear. Hugo Loubeque, tender though his care of her had been, had left immediately she was out of danger and she knew his motive was to seek the papers that Captain Wetherell had stolen.

It was dawn of the third day that the nurse slipped from the room, slipped out with a stealthiness that somehow sent a chill through the girl and made her straighten bolt upright in bed, then, as the door closed, spring toward the chair beside the door. For a full minute she listened, her every sense concentrating and lending itself to her hearing. And then the soft patter of alighted feet upon the floor without made her stiffen with resolution, as she hid herself so long as the door would secure her from sight. She waited, her heart thumping so violently she feared it might be overheard by the whispering pair in the hallway. Then the door opened, an inch at a time, silently, cautiously, while the woman slipped inside the room, looked at the blanket upon the couch where Lucille should have been, then beckoned to a slender, yellow-robed young Chinaman, who entered upon more noiselessly than the nurse had done. The girl in hiding shuddered at sight of the vicious knife the young Chinaman passed the woman, shuddered for the fate that would have been hers save for the precaution of impending disaster that had been here so short a time before. The man muttered a guttural deep in his throat as he crouched, his long, yellow fingers closing and unclosing the while he crouched, watching the woman. Evidently the revolver he carried longer and stepped from behind the door, the revolver leveled upon the pair, her voice shivering despite herself.

The man crouched, crouched away from her but the sight of the girl there seemed to enrage the woman completely. Brandishing the knife wildly she leaped forward, then halted, stone still, a ridiculous expression of pained surprise on her face as she lurched from side to side simultaneously with the flicking of the sun, then slipped to the floor in a ridiculous heap. The man crouched still further away and Lucille advanced upon him.

Somehow, she felt no compunction now, felt no fear, only felt the necessity for immediate haste in getting away. She signaled to the fellow that he should get out of his robes instantly. Sounds of activity came from every direction,

She was shaking like a runaway horse with the strain. The young fellow was equally nervous but the revolver at his chest made him hasten. Lucille forced him under the blanket, hissing a warning in his ear which he evidently understood, as it was emphasized by a meaning prod that was more eloquent than any other language—the point of a businesslike gun. Voices were in the hall now. Lucille dragged the body of the

She was shaking like a runaway horse with the strain. The young fellow was equally nervous but the revolver at his chest made him hasten. Lucille forced him under the blanket, hissing a warning in his ear which he evidently understood, as it was emphasized by a meaning prod that was more eloquent than any other language—the point of a businesslike gun. Voices were in the hall now. Lucille dragged the body of the woman under the couch and squatted in the woman's place just as the door opened and a head was poked inside. She mumbled something inarticulate, guttural, peevish-voiced, and the head was withdrawn after the owner cast one glance at the figure under the blankets. He had no sooner closed the door than the girl picked the knife from the floor and ripped the blanket into strips, securely tying her prisoner and gagging him. She barely finished before a low moan from the wounded woman made her hurriedly drag her victim from under the couch. A great wave of compassion swept her at sight of her work, necessary though it had been, compassion which died before the malevolent glare in the eyes fastened upon her own. Examining the wound she discovered it to be but superficial and bound and gagged her then banded her back.

Then, after waiting a second at the door mustering her courage, she stepped into the hallway and down, into the open air. Strangely enough she felt the reaction coming upon her once outdoors, a nervous chill that shook her from head to foot and seemed unwilling to loosen its grip.

It was the sight of the ocean that drove it from her, the ocean she recalled as so much more terrible and remorseless than anything she had ever even dreamed of. It braced her against the nervous chill that threatened to send her back into the place from which she had just escaped. She struggled her shoulders and marched steadily down the foul-smelling, dirty little street until she glimpsed a building taller than any others surrounding it and decorated with a gorgeousness of elaboration which made her forget everything save admiration for the skill and patience expended in such work. Glass windows shined like the bottom part of the house had barred windows and she shuddered at thought of the narrow escape she had had from being placed behind just such bars herself. Before the door stood a closed palanquin, evidently the vehicle for a personage of great consequence from the rich silk robes that overflowed the sides. Lucille laughed at the involuntary surge of longing to hide herself within that mass of robes, but the laugh died away in her throat, was choked fairly off her by the hoarse whisper of her own name. She looked about her, fearful that her illness had not deserted her completely, that she must be delirious.

"Lucille!" This time she knew she had made no mistake. She even identified the direction from which the voice came. But surely nobody save Hugo Loubeque knew her in this place, and Hugo Loubeque—

Something small and compact fell at her feet and she stared at it wonderingly, incredulously, recognizing it for the diary of Hugo Loubeque, the international spy. The sound of a closing door made her hurriedly snatch it from the ground and conceal it beside the ruby necklace. Then she struck back against the side of the house, crying the poorly, sorrowful Chinaman who came slowly and majestically toward her. Evidently the owner of the palanquin, a personage of great consequence from his dwelling was perplexed at the sight of her. Her fingers pressed against the diary and encountered the rubies. The touch of them gave her a swift idea and she cautiously drew the necklace from about her neck, detaching one from the strand and knotting the stout hair wire so none should escape because of the loosening. She looked at the pigeon-blood a moment, recalling her father's contemptuous opinion regarding the corruptibility of the Chinese nobles, then advanced toward the man, just as he reached out to enter his vehicle.

His face was impassive as he stared blankly at her. She gesticulated, did everything to make him understand what she desired but by no sign did he signify that he understood. Finally in desperation she held out the ruby to him, eagerly watching the change of expression that crossed his face as he turned it over and over in his fingers. His eyes were fairly glowing when he lifted them once more and met hers, nodding as she moved toward the palanquin and stepped aside, secreting herself under the silk robes and burrowing to one corner while the owner entered.

Her thoughts ran riot during that trip. Where had the diary of the spy come from? Surely not Loubeque, yet no one but Loubeque was familiar with her name. It had been a prisoner. A prisoner—known it anywhere, for it was the voice of Hugo Loubeque, international spy and her enemy, the man who would ruin everyone connected with her.

And, as she crouched away from the sound of it, she noticed that his tones were light, happy, that she appeared satisfied with himself and with life. Finally she looked out to find herself upon a quay, a great boat docking there, its hold being filled by coiffe stevedores. And, stepping up the gang plank, a broad smile upon his face, moved Hugo Loubeque.

Lucille thrilled. If Hugo Loubeque smiled he was happy. If the spy was happy, it was because he had secured the papers once more. He stepped upon this great boat it was because the papers were in his possession. If they were in his possession, then she would follow.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Wherein a Doomed Man Smiles.

THROUGH the tortures days in the open boat, through the agonizing nights, Hugo Loubeque had tenderly ministered to the girl. Through the days when he watched her hovering about the black borderland of Death in the house to which he had been recommended by his subordinate, the Governor of the province to which the sailing smack that rescued her had borne them, his brain had fed upon one thought, nourishing his body to constantly renewed life. The papers in the possession of Captain Wetherell must be found.

The method of their finding troubled him. He could not, powerful though he was, concentrate sufficiently under the terrific strain upon his body to study out the best method of procedure. The day before he saw Lucille was out of danger, the papers were recovered for him by a call from the Governor of the province. In what he recognized a man he had been instrumental in aiding, and one who feared him greatly.

Instantly it was all clear to him. Here was one he need fear making no confession to. He had found out, aboard the boat, exactly where the shipment of arms was to be made. He knew Wetherell might go hundreds of miles out of his course before the vengeful man-of-war, but he also knew that the goods must be landed at the designated place. With a feeling of intense relief, his brain had fed upon one thought, nourishing his body to constantly renewed life. The papers in the possession of Captain Wetherell must be found.

With a feeling of intense relief, his brain had fed upon one thought, nourishing his body to constantly renewed life. The papers in the possession of Captain Wetherell must be found.

Leaving a sum of money with the nurse Loubeque decided that when Lucille recovered she would be sufficiently well provided for to get word to her people and escape from this, the last of her adventures. With a feeling of intense relief, at knowing she could not know his hatred further, that she had reached the end of her resources, he led a company of picked soldiers aboard the fighting craft provided for their transport and sailed toward the spot where the delivery was to be made.

There in a tiny inlet he arrived barely a day before the yacht put in with its ill-lit cargo. Loubeque trembled at the narrow margin by which he had been able to escape his pursuer. He doubly feared when, from their ambush, he fell upon the boat's crew with his Mongolian soldiers. The skirmish lasted a scant hour, but already the spy had discovered that Wetherell, the man he wanted, was not with the outfit and he began laying plans for taking the yacht.

Captain Wetherell, impatiently waiting for his men to return for a second load, had finally tired and was bringing to ashore himself, resting at the delay he was compelled to undergo from the chase they had led the warship and now fairly wild at the dilatoriness of his first mate. His temper had soured completely after his rebuff by Lucille and the mutiny. He knew exactly the terms he was on with his men, knew that this would probably be his last trip, for all the crew had heard the name of Hugo Loubeque, whose power extended over thousands of men in every quarter of the globe. He had determined to pay himself completely that he might escape the vengeance of the spy's friends, when, from the shore, suddenly shot out the boat his mate had taken in, but instead of the crew he knew so well, the oars were now being manned by Chinese soldiers.

Wakened from the gloomy day dreams in which he had been indulging he tried to put back, but his orders became confused and before he was well aware of what had happened, he found the side of his boat battering against that of the other, with soldiers pling recklessly upon his small crew, laying about them with sword and revolver butt.

He caught a flash of Loubeque laying about him, saw that resistance was utterly useless. Swiftly his hand sought the precious bag in which were the papers he had stolen from Lucille. He drew it open hurriedly, the sealed packet of papers which formed the major bulk of its contents—and the diary falling at his feet. He felt Loubeque's eyes upon him, caught a flash of the spy as he sprung at him, with a derisive laugh hurled the bag with the heavy pocket overboard.

Without a second's hesitation, the spy was in the water after it. Wetherell fairly choked with rage as he saw the man he hated close his hands over the bag. Then he was conscious of the diary still in the bottom of the boat, and picking it up he thrust it in his shirt. Loubeque was lifted by the boat by his anxious men who, having lost their leader, turned upon the captain to wreak vengeance for the plunge. Wetherell scowled heavily as Hugo Loubeque brushed against him, his face smiling grimly as he looked down into the eyes of the yacht master.

Every foolish, Wetherell, trying to rid yourself of me. Now, I think the sight of you making a little jaunt up a hill with a swordman behind you studying the clearest place to take that head from your shoulders would be about as pleasant as anything I care to look at." Wetherell did not answer. Only, even after being bound, the feel of the diary that had dropped from the bag gave him some comfort. And so, despite the fact that Loubeque described exactly a scene such as the captain had personally witnessed many times in his cruising about these waters; despite the fact that he had fallen in his vengeance, in his enterprise—despite all these things Captain Wetherell's lips were curling at the corners in something strangely like a smile.

MR. POTTER'S VACATION

By
HERBERT D. WARD

MR. PELEG POTTER staggered into his private office as if he were a drunken man. Potter, of the great brokerage firm of Brooks & Potter with connections in Boston, Chicago and Washington and branch offices in two of the huge insolent uptown caravansaries was not what might be called a dissipated person. He was simply worn to a frazzle.

Peleg Potter was, rich beyond the wildest dreams of avarice but with a wealth that sucks vitality as a leech sucks blood. As Arthur Brooks, the head of the firm, looked in he caught Potter's gaze fixed upon vacancy while both of the man's hands were going through the motion of tearing strips of paper tape.

"Why Potter?" exclaimed Brooks. With a stinking heart he recognized symptoms familiar to every old Wall Street broker. "Potter," he called again and shook his almost unconscious partner by the shoulder. Potter steadied his eyes and looked up.

"Well, old man, was the mumbled answer. "It's no use, Potter. You've got to get off and take a long rest. You can't stay here." Peleg shook his head stubbornly. "Can't do it. You know it. Cashier's laid up, and I got to see that deal of U. S. Telegraph through."

Brooks went into his own private office leaving his junior partner in this semi-comatose condition. The senior called his confidential clerk gave him a few instructions and sent him off. He then rang up the office of a great steamship line. The Victoria Regina sailed that day at twelve for Naples and at a ridiculous advance, Brooks engaged the purser's cabin for his sick partner.

"If I can only get him away from the daily papers and the ticker, Brooks said to himself, "a month on the water will make a new man of him." At precisely a quarter of twelve an automobile started the Esplanade Wharf, and between Brooks and a valet Peleg Potter was led up the gangway and gently deposited, like a precious bundle of securities, in the purser's deck stateroom. Before he could understand or protest, his partner had left him.

The last fluffy visitor had gone ashore, the last inebriated passenger had barely caught the steamer after the gangway had been cast off, and the voyage had begun.

As I was saying—the words floated in a Mr. Potter's ears from the opposite side of the table. I know the firm of Brooks & Potter very well. Brooks is a heavy-weight white power, more of a room trader. He is used to go to sleep with Potter. He is as bold as a lion. He is as a hyena with no more heart than a colt. Why I look upon him as the present at the birth and christening of the Trans Atlantic Herald. I'll tell you in a moment the world has ever—

The traveler looked up and caught the cold contemptuous look from Peleg Potter's eyes. But Ananas Eli was not to be abashed. He had property but no home. He was one of those eternal travelers who changes his acquaintances as you change a ten dollar bill and who consequently throws off a reminiscence or an experience as easily as you puff out smoke and with as little feeling of responsibility as to how it will evaporate.

Not ten feet away at the head of the table sat Phoenix Sutton, the purser, sleek good natured resourceful whose easy eyes saw everything and whose bland countenance betrayed nothing. When he caught Mr. Potter's warning glance he obeyed it.

Each one seemed absorbed in his own news. That Potter should be entrapped in the first steamer that should keep in continual touch with the land was extraordinary.

Peleg Potter had planned a stupendous campaign on the Street. It was as simple as a grizzly chasing a man without a gun. And moreover it was based upon the very circumstance that was now ruling the broker's first and forced vacation. Believing in the ultimate and universal triumph of the wireless telegraph he had sold all the United States Telegraph that he could lay his hands on short. He had already hammered the stock down 15 points by all the tactics known to a resourceful room-trader. But the Bulls were after his hide, and the stock was rising. With Potter a decision was generally a victory. He made up his mind to take his profits, force the stock up 40 points and let those who bought him napping pay his vacation expenses. So he sent the following Memorandum to his partner, it went in the firm cipher.

"Am fully recovered. Buy U. S. T on my personal account until further notice.

This was a royal order. It meant a royal struggle. With an unconcerned manner, as if he might have ordered a scotch and soda, Mr. Potter handed the telegram to his stateroom steward to be sent immediately. He then sauntered into the smoking room as the clock struck 11. At his entrance Ananas Eli sprang to meet him, and leading him to a corner, gave the orders, and then poured into a swash of talk.

"But, Mr. Eli," said Mr. Potter when the other's breath was exhausted, "I make it a point never to advise a friend to speculate on the Street. A broker is only another name for a robber. I couldn't possibly advise a stranger what to buy. The only advice I could give you is to get out of the Street altogether, and put your money into stocks or bonds, or call loans."

Mr. Potter looked at the other man with a smile. He knew he was a toy doll in the hands of the man who had just said that. He knew he was a toy doll in the hands of the man who had just said that.

Mr. Potter looked at the other man with a smile. He knew he was a toy doll in the hands of the man who had just said that. He knew he was a toy doll in the hands of the man who had just said that.

It was I. S. J. I was wiped out with a young girl. I took God and my own strength for granted. I was straight in his countenance rejuvenated almost past belief and shining like a boy's down two in the white grooves tears were trickling unashamed.

He was looking out of the port hole and urging his stateroom steward. He was looking out of the port hole and urging his stateroom steward.

He was looking out of the port hole and urging his stateroom steward. He was looking out of the port hole and urging his stateroom steward.

Tailored Morning Frocks

1. An extremely popular mode of the spring is the clever combination of contrasting colors. In this model brown duvetyne is well combined with buff colored crepe, figured with a motive in a darker tone. The Gladstone collar and vest are of sheer, white linen. The tiny black binding on the vest and the black binding on the shoulder straps and apron make a chic finish. The buff colored turban in tagal straw is ornamented by a single black quill.

2. Here is jauntiness of outline which harmonizes with the spring mood. The material used is ratine in dull blue. The broad collar and the undersleeves are of white faille and the little hat of black milan straw has a flaring brim of blue maline. Two thin black feathers hold the brim tilted from the face on one side.

3. A ripple cloth morning dress in the new brown. The snug little blouse is almost a coat and over the narrow skirt is hung a tunic so long as to almost become an overskirt. The cuff and sash are of black faille and the tilted black hat of milan straw has against the brim, two soft pompos of this charming new color.

4. Combining a suggestion of both dress and suit, this tailored morning frock fulfills many duties. The material used is cinder grey wipcord, and it is collared, cuffed and girdled in Roman stripe faille. The simplicity of the blouse and the excellent lines of the skirt are charming features. The close-fitting round hat has an upstanding flare oigrey maline.

5. The placing of the black sash and the deep girdle and stitched seams give this morning dress an air of individuality. The material used is the ever popular soft serge in antique blue. The collar and vest are of heavy white crepe and the hat, one of the most popular of the spring models, is blue milan straw wreathed in tight roses and black leaves.
