

Millions of Men Battling On Russo-German Borders; Lull in Western Fighting

Interest Is Centered on the Conflict in Poland Because the Result Will Have Most Important Bearing on the War.

FIERCEST FIGHTING BETWEEN THE RIVERS VISTULA AND WARTA

Partial Success Claimed by Russians, But Berlin Gives No Hint of a Reverse—The Cold Weather Has Checked Fighting in Belgium and France—Success Is Claimed for Anglo-French Forces in Artillery Duels.

London, November 21.—Because the result will have an important bearing on the war, interest is still centered on the battles in Poland. As has been the case heretofore when important events were impending, little news is coming from either Petrograd or Berlin. It is known, however, that the Germans are offering stubborn resistance to the Russian advance in East Prussia.

General von Hindenburg, commander of the German troops, and Grand Duke Nicholas, commander-in-chief of the Russians, two of the greatest strategists the war has produced, are maneuvering for positions between the Vistula and the Warta, and a big battle is in progress on the Cracow-Czanstochowa line between Russian and Austro-German forces.

MILLIONS OF MEN ENGAGED IN EAST.

An unofficial dispatch coming through Rome says the Russians repulsed the attacks before Cracow, but beyond the Russian official statement that the Russians have had partial success northwest of Lodz, there is nothing to indicate how things are going.

In socialist quarters in Copenhagen, which are in touch with the socialists of Berlin, it is said that 7,000,000 men are engaged in the battles on the Russo-German frontiers, 3,000,000 on the Austro-German side and 4,000,000 Russians.

The official Russian report of the capture of the battery at Lidz is interpreted as significant, suggesting a Russian flanking movement. Large reinforcements, it is said, have been thrown in by the Russians. From Berlin, however, there is no suggestion of a reverse. The Germans, it is said there, were making steady progress not only in the center, but in the north, driving back the Russians from the frontier of East Prussia.

DECISIVE BATTLE SEEMS PROBABLE.

A week ago the Germans were retreating from Warsaw. They turned at Bayon, reaching the territory controlled by their own strategic railroad system, and, brushing aside the Russian cavalry, they began to push back the army of Emperor Nicholas until a position between the Vistula and the Warta was reached. This is the point where the experts predicted that the Germans would make their stand on the retreat from Warsaw. Now the recapture of this line probably will mean that the second phase of the Polish campaign will proceed on the more or less expected lines.

BATTLES IN WEST STOPPED BY COLD.

The extreme cold weather and the exhaustion of the troops have virtually brought the battles in Flanders and France to a standstill. A desultory artillery duel continues at some points along the wide front, and there has been an occasional infantry attack, but for the last three days the fighting has been mild compared with the fierceness of that which for more than a month preceded it.

The Germans, it is thought, have sent their best troops to the eastern front, and even in big guns the allies appear to have the advantage. There are no signs, however, of an offensive on a large scale on the part of the allies, who doubtless are as badly in need of rest as their opponents. In fact, it is stated that officers and men who have borne the brunt of the fighting in the trenches are being given a short leave.

This, together with the cancellation of the order for the removal of shipping from Dunkirk, is taken to indicate that the allies consider their positions safe and that they do not contemplate an immediate forward movement.

SUCCESS CLAIMED BY THE FRENCH.

Important advances, though not of a decisive nature, are claimed today for the French war office. Germany's new attack toward the eastern end of the battle line across France, with the supposed purpose of isolating the important French official statement to have been thwarted, at least temporarily.

VINDICATION ASKED BY LEO M. FRANK IN CARD TO PUBLIC

"Injustice Done Me Was Begotten in This Community and It Can Right the Wrong," He Says.

INNOCENCE IS ASSERTED BY PRISONER IN TOWER

His Lawyers Argue Case Before Justice Lamar in Washington and It Is Taken Under Advisement.

"I have hoped, and I still hope, that I may yet be vindicated by this community and that my innocence may be universally acknowledged. The harm and injustice done me was begotten in this community and it can right the wrong. I hope that this vindication may come and the full truth of this awful tragedy be bare to the light before death overtakes me. If I am gathered to my fathers then I trust that my vindication may come, and my name be restored during the lifetime of my dear parents and my loving wife."

This confidence in his ultimate vindication was expressed Saturday night in a statement given out from the Tower by Leo Frank, convicted of the murder of Mary Phagan, whose case has now passed from the control of the state courts, and is now being considered by Justice Lamar, of the United States supreme court.

Saturday Justice Lamar received the legal representatives of Leo Frank at his home in Washington and heard their reasons why the verdict of guilty should be set aside, based on the ground that the constitutional rights of the prisoner were violated when the verdict was rendered in his absence from the court. The justice has taken the case under advisement.

FRANK'S STATEMENT.

"To the Public: The latest decision in my case by the Georgia supreme court has placed the bar, as I understand it, against further airing of the case in the Georgia courts.

"Unquestionably, and as firmly as I can, I want again to reiterate my absolute innocence. I have no knowledge of the crime. I have no knowledge of it. I have fought hard, and I have toiled long, for a chance to establish my innocence. My able and loyal attorneys have four times petitioned the courts for another trial, but to no avail. I have been tried and found guilty, and that by a jury seated in an atmosphere of prejudice and mob violence. My trial was a farce, and the judge, who was impartial and judicial consideration was impossible, and the judge, who had the right to set aside the verdict of the jury that I must be proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, expressed public opinion that he was not convinced of my guilt.

"I am innocent, and it was my purpose to prove it, so that my vindication might result from another trial in this state. Four times, using all resources that were fair, and I have cast myself on the bosom of the courts and pleaded, in the accustomed way, for a new trial, on the ground that the courts, of that description that is vested in them, I was not asking for anything without the pale of reason and justice. I wanted a change, not alone for life, but for name and honor. I was not asking the courts to rule specially for me, but for those who are only which have in the past been granted to all, high and low, and which are the very fountain springs of human right, human law and human justice.

$3,418,988 SENT TO RESERVE BANK

Over $1,000,000 Still Due Atlanta Institution, According to Weekly Report Made by the Officials.

The weekly statement of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, given out last night, which includes the amount of deposits received at the bank through Friday, shows that the 381 member banks are over $1,000,000 behind in the payment of their initial installment of reserves.

The initial installment of reserves was estimated at $4,800,000. All of this should have been paid in to the reserve bank by the member banks during the first week. The statement shows that through Friday $3,072,938.85 had been received, and Governor Joseph A. McCord stated last night that during Saturday an additional amount of reserves, amounting to $745,000, was received.

Handle Commercial Paper. The first commercial paper handled by the new reserve bank was discounted Saturday, amounting to $10,000. Many member banks have offered commercial paper for rediscount, but the reserve bank has been unable to handle it because the banks offering same have failed to comply with the rules and regulations of the federal bank covering commercial paper.

A number of these member banks have been refused this privilege of having commercial paper rediscounted for them because they have not yet paid in full their initial reserve installment.

Weekly Statement. The weekly statement of the condition of the reserve bank of Atlanta is as follows: At the close of business Friday, November 20, 1914:

NO HOME CHARITY BUT PLENTY OF IT FOR FOREIGN LANDS

Los Angeles, Cal., November 21.—Los Angeles plunged into foreign relief work last month to the extent of many thousands of dollars, and in that period contributed only $2 to its own charities, Dr. Milbank Johnson, president of the municipal charities commission, declared today. As a result, he said the United Charities of Los Angeles would close its doors December 1 for lack of funds.

Dr. Johnson recently urged that "charity began at home." "The inevitable has happened," he said today. "The United Charities is about to close for lack of support, while the public rushes to help every call from foreign lands."

4 MEN ARE HELD FOLLOWING FIRE

Chief Cummings and Police Believe Warren Furniture Store Blaze Was of Incendiary Origin.

What Fire Chief Cummings considers the worst case of arson in his forty years of experience of fighting fires in Atlanta was partially frustrated last evening about 6 o'clock. The fire alarm was turned in and the fire fighting force immediately rushed to 244 Peters street, the Warren Furniture company, where they found two men fighting a small blaze in the second story.

With the aid of two or three water lines, the blaze, which was springing from two or three pieces of furniture, was readily extinguished, with small stock damage and slight structural injury.

Firemen Are Endangered. Chief Cummings and about fifteen of his men were then carefully peering about the few blackened burans and stands, looking for the source of the fire, when a heavy, dull explosion occurred in the room.

"A blue flame circled the room," said Chief Cummings. "A dense smoke filled the air and the explosion followed which sent all my men and myself precipitately down the stairway. As we reached the first floor, the ceiling above cracked and the plaster fell. As quickly as possible, however, all my force rushed back to the scene of the trouble on the second floor. Here we found the building and its contents burning fiercely. The wrenched under-pinning of the floor swayed beneath our tread. When we attacked the fire, it was easy to see it was given vigor by scattered oil.

TURKEY EXPLAINS FIRING OF SHOTS AT U. S. LAUNCH

President Wilson Announces That the Porte Has Voluntarily Given Satisfaction to United States.

SHOTS WERE INTENDED AS A WARNING OF MINES

Explanation Informal But Is Regarded as Certain Precursor of Satisfactory Formal Explanation by Turkey.

Washington, November 21.—Turkey has explained voluntarily to the United States government, through Ambassador Morgenthau, that shots fired toward the American cruiser Tennessee's launch last Monday were intended merely as the customary warning that the port of Smyrna was mined and closed to navigation.

Although the explanation is informal, it was admitted tonight at the white house and the state and navy departments that all danger of serious complications had disappeared.

Ambassador Morgenthau reported that two members of the Ottoman cabinet had fully explained the occurrence and high officials here said his message was filed before instructions sent to him from Washington to discuss the subject officially with the grand vizier could have been received. President Wilson and his cabinet regard the informal explanation as a certain precursor of a satisfactory formal explanation and guarantee by the Turkish government for the protection of Americans and their interests.

The message from Mr. Morgenthau, dated November 16, and declared en route, relieved a delicate situation, it arrived late in the day and was discussed at a conference tonight between the president, Secretary Daniels and Acting Secretary Lansing, of the state department.

Statement By White House. After the conference the following statement was issued at the white house: The following summary of a dispatch received late today from Am-

Grammar Schools and Both High Schools Will Be Taxed Beyond Capacity, With No Alternative But Refusing Admittance to Applicants for Education, Unless Buildings Are Provided in the Meantime.

CONDITIONS DESPERATE; BOARD OF EDUCATION TO APPEAL TO COUNCIL

More Than 500 Will Be Ready for the Boys' High School—Building Is Intended for Only 200—The Girls' High Will Face a Similar Crisis—Deplorable Conditions at Grammar Schools Will Be Intensified.

Atlanta's public school system is facing the most dangerous crisis in its history, and the board of education is preparing to put up to the city the settlement of the question of whether the public school system shall go forward or backward.

Fearful congestion of the whole system is certain with the opening of the new term in September next, unless something is done in the meantime to relieve the situation.

The board is alarmed over the frightful inadequacy of the Boys' High school. A situation equally as serious prevails at the Girls' high school, and unless Atlanta's general council of 1915 takes cognizance of conditions hundreds of young men and women who have valiantly struggled through years in the grammar schools will be ruthlessly turned away without a chance of taking the high-school course.

The Boys' high school building was erected in 1895 to accommodate not more than 200 students.

Today the enrollment is 362 students or 97 more boys in the school than attended last year. Of these, about 75 will graduate this year. But, as the result of overcrowding of the building, boys are now being forced into improvised classrooms. They are studying under conditions which are wholly worse than any other city in the United States.

WHAT'S TO BE DONE WITH THESE BOYS? Next year, under the reforms adopted by the school board to improve the school curriculum, all grammar schools will become seven-grade schools, and as the result approximately 225 boys now ready for promotion from the eighth grade into the high school and from the seventh grade into the eighth, will be rapping at the doors of the high school for admission.

Most of them will be turned away, because the city has not been far-sighted enough to realize that the school plant is inadequate to meet the increases in attendance from year to year.

DEVEN IN THE SCHOOL BOARD SO GROWN, IT COULD NOT POSSIBLY JAM 500 BOYS INTO A BUILDING INTENDED TO ACCOMMODATE 200.

"We will be criminally negligent if we allow this condition to menace the school system without giving the people

SEVEN MILLION MEN ENGAGED IN BATTLE

main attack has been in progress for several days, German entrenchments are reported to have been blown up, while near Verdun, it is said that the forces of the allies have "made progress."

A brief reference in the French statement to the relative position of the opposing forces indicates how closely the fighting is being pressed. In certain positions the trenches of the Germans and allies are less than thirty yards apart.

At one point in Belgium a German attack by infantry was made, which the French war office says was "immediately repulsed." It further points the French assert that they have won the advantage in the artillery fight which has been the main feature of the fighting since the cold, wet weather there compelled cessation of activity by cavalry and infantry.

A German official statement says that the allies are showing signs of activity with artillery along almost the entire front.

SERVIA DENIES AUSTRIAN CLAIMS.

Serbia has broken the silence she maintained for several days to deny the Austrian claims to a great victory. The Serbian legation at Athens, while admitting that the Austrians compelled a retreat from Valjevo, states that the Serbians withdrew in good order without any serious fighting, and that they are now occupying advantageous positions, ready to engage the advancing Austrians.

ARTILLERY STOPS GERMAN CHARGES.

Paris, November 21.—(10:41 p. m.)—The following official communication was issued by the war office tonight: "The day has been very quiet. There is nothing of interest to report, except that in the Woivre district, in the Eparges, five German attacks were repulsed in the space of two hours and stopped abruptly by the fire of our artillery."

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HAIR

She Made Up a Mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to Bring Back Color, Gloss, Thickness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will give a revelation of what a fading, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur in one bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," will give you a lot of value. While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, you give it the same natural, natural, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and by another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

RUSSIAN BATTLE WITH THEIR FOES ON THREE FRONTS

Great Battle Between Vistula and Warta, Another in Galicia and a Third in East Prussia.

Petrograd, November 21.—An official communication issued from general headquarters tonight says: "The fighting between the Vistula and Warta and on the Cracow-Czenstochow front."

"In East Prussia yesterday only desultory firing occurred. In Eastern Galicia the Russian troops are still advancing."

The Russian advance into the Mazurian lakes region of eastern Prussia, near Johannsburg and Arys, has revealed the extent of German preparations to resist invasion. "The whole region is described as a gigantic fortress, facing to the east and south in the form of a ninety-mile semi-circle."

Space between the lines, which range from marshy ponds to bodies of water ten miles long, are entrenched with wire fences. At intervals there are concrete bastions, reinforced with stone work and protected by barbed wire. Wherever practicable, canals have been dug in front of the trenches.

FIGHTING CEASES ON YSER FRONT.

Bruges, Belgium, November 21.—(Via London.)—According to the best information reaching here, the fighting between the German and Belgian forces stopped. The severe cold weather continues, and the old inhabitants fear that a novel type of revolver cannon, which throws short-range grenades. HEIGHTS TAKEN BY FRENCH FORCES.

Washington, November 21.—French forces have captured the heights of Ornes, near Verdun, and silenced two German batteries, according to official dispatches today to the French embassy.

The dispatch said: "At Ornes, Carverduin, we have captured important heights and silenced two of the enemy's batteries. At Argonne we have obtained similar successes, by silencing a heavy machine gun house and establishing a new line of trenches."

GERMAN REGIMENT CUT TO PIECES.

RECRUITING VERY SLOW IN NORTH OF ENGLAND

Manchester News Says the Shadow of Constriction Rests Over Country.

Manchester, November 18.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Recruiting throughout the north of England is proceeding slowly and Manchester and Liverpool newspapers are outspoken on the subject. Within the last four days Manchester with a population of 600,000 supplied only 400 recruits.

Reports from Liverpool show enlistment is even slower there. A boy scout band has paraded the streets for days and held rallies at the base of Nelson's monument on the subject. The young men, but large crowds of men of military age have looked on passively.

Football games draw large crowds. Theaters are filled with men of military age.

The Manchester News says: "The shadow of conscription with all its inherent evils and its serious industrial handicap looms over the country. When Manchester can send only 100 a day to reinforce our army it becomes obvious something will have to be done to set a better pace."

In Ireland recruiting is even slower than in the north of England. Bitter political strife there has subsided only partially as a result of the war. Farmers had started every effort to hasten Irish recruiting but without result.

SHORTER IS STILL BAPTIST SCHOOL

Dr. W. L. Pickard, of Mercer University, Discusses Status of Woman's College. (Macon Ga., November 21—(Special) Dr. W. L. Pickard, president of Mercer university, who returned today from a visit to the Georgia Baptist convention, discussed the withdrawal of Shorter college from the Baptist convention and its effect on Bessie Tift.

This does not mean that Shorter is not a Baptist school, said Dr. Pickard. It is by the will of Colonel Alfred Shorter and by its charter a Baptist institution and forever must be. No man is doing more successful work of education among us than Dr. A. W. Van Housa and his workers at Shorter. I predict for Shorter a continued success, and it will ever hold its place secure in the hearts of its great and growing constituency. This leaves Bessie Tift the only woman's college for higher education in the Georgia Baptist system and cuts out the possibility of any friction between the two schools. There had been for several years, some talk of merging one or the other of these institutions a junior school to the other, but it was considered that the graduates from the respective schools could not make up their minds to let the alma mater of their school be withdrawn from the system and Shorter was willing to do this if leaves Bessie Tift no school in Georgia or the south unless she better accept of Bessie Tift. Dr. Jackson, who recently resigned, has done a notable work in the board of trustees of Shorter in the past fourteen years. There is at present a debt of about $30,000 on this property, but the college has a large amount in value received to show for that amount. It is a great plant, splendidly equipped. Dr. John D. Mail, of Athens president of the convention, was unanimously elected by the board of trustees to the presidency of Bessie Tift. He is considering the matter seriously now and will give a favorable decision if he should decide to accept he will uphold and carry out the policy of the school which has been established under the presidency of Dr. Jackson.

It is generally agreed by doctors that the primary trouble with the health of women and young girls is that they are careless of the condition of the bowels. There is nothing so important in this regard as habit and system. The growing girl should be especially looked after. Girls and women of all ages will find that by regulating themselves they can avoid the free use of cosmetics and such things, and that obesity is reduced by bowel elimination and weight increased by proper assimilation.

The right laxative for women, as it is for children and old folks, who should not use harsh pills, salts and other strong cathartics, is that gentle and mild laxative-remedy, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It acts on the principle that by gently regulating the bowels the digestive muscles will soon again be trained to do their work naturally and unaided. Thousands of families use it regularly, and it has been the standard in good American homes for two generations. Mrs. Ella Robinson, of 804 Trombley St., Ft. Worth, Tex., says she will never be without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. She uses it herself and gives it to her little girl, and believes she will not need the doctor so often now. Mrs. T. Blue, of 442 College St., Cape Girardeau, Mo., makes Syrup Pepsin her family remedy and says she would not be without it for twice its price. You will find Syrup Pepsin very effective as a remedy for constipation, dyspepsia, biliousness, belching, gas on the stomach, foal breath, headaches, bloating, etc. Druggists sell it at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle.

FATE OF THREE SHIPS HAS NOT BEEN CLEARED

Sault Ste Marie Mich., November 21—Up to late today little information had been here to clear up the mystery surrounding the fate of the steamer C. F. Curtis and the lumber laden schooners E. M. Harvey and Anna. The three vessels were caught Thursday in a severe storm on Lake Superior. The schooner went down near Grand Marais seems absolutely certain from bodies and wreckage washed ashore. Two of the eight bodies recovered last night were identified today as men from the Curtis. The fact that two of the bodies were the same as those of women caused many to believe the Curtis met the same end as the Peterson for it was believed that the women had been employed on that vessel.

RAIL COMMISSIONERS PROTEST HIGHER RATES

Washington, November 21—Another day's rate case before the interstate and even more extensive than the one now pending before the interstate commission, probably will be the result of the protest today by railway commissioners of thirteen states against proposed higher freight rates. The protest was in the form of a petition to the commission for suspension of the proposed increases, and was signed by railway commissioners of Iowa, Nebraska, Washington, California, Michigan, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Oregon, Missouri, Kansas, Texas and practically all railroads operating west of the Mississippi river have filed petitions with the commission effective December 1st, making advances in commodity rates. The increases are not a flat amount on all rates, but in the case of the eastern lines but vary according to the commodity from 2 per cent to approximately 10 per cent. It is likely that the commission will tentatively suspend the advances, so that an issue may be created upon which the higher rates will be held as to the reasonableness of the proposed increases.

GREAT FOREST FIRES RAGING IN ARKANSAS

Little Rock, Ark., November 21—Forest fires, which are reported as burning in many counties of the state today are said to be increasing in headway. Several calls for assistance have been made to the federal forest ranger force at Hot Springs. Smoke and fire hung over Little Rock bringing an almost night-like darkness. Street lights were visible but few seen. The last general rain in Arkansas occurred more than a month ago. Previous to that rain had not fallen for fifty days. The fires have not entered any of the areas controlled by the United States forest reserve according to H. C. Stabler, superintendent of the Arkansas reserve force. Most of the fires, it is said have been caused by sparks from passing locomotives and are burning along railroad rights of way. At Harrisburg a schoolhouse and church have been destroyed. No lives have been reported lost.

Says He Will Seek Ward Patronage and Oust Representative on Education Board.

PROVISIONS FOR THE ARMY IN THE FIELD.

Importance of keeping body well nourished.

In time of war the greatest effort always made to keep the fighting men in the best of health... The importance of keeping the body well nourished is a subject that has long attracted the attention of the military authorities.

that politics was responsible for the action of the Fifth Ward club in criticizing him... Johnson charges that Dr. Pierce misled him in his recent campaign and he threatens to seek control of the patronage of the fifth ward in order to oust the doctor at the expiration of his present term.

Johnson's statement in reply to Dr. Pierce made on Friday following the meeting of the Fifth Ward Improvement club follows in substance:

I do not want to get into a newspaper controversy with Dr. Pierce but as he appears to have singled me out from among the membership of the Fifth Ward club for criticism I feel it my duty to defend my position.

Dr. Pierce did not support my statement in the Fifth Ward club... I did not know that he did not vote for me and the first news I had of his opposition was before the controversy arose and at a time when I was of the impression that Dr. Pierce was not the right man for the place.

How Controversy Started... The controversy grew out of a discussion at the meeting of the Fifth Ward Improvement club last Thursday night.

Several members charged that Dr. Pierce was not co-operating with the club... Dr. Pierce made a statement on Friday in which he declared that he would not resign.

THANKSGIVING BASKETS SHOWN AT J. M. HIGH CO.

Window Display of Tempting Delicacies and Fruits Attracting Large Crowds.

A big window teeming with the most tempting of delicacies and luscious fruits has been one of the attractive spots on Whitehall street since Saturday morning.

Hundreds of passers-by pausing long enough to take in the beautiful display, hasten away with a very noticeable tendency toward a "watering of the mouth."

The display is that of the J. M. High company, the window being one of the annex, just below the corner of Hunter street.

The High company has inaugurated an innovation, too, in this display, which is bound to hit a popular chord with Atlanta buyers. Chief among the tempting things shown is the dainty, yet beautiful—Thanksgiving baskets, packed by the big New York caterers, Park & Tilford. The baskets themselves are woven of beautiful wire, artistically packed in each basket is an abundance of delicacies and fruits—all interwoven and displayed in such a manner as to make the contents not only tempting to the appetite, but a "thing of beauty" to the eye.

"I had the pleasure of telling the Oglethorpe story on two successive Sundays to the First and Central Presbyterian churches of Chattanooga. Their liberality in the matter of Oglethorpe university has never been exceeded and I doubt if it has ever been equaled in the history of educational institutions in the south. In addition to the big-hearted generosity of Mr. Lupton, there were approximately three dozen other subscriptions in amounts varying from $50 to $250. The Presbyterians of Chattanooga having heard how Augusta had given $6,000 and Nashville, Tenn., $5,000, and Houston, Texas, $8,000, Columbus, Ga., $5,000, honored themselves and their church by almost doubling the best record as yet made. When it is remembered that this was done during "war times" and that the great mass of it is cash now in the bank, the fine spirit of it will be the more emphasized.

"I am one of those who believe that the good hand of God is upon Oglethorpe and that is why the splendor

Chattanooga Presbyterians Give $10,000 to Help Build New Oglethorpe University

Despite the so-called depression throughout the south, a check for $10,000 was received Saturday from J. T. Lupton, of Chattanooga, for the fund raised for the construction of the first building of Oglethorpe university.

The check was received by Dr. Thompson Jacob, executive representative, and will immediately go into the construction of the first building, on which work has already begun.

The building will have reached a height sufficient for the laying of the cornerstone on January 21, 1915.

Dr. Jacobs said Saturday that he was gratified over the progress being made toward the completion of the building and members of the executive committee are elated over the interest being taken by people all over the south in the new institution.

The check received from Mr. Lupton represents the fund raised by Presbyterians of Chattanooga, and almost doubles the best record made.

Discussing the interest shown by the people of Chattanooga in the new university, Dr. Jacobs said:

of her destiny is certain. Have you ever heard the motto, three simple Latin words, 'Mammi Dei Resurrexit.' 'By the Hand of God She Has Risen From the Dead.'

"While this magnificent record of the Presbyterians of Chattanooga, made possible by the superb generosity of one of their number, is especially gratifying, nevertheless some other very remarkable records are being made all over the south for Oglethorpe.

"For example, I recently addressed congregations in Monroe, N. C.; Danville, Ky.; Crowley, La.; Fayetteville, Tenn.; and Grenada, Miss. All of these since the war of the eastern hemisphere began. The sum total of their gifts approaches $25,000."

With actual construction of the first building under way and preparations of the cornerstone exercises completed, Dr. Jacobs is bending every effort to meet the obligation to open the institution with the freshman class in the fall of 1915.

The courses open are cotton grading, cereal growing, live stock industry, fruit and truck growing, dairying, poultry husbandry, use of fertilizers, analysis of soils, farm mechanics and special lines for the winners of scholarships among the boys' corn clubs and girls of the canning clubs. HUNDREDS OF CHILDREN WILL BE TURNED AWAY

ple warning," said President George M. Hope, discussing the condition of the high school "we must have a new high school plant—certainly an annex, at least—to accommodate the additional students who will move up from the seventh and eighth grades to the high school course. Unless council comes to the aid of the board, we are going to be forced to turn away a large number of boys."

GETTING WORSE ALL THE TIME. The enrollment of boys at high school this session is 362 students. Next September there will be 225 moved up from the grammar school. The high school building was originally intended to accommodate only 200 students.

The board, even now, cannot properly take care of the 362 enrolled last year.

Has a Cure For Pellagra

Parrie Nicholas, Laurel, Miss., writes "Seems to me if I had not obtained your remedy when I did I would not have lived much longer. I am glad you discovered this wonderful remedy that will cure Pellagra. When I began taking Baughn's Pellagra Remedy my weight was 50-odd pounds; now it is 90-odd I would like to have this published and sent to sufferers of Pellagra."

This is published at her request. If you suffer from Pellagra or know of anyone who suffers from Pellagra it is your duty to consult the resourceful Baughn, who has fought and conquered the dreaded malady right in the Pellagra Belt of Alabama.

The symptoms—hands red like sunburn, skin peeling off, sore throat, lips, throat and tongue a flaming red with much mucous and choking, indigestion and nausea; either diarrhoea or constipation.

There is hope if you have Pellagra you can be cured by Baughn's Pellagra Remedy. Get a big free book on Pellagra. Address American Compound Co., Box 1003, Jasper, Ala. Remitting money is refunded in any case where the remedy fails to cure.—(Adv.)

session. The boys have been crowded and jammed into the old building like so many sardines. So great was the increase this session that the offices of Superintendent Slaton were surrendered for use as class rooms.

The Boys' high school auditorium, one of the most essential adjuncts of all high schools in the United States, was, of necessity, abandoned. The hall has been divided into six classrooms. The hall, which was left after making these changes, is not large enough to admit air and light into the newly cut rooms. The boys strain their eyes in study under artificial lights, and breathe air which is heavy with impurities caused by congestion in so small a space.

AND STILL THERE IS NOT ENOUGH ROOM.

There is no space to accommodate the newly created class of Spanish recently favorably acted on at the request of the chamber of commerce. By stinting other needs of the schools, enough money was secured to employ a professor and get a class started before the first of the year. But the board has no room to give up to the class.

REMEDY NOT YET IN SIGHT.

There is no likelihood of a remedy being put into effect against the board until probably forced against its will to carry out the suggestion made at the last meeting and create the Spanish class in some room in the chamber of commerce building. Such an arrangement, however, will further add to the already desperate conditions which the high school students are compelled to tolerate.

For months the school board has been protesting against the fact that the present enrollment, it is estimated, is in excess of the capacity of the building. It is not only too small to accommodate the present enrollment, it is inadequate for the modern education. The building has been burning at the seams for years, and it has become too antiquated for the use intended for it in 1896 when it was erected.

One of the shameful inadequacies of the building is its lack of play and recreation space. The hard cobbles of Gilmer street and Courtland is the best the board can offer for the recreation of the children, and although there has been agitation time and again in favor of more space, and although Atlanta has been flayed for its neglect in this respect, the board has not yet taken any steps to remedy the situation.

GIRLS' HIGH SCHOOL WORSE IN MANY RESPECTS.

Girls and young women of Atlanta are striving for higher education under conditions which are, in many respects, worse than those at the Boys' high school. The building is a makeshift. Its lighting, heating and ventilation are bad. Many of the rooms are so dark that the eyes of the girls must be very injurious. Many of the windows are rendered almost useless for either light or air by high brick walls very near them. There are no corridors and the cases in which sufficient air is impossible in spite of the elaborate heating system installed, the proper heating of the building is impossible in very cold weather, and the girls suffer every winter. In some rooms, where there is sufficient light and air, the noise from the street makes teaching a difficult matter.

In a recent report of a survey made by Zenas L. Potter, of the Russell Sage Foundation, Atlanta's high schools were condemned. They were characterized as makeshift schools. It was called to the fact that all available space in the girls' high school building is used, and still the school is overcrowded.

WINTER CONDITIONS WILL BE EVEN WORSE.

Next year conditions at the Girls' high will be worse. Approximately 391 girls now in the seventh grades "A" and "B" are to be provided for in the high school.

There will be a number of girls to graduate from the Girls' high school and the English commercial, but the fact remains that those 391 girls who will be ready for high school next September will have to be taken care of in addition to those already going to this school, and those who know, say it can't be done.

Aside from the menace of overcrowded classrooms, dark and intricate corridors make escape in case of fire both difficult and dangerous, although there is a very liberal provision of fire escapes.

The reading room and auditorium are too small. There is no gymnasium, and no other scientific apparatus. The provisions for rest rooms, lunch rooms, and the like, teachers' offices, kitchens, sewing rooms are either lacking or inadequate.

Like the Boys' high, the Girls' high lacks space for outdoor sports and games which all school girls need, and has very little ground for shrubs and flowers. The grounds are not even used by girls in the afternoons and on holidays.

Commenting on this deficiency, Miss C. S. Parrish, of the state school department, said: "If a strong, vigorous and efficient young womanhood is wanted in Atlanta, the Girls' high school is failing to do all it could in this respect. In spite of the noble efforts of the principals and teachers to overcome difficulties and to accomplish good results."

ONLY ONE REMEDY; ANOTHER BUILDING. There is only one remedy for the horrible condition of the school. The present building should be demolished. It is absolutely unfit for school use, and should be replaced by a modern high school building adapted to educational and social needs of a growing city. In its present quarters, the Girls' high school cannot be made a potent factor in civic, religious and industrial life.

Not only is the building inadequate, but the school suffers because of the lack of equipment. There is not a sufficient supply of globes, charts and maps. Pictures and material for teaching history are entirely lacking.

Atlanta has not erected a single new school building in the past two years. The last schools were built with hand-me-down money.

olutely necessary to have more new schools. Unless something is done to relieve the pressure that will ensue with the opening of the fall term in September, the entire school system will be paralyzed.

The time has arrived when it is necessary for the public schools of Atlanta to have the co-operation of parents, business organizations, school officials and teachers.

The general condition of Atlanta's grammar schools does not even approach being fair.

Lee and Highland Park schools are in fairly good condition. Walker street school, a new building, was badly constructed, and has been thus characterized by school experts who have examined it. Many of the schools are unfit for use, a notable example being the Davis street school.

With the first cold blast of winter, children in many of the old schools suffered frightfully from the cold. At the Edgewood school the teachers were forced to suspend seven classes on account of insufficient heat.

Edgewood school is an old building. Years ago its inadequacy was realized, and the school board, left without any other house, was forced to add additional rooms just as it was forced to do at the Boys' high school. As the result of the additions made to the old building, the old heating system proved inadequate when subjected to the first test of winter, and the children in seven classes were turned away.

At the Grant street school one class was forced to abandon its studies because the children could not be made comfortable.

One grade in the Williams street school had to be dismissed for the same reason. The children could not stand the intense cold of the classroom, and many of them cried to be relieved of their studies.

At the Broadway hotel an over-heated stove in the Herndon barber shop heated the room to 84 degrees, when it should have been around 70 to keep the children comfortable.

These things have happened before. And these instances are but a repetition of what has happened every year.

Every extremely cold day brings with it terrors for the children and added anxiety to the parents.

Reports from the teachers at the Davis street school last Friday, were to the effect that the children and teachers suffered terribly from the cold. Similar reports came from the old makeshift school building used as an annex to the English avenue school.

At both Davis and English avenue annex, the pupils depend on coal heaters to supply warmth on cold days. When the heaters fail the children suffer. During last year's session 90 children attending the Davis street school were ill at one time because of the cold, leaky building into which they were crowded because the city could not provide them with more modern facilities.

With the rain beating against the cracked and broken windowpanes, the Davis street school actually was forced to do her raincoat and umbrella in her office. The halls of the building can hardly be made warmer than the outside air, and the children suffer.

Only recently the annex to the Exposition Mills school was a positive disgrace to the English avenue school. Because of an indifference of the city's neglect and apathy of the needs of the children of that section, the annex is a cottage rented by the school board from the owners of the cotton mill.

Because of its peculiar arrangement of the rooms, the teacher was forced to move her desk into the center of the floor, placing part of her class to the front of her desk. Whenever she gave instructions she was forced to give instructions to one part of her class, and then turn and repeat them to those children at her rear.

SCHOOL BOARD DID NOT HAVE THE MONEY. The school board did not have the money to alter the room, so the owners of the building volunteered to make the improvements at their own expense, for which the school board agreed to pay for by adding $5 to the rental each month until the cost of the work has been paid.

The need for many new school buildings, with rooms large enough to accommodate forty children, and the appliances necessary for good teaching are absolutely necessary.

Lee and Walker street schools have fairly adequate provisions of this sort. At the Highland Park school, the boys and girls of a grade are sharing one cloak room, and at one of the older buildings the boys and girls of a larger grade shared a cloak room with one door and no means of lighting or ventilation.

During the past seven years Atlanta has outgrown her school facilities. In 1907 the enrollment of the public school was 14,485. In September last the enrollment was 25,000 pupils.

Next September Superintendent Slaton estimates that the attendance will be 28,000, or an increase of 1,600. Unless something is done, and done immediately, one thing is certain. Hundreds of children will be refused admittance to the public schools, and thousands of others will be forced to attend under the most appalling and disgraceful conditions.

It is a crisis in the city's affairs. Will the children of Atlanta, sons and daughters of a grade are sharing one cloak room, and at one of the older buildings the boys and girls of a larger grade shared a cloak room with one door and no means of lighting or ventilation.

The city government has one other alternative—More school buildings!

ROUTED BOLD THIEVES, JENKINS TELLS POLICE

L. A. Jenkins, 398 Central avenue, collector and driver of one of the City Laundry wagons, was attacked last night about 9 o'clock on his street between Flood and Richmond streets by two negro men, who leaped upon the seat of his wagon and forced Jenkins to alight.

Jenkins was knocked both in the head and the back, and ran over one, whereupon they fled. Jenkins had been collecting during the day, and had a considerable sum of money with him.

TWO HOTELS ON FIRE

Damage at Broadway and Dakota Is Small. Two hotel fires occurred Saturday afternoon at practically the same time and resulting in about the same damage.

At the Broadway hotel an over-heated stove in the Herndon barber shop heated the room to 84 degrees, when it should have been around 70 to keep the children comfortable.

WILL ANDERSON—BOUND OVER FOR MANSLAUGHTER

Waycross, Ga., November 21.—(Special.)—Will Anderson, who on Sunday, November 8, shot and instantly killed Robert Floyd, at Shackleton, this county, was given a preliminary hearing before Judge J. M. Bellah and bound over to the grand jury on a charge of manslaughter. The case will come before the grand jury at the March term of superior court. Anderson produced several witnesses and several were put on the stand by the state. Anderson claimed that Floyd was advancing upon him with an open knife when he shot and that he killed him in self-defense.

THOUSANDS FOR SYRUP.

The South Georgia Cane Syrup Market and Crop Good.

Thomasville, Ga., November 21.—(Special.)—Ten thousand dollars was paid out for syrup in the market at Cairo last week and the amount today is expected to be much larger. There were 1,000 barrels of Georgia cane syrup of the finest quality made brought in by the farmers of Grady county and the approximate price at which it was sold was $10 per barrel. The contract price is 30 cents a gallon and the prevailing price in open market is 28.

The Wright company, of Cairo, has a contract with Fennick & Ford, of New Orleans, for a large quantity of syrup, and it is being shipped in tank cars. The tanks are loaded from the warehouse by means of a pipe extending from the second story of the building to the car to be loaded. Each tank holds 2,000 gallons, which is about 250 barrels. Five tanks have already been loaded. The crop in Grady is a good one, and although the acreage has been larger at times, the fine quality of the cane this year will make up for the lack as to quantity, and the prices are better than in several years.

HEAD OF MORMONS SPEAKS IN ATLANTA ON FRIDAY EVENING

Joseph F. Smith, president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, will be in Atlanta next Friday. He will be the principal speaker at a public meeting in the Taft hall of the Auditorium-Armory that evening. The public is cordially invited to hear his address. Elder George Albert Smith and Bishop C. W. Nibley, two of the general authorities of the church, accompany the church leader.

This is the first time the president of the Mormon church has visited Georgia or any of the states south of Missouri. President Smith is 76 years old. Ever since his death 16 years ago, at which age he commenced the first of three foreign missions, he has been in continuous, active church work.

It is confidently expected by the local workers that President Smith will authorize the building of several churches in the mission, one of which will be in Atlanta.

SALTS IF BACKACHE AND KIDNEYS HURT

Drink Lots of Water and Stop Eating Meat for a While if Your Bladder Troubles You.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat. Says a well-known authority: "Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When you drink and get sluggish and clogged up, you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels removing all the body's poisonous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often clogged. It is imperative that you be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night."

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take this famous water cure and you are water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then get fine. This famous water cure is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for thousands of years to cleanse and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it is no longer irritating. It is inexpensive. Buy at all meat eaters. It is inexpensive. Buy at all meat eaters. It is inexpensive. Buy at all meat eaters.

The Peruna Co., Columbus, Ohio. Gentlemen:-- My stomach troubles me greatly. The doctors say that it is gastritis. My limbs ache and pain especially about the joints, just like rheumatism. The winters here are very hard and cold. Peruna helps me to reach a chance, so that I can eat and digest better. I have been disappointed so many times with other remedies, and relieved so many times with Peruna, that I have come to believe that there is no other remedy for me. I thank you for your kind letters of advice. They have come to me in times of great discouragement and always been a consolation. I shall never forget your kindness and the help received from Peruna. Very sincerely, Mrs. Lane Moore

PICTURE PLAY, "SEALED ORDERS," AT THE ELITE

Mastery of Detail and Boldness of Invention Shown in All Six Reels.

"Sealed Orders" one of the most intense motion pictures of melodramatic order will be offered as a Monday attraction at the Elite.

It is not an overstatement of the facts to say that "Sealed Orders" is as nearly flawless, considered from any angle you choose, as any screen production can be. It is a gem, besides which most other big features compare as tawdry as would a tinseled jewelry beside a diamond of purest water.

The story of "Sealed Orders" is pure melodrama. But it is melodrama of the finest type. Not once in all its six reels is there a false note struck, a situation overdrawn, there is no even an exaggerated gesture which might mar the whole. Throughout it is a wholesome human story in which every element that appeals is blended and balanced to a nicety.

Photographically the production is a marvel. Some of the effects obtained are absolutely unique and their beauty and distinctiveness would make "Sealed Orders" sufficiently unusual to win popular approval even if the story was mediocre and unworthy, which it is far from being.

The plot around which the piece is framed is a simple one. Through a cleverly conceived combination of circumstances, Lieutenant Van Houten is believed to be a traitor to his country, which has just been sent to war. His father, the chief admiral, setting his duty to his country ahead of his affection as a parent, sternly orders the court-martial which condemns his son to death. How the lieutenant finally is restored to him through the efforts of his devoted and misguided wife, confuses the climax, but this by no means should be taken as an indication that the tale is of the ordinary melodramatic type. Instead, it teems with tense situations, scenes and incidents.

Holds New Film Exchange

ARTHUR S. HYMAN.

The United Film company, with offices at 316 Forsyth building, has just been organized, with Arthur S. Hyman, who well-known motion picture man, as general manager. This company, through Mr. Hyman, has secured the rights in southeastern states for The Chicago Tribune's European war pictures, "On Belgian Battlefields," taken on the battlefields by Edwin F. Weigle, the staff photographer of the paper.

This is the most startling motion picture proposition ever brought out, and are the first pictures of actual fighting yet secured.

Mr. Hyman has had world-wide theatrical and motion picture experience and instantly recognized the merit in these pictures, and with his usual ability for handling big propositions, immediately got in touch with the producers, organized the United Film company in this city and secured exclusive control for the southeastern states. In speaking of the pictures, Mr. Hyman said: "It is the most amazing motion picture proposition that has ever come within my experience."

"I am actually excited over the thing," he cries, "as nothing else has ever done. Think of having the war brought here to our very doors! And it is no mere imitation of what is going on over there across the water, nor a betrayal of magnificent skirmishes, but the whole horrible, hideous reality. There is a shudder in every foot of those 4,000 feet of film, and where there is not a shudder there is a thrill. Never were the human emotions so played upon. Imagine that those who participate in them are too stunned to realize what they are going through, but to us is given the privilege of realization without the shock of personal danger."

"Do you wonder that I consider this the greatest triumph of the motion picture camera's history?"

"First, there is a panorama of Antwerp viewed from the cathedral tower before the capture of the city. We are shown peace and prosperity turned suddenly into terror and ruin, as the enemy comes marching in. Across the pontoon bridge streamed the refugees—old men and women, wives and mothers trying to be brave, little children lost from their parents, but clinging to a pet cat or bird, the crippled and the helpless, all the population shut into to stand in line back there where the smoke veil hides, for a moment the bloody tragedy of men being moved down by the thousands. We are shown the battles of Alton and Malines, the shelling of Termonde, the firing of Antwerp, the flooding of Liège and always the fleeing non-combatants with the Germans tearing down the roofs of their houses behind them."

"There is the devastating explosion of German shrapnel in the Belgian infantry, the falling of bricks and stones from ruined buildings, the gathering of men to dig trenches in the best fields, where later the carnage begins, and there are retreats and fresh stands, and desperate hand-to-hand encounters, and everywhere death, death, death."

"It is an exhibition of noble heroism as well as a hell of horrors, for nowhere is there shown a cowardice. Bravery rules the hour, from the white-faced women who smile in the agony of separation from loved ones to the patient dog who drags the heavy machine guns, apparently oblivious to shot and shell."

"The reality of it all is what is so staggering. In Chicago a woman in the audience recognized in the stream of people crowding across that narrow pontoon bridge her sister, whom she knew and loved in Belgium, and cried out to her as though she could make her hear through all that interminable distance. Not was she the only one who experienced this sensation of actual participation in the scenes rendered."

"To think of the Chicago Tribune, as it is actually occurring while we sit here safely at home!"

"Fought for so safely after all," he laughingly added, "that is, if we are to have repeated here the all-day scene that kept a huge force of police-men busy on the first day of our production in Chicago. The people were all these terrible happenings they had been reading about. There was almost a record-breaking one."

"The Belgian king proved himself as good a business man as he is a lighter when he gave the Chicago Tribune the exclusive motion picture rights on Belgian soil in return for 50 per cent of the profits earned by the pictures; for there is a perfect furore all over the country, and this means tremendous receipts everywhere."

UNIVERSAL SERIAL, "THE MASTER KEY," FULL OF ACTION

John Fleming Wilson's Thrilling Story Photo-Play Will Come Soon to Savoy and Alpha.

With the first release, in two reels, of the Universal's new serial, "The Master Key," the thousands of Universal patrons will not only be treated to a story of vivid action and human-interest appeal, but will also find many striking examples of spectacularism, in the way of settings and photographic effects, never before duplicated upon the screen. One case in point is where a crowd of cowboys escapes for the night with Tom Gallon, accused of murder, a prisoner among them. All the scenes here, and those following which show Gallon escaping, were photographed at night in the open factory.

The action which will impress the spectator as being unusually complete in detail and strongly characteristic of the west, are those laid around the "Master Key" mine and the little village of the night which Tom Gallon, showing a shaft and dump car, the director, Bob Leonard, encouraged by the expressed willingness of the Universal to spend any amount of money to have the serial drama far superior to anything done before, has had constructed a lively mining camp. There are a half dozen or more shafts sunk into the side of the mountain at various points, and tracks leading from their mouths and running on to great dumping mounds. There are the powder and tool houses, piles of logs used for burning, the scores of ore cars, well constructed shacks for the miners and their families; the whole atmosphere leaves the impression with the spectator that he has witnessed the works of an up-to-date mining camp.

The ship scenes, with the mutiny, the fighting among sailors, the fire and wreck following also demand mention, for the scenes are so well staged, in their perfection, only by other pictures done with Universal thoroughness. The ship scenes, with the mutiny, the fighting among sailors, the fire and wreck following also demand mention, for the scenes are so well staged, in their perfection, only by other pictures done with Universal thoroughness.

As has been widely advertised, John Fleming Wilson is the author of the latest and greatest, Universal serial photodrama. His novel is to be published serially in all of the newspapers in the United States and will be read by millions. These readers are going to see the motion picture version of his work, adapted to scenario form by Calder Johnson and Robert Leonard, Miles Ella Hall, as with Gallon, is playing the difficult role of the heroine, while Mr. Leonard will be seen as the hero.

Already the third chapter of "The Master Key" is under production on the Pacific coast. The better to stage a number of scenes in this installment, Mr. Wilson has directed the location of the Rex company will leave Los Angeles for the northern city within a few days. With the company will go, in addition to the regular cast, Miss Hall, William Hickey and Harry Carter, and the Universal money and safe Mr. Wilson's idea in accompanying them is to place at Mr. Leonard's disposal his thorough knowledge of the water front and other sections of the city, which will be invaluable when it comes to running down proper locations for the scenes to be photographed.

Mr. Wilson is eminently well fitted to fill this part in the work. During two years he covered the waterfront and kindred sections of San Francisco for the daily papers. Later, he worked out of this port as a sailor before the mast in search of local color for subsequent stories.

The first installment of this mighty serial will be presented in Atlanta, December 7, at the "Savoy" and the "Alpha," on every Monday for fifteen weeks.

Zudora, Thanouser Serial Master-Stroke, Here at the Strand

"Zudora," heralded as the serial masterpiece of the hour, opens at the Strand theater today with its first episode, "The Mystery of the Spotted Column." Movie fans who have read "A Million Dollar Mystery," which closed with its twenty-second episode, will keep their interest in Thanouser's new creation.

There will be twenty baffling episodes to "Zudora," running each Monday at the Strand, which theater will show it exclusively. It is a stupendous production of love, mysticism and science, started with a cast of 1,000. The role of Zudora is played by Marguerite Snow, the "Million Dollar Mystery" star, supported by other Thanouser notable including James Cruze and Harry Benham.

"Zudora" is the drama of the mystic girl detective. It is a weird, phantasmagoria of trick photography and daring escapades, woven around a sustaining theme created by those peers of authorship, Daniel Carson Goodman and Harold McGrath. They have succeeded in idealizing the girl sleuth. They depict many of the tense situations into which a young American girl may fall, and illustrate the strength and daring of girlhood when opposed by powerful forces.

Each installment, although presenting a single chapter from the main mystery, is a complete story in itself. The Thanouser studios have outdone themselves in staging "Zudora." "The Million Dollar Mystery" fades in comparison. The photography is nothing short of wonderful, and the expert stagecraft is an advanced step in moving picture science.

Atlanta movie experts predict "Zudora" will be the biggest drawing card of seasons.

ANSWERS TO MOVIE FANS

Owing to the number of queries received and the somewhat limited space allowed for answers, it is not always possible to print information as rapidly as the writers desire it, as the letters must be answered in turn. All, however, receive careful attention.

Address all queries to Moving Picture Editor. Questions considered as ridiculous will not be answered. Questions regarding relationship will be answered to the best of our knowledge, but we are not responsible if mistakes are made.

M. C. P. Courtney Foote's leading lady at the present time is Myrtle Stedman. Bryant Washburn is married.

T. M. Marguerite Clayton is with the Tenney company, 511 First National bank building, Chicago. The Thanouser Syndicate corporation, 71 West Twenty-third street, New York, Frank Borzage and Charles Ray took the two parts in "The Friend."

Brown Curtis, he is 35 or 32 years old. Sorry, but can not tell you the other things you want to know about him. Better write him and see.

F. C. E. King Sagrot has been with the "New" company the longer.

R. H. S. Cleo Madison has just returned from a well-earned vacation. You may shortly be seen at the Savoy theater in a special feature "Damon and Pythias," and as leading lady in the Gold Seal company, will appear in all the regular releases of the Universal (Gold Seal).

Well W. Yes, I think he is very fine looking. I do not know why he does not appear in more pictures unless it is because he can not get parts to suit him.

J. J. Wallace Reid is married. Don't know his age. William Shea is not married, neither is Matt Moore.

Mary H. No. Flora Finch is not John Bunyan's wife. Pearl White is still in the movies. Maurice Costello is married to Mae Tresham.

John, Grace, Cigard and Francis Ford are with the Universal company.

Curious. I am unable to give you the home addresses of the actresses. You may write them care of the companies they are with.

"KITTY COBB" MONDAY AT THE VAUDETTE

The celebrated newspaper illustrator, Mr. Flagg, is universally known wherever magazines and newspapers circulate and his charming creations, "Kitty Cobb," were originally produced in a series of drawings for the New York Sunday World, but the artist imbued her with such a winsome personality and created such startling adventures, in which she figured, that they were syndicated to a large number of the big Sunday newspapers all over the country. Her admirers will no doubt be delighted to see her in motion pictures. A four-part production, recently made, faithfully depicted "The Adventures of Kitty Cobb" and will be shown exclusively at the Vaudeville Monday.

Miss Marion Swayne, who essays the role of Kitty, is typical of the heroine. Mr. Flagg selected her for the part himself and personally supervised the production, and the others in the cast were selected not only for acting ability, but representatives of the characters as drawn in the sketches. The story is not only interesting, but it contains many intense and thrilling scenes in the development of the plot, which starts off in a somewhat conventional way, but then it develops quickly into rapid action.

BISHOP DENNY ILL; CANDLER PRESIDES

Big Interest Now Centers in the Announcement of New Appointments at the Methodist Conference.

Marietta, Ga., November 21—(Special.)—Bishop Collins Denny, of Richmond, Va., who has been presiding over the North Georgia conference, was taken ill last night, and is now confined to his room unable to attend the meetings of the conference today. Dr. James B. Dickey, president of Emory college, was called upon to preside in the absence of Bishop Denny until Bishop Warren A. Candler of Atlanta, could be brought to the seat of the conference. Bishop Candler arrived at 11 o'clock and has since been in charge of the conference deliberations. Bishop Denny is not seriously ill, but is suffering from an affection of the throat of several years' duration. He will probably be able to ordain the classes of deacons and elders whose ordination will take place Sunday morning and Sunday night. Bishop Candler has consented to preach for Bishop Denny at the morning service on Sunday.

Eating When Others Are Through is Not Gluttony, But Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Will Enable You to Have Such an Appetite.

In these days of high pressure most men and women eat very little and a good old fashioned eater sits at table after all have finished their meals. The best way to get such an appetite is the Stuart way—The natural way.

Landlady: "Ever since Jones took Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets I've lost money on him."

If your stomach cannot digest your food, what will the "volter" do? The answer is in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets because as all stomach troubles arise from indigestion, it is because one ingredient of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is able to thoroughly and completely digest 200 grains of food, does it stand to reason that these tablets are going to digest all the food and whatever food you put into your stomach? Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are carefully made to supply the element lacking in a system afflicted with dyspepsia, indigestion, gastritis, stomach trouble, etc., and to all healthy systems to digest difficult food at unseasonably hours. Just carry one of these little tablets in your purse or pocket. After every meal no matter when eating, you have always at hand the assistance that nature will relish and thrive upon.

In this manner one may eat all manner of food attend late dinners, etc. and feel no serious results afterwards. Thousands of travelers always have a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in their grips and thus enabled to eat unaccustomed meals at any and all times. Surely there is nothing so well adapted to sufferers from food follies as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and the greatest proof of this fact lies in the assurance that one can purchase a box at any drug store anywhere in this country. A small sample package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will be mailed free to anyone who will address F. A. Stuart Co. 170 Stuart Bldg., Marshall Mich.

fore the conference body today was that of the committee on Wesley memorial enterprises. C. W. Bell read the report which showed that during the past year over 1,186 patients had been treated in the Wesley Memorial hospital. The patients treated came from the following states: Alabama, California, Colorado, Florida, Kentucky, North Carolina, New York, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia. Nine nationalities are represented in the number.

Work of Hospital.

From the opening of the hospital, August 16, 1905, until November 1, 1914, there have been treated at the hospital 7,477 patients, of whom number 4,052 were unable to pay for the treatment received. The cost of the charity work done by the hospital in its nine years of life is $80,161. The hospital has received from the Christiana collections taken for charity work only $22,482. The average annual expenditure for charity patients over all above receipts has been $5,297.

Improvements.

Improvements that have been made in the hospital plant this year. The physical condition of the property has been greatly improved and a house adjoining the hospital has been rented for nursing care of patients who have greater room.

Admission to Young Preachers.

The bishop delivered an address to the class in which he admonished them to be preachers of the word of God and not to let their time and energies with the many so-called effective theories that have advanced in the world. He said that the strategic points of service to the church Christ did not do His greatest labor in the class. He said that the greatest opportunities given you, for your later success depends on the use you make of your studies.

Five Million Bibles.

The American Bible society of the conference also read a strong report today. The report indicated that during the past year more than 5,000,000 copies of Bibles had been distributed over 1,000,000 of which had gone to China and 20,000 to Belgium.

Debate on Paper Rate.

Vigorous debate was engaged in when the committee on the Wesleyan Christian Advocate made their report. Owing to financial depression and the falling off of business it was suggested that all subscribers hereafter pay the uniform price of $2 per year for the paper. The suggestion was bitterly opposed. The final agreement was reached whereby the publishers and writers of the North Georgia conference should receive the paper at the price of $1.50 per year.

Modern Merchandising Methods

Advertising is the supreme idea in merchandising. The modern manufacturer finds it insufficient to merely MAKE HIS GOOP'S WELL. He must also MERCHANDISE THEM WELL. The intensity of competition prohibits an immediate demand for goods, no matter how meritorious. The merchant must be MADE TO KNOW they are meritorious before he will include them in his stock.

And that is not all the merchandising that devolves upon the modern producer. He must not only get his goods ON THE MERCHANT'S SHELVES, but he must move those goods FROM THE MERCHANT'S SHELVES. In short he must create a demand in the consumer.

When, through the development of a demand on the merchant by the consumer, a corresponding demand is created on the manufacturer by the merchant, the logical merchandising cycle is complete.

The SUPREME FUNCTION OF THIS AGENCY IS MERCHANDISING. We were the first successful institution in the south to stress the modern idea of merchandising, and we have kept pace with every new phase of it.

We should like to be the MERCHANDISING DEPARTMENT in YOUR BUSINESS.

WOODWARD CORRECTS CANDLER'S STATEMENT

Declares Alderman Did Not Tell the Whole Story When Opposing Mayor's Veto.

Mayor James G. Woodward, in a statement issued Saturday in connection with his veto of the resolution increasing the salary of City Electrician R. C. Turner from $1,800 to $2,400 per annum, comes back strong at Alderman John S. Candler.

Alderman Candler took the floor in council last Monday to advocate the adoption of the resolution providing for the increase. He also led the fight in the aldermanic board. The aldermen sustained Mayor Woodward's veto by failing to concur in council's favorable action.

The mayor's statement follows: "I do not care to be drawn into any controversy with Judge Candler or anyone else over the matter of the salary of R. C. Turner, but Judge Candler, in his correction at the session of the aldermanic board, should have told the whole story and not related a little part to suit his own convenience."

"It is true with him, as well as myself, that at a meeting of the salary committee in my office a resolution was passed increasing the salary of that position according to its standing and duties. What caused this decision was an effort of mine to try to consolidate all the electrical rates of the city under one heading, and still believe that the city could save considerable money by consolidating all the electrical affairs of the city under one heading."

"Judge Candler took the position at that time that the position of that character was worth $2,400 per year, but he did not believe that Turner was the man for the job and I agreed with him there, and the understanding in my office was that Judge Candler favored the $2,400, provided the whole electrical business of the city was consolidated, or that he was opposed to paying Turner $2,400 per year. This is the whole story."

LETTON AND SAPHIRE GO ON TRIAL AGAIN IN MUNICIPAL COURT

J. F. Letton, manager of the Wine-coff hotel, who engaged in a fight with his house officer, Harry Saphire, last Saturday night, will answer a charge of assault and battery in Judge Ridley's division of the municipal court Monday morning. Both Letton and Saphire appeared Friday in the recorder's court to answer a charge of disorderly conduct, caused by this same encounter. Manager Letton was fined $5.75, while the case against the house officer was dismissed.

Over 100 Delegates Will Attend Belgian Immigration Meet

Over 100 delegates are expected to attend the conference on Belgian immigration to Georgia farm lands, to be held in Atlanta, Tuesday morning, at 10 o'clock, at the Piedmont hotel.

The delegates will be composed of members of special committees appointed by many counties and cities throughout the state, to push the Belgian immigration question; representatives of the leading railroads, who are said to be backing the movement; delegates from chambers of commerce and other trade bodies; representatives from civic organizations; large landowners; real estate men and other interested parties from many points.

The purpose of the meeting is to discuss the wisdom of forming a permanent organization to bring good Belgian refugee farmers and their families, now in England, France and other lands, to Georgia, to settle the unoccupied farm lands of this section.

The local committee headed by R. F. Shelden, has been actively engaged for several weeks in preparing for the convention.

$20,000 FIRE AT ALBANY Woolfolk Building Damaged and Tenants Flooded Out.

Albany, Ga., November 21.—(Special.) A large crowd watched the entire fire department fight a stubborn blaze from 8 till 10 o'clock this morning at the three-story Woolfolk building, at the corner of Pine and Washington streets, and its fire story gutted by flames. The blaze started in a lodge room and after smouldering all night, burst through the roof of the Georgia National bank, the Postal Telegraph company, the Albany Exchange and a number of other tenants were flooded out and the upper story was left a mass of wreckage. The loss will approximate $20,000, but seems to be pretty well covered by insurance.

BOARD OF HEALTH TO GUARD AGAINST TYPHOID

The state board of health has inaugurated a system of bulletins, designed to educate the superintendents of public and private water supplies throughout the state on matters pertaining to the better supervision of their filtering plants. These bulletins will be sent out from time to time, each one dealing with various subjects.

Bulletins Nos. 1 and 2 were sent out Saturday to filtering plants all over the state.

The work and preparation of the bulletins is being carried on under the supervision of Ray C. Overton, who has charge of the department of expert supervision and analytical control of water supplies. Mr. Overton is a expert consulting chemist and bacteriologist.

Bulletin No. 1 deals with the subject of Typhoid Fever—Its Origin, Prevalence and Transmission by Polluted Water. Bulletin No. 2 is on Typhoid Death Rates in Relation to Impure Water.

If sufficient money is appropriated for this excellent work during the coming year it will be extended in its scope.

FLIM-FLAM ARTIST WANTED BY POLICE

The police are looking for a young man dressed in a blue suit with the serial 55 cents worth of medicine and change for $5 in exchange for a one-dollar bill, which he had "raised" to the five-dollar denomination.

Friday evening the Cox Prescription Shop on Peachtree street, received a call from 22 Ellis street, to send out a package of the value of 55 cents and the change for $5. As the messenger boy was approaching the designated address, a young man stepped to the curb and asked for the package and the change for the five-dollar bill. When the messenger boy returned to the drug store he discovered the clever game of which he had been the victim.

WHILE HUBBY FROlickED WIFE LIVED ON BEANS

Mrs. Rhoda A. King, a sad faced young woman, has filed divorce proceedings against her husband charging that he lived a gay and reckless life along the white way while she was forced to subsist on beans. Besides that, she also charges he was cruel and negligent. She is represented by Attorney Guber & Jackson. The suit was filed Saturday morning.

Joyner Making Fine Record Probing "Suspicious" Fires

Captain W. R. Joyner, state fire inspector, is effectively placing the new department on a "live-wire" basis. This year the department has inspected fifty-three "suspicious" fires. In twenty cases convictions have been secured, charging arson. Three convictions have already been recorded.

In his inspections Captain Joyner has visited all parts of the state, and has effectively reported to him.

He reports that the total loss of property caused by these suspicious fires this year amounts to only $30,000. This shows the department to be putting in effective work in stamping out the practice of arson.

Many Arrests Made.

In his work Captain Joyner has run down all sorts of alleged criminals, who were practicing arson as a profession. Many of these are now in jails over the state, awaiting trial.

Last week in Atlanta Captain Joyner's attention was called to a suspicious fire on North Boulevard near the old circus grounds. He made an investigation, the arrest of a negro named Gemson Copeland following.

When later confronted by Chief of Detectives Lanford, of the city department, Copeland was recognized as a miser who escaped from the Harris county jail, changing two years ago. He had set fire to his shanty, containing about $10 worth of household goods, on which he carried $50 fire insurance. He is now being held at the county jail awaiting action on the part of Harris county authorities, and will be returned to finish his life sentence on the rock pile as a result of an investigation begun by a captain Joyner.

Captain Joyner has established a thorough system of having suspicious fires reported to his office from all parts of Georgia.

Investigate All Fires.

"In many places," said Captain Joyner, "prominent citizens will practice arson, and the sheriff become suspicious of the fire of unknown origin that destroys considerable property, but due to the prominence of this citizen, the sheriff, whose job is dependent on the influence of this citizen, probably, cannot afford to accuse the guilty party."

"On the quiet, though, the sheriff reports the suspicious fire to me, and I make my investigation without prejudice or favor, as in the case of the sheriff, and indictments against the prominent people, one an ex-mayor of a thriving Georgia town, have resulted.

Free Night School at Tech Drawing Large Attendance

The free night school of the Georgia School of Technology, which opened its facilities this fall in spite of the depressed conditions, has found its action amply justified by results. The school is about to complete one of the busiest and most successful fall terms in its history with an enrollment of 142, and prospects indicate a still larger enrollment for the winter term, as many who were unable to enter the fall are now planning to come in.

The winter term of the free night school begins December 14 and ends on March 4. Regular classes begin on December 7 and will run through December 10. The dean of the night school, Professor J. N. G. Nesbit, will mail application cards to any one who wishes them.

This school is practically free and was installed by the state of Georgia to give opportunity for technical education to all those who are unable from lack of means or lack of time to pursue such studies in the daytime. The buildings and shops of the night school are at the Georgia Tech. In fact, the state has donated free the use of all its plants, laboratories, shops and equipment for this work.

Professor Nesbit announced that thirty-four separate subjects of instruction will be free in the night school in the coming winter session. Nearly all the classes meet two evenings a week—Mondays and Wednesdays, or Tuesdays and Thursdays, from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock. The applicant should fill out his card and send it to the night school, where it is filed in order of its receipt. Then a card is sent to each applicant, informing him when and where to report.

Osteopaths Start Campaign To Benefit School Children

A partial investigation of the public school children in the city of Atlanta discloses the statistics that one of the elderly more than one-half of the pupils have spinal curvature or some other defect of the back or chest.

Because of this serious state of affairs the osteopathic physicians and surgeons, at a meeting held at the Piedmont hotel, decided to institute an energetic campaign for the prevention of the grave results which follow in the case of these cases, and also for the purpose of materially reducing the proportion of back troubles in the children of this city.

Classes will be organized to systematic work in muscle building and training the children by scientific prescribed exercises to stand and sit in a correct position. But more important than this will be adjustment of the spine in individual cases by osteopathic correction. After the displaced bones have been put in position by the osteopaths, the muscles will be built up by exercises in order to hold the spine in its new position. The astonishing feature of the situation is that the majority of these cases are unsuspected by the children, teachers and parents and even by medical examiners themselves.

The public thinks of spinal curvature as an obvious deformity which can be seen across the street. This is the condition which results from neglect of these cases in the early stages. Any deviation from the perfect perpendicular constitutes spinal curvature and should be detected in its incipient stages. In order that treatment may be instituted immediately, treatment correctly administered in the very first stages prevents the grave deformity and averts the result in a comparatively short time, whereas it is impossible to entirely correct a curve after it becomes sensitive to a much longer time is needed to obtain any benefit, and the procedure becomes more burdensome and severe for the patient.

The committee of osteopaths in Atlanta which will have charge of the work and which will provide free treatment for all deserving cases includes the following physicians: Dr. W. F. Aspley, Dr. J. R. Barge, Dr. L. E. Baggus, Dr. E. B. Broach, Dr. W. W. Blackman, Dr. S. F. Fisher, Dr. W. H. Dozier, Dr. Otto Grube, Dr. Walter Grady, Dr. J. H. Hines, Dr. J. M. Bradshaw, Dr. C. Sporing, Dr. H. C. Hardin, Dr. John Phelps and Dr. Gussie Phillips.

FEAR OF ZEPPELINS STRONG IN LONDON

Mrs. A. H. Otis Tells of Preparations Made There to Resist Attack.

To escape the constant dread of an attack by Zeppelins, Mrs. A. H. Otis, niece of W. B. Pritchard, has fled with her husband to America and is spending her time with the Pritchard family at their residence, 283 Washington street.

London has made such widespread preparations to thwart an attack from the air, she says, that many, fearful of an attack, have left the city.

"Wide expanses of network have been spread over the roofs of the principal buildings," she said last night, "to catch the explosives in case a hostile dirigible floats over them. At night all lights are cut out and London is in complete darkness, except for the few electric search lights which are incessantly playing upon the sky.

"The theaters cannot operate at night, and but few persons venture upon the streets. There is but little traffic, and the street cars are stopped. Except for the search lamps, it would be mighty hard for an airplane to locate London in the night.

"Mrs. Otis is an American. She and her husband intend to return to America, at which time she expects the German forces to be routed to such an extent that they will abandon the effort to attack London.

PORK CONDEMNED FOR CHOLERA AT MACON

State Veterinarian Bahnsen and Assistant Hurriedly Summoned.

Macon, Ga., November 21.—(Special.) Eight hogs which had been sent to a local packing house today were found by the city food inspector to be affected with cholera, and after being condemned, were sent to the city crematory. The hogs were sent here by a man named Boone, residing at Toombsboro.

He was notified that the hogs had been condemned, and came post haste to Macon. He did not agree with the food inspector, and as a result Dr. Peter F. Bahnsen, state veterinarian, and one of his assistants were summoned to Macon. They upheld the action of the food inspector, and have ordered an inspection of the Toombsboro market entire herd of close to one hundred head of hogs.

A week ago the inspector found a hog in an East Macon market that was effected with cholera, and it was promptly condemned.

PHOTOGRAPHER RUN OVER BY AUTOMOBILE

Valdosta, Ga., November 21.—(Special.)—W. C. Flynn, a young photographer, who recently came to this city from Jacksonville, Fla., was run over by an automobile on Hill avenue about dark tonight, and severely injured. The car was driven by Mrs. Emily Briggs Dyer and belongs to her mother, Mrs. M. A. Briggs. Flynn was on his bicycle and apparently failed to see the car which was following closely behind him. He made a slight turn at the corner near the city hall and was struck by the car, which passed over one of his legs. The bicycle was broken and it is feared he was hurt internally.

Sims will be transferred to the Atlanta circuit to take charge of Big Bethel church, and Rev. W. A. McClelland will be transferred to the Atlanta circuit to take charge of St. Paul's church.

Play of Both Sides Erratic—Fumbling Was Frequent. Georgia Threatened Auburn's Goal Thrice—Auburn Never Threatened to Score—Garrard, Powell, Paddock, Steed and Kearley Star.

By Dick Jemison. The Red and Black of Georgia today waves triumphantly and her football team, in its final game of the 1914 season, emerges victoriously.

The work of the rival ends was splendid to watch. They were seldom thrown out on an end run, or boxed in on a sweep, or a tackle plunge.

Georgia Superior. On the brand of football they played Saturday, Georgia had the superior football machine. Her eleven played with more smoothness and fought with more courage than that of the Plainsmen.

Kearley was like a stone wall in the way of Georgia's interferences, and working with steady hands would have interfered while the big tackle invariably cut through and got the man...

Georgia Threatened. Georgia, contrary to expectations of many, threatened the Auburn goal line many times during the game, while Auburn never was seriously in danger of crossing the Red and Black tally line.

Another exchange of punts followed with the advantage to Powell, who kicked off 18 yards of right tackle, but Auburn held and the ball went over to Auburn on their 30-yard line.

GOULET-GRENDA WIN LONG SPRINT

"Kangaroo Team" Won Six-Day Race. Scoring 67 Points in the Final Hour Sprint—Break All Records

New York, November 21.—Alfred Goulet of Australia and Alfred Grenada of Tasmania, the Kangaroo team which won the six-day bicycle race which ended at Madison Square Garden tonight.

Tied with five other teams for the lead an hour before the finish they scored 67 points, the highest number in the final hour of the race.

At 3 o'clock tonight the six leaders had a record of 11 miles and 3 laps, with the foot-clerk and Lawrence Magin teams still a lap behind.

A team composed of Mitten and Pitzer entered the race at 8 o'clock the team taking Pitzer's old score which put them five miles behind the leaders.

The members of the new team rode at a fast clip at their turn on the track and regained lap after lap the other riders paying little attention to them so they made three laps and were one mile and six laps behind.

The former record for the hour was 11.09 miles and 7 laps.

In this sprint the leader at the end of each fifteen laps was credited with five points, the second with three points and so on down to the last team which received one point.

For Lawrence Magin and Peter Drobach of Poland the weakest Polish team were second with 10 points. George Anderson of Australia, and Jimmy G. Chase of the United States international team third with 53 points. Francesco Verri of Italy and Oscar Eberhard of Sweden fourth with 47 points. The Italian team, and Fred Hill, of Boston and Joe Fogler of Brooklyn were tied for fourth place with 45 points each with George Cameron and Harry Kaiser of New York, the Bronx team fifth with 43 points.

Edward Root of New York and Jackie Lee of the United States, the Australian-American team and Percy Williams of San Francisco and Jake M. Smith of New York, the international team were tied for seventh place and were to ride for a decision but foot-clerk and Lawrence Magin were the winners.

The distance covered by the leaders was 78 miles and one lap setting a new world record. The new mile and one lap ahead of the former mark of 27.1 miles made last year by the victors in this race, the foot-clerk and Lawrence Magin teams received credit for 7.75 miles that, although they did not participate in the final hour.

The event this year had a finish unique in Madison Square Garden. The race was run on a track which was the track in the old Madison Square Garden. The race was run on a track which was the track in the old Madison Square Garden.

Oakland Makes New Record In the Consumption of Gas

NEW RECORD MAKER

Twenty eight and seven-tenths miles on a gallon of gasoline is the official and unprecedented accomplishment of an Oakland model 37, 4 cylinder car, the past week. And when it is considered that 3 miles of the distance were over country gravel road and 8 miles through city traffic, the record becomes even more remarkable. During the run made through Detroit the car was twice stopped for traffic and an extra consumption of gas through fuel and intermediate driving actually pulled down the final figures and these two occasions were the only times the clutch was slipped. It was a drive all the way.

The conditions were anything but favorable. The thermometer registered at an average of 33 degrees and the final stage of the test was after dark when cold and damp atmospheric conditions were most adverse to perfect combustion.

The Oakland 37, a stock car fully equipped with speedometer showing over 4,000 miles already covered and carrying a tank full of gasoline and an extra tire left in place at 3:15 in the afternoon. May Brown of the Class Journal company as judge and observer with the driver M. W. Crawford were in the car.

Before starting the gas measure of one gallon in the auxiliary tank was certified to by the Detroit City Engineer. The gas used tested by beams practically 17 acres of floor space of the Overland company total of 79 acres of floor space in their Toledo plant alone. It is said that in a larger area of floor space than is contained in any other motor car factory in the world. The aggregate floor space of this and the affiliated Overland plants operated in other cities is just over one hundred acres.

Additions to the Overland plant embodying 26 acres of floor space have only just been completed and it was thought until as recently as two months ago that with the completion of these additions the plant would be ample for the present at least. There however seems to be no limit to the demand for the Overland.

October was the biggest month the company ever experienced. The sales report shows that the value of more than $250,000. This growing demand has required the immediate further enlargement of the plant.

The largest of the new additions will have an area more than twice as great as that of the entire original Toledo factory when it was purchased by John N. Willys a little more than five years ago. The aggregate floor space of painting and upholstering departments and the chassis and body assemblies has been enlarged which practically doubled the body assembly and machine work is 400 feet in length and 200 feet wide. The space will be used for work by an additional 200 feet square.

Within a year additions have been built or started which practically double the former size of the Willys-Overland factory. Some adequate concentration of the entire original Toledo factory when it was purchased by John N. Willys a little more than five years ago. TWO LARGE BUILDINGS FOR OVERLAND FACTORY

October's Sales Biggest in the Company's History—Officials Optimistic About Future.

The big plant of the Willys-Overland company, at Toledo, Ohio is to be still further enlarged. John N. Willys, president, has just announced that the company will immediately erect two large additional buildings.

The first of these which is believed to be one of the largest factory buildings ever erected, is to be 300 feet long by 200 feet wide, two stories and a basement. The other will be 200 feet square. These two buildings will add practically 17 acres of floor space to the Overland company total of 79 acres of floor space in their Toledo plant alone. Athletic and Aquatic Meet At Y. M. C. A. Thursday

Thursday, November 26, the Young Men's Christian association will conduct its first athletic and aquatic meet. This meet will begin at 10 a. m.

This will be a preliminary meet for a series of meets beginning January 1, which will be conducted on a classified basis. Through this classification scheme men will compete against men of their own ability. This goes away with the old handicap idea where so much blame was laid upon the man who did the handicapping. A man will be classified according to his previous performance that is if a man runs 100 yards dash between 12 1/2 and 13 1/2 seconds he will be placed in class 'A'. If he runs it between 13 1/2 and 14 seconds he is in class 'B' and running it in 14 or more seconds he will be in class 'C'.

There has been arranged a scoring table for each event. In this scoring meet there will be no classification, but it will be an open meet for all members in the association and all will compete, their records all being kept and the best records will establish the association records. These records will be placed upon the score board in the gymnasium and the swimming pool.

Another test will be held in December. The November with the December test will give a fair working basis on which to base the classification. It is expected that high standards will be set at this first meet and the prospects are that many men will enter.

The events for the meet will be: Seventy five yard dash, 100 yard dash, 200 yard dash, 400 yard dash, three broad jumps, shot put, 30-yard straightaway, 20 yard swim, plunge for distance and running broad dive.

UNIQUE CYLINDER BLOCK ON THE CADILLAC "EIGHT"

The design of the cylinder block castings of the new Cadillac Eight is unique among motor cars by reason of the fact that removable water jacket plates are fitted at each end of the block.

Thus an entirely new scheme for the casting of cylinders on Bloc has been put into operation in the Cadillac foundries. The usual practice provides no opening into the water circulation space that surrounds the cylinders. The new Cadillac practice affords several advantages. One of these is that it permits the cores to be chored before the casting is made which prevents slipping of the core and insures uniform thickness of the cylinder walls and uniform space for the water both of which are necessary to efficient cooling of the motor.

Another is that through the opening of the water space inspection can be made to be sure that webs of metal have not formed which would interfere with the free circulation of the cooling water for such interference is likely to have serious results.

The third advantage is that the user of the car can detach the plates and remove any sediment that may have been deposited by the water used in the cooling system. The removal of these are amply large to permit close inspection of the water space.

CARBURETOR TO BLAME, SAYS S. A. PEGRAM

Auto Expert Tells Why Many Cars Refuse to Start on Cold Mornings.

When the motor refuses to start these cold mornings the trouble can be traced usually to the carburetor, says S. A. Pegram of the Pegram Motor company, distributors in this territory for the Willys-Overland cars.

More pressure is required in cold weather than in warm weather and the adjustment should be made accordingly. The reason is simple. When it is considered that the motor is a mixture of gas going into the cylinders the more heat will be generated.

The outside air is much colder and consequently the heat will radiate much faster from the cylinders than in warm weather. The cooling system of the motor thus extra loss of heat must be made up by supplying an extra amount of fuel. The cooling system should also receive careful attention to prevent any damage arising from freezing. The radiator coils have very thin walls for rapid cooling, and the lightest frost is liable to develop leaks. The system should be cleaned out with a solution of ordinary washing soda and water and then an anti-freezing solution of some sort used.

The Illinois automobile company has found the solution of calcium chloride in water to be very satisfactory. It is not at all costly, is not expensive and requires frequent renewal. Use chemically pure calcium chloride. The solution form usually contains acid that is injurious to the metal parts. Get a strip of blue litmus paper from the drug store and dip it in on it it is enough ammonia or soda solution to turn it red. The amount of calcium chloride to use may be found from the following table:

FOURTH ESTATE TESTS NEW DETROIT MACHINE

Dodge Bros. Entertain Newspaper Men by Ride in the New Models.

Dodge Bros. new motor car was officially announced to the general public at a luncheon recently given Detroit newspaper men by officers of the company. Preceding the luncheon the representatives of the Detroit papers were taken for a jaunt of several miles over country roads in two of the new touring car models. A more biased bunch of critics has seldom been taken on the promenade of a new motor car but the Detroit newspaper boys exhibited real enthusiasm at the riding quality and equipment of the new car at the conclusion of the trip.

Briefly the new car of Dodge Bros. is a five passenger, 110 inch wheel base machine of ample proportions and will sell at $185. In beauty of design, power of motor and equipment it is the equal of any other car of its class. The popular priced car and is acknowledged by motor experts to have established a new standard of automobile value for the industry.

In a short talk Sales Manager A. J. Philip emphasized the personal supervision of the new car's construction by the Dodge Brothers themselves. Mr. Philip declared that in the history of the automobile industry had the owners of the business personally handled every detail of the car. This supervision and the decision to build a car of this class and price had added to the cost of production the car beyond the original cost of the Willys-Overland company, which is the reason for the increased cost.

The formal introduction of Dodge Bros. was to Detroit newspaper men in other cities according to Assistant Sales Manager George C. Hubbs who also introduced their company's new planning, some original features in the sales campaign of the new car.

It is said that the M'Farlan Six is a well known car and this was caused by its reliability.

Richmond 12, Benedictine 0.

Augusta, Ga. November 21.—(Special)—Richmond 12, Benedictine 0. On account of hard games scheduled for the next few days, the game was rather lackluster, this being especially true of the locals. The home side played a safe game throughout, using less than half of their stuff. The local preps made the first touchdown after six minutes of play in breaking through tackle for 15 yards.

The second touchdown came in the third quarter after a series of short end runs and line plunges. Bryan carrying the ball over a man Benedictine came back strong in the second half and had Richmond scoreless.

Muller, Matt and Philpot starred for the locals. O'Connor, McKenna and Moore doing the best work for the Benedictines. The features of the game were O'Connor's returning of punts and Muller's breaking through the line.

WOMEN DEMONSTRATORS ADVOCATED FOR AUTOS

Maxwell Motor Co. About to Start Nation-Wide Canvass for Good Workers.

By Ethel Feyer.

World comes that an entirely new field of endeavor is about to be opened to women; and it is one of the most pleasant as well as profitable labors to which women may aspire. The word is that Walter E. Planners, of the Maxwell Motor company, is about to make a nation-wide canvass of all the women's organizations to find capable women to act as demonstrators of the Maxwell car.

The plan has the endorsement of several of the most prominent club and suffragette leaders of New York, who interviewed last week by one of New York's leading papers.

It is a genuine business move on the part of the Maxwell Motor company. Mr. Planners believes that women will be successful in the automobile business, and particularly in demonstrating and selling a car like the Maxwell, which is exceptionally light and easy to handle, and has already proved highly popular with women drivers.

When questioned regarding the move, Mr. Planners said: "To be frank, we want to sell our cars to women, and we think women can sell them successfully. It has been our experience that women in department stores as agents are good sellers, and therefore, we consider it wise to employ them to engage women as demonstrators of automobiles."

The long and the short of it is that we believe in women not only to the extent of employing them, but to the extent of paying the same as we pay men for the job. Every business man, he concluded, "is looking for progress, and to have, with Charlotte Perkins Gilman, that the main line of progress is toward economic equality and freedom. That is all there is to it."

32 ENTRIES RECEIVED FOR RACE IN SAVANNAH

The premier event the coming week in the motorcycle world, and the one in which the eyes of the whole motorcycle world will be focused upon, is the 300-mile grand prize motorcycle road race at Savannah on Thanksgiving day.

Thirty-two entries have been received, which are composed of the fastest riders in the world. Eight hundred and fifty dollars each prize are offered by the Savannah Motorcycle club, the promoters of this event, with $400 added cash prizes for several intermediate concerns, making the total prizes of $1,550 in cash to be distributed among the three first riders across the tape.

Already, at Savannah, quite a number of the riders have been quartered in the neighborhood of five hours to run this event off.

In preliminary sprints over part of the course, which is a 4-mile straight-away, a speed has been attained of 80 miles per hour. When this is figured against the fast time made last year of 67 miles per hour, it will be readily seen that records are going to fall.

The event will be pulled off over the same course in which the Vanderbilt cup race took place several years ago, and at that time over the fastest part of the course, the automobiles made a speed of ninety miles per hour; so it will be seen that the motorcycle is not far behind when it comes to speed.

The average speed at which the Savannah Grand Prize race was won last year was 55 miles per hour. Experts predict that this year the speed will be covered at an average of 65 miles per hour. Motorcycle enthusiasts from all parts of the country are on their way to Savannah to be present during this big event, which will be started next Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

The neighborhood of five hours to run this event off.

In detail of the arrangements have been perfected, and the officials of the Savannah Motorcycle club from the experience gained last year expect to make a grand success of the second annual event.

The importance of this event is so thoroughly recognized by the Federation of American Motorcyclists that John L. Demore, chairman of the competition committee, and the official referee, will be in charge of the race and will introduce the same as he has done in scoring and timing device which will eliminate all possible chance of errors and mistakes. He will be assisted by Charles O'Neal, the local F. A. M. referee in Savannah.

Harry Glenn, the Atlanta local rider, will be one of the contenders, and his friends are predicting that he will be the money in the final cycle among the men in riders from whom great things are expected is Gray Sloop, of Mooreville, N. C. who recently won the southern championship at the Isle of Palms on a Harley-Davidson in a 50-mile event, beating the best crack riders in the south. Also Mr. J. Yerkes, of Jacksonville, Fla., champion all-around athlete of Florida, who has ordered a special fast Harley-Davidson to take part in this event, and his Jacksonville friends are betting two to one that he will finish in the money.

The Savannah followers are pinning their faith in young Martin Schroeder, who will also be mounted on a special fast stripped stock Harley-Davidson, who made a wonderful showing in the event last year, and ran Gray Sloop a close race at the Isle of Palms on Labor Day.

Among the northern crack riders is William Boer, of Milwaukee; Irvin Jank, Red Parkhurst, who recently won the P. M. one-hour championship at Birmingham, Ala., and who has broken quite a number of records recently in the hands of Gardner from Mansfield, Ohio, who also was a contender last year at Savannah; William Cunningham and Ray Weisnar. All of these are on the Harley-Davidson teams. It was Brier, Weisnar, Schroeder, Jank and Parkhurst who several days ago over the course were battling out 80 miles to the hour, and each one of these riders fully expect to win the event.

This big event will no doubt be the most bitterly fought of any event of its kind in recent years, as all of the big motorcycle manufacturers are spending thousands of dollars upon their teams and will use every method in regards to organization and preparations and specially striped stock machines in order to win.

A special train will leave from Atlanta Wednesday night, carrying a large party of local riders and friends; also parties are being made up at Louisville, Nashville, Chattanooga, Birmingham, Charlotte, Charleston, Jacksonville and quite a number of other southern points. Great preparations are being made by the Savannah promoters to entertain and take care of all the riders, and the importance of this event can be appreciated when it is known that representatives from the Coast and New York papers are being sent to Savannah to write up the story of the race and wire results on next Thursday night. The results of the race will be eagerly watched for by thousands of riders all over the country.

$100,000 Moving Picture Theater for Atlanta; Twenty-Year Lease of House Brings $300,000

This is a drawing by A. Ten Eyck Brown, the architect, of the new $100,000 moving picture theater, to be known as the Fulton theater, which J. B. Frost will build on Houston street, adjoining the Dakota hotel. The theater has been leased for a term of twenty years by Arthur S. Hyman, southern manager of the World Film corporation, at an aggregate consideration of $300,000.

NEW FUEL THREATENS THRONE OF GASOLINE

Wonderful Speed Records Are Being Made in Indianapolis by "Zoline."

Wonderful Records Made.
Indianapolis, Ind., November 21.—Using the new fuel, the Marmon 41 touring car, which made over 62 miles in one hour on the speedway last week, covered 1,020 miles in 18 hours, 24 minutes, 8.4-10 seconds. Actual running time averaged 52.500 miles per hour on Thursday and Friday, electrically timed under official supervision.

This sets a new standard for automobile efficiency. The total time elapsed was 20 hours, 22 minutes, 4-10 seconds, with an average of 50.2-10 miles an hour. Elapsed time today for 500 miles showed an average of fifty-four miles an hour.

Number 36 carried a drivetrain and chassis which had been raised despite a temperature of from 10 to 20 degrees below freezing.

The mechanical trouble was experienced throughout the run. Two tire changes and a technical examination were made Saturday.

A substitute for gasoline that can be manufactured for one and a half cents a gallon and that will run a motor car faster than gasoline, is being made in Indianapolis. F. E. Moskovics, commercial manager of Nordyke & Marmon company of Indianapolis, has been the substance made and has observed tests of it. Some of the biggest men in the motor car business in this country are interested and predict that the new fuel will revolutionize not only the business, but the manufacturing business.

"The new fluid is called 'Zoline,'" Mr. Moskovics said. "It was discovered by John Andrus, a Portuguese, of McKeesport, Pa., who was recently paid $25,000 for the discovery. A discovery he made in toughening armor plate. Andrus has discovered a way of breaking down water without the use of great heat and the new fluid consists mostly of water, a little naphthalene and two secret ingredients that can be used in any drug store. Andrus mixes these in a still to which heat is applied and the result is a fluid that is superior to gasoline."

Its Superiority to Gasoline.
"Andrus interested Carl Fisher, president of the Prest-O-Lite company and president of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, and the latter, Mr. Fisher went to McKeesport to see it tested. Fisher insisted that another test should be made in Indianapolis and that was done on July 14th. At this test were Russell Huff, consulting engineer of the Packard company; Howard Marmon, chief engineer of the Nordyke & Marmon company; William Gust Wall, vice president and chief engineer of the National company, the chief chemist of the Prest-O-Lite company; a professor of chemistry from Michigan university; and myself. All had been invited to the test by Mr. Fisher to detect any fraud, if it was present."

"Every movement of the inventor was watched by these experts. The still was set up under the eyes and the fluid made. A Marmon '41' was furnished for the test and five gallons of fluid were put in the tank. It did sixteen miles on a gallon, which is about four miles more than can normally be done by that car on gasoline. We made sixty-nine miles an hour speed with the top and windshield up and two passengers in the car, which was four to five miles an hour faster than the car ever had made on gasoline. We ran 150 miles, and after the test the engine was as clean as a hound's tooth—not a speck of carbon on it. And the car was cooler than with gasoline. Subsequent tests were equally as satisfactory."

High-Class Films

The new theater will be known as the Fulton theater. It will show high-class feature films exclusively, and will use high-class musical and operatic attractions.

"The Fulton theater," said Mr. Hyman, "will be on a par with the Strand theater, of New York. I have always had my ideal of a high-class moving picture theater, one which can bring out the entire artistic and educational worth of the moving picture, and placed it upon the plane which so powerful a popular medium deserves, and the Fulton theater will be the realization of that dream. I have faith enough in the taste and appreciation of Atlanta to believe that the city will support such an institution. In moving pictures, the Fulton will represent to Atlanta what the annual grand opera season represents in the world of music."

The Fulton theater will stand upon a lot with a frontage of 60 feet, with a depth of 154 feet. It will be two and one-half stories high.

Exterior of Marble.
It will be of reinforced concrete thoroughly fireproof construction, and will be finished in its exterior in Italian marble, white terra cotta and gray mottled brick, the whole being outlined in electric lights. The interior will be finished throughout in Italian marble. Extending all the way across the sidewalk to the curb will be a highly ornamental marquee.

On the side of the entrance toward Peachtree street will be a store. Upon the top floor along the front of the building will be a series of offices, which will either be leased or occupied by the owner. These offices will be reached by a stairway, whose entrance will be from the street on the opposite side of the theater entrance from the store.

The entrance of the theater will consist of a spacious lobby finished entirely in Italian marble. The box office in this lobby will also be of Italian marble.

The entrance lobby, but for a vestibule, will open directly upon the main floor of the theater. From the vestibule, at either side, will be two winding marble staircases leading to the balcony. The staircases will have twelve-inch balustrades of Italian marble.

The interior of the theater will be beautifully and artistically decorated in restful colors. All the floors will be a series of long, or boxes, will all be of cast brass with handsome leather upholstery. No theater in America, perhaps, will be more beautifully appointed than the Fulton. A feature will be a series of long, or boxes, at the floor level at the rear of the theater. The balcony will be very deep.

The seating capacity will be 1,400. The seats will be so arranged that no seat will afford the slightest discomfort or inconvenience to one in the audience.

By way of parenthesis, some moving picture men could do worse than invent a word which fits the people who go to a moving picture show. An audience is a gathering for the purpose of hearing. People go to moving picture theaters to see and not to hear, primarily. Why not a word such as "vidience," say?

But about the new Fulton theater—

A Beautiful Stage.
The stage will be of such elegance and beauty as will enhance the other details of the building. Its drapery will consist of seven different sets of scenery of all different shades.

The theater will be equipped with a pipe organ and orchestra. Both the organ and the orchestra will be operated behind the stage.

Above the stage will be dressing rooms for artists who will carry this to the theater special musical and operatic features.

In this connection Mr. Hyman said: "I want it understood that the Fulton is in no way to be conceived as a vaudeville house. No one but real artists will appear before the audience, and these in full dress."

The doorman and the ushers will all be in full dress uniforms.

In the basement of the theater will be a beautifully appointed rest and lounge room for the ladies, with a maid in attendance.

In the basement, opposite the ladies' room, will be a smoking and lounge room for gentlemen.

Both compartments will be equipped with telephones and all conveniences.

Large dressing rooms will be provided for the actors and actresses.

The operating room of the Fulton will be the most spacious of any theater in the south. Its dimensions will be 26 by 15 feet. It will consist of three moving picture machines, spotlights, dissolves and flashes.

The electrical decorations of the theater will be a distinct feature. The building itself will be outlined in electric lights and the name of the building will be a sign bearing the name of the theater in electric letters 7 1/2 feet in height. Surrounding the sign will be a powerful searchlight, the light from which will emanate through the letters H-F-U-L-T-O-N.

These letters will be cast upon the sky at night by the searchlight so that they will be visible to all parts of the city. This searchlight alone will cost $1,000.

Large dressing spaces will be built into the exterior walls of the theater and announcements of all attractions will be made by this means.

The ventilating and heating system of the theater will be the most modern

RAY WERNER HEADS GEORGIA CHEMISTS

Campaign to Educate Business Men in State Resources Started by Branch.

The Georgia section of the American Chemical society met last night at the University club and elected officers as follows: Ray C. Werner, of Atlanta, president; F. I. Gibson, of Savannah, vice president; F. N. Smalley, of Savannah, counselor, and J. S. Brogdon, of Atlanta, secretary, this being his eighth year in the office.

The Georgia branch has begun a campaign to educate the business men in chemical resources, and, at their invitation, booklets are being sent out by the chemical industry department of the State Chamber of Commerce, of which department J. S. Brogdon is joint secretary.

Four scientific and technical papers were read after the business session, and dinner had been completed. The program follows:

Ray C. Werner, consulting chemist and bacteriologist, public and private water supplies, of the state department of health, "The Use of Calcium Hypochlorite in Water Purification."

E. H. Armstrong, superintendent of the Old Dominion chemical company, "Injurious Action of Nitric Acid in Sulfuric Acid Plants."

Dr. G. W. of the state experiment station, at Experiment, Ga., "Some Phases of the Potash Question."

F. S. Brogdon, analytical chemist, "Effects of Ground Limestone on Soil and Fertilizers." This last paper was a review of the newspaper controversy between Dr. Stallard and the department of the subject of limestone filler for fertilizers, instead of clay filler.

Six Weeks' Automobile Trip Just Finished by Macon Men

L. B. AND J. C. JOHNS ON RETURN HOME FROM LONG TRIP.

It is a long way from Seattle, Wash., to Macon, Ga., and the two men, L. B. and J. C. Johns, have just completed this trip in a six-week automobile journey. They returned to their home in Macon, Ga., on reaching Atlanta they had traveled 10,000 miles and had a complete camping outfit and put up their tent at the Macon Hotel.

They also had their hunting dog and gun, and had many experiences on their trip, and had good sport in shooting crows and jack-rabbits on the plains. They state they had a most enjoyable trip, but were very glad to get back to the red hills of Georgia.

They used Firestone tires, and, except for a few punctures, experienced no trouble.

The Greatest Victories Ever Won on Any Tires

SUCH may be said of the Los Angeles-Phoenix and the El Paso-Phoenix Road Races ending November 11th, both of which were won on Firestone Tires. These races put tires to a terrific test in the grueling grind over mountain trails and desert sands.

Firestone TIRES

stood that test as shown by results:

Los Angeles—Phoenix 696 Miles

- 1st Oldfield Equipped with Firestone Tires
- 2nd Nikrent Equipped with Firestone Tires
- 3rd Beaudet Equipped with Firestone Tires

El Paso—Phoenix Race 533 Miles

- 1st Miller Equipped with Firestone Tires

At Phoenix the next day all cars that finished in both races entered in a track race where all the honors were also won on Firestone Tires.

These victories are but the climax of fifteen years of leadership. Think what this means to you. It means Strength and Endurance to meet all emergencies.

What Atlanta needs more than any other city in the South is a vocational training school. With the present wide spread interest in vocational training, it would be the most popular one in the South. What is vocational training? It is education in the practical arts. It would be a student for a particular calling or trade or profession. The best example of a vocational institution is a medical school. There the course of training is all directed toward fitting the student for a particular occupation which he expects to pursue when he is through school. A good example of a vocational school is the modern business college where a student is taught bookkeeping, stenography, penmanship, commercial arithmetic and the business training that goes along with ordinary business training.

These vocational institutes are very efficient. Atlanta dental colleges are known far and wide. They have students from all over the United States and from foreign countries. The dental colleges rank high in the attendance as drawn from all over the southern states. The Atlanta Law School supplies the demand for anyone who wants to go directly after legal training without a university course. How could it be otherwise? For actual practical usefulness they cannot be excelled. The training of a young man without business colleges? For actual practical usefulness they cannot be excelled. The training of a young man without business colleges? For actual practical usefulness they cannot be excelled.

Suppose I want my son to be a plumber or a brick manufacturer or a wagon manufacturer where shall I send him? There is no place he can go to and learn the thing which he can do directly on the particular calling he has chosen. That is where a trade school would come in. Without saying that a four year course in a university is a young man for any useful pursuit. There are exceptions of course. In these modern days of effort and purposeless education it is as absurd to send a young man to someone's school who does not fill the bill. The Tech school is an engineering school of the highest rank. It is in no sense of the word a trade school. It has a practical curriculum calling for a four year course in the sciences, mathematics and French or German. The average Georgia boy cannot take the course. He has a little use of his mind if he did take it.

At the present stage of the South's development about courses in manual training in the University of Georgia. Such scientific instruction as the student is capable of mastering is what is taught in the University of Georgia. It needs intelligent artisans more than it needs culture. Not long ago B. Mifflin Hood went to the University of Chicago and studied three months to learn what there is to be learned about brick making. Have you noticed the beautiful bricks and tiles of every shape and color, and texture that he is turning out now? He learned it by studying lectures three months at a practical university. Suppose I am engaged in brick making and I want to study that they put in waterworks and sewerage systems. The demand for sewer pipe is enormous. Cement is used more and more every day. All these are practical subjects which should be studied and taught in Georgia. They should be taught in the most practical way possible. It is not a part of difficult university course extending over a long period of time. The average Georgia boy should have some school training to learn to learn a trade. If such a school were in Atlanta it would have two thousand students.

The pine forests are almost exhausted. Different building material must be used now. The clays of Georgia work up beautifully into building material. The clays of Georgia work up beautifully into building material. The clays of Georgia work up beautifully into building material.

Hocker-Foster.
(From The Interior Journal, of Stanford, Kentucky.)
The marriage of Miss Pauline Denny Hocker to Rev. William O. Foster of Atlanta, Ga., was solemnized Wednesday morning at 9:30 o'clock, at the First Christian church, in the presence of many friends. Rev. D. M. Walker, the officiating minister, performed the ceremony in a most appropriate and impressive manner. The decorations were very simple, but effective and artistic, nothing but ferns being used. The entire chancel was filled with ferns massed together, and the choir rail was festooned in green, thus making a rich background for the bridal party.

Miss Mary Higgins presided at the organ, and gave several beautiful numbers before the nuptial vows were spoken. Mrs. Morrison Wright sang "Love You Truly" and "Love's Old Sweet Song" in a most pleasing manner. To the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, the bridal party came to the altar. Mr. Jesse Hocker, brother of the bride, and Mr. Will Denny, a cousin, came first, followed by Messrs. Ben and Clifford Foster, brothers of the groom, and stood with them during the ceremony.

The bride, who entered with the groom, was attired in an exquisite gown of crepe de chine, en train, with Alencon lace overdress and pearl trimmings. The tulle veil was caught with clusters of orange blossoms and becomingly arranged over the culture. Her bouquet was bride's roses edged with ferns.

The bride is the attractive daughter of Mr. J. S. Hocker, president of the First National bank, and is a universal favorite in this community. In winning her, Mr. Foster has genuine cause for congratulation. Mr. Foster is pastor of the West End Christian church in Atlanta, and is a sincere and scholarly minister of the gospel. Rev. and Mrs. Foster left immediately for Atlanta, where they will go to housekeeping at once.

McCall-Pettus.
Mr. Benjamin B. Pettus, formerly of Atlanta, now residing in Washington, D. C., was married to Miss Mary L. McCall of that city, on Wednesday, the 18th, at 4 o'clock. Mr. L. S. Conspicuous Nose Pores

How to reduce them

Complexions otherwise flawless are often ruined by conspicuous nose pores.

In such cases the small muscular fibres of the nose have become weakened and do not keep the pores closed as they should be. Instead these pores collect dirt, clog up, and become enlarged.

Begin tonight to use this treatment

Wring a cloth from very hot water, immerse it with Woodbury's Facial Soap, then hold it to your face. When the heat has expanded the pores, rub in very gently a fresh lather of Woodbury's. Repeat this hot water and lather application several times, stopping at once if your nose feels sensitive. Then finish by rubbing the nose for a few minutes with a lump of ice.

Woodbury's Facial Soap cleanses the pores. This treatment with it strengthens the muscular fibres of the nose pores so that they can contract properly. But do not expect to change in a week a condition resulting from years of neglect. Use this treatment persistently. It will gradually reduce the enlarged pores and cause them to contract until they are inconspicuous.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is the work of a skin specialist. It costs 25c a cake. No one hesitates at the price after their first cake.

Do this today—Now! Tear out the illustration of the cake below and put it in your purse as a reminder to get Woodbury's. Tear out the cake now. Take it to your druggist or toilet counter today. Begin tonight to get the benefits of this facial soap. For sale by dealers everywhere.

LUNCHEON, 11:30 a. m. to 2:30 p. m.

The noonday luncheons at our Tea Room are becoming more popular each day.

We are not striving to have the most pretentious menu, nor to see how many big names we can originate for ordinary dishes, but rather to see how good and how appetizing simple foods can be prepared and how daintily they can be served.

Here are some of the reasons for the popularity of Nunnally's Tea Room.

"There are no megaphone orders to the cooks, no clattering of dishes, no tips to waiters, nor other 'distracting noises' to prevent your enjoying a luncheon here to the fullest extent."

Cleanliness is rigidly observed in the handling and preparation of everything we serve.

Make your arrangements to have luncheon here tomorrow—you'll enjoy it. Here are a few of the many good things you may choose from.

Divine-Grady.

The marriage of Miss Rebekah Lamar Divine and Mr. Henry Veach Grady was a beautiful event of Wednesday in Atlanta, Ga., the occasion being of great interest to friends throughout the state. The ceremony was solemnized at high noon at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Emily Carter Divine.

Miss Blanche Divine was her sister's only attendant and the bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Samuel M. Carter, and Mr. Henry Veach of Atlanta, who was best man. Mr. Clark, of the Church of St. Paul, in Chattanooga, officiated.

The winsome cousin of the youthful bride was at its height on her wedding morning. Her gown was of dark green and white, with a wide collar of lace, and her large black hat was wreathed with radiance. Her flowers were valley lilies and pink roses.

The maid of honor wore a girlish dress of white, flounced in lace, and her bouquet was of pink roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. Divine was gowned in black satin, the corsage of lace.

The wedding scene was one of memorable beauty, the bridal party grouped in the living room before a large tree, made of spruce pine and white chrysanthemums, the spruce taken from a magnificent old tree which had been brought to the plantation as a tiny plant from Savannah in the days of each travel. The entire home was pictureque decorations in the red leaves of dogwood and maple, the browns and yellows of the trees.

An elegant luncheon followed the ceremony, and Mr. and Mrs. Grady went north for a two weeks' trip. They will make their home in Chattanooga.

The bride, a debutante of last season, has won the affection of a large number of a large acquaintance in Atlanta during visits with her aunt, Mrs. Samuel Earnest and with her father, Mr. H. H. Grady, and the Misses Harwkins. She has also many friends in Chattanooga, and Mr. Grady holds prominent place there in the business and the social life.

The Vogue of Dancing.

If there had been any question before the social season began as to the continued vogue of dancing, it has long since been answered by full dancing dates on everybody's calendar, and full reservations for every dancing occasion.

The Dance club on Monday nights and Tuesday evenings at the Casino, the Capital City club on Tuesday nights, the Driving club on Wednesday afternoons and Saturday nights, Grand Hotel on Friday afternoons and some of the Thursday nights; the Georgian Terrace on Friday nights and the Piedmont hotel on Saturday afternoons with Monday and Thursday nights, is a list that makes a very complete showing.

Benefit dances, which were interpolated last Wednesday by Mrs. Forbush and Tuesday by Miss Busby at Segadio's, had good patronage.

COVINGTON, GA.

The study section of the Women's club was delightfully entertained last Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the beautiful home of Mrs. E. C. Lee on Monticello street. The house was very bright and attractive with quantities of handsome yellow and white chrysanthemums and ferns. The study for the afternoon was "Taming of the Shrew," the program having been arranged by the committee, Mrs. A. H. Milner, Mrs. C. C. King and Mrs. E. C. Lee. At the conclusion of the interesting study a regular business meeting was held. Each lady, of course, had coffee and fruit cake was served.

One of the most delightful events of the past week was the splendid party which was given last Monday by the members of the Ladies' Aid society of the Baptist church, at the pretty home of Mrs. L. L. Middlebrooks, on Floyd street. Each lady contributed to the dinner, and many dainty and palatable dishes were enjoyed. The program was very interesting, and the members of the club were in pretty effect in the rooms open to guests. Fancy work and conversation were the main features of the morning, and at the noon hour a most delicious dinner was served. In the afternoon the business session was held. As the occasion proved such a happy one, it was decided to make it an annual affair.

Miss Browne has offered her services as librarian, and under her direction the library will be kept open at regular intervals in order to accommodate the reading public.

The Doll Store Is Ready for the Children!!

War or no war, little ones must have Dollies at Christmas time. Of course! It wouldn't be a really, truly Christmas without them; for every wee girlie secretly cherishes the longing for a doll in her stocking, whatever else old Santa Claus may leave there.

And despite the predictions of a few "sober sides" that there would be no dolls this year, we have hundreds of beautiful ones—the most delightful kinds, to make happy as many childish hearts.

Bring the children—Monday. Let them see the entire display. The character dolls will please them greatly. They are priced variously from $1 to $5.

Cunning "Baby Dolls," ready dressed, 50c to $1.50.

Novelty Musical Dolls—entirely new—at $1.00 and $1.25.

Sleeping Dolls that look like real babies—soft, fine, short hair—for as little as 50c—and up to $5.00.

Special for Monday at $1.25

Large, beautiful, jointed dolls—23 inches high, with pretty curly wigs that can be combed; blondes and brunettes—life-like expressions; sleeping eyes—they have on slippers and stockings; very popular, and dolls of extra value at this price—$1.25 each.

A CRISIS CONFRONTS ATLANTA'S SCHOOL SYSTEM!

The Constitution tells in its news columns today a plain story of the paralysis that confronts the public school system of Atlanta unless something is done to prevent it between now and next September.

This editorial is meant to sound solemn warning to parents and taxpayers against the menace that now overshadows the schools.

The story is an old one, and its salient points are told in a few words.

The crisis that now threatens is the greatest that has ever overhung the schools. If it is not met and removed it means that—

Next September hundreds of children will be denied the right, assumed to be guaranteed by the city of Atlanta, to an education at the public schools of the city.

The efficiency of the whole system is at hazard.

The tale The Constitution tells of the two high schools—the boys' and the girls'—is entirely typical of the entire system.

The Boys' High School was built to accommodate 200 pupils.

It is now housing nearly twice that many, by the disgraceful expedient of using rooms never intended for teaching purposes and by subdividing the school auditorium.

Next year between five and six hundred pupils will knock at the doors of the Boys' High School—built for only 200.

Unless arrangements have been made by that time, these boys simply will not gain admission; they will be denied educational advantages for which their parents are taxed.

Conditions are worse in the Girls' High School. They will be hopelessly aggravated next September, and scores of young women will be kept out of the school unless a remedy is found before that time.

The same situation prevails, proportionately, throughout the system.

Everywhere, the educational plant is bursting at the seams.

Atlanta has grown and is growing faster than any city of its size in the country.

A disreputable policy of alleged economy, but of beggarly parsimony, has made the physical equipment of the schools grow stouter, proportionately, than any other city of the country.

We have been proceeding on the boasting assumption that we were saving money.

The real truth is that we have been practicing the worst form of extravagance, extravagance at the expense of the lives, the careers, the opportunities of the citizens of tomorrow; extravagance that will come home tomorrow to demand usurious interest for the contemptible "saving" of today; extravagance that takes toll of Atlanta's future and of posterity!

The tragedy of the thing is that this so-called "economy" is practiced at the expense of the masses.

There are some people in Atlanta to whom the conditions in the public schools are a matter of indifference. They can send their children to private institutions.

To one of this kind there are one hundred who must depend upon the public schools. It is the one hundred, the percentage that largely support the city and the schools, that are now threatened with penalization.

The overwhelming majority of cities recognize that the public school system is the most potent instrument for molding its future. They cherish the system. They pursue the policy of spending as much as they can on the schools.

Atlanta's schools for forty years have been a source of infinite pride for the city. They have been taken as models the country over. They have brought thousands of people to the city.

As in each other department, we have pursued with our schools the old, uneconomic, insane policy of trying to make current income meet current expenses and the cost of improvements.

That is the whole trouble with the schools.

It would be laughable, if it were not pitiful, to witness the spectacle of trying to maintain a growing school system on current municipal income, pay its teachers, buy its equipment and make new and permanent additions.

Modern economic logic is to make posterity stand a share of the expense for the improvements in which it will share and which are essentially permanent in their nature.

A school building is a permanency and it serves posterity.

It is not as though Atlanta was a poor city. Atlanta is among the wealthiest of cities of its size in the country. Atlanta has a bonding margin giving her a borrowing capacity of $7,000,000.

That huge sum is now lying absolutely idle. A part of it employed, the disintegration that menaces the schools would be averted. Construction, because of the cheapness of both material and labor, could be done more reasonably than in years, and thousands of men could be given employment if the city would only authorize the beginning the necessary work of rehabilitation.

This problem is up to—the new administration that comes in January 1, 1915.

That administration cannot evade the issue. Upon the manner in which it is handled swings Atlanta's future, Atlanta's reputation, already imperilled, for many years.

CORN AND HOG AND HOMINY.

"Hog and Hominy!" That is the watchword of the Ad Men's Club of Atlanta, in cooperation with the corn show committee of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce for the exhibit of December 2, 3 and 4.

The meeting of the Corn club boys is a good time to drive home the hog and hominy propaganda.

Many and varied are the attractions arranged for the carnival. One day there will be a football game with the famous Carlisle Indians. The big corn show at the capitol needs no commendation. The parade of December 3, to be in charge of the Ad Men's club, will be a thing of wonder from standpoints of volume and variety.

On the night of December 3 there will be a big ball at the Auditorium, celebrating the hog and hominy carnival. The voting for the queen of the carnival, now proceeding at a hectic rate, is guarantee of the general interest of the affair. Other features are scheduled, and every ad man in town is working to make the carnival a success.

There is every reason why Atlanta should anticipate a big crowd for this notable event. The railroads have offered low rates. Cotton has begun to move and money to loosen. Christmas is coming and Santa Claus is providing his stock, and Atlanta is the place with which all Georgia trades, especially at this time of the year.

So come to the Corn club meeting and the Hog and Hominy festival! It will pay you!

MR. LUPTON'S GIFT.

Times and conditions considered, the gift of a check of $10,000 to Oglethorpe university by J. T. Lupton, of Chattanooga, announced today, bears splendid testimony to the merit of the great enterprise to which it is such a handsome contribution.

Dr. Thornewell Jacobs, executive representative of Oglethorpe, who announces the gift, and whose campaigning has had so great a bearing on the enlargement of the building fund, is much impressed with the fact that even with the interruption of the European war, contributions to Oglethorpe are coming as rapidly as ever.

Incidentally, it is a tribute to the broad reach of Oglethorpe that these contributions should come from such widely separated states as North Carolina, Kentucky, Louisiana, Texas, Tennessee and Mississippi. Obviously, the university on the outskirts of Atlanta is to be a part of the spirit of the empire of the south.

The progress of the Oglethorpe campaign is indicated in the fact that it now is planned to lay the cornerstone on January 21, 1915. From that time forward work will be vigorously prosecuted to completion.

It is doubtful if the average Atlantan recognizes what the university is to mean to the city, and to this whole section.

SENATE PONCE DE LEONS.

If you want to find the fabled spring of Ponce de Leon, with the eternal devotes posing round about cherubic and rotund, you need not go to any far-off or mythical place. Go to—the United States senate! Of course the cynical will remark that if eternal youth is coupled with eternal speech, they can understand the connection. We dismiss this suggestion as ribald.

The latest senatorial candidate for the century mark is United States Senator Owen, of Oklahoma. He told a reporter the other day that he expected to round out one hundred years, and he is now only 58. Three years ago the senator belonged to the physical down-and-out club. Who rejuvenated him? Why, he simply discovered that the stomach is the seat of most human ills, and from that knowledge he advanced progressively to a system of dieting and exercise that he says has restored him to pristine vigor, which he says will carry him romping past the century stone. His experiences and his system are worth while reading in the extract published elsewhere from The New York World.

Senator Tillman led off, some years ago, in this senatorial rejuvenation. He was preparing to be gathered to his fathers. A season of doubt, misgiving, floundering and searching for a sign ensued. Finally, the senator brought up at the same sign Senator Owen had found—the Sign of the Stomach. He, too, and he was the senatorial pioneer of this cult, found that the stomach was the original sinner. And water was his remedy. He came down here to Atlanta, went through a course of treatment, and emerged with the statement that he expected to be representing South Carolina in the senate on his hundredth birthday.

And there are more of the senatorial Ponce de Leons, defying encroaching years, refusing to resign or die, and some of them growing new sets of teeth.

And all of them point to their conquest of the stomach as the explanation!

"THE DRINK OR THE JOB."

Colonel George W. Goethals, canal builder, one of the biggest, most effective and benevolent bosses in the world, has decided that a large quota of his employees must join the "drink or job brigade." The other day he signed an order to the effect that all employees remotely connected with the water transportation department must go on a strict temperance basis. The machinery of the canal is too expensive to be entrusted to drinking men. The safety of the ships that use the canal is too precious to be endangered by John Barleycorn. Therefore, John Barleycorn walks the plank. It is again, as The Constitution frequently has shown, the "drink or the job" from the economic standpoint.

Civilization is fast crowding out alcohol, because alcohol interferes with effectiveness. Probably temperance has made more strides in the past twenty years than any similar period in the world's history. Because of crusades? No. Because of legislation? No. Why, then? Because of the economic motive. Because, at the last analysis, the world demands efficiency, and it has at last found out that alcohol is antithetical to efficiency.

In Europe recently new chapters were written in temperance by the big war. Russia suspended the sale of vodka, in which the government had a monopoly. France prohibited absinthe. Even England, with ultra-liberal ideas, curtailed the closing hours of public houses.

All of this was done in the name of efficiency! Agitation had nothing to do with it—would probably have retarded its materialization. The whole thing simply means we have left behind the era in which the judge, the lawyer, the doctor, the statesman, even the preacher, could tittle, without offending respectability. It is now—

"The drink or the job!"

FATHER OF R. F. D.

A Washington dispatch announces the death of Henry Conquest Clarke, a postoffice department official, and credits him with originating the rural mail delivery service.

In all its ramifications and applications the rural free delivery was not, of course, the creature of any one man. Many of its features developed as, after inauguration, weaknesses were disclosed and possibilities developed.

But Mr. Clarke undoubtedly had enough to do with the early germ of the service to figure in history. And any man who was even remotely connected with the early beginnings of such a revolutionary institution as the rural free delivery deserves a big place in our national annals.

He has laid under obligations to him every man in this country. The debt is not confined to the farmer, though it might be thought to apply primarily there. It is due also from the city man, for whatever links city and country closer together and makes communication easier has a bearing on the welfare of every inhabitant. Had the rural free delivery done nothing more than establish the letter service it would have wrought marvels. But when to that is added the adjunct of the parcel post, as at present interpreted, the rural free delivery looms in its bigger achievement.

The man who gave the first impetus to this deserves much of his country. Distinctly, he has made "two blades of grass to grow where one grew before." Inevitably he must be classified as a master-builder.

"GENERAL WINTER."

Dispatches describe that winter is settling down on East Prussia and on Europe generally, and that the troops are making every effort to adjust themselves to the conditions. Where they are available, sheepskin jackets are in use, men burrow under the earth, seeking warmth, and there is partial or total paralysis to fighting all along the line.

If the war lasts throughout the winter, as probable, the suffering and hardships that will be endured by all the troops will be beyond description.

Active operations in winter, and there will be some, will be gruelling. Plowing through snow, making herculean efforts to keep warm, and then fighting in trenches with the wind howling overhead and the choice of a bullet if one raises a head, do not make happy fighting conditions.

"General Winter" is on the job. Before he finishes it would not be surprising if the havoc he works is not more thorough than that of the war itself.

With Mexico it is always "One more river to cross," and she can't swim and won't accept a life-preserver.

Time to ring the curtain down. It is a war tragedy in too many acts.

DEFENDS GERMANY; BLAMES ENGLAND FOR PRESENT WAR

The following letter from Germany is given out for publication by the press committee of the German-American association of Atlanta.

Germany's first act of war was to cut the German cable. Now that we are beginning to receive news in America, we learn to what shameful comedy this cutting of the German cable was the preliminary. England, which she herself could not preserve peace if it wanted to; England, which pulled the wires in this fearful catastrophe that shakes the world; England, which, safe on its island, did not recoil from a world conflagration which would annihilate a commercial rival—England accused Germany of being the cause of the outbreak of the war! If the matter were not so dreadfully serious, one would be tempted to laugh!

Americans! Can your clear brains really believe that a man would build a house for forty years with never-flagging diligence, in order to set fire to it ruthlessly in the forty-first? Such a man would be mad! Can your clear brains really believe that a nation which has done the work of civilization and culture for forty years with untiring industry, should voluntarily tear down its own work, destroy its commerce, prostrate its arts and sciences and send the entire flower of its youth to die? Do you really believe that a highly cultured nation, with excellent education even in the lowest classes; with a mighty, well-organized, peace-loving democracy; with a strong woman's movement; without protest, permit any individual whatever to drag it into such an adventurous policy and plunge it into a sea of blood? Do you really believe that the entire German nation, composed of sixty-six million people, has suddenly become mad, from the emperor down to the most confirmed social democrat?

No one in Germany, mind you, not one person, desired this war! We have been lured into it in the most treacherous manner.

Conducted Peace Negotiations. Up to the last moment the emperor, yes, the imperial government, conducted peace negotiations. Russia, notwithstanding, mobilized against us, contrary to the imperial will of the czar, contrary to the word of honor of the chief of the Russian general staff. England's fleet lay completely mobilized before our very nose. France hurried troops to our border and refused an explanation to her intentions. Belgium, neutral territory, permitted French troops to march over Belgium into the Rhine province, permitted French troops, without protest, to enter her "neutral" territory. She had long ago made her agreement with England and Germany, and she had not intended to be a mouse in a trap. If the imperial government had hesitated any longer to mobilize, the German nation would have had to accuse its emperor and its government of high treason.

The portion of ours may explain to those abroad the stand taken by our social democracy, namely, that today the most peace-loving party leaders are standing at the front in battle as volunteers. The social democracy desired peace, demonstrated for peace to the last. Even when the emperor rose in a solid line against the peace attempt to throttle it. In one day all political parties in our country ceased to exist.

We in this country have no hatred towards France, not even along the Rhine, in our most exposed province. The thought of revenge, dangerous as it is for the thought of nations, has at the base a noble and chivalrous motive. We respect a chivalrous nation. Nor do we hate the Russian people; we sympathize with this pitiable nation, which is forced to keep a complete neutrality, rigid, bloody government in the most deplorable condition in which any nation can be kept, the condition of ignorance, poverty and superstition. But the hypocrisy of those who stand aside of great and free nations in falling upon a country which is already fighting upon two fronts—its baseness in filling the world with lies—its contempt for the most primitive demands of civilization in setting upon our defenseless model colonies the race in Asia and the black race in Africa!

Motive of England. Do you Americans seriously believe this fairy tale of the neutrality of Belgium, that England wished to protect? Even in England it is no one so simple minded. In England it is openly admitted that the real issue is a commercial war against Germany. Respect for neutrality! Is that respect for neutrality when England deprives a neutral state, Turkey, of two new battleships? Is that respect for neutrality when she sinks a German ship? And this was the ship which, just before, as we learn from English sources, released two captured English ships unscathed to England, for the sake of the woman and child on board. Is it neutrality when Belgium makes appeal to its neutrality towards Germany and acts as ally to France and England? Believe me, if, instead of the Germans, the French had been the first in Liege, not a voice would have been heard in England on behalf of Belgian neutrality. The only justice which the world has seen was due to the rapidity of the German mobilization.

I have read of moral indignation over the burning of Louvain. The Belgian mob can certainly not deplore it as much as we do. The Belgian troops, who were brave, disciplined troops, to this day are the whole civilized world mourns that this fate had to befall Louvain, of all places. But why a two-fold standard of ethics here? How, if the English and French plan of attack is to be followed, is it possible to defend Louvain? How can we defend it if Germany, with its rich treasures of art and architecture, had been buried under the triple mass of attack? Would that have been different? How many Americans know the Rhineland, know the wonderful cathedral of Cologne? Do you wish to see the declaration of war, while in Cologne, peaceful as usual, I read an English news item as follows: "Cologne is completely destroyed, the population, panic stricken, is fleeing to Düsseldorf. Such a statement seems rather amusing when one happens to be in the very city in question and sees the enemies' uniforms only in the long trains of unscathed, captured French, Belgians and English. But if the partial destruction is such an achievement, how much more should the complete destruction of Cologne be! How should the English point of view, be celebrated as a glorious deed of arms? Is the principle different?"

Belgium's Offered Safety. Belgium did not need to suffer. In Luxembourg, not a sparrow's feather was ruffled. When the utmost necessity of defense left Germany no other way than the march through Belgium, this latter country was formally offered safety and payment of all costs in the event of the passage of the troops. Belgium declined. When Liege fell, on August 7, this offer was renewed. Belgium's honor in the face of her allies, France and England, and of the whole world, could have been intact after the brave defense of Liege, if Germany was ready to meet her half way in any proposal. But Belgium wished to side with England and France, she was bound to these countries long before, in spite of her neutrality.

As long as our troops are so violently slandered in the world, why did not Brussels suffer in any way? Why not Ghent? Why is there complete order in Liege today? Is the same army in one place humane and in another groundlessly cruel?

Germany was born and raised in Germany, but my English mother taught me in childhood the meaning of the word fair. Americans, ask your common sense on which side they act fair. On the side that cuts cables so as to be able to blame the innocent party

This Senator Expects "Tummy" To Make Him Centenarian

(From The New York World.)

When Senator Owen first determined to rid himself of his bodily afflictions he went back to his textbooks and commenced "gramming," to quote from the lingo of the student, on anatomical therapy, which he interprets as meaning the study of the human system and the remedying of evils it may contract.

The senator's conclusions are not unorthodox, and he has no way to make on the accepted practices of medical men. He agrees with many that the stomach is the seat of much of our bodily ailments and, accordingly, exercises great care that nothing offensive to its functions are taken into it. He eats his food slowly, masticating it well. For the most part the dishes he chooses are simple.

Senator Owen emphasizes the delicacy of the human machinery. He calls attention to the fact that it is made up of millions of cells, many of them so small as hardly to be discernable under the microscope.

"For these cells have a separate life, he insists, claiming the support of a majority of learned medical authorities.

Discussing the subject further he notes existence of the capillaries and blood-carrying channels of the body, and linking the two with the mental organism makes the chief point of his argument. To serve these best, he declares that it is occasionally necessary to fast—to eschew food for indefinite lengths of time.

"Some of these cells not reached directly by the blood channels are fed by waste matter," said Senator Owen. "Occasionally, owing to what we eat, the expulsion of waste matter is too great and the cells do not consume it. The capillaries become clogged, and in time the cells die. These, the senator believes, are the things which bring on early senility. By fasting in an intelligent and regular way, which the patient himself must regulate, this waste matter does not collect so easily, and if it does, is soon carried away.

Senator Owen no longer speaks with the rapidity and fire which distinguished his early political career. This fact, however, does not lessen in the least his attraction as a public speaker. If anything, it heightens the effect of his speeches. He talks now with dignified ease and calm.

Senator Owen is explaining this, "there is so much of fact to talk about that it is not necessary to use artifice to interest audiences. For another, he does not strain his voice or his nervous system and can make a greater number of speeches and talk longer.

He has taken up with a light form of calisthenics, which he practices morning and night. The senator has deliberately endeavored for years to shut in Germany, call on civilization. Now, of a sudden, they think of cultural values that are being destroyed. Can the cry of the disappointed really deceive the sober and clear-thinking mind? As I myself, like so many of you, have both German and English blood in my veins, I cannot rate you so low as to believe that.

We Germans call for the pity of no one. We will defend ourselves or die. But just as our troops demand honest warfare instead of war from ambush, from the dark of night, just so, we, as a people, demand fair play.

The blood that is being shed in this terrible war cries to heaven. Civilization covers her face. But she stands silent and severe, and her pencil records in the eternal account book of history one single name, the name of the guilty nation: ENGLAND! MRS. L. NIESSEN-DEITERS. Bonn, Germany, September 15, 1914.

(From The Boston Transcript.) The ceremony of propitiating the gods which are supposed to reside in the printing machinery is annually performed by the Hindu members of The Malaya Times printing staff. The usually prosaic machine, and composing rooms are turned into weird caverns of mystery, dimly lit by candles and oil lamps, and odorous with the heavy scent of incense and perfumes. Every machine is garlanded, and has placed before it an offering of "makian." Rice and bananas and cakes are the portion of each machine, according to its size and importance; even the "stone" comes in for a share of the gifts.

At the appointed time, braziers, containing smoking camphor and coconut oil, are carried round and held before each machine, whilst the power engine, whose god presumably is regarded as a particularly aggressive personage, is "smoked" for a specially long period.

HOG AND HOMINY, CARNIVAL SLOGAN

Ad Men Announce Details of Great Celebration on December 3 in Conjunction With Georgia Corn Show.

Hog and Hominy! Two familiar words. They are not new to Atlanta, by any means, but they mean more now than ever before in view of the campaign of the Atlanta Ad Men's club to "put through" one of the biggest carnivals of its sort ever held in this city.

The Hog and Hominy carnival will be held here on the afternoon and evening of December 3, in conjunction with the Georgia Corn show, inspired by the chamber of commerce. And that day promises to be a red-letter one in Atlanta's history because of the annual "stunts" which the Ad Men will carry out in their efforts to boost Atlanta.

Chief among the features outlined for the carnival will be the crowning of the queen of the carnival and her court and the spectacular pageant which is to be the afternoon feature. The queen and her court will rule at the carnival ball and reception to be held in the evening.

For the honor of being selected queen, two of Atlanta's prettiest and most popular debutantes have been entered in the race and the voting is now on in full swing. There is no limit to the number of votes that may be cast and no limit to the number of persons who may cast a ballot. All a person has to do to cast a ballot is to purchase an invitation for the carnival ball at $1. With the "invite" will go a blank ballot and a gold button which is symbolic of the carnival spirit.

How to Vote.
The name of the favorite may be placed on the ballot and the vote may be deposited in a box arranged for their reception in the Cone Whitehall Street drug store. Nominations for candidates for the queenly honor have been closed and the voting will be restricted to the twelve young women already entered. They are:

Misses Wyckoff, Wanda Cary Murphy, Alene Lawson Hines, Louise Parker, Mary King, Hattie Broyles, Anne Patterson, Mal Florine and Mamie Kirkpatrick.

The young woman getting the largest number of votes will be selected queen and the eleven others will be chosen as maids of honor at the ball. Each of the maids will have the privilege of selecting a girl friend and an additional maid and they will be permitted also to pick a young man of Atlanta as their chosen "gentleman-in-waiting."

Interest, of course, centers largely in the race for queen. But it is hard to exceed the interest which is being shown in the identity of the Atlantans who shall be chosen by these pretty girls as their escorts. There has been dropped the rumor that several of the girls will grant the honor to the young man in the largest number of votes for the respective contestants.

The votes may be had at the Cone store, where the ballot box is located, or at the headquarters of the Hog and Hominy committee, in the chamber of Commerce building or from virtually any large retail merchant in Atlanta.

The Royal Robes.
Any person interested in seeing just what the queen will look like when she has donned her royal robes, may get a peep at the regalia in the Maier & Berkele store in Whitehall street. The regalia was designed by a big New York firm and will be brought here through the efforts of a local jeweler.

Now, as to what will take place in the afternoon. The parade of the thing, Shakespearian said. "The play's the thing" but unfortunately for him, he never lived in Atlanta. Otherwise the thirt-second volume of his edition de luxe might have been called "Hog and Hominy." But that's neither here nor there. There's going to be a pageant, and it's going to be the biggest. Over one hundred floats are being prepared for celebration of its sort witnessed here in years.

There will be in the line of march sufficient "processionists" to keep the parade moving from 2 o'clock on in the afternoon, when it is scheduled to start, until dusk. Nearly every military, civic and fraternal organization in Atlanta will be represented, and many progressive merchants and business men will have in the parade floats or decorated auto symbolic of their line of trade. More than thirty of them have already entered floats, and fifty others are looked to get into line.

Prizes for Floats.
Decorators are busy getting the floats into shape, since each of the exhibitors is anxious to carry off first honors, in view of the Ad Men's club offer to subscribe $100 for the best decorated float; $25 for the best decorated automobile containing the best decorated automobile containing the prettiest batch of girls; $25 for the best decorated auto containing the prettiest contingent of children, and $25 for the most ludicrous costume in line. The last named prize is open to Atlantans, according to the big feature of the day's program, and the city officials will be asked to declare December a half-holiday, so that the parade may be held on the day when they want to enter the carnival spirit to "go as far as they like." It will be a "go as far as they like" day.

A judicious General Nash will lead the procession which will start from the city hall at 2 o'clock, and will march to Mitchell street, to Whitehall, to Peachtree, to Baker, to Ivy and disperse. Following the grand march, which will be Chief Beavers, with a platoon of mounted police. There will come the Governor's Horse Guard and the queen and her maids-in-waiting. The Atlanta artillery will follow as a guard of honor to the royal party, and then will come the Corn Show boys from all parts of the state who have been entered in the corn-growing competition at the show.

The schools and colleges will be well represented. Georgia Tech students are preparing a float that they expect will take back first prize, and the Woodberry School for Girls are equally confident that their float will take the coveted prize.

The Boy Scouts, in uniform, will also be prominent in the parade. The Atlanta military organizations will march. Then there will be the Atlanta Athletic club, the Georgia Military academy will have a contingent of cadets and a band, and the Atlanta Athletic club will have a contingent of 100 players, which made such a hit in the Shriners' demonstration, will be there strong.

Made in Atlanta Exhibit.
Merchants are preparing a "Made in Atlanta" demonstration, which will be a conspicuous feature. From Marietta, Ga., will come Mr. Hereford Bull, that weighs 2,500 pounds, and is considered one of the best types of live stock in the entire state. He will bring with him his wife and four children, and the entire family will be on hand to display, because he wants to show, in a perfectly attractive manner, the kind of livestock that Georgia can produce. James F. Anderson owns the Bull family, and he's very proud of it. He will personally escort the party.

The carnival will afford an opportunity for those living outside of Atlanta to see the show. The Georgia Corn show, which is to be held in conjunction with the carnival, will be a big feature of the day's program, and the city officials will be asked to declare December a half-holiday, so that the parade may be held on the day when they want to enter the carnival spirit to "go as far as they like." MISS FULLER FINDS MONEY IN TOMATOES
Covington, Ga., November 21.—(Special.)—Miss Ruth Fuller, member of the Covington Horticultural club, has canned 650 two-pound cans of tomatoes, 50 one-quarter cans, and 20 dozen half cans. She has also planted one-tenth acre of land for 1914. Her total pounds from the patch canned, made up of the best of the season, are worth of fresh tomatoes from the same patch.

Pecan Trees for Shade.
Thomasville, Ga., November 21.—(Special.)—A well-known pecan grower has offered to give four pecan trees to be planted around each school house in Thomas county. These trees make splendid shade trees and are of vigorous growth. The ones offered are well grown and in a few years will be bearing, and as they are of the fine paper-shell variety they will be of valuable for more than their shade. There are few houses in this section that have not a few at least of these trees planted around them somewhere, and they are also being utilized as shade trees on many streets and are found to be eminently satisfactory for that use.

Terrell Superior Court.
Dawson, Ga., November 21.—(Special.)—Terrell superior court convened in regular fall session on last Monday morning, with Judge W. C. Worrell presiding. The court adjourned at the time of the court on Monday and Tuesday, and a recess was taken from Tuesday afternoon until Monday morning, when the criminal docket was taken up, and this has consumed three days of this week and is not yet finished. The court will not continue here next week, as the annual session of the South Georgia conference will be held in this city beginning next Tuesday evening. The court takes a recess from this afternoon until Monday morning, when it will resume its session. At the criminal docket will again be taken up.

Corresponding Secretary—Miss Laura Shively, Elberton, Ga.
Treasurer—Mrs. R. E. Higgins, Elberton, Ga.

The better babies contest in Atlanta has just come to a close, and it was a success. Something like 500 babies were examined. The prizes are being awarded and the score cards returned later, the date to be announced through the papers. We have mentioned with pride the fine, wholesome specimens that were examined by this body of physicians in charge, but this seems the trouble, the average was so high.

It is interesting to sum up some of the good points to be shown by our contest of this kind. First, that young fathers and mothers were present and eager to know baby's weak points. The states through the agricultural department offer prizes for the best specimens produced and exhibited at state fairs, give literature on the subject and send out trains with lecturers for the purpose of aiding the farmer. Marietta, Ga., is commendable, but if these fathers and future fathers and mothers studied the subject of human deficiencies more—if the possibilities of improving the child of livestock for themselves, the effects shown to be as far-reaching as science has proven—the result would simply be marvelous.

Department of Child Hygiene.
You know it, cover the state and municipal health officials of Georgia have special schools for the blind—and many of these blind are dependent upon the state, they are ignorant of their own needs. The department of child hygiene stands for health and happiness in children. It aims to give the child a fair start in life by surrounding it with every possible care for its physical, mental and moral development. Of the 60,000 blind in Georgia, 10,000 are in the United States today, 20,000 would see if they had had proper attention the day of their birth.

So the better babies contest is purely educational, beauty of feature not considered, but the object is to give to mothers literature on the subjects of feeding, weaning, bottle feeding, and the care of babies. The points of value. It is hoped that many towns and cities will try the contest, and the best exhibit for anyone wanting to prepare for such a contest, they should write to the national headquarters for literature. Mrs. Anna Richardson, 331 Fourth avenue, New York city, particularly interested in this contest, has prepared a gardening contest and how to manage.

Mrs. Howlett Pleas.
Mrs. John W. Rowlett, chairman of the better babies contest, for the week's success for so many standpoints. She has made this a social feature, because all the visitors from the other states in the convention thought Atlanta had the most wonderful babies of any city they had ever seen. Mrs. Rowlett, to make this a success, had worked for several days getting things ready for the contest. She was assisted by the presidents of the Parent-Teacher association and members of the state executive committee. Mrs. Howlett is now in Atlanta a week before the contest opened, and was so enthused over the contest she is planning to visit other cities throughout the state. Mrs. Payne.

BUTTS FAIR WAS SUCCESS.

County Plans a Big Fair for Next Year Also.
Jackson, Ga., November 21.—(Special.)—The first annual session of the Butts County Fair association held here proved an unqualified success in every way. A large and enthusiastic attendance viewed the many excellent exhibits, which were shown to advantage in the county courthouse and on the court lawn.

The corn club prizes were judged by S. M. Cowan, of Union City, district agent of demonstration work. Bernard Gaston won first prize on bottom land, with 120 bushels of corn, the prize being $25. Lawrence Eucher won first prize, $25, on upland, his yield being 100.3 bushels.

Boss M. Grudley, of Athens, judged the live stock exhibits. The Jersey cow, Mrs. L. D. Singler, of Jackson, won first prize, and the Herefords of G. E. Mallet, of Jackson, were awarded first prize in that class.

CORN SHOW PROMISES TO BE SPLENDID EVENT

Fully 700 Boys Are Expected to Take Part in the Show.

Arrangements are rapidly being perfected for the Fourth Annual Corn Show which will be held at the state capitol for four days beginning December 1.

Reports from farm demonstration agents show that 85 counties have already signified their intention of being represented by more than 450 exhibits and it is practically certain that 100 counties showing 5,000 exhibits will be in place for the opening day.

The chamber of commerce is expecting about 700 boys, and citizens of Atlanta have opened their homes for about 400 up to date, so that there still remains need for accommodations for about 400. Citizens are earnestly requested to write or phone to the chamber of commerce stating how many boys each will take.

The Georgia chief commissioner for the Boy Scouts in Atlanta and vicinity, in giving valuable aid in the matter of caring for the boys. He will hold a meeting of the scout masters Monday morning at 12:30 o'clock at the chamber of commerce, and will suggest that each master request his troop to ask their fathers and mothers to bring their boys to the show. It is hoped that many responses will be received from this quarter.

The Georgia Carving clubs of Georgia will also be at the corn show in large force. H. G. Hastings, who is chairman of the corn show, and will be in charge of the chamber and who has charge and general direction of the show, has arranged to give the girls the use of the rotunda and the Washington street side. Already more than 4,000 pieces of assured, representing every variety of the carving industry.

Two carloads of prize corn and canned produce have already arrived from the Macon fair, and today at Rome the exhibits are being loaded to be brought to the capitol. They will take some of the boys. It is hoped to take some of the boys, since the last list was printed.

Elizabeth Street School, Atlanta.
The Hill Street Parent-Teacher association has been organized for almost two years, but it is only in the last year that its work has begun to show. First in the last year we have raised and spent $197 for playground apparatus for the school and on the grounds. The playground committee has spent $197 for playground apparatus for the school and on the grounds. We are now making over the basement so that it may be attractive for the children. Our committee has bought reference books for the teachers and pictures for each room of the school.

After many consultations of parents and teachers it was decided to have numerous committees and that each should be better equipped for the work. Consequently, this association has twenty-five committees and one of these has a social feature—the purpose is to have silver teas and all kind of teas—to avoid the piano and one of these has a social feature—the purpose is to have silver teas and all kind of teas—to avoid the piano and one of these has a social feature—the purpose is to have silver teas and all kind of teas—to avoid the piano.

NEW BARBERS LAW TO BE PUT IN OPERATION

Arrangements have been completed by the state board of barber examiners to put into operation the law for sanitation and efficiency of barber shops enacted by the last general assembly.

The board of barber examiners is a part of the state board of health. It has authority over all barber shops operating in Georgia of 5,000 inhabitants or more.

Each barber shop and each barber is compelled under the law to make report to the state board of barber examiners and secure license and certificate. Any barber shop or barber failing to make such report, or failing to secure license, is subject to fine or imprisonment, or both, as provided for in the law.

Full information may be secured by application to E. E. Limbaugh, president of the state board of health, Atlanta, Ga. His office is postoffice box 1133, Atlanta, Ga.

How to Fight Tuberculosis

IN A paper read last year before the Bexar County Medical Society, and later published in part in the Louisville "Medical Progress," Dr. J. W. Carhart, of San Antonio, Texas, a physician of wide reputation, who has devoted much time to the study of tuberculosis, said: "Since lime-salts constitute three-fourths of all the mineral substances of the human body, they must be supplied in the foods or supplemented in mineral preparations, or natural starvation ensues, with tuberculosis unchecked." He further claimed, according to "Medical Progress" (May, 1913, page 116), "that the widespread and unchecked spread of tuberculosis and other preventable diseases is due largely to the decalcified (lime-lacking) conditions of multitudes throughout the civilized world."

Thus, from another authoritative medical source comes justification for the use of lime in the treatment of tuberculosis.

Since this is one of the ingredients of Eckman's Alternative, much of the success that has attended the widespread use of this remedy doubtless is due to the combination of this salt with other valuable ingredients in such a way as to render it easily assimilable. As compounded for many years, it seems to cause no stomach disturbance, and since it contains neither opiates, narcotics nor habit-forming drugs, it is safe to try.

Eckman's Alternative has effected remarkable results in numerous cases of pulmonary tuberculosis (consumption) and allied chronic affections of the throat and bronchial passages. In many instances such conditions, apparently, have yielded completely to it.

Tech High Comes Out Winner In Game With Savannah High

By W. L. Hawes.
The hard-fought Savannah high and Tech high game last Saturday morning was a fitting prelude to the bitter struggle between Tech and Georgia that afternoon. Both teams fought valiantly in the sloppy field and covered themselves with mud and glory in about like proportions, which is saying considerable for the glory. Harlan, Fincher, and Johnson, for Tech high and First, Well and Bryson, for our visitors, emulated themselves with their most glory and the closest margin of a touch-down.

In the first quarter, as a result of several exchanges of kicks that were disastrous to Tech high, the ball stayed in their territory nearly the whole time. Each side relied on straight football, and very little of that. Harlan would break through the Savannah line occasionally and stop a play in its infancy.

APPLES CHEAPER NOW THAN EVER BEFORE

Tom Goodwyn, "Watermelon King," Is Shipping Carloads to Jacksonville.

T. F. Goodwyn, so well known as the "watermelon king" because of his success in handling thousands of cars of Georgia's red-meat, juicy fruit, has just returned from a trip to Jacksonville, Fla., where he is now shipping apples by the car load.

Mr. Goodwyn was for some time in rather poor health, but recently has regained his health. He is regarded as one of the city's leading commission men in the handling of his particular lines.

"I have just finished with a solid carload of sugar cane," he said the other day. "It weighed more than 6,000 big stalks, but it was no trouble to get rid of, as the kids, you know, are very fond of it. I have never known apples so cheap as this season. We have been able to get the very choicest of Virginia, New York and Ohio apples, and apples from other states, and they have been so reasonable in price that everybody eats them. Prices are a little higher in Jacksonville, and I have been making some shipments there, and have to run down occasionally to look after them."

Mr. Goodwyn is an old Atlanta boy, with a host of friends in the city. He is a past president of Post R. T. A. and is now chairman of the employment committee of that organization.

TRAVELERS LINING UP FOR BIG PLAY ON DEC. 5

"A Day at the Union Station" to Draw Big Crowd at Atlanta Theater.

In order to insure the very best entertainment which Atlanta has ever had the opportunity to see rendered by local talent, Mrs. Charles Sheldon, Sr., who is in charge of the play "A Day at the Union Station," is putting the company through a number of rehearsals, and is making it a point to see that she gets the very best out of each character.

This little play is to be put on at the Atlanta theater on December 5, at matinee and night performances, and is promoted and boosted particularly by the United Commercial Travelers of Atlanta. The benefits to be derived are to be used for charity. Already a large number of tickets have been disposed of, and there is no question about the company playing to a full house at both performances. Some of the best local talent in the city is to participate, and some of the best talent among the travelers have a part.

W. G. Moore, chairman of the press committee, is very enthusiastic over the prospects of the success of the entertainment. "You can just say for me," he said, "that we are going to put on the greatest and best local entertainment ever seen in Atlanta. We have added several bright characters from one person to another, in order to get the best results as brought out at the rehearsals, she has done so. The entertainment is for charitable purposes, and, being a good show, we know from the advance sale of tickets that we are going to be handsomely patronized. In fact, some of our friends are already predicting that we will have to repeat the performance—that two won't be enough. We don't know about that. Perhaps we could, if necessary, but it is not certain that we will. So our friends had better all get in at our performances on December 5."

FIREWORKS TO MAKE SMALL BOYS HAPPY

Georgia Fireworks Company Having an Unusual Demand for Its Goods.

It looks like this is going to be a noisy Christmas in this section, if firecrackers, roman candles, sky rockets, and the like can add anything to the small boy's usual manner of making noise.

W. L. THIBADEAU. Of Georgia Fireworks company, who finds himself very busy just now.

a racket about the time Santa Claus comes around. The unusual business being done by the Georgia fireworks company, of this city, bears out this prediction. Its business has grown so fast, and there are so many buyers ready for fireworks goods, that the company has had to increase its sales force two more men, and now has seven salesmen on the road. C. Ernest Allen, who has been handling fireworks for twenty years, says this year has been a record breaker, and he has been compelled to come in off the road, to assist in the sales force in getting out the goods being sold. His partner, W. L. Thibadeau, who handles the office routine, has had to employ extra help, and is himself kept busy as he in our bucket keeping up with the orders. These young men are building quite a reputation for themselves as handlers of fireworks.

HOLIDAY PACKAGES FIXED FOR SMOKERS

Capital City Tobacco Co. Preparing to Send Out Millions of Cigars.

There is going to be no scarcity of choice holiday cigars—done up in the prettiest and tuckiest of boxes and packages—for the 2,000,000 choice smokers now in the big humidor of the Capital City Tobacco company is any indication of the trade necessary to prepare for.

This company only a few months ago installed two of the largest and most elaborate Christmas humidor cases, and both Messrs. Carlton and Malone, president and vice president of the company, are taking great pride in the manner and method by which they care for their stock of goods before they get into the hands of their customers.

They have been banking up the cigar orders which they have received for the holiday trade, and now have on hand in their humidors just the kind of goods and packages that will appeal to the Christmas shoppers. Every well-known brand, such as "Antonio and Cleopatra," "La Preferencia," "Fortuna," and "Hera," has been received in all kinds and sizes of attractive holiday boxes. Fresh from their humidors, these cigars are in their cases, and are waiting in the next few weeks.

E. F. Malone has made quite a study of the tastes and treatment of choice cigars, and offers to the retailer some good suggestions about keeping them.

A cigar should be kept so that its flavor and aroma will be preserved. It should be kept in a cool, dry place, and should not be allowed to dry out. One of the best humidors is a metal one, and should be placed in a jar or small bucket of water. There is a regular electric light bulb with a piece of wire and drop the lighted bulb down in the water. This should be burned a few hours a day, according to the size of the humidor. We had in our big humidors a big humidifying machine, but I have recently installed an electric contrivance of my own that really does the work better. A bucket of water is kept boiling, and the steam rises just the right humidity for our cigars. Of course, we keep a thermometer and there is a connection with the percentage of relative humidity in the humidors, and are thus enabled at all times to regulate the humidity to the length of time the electric iron is turned on. But we find this more economical, more sanitary, and get much better results, as our cigars are all in perfect order before we send them out.

Wheels of Industry Whirling At "Uncle Sam" Bread Plant

When the war started in Europe, its disastrous effect spread throughout the world. Many mills and factories in Europe closed, thereby not only cutting American industries off from the supply of raw materials, but also, at the same time, closed the European markets to American-made articles and to American raw materials, notably cotton.

One of the few exceptions to this rule, however, is wheat. European farmers in the wilderness of their countries, there was a tremendous lack of farm hands and the bulk of crops in the field were left to rot. Then Europe had to look to America for its wheat, from which to mill flour. Of all products, wheat is the most important. The soldiers in the field depend on it for their food, and it is the staff of life. And the non-combatants, too, must have bread.

FIRING LINE NOTES

The "m's" Saturday at Fain & Stamps were W. Y. Bailey and S. E. Smith.

"We are certainly having a fine Thanksgiving trade," said W. O. Satterfield. "It seems the people are determined to have some good things to eat, and our force has been busy the past week taking orders for goods that are especially in demand for Thanksgiving dinners."

E. L. Adams, of E. L. Adams company, will spend today at Jackson, Ala., with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Adams.

E. P. Lewis, of McClure's, visited Hogansville last Saturday in the interest of his firm, and sold a nice bill of goods to the Arnold Dry Goods company. This is one of the most up-to-date stores of that city. They are contemplating a complete 25-cent department for their store.

Turner Lasseter, of John Silvey & Co., will spend Thanksgiving day at home.

Thanksgiving day will find several of the force of John Silvey & Co., tramping the hills and creeks in the vicinity of the city. The company will close for the entire day.

R. K. Rambo, with E. C. Lyle, will visit his usual Thanksgiving haunt at Swords, Ga., where he expects to bag a fine lot of quail.

John F. Davis will go to Stockbridge for the same purpose. D. M. Braswell will empty his gun shells around Baxley, where he will spend the day with his friend, F. W. Collins.

Banks Whitman will take a few days off his feet, and will spend the day at home and with friends at the most famous birding and expecting a feast of birds soon from the "crack shots," who are going to the fields Thursday.

Cliff Johnson, whose home is in Columbus, and who travels southwest Georgia for the J. K. Orr Shoe company, is resting easy at one of the city's private sanitariums, where he hopes to have an operation performed for appendicitis. The operation was performed Saturday morning, and he is expected to be confined but a short time to his room.

R. F. Tuglie, southern department manager of the cigar department of P. Lorillard company, is making a tour of the southern states in the interest of his company. "I travel from Maryland to Texas," said Mr. Tuglie, "and I tell you this city of Atlanta is the first and most interesting place I find in all my rounds. Just now business seems to be on the east mend everywhere, but I find the outlook here better than in any place I have visited."

REVSON HAS CLEANSER THAT BRINGS A GRIN

He Is Sending Out Thousands of Samples of Barkeeper's Friend Polish.

Revson, of Atlanta, is still pushing Barkeeper's Friend polish, a par excellence preparation for bars, soda fountains, restaurants and any other old place on earth that needs cleaning quickly and satisfactorily.

"The cost," said A. F. Revson, sales manager, while discussing the merits of this polish, is much lower, quite considered, than other preparations—and you know you can slant this stuff over the dirty portion of your place and it'll shine like new twenty-dollar gold pieces, and when you look you'll wear a twenty-dollar grin. Satisfied Geewhinkers! That ain't no word for it. You'll love this cleanser next to your wife and children and you'll have such an impression in the back of your brain that you'll squirt with satisfaction and a grin a wide package under your pillow o' nights. Fact. It just goes slam-bang to the spot and with just a little elbow grease you'll have the work in double-quick time, for it is prepared by reputable chemists of many years' experience who have the knack of knowing how, and that'll count in a cleanser as well as a horseshoe, and that's the reason it's sold to the man who uses it. All aboard for Barkeeper's Friend. It'll give you such satisfaction that you can read the endorsed war news with relief, which is going some."

Revson says the latchstring's hanging out to his dealers and he wants them to pull the string hard and supply of Barkeeper's Friend.

CREDIT MEN HEAR DR. SAUNDERS' ADDRESS

One of the most interesting meetings held for some time by the Atlanta Association of Credit men was that on last Tuesday evening, at the Chamber of Commerce building, when Dr. E. L. Saunders, of New Orleans, a member of the board of directors of the Sixth district federal reserve bank, Dr. Saunders spoke interestingly of the work which the establishment of the bank would do, and went into many details explaining the advantages to be gained by the business community in this section. J. A. McCord, governor of the bank, also made a very interesting talk, after which a discussion was had of the association's credit bureau, and suggestions made as to means of strengthening and strengthening this feature of the association's work.

The Thanksgiving Dinner

JUST THE color of the grape juice in which they are drinking to the royal bird is the charmeuse gown on the extreme right. Its long bodice, draped fichu fashion and tied in the back in a butterfly bow, has black velvet collar and revers and its chiffon sleeves falling full from their drooping arm holes are tied with black velvet ribbon. The velvet again shows in the draped underskirt over which the full tunic corded at the bottom falls in the new line, shorter in back than in front.

The little green taffeta frock is a very attractive and girlish model. The waist is of black velvet, hooking like a little jacket over its three tier accordion pleated skirt. It has two points at each side and fastens at the back with three big rhinestone buttons. A few folds of white tulle outline the V-shaped neck and green chiffon has been used for the sleeves while a green taffeta sash has been loosely knotted around the hips.

For a little girl to wear at the festival dinner, nothing could be prettier than the little smocked dress of corn-colored challis. Its very simplicity is its charm for the only trimming is the smocking used for yoke and cuffs and the sheer white linen embroidered in yellow collar and wrist ruffles.

Black satin is always suitable for the very elderly woman and in this case, its severity has been relieved by the fine lace collar and ruffles which match the quaint, little, old lady's cap.

THE KINGMAKER SHOWERING CROWNS ON HIS FAMILY IN THE PATH OF NAPOLEON 100 Years After His Downfall

A Journey of 20,000 Miles

By JAMES MORGAN

The story of Napoleon, the chief magistrate of Christendom, creating more kingdoms in half a dozen years than had been created in many centuries before, is told by Mr. Morgan today. How he showered crowns on his family in his desire to share his glory with them and take them into the business of ruling the world. A study of his weak brothers and strong sisters and their remarkable mother. The mighty Emperor without an heir. How the specter of divorce rose from the grave of a little boy.

THE BONAPARTES AND THEIR THRONES

- March 13, 1805—Elixa, Princess of Piombino.
- February 18, 1806—Joseph, King of Naples.
- March 15, 1806—Murat, Duke of Berg.
- March 15, 1806—Pauline, Princess of Guastalla.
- June 6, 1806—Louis, King of Holland.
- May 11, 1807—Death of Napoleon Charles.
- November 18, 1807—Jerome, King of Westphalia.
- June 6, 1808—Joseph, King of Spain.
- August 1, 1808—Murat, King of Naples.

When, on the first anniversary of his coronation, Napoleon gained the great battle with his two rival emperors at Austerlitz, he stood forth the chief magistrate of Christendom. The Roman empire, which Augustus won from Antony and Cleopatra beneath the cliffs of Actium, lay in the mud at the foot of Pratzen hill, and when, beside the windmill, the conquered Francis, emperor of the Holy Roman Empire, submitted himself to the son of Carlo Bonaparte, the French emperor pronounced his success on the throne of the Caesars. Francis thereupon flung away the new empty Roman title and became merely the emperor of Austria, which has ever since been the designation of the Hapsburg monarch.

THE NEW CHARLEMAGNE.

It had been long prophesied that in the days when Charlemagne should reign, a second Charlemagne would rise to restore the empire to its ancient authority and establish universal peace and justice. That was the great task Napoleon set for his genius when, on the eve of his coronation, he addressed to the tomb of Charlemagne. True, he did not assume the Roman title. He designed to make his head of the ancient world, but he invited the blessing of the pope on his crown and dreamed of uniting the nations anew in the name of Christ.

A KINDLY FAULT.

The new emperor's success as a kingmaker flattered him into the conceit that in the hands of a man of his power he could do more than make over dukes and electors and could manufacture kings at will. He was the common earth. As the bright boy in a family might generously share his success with his brothers, so Napoleon would share his glory with all the Bonapartes and take them into the business of ruling the world.

KING JOSEPH.

Napoleon really had to push his vain yet ambitious brothers upon the thrones he reared for them. Joseph at first refused, but he was obliged to accept a crown. He simply could not be coaxed into becoming king of Italy, although he had been formally announced, he declined to be elevated unless Napoleon agreed to let him maintain his position on the French-Italian frontier and be king in fact as well as in name.

THE UNCROWNED LUCIEN.

As for Lucien, he could not be coaxed or driven to sit upon a throne. At one time Napoleon thought of snatching the crown of Portugal from the brow of the Braganza king and carrying it on his headstrong brother. Finally he summoned the exile into his presence at Mantua. For several hours he talked with each other, Napoleon offering to marry Lucien's daughter to his sister, and Lucien offering to give a crown somewhere for Lucien himself, if he would only divorce his second wife.

KING JEROME.

Jerome, the only obedient member of the family, had no virtues, real or apparent, with which to annoy the emperor. But when he was enthroned as king of Westphalia his real magnificence and royal ideas troubled his brother quite as much, while he was as hopelessly incompetent as any hereditary prince could be.

the family, had no virtues, real or apparent, with which to annoy the emperor. But when he was enthroned as king of Westphalia his real magnificence and royal ideas troubled his brother quite as much, while he was as hopelessly incompetent as any hereditary prince could be.

Having failed to make a naval hero of him, the emperor tried him out as a general in the Russian campaign of 1812, placing him over distinguished generals. He who had taken a long and wearisome course in the school of obedience by stern poverty and a hard apprenticeship in the army, flattered himself now that he could lay out a royal road for his young feather-brained brother.

But Jerome was no more glorious on land than he had been on the sea, very naturally showing a marked preference for palaces rather than camps and for pleasures rather than hardships. He, therefore, let his seasoned generals and soldiers do the campaigning and only insisted on taking for himself the honors and enjoyment of making a triumphal entry into cities that others had conquered.

King Jerome took sovereignty no more seriously than would his non-subjects had to plow deep to support his magnificence, and he drained the treasury to the hilt. He had a fondness for his little capital, Cassel, with its magnificent palace, and he carried the emperor's court with him to his own home. He was a man of a sense of humor, he flattered himself that he was a real philosopher, and he understood that the people of Holland would not tolerate him for a minute were it not for Napoleon, their creator, who had crowned him only as a servant of the empire.

By a trick of fortune Napoleon found his only real brothers among his sisters. The emperor had carved out for emperors of degenerate Rome assumed the name of Caesar, the crowned brother, Jerome, the crowned sister, Elisa. Joseph Napoleon, Louis Napoleon, Jerome Napoleon, Caroline and Elisa were better counterfeits of the emperor than any of the male Bonapartes.

Elisa, the other Napoleon in petticoats, was the black-haired sister and less beautiful, although not at all uncomely. Elisa had a Corsican husband, Felix Bacciochi, who was a hindrance rather than an aid to her position for place and power. She overcame the prejudice of her husband by a clever pupil of Machiavelli, but overcame the prejudice of her husband by a clever pupil of Machiavelli, but overcame the prejudice of her husband by a clever pupil of Machiavelli.

inhabitant, mostly beggars. But that sufficed to make the Duchess of Guastalla, when she cheerfully sold the principality back to the emperor for $35,000 a year, and jewelry worth $20,000 and jewelry worth $20,000.

Napoleon tried to transfer this splendid person from his pay roll to the treasury of Piedmont by appointing her and her spouse to reside over that Italian department and represent him in Turin. But Pauline could not be kept away from her Paris palace, now the sumptuous British embassy in the Champs Elysees, and her country, the Little Trianon at Versailles, for Parisian courtiers and Parisian luxuries were indispensable to her happiness.

Even when she traveled her hosts were impudently required to bathe in her bath, which her delicate beauty demanded for its preservation. Still Pauline was not so delicate as she might have passed for. Her most striking feature was her imperial highness, which made the well-remembered reply when asked how she could have passed for Carova's almost a statue of her: "Why, I did not mind in the least; the room was quite warm."

Happily there was one Bonaparte whom fame could not flatter, and whose head was not turned by fortune. The only reproach that history can bring to the memory of the "mother of kings" is that she failed to transfer her situation to her children. Napoleon's imagination had been balanced with the rock of her common sense, but then he would not have fallen so far, if his genius had been touched with her prudence. He might have ruled himself and thereby become the ruler of the world. Given her solidity and strength of character, he might have been a man of the world, and other sons, their vanity in check, might have become men. Had her daughters inherited with her husband's womanly purity, and like her kept themselves unspotted from the world, they might have been the mothers of a better race.

The higher her children climbed the more she felt a mother's anxiety for the perils that encompassed them. Although they were equals in her heart, she was never weary of their varying limitations and objected to Napoleon's storming at them for failing to reach the goal of glory. With good reason she bade him compare his brothers not with himself but with other kings, for they are all stupid.

members of the imperial family in Paris to gather about him. Louis even found a wife when the emperor became once more her "Napoleon" and she reported to her more famous Italian speech of her native Corsican dialect. She always spoke poor French and never overcame her insular distrust of the French people who had conquered her island.

For Letizia always remained an island in the empire, but although she was her powerful influence, and Napoleon instructed the governor of the island to defer to her judgment in making appointments, Corsica thus in a sense was her principality.

Mme. Mere was the appointed patroness of all the benevolent institutions in the empire, but although she sent a refined bearing and distinguished carriage, she shrank from public appearances. She had her palace in Paris and the Grand Trianon at Versailles, with special apartments set aside for her to the emperor's palaces at St. Cloud and Fontainebleau. A court was provided for her, with two ladies of honor, five ladies in waiting, a reader, two chamberlains and two equesters, a steward and a secretary; but she really preferred the quietude of the faithful Savaria, her companion in the old home at Ajaccio when there were no servants and her own work to do.

Napoleon persistently objected to her being in the empire, but she would not leave her palaces. "I have given you a million (francs) a year," he used to say, "but you will not leave me. I have given you a million (francs) a year, but you will not leave me. I have given you a million (francs) a year, but you will not leave me."

With the emperor was going his conquering way across the northern part of the empire, a messenger brought him the news of the little prince's death. She was inconsolable in the spring of 1807, a messenger brought him the news of the little prince's death. Lucien had a son by the disinherited second wife and Jerome another by the disowned Betsy Patterson; but those children were barred from the imperial line when the empire came only Louis and Hortense had sons in the recognized line. Josephine thus was doomed by the prospect of a grandchild of hers being adopted as the heir to the imperial crown, while her own son Eugene had already been adopted by the emperor and nominated to succeed him on the throne of Italy.

CHAPTERS FROM THE FAMOUS GERMAN WAR BOOK

VI—How Germany Must Fight Her Next Naval War

By GENERAL F. VON BERNHARDI. Written three years before the outbreak of the present war, this book is a distinguished member of the German general war staff makes plain why Germany is now waging a defensive naval warfare against England.

In the next European land war we shall probably face our foes with Austria at our side. In a naval war we shall be thrown on our own resources, and must protect ourselves single-handed against the superior forces which will certainly press us hard.

There can be no doubt that this war will be waged with England, for, although we cannot contemplate attacking England, as such an attack would be hopeless, that country itself has no interest in checking our political power. It will, therefore, under certain conditions, attack us in order to annihilate our fleet and aid France.

The English have long been aware of the prospect of a war with them should always be held before our eyes. Again the preparations which they are making in the North Sea show that they are certainly contemplating an attack on Germany. These preparations are like a strategic march, and the natural extension of their naval bases leaves no doubt as to their intentions.

Nothing would be left for us but to retire with our war fleet under the guns of the coast fortifications, and by the use of some kind of secret weapon, make them dangerous to English vessels. Mines are only an effective hindrance to attack if they can be defended. But they can cause considerable damage if we have no knowledge of their existence.

It would be necessary to take further steps to secure the importation from abroad of supplies necessary to us, since our own resources will be completely cut off by the English. The simplest and cheapest way would be if we obtained foreign goods through Holland or perhaps Belgium, and could export some part of our own goods through the great Dutch and Flemish harbors. New commercial routes might be discovered through Denmark.

Our own overseas commerce would remain suspended. In an engagement to prevent an absolute stagnation of trade, it is, however, very unlikely that England would tolerate such communications through neutral territory, since in that case the question of whether the trade would be reduced, the attempt to block these trade routes would approximate to a breach of neutrality, and the states in question would have to take the most serious question whether they would conform to England's will, and thus incur Germany's enmity, or would prefer that adhesion to the German empire, which geographically detaches a neutral war with England and a continental war with their German neighbors—two possibilities, each of which contains great dangers.

Keeping a Hand Open for German Commerce. The attitude of Denmark would be very important, since the passage to and from the Baltic must mainly depend on her. It is vital to us that these communications should be kept open. The open door through the Belt and the Sound can become highly important for the conduct of the war, and the assistance which is essential for us, since our industries will depend more and more on the Sweden iron-ore as imports from other countries become interrupted.

It will rest with the general state of affairs and the policy of the interested nations whether this sea route can be safeguarded by diplomatic negotiations, or must be kept open by military action. We cannot allow a hostile power to occupy the Danish islands.

A Few Words about General von Bernhardi's Remarkable War Book.

Since the war began, the world in general has come to look upon one book as personifying the German nation's attitude towards war; or, at least, that part of the German nation that believes in what has been described so frequently these latter days as militarism. Written in 1911 by General F. von Bernhardi, of the German army, it upholds the right of a nation to make war, the biological necessity of waging war, the duty of a nation to make war at certain periods of its development; and it urges upon the German nation the necessity of waging war for the proper growth of the nation—for its "place in the sun," as the Kaiser has so picturesquely expressed it—and for the happiness of the people in general.

Under the title, "Germany and the Next War," General von Bernhardi also outlined his ideas of what the next war that Germany engaged in would be like. His program is actually being carried out today, both on land and sea, so far as the power to do so lies in Germany's hands.

There has been so much talk about this book—so many brief and unsatisfactory quotations have been made from it—so many references have been made to it in print—that, in order to give our readers, irrespective of their sympathies in this war, a clear idea of what this remarkable book by General von Bernhardi urges and teaches, we have arranged with the publishers of the authorized American edition, Longmans, Green & Co., to print six articles from it. In this, the closing article of the series, General von Bernhardi prophesies in large measure what is taking place in the North Sea today; and a reading of this article will give one a clear idea of the sort of naval warfare that is now being waged in that region between the fleets of England and Germany.

As regards the splitting up of the fleet, no especially disadvantageous conditions are thereby produced. It is easy to return to the original division of parts, and the strength of the combined fleet guarantees the superiority of the separate divisions over the German fleet at sea. Nevertheless, this division of the attacking fleet gives the defending party the chance of attacking some detached portions before joining with the main body, and of forcing us to retreat, if the enemy can be deceived and surprised by prompt action.

This blockade would ultimately weaken us, and we should not party. But it must be recognized that it is far easier plan to carry out than the close blockade, and that it would tax the offensive powers of our fleet more severely than should not only the venture on attacks in far-distant waters, but must be strong enough to protect efficiently the threatened flank of our attacking fleet.

Why England Must Attempt More Than Blockade. After all, it is improbable that the English would have recourse to a mere blockade. They could not obtain a decisive result unless they attempted to capture our main bases in the North Sea, Heligoland, the mouth of the Elbe, and Kiel—and to annihilate our fleet in its attempt to protect these bases. It is equally certain that our land forces would actively operate against the English attempts at landing, and that they would afford us the most important assistance to the defence of the coast by protecting it against attacks from the rear, and by keeping the coast clear of the enemy's landings. The success of the English attack will much depend on the strength and armament of the coast fortifications. Such a war will clearly favor the value of our defensive and offensive works. Our whole future history may turn upon the impregnability of the fortifications in the combination with the fleet, are intended to guard our coasts, naval bases, and should inflict such heavy losses on the enemy that the difficulty of strength between the two fleets would be greatly in our favor. Our ships, it must be remembered, can only act effectively so long as our coast fortifications hold out.

No proof is required that a good intelligence system is essential to a defensive system based on the policy of striking unexpected blows. Such a system should guarantee the right choice of favorable lines of attack, and can give us such early information of the operative movements of the hostile fleet that we can take the requisite steps to our defense and always retreat before an attack in superior numbers. The superior superiority of the English cruisers in sea and air, which we shall probably only be able to guarantee by rapid and trustworthy "scouting" by the help of the air fleet. The importance of the air fleet must not, therefore, be undervalued, and must be taken to repel the enemy's airships, either by employing special anti-aircraft cannon or by attacking them directly.

Attacking England's Fleet from the Air. If it is possible to employ airships for offensive purposes also, they can support our own fleet in their contact with the superior English force by dropping explosives on the enemy's ships, and might thus contribute toward gradually restoring the superiority of the opposing forces. These possibilities are not, however, vague. The ships are protected to some extent by their armor against such explosives as could be dropped from a height, and they may aim correctly from a balloon. But the possibility of such methods of attack must be kept in mind.

So far as aviation goes, the defending party has the advantage, for, starting from the German coast, our airships and flying machines would be able to operate against the English fleet more successfully than the English airships against our forts and vessels since they would have as a base either the fleet itself or the distant English coast. Such possibilities of superiority must be carefully watched for, and notations must be neglected which could injure the enemy, while the boldest spirit of attack and the most resolute audacity must go hand in hand with the employment of every means which mechanical skill and the science of naval construction and fortification can supply. This is the only way by which we may hope to weaken our proud opponent that we may in the end challenge him to a decisive engagement on the open sea.

London, November 5.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Many narrow escapes and deeds of wonderful bravery have been reported by the injured British and Belgian soldiers now recovering in English hospitals. A corporal of the King's Royal Rifle Corps, who is recovering from a bullet wound in his knee, owes his life to an empty box which he picked up in a strange impulse compelled him to pick up the crucifix and put it in his hand.

During an engagement a few days later many of the corporal's comrades were killed by bullets which were almost spent. The young corporal was hit in the knee and later found when taken to hospital that one of the spent bullets had also passed completely through his knapsack, but had been deflected from his body by the crucifix, one of the arms of which had been broken off by the bullet.

Private W. Hinton, of the First East Lancashire Regiment, was the luckiest man in the army. He was hit by three bullets within a minute without serious injury. One bullet flattened five rounds of ammunition in his belt, another smashed the magazine of his rifle and a third passed through his cap.

Lieutenant W. H. Army. Lieutenant R. Pottinger, of the Tenth Buffs, was the only man who attempted to blow up a bridge under fire. They laid the charge and the second fuse was lit, but the charge failed to explode. The sergeant remained behind to light the fuse. The charge did not explode. The lieutenant was killed.

Twenty-four hours afterwards the injured officer regained consciousness and his first words were: "Are we down-hearted?" A sergeant of the line was made adjutant for his coolness and bravery in the face of the enemy's machine guns. With three men the sergeant was sent across an open field to attract the fire of the enemy's machine guns. He told where the enemy's trenches were, and what their probable strength was.

Major Morant, the military expert of the Tagelblatt, points out that railroads have also revolutionized conditions since Napoleon's time. A road construction is necessary almost everywhere as an arm and to an arm provided with a dozen lines of steel leading hundreds of miles from the front to the rear. The Tagelblatt points out that railroads have also revolutionized conditions since Napoleon's time.

When Iceland Went Dry. The first European parliament to endorse the idea of a dry Iceland was a law which was passed two years ago prohibiting the importation or sale of intoxicating liquors in Iceland. A measure was taken to deprive the foreign consuls at Reykjavik of their drink, so they were not allowed to import any liquor. The measure was taken to deprive the foreign consuls at Reykjavik of their drink.

The Problem of the French Fleet. If the French fleet was to be effective in the North Sea, it will be much more difficult for us to wage a war with England alone. France's blue-water fleet would hold our allies in the Mediterranean in check, and England could bring all her forces to bear upon us.

GAIETY AND GRACE IN EVENING FROCKS

Chic Combinations of Velvet and Lace in Black or Contrasting Colors

New York, November 21.—With fluffy necks and full skirts, of materials light and airy, the evening gown of the season gleams sparkling with gaiety and life. Lace, chiffon or fine net are tastefully combined with velvet, thus giving what might have been heavy a delicate, breezy touch.

Cloths of gold or silver are strong features of the season's novelty fabrics. These are entirely different from metal cloths which we have previously used; on an underlip of white charmeuse and metal net. The lower section is of heavy golden yellow net with a heavy design of gold or silver in long narrow gold bands.

These flowers are made of silk and velvet in colors natural or unnatural. The important thing is not how near to nature the color contrast which tells on the dress will be worn upon the roses made of cloth of silver and tied with streamers of dull blue picot-edged ribbon. The lower portion extending into the skirt are of the same shimmering cloth of gold.

Black in all the suitable fabrics is made into gowns for evening, and without the aid of the color, the dress might be dull indeed. Paris set the style of not wearing gloves with black gowns and so we have taken it up and the gowns are sleeveless and worn with the arms and hands bare. It truly is sensible, not to say economical. But when gloves are worn they are made of black, not of colored, and only the woman in mourning would wear black gloves with her black evening dress.

The foot gear for evening gowns are, of course, slippers. There was much talk of gold and low-heeled slippers, but it has been merely talk for the heels are, if anything, higher than ever. To be always correct, it is safe to have slippers the color of the predominating color of the gown. But slippers of gold and silver, or of satin brocaded with silver and gold, or some of the wonderful tapestries of the Orient, are also worn. But with these the greatest discrimination must be used. Properly chosen, they add a distinctive touch and a worn without thought they are apt to spoil the effect of the entire costume.

The piece which I have spoken of in the fore part of my letter, is a strip of cloth machine hemstitched, with the stitching through the exact center, thus adding a picot edge they are warranted not to tarnish and are as light as silk and as transparent as chiffon. On gowns of shell pink the silver is most attractively used as a tunic or as a long and graceful sash. One may be sure to find a gown like this charming beyond words. It also combines with almost any of the other colors, dark or light.

A combination of black pinks velvet and cloth of silver is stunning in its simplicity. The three-floated skirt is of silver, each floated bound with a bias strip of itself, with the edge unpressed, that it may look almost like a cord. The bodice is made of strip-panne velvet, which is placed basque fashion over an underbodice of net. The edges of the V-shaped neck and the extreme short sleeves of the bodice are outlined with a narrow passementerie, composed alternately of one long bead and a rhinestone. In the front at the point of the V neck a bright red cord gives life and zest to the entire costume.

The gown of black lace and velvet which is used for the illustration is made of materials of gold and silver, having an outer lining of gold metal net. The bodice of black chiffon velvet is made in a surplice basque effect. The plain net across the front is over the metal net. The sleeves are a mere ruffe over each shoulder. The wide skirt of lace through which glimmers the metal and white is rather short as the gown is for the dress of the evening wear. A rosy, colored flower is used at the closing of the waist.

A gown simple and wonderfully effective is made of satin and chiffon velvet. The skirt is full and reaches several times at the top to make the gathering all around gracefully. At the bottom of this skirt a wide ruffe gathered over a thick cord. The edge is not hemmed, but finished with a picot of gold metal net. The bodice is a net and lace foundation, over which is draped a wide piece of the black velvet picot edging, giving the effect of a low waistline and reaching as high as the point of the V neck. The bodice is very close fitting, showing the front, showing the latest line around the hips.

GERMANS NOT DAUNTED BY WINTER CAMPAIGN

Belin, November 8.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—The prospect of a winter campaign in Russia presents no terrors to the German army. The German high command is confident of a long continuance of the war. Far from anticipating a "repelling" of our forces, the German high command in the Moscow campaign, they look upon the great Corsican conquerors, the Russian army, as allies who will remove for them two of the greatest obstacles to operations in the East—the lack of transportation and the problem of that overcoming the natural defenses of the country.

The expert of the Deutsche Tageszeitung points out, too, that the Russian army is not so strong as they would like to believe. The construction of such works for defense will be greatly hampered. This and other points demonstrated the value to the Russians of the trenches and other military field works, says the expert. In all cases to take positions so protected, and the Russian successes have been due to their possession of fortified positions in the open field.

With the Grand Freeze. "With the grand freeze, the long and costly work of pick and shovel, the laying-out of earthworks will be returned to the German army. The Germans, whose forte from the times of Napoleon to Mukden, has lain in the defense of fixed fortifications, will thus find a most important factor in their defensive tactics.

Major Morant, the military expert of the Tagelblatt, points out that railroads have also revolutionized conditions since Napoleon's time. A road construction is necessary almost everywhere as an arm and to an arm provided with a dozen lines of steel leading hundreds of miles from the front to the rear. The Tagelblatt points out that railroads have also revolutionized conditions since Napoleon's time.

The Problem of the French Fleet. If the French fleet was to be effective in the North Sea, it will be much more difficult for us to wage a war with England alone. France's blue-water fleet would hold our allies in the Mediterranean in check, and England could bring all her forces to bear upon us.

PART OF POLAND SWEPT BY OPPOSING ARMIES

London, November 5.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—A correspondent of the Associated Press writes from the operations about the fortress of Ososvez and the watering place of Pruski Bor that the ravages made by waves of troops, both Russian and German, across this region in order to clear the German villages and Poles and Lithuanians in the rural districts, have for a distance of some 100 miles in the country bare of any sign of crops.

Trenches, pits, dugouts, embankments and other fortifications are scattered over the fields are remains of property of every description. Rarely are there any signs of life, and the fields littered with the wreck of transport trains, wagons, harness and remnants of barricades, give the country a desolate appearance. It is no uncommon sight to see a man begging for food. Kovno, which in normal times has a population of 200,000, now shelters 60,000, 70 per cent of whom are Jews and 90 per cent of the population are refugees. The condition of these Jews is all the more pitiful, for, under Russian law, all of the governments of Vilna and Warsaw are closed to them, notwithstanding the fact that they are the victims of the fighting in the Russian army. 25 of whom up to the present date have been deported to the east.

MME. ISEBELL'S BEAUTY HINTS. It was in the rest room of one of the many working girls' clubs in a downtown district that I heard the following remarks: "Anyone can be handsome if she gets the cash. It's the money that counts."

I turned to look at the speaker. She was a slender, graceful girl, pale but with good features marred by an expression of discontent and ignorance. She had the appearance of a stunted girl, but her eyes were bright and intelligent. The Tagelblatt, points out that railroads have also revolutionized conditions since Napoleon's time.

THE FIRST LAW

SYNOPSIS—The 3 of hearts is the "death sign" employed by Seneca Trine in the private war of vengeance which he wages against Alan Law, son of the man (now dead) who was innocently responsible for the accident which rendered Trine a helpless cripple for life. Alan loves and is loved by Trine's daughter Rose, Judith, Rose's twin and double, but a woman of violent and uncertain temper promises her father to compass Alan's death; but under dramatic circumstances Alan saves her life and so unwittingly wins her love as well as Rose's. In spite of her jealousy of Rose, Judith refuses to serve out the vow she made her father and at the time this story opens is actively assisting Alan and Rose and their friend Tom Barcus to escape the pursuit of Trine and his allies led by his confidential man Marrophiat.

I—THE LAST WARNING

In the chill violet shadowed dusk of that clear evening, a chap falling motor car crept sluggishly into the little mountain town of Mesquite at the heels of two mottled mules, driven by a chauffeur who steered with one hand while the other furnished a crackling whiplash over the backs of its sole motive power.

Its one passenger, a cripple as helpless as the car itself, huddled in a corner of the rear seat, saluted Mesquite with a snarl. Though he was in sore need of such rude comforts as the town stood prepared to afford him, his demeanor toward it was that of one who suffers an indignity rather than begs accommodation.

And now as the car crawled to a pause before the Mountain house—Mesquite's one caravanserai—and Mesquite itself, to the last flea bitten hound, gathered round to view this wonder Mr Trine's indignation and chagrin distilled words of poisonous import.

Far from resenting this, Mesquite, pipe in mouth, hands in pockets, admired and applauded, and rather resented the change that befell when two other strangers (whose earlier appearance in town had helped make that one day memorable beyond all others in Mesquite's history) charged out of the Mountain house and interrupted the elder devil with cries of greeting and jubilation.

The leader of these answered to the name of Marrophiat his companion was a person named Jimmy. One guarded word from Marrophiat was all that was required to change the old man's oaths to phrases of honeyed appreciation.

What passed between the trio after they disappeared behind that bedchamber door Mesquite could by no means guess. But that a celebration of some sort was in progress was evidenced by the frequency with which Marrophiat and Jimmy called on the bar for more liquid refreshment as well as by bursts of laughter long and loud and somehow strangely cynical of accent.

And toward midnight one belated Mesquite paused in the street outside the Mountain house for one last curious stare at the lighted windows of Mr Trine's quarters and so witnessed an incident which puzzled him by fits and starts through out the balance of his days.

He saw, clearly silhouetted against the glowing oblong of the window the Mephistophelean profile of Seneca Trine distorted with a grimace of the cruellest joy that ever heart of man conceived. He saw Marrophiat approach his master with a drunken swagger and a speech which, though indistinguishable to the unseeing auditor, unquestionably afforded both of the other men ample excuse for ecstatic glee. Toward its conclusion Mr Marrophiat apparently capped the peak of jubilation by fumbling in his coat pocket and bringing forth something which strongly resembled a single playing card.

Now when he had contrived to master his mirth, the cripple made a gesture which eloquently abolished this card, a gesture which said quite plainly "All that is finished. The thing has served its purpose." To hell with it!

Whereupon with a smart jerk of his wrist, Marrophiat sent the card spinning and sailing out through the open window to lose itself in the night.

The watcher didn't see it fall and though he spent an unconscionable time searching for it in the deep dust of the roadway he went his way in the end with curiosity unsated. Fate had reserved that card for a higher purpose.

Undisturbed, it lay where it had fallen face upward not a dozen feet from the front door of the Mountain house until another day dawned on Mesquite.

Then, in the clear light of that dawn, four more strangers straggled into town—two weary and haggard men two footsore and bedraggled women. One of these last was dressed in a suit of man's clothing much the worse for wear. The other members of the party one and all wore the look of people who have escaped the jaws of death by the narrowest of imaginable squeaks.

At sight of the Mountain house the party betrayed slight symptoms of a more cheerful spirit rejoicing in its promise of food and drink and beds within wherein to sleep the four quickened their steps.

But of a sudden one of the women—she who wore the garments of her sex—paused, uttered a low cry a thrill with terror, and clutching the arm of the man nearest her pointed down to the card that stared up from the dust at her feet.

It was a Trey of Hearts.

II—FULL FLIGHT

"Oh what can it mean?" Rose whispered brokenly clinging to her lover's arm. "Surely you don't think it must be accidental. Surely it can't mean—"

"I'm afraid it does," Alan Law responded gravely. "Evening the front of the Mountain house. Our luck holds consistently—that's all. It wouldn't be us if we didn't pick out the one place where Marrophiat and Jimmy chose to stop over night. Forunately it's early. I doubt they're up. With half a show we ought to be able to slip some way of putting a good distance between us and this town before they waken. Tom!"

But Mr Barcus was already at his elbow, in thorough sympathy with Alan's interpretation of the significance to be attached to the card that trembled in Rose's hand. "Let's get out of here," he said. "Sharp's the word!" he agreed. "And there's a motor car over there, in front of the blacksmith's. Probably we can hire her—"

"Trine's car!" Alan ejaculated, swinging round and recognizing the automobile at a glance. "Then he's here, as well!"

"Looks like it," Barcus admitted. "But so much the better. We'll just naturally take the darn' thing off his hands, and I'll bet a dollar there isn't another car within a radius of fifty miles!"

But his confidence was demonstrated to be premature by the discovery, which rewarded the first cursory examination, that the car was very thoroughly out of commission.

Two minutes later, however, their earnest inquiries elicited the fact that, although Barcus was justified in his surmise that the neighboring country was poverty-stricken in respect of motor cars, Mesquite itself boasted two motorcycles whose owners were not indifferent to a chance to sell them second-hand at a considerable advance on the retail list price of the machines, when new.

And thus it was that, within ten minutes from Rose's discovery of that chance-flying warning in the dust, the party was again in rapid motion.

His beauty sleep disturbed by the departure of the machine bearing Barcus and Judith, Seneca Trine roused on an elbow and looked out of the window just in time to see the second motorcycle gathering momentum, Alan steering, Rose in the seat behind.

Sixty seconds later a fainting banner of dust was all that remained to remind Mesquite that Romance had passed that way—that, and a series of passionate screams emanating from the bedchamber of Seneca Trine, where the cripple lay possessed by seven devils of insensate rage.

His screams brought attendance but it was a matter of many precious minutes before his demands could be met and Marrophiat and Jimmy roused from their capricious slumbers in adjoining chambers, and half an hour elapsed before the chauffeur, roused from his own well-earned rest, succeeded in convincing the pair that pursuit with the motor car was out of the question until he had spent at least half the day overhauling the motor and mending the mischief that had developed in it.

But the devil takes care of his own within another half hour what seemed to be sheer, bull-headed, dumb luck brought a casual automobile to Mesquite—a two-seated high power racing machine of the latest and speediest pattern, driven by two irresponsible wayfarers who proved only too susceptible to Marrophiat's offer of double the cost of the car—a 10 b Detroit—for its immediate surrender.

The two pled out promptly enough, Marrophiat and Jimmy jumped in, Trine from his bedroom window sped them on their murderous mission.

It must have been an hour later when Alan, checking his motorcycle as it surmounted the summit of a long upgrade, looked back and discovered, several miles distant on the far-flung windings of the mountain road, a small crimson shape that ran like a mad thing tirelessly pursued by a cloud of tawny dust like a golden ghost.

A motor car, beyond all question, and one of uncommon road devouring quality: it might or might not contain Marrophiat and Jimmy, once more in pursuit. Whether or not, bitter experience had long since educated Alan in the gentle art of taking no chances.

Barcus and Judith must be overtaken and warned—no easy matter, since the machine which bore them was, if anything, faster than Alan's, just as the racing automobile was faster than either.

Alan kept his gaze steadfast to the road before them, daring not once to look up and round or back, but constrained ever to watch their way, for at such frightful speed as they were now making the slightest obstruction was fraught with direct peril, one little sidelong swerve from that narrow and tortuous path, and death would be their portion.

So sinuous and meandering was its course, indeed, that Alan seldom could see a hundred yards of it ahead, but must peep on in panic flight, hoping for the best—that Judith and Barcus would soon show up in front, that something might happen to hinder the pursuit—never knowing whether the latter lost or gained.

And thus catastrophe befell . . .

Round the swelling bosom of a wooded mountain-side the motorcycle swept like a hunted hare, and without the least warning came upon Barcus and Judith, dismounted, Barcus bending over his cycle and tinkering with its motor.

For one horriplating instant collision seemed unavoidable.

And it was impossible to stop the cycle—so brief was all his warning. In desperation Alan chose the outside of the road; and for the space of a single heartbeat thought that he might possibly make it, but with the next realized that he would not—seeing the front wheel swing off over the lip of the slope.

At this he acted sharply and upon sheer instinct. As the cycle left the road altogether he risked a broken knee by releasing his grasp of the handlebars and straightening out his leg and driving it down forcibly against the roadbed. The effect of this was to lift him bodily from the saddle; the machine shot from beneath him like some strange projectile hurled from the bore of a great gun, and Rose crashed against him in the same fraction of a second.

Headlong they plunged as one down the hillside, struck its shelving surface a good twenty feet from the brink of the road, and flying apart, tumbled their separate ways down the remainder of the drop and into the friendly shelter of the underbrush.

Something nearly miraculous saved them whole. Beyond a few scratches and bruises and a severe shaking up, they escaped unharmed. And they were picking themselves up and regaining their breath and recollecting their scattered wits when, with impetus no less terrific than their own had been, the pursuing motor car swung round the bend and hurled itself directly at the two who remained upon the road above.

Then again slowly and painfully they plodded on following blindly another trail blazed by Fates as blind as they.

Above them, on the road they had abandoned, the crimson racer doubled back to the point where it had passed Judith and Barcus, its occupants descended, explored, and came presently upon the trail of the fugitives.

Bloodhounds could not have settled down upon a scent with more good will and eagerness than Mr Marrophiat and his faithful aide.

The sun was high and blazing above the canyon when the pursuit came within rifle shot of the chasm.

The spiteful crack roused the quartet from a pause of lethargic dismay due to tardy appreciation of the fact that they had penetrated witlessly almost to the end of a blind alley.

A hasty council of war armed Alan with Judith's revolver and posted him behind a boulder commanding the approaches to the chasm. The weapon, a powerful .45, had a range sufficient to numb the impetuosity of the assassins and keep them under cover and out of sight of the desperate essays the fugitives were making to compass an escape.

For in the shed behind an abandoned log cabin—souvernir, no doubt, of some forgotten prospector—Barcus had unearthed a length of stout hempen rope.

With the aid of a rusty shovel he had hacked this into two equal lengths. One of these lengths he proceeded to make fast round his own waist, then round Rose's. The other he left to be similarly employed by Alan and Judith. As it was agreed that they must climb, and while the cliff offered no problem to daunt a mountain-climber of any pretensions, it was considered best that the fugitives should be hitched up in pairs against any possibility of a slip. The pairing had been determined by the fact that Barcus boasted some slight experience in mountaineering, while Rose was plainly the most exhausted of the two women, the least able to help herself in an emergency.

He had worked his cautious way, with the girl in tow, to a point about midway up the face of the cliff, following a long diagonal that provided the easiest climbing, when Alan stole back to Judith and reported that, on the evidence of observation and belief, he was convinced that the pursuit had turned back—perhaps for want of ammunition, perhaps to execute some less hazardous attempt upon the lives of the fugitives.

Without delay, then, he made the free end of the rope fast round his own waist and, following the way Barcus had chosen, began the ascent.

Two-thirds of the climb had been accomplished, and Rose and Barcus had arrived in safety at the top, before the temptation to look down proved irresistible.

Alan shuddered and swallowed hard before resuming the ascent.

Another twenty feet, however, brought him to a ledge quite six feet wide, offering a broad and easy path to the summit. He gained this with a prayer of heartfelt relief and was on the point of rising to his feet when a cry of horror from Barcus and a scream of terror from Rose, watching over the upper edge, warned him barely in time to enable him to snatch at and grasp a knob of rock before Judith's weight suddenly tautened the rope between them and jerked Alan's legs from under him.

His feet and legs kicking the empty air beyond the lip of the ledge, he lay face downward, clutching desperately the knob of rock, praying that it might not come away in his grasp.

The fall of twenty feet to the shale roof was nothing. What would follow would, however, spell death. The impact of her body would set the shale in motion, like an avalanche—and beyond the eaves was only emptiness and the boulder-strewn bed of the chasm, a hundred feet below.

The sweat poured from his face like rain. His eyes started in their sockets. The blood drummed in his ears with a roar resembling distant thunder. His fingers grew numb, his throat dry.

He felt that he could not hold on another instant when, abruptly, that torture was no more. The rope had been relieved of its burden. He heard a scream from below echoed by one from above, then the thump of Judith's body falling on the shale, then the slithering rumble of the land-gathering momentum.

Barcus at length arrived, assisted him to a place of security. Spent and faint and sick with horror, he lay prone, shuddering.

ly the assurance of Barcus that Judith had somehow escaped being precipitated over the eaves of the shale roof roused him and gave him nerve enough to resume the climb.

It was true, when he found courage to look and for himself, she lay within three yards of the brink, supine, her face upturned to the sun, unbreathing—she dared not stir a single movement was calculated to set the shale bed again in motion.

Painfully he realized that if, as Barcus asserted, she had deliberately cut the rope herself, Judith had offered up her life to spare his own.

IV—RETRIBUTION.

And yet the very consciousness of the girl's danger was all the stimulant that Alan needed to recall him to himself.

Once arrived with Barcus at the top of the cliff, he lost no time in setting about preparations to effect her rescue.

In this business, Fortune smiled upon him, as it were, by predisposition.

A broad roadway ran along the top of the precipice, turning off, at a little distance to the right, to descend the mountainside. And just beyond this turning Providence had chosen to locate the camp a hydraulic mining outfit.

Alan's appearance at the top, in fact, was coincident with the arrival at that point of half a dozen excited miners, and he had no more than voiced his demands than three of their number were hastening back to the camp to procure rope and more hands.

Within five minutes Alan, against the protests of Rose and Barcus, was being lowered over the edge and down to the shale roof, on which he landed at a spot far to one side of Judith to escape all danger of sending a second landslide down upon her.

Picking his way carefully down to the very brink, Alan edged along this, more than once saved a fall to death only by the rope, until he stood immediately below Judith.

Then pausing, he instructed her carefully, tossed the end of the rope into her hands, and when she had wound it twice round her arms, crept up to her side and helped her make it fast about her body.

His signal to the miners that all was well elicited prompt response. There was a giddy interval in which the two swung perilously between heaven and earth. Then they stood once more in safety.

Supported by sympathetic hands, the quartet staggered into camp, their story, as condensed by Barcus and breathlessly confirmed by Alan, already winning them enthusiastic champions.

And this was very well for them. For they had no more than seated themselves and begun to appreciate what perils they had just escaped, when the rumble of a motor car sounded beyond the shoulder of the hill.

Startled by this alarm once more into full command of his flagging faculties, Alan rose and stumbled out into the roadway, taking quick cognizance of such facilities for defense as the camp afforded and issuing instructions with a voice vibrant with fear, not for his own safety, but for the safety of those whom he loved.

Not far from the point where the road swung from the cliff to thread the camp the hydraulic nozzle was in action, its terrific force of water melting the mountainside away ton by ton.

Toward this Barcus ran at top speed, gaining the man in charge of the nozzle just as the car swung round the bend.

Pausing only long enough to make certain that there could be no mistake—and having this certainty made doubly sure by Jimmy's action in rising from his seat and firing over the windshield porthole at Alan as this last stood waiting in the roadway—Barcus and the miner swung the nozzle round until it bore directly on the car.

The power of its stream was such that the car was checked instantly in its tracks, and before the water could have been shut off or the stream diverted, the machine was driven back to the very lip of the cliff and over it completely, taking with it those twin upon whose efforts all the hopes of Seneca Trine of late had been centered.

A death that was merciful, in that it was instantaneous, awaited them at the foot of the cliff. (To be continued.)

He had worked his cautious way, with the girl in tow, to a point about midway up the face of the cliff, following a long diagonal that provided

the easiest climbing, when Alan stole back to Judith and reported that, on the evidence of observation and belief, he was convinced that the pursuit had turned back—perhaps for want of ammunition, perhaps to execute some less hazardous attempt upon the lives of the fugitives.

Without delay, then, he made the free end of the rope fast round his own waist and, following the way Barcus had chosen, began the ascent.

Two-thirds of the climb had been accomplished, and Rose and Barcus had arrived in safety at the top, before the temptation to look down proved irresistible.

Alan shuddered and swallowed hard before resuming the ascent.

Another twenty feet, however, brought him to a ledge quite six feet wide, offering a broad and easy path to the summit. He gained this with a prayer of heartfelt relief and was on the point of rising to his feet when a cry of horror from Barcus and a scream of terror from Rose, watching over the upper edge, warned him barely in time to enable him to snatch at and grasp a knob of rock before Judith's weight suddenly tautened the rope between them and jerked Alan's legs from under him.

His feet and legs kicking the empty air beyond the lip of the ledge, he lay face downward, clutching desperately the knob of rock, praying that it might not come away in his grasp.

The fall of twenty feet to the shale roof was nothing. What would follow would, however, spell death. The impact of her body would set the shale in motion, like an avalanche—and beyond the eaves was only emptiness and the boulder-strewn bed of the chasm, a hundred feet below.

The sweat poured from his face like rain. His eyes started in their sockets. The blood drummed in his ears with a roar resembling distant thunder. His fingers grew numb, his throat dry.

He felt that he could not hold on another instant when, abruptly, that torture was no more. The rope had been relieved of its burden. He heard a scream from below echoed by one from above, then the thump of Judith's body falling on the shale, then the slithering rumble of the land-gathering momentum.

Barcus at length arrived, assisted him to a place of security. Spent and faint and sick with horror, he lay prone, shuddering.

ly the assurance of Barcus that Judith had somehow escaped being precipitated over the eaves of the shale roof roused him and gave him nerve enough to resume the climb.

It was true, when he found courage to look and for himself, she lay within three yards of the brink, supine, her face upturned to the sun, unbreathing—she dared not stir a single movement was calculated to set the shale bed again in motion.

Painfully he realized that if, as Barcus asserted, she had deliberately cut the rope herself, Judith had offered up her life to spare his own.

And yet the very consciousness of the girl's danger was all the stimulant that Alan needed to recall him to himself.

Once arrived with Barcus at the top of the cliff, he lost no time in setting about preparations to effect her rescue.

In this business, Fortune smiled upon him, as it were, by predisposition.

A broad roadway ran along the top of the precipice, turning off, at a little distance to the right, to descend the mountainside. And just beyond this turning Providence had chosen to locate the camp a hydraulic mining outfit.

Alan's appearance at the top, in fact, was coincident with the arrival at that point of half a dozen excited miners, and he had no more than voiced his demands than three of their number were hastening back to the camp to procure rope and more hands.

Within five minutes Alan, against the protests of Rose and Barcus, was being lowered over the edge and down to the shale roof, on which he landed at a spot far to one side of Judith to escape all danger of sending a second landslide down upon her.

Picking his way carefully down to the very brink, Alan edged along this, more than once saved a fall to death only by the rope, until he stood immediately below Judith.

Then pausing, he instructed her carefully, tossed the end of the rope into her hands, and when she had wound it twice round her arms, crept up to her side and helped her make it fast about her body.

His signal to the miners that all was well elicited prompt response. There was a giddy interval in which the two swung perilously between heaven and earth. Then they stood once more in safety.

Supported by sympathetic hands, the quartet staggered into camp, their story, as condensed by Barcus and breathlessly confirmed by Alan, already winning them enthusiastic champions.

And this was very well for them. For they had no more than seated themselves and begun to appreciate what perils they had just escaped, when the rumble of a motor car sounded beyond the shoulder of the hill.

Startled by this alarm once more into full command of his flagging faculties, Alan rose and stumbled out into the roadway, taking quick cognizance of such facilities for defense as the camp afforded and issuing instructions with a voice vibrant with fear, not for his own safety, but for the safety of those whom he loved.

Not far from the point where the road swung from the cliff to thread the camp the hydraulic
