President Tells Von Bernstorff That United States Intends to Have Reparation for Lusitania Horror.

AMBASSADOR HOPEFUL IN REGARD TO OUTCOME

He Will Cable Account of Interview to Berlin, and He Believes It Will Impress Government—Wilson Drafting Note to Germany

Washington, June 2—President Wilson emphasized in an informal talk with Count von Bernstorff the German ambassador today the intense feeling of the American people over the sinking of the Lusitania and other violations of American rights on the high seas, and impressed on him that the United States would insist on an adherence by Germany to the accepted principles of international law as they affect neutrals.

No announcements were made after the conference which had been arranged at the ambassador's request, but it was stated authoritatively that there would be no change in the plan to send in response to the German reply to the Lusitania note an inquiry to ascertain definitely whether the imperial government will abide by international law or follow its own rules of maritime warfare.

Anti-German Outbreaks in London Due to Lusitania

ANTI-GERMAN RIOT IN LONDON. When reports of the torpedoing of the Lusitania, with the loss of more than 1,000 lives, reached London there was tremendous excitement. In many quarters the rage of the populace was unconfined. In the accompanying illustration is shown a riot scene in Poplar, which is in the dock section of London. Children, egged on by their elders, did most of the wrecking of stores owned by Germans. The police didn't know just how to handle the children.

TITANIC STRUGGLE AROUND PRZEMYSL CONTINUES TO RAGE

Both Sides Have Poured Reinforcements Into the Field, and Losses Are Piling Up to Unprecedented Extent.

PROGRESS IS CLAIMED BY THE TEUTON ALLIES

But Claims of Austro-Germans Are Not Admitted by the Russians—On Western Front Hard Fighting Continues North of Arras.

London, June 2—The battle for Przemyśl one of the most stubborn and sanguinary struggles of the war continues with unabated fury. Both sides have poured reinforcements into the field and losses are piling up to an unprecedented extent.

The Germans and Austrians claim that some of the forts on the northern front have fallen and that on the southeastern front their troops are progressing towards the railway that connects the fortress with Lemberg. But the latest Petrograd communication says that the Germans who got into one fort were driven out and makes no mention of the capture of Strzy or of other successes claimed by the Teutonic allies.

To the southeast, simultaneously with this battle the Germans are making another effort to break through the Baura lines toward Warsaw, but whether this is a serious attempt to capture the Polish capital and a diversion to prevent the Russians from sending more reinforcements into Galicia is not disclosed.

GERMANS CLAIM 300,000 PRISONERS

The Germans claim to have captured upwards of 300,000 Russians and an immense amount of material during the month of May. Despite this, the Russians do not appear to have slackened their efforts.

On the Gallipoli the British and French lines have been subjected to severe attacks by the Turks, all of which, according to a British official report, have been repulsed. The British in France, trench warfare is being followed, but in this case the allies have the support of their fleet, which searches the Turkish trenches and prevents the Turkish guns from being used. It also supports the allies' attacks.

In France the most important fighting is north of Arras, where the German line has been repulsed. The British and French lines have been subjected to severe attacks by the Turks, all of which, according to a British official report, have been repulsed.

Successful engagements occurred against minor Russian divisions at the front. The British and French lines have been subjected to severe attacks by the Turks, all of which, according to a British official report, have been repulsed.

The Austrians have repulsed the attack everywhere. The Russians have lost 15,000 men, 100 cannons, including 20 heavy machine guns, and 300,000 rounds of ammunition. The Austrians have captured 4,000 prisoners, including 15,000 men, 100 cannons, including 20 heavy machine guns, and 300,000 rounds of ammunition. Americans Are Murdered In Mexican Oil Fields; General Massacre Feared

Steamer Captain Just From Tampico Reports the Assassination of Six Americans in Last Few Days.

BITTER FEELING SHOWN AGAINST ALL AMERICANS

Captain Lane Fears an Uprising to Drive Out All Citizens of the United States—Outrages Committed by Both Villa and Carranza Factions.

Houston, Texas, June 2—Captain Oscar Lane, of the American tank steamer Winifred, which arrived here today from Tampico, tonight gave out a statement in which he reported that three weeks ago Villa soldiers fired on a launch in which Lieutenant Green, of the United States cruiser Sacramento, and the United States consul at Tampico were proceeding to the Panuco river to investigate the killing of two Americans.

At the time, Lane said, an American flag was flying from the stern of the launch and a white flag from the boat's bow. One of the bullets passed through Green's hat, he said, and grazed his head.

Six Americans Killed. Captain Lane also reported the killing of six Americans, including J. N. Bennett, an oil man, and John Smith, chief engineer of the East Coast Oil company. He described conditions in the oil fields near Tampico as serious and asserted that there was a general feeling of hostility to Americans.

Bennett was killed while en route from the oil fields to Tampico to meet his wife, who was en route from Galveston, according to Lane's statement. He was with a small band of Carranza soldiers at the time. They were overtaken by a detachment of Villa troops and in the exchange of shots the American was killed. Lane said, was shot from ambush.

Captain Lane added that he feared a general uprising and massacre of Americans in and near the Panuco oil fields. The United States consul at Tampico had made a detailed report of conditions in the oil fields to the state department.

Feeling Against Americans. "Unless conditions are changed soon I believe all Americans will be driven out of the district," Captain Lane declared. There seems to be a general feeling against citizens of the United States. One reason is no more to blame than the other.

The oil fields, located about 50 miles from Tampico, are under the control of the Villa forces. Tampico is in the possession of Carranza's troops. Lane said that he had walked the greater part of the distance from the oil fields, about 50 miles.

At the offices here of several oil companies which operate in the Panuco field it was stated that no reports had been received of the killing of any of their men.

H. E. Brooks, president of one of the companies, stated, however, that his company had been unable to move any oil out of the Panuco field in a month.

Conditions have been bad there for weeks, Mr. Brooks said. The Mexicans have taken a number of our boats and have driven most of our men out of the field.

Killing Reported to Bryan. Washington, June 2—J. N. Bennett, an American while in a launch with Carranza soldiers south of Panuco, was shot and killed by Villa troops, according to a dispatch to the state department from Tampico, dated May 27, reported here today by Secretary Bryan. He said the government was investigating the department has no information as to Bennett's identity, but it is presumed he was employed in the Panuco field.

LAST CHANGE GIVEN TO MEXICAN CHIEFS BY UNITED STATES

President Wilson Warns Leaders of Warring Factions That They Must Settle Their Differences at Once.

CONTINUANCE OF WAR MEANS INTERVENTION

Wilson's Note Is Forwarded to Carranza, Villa, Zapata and Others—No More "Watchful Waiting" in Regard to Mexico.

Washington, June 2—President Wilson, in the name of the United States government, today publicly called on all factions in Mexico to accommodate their differences and set up a government that can be accorded recognition.

Failure to unite in a movement to bring peace to Mexico, within a very short time, it was announced in a statement telegraphed to Carranza, Villa, Zapata and others, would constrain the United States to decide what means should be employed to save the people of the southern republic from further devastations of internal warfare.

Everywhere—in official and diplomatic quarters and among Mexicans of varied leaning—the statement was interpreted as meaning that the United States would bring pressure to bear, first to unite the factions in the choice of a provisional president, and failing to give its active support to those elements which did agree. Ultimate intervention was considered possible, but only if a hopeless condition of anarchy followed with no remedy from within the republic.

TEXT OF WARNING TO THE MEXICANS. The text of the president's statement follows: For more than two years revolutionary conditions have existed in Mexico. The purpose of the revolution was to re-organize the government and the constitution of the republic, and used their power in contempt of the people's interests and the purposes of the people of the United States. In the very hour of the success, have disgraced and turned the back on the people of Mexico.

All professing the same objects, they are nevertheless unable or unwilling to cooperate. Central authority in Mexico City is no longer recognized. It is undermined and its authority denied by those who are expected to support it.

Mexico is apparently no nearer a solution of her tragic troubles than she was when the revolution was first kindled. And she has been swept by civil war as if by a hurricane. Her crops are destroyed, her stock and her work cattle are confiscated for the use of the armed factions, her people flee to the mountains, and her roads are drawn into unavailing bloodshed and no man seems to see or lead the way to peace and a settled order.

Mexico Starving. There is no proper protection either for her own citizens or for the citizens of other nations resident and at work within her territory. Her starving and without a government.

In these circumstances the people cannot stand indifferently by and do nothing to serve their neighbor. They have a right to demand that the United States should take steps to bring about a settlement which will bring about the objects of the revolution—constitutional government and the rights of the people. Patriotic Mexicans should stand by their country for peace and for every self-sacrifice that may be necessary to procure it. Their people cry out for food and people—have tried, on more than one occasion, to do just what President Wilson has suggested. Mr. Carranza, however, is a very hard-headed man. He has refused to do anything but what Senor Urquidí said, would depend much on a great battle now being fought in the mountains of Mexico City. This battle, between the Carranza and Villa troops, he said, would be in progress for eight days.

1---By conservative estimate, 85 per cent of the tax values in the city of Atlanta.

2---Nearly 80 per cent of the families who are patrons of the public schools.

3---Practically all of the industrial plants of the city have indorsed Prof. Slaton by resolutions in open meetings, which are added to the petition of the Board of Education.

4---The persons who obtained the names on the petition to the Board of Education certify that LESS THAN 500 citizens were found in the city who opposed Professor W. M. Slaton, and they further certify that they were unable to find a single school child opposed to Professor Slaton.

Atlanta's Appeal to the Board of Education

Atlanta, Ga., May 31, 1915

To the Honorable Board of Education:
Gentlemen:

As citizens of Atlanta, Ga., many of us patrons of the public schools of the city, in the exercise of the right of petition, which is the fundamental of constitutional liberty, we respectfully petition your honorable body to discourage any and all efforts to plunge the public school system of the city into the hot-bed of politics. We do not make this request in a spirit of hostile antagonism toward any one, but simply stand on the solid foundation of common sense and justice toward the city's most precious asset, the public schools.

Unquestionably the greatest institution in American life and the one having the most pronounced influence on our civilization is the public school. Therefore, it is a self-evident truth that the public school is not the place to play politics. The welfare of the more than 25,000 pupils attending the public schools of Atlanta is far too vital to the future to be marred by political intrigue, either directly or indirectly.

To this petition, which is submitted to the Board of Education, 10,860 citizens have voluntarily signed their names, showing their appreciation of Professor Slaton's untiring energy, zeal and ability in making Atlanta's Public Schools the best in the entire Southland.

We are satisfied that your honorable body desires to know the wishes of the people of Atlanta and work in harmony with them. We are satisfied with the executive ability and scholarship of Professor W. M. Slaton, and we respectfully urge that you re-elect him Superintendent of Public Schools and retain intact his efficient corps of assistants.

The present condition of the Public Schools in this city is largely traceable to lack of funds, and we believe that the city council, in its sound business judgment, will provide for all reasonable demands of the city's schools.

STREET PEDDLING MAY BE PROHIBITED BY TAX COMMITTEE

The peddling of pencils, chewing gum and other similar articles will be prohibited if an agreement reached by the tax committee and the Associated Charities Wednesday afternoon is adopted by council.

Joseph C. Logan, speaking for the Associated Charities, said that there was never so much begging in Atlanta as at present.

"These beggars," he said, "buy a cheap license from the city as a substitute and then squat somewhere on the street and go to begging by holding out a pencil in one hand and a tin in the other."

WITH THE FRENCH WOUNDED The Woman's Sacrifice

Paris, June 2, 8:30 P. M. Away from the battlefield one sees war stripped of its glamor. We see the heroic work of nurses who are on duty day and night. There is devotion, self-sacrifice, suffering, patriotism—qualities which only a great war and its terrible consequences can inspire to the highest development.

The women of the United States do not know how fortunate they are. Here there are plenty of women who suffer in silence, whose strength is out of proportion to their ambition.

Their hands are tied by some chronic disease common to womanhood, that weak neck, accompanied by pain here or there, extreme nervousness, sleeplessness, maybe fainting spells or spasms, are all signals of distress for women.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has successfully treated more cases the past fifty years than any other known remedy.

When council meets an ordinance will be introduced abolishing the license to peddle on the streets except from wagons.

PASS THE JUNE SHEET.

When the finance committee of council makes report on Monday upon the June apportionment sheet council can render its best service to the city by giving its prompt approval without unseemly dispute or contest.

There is every reason why the members of council should determine in advance upon this course. The June sheet, as have others in the recent past, has provoked discord enough in the committee room; but in spite of that the committee has handled each subject, with the lights before it, to what seemed the best advantage.

Probably Atlanta has never had what everybody interested would consider a perfect apportionment sheet. No other city has. Today it is impossible to make one to which some objection will not be raised by one or more members of council or citizens.

But the finance committee, whose members are appointed because of ability and experience, are entitled to dignified consideration of and action upon their work. In former days, and it has not been so very long ago, when a city finance committee finished, after arduous labor and hearing from every interest involved, with making a city apportionment sheet, that was the end of it; council went ahead and passed it, giving the committee credit for having gone to the bottom of the situation and having acted in good faith and with good judgment.

In later days the custom has arisen of tearing the committee's work to pieces and building anew in council meeting. If this is to be council's established policy, what is the need of a finance committee at all? Why not abolish it and consider finances altogether in committee of the whole?

It is this policy, not only as to finances, but as to other matters, which has subjected council to pulpit and street corner criticism; which has laid it open to the charge, publicly made last Sunday, of "eat and dog" fighting.

It is a source of regret that in a city like Atlanta, which should be conducted upon dignified business principles, there should be any foundation whatever for criticism of this sort; and we do not believe that it has been any part of council's desire or intention to put itself or the city in that attitude.

There is another and compelling reason why council should give its prompt and undivided approval to the June budget. There are now only three months in which to make essential and imperative improvements in Atlanta's public school plant. The opening of the fall term must see sanitary conditions in the schools perfected, a seat provided for every child and double sessions abolished for all time. A quarrel in council at this time over the distribution of available city income will mean not only delay in the execution of this work, but will endanger it, and this is a matter with regard to which council can afford to take no chances.

The monstrous illegality that some profess to see in the reasonable anticipation of city revenue is a scarecrow of the veriest straw. City progress and development have been built upon this policy in the past, and Atlanta has always profited by it. If there ever was need for the exercise of it, more than ever is it demanded today by the school situation, which council knows has not been exaggerated in any of the reports made upon it.

Council should, on Monday, approach this subject in the light of a patriotic business duty. Every member of that body should put the welfare of the city above any personal political or ward interest, and vote the prompt approval of the June sheet.

Let it be unanimous; council can make no better answer to those critics who have laid at its door the charge of petty personal bickering to the detriment of municipal progress.

THE DIXIE HIGHWAY.

Six Chattanooga business men, on yesterday, gave a thousand dollars each to the fund for the promotion of the Dixie highway—and among the number was Mr. C. E. James, recently resigned as president of the association.

Which shows, after all, that Mr. James fully appreciates the magnitude of this great movement, and that his heart is still in the right place.

The Dixie highway is an interstate, almost a national, movement; in fact, this highway and its laterals will ultimately cover and interest practically the entire portion of the United States east of the Mississippi river. It is an enterprise which is vastly larger in its aim and purpose than the material ambition of one man or one set of men. Tributary to it are some millions of people whom it will serve; while thousands from other territory will seek it for the enjoyment it affords.

Except that he personally preferred, the selection of the central route through Tennessee, north from Chattanooga, for the Dixie highway, the commissioners of the association were unaware that Mr. James lacked accord with their purposes until announcement of his resignation was received.

It becomes evident that President James' disaffection is due to the fact that the commissioners did not select his route—but this was impracticable at this time, as it traversed an undeveloped section, without railroad facilities, and requiring work of such magnitude as would have delayed indefinitely the completion of the project.

Mr. James announces his purpose to undertake the development of this central or ridge route directly north from Chattanooga—along which he has large property interests. It is a laudable undertaking, and one in which he will have the approval and hearty good-will of the Dixie Highway association. He is a master builder, and his magic hand may accomplish wonders in this new development. Let us hope that it will.

The more good roads the better, and one of the most far-reaching results of the Dixie highway movement will be the encouragement of progress in this particular direction.

But the association cannot afford to let trivial incidents interfere for one minute with the prosecution of the most important enterprise undertaken in this territory in the last half century, nor will they do it. Another president will be chosen in due course, and the work of the association will be pushed on until the Dixie highway as scheduled is completed.

This great roadway, extending for 2,000 miles from the northern Great Lakes to the south Atlantic and the Gulf, is now in the hands of the people of interested communities which border every mile of it. It is for them to build and build the best they can. They have already given evidence of the fact that they intend to do it, and do it speedily.

ATROCITIES OF THE WAR.

The one thing which most quickly alienates the sympathies of the American people from a nation involved in strife is those exhibitions of inhuman barbarity involving cruelties and atrocities committed upon innocent and defenseless victims, which seem to be an inseparable adjunct of war, especially when made by a people retaining savage instincts underneath a thin veneer of civilization.

The American people have no word but that of severest condemnation of and protest against the devilish tortures, the wanton murders, the brutal assaults upon women and the plundering and pillaging, which have been the accompaniment, in certain territories, of the European conflict as they have been of practically all great wars, ancient or modern. It matters not what nation is guilty, it makes men everywhere boil with indignation and trust that punishment, according with the crime, will overtake the perpetrators.

Throughout the war now in progress there have come no more horrible stories of wanton, inexcusable and devilish cruelties than those which are charged to Russian soldiers in Eastern Prussia. A recent dispatch to The Constitution detailing a report made public by the German legation in Washington presents actual instances and hints at others which are almost beyond the power of the civilized imagination to attribute to human beings.

For the sake of civilization, as well as for their own, England, France, Italy and the other countries engaged in conflict with the Teutonic powers, should protest to their Russian ally against these inhuman outrages and demand that there shall be no repetition of them.

When Belgium was overrun by the invaders, the allies were quick to use the stories of cruelty that war gave rise to for the purpose of arousing world sympathy. They had also another object, to turn sentiment, in so far as was in their power, against the Germans, and to a great extent succeeded. Germany was quick to learn the lesson. Whatever of foundation there was for the Belgian atrocities, it is certain there has been no repetition of them in any war territory under German control.

In their turn the allies owe it to humanity to demand and see to it, in so far as lies in their power, that the skirts of each and every one of them shall be clean in this respect. In the case of Russia, it is an apparent duty they owe the world; omitted, it must necessarily weaken their case in the supreme court of humanity.

Judge Powell Explains Work Before Committee On Land Registration

The committee appointed by the general assembly to investigate the advisability of registration of land-titles legislation has adjourned after a second conference in Atlanta. The committee will meet again before the session of the general assembly for the purpose of completing its report.

Judge Arthur G. Powell, of Atlanta, a member of the commission, on being asked yesterday of the status of the matter under consideration, said: "The legislature of 1914 passed a joint resolution authorizing the appointment of three lawyers of this state to investigate the present system of land titles, including the Torrens, with a view to making recommendations to the incoming legislature."

One of the lawyers appointed Senator S. M. Turner, of Quitman, Ga.; Hon. K. N. Hottel, the representative of Houston county; and Judge Arthur G. Powell, of Atlanta. "This committee held its first meeting in Atlanta on Tuesday, June 1. A number of gentlemen came before the committee and addressed them on various phases of the general question which will come before the legislature in the next session."

"The committee will meet again prior to the convening of the general assembly, and will continue the investigation of the present system of land registration, and will recommend some form of land registration, at least some bill by which land titles can be made more certain in this state. Until they shall have made further investigation and heard from parties at interest the committee will not commit itself to any particular form of registration."

"Common Honesty And Simple Justice"

Editor Constitution: Your editorial, "The State in Business," is quite opportune. It might be right and the state can rob the citizen. It is high time that this be known. This immediate action should be taken to remove this remnant of "divine right" kings.

Let me give you the facts that justified the attorney general of Georgia in refusing the application of the Georgia Agricultural and Mechanical College for a loan of $50,000. The school and other state institutions are not liable for interest on past-due accounts. In 1912 a groceryman sold to the agricultural school $247 worth of groceries on 30 days' time. The groceryman was not paid for 18 months. The school's board of directors, and the boarders, presumably, paid for their board. The groceryman tried, during all of 1912 and 1913, to collect his money. He failed. In January, 1915, the groceryman sent his grocery bill against this state institution to attorneys for collection with instructions to collect by any honorable means possible. The attorneys took the bill, endeavored to collect, failed, threatened suit, and were met by the proposition: "The state cannot be sued." After five months of threats to sue, the account is approved only and interest at the principal sum. When attorneys for the groceryman inform debtor that he cannot afford to pay the $50,000, that has accrued during the more than two years delay, and he is promptly absolved the institution and the state from any liability for interest.

See what the state does and upholds: It gets property upon a promise to pay in the future, and then refuses to pay according to promise. It forces the citizen to incur expenses in his efforts to get his pay. It takes the money, uses the money as long as it pleases; and then refuses to pay for the use of the property (interest), it has kept (used) for a number of years.

If "the aim of law is justice," if for "every wrong there is a remedy," if "common honesty and simple justice" requires, as you suggest, that this decision be reviewed and made conformable to those practices and principles that govern honorable men in usual business dealings. Very respectfully,

May 31, 1915. G. L. WILLIFORD.

The Fichle Star.

(From The New York Times.) So many are taking place in the world that the news of revolution in Portugal is only picturesque. It seems odd by inconsequential. Portugal's area is about equal to that of Indiana. It contains only a population of 1,000,000. The whole adult male population would hardly fill the fighting trenches across Flanders. The outside world is as little concerned about a civil war among the Portuguese as the Portuguese are concerned with the great present affair of Europe.

And yet 50 years ago (the span of a few generations) Portugal was the greatest maritime power, preceding Great Britain in that eminence. The Portuguese first explored the west coast of Africa. The Cape of Good Hope was doubled by Bartholomeo Diaz in 1488. Vasco da Gama reached India via the Cape of Good Hope in 1498. In 1500 King Emmanuel ascended the throne of Portugal and assumed the title "Lord of the Conquest, Navigation and Commerce of India, Ethiopia, Arabia and Persia." In that year the Portuguese made settlements in Brazil. History is a catalog of dreams. The dream of time is nearly the oldest one. Its star is very flickle.

The Lusitania's Mails.

(From The Washington Star.) The disclosure, that 32 bags of mail from the United States to various parts of Europe were packed in the Lusitania, the great liner, of the offense of the destruction of that ship. Of course, comparable with the loss of life, the destruction of mail is of slight importance, yet from an official point of view the sinking of these 32 bags is a matter of extreme seriousness. It is the first time in 100 years, it is stated, that American mails have been destroyed at sea in consequence of military or foreign powers.

It is no computing the damage wrought by this loss. In one specific case it is known that papers of great value went to the bottom. The papers were those of the original documents relating to the ownership of the steamer Pacific, now held before a French tribunal. The papers were those of her transfer from a German navigation company to an American citizen.

GRAPHIC STORY OF EUROPEAN WAR TOLD IN LETTER TO ATLANTA MAN

Ernest Woodruff, of Atlanta, president of the Trust Company of Georgia, has just received a letter from an Englishman in London, a friend whom he formerly knew in New York, which presents a graphic picture of the conditions existing in the old world, particularly England, and the grim determination with which England is facing the situation.

The name, for obvious reasons, is omitted. The letter is, in part, as follows: "It was indeed kind of you to think sufficient of me to write me a letter, and I can assure you that I much appreciate the fact that our short acquaintance was for the time only."

"These awful times that we are now going through, and which, from what I hear from friends in the states is reflected more than we realize, tends to make me think of or less there, tends to make me think of you, and I am sure that with a natural anxiety to know how all is with them."

"In this country men's faces are rapidly getting more set and lined, we have had war before, but such a war, as we have never before been dreamt of by living man. It is a war, and yours I have never forgotten and never shall. "I hope in the future to be once more amongst you and with peace smiling again, but at the present there is work to do, and one must not think too much of the future, for there is so much to do now."

The Holland Letter

All that James Campbell, of Youngstown, Ohio, found it necessary to do in order to attend the sessions of the National Manufacturers' association recently held in New York and the meeting of the Iron and Steel Institute, was really to go from one room to another. Those representatives of American manufacturing industries closed their meetings a few hours before the Iron and Steel Institute met, and Mr. Campbell's friendly relations with both of the associations have furnished an object lesson which has never been introduced as evidence to maintain the contention of the United States Steel corporation that it has not established a monopoly and that there is no danger that it will do so.

Furthermore, Mr. Campbell's career is frequently spoken of as furnishing an example of the opportunities which open constantly to Americans of the younger generation. Like almost all men who have achieved greatly, Mr. Campbell is very modest in demeanor, not self-assertive in his personal relations and not at all self-conscious, yet he is now pointed out as an example of what men of the younger generation have done in the way of big achievement. Until he was 30 years of age, Mr. Campbell kept a modest grocery store in Youngstown or in its vicinity. In that vocation he was as successful as trade opportunities made it possible for him to be. A new opportunity opened just as he passed his thirtieth year, for him to interest himself in one department of the steel and iron industry. This proved to be a vocation fitted for the exercise of the almost unbounded ability which Mr. Campbell possessed. Gradually, not too rapidly, he increased the business, gaining confidence of those who had capital to invest until at last he became the supreme executive authority in an industry which is represented by some $20,000,000 of capital and in its particular field is one of the largest in the United States.

It is an industry with which E. C. Converse was identified before the corporation of which he was the head became one of the subsidiaries of the United States Steel corporation. But there was a striking difference in the training to which Mr. Converse submitted and the training, self-taught with which Mr. Campbell qualified himself for his successes. Mr. Converse began at the bottom in a manufacturing near Boston, serving in the humblest capacity, stepping ahead slowly, but surely, until he had become a successful manufacturer of the commodity with which his name afterward was so prominently identified. Mr. Campbell was trained to another vocation and was never fitted in the manner in which Mr. Converse was for a manufacturing career.

But he was qualified for great executive direction, revealed a fine gift for organization, commanded gradually a large business and at last was recognized as one of the great leaders of the iron and steel industry. The government at Washington is now prosecuting the United States Steel corporation chiefly on the ground that its organization constitutes it a monopoly or else gives it the power to stifle competition; yet the corporation with which Mr. Campbell is identified has in point of time been substantially identified with the life of the United States Steel corporation. Certainly there has been no stifling of competition in the sense in which the government uses the term, and the corporation with which Mr. Campbell is identified stands substantially upon equality so far as opportunity is concerned with the subsidiary of the United States Steel corporation whose output is similar to that of the corporation of which Mr. Campbell is the head.

What the Future Promises. Not since the war in Europe began have there been heard in this city words of such promise as were voiced at the meeting of the Association of American Manufacturers. It found, perhaps, its strongest expression in the part of the address of our host, members, wherein exchange of views was made possible. One of the leaders in the steel and iron industry of the United States, Joseph C. Butler, Jr., of Youngstown, Ohio, who has been for some years president of the Association of Manufacturers and also in the meeting of the Iron and Steel Institute, referred incidentally to one of the features of the present-day situation which leads to the belief that Mr. Butler is persuaded that the industry is improving and will continue to improve. The industry, he said, is in some danger of finding itself embarrassed through a lack of skilled artisans. A year ago at this time, the danger was of another kind. There was a great deal of talk at that time that there would be no employment for them or at least no steady employment. Now, Mr. Butler thinks that the danger is not one of which skilled labor can be apprehensive, because there will be enough of this labor to make it possible to meet the great demands which will be made upon American industries.

In one of his informal chats, Mr. Butler said that he had been invited and had gone to the day when he was associated with the Mahoning Valley Iron association. At a meeting of the members of the association he said that he had an important matter to submit to the consideration of the members. There was a man in Pittsburgh who had gone into the iron and steel business. He was anxious to make purchases in Youngstown for commodities the cost of which would be about $3,000. He asked for credit for so much as the association hesitated about granting credit to this unknown man until Mr. Butler at last said that he, himself, was disposed to guarantee the payment of the debt. Then the credit was granted and the man who asked for a credit of no more than $3,000 was Andrew Carnegie, of whom the members of the association afterwards heard much.

The commanding topic discussed by mem-

Ponderous Personages—Chas. Darwin.

Charles Darwin was an earnest young Englishman who took a four years' trip on a sailing ship once. Many men have done this before and since, but they have failed to get as much benefit out of it as Darwin did. They have soaked themselves in scenery, rum and other things and have acquired a large amount of unclassified knowledge. But Darwin did more than that. He counted the birds, flowers and animals of a dozen lands, felt the ribs of a South American and estimated its age by looking at its teeth; he bared the past of the Andes, and traced the fairy records of the horse, the cow, the tortoise and many other animals back into the extremely murky mists of time. As a result when he came back to England he wrote a three-pound book entitled "The Origin of Species," which upset so much knowledge already accumulated, that scientists had to go to work and reconstruct the entire history of the world before man began to multiply in it.

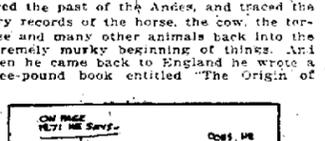

Darwin was born in 1809 and was a young man when he made his trip. He spent the rest of his life experimenting with plants and animals, laboriously proving into the family relations of the world, by means of measuring the longevity of germs with a stop-watch and preparing for his great work. To do this he had to give up cricket, society, politics, fancy dancing, golf and other things without which a great many earnest young students of the way to fame cannot exist today. He spent forty years in hard study and the net result was only a few books. A best seller could have written a fair-sized library in that time and with less labor. But Darwin's work was not done about so extensively and vitriolically. For years Darwinism was more of a discussion in religious circles than baptism, and the world was filled with earnest disciples contending that man had descended from a monkey and frantic theologians who disputed the fact.

Darwin never said that man had descended from the monkey, but he produced a large irregular mass of scientific discoveries which caused members of the church to have to scratch their heads doubtfully and lose interest in tracing back their descent too far.

Darwin died in 1882 and was buried in Westminster Abbey. He spent his life trying to show that plants and animals change in order to meet new conditions, and that man has done the same. But in view of the present military chaos in civilization there is grave doubt as to whether man has descended from or is ascending to the monkey stage.

RIPLLING RHYMES BY WALT MASON.

THE UNDESIRABLE CITIZEN. Nine men get up at break of dawn, and toll till midnight rest, to trim the whiskers from the lawn, and keep the weeds suppressed. They pull up thistles by the roots, and sweat all noxious weeds, and softly say, "We'll get our boots on, and to their homes devote their lives; they strive to keep things neat; they know the lawn, where blue grass thrives, for beauty can't be beat. The tenth man doesn't care a whoop how shabby things appear; the weeds are growing round his corner in regiments, each year. The grass is smothered by the weeds, which swipe each inch of soil, and every aephyr blows the seeds, to queer the good men's toil. There is no lack to make the weeds, which will queer the street, and handicap the town. Why doesn't congress, up and knock this Jonah on the pate? For nearly every village block has got this sort of scum."

Strengthening the Sound Waves

AFTER traveling a certain distance the electric wave which carries the human voice along the telephone wire becomes attenuated and speech becomes unintelligible.

Just as in the old stage coach days fresh relays of horses at regular intervals along the way, enabled the traveler to continue his journey with undiminished speed, so by means of loading coils inserted at proper intervals, the electrical waves are strengthened and the human voice carried great distances.

The loading coil is one of the many improvements and discoveries which the Bell engineers have applied to the Long Distance lines to facilitate and extend the service.

The Bell Telephone service you use in your office and home has this same detailed supervision. The wonderful organization that has made American telephone service the best in the world stands back of your individual telephone.

A Delicate Double-Headed Foreign Situation Easily Offset by Increasing American Self-Reliance.

New York, June 2.—Wall street's attention was quite evenly divided between this country's relations with Germany and Mexico. The audience granted by President Wilson to the German ambassador and the emphatic declaration to Mexico's warring leaders were almost the only developments of an otherwise uneventful session.

The financial community was clearly inclined to regard the visit of the German ambassador to the white house as a factor of favorable import. The entire list, including the international group, advanced sharply during the morning on a volume of business far in excess of the preceding day.
