DR. HURT SAYS FOOD IN STOMACH FAILS TO SHOW TIME OF DEATH

Here are the important developments of Saturday's session of the trial of Leo M. Frank:

Attorneys for the defense spring a sensation by threatening a move for a mistrial because Judge Roan has exposed a newspaper headline to the jury. A compromise is effected by the judge cautioning the jury to disregard any outside influence.

Dr. J. W. Hurt, after testifying along the line taken by Dr. H. F. Harris' testimony of Friday, admits that no examination was made of Mary Phagan's lungs, and that whether death comes by strangulation can be determined only in this manner.

Dr. Hurt testifies under cross-examination that he would not attempt to say that Mary Phagan came to her death within a half hour after she had eaten merely because some cabbage, only partially digested, had been found in her stomach. He declares the time it would take to digest cabbage depends on the individual.

He also testifies that in his examination of the body he discovered no indications that would lead him to say that the girl had been criminally attacked.

Jim Conley is made ready to testify Saturday afternoon, but court adjourns at 12:30 until 9 o'clock Monday morning.

A genuine sensation was sprung at the trial of Leo M. Frank Saturday morning when Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold, attorneys for the defense, asked the State to consent to a new trial on the ground that Judge Roan had allowed the jury to catch a glimpse of a headline in the first extra of The Georgian.

Judge Roan had laid the paper on the stand in front of him, and, peering to the fence the headline across the first page could be read by the men in the jury box.

The headline said: "State Adding Links to Chain."

The defense's lawyers went into immediate conference with the judge, and a few minutes later asked Judge Roan to consent to a new trial. The Solicitor refused.

Rosser Asked Explanation.

Rosser and Arnold then came into the courtroom and asked that the jury be withdrawn.

Rosser addressed the court:

"Your honor inadvertently displayed a newspaper when you came in just now. One side was turned up with large red letters reading: 'State Adding Links to Chain.' Every member of the jury read it. I saw them leaning forward to see it.

"We don't want to make a motion for a new trial, but we want the jury called back and such explanation made by your honor as will eliminate any harm that might have been done by the jury seeing this paper," the Solicitor Dorsey objects.

Dorsey objected to Rosser's explanation as to an isolated instance.

"One man in the first rescue party was District Superintendent John Lorens, who is missing. It is feared he was overcome.

The explosion occurred in the tunnel. The first blast ripped out the roof supports. Tons of earth crashed down upon the workmen. Only the few working near the shaft escaped.

It is thought the majority of the missing are either buried under the earth or knocked back of the wrecked portion of the mine. In the latter case it is doubtful if the men can be rescued without aid.

One Brought Out Alive.

Shortly before 5 o'clock one of the men was brought up alive, but unconscious, and so badly mangled that there is little hope for his recovery.

Practically every one of the bodies brought to the surface by rescuers was fearfully burned. The head of one was blown off.

One of the rescue party at work in the mine at the bottom of the shaft came to the surface shortly before 4 p. m. and reported that no eggs of life were visible.

Mothers, wives, sisters and children of the entombed men enacted pathetic scenes around the mouth of the mine.
