OPPORTUNITIES HALT IN CASE OF MINORS

Beavers Tells Clubs—Tells of Complaints.

Chief of Police Beavers inaugurated a war on all of the locker clubs of the city Friday which are selling liquor to boys and girls under age or are in any way violating the locker club regulations. The crusade is especially designed to keep young girls out of the locker club.

Chief Beavers' action followed instructions from the Grand Jury Friday morning ordering the police department to clean the city of all its salaried, loafers and other persons of evil repute. It was the sentiment of the Grand Jury that the presence of this class of people constituted a constant menace to the welfare of the city and very probably was largely to blame for the wave of crime which has swept Atlanta in the last few weeks.

The chief made it plain that the police would continue their campaign against the clubs until the vicious practices of which many citizens have complained in the department have been wiped out. He declared that he had received scores of complaints which related that boys and girls of tender years had been seen intoxicated in many of the clubs of the city. Here is the chief's order as it was given to every policeman on the force:

Beavers Called by Grand Jury to Tell More in Vice Probe

The Grand Jury plunged into the vice problem again when it met Friday morning. Chief of Police James M. Beavers was called over the telephone and was closeted with the jury for more than an hour. When he left the room he would make no statement other than he had been questioned on some phase of the vice investigation.

Foreman L. H. Beck and the Assistant Solicitor, E. A. Stephens, would not discuss the somewhat "inside" nature of the communications to the Grand Jury, which communications to the foreman charge are in existence in Atlanta.

It was understood the chief was questioned closely about "houses in the midst," which communications to the Grand Jury are in existence in Atlanta.

Nat Thornton and Carter Playing for State Tennis Title

Nat Thornton versus Ed Carter, Jr., for the state title and Halman V. Orr for the Association furnished the programs in the concluding day of singles at the Georgia State Tennis Championship Tournament.

Play in both matches began at 10 o'clock while a large crowd gathered the course of the Piedmont Driving Club. The veteran Thornton displayed his old time form, but Carter started off with a rush that put Thornton to the wall. Halman and Orr started their match with perfect play.

Saturday will be the last day of the tournament, the men's doubles and mixed doubles being the programs.

Frank Trial Will Be Called When Case Is Heard

Few Witnesses of the Scores Examined Will Be Called When Case Is Heard.

That the trial of Leo M. Frank will take a much shorter time than is generally thought was indicated in a statement by Judge L. B. Rook, the judge who is presiding over the case. He said that he expected the trial to be a very short one, and that he expected the case to be heard in a few days.

Fortune Menace to Heirs, Not Builder, Minister Declares

That all wealthy men are not bad and that the peril of their riches is not for their children, was the declaration of the Rev. Dr. W. H. Riley at the Baptist Tabernacle last night in the opening sermon of a series on the Book of Job.

"This is a day of great fortune and a day of great need. More and more millionaires are coming to the conclusion that charity and not children is the proper subject for magnanimity, and that it is both righteous and intelligent to turn back into the channel of the social need the money which has been hoarded by the rich."

Harvard Boat Wins in Big Race

Crimson Rowers Make Clean Sweep of Five Events With Old Elit.

NEW LONDON, June 20.—Harvard's magnificent eight fairly rowed the Yale boat out of the water on their annual duel on the Thames this afternoon. Harvard crossed the line at the finish like a power boat, fully 15 lengths ahead of the Yale crew. The official time was Harvard, 21:43; Yale, 23:10.

The last mile of the course was sailed with yachts and fully 4,000 people saw the race.

Yale never had a look-in. The Harvard boat got away from the mark in another and faster style and edged a length in the first 100 yards. They were headed off in the first quarter mile they gained a length and a half then settled down to a long, easy stroke, for 30 to 35 strokes to the minute.

Controversy Over Peachtree Paving Breaks Out Again

The asphalt controversy between city and county officials was revived Friday by unfavorable reports on the Peachtree Road work. Much of the Peachtree Road asphalt, put down at the instance of three members of the County Commission and attacked by others as being no better than the cheap material, has gone bad and is being dug up. This asphalt costs about $40 a ton, while similar material can be purchased for a little more than $20 a ton.
