Felder and Chief Lanford Are Indicted for Lie

TRIAL, IF CHARGES ARE UPHOLD, WILL LAY BARE SECRETS OF DICTOGRAPH PLOT

Three indictments charging criminal libel were returned Friday by the grand jury against Colonel Thomas B. Felder, the Atlanta attorney, and Newport Lanford, Chief of Detectives, who accused each other of most everything in the category after the famous dictograph episode. There are two bills against Felder and one against Lanford.

The two men will be placed under bond and will be tried in the Fulton County courts under the misdemeanor act for unlawfully and maliciously accusing each other, according to the true bills.

The penalty for conviction of a misdemeanor is six months in the county jail, twelve months in the penitentiary, a fine not exceeding $1,000, or any three of these.

Chief Lanford replied in kind, denouncing Colonel Felder as "a contemptible liar, scoundrel and coward." He denied absolutely any wrongdoing.

To establish the fact that the statements published had actually been made by Felder and Lanford, the grand jury summoned District Attorney, chief editor of The Constitution, and H. D. Clarke, chief editor of Hearst's Sunday American. Both men testified that there could be no question that Felder and Lanford issued the statements in question.

Real Revelations Promised. That will have the real inside of the dictograph trap and other things that have been rumored in the last few weeks, and some real explosions are anticipated.
